Bulldogs Tied With Saline in League Lead

Two Top Teams To Meet Friday On Saline Field

Last Friday night Chelsea High's bulldogs pushed over three first half touchdowns to defeat U. High 20-0. The win coupled with Saline's 7-6 victory over Lincoln, allowed the Bulldogs to climb into first place.

Chelsea kicked off to U. High and the Bulldogs defense, which has allowed only two touchdowns all season, held and forced U. High to punt to mid-field. Seven plays later, Jim McLaughlin swept wide around the left end, cut in behind Ted Nixon's block and scored 26 yards to score. The attempt for extra point was good as quarterback Hugh Weinberg went over on an option play behind good blocking by George Collier and Don Mahr.

Early in the second quarter, Chelsea recovered a U. High fumble on the second play. McLaughlin broke over his own right tackle, cut back and outraced the U. High secondary to score. Glen Weir's block sprung McLaughlin loose at the 25. John Jones was stopped on the attempt for extra point.

The third touchdown came just before the end of the half. Left halfback Johnny Jones slipped off tackle for 19. Then Weinberg hit McLaughlin in the flat with a pass that was good for 28 yards and a first down on the U. High 17. On the next play Jones raced off tackle and squirmed and dodged his way for 17 yards and the U. High defense crumbled over for the extra point.

The second half was a different story as the Bulldogs, obviously content with the three touchdown lead, did not extend themselves. U. High threatened once in the fourth quarter but a penalty and a strong defense held them off. The Bulldogs reserves saw considerable action in the second half.

Kenny and Joe Bauer again defended in fine defensive games. This week the Bulldogs travel to Saline to meet the Hornets that is a must game for both teams. A defeat for either would be a severe setback in the race for the championship. Game time is 7:30. Huron League Standings.

Turkish Farm Youth Visiting at W. Wolfgang Farm

Ural Drama, an 18-year-old youth from Turkey, arrived Friday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wolfgang and son, David, where he will live and work for three weeks under the IFFE program.

The program is a project in which selected farm youth from the United States and 45 foreign countries exchange places and live and work with farm families in other countries for four to six months. The initials IFFE stand for International Farm Youth Exchange, which is dedicated to the belief that understanding people is the foundation of world peace.

Through giving farm youth an opportunity to learn another way of life by living it, the project helps rural young people to understand the problems and attitudes of rural people in other parts of the world.

Drama arrived in this country the middle of July and went to Oregon where he visited farm families for six weeks. He will be in Michigan until Dec. 27 and will then go to Washington, D. C., before leaving from New York for his journey back to Turkey.

His family includes an older brother and four younger sisters. He speaks Turkish and understands and speaks some English. He has had four years of secondary school and three years of study at the Agricultural High school. The family's home farm is 150 acres in size and they raise peaches, vegetables, wheat, alfalfa and barley.

Drama was brought to the Wolfgang home by Miss Mary Woodward, assistant state 4-H club agent.

Farmers To Receive Better Price on Holiday Turkeys

Michigan turkey growers likely will receive two to five cents a pound more for their live birds during the holiday market period than they did last year.

That's the outlook now, reports Henry E. Lenzel, extension poultry marketing economist at Michigan State University.

He says the New York price for ready-to-cook turkeys seems to be the best. The over-all market situation, he indicates, for the holiday period, fryer-roasters and young heavy hens are likely to average 55 to 58 cents and the young toms 42 to 50 cents.

Theophil Goebel, pastor of Trinity Evangelical and Reformed church, Detroit.

Chest Fund Hits 40% of Total Goal

With only four days left for the present Community Chest campaign for funds, reports yesterday showed that approximately 40 percent of the $4,000 goal had been reached. The campaign opened Tuesday, Oct. 11 and is to be concluded next Monday.

Alfred Mayer, campaign chairman, said he is confident the full amount will be raised and asked contributors to keep in mind that this is the one drive for funds to finance an entire year's activities of the community. He suggested that contributors also keep in mind the fact that since the Red Cross has been included in the Community Chest the customary contributions made in former Red Cross campaigns should be added to the amount given for the Community Chest alone.

Rural and village residents who might have been missed by solicitors in their areas and who wish to make a contribution are asked to leave it at Mayer's office as soon as convenient.

County Road Commission Job Is Now 'Big Business'

The annual Road Commission and Board of Supervisors tour of Washtenaw county roads took place as scheduled last Thursday, the party being entertained at the home of James Hendley, chairman of the county road commission. The Chelsea Kiwanis club sponsored the dinner.

Included in the party were Senator Lewis Christian, representative George W. Sallade and a number of county officials, all of whom were introduced to Washtenaw county Road Commission.

Hendley had been introduced by Paul Mann, program chairman for the Kiwanis club, who also introduced Chelsea businessmen present.

Hendley, in a talk following the dinner, quoted figures showing the magnitude of the present-day traffic and road situation and the probable increase in the coming years.

He said the present 61,000,000 vehicles now on the roads may be increased by 30 per cent in the next 10 years. In Michigan, he said, there were 2,000,000 registered vehicles in 1955. That amount to 3,000,000 in 1965. That amount of traffic is a heavy load for roads, calling for constant upkeep of existing highways, as well as construction of additional new ones.

In the county, Hendley said, there are now 3,800 cross-road culverts and 92 bridges with 20-foot, or longer, spans.

Speaking of the problem of combatting ice on roads in the winter, Hendley pointed out that 5,000 tons of salt was used in 1955, the cost being $122,000. Some years ago, when roads were icy, traffic

Action Delayed on Village Zoning Code

Certain changes requested in the proposed village zoning ordinance were not completed in time so the Village Council could act on it. Approval at the regular meeting Monday evening. A special meeting is to be called when the changes have been completed.

Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Pielmeier were Warren and Miss Bertha Spaulding. Afternoon callers were Miss Florence Fletcher and two friends, of Mason.

Blood Bank Nets 113 Pints From Clinic

Of the 150 persons who volunteered as blood donors at the Chelsea Blood Bank clinic Wednesday, Oct. 12, 46 were rejected because of colds or other disqualifying reasons, leaving a total of 113 who donated a pint of blood. According to the plan now in effect, 90 per cent of the amount donated, or 102 pints, is for use in the Chelsea area.

Contrary to the belief of some people in the community the Blood Bank program is not a special project for financially needy persons, but is a program to supply blood, when needed, to all Chelsea residents and workers, their wife, child, father and mother and grand-children.

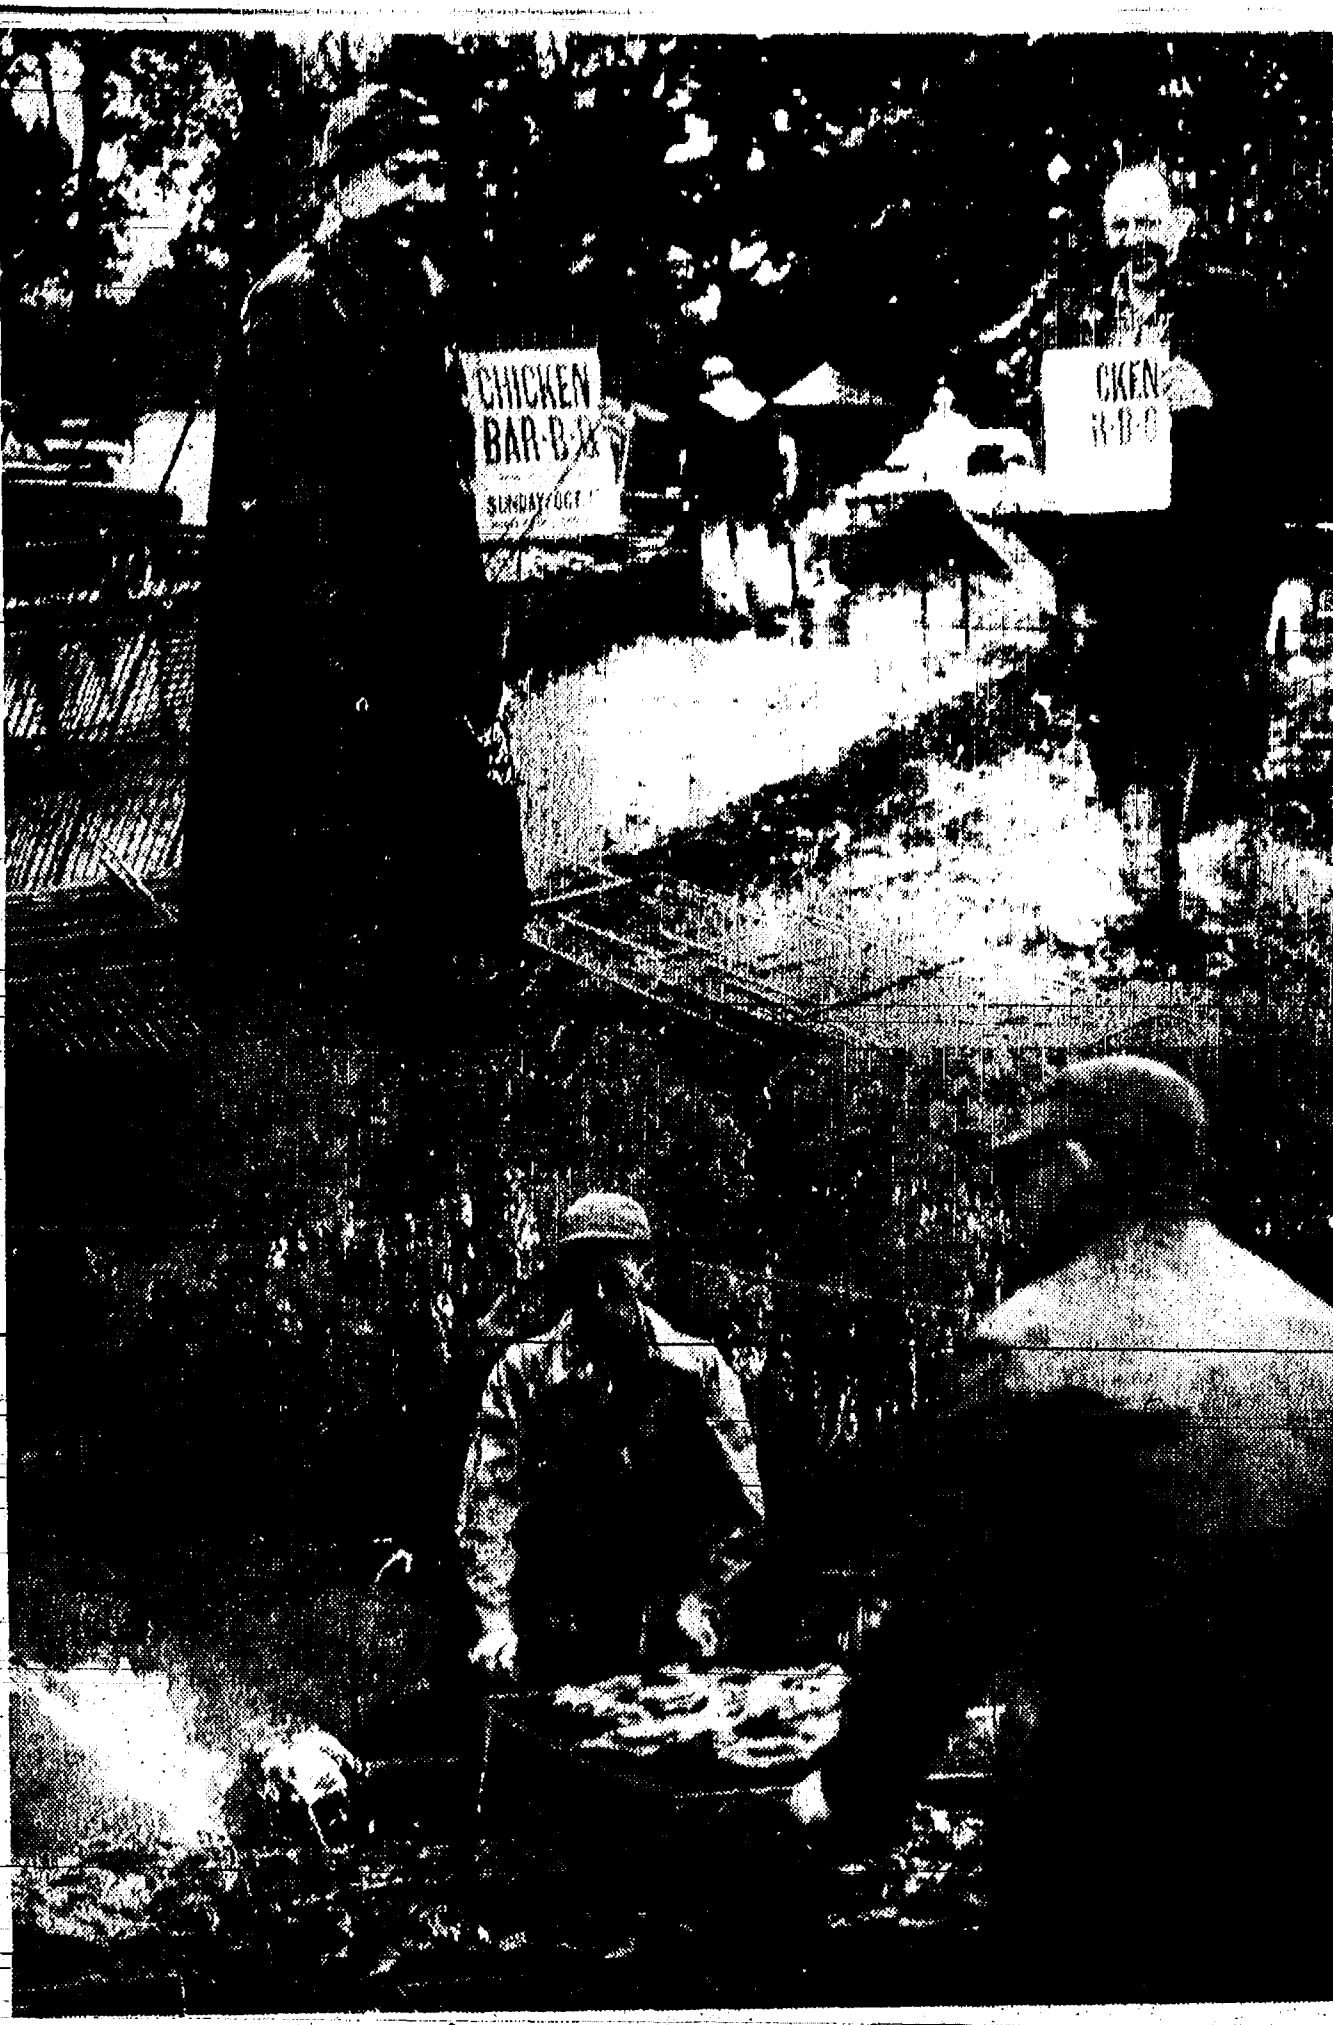

Mrs. Dudley Holmes, Chelsea Blood Bank chairman, said that the clinic was pronounced a success although the amount of blood secured is not considered enough for a community of approximately 3,000 people as the Chelsea area. Since each person's allotment from the Blood Bank is six pints, if needed, the amount credited to Chelsea is not believed to be large enough. With the balance of 20 pints remaining from last year, the amount now on hand is 122 pints.

Mrs. Holmes remarked that 90 per cent of the donors were again the industrial workers with very few housewives of the community responding. Mrs. Holmes stated, "This is every citizen's Blood Bank and everyone should consider it a duty to contribute. Paying money for blood when needed is not enough—somehow along the line the blood has to be given."

Instead of an eight-bed unit, as expected, a six-bed unit was set up in the Congregational church basement for the clinic. Mrs. Holmes said this slowed up the work slightly but did not affect the efficiency of the local volunteer nurses and other workers. Red Cross personnel at the clinic, said it was one of the most efficient groups of workers with whom they had worked in the entire area.

A Red Cross nurse at the clinic said the blood donor program is "the cheapest kind of insurance." It is the response from the community who would proportionately increase the amount of insurance.

This was Chelsea's fourth annual blood donor clinic. Anyone in need of blood is advised to contact Mrs. Dudley Holmes, chairman, or Malcolm Bruce, co-chairman, of the Chelsea Blood Bank.

BARBECUE HAWKERS—It may be that Homer Kuhl, left, top photo, and Henry Orbring, decked out in raincoats, were not dressed in the conventional attire for a fall chicken barbecue, but it was appropriate for the steady rainfall Sunday during which they frantically waved their signs to attract travelers passing Pierce Park. The lower photo shows William Storey and an assistant from Michigan State University who helped the Jaycees in the barbecue as a feature of the color tour being held through-out October. Lyle Christwell is also seen in the background.

George Knickerbocker Elected Head Of Summer Recreation Council

George Knickerbocker was elected chairman of the Chelsea Recreation Council at the annual meeting Thursday evening in the Agriculture room at Chelsea High school.

Also elected were Earl Osborne, vice-chairman; Donald Houle, treasurer; Mrs. W. J. Grossman, secretary; Karl Koengster, trustee for one year; Mrs. Stephen Slane, trustee for two years; and Mrs. Douglas Lange, trustee for three years.

Alan Conklin is to be director of the program again next year and Mrs. Edmund Kayser has tentatively agreed to accept the position of playground supervisor another year.

In his annual report, Conklin quoted figures showing that the total attendance at all phases of the program, including children and adults, was 6,499. Listed by weeks the report showed a peak attendance of 1,407 the first week and decreasing numbers each succeeding week.

Because of lack of funds the playground activities were omitted the eighth and final week of the program.

Conklin also submitted a tentative budget for next year's program. Mrs. Kayser's recommendations included suggestions for more active games for small boys and additional active projects for all small children. She also said that new seating facilities for the playground tables are a necessity.

Purchase of the needed supplies, it was brought out at the meeting, would cost into the $2,000 allotted for the summer program to such an extent that it would probably be necessary to shorten the program from an eight-week to a six-week period.

The dancing program of the summer recreation project was discussed at some length and it was suggested that outdoor and indoor dances be alternated another year with emphasis on adult participation.

Suggested also, was the possibility of cutting down the swimming program to three days per week as an economy measure.

Representatives of organizations present brought up the question of making some provision for youngsters who cannot afford to pay the daily locker fees and thus have not been able to take advantage of the swimming.

A program has been arranged and this will follow the dinner. The program will include a stewardship film entitled "Secret of the Gift," which will be shown in the church sanctuary. The thank offering will be received during the evening's program.

It was pointed out that the thank offering is a contribution over and above the regular church contributions.

The program is in charge of the church missionary committee which includes Mrs. W. H. Pielmeier, Mrs. R. A. McLaughlin and Mrs. R. W. Wagner.

Free Chest X-Rays Offered by County Health Department

Chicken Barbecue Successful Despite Constant Rainfall

Although a steady rain fell most of the day Sunday and kept out of-town people from driving around the color tours marked out in this area by the Chelsea Chamber of Commerce, local people took advantage of the chance to buy their Sunday dinner at the chicken barbecue at Pierce Park, sponsored by the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Jerome Burg, JCC president, in answer to queries about the success of the barbecue venture, said it was surprising how many Chelsea people turned out in spite of the weather. He said it was a gratifying experience to have such fine support from people of the community.

Homer Kuhl and Henry E. Orbring were co-chairmen of the barbecue and all Jaycees, with some of their wives, were on hand to help throughout the afternoon.

Prof. Mack Moore of Michigan State University, and an assistant also kept to their posts all afternoon, cooking the chicken over charcoal fires in the 40-foot-long pit. Buttered and constantly turned until done, the chicken was declared to be exceptionally tasty.

Chamber of Commerce men also assisted by packing the box lunches.

The color tour project will continue throughout the month.

Halloween Party Planned For Children

Plans for the annual Halloween party for children of the community were mentioned at the meeting of the Chelsea Kiwanis club Monday evening, the date announced being Monday, Oct. 31. Because of the Halloween party there will be no regular dinner meeting that evening, all Kiwanians being expected to assist with the project.

Following the pattern of former years, prizes will be offered for various classes of costumes. Window painting contests, a popular feature of the Halloween celebration the past several years will also be featured again.

Prizes for costumes and window painting will be awarded during a program to be held in Chelsea High school gymnasium following the customary parade.

Children are to be at the gymnasium at 6:30 p.m. when noisemakers are to be distributed. The parade will start at 6:45 p.m. and upon return to the school grounds afterwards, cider and doughnuts will be served around a huge bonfire.

The entertainment in the gymnasium will include a combination music, juggling and comedy act by a couple known as "The Sterlings."

At Monday night's meeting, Paul Mann, program chairman, introduced William Freeman who showed motion pictures of a hunting and fishing trip on the Albany river near James Bay in Canada. The trip was taken early in June by Freeman, Lawton Steger and William Schatz.

The meeting Monday was held in the school room at the Chelsea dist. church. A regular meeting will be held in the same location next Monday evening, Oct. 24.

Make-Up Clinics Scheduled for Second Polio Shots

Polio vaccine make-up clinics have been scheduled for Oct. 28, to be held in Chapelle school, 111 South Wallace Blvd., Ypsilanti, and in Stone school on Packard road, just east of Ann Arbor.

Administration of shots will be limited to those children who failed to receive their second series shot at the clinics in their own schools.

It is not necessary to make arrangements beforehand, according to a Washtenaw County Health Department announcement; however the child must have with him the necessary signed request slip.

Any child in the county who failed to receive his second series shot may be taken to either of the two clinics, both begin at 9 a.m. and are the only make-up clinics scheduled by the Health Department.

New Owner Opens Hilltop Service Station

George Merkel is now operating the Hilltop service station on U.S. 12 just west of the viaduct. He opened the place for business the past week-end.

Attempt To Locate TB Cases in Early, Curable Stages

Today, tomorrow and Monday are the days to get free chest x-rays at the mobile x-ray unit located in front of the Municipal building.

The program, sponsored by the Washtenaw County Health Department and the Washtenaw County Tuberculosis Association has the local cooperation of The Chelsea Kiwanis club and the American Legion Auxiliary.

Members of the Legion Auxiliary will assist as volunteer registrars and, to extend any other help needed by those who come in for x-rays. It is necessary to remove all brooches, metal pencils and pens and other objects which might interfere with taking a true x-ray picture but there is no need to undress for the x-ray, it has been pointed out.

Mrs. William Blaess, American Legion Auxiliary president, said yesterday that she has arranged to have three Auxiliary women on duty at all times during the three days the unit operates here.

It is expected that from 850 to 1,000 Chelsea area people 14 years old and over will avail themselves of the opportunity to have the chest x-rays. At Manchester last week 650 people were x-rayed during a three-day period ending Wednesday, Oct. 12.

The mobile unit is operating here from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. today and tomorrow and from 12 noon until 6 p.m. Monday.

Principal purpose of the mobile unit is to discover tuberculosis in its early stages since that is when there is greatest hope of complete recovery in a minimum length of time. The importance of early discovery of the disease is emphasized by the Health Department.

While deaths from tuberculosis have greatly decreased in the past 50 years, the number of new cases per year has remained approximately the same. There were 40 new cases in Washtenaw county in 1954 and only 11 of these were discovered in their early stages. Seven deaths in the county last year were attributed to tuberculosis.

Identity Known of Man Who Stole Foster's Auto

Photographs of Darwin Roland Robinson, a parolee from the Ionia Reformatory, have been identified as those of the man who unlawfully drove Robert Foster's car away from its parking place on Washington street on Wednesday of last week, smashing it into a tree a few minutes later.

The pictures also served to identify him as the man seen near a stolen car recovered at New Mexico, Pierce roads Oct. 14. The car had been stolen Wednesday, Oct. 12 in Flint. He had also been seen in Daniels' garage and keys taken from a car there were later found in the stolen car recovered on U.S. 12.

State Police and the FBI are looking for Robinson who is believed wanted for New Mexico, according to local police reports.

Another stolen car was recovered here by a local police officer at 7 o'clock Monday evening.

Police Officer Donald Walz received a report that a ranch wagon was parked on the highway on Old U.S. 12 near the Weinberg Dairy. Going to the scene, Walz found a man identified as Victor T. Lukas in the vehicle and arrested him for investigation of auto theft. A warrant was issued later charging him with unlawfully driving away an automobile.

Economy Run To Be Held Here Sunday, Oct. 30

Plans are proceeding for the fourth anniversary of the first experimental high school economy run held here anywhere and which took place at Manchester in 1952. The event is to take place Sunday, Oct. 30.

Chelsea boys and girls in high school or who graduated last year are eligible to enter the event, object of which is to drive a car of course covering all types of road surface and both town and country driving, to see who can finish with the least gasoline.

The Manchester Exchange club sponsors the economy run event with the Kiwanis club of Chelsea sponsoring the project locally.

Last year 12 Chelsea drivers entered and Ray Glasser, chairman in charge of arrangements here said he expects at least 20 Chelsea entrants this year.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Beckler and granddaughter spent Saturday here with Mr. and Mrs. Sylvester Weber.

Mrs. Herbert Hindler, of Rogers Corners, was surprised and pleased while digging sweet potatoes in her garden last week to find one that measured 13 inches in length and 12 inches in circumference and weighed four pounds.

Mrs. Hindler said another one weighed 2 1/2 pounds and was 11 inches long and 13 1/2 inches in circumference and a number weighed approximately two pounds.

The giant potatoes are of excellent quality and taste, Mrs. Hindler reported. They were grown on plants purchased from a local greenhouse and set out in the garden last spring.

School Officers Discuss Savings in Mass Purchasing

A joint meeting of the Washenaw County School Officers Association and Washtenaw County Superintendents Association was held Thursday evening in the North Elementary school here and set up a seven-man committee to investigate a county-wide purchasing plan for schools. Such a mass purchasing plan would save Washenaw county taxpayers large sums of money, according to an outline of the method for purchasing in large quantities such items as paper products, duplicator fluid, paste, fuel oil, and paint for use by students and building purposes.

The plan was originated by Superintendent Jack Hays of Ann Arbor.

No purchasing authority would need to be created for joint buying. Under the plan separate invoices would be sent to participating schools and goods would be picked up at present drop-off points. Competitive bidding for items purchased would be utilized as part of the mass purchasing plan.

Charles R. Cameron was appointed as a member of the seven-man committee named to look into the plan. Others are Donald H. Porter, business manager of Ypsilanti public schools who is committee chairman; Superintendent Wayne Webb of Dexter; Albert Winsch, business manager of Willow Run public schools; Superintendent Gerald Neff of Ann Arbor; and school board trustees Clarence Raynor of Erin's Lake, and Harry W. Forest Fires' Energy Rivals Atomic Bomb

Ann Arbor—There's as much total energy released in 40 acres of burning brush as there is by exploding one medium A-bomb, according to Kenneth P. Davis, University of Michigan professor of forestry.

And if this doesn't give an idea of a forest fire's destructiveness, Professor Davis cites figures which say that 10 million acres a year catch fire, with yearly dollar losses running in the 100's of millions. He points out that the U. S. as a whole spends some 70 million a year for forest fire fighting and prevention, but there are still about 100 thousand fires each year. And, he emphasizes that "93 percent of all forest fires are man-caused."

Michiganers should be particularly alert to the hazards of forest fires since this state has on record some of the most numerous and destructive in the nation's history. Professor Davis says. In 1930 there was a high of almost 5,000 fires; in 1925 some 800 thousand acres were burned over and in 1911 more than 3 million dollars was burned up. The entire face of the Upper Peninsula has been changed by fire, he states.

"But thanks to Michigan's Department of Conservation, which is one of the best in the country, these staggering losses in land and money have virtually been brought under control," Professor Davis declares.

Fire-fighting now is largely mechanized; power plows and tractors are equipped with power spray nozzles, two-way radios and walkie-talkies, and one tractor does the work of 50 men, he says. Airplanes supplement watch-towers. But, he adds, it is up to all individuals to protect the forest lands by careful observance of conservation laws, and the Smokey Bear campaign of the Association of State Foresters and the U. S. Forest Service attempts to alert people to the dangers of forest fire.

"A lot of the problem in Michigan, however, is not in the tall timber lands, but in the urban fringe, the semi-forest, semi-residential areas, where grass, brush and miscellaneous wood fires spring up through carelessness and are more harmful than forest fires," he declares.

He points out that the U. S. has followed Europe in all other fields of forestry, but in fire control "as a science and an art" the U. S. is the world's acknowledged leader.

Professor Davis is author, with Keith Arnold of the U. S. Forest Service, of a book on "Forest Fire Control and Use" which now is in the writing stage. When it is published, he declares, it will be a first in its field—a full-sized book on the general subject of forest fire.

Oil Drilling Crew Moves Equipment From Mohrlock Farm

John W. Johnson and Howard C. Pew, exploration and development operators from Mt. Pleasant, who had been drilling for oil on the farm of Mrs. Herman Mohrlock since Aug. 26, have stopped operations and moved their equipment away Tuesday.

Sept. 28 the crew had reached a depth of 4,500 feet and Pew said he was confident they would "strike oil or gas any day."

The installation, however, proved to be a dry hole although drilling continued for another week or more after that.

Wayne U. Geography Professor Reveals Interesting Facts About Michigan Rivers

Enjoying an early spring river scene are Wayne University students Ann Schudloff of New Baltimore and Tom Cahill of Davison.

Michigan can boast over 36,850 miles of fast-running rivers and streams. The importance of these waterways in the early development of the State is reviewed by Dr. Bert Huggins, chairman of the geographic department at Wayne University, in his study, "Michigan—Geographic Backgrounds in the Development of the Commonwealth."

With the opening of the Erie Canal in 1825, many home seekers found their way by water route from the East to Michigan where they penetrated the interior of the lower Peninsula by way of the Raisin, Huron, and Clinton rivers. The smaller streams of the State also were important factors in local history. It was by way of these water courses that trappers and traders pushed inland. Besides directing the travel of the settler, these streams provided the power for his mills, floated his logs in the lumbering era, drained his land, provided abundant fishing and recreation areas, and supplied his other water needs.

Michigan's rivers are unique in that they are extended rivers at exits. Extended rivers, Dr. Huggins explains, are those which

Napoleon Still Influences Design of Modern Furniture

Empire furniture is still a popular traditional form—although it has been scaled down to fit into the smaller living room.

Today it still carries the formality of the days of Napoleon, says Mary Shipley, instructor in textiles, clothing and related arts fact, Empire furniture came about because of the little Corsican, Napoleon, the designer of the outstanding Empire pieces—styled their furniture to glorify him and fit his likes and dislikes.

Chairs, for example, were small in contrast to the size of the other pieces. Because Napoleon was a short man, he persuaded designers to create smaller chairs with short legs.

The style itself, explains Mrs. Shipley, was an adaptation of the classic Roman, ornamented with swags, shields, arrows and laurel wreaths. Most of the decoration was on armrests, legs and drawer fronts.

Bright, stamped brass designs were popular, contrasting the deep red mahogany of the day. Most Empire colors were jewel-like. White and gold were popular as were deep red, yellow, brown, dark blue and olive green. Fabrics were satin, damask and brocade.

Charles Percier and Pierre Fontaine, noted designers of the time, were architects and their influence was seen in their massive designs, points out Miss Shipley. Empire beds and sofas were lavish, shaped like sleighs, higher at one end than the other and draped with yards of material. Desks and buffets of the period have Roman-like columns on the front corners.

Napoleon's influence on period furniture, and thus today's furniture, was a way of showing his strength and power to the world, adds Miss Shipley.

When using a pressure canner, never add cold water to a hot canner, and guard against sudden cooling that might cause it to warp.

To make a sugar-syrup for sweetening fruit you are canning, boil sugar and water or fruit juice for five minutes and remove the scum, advise Michigan State University home-economists. A heavy sirup can be made by using a cup of sugar with one cup of water or juice. A medium sirup recipe calls for a cup of sugar with two cups of water or juice and a light sirup will come from three cups of fluid with one cup of sugar.

Stainless steel flatware for the table is durable and practical, advise home-economists. They recommend buying stainless steel that is simple in design, with rounded edges and light in color.

Law Enforcement Officials To Meet With Table-Toppers

Police Chief John Carman, with police chiefs of Ann Arbor, Ypsilanti, Dexter, Saline and Milan, will attend a dinner meeting sponsored by Washtenaw County Table-Toppers to be held in the Huron hotel in Ypsilanti, Thursday, Oct. 27.

The meeting will be open to more than 100 liquor licensees of the Michigan Liquor Control Commission to give them an opportunity to meet with liquor control enforcement officials as well as with the police officials, Sheriff and State Police units and representatives of the University of Michigan and Michigan State Normal College who will be in attendance.

The agenda for the meeting will include a "full dress" discussion of enforcement, traffic safety, liquor sales to minors and credentials used by border-line age groups, as well as pedestrian safety, credentials issued by university groups and some precautionary advice on forged credentials, prosecution of minors, co-operation between licensees and law enforcement groups and a self-policing policy for the licensees.

John Farres, president of the Washtenaw County Table-Toppers, said the meeting was necessary at this time because of the growing problem of traffic safety, the high accident rate and also the threat which the minor problem presents all of the time. The influx of thousands of new students into the county also presents a renewed problem of education and enforcement.

Conservation Officer Enjoys Sight of Crippled Boy Fishing

Lansing-Conservation Officer Zeno Blackmer of Calhoun county reported a scene, recently that made him prouder, he said, to be a conservationist.

Northwest of Athens, on the Nottawasippe River, Blackmer found a boy lying on the stream bank fishing. The youngster was cast in a heavy brace, a victim of infantile paralysis. His father sat in a car nearby, reading. The boy was able to bait his hooks and chuck out the line, but that was about all. He had caught five hatchery trout.

"Glee and satisfaction stood out all over the boy's face," Blackmer said. "He asked me to look at the fish he'd caught. He told me how he fished and what he used for bait."

"I'm sure he'll never forget this experience," Blackmer wrote, "and for that matter, neither will I."

In pressure canning, before closing the canner vent be sure steam pours out for at least ten minutes so all air is driven from the canner. Otherwise, you may not get a temperature high enough to preserve the food, advise home economists.

Social Security for Farmers May Affect Their Credit Rating

Social security may have a profound effect on credit rating for farmers.

The fact that the value of social security benefits will be considerable for his family after a farmer dies can now be taken into account by bankers when they lend money.

So spoke Dr. E. B. Hill, a Michigan State University farm economist, during the recent Agricultural Finance Clinic on the campus.

Hill also said that social security means that farmers in the southern third of Michigan probably will retire earlier than before and pass the farm operation on to their sons.

But in the northern portion of the state social security may have the opposite effect, according to Hill. Where their income is considerably smaller—in many cases less than $1,200 a year—farmers will stay on the land as long as possible because it gives them a cheaper and better living than would a life in town.

Sheets Will Last Longer If Given Proper Care

Give your bed sheets the right care and they will give you longer wear.

Gold care includes correct laundering, declares Cecilia Roach, instructor in textiles, clothing and related arts at Michigan State University. White sheets are more likely to remain white longer and washed with white clothes only and if neither clothes nor sheets are badly soiled.

Sunshine is the safest bleach, says Miss Roach. Strong bleaches will damage cotton and cause them to deteriorate and wear out sooner.

If you must bleach from time to time, she suggests you use no more than is recommended on the bottle.

If you dry sheets out of doors, Miss Roach suggests hanging them where they will not flap in the wind. Strong winds may whip the corners and hems or break the selvage yarns. Hang your sheets in a different position of the line every now and then. And fasten them with clothes pins rather close together to avoid strain on small areas.

Un-ironed sheets tend to wear longer, points out Miss Roach, but if you iron yours, be careful to use the proper temperature. Even the mildest sear will weaken cotton.

Be sure your sheets are dry before storing them. They may mildew if they are put in a warm, dark place. Mildew will weaken sheets and often the stains can never be taken out.

Miss Roach feels that homemakers should get the habit of putting newly laundered sheets at the bottom of the pile in their linen closets. This automatic rotation will result in longer life for bed linens.

Football Fans Enjoy Half-Time Band Performance

East Lansing—Do football fans really care about half time shows put on by university bands?

Prof. Leonard V. Falcone, Michigan State University band director, believes that they do.

He recalls preparing the Spartan band for its 1954 trip to Iowa City for a half-time performance during the televised MSU-Iowa football game. Yet after arriving for top performance, the Spartans learned the TV cameras had ignored them entirely.

"There was a storm of protest about the handling of half time, and since that time the television people seem to have taken an entirely different attitude toward half-time shows," Prof. Falcone believes.

WASHINGTON AND "SMALL BUSINESS"

By C. WILSON HARDER

Under Arthur Flemming, Office of Defense Mobilization head, a special committee has started study on a matter which in these days of creeping internationalism in Washington is considered a problem.

Here's the problem. When government buys defense materials how far shall foreign manufacturers be protected in underbidding and taking the business away from Americans?

In short time C. W. Harder ODM will buy $50 million worth of emergency standby heavy machine tools.

But despite fact every penny will be paid from taxes on American business, labor and agriculture, no one in authority seems able to determine if American business and labor should get any of the work.

In depression 30's, Buy American Act provided U.S. bidders be given preference on federal orders. No definite rule was set, but common practice was to award to U. S. low bidder unless foreign bid was at least 25% under.

But last December White House issued edict foreign bidders under lowest U. S. bidder by only 5% to 10% should get the business.

So now, as was done by Randall Commission seeking to National Federation of Independent Business

Under law pay for a lot of war-time trimmings, such as social security and unemployment insurance, not to mention compensation insurance, local, state and federal taxes and other items.

It is comparable to one horse in a race carrying usual size jockey, another horse carrying a 300 pound rider.

Actually, present thought carried to logical conclusion should result in all U. S. military supplies being financed by foreigners plus standing armed forces in all ranks completely with lower priced foreigners.

Although eventually sacked by bargaining, no one can accuse the Old Romans of ineptness. Eventually when it came to matters of defense they went whole hog on the question of depending on foreign mercenaries.

TROPHY PRESENTED

Mr. Paul Mann, representative of the Chelsea Kiwanis Club, presented Coach Alan Conklin with the trophy won by Chelsea at the Milan-Chelsea game. This trophy, presented at the U. High pep meeting, was also won last year by the Chelsea squad, and they hope to keep a permanent place reserved for it in the Chelsea trophy case.

NEW MOVIE PURCHASED

Mr. Musser's shop classes saw a movie entitled "Tomorrow and Today in Kitchens" on Oct. 18. "Basic Court Procedures" is the title of the movie shown to Miss Fox's government class.

A large variety of new films have been added to those we already have. They are films in the "Young America Series."

KINDERGARTENERS CELEBRATE

On October 5, Thomas Smith celebrated his fifth birthday by treating his class to cupcakes and balloons.

The following children have birthdays in October: Thomas Wolehowski, Oct. 2; Darlene Mallette, Oct. 6; Thomas Smith, Oct.
8; Vickie York, Oct. 11; Joyce
McGibney and John Grossman,
Oct. 18.

Mrs. Kelly's kindergarten has a very lovely science table. Its sweet potato has grown very tall. The tropical fish have little ones. The goldfish are pretty but two of them were lost.

The class has three different kinds of turtles which keep everyone busy catching crickets and flies. Joanne Fisher brought a miniature garden of driftwood and moss. It is very lovely. The class also has caterpillars and butterflies to study.

Sharon Mepanya brought some very lovely yellow roses and a potted geranium.
Cecile Ritter brought some fresh mums and many small things to talk about.

LIBRARY GROWS

The High School library has been busy recently helping Mrs.
Johnson's English classes in their occupational research. Every period in the library was one of intense studying and vying for seats.
The boys in particular sought pamphlets and magazines dealing with agriculture. The girls had secretarial and nursing occupations at the top of their list. Besides this research in writing, the students also interviewed people around school and in the community.

Approximately 200 new books have arrived for children of grade school age. Most of them deal with American history and science.

Miss Wiese is happy to report that the three Chelsea school libraries are having their busiest year.

BEN FERRIER PRESENTS ASSEMBLY

Mr. Ben Ferrier, a former Canadian guide, put on an assembly for the high school about the wilderness and survival. He explained in a very interesting manner the types of things and equipment one would need if he were stranded in the wilderness. He also showed the correct way to use an ax and fish line.

First canal connecting Lakes Superior and Huron was built by a fur company in 1797. It was a nine-foot lock, only large enough for canoes.

Adolescents Have Priceless Assets When Given Chance, Says U-M Doctor

Ann Arbor—When does an idealistic adolescent become a cynical, uncaring, or disgruntled adult? This question suggests an interesting research project to Dr. Ralph D. Rabinovitch, chief of Children's Service in the University of Michigan Neuropsychiatric Institute.

Far from being crazy, mixed-up kids, adolescents find themselves in a crazy mixed-up world. According to the U-M child psychiatrist, "With all his problems, the adolescent has priceless assets which given proper nurture far outweigh the negatives."

In other words, adolescents seem to have more to offer the world than the world offers them.

"But in recent years," declared Dr. Rabinovitch, "I have been much impressed by the loss of so many of our pupils."

It is a loss which borders on the automatic, breeds in the cold, impersonal corridors of modern life, and at the sound of a bell, shuffles from room to room with no apparent purpose.

"We mustn't blame the teachers," said Dr. Rabinovitch, "but something is wrong when we continue to design schools which weaken rather than strengthen the teacher-student relationship."

In an article entitled, "Our Adolescents and Their World," which appeared recently in the English Journal, published by the University of Chicago press, Dr. Rabinovitch then gets down to cases, picks up a few child psychology chestnuts and replants them in the soil of common sense. For example:

(1) "Give the boy his head." Parents nowadays tend to take the adolescent's striving for independence so seriously that they pull the family rug of security out from under their children.

"In some families," declared Dr. Rabinovitch, "it is as though parents no longer dare to direct a child after he has reached the magic age of 16."

The U-M doctor added: "It is certainly nice to grow up with one's children, but it is also wise to be more mature than one's children."

"Make the amenities fun." It is perhaps quite appropriate, according to Dr. Rabinovitch, to want your child to become a graceful ballroom dancer at 16. But teachers must stand firm against growing pressure that such social graces be forced on 11 or even 10-year-olds.

Said the doctor: "No matter how we try to stretch their squeaking ego, this age group is definitely not ready for this kind of involvement."

He added: "The children themselves are often ready, in fact anxious, to be reasonable in these matters, and where the parent's social standards, it is all the more the school's job to stand firmly for real enduring values."

(8) "Comic books are the evil of the times." Actually life itself is more gruesome than the comic books. And it turns out that the really gruesome comic books are more often read by adults than by children.

Dr. Rabinovitch says he doesn't doubt that some horror comics are unsavory and disturbing to children, but states that modern bogies such as housing, suburban, tax frauds, and professional liars in government are far worse because the children have no escape from them.

"At least," said the doctor, "in Superman and Mighty Mouse the child knows that good triumphs over evil."

(4) "Give adolescents solid courses in sex education." Like most panaceas, this one represents a gross oversimplification.

It is helpful but not enough, declared Dr. Rabinovitch, to teach children the anatomy and physiology of sexual functions. Furthermore, such is actually of secondary importance.

"The primary elements of sex education are found in family relationships, in feeling tones between parents, and in feeling tones between parent and child," said the U-M child specialist.

"After all," he added, "sex education is education in living."

(5) It's all because of modernism. Today the tendency is to equate masculinity with toughness or with lack of feeling.

"Well," speculates the U-M psychiatrist, "if our aim is to raise gangsters, then, of course, we must avoid sentiment at all cost."

But, he added, "If we want to produce thinking, feeling young citizens capable of spotting potential despots, then sentiment, far from being a sign of weakness, has an important place in the school experience."

The school, concludes Dr. Rabinovitch, is the repository of fine literature, and it is in literature that children learn a respect for individuality, for creativity, and for originality.

The doctor added a postscript: "By literature I do not mean only the voices of cold decadence and avant-garde impersonal schizophrenia—or worse, phony schizophrenic outpourings, but writing that evokes a deep emotional response through its genuine warmth and understanding of human values."

Farmers are next in line after highway users to reap the benefits of a round-robin attack on state problems.

There are those who will charge that the ideas sponsored by Gov. Williams and his staff of elected state officials are merely investments in the 1956 campaign.

Democrats view them—at least publicly—as their contributions of leadership.

First of those to come up with a special program outside the governor's office was Secretary of State James M. Hare, who drafted the Democratic highway safety program.

It lay in his desk for weeks until it could be "cleared" through Williams, promoted and presented. Now highway safety is to be the main item in a special legislative session.

Republicans look at it this way. People have been killed and maimed on Michigan highways since Detroit's automobile industry put the world on wheels. Those who survived have tried to stop the slaughter.

Safety campaigns have been conducted and laws have been passed by the legislature, all toward the end of cutting down the "toll of progress."

State-wide speed limits have been proposed. Tougher licensing procedures have been enacted. A former secretary of state created a central driver licensing system with legislative help.

But it has been a slow process. Some of the state's top newspapers and others have made highway safety a major issue. They have tried to protect people from themselves.

Now comes Hare with a program for the special session, endorsed by Williams. Democrats would like to have it put into effect immediately.

"This is nonpartisan," said Hare. While the Hare Democratic program is sponsored by a party, it groups together all the dozens of proposals and hopes of Republicans who have pushed individual ideas for years.

In fact, most of Hare's program can be traced to recommendations of the Michigan Safety Commission, a group of intensely interested people who have studied highway safety for several years.

But, as one Republican legislative chieftain said, "if it saves one life, the program will be worth the trouble, whichever party proposed it."

Commenting that a new Democrat in office must work harder to hold his job than a Republican in a traditionally Republican state, Hare said:

"The reasons now are more pressing than previously."

He calls his program the "Three E's of Safety: Education, Enforcement and Energy." He said that

DUCK HUNTERS' DREAM

If you're one of the 100,000 Michigan hunters who live for the fall waterfowl season in our state you're probably a dreamer—just as this reporter is—a dreamer of a windy, blustery day in your favorite marsh where you crouch expectantly in your blind as a long line of mallards come swinging across the sky. Other hunters are scattered throughout the marsh, too, but in your dream not one single shot is fired at those ducks while they're out of range. Of course that's the time to wake up, because a dream like that is nothing short of a "hopeless night-mare!"

Unwitting Conservationists

The persistence and insistence of these "hunters" to sky-shoot, throwing lead aimlessly into the wide open spaces makes one think it's some kind of a conspiracy. Maybe there's a secret band of waterfowl-lovers who don't believe any duck should ever be shot, and maybe they post their members in every marsh to scare off the ducks before harm can befall them! At any rate, unintentionally perhaps, they're ruining their own and everyone else's shooting, and constitute the #1 Aggravation on any good duck hunter's list today.

Good Kill Expected This Fall

From reports of "hunters," ducks in hundreds of our lakes and marshes there'll be a very heavy kill in the opening week of our 70 day season. Particularly lethal to the ducks is the early opening shooting hour on the first day—and from license sale reports extra heavy concentrations of hunters will be on the march this fall.

Some 450,000 waterfowl will fall to these sportsmen if the season is normal—maybe more if pressure is heavier.

Lack of Recognition

Conservation officers say that 90% of our duck hunters are unable to tell one duck from another. About 14 species are common to our Michigan flyways, with the wood duck getting most protection inasmuch as only one is permitted in the hunters bag this season.

More and more Michigan waterfowl hunters are acquiring good retriever dogs. Statistics from national sources indicate that one out of every three ducks shot escapes into the marsh as a cripple, to die later as a complete waste of a valuable game resource. A good retriever could help you cut down on this loss.

Actually, a surprising number of hunting dogs of all breeds take to the water readily where game is involved—so this year how about it? Take your dog duck hunting, been wrestling with the agricultural problem in Washington for several years. It isn't likely we are going to sit down and solve the whole thing in a few weeks."

First, Hare gets the go-ahead on his highway safety program and he shares the spotlight with Williams. Next it will be Brown.

Observers are scratching their heads to figure what Williams has in store for Auditor General Victor Targonski and Attorney General Thomas M. Kavanagh.

Kavanagh's office is one which normally carries its own attractions publicity-wise. He is the state's top law enforcement officer and things come his way through the force of gravity.

Targonski is much the same. His office audits the books of all state agencies, suggests changes. But maybe it could use a little something extra. Michigan will know before the next campaign.

The White house has four elevators and 107 rooms.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

Tie This One For Consideration—

Closed the office early last Saturday to go after pheasants with Pops Foster. I used, fewer shells than the old gentleman and took home more birds—but not because I did better shooting.

I'd borrowed a dog for the occasion. Pops took along Blue, his ancient pointer. Several times I noticed Pops walk up to a clump of bushes Blue had pointed at and fire into the air—though he hadn't flushed a single bird.

Naturally, I wanted to know why. "Well," he said sheepishly, "I've been hunting with that dog for 11 seasons. His nose isn't much help any more—but I'd rather waste a shell than let him know."

From where I sit, Pops always shows consideration for people, too. For instance, this is a small thing, but he puts a bottle of beer on ice for me when I visit him—though he never takes anything but coffee himself. Even if he doesn't agree with me on a matter of personal choice (which is his right) he'd rather not make a "point" of letting me know.

Strip Cropping Pays Dividends On Sharon Farm

Contour strip cropping is paying off for Alvin Tirb and Fina Olson on the Olson farm, Sharon Valley road in Sharon township. Tirb and Olson, working with technicians of the U. S. Soil Conservation Service installed the 40-acre strip cropping system last spring as part of a complete soil and water conservation program for the farm worked out with technicians of the Washington County Soil Conservation District.

Alternating strips of corn and wheat, some of them three-fourths of a mile long, curve gracefully around the slopes on the level, slowing water runoff and soil washing. Tirb reports no difficulties in working the strips. Because machinery works on the level rather than up and down hill, machinery efficiency is improved. Crop yields go up too, according to Olson and Tirb, who indicate that is the best corn crop they've ever seen on those fields. More water in the soil and reduced loss of fertilizer nutrients are listed as major reasons for the yield increases.

Both men report one of the big pay-offs came this fall during a heavy rainstorm in the area. Similar fields in the area worked the conventional way—up and down the hills—lost as much as three or four inches of valuable topsoil during the rain. Erosion on the strip cropped field was not noticeable. Both Olson and Tirb are quick to point out that soil and water conservation are paying them dividends right now.

ARRIVES IN GERMANY

Pfc. Gene Lake is now stationed in Germany, according to word received this week by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Lake. He arrived at his new station near Stuttgart, Wuertemberg, Oct. 8.

Another son of the Lakes, Cpl. Carl Lake, is stationed at the automotive school at Fort Knox, Ky.

GARY PACKARD STATIONED AT SAMPSON AIR BASE

Mr. and Mrs. Mac Packard have received word from their son, Gary, who enlisted in the Air Force early this month, that he is stationed at Sampson Air Force Base in Geneva, N. Y., and will remain there for his basic training, which he believes will be completed by Christmas.

Military service is somewhat of a tradition in the Packard family. Gary's father having served in the Army during World War II. Three of his father's brothers also served in World War II and five of his mother's brothers saw service on foreign soil during and since World War II.

THE MIDDLE GUARD

by LES BINGAMAN

CLAD IN A freshly-cleaned uniform, helmet in perspiring hands, the muscular young player sat in front of his locker and gulped nervously as he waited for the signal to call the team onto the playing field.

He glanced at other players, also in varying attitudes of waiting, some of them first-year men like himself and nervous but most veterans of other campaigns and visibly composed over the contest that was only a few minutes away.

No, this wasn't a high school youngster awaiting his first game or a collegian about to make his big debut but a professional football player, with eight solid years of gridiron experience behind him, as jittery as a schoolboy ready to play before mom and dad for the first time.

The cause of the young player's nervousness was the realization that once again he was a freshman, this time on the most competitive level of football, the intensely rugged professional level.

Select Society

Where thousands of players annually land berths on college teams, and an even greater number plays on high school squads, the opportunity is diminished tremendously in pro football.

Less than 400 players are actively engaged in the National Football League, 33 players on each of 12 teams, or a total of 396 to be exact. And most of these 396 are veteran performers, the most talented, durable and clever in the land. Only half a dozen to a dozen rookies make the grade on any team in any given season.

Thus, to join this select society,

DOGS

By Farley Manning

BACK TO SCHOOL

With the kids back in school, home can be a lonesome place for the dog. But it is still better for him to be a little bit lonesome than to try to go to school, too.

About the worst place in the world for a dog is a school yard full of children. The excitement of too much running, too much playing and too much attention can make the best behaved dog careless with his teeth. Add to this the danger of having his feet stepped on in a crowd and it is pretty obvious why school officials welcome dogs almost the way they do polo.

Some communities, where dogs have previously been allowed to run, are now enforcing a leash law during school hours. Others have passed "owner responsibility" ordinances and then made it a misdemeanor for dogs to come onto the school grounds.

But regulations are not necessary in most communities, if owners cooperate. Just keeping the dog in the house until the children are safely gone—and perhaps giving him a little extra attention during the first weeks of school—will usually prevent him from trying to follow them.

However if this doesn't work it is better to keep the dog on leash and on run than to take chances.

One of the best types of wire for a run is the twisted cable type sold by many army surplus stores as "airplane cable." It is strong yet flexible enough to be easy to work with and a metal ring running on it is not quite as noisy as it would be with a single strand wire. However if the ring on the end of the chain still makes too much noise—a wooden block, bored with two holes, (one for the wire and one for the chain) will solve your problem.

The large tray or platter of sandwiches is made much more attractive if suitable garnishes are added. One suggestion is to alternate stuffed and ripe olives with wedges of assorted cheeses, the latter topped with a very small sprig of parsley. Another suggestion is to alternate quartered hard-boiled eggs with green pepper rings into which have been piled radish roses.

Lawrence Shanahan led a discussion on the topic "Mineral Rights."

Hostesses for the meeting were Mrs. Lawrence Shanahan and Mrs. Mary Clark. At the next meeting, to be held Nov. 11, hostesses are to be Mrs. W. C. Boyce and Mrs. Wynn Boyce. When considering make-over clothing for youngsters, clothing specialists advise using light weight, firm, closely woven fabrics of suitable bright color. It would be impractical, they say, to use worn-out, harsh materials for children's clothing.

Interpreting the News

Highways are embarrassing Republicans. And forcing them to turn against one of their own. The target is Highway Commissioner Charles M. Ziegler, whom the legislature insisted help with the Turnpike Authority and the Mackinac Bridge Authority.

At last glance, he seemed against both, though he has not said so publicly. Senator Haskell J. Nichols (R-Jackson), fearing that Ziegler was being ignored in the rush toward oil roads two years ago, rammed through an amendment making him a member of the authority. Ziegler went along for a year, waiting for plans to develop. Then, when a 113-mile Flat Rock to Saginaw turnpike was planned, he disclosed he already was working on a parallel free route.

This caught the authority by surprise. It angered the new authority chairman, Ex-Senator George N. Higgins, of Ferndale, who went along with the idea that Ziegler should be a member. Since his appointment as chairman last spring, it has been Higgins against Ziegler.

It didn't help Republican tempers when Gov. Williams also took out after Ziegler who now, at least nominally, is the target of sharpshooters in both parties. Ziegler says he can see no value in toll roads when money is available to start a free route. Higgins is accusing Ziegler of sabotaging the idea.

Senator Nichols, chairman of the Senate highway committee, is ready for a fight. He has asked Ziegler to stop obstructing Higgins and the toll roads. "What we need in Michigan is roads, not political maneuvering," he said.

Quick action by Nichols in the last legislative session stayed off death of the toll road idea for Michigan. A bill abolishing the turnpike authority was killed in his committee.

When the House passed a bill giving local communities a veto power over toll road routes, it also died in Nichols' committee. "With all the bickering in Michigan about toll roads versus free highways, New York financiers are reluctant to invest in bonds."

They reason that it would be a trifle insane to invest more than $135 million in a system that may be abolished at any moment and at least, is not solidly supported in the state.

Suspicious lawmakers have hired a Chicago research organization to make a $20,000 survey of Michigan's mental health and tuberculosis hospital facilities. They want a complete report by March 1, 1956, in time for action during the 1956 legislative session.

The investigation was ordered after tuberculosis and mental health spokesmen turned in conflicting reports on the number of beds available. The whole business started last year when, needing more mental hospital space, the state looked longingly at tuberculosis hospitals at Howell and Gaylord—knowing both had empty space.

legislative session, plans were made—and later discarded under pressure—to transfer a tuberculosis sanatorium to a mental health hospital. Tuberculosis officials stated with some heat that they would need all the space they could get if they could find and hospitalize those who were suffering from tuberculosis. Mental health officials pointed to the empty beds and said that patients could be congregated in the other hospitals, and one could be converted to a mental hospital. The battle raged for months. Finally, a call was sent out for a survey by state agencies of the number of empty tuberculosis hospital beds. Figures were different. At one point, the tuberculosis people reduced the capacity of their state hospitals, claiming that care could not be adequately given if the capacities remained at the higher figure. Senator Elmer R. Porter (R-Blissfield) rammed through his proposal for an outside agency to make the survey. There was opposition from both Republicans and Democrats to spending $20,000 for the investigation when the Citizens' Research Council of Michigan, privately endowed, offered to do it free. "We could do it, but some people think we are taking sides," said Loren B. Miller, director of the council. Legislators insisted on a "good" survey and an "accurate" count of beds by the Chicago organization and its representative here, John D. Coreoran. "We don't make any other kind of survey," he snapped. A Michigan Woman, Winalee Gentry, is author of "One More River to Cross," her first book, which came off presses this week. She did not start out to write a story—merely an account of her colorful and adventuresome experiences with her husband, Howard L. (Dux) Gentry, for family consumption. But the record of his climb from an oil and pipeline worker to their present prosperity made such fine reading, she decided to publish it. Today the Gentrys live in a spacious Jackson home, own a sizeable oil and pipeline business. "One More River to Cross" is the intimate, spirited and rollicking story of their ups and downs, spiced with local color for those who find Michigan stories fascinating.
