Civil Defense Chiefs Explain Procedure For Atomic Survival

Ypsi Area Residents To Evacuate Sunday In Volunteer Exercise

Chelsea firemen and Auxiliary Police were among those present Thursday evening for a public Civil Defense meeting at South Elementary school, with Gerald G. Miller, Washtenaw county Civil Defense director as the guest speaker.

Martin Miller, Civil Defense director for this area, said after the meeting that people generally do not appear to realize the vital importance of being prepared in case of atomic air attack.

"While most people show little interest in the Civil Defense program," Miller said, "if circumstances should arise to the point of enemy invasion, they will eagerly avail themselves of (and appreciate) all the effort that has been put in by volunteer workers on behalf of everyone."

It was pointed out at Thursday's meeting that evacuation of an area is the only means of saving lives in case of atomic attack and such evacuation requires at least 24 to 36 hours notice.

County Civil Defense Director Miller mentioned that a Civil Defense evacuation, on a voluntary basis, is planned for Sunday, Sept. 7, when people in the eastern end of the county who participate will be directed to come to Chelsea. Chelsea's Civil Defense Director Miller said he is attending a meeting in Ann Arbor tonight to receive final instructions as to procedures to be followed here. It is believed people will be directed to certain "stations" on the northern route to Chelsea and also on a route laid out south of here.

At any rate, Martin Miller said, the evacuees will be met by Civil Defense workers and a record kept for his files.

An interesting feature of last Thursday's meeting was a demonstration of radiological detection instruments to measure atomic fall-out, etc. The instruments were brought in from Cassidy Lake Technical School by Gerald Carr.

It was pointed out that efforts will be made to acquire similar instruments for instruction purposes at Chelsea High school.

Operation of Camp Crile Described

Robert Foster, as program chairman for the Sept. 2 Kiwanis club meeting, introduced Eldon Heller as the speaker. He explained the operation of Camp Crile for epileptic children and Camp Crile for the camp director, Daniel S. Elliott, who showed colored slide pictures of summer activities at the camp.

Announcement was made that Melvin Dann of Cassidy Lake Technical School, had offered to the Kiwanis club will gather and turn over to him. The toys will be repaired and returned to the club for Christmas giving, he said.

Also endorsed at the meeting was a smorgasbord dinner planned at Camp Crile for Sept. 14.

Mother Kills Rattler When Daughter Reports 'Jumping Over Snake'

Mrs. Kenneth Livingston killed a 20-inch rattlesnake in the driveway of her Cavanaugh Lake home Thursday afternoon after her 2-year-old daughter, Carol, ran to the house and told her she had "jumped over a snake."

Mrs. Livingston said she calmly struck the rattler's head with a shovel and wasn't really scared until she had time to think of the episode later.

Examination showed the snake had five rattles.

Horse Show Sponsored By Fair Association

The free horse show scheduled for 3 p.m. Saturday by the Chelsea Community Fair is to be directed by Carroll Ordway of the Fair. In last week's announcement of the horse show it was incorrectly mentioned that the show was being sponsored by the club.

Exchange Farm Youth Visits Austrian Community Fair

Now fair season is getting well under way in Michigan. I couldn't help but think of the Washtenaw county 4-H Show last week when the other IFYE's and myself were guests of the Landjugend—a festival in Oberretzing. It is a small village about 50 miles south of here and the festival lasted four days, Thursday through Sunday. It is a holiday and all the people around the village stop work for a few days to go to the festival. It is much like a community fair.

We were there Thursday and Friday, Thursday the Landjugend of Steiermark (a state of Austria) had an executive meeting and planned the program for the fall. In the evening they had a dance and for extra entertainment a dance group danced some old Austrian folk dances, other groups sang, and everybody had a good time. Here they have folk dancing clubs very similar to some of our square dancing clubs. The people here all sing a lot and often play a musical instrument also.

On Friday there was a horse show and exhibition by some of the riding clubs, and a tractor operating contest. It really is rough. It is divided into four parts and each part is timed and scored.

First, the driver hooks the tractor to a trailer with an open milk can of water in it. He then drives through the maze and backs the trailer into place and unloads. In the maze are obstacles to drive over that spill the water if he goes too fast. Then the water is measured when he finishes.

The second part, the driver balances the tractor on a large teeter-totter and is scored on the time it takes and his driving skill.

Third is a spiral that becomes smaller and smaller. He drives into it as far as he can until he touches and then tries to back out without touching any barriers.

The last exercise is to test the driver's skill at turning in a small area. He drives into a small rectangle and must turn around and drive out.

All the exercises are timed and scored, and all safety precautions must be followed or points are deducted. It was really fun and we saw some fine tractor drivers.

We met a young Austrian farmer, Johann Schaffer, there; a member of the Landjugend, who had been in Kansas and Minnesota for 10 months on another exchange program. He knew more about the United States, I think, than we did. He learned to speak perfect English in the ten months. Before he left here he didn't know any English. This is amazing to me because I seriously doubt whether I could ever speak good German no matter how long I stayed.

Sincerely,
James Gleason,
IFYE Delegate, Austria.

Public School Enrollment To Top 1,575

A total of approximately 1,575 pupils returned to school today in the Chelsea School District. Complete figures will not be available until school has been in session for several days at the opening of the new eight-room addition to North Elementary school is being used.

Elementary schools expected an enrollment of 980, while junior and senior high school students are expected to number almost 600.

Enrollment in the seventh grade alone was 128 with indications that the figure might require revision later.

Kindergarten bus runs do not begin until Monday, Sept. 8.

Teachers' meetings were held Tuesday and yesterday in preparation for today's opening of the fall term following the summer vacation.

Saturday Parade Set To Begin March at 2 p.m.

Chelsea Auxiliary Police officers will assist in directing traffic for the Chelsea Community Fair parade which begins promptly at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon, according to Village President Donald Alber, parade committee chairman.

Parade entries must be in their places by 1:30 p.m., Alber said; however, in case of showers, the parade will be held up until the rain stops, when the fire siren will be sounded as a signal to take assigned places.

In case of an all-day rain (something that has never happened on parade day), the entire parade will be postponed until 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

Flores are to assemble on Park street, heading east, as far as East street; farm machinery is to head north on East street to the Park street intersection; bicycles and tricycles are to assemble at Park and East streets, headed north; and all other entries, with the exception of horses, are to enter Park street from Madison street and head west to the intersection of East street.

Horse owners, as well as members of visiting bands and the Chelsea school bands, are being given special instructions.

The entire area is to be blocked off to traffic beginning at 1:30 p.m.

Chelsea Co-Op Nursery on Second Year

Chelsea Co-operative Nursery, under the direction of their teacher, Mrs. Raymond Schairer, is scheduled to begin their second year next Monday. A non-profit making organization, the nursery is for pre-school children, ages 3-5. There are 17 families with 18 children presently enrolled in the nursery which meets Tuesday and Thursday mornings from 9 to 11.

The nursery has moved from the third floor of the Municipal Building to its new quarters at Beach school on Dexter-Chelsea road.

The nursery depends upon the co-operative effort of the parents. Mothers assist the teacher, serve on committees, and carry on fundraising projects, while fathers take care of the maintenance and repair equipment. Parents are given a perspective on their own child without losing closeness to the child. Children gain new playmates—regular association with other pre-schoolers, playthings, equipment and a place geared to his needs, and guidance from his nursery schoolteacher. He also learns to share experiences and materials with other children as he will do increasingly throughout life.

Under the direction of maintenance chairman William Chandler and his committee of Charles Powers, Paul Boehler, Dave Sanborn and other fathers, the school has been made ready for the nursery group. Equipment co-chairman Raymond Johnson and Jack Merkel and their committee have painted and repaired all equipment. At their new location the children are provided with an enclosed outdoor play area, in addition to adequate facilities for indoor play and storage.

Mothers have had a hobo breakfast and bake sale to raise funds for the co-op and are having a toy and candy booth as well as pony rides at the fair.

Children travel to and from the nursery by car pool and Mrs. Schairer is assisted by three mothers.

The nursery is licensed by the Michigan State Welfare Department and must meet the approval of the State Fire Marshall and County Health Department.

Rare Young Bird

One of the more rare and impressive birds in Michigan is the bald eagle. This youngster was captured on film in a nest in northern Michigan. Estimates indicate there are some 30-100 breeding pairs of bald eagles in the state. Like hawks and owls, all eagles are protected from hunting.

KNOW YOUR PTA

The PTA needs you—because there is work to be done for America's children and youth, work that will not wait. It doesn't take a child long to grow up, and growing up under undesirable conditions may mean tragedy for the child. By joining forces with other citizens who are members of the PTA you can help fashion a better world for all children.

You can establish good home-school relations so that the child's parents and teachers can do together for the child what neither can do alone.

You can share in determining the kind of school program that insures good teaching and effective learning. Parents want the schools to give their children (1) fundamental knowledge, (2) skill to find and hold a job and (3) faith in God, their country, and their fellow men, and themselves.

Stand by your own! While he is in elementary school you realized the importance of belonging to a PTA. Now that he is in high school he still needs encouragement, guidance, and understanding.

Requirements for VA Hospital Care Are Outlined

Eligibility requirements for hospitalization in Veterans Administration hospitals were outlined today.

VA first takes care of all eligible veterans who need hospitalization for service-connected diseases and disabilities.

The second group includes veterans discharged for disability incurred in line of duty or receiving compensation from VA for disability who need hospitalization for non-service-connected conditions. They may be admitted to VA hospitals when beds are available.

The third group includes war veterans without service-connected conditions who may, under the law, be admitted to VA hospitals if three conditions are met.

First, they must need medical care of a type or extent for which hospitalization is required.

Second, they must certify under oath they are unable to pay for the needed hospitalization elsewhere.

Third, a hospital must have a bed available.

Pensioned veterans are eligible for care in a VA hospital only if they were discharged under other than dishonorable conditions for disability incurred in line of duty, or are receiving VA compensation for service-connected disability. VA hospitals, like other hospitals, accept emergency patients as a life-saving measure and VA priorities for admission are waived in such cases.

Oct. 10 Deadline Set To Apply for Any-Deer Permit

Lansing—No change will be made this year in the machinery of application for any-deer season permits.

Hunters may apply for one of the 55,601 permits as soon as the application cards and special season information sheets are printed and distributed to the state's 4,200 license dealers.

Hunter may apply by:

- 1) Purchasing a regular season deer license from any license dealer, and
- 2) Filling out and mailing an application card before the Oct. 10 deadline. (The cards will be available from license dealers by late September.)

The cards should be mailed to "Department of Conservation, Lansing 26." Hunters should fill out the application cards carefully and clearly. Each year, some applicants must be disqualified because their cards are unreadable.

As last year, drawings will be held for areas where too many applications are received. Both successful and unsuccessful applicants will be notified as soon after the drawing as possible.

The drawing will take place on or about Oct. 20 and as usual will be witnessed by various outdoor writers and members of the general public.

Also as last year, groups of hunters cannot apply as a group. Several hunters may mail their cards in a single envelope, but each card will be treated individually.

Both residents and non-residents may apply for the permits. Non-resident hunters must, of course, purchase a non-resident deer license before they can make application.

Work with other men and women who care about what happens to children and youth in their homes, schools and communities.

This, then is a cordial invitation to you to join the PTA. The PTA needs you.

See you at the fair! Visit the PTA booth. There you will find the Chelsea School Calendar, organized by the PTA, and made possible through the sponsorship of several interested local merchants.

Watch for the PTA float in the Chelsea Fair Parade!

Feeding Tips, Buying Hints on Beef Day Program

Reader cattle prices are skyrocketing. Late July contracting prices on better western steers for fall delivery were running $30 to $33 per hundredweight.

With feed costs about the same as last year and with prices like these, it'll take some sharp figuring to come out with some profit next year.

Visitors to the 35th annual Cattle Feeders' Day at Michigan State University Sept. 11 will get some answers to questions on buying and will take a look at next year's slaughter prices. John Ferris, farm economist and livestock marketing outlook specialist at Michigan State, will give his best guesses as to what's ahead.

Walter F. Renk, Wisconsin beef feeder, will tell about his observations on feeding several thousand slaughter cattle at an evening program.

Other program highlights include a report on federal beef grading by Reese VanVranken, a discussion on antibiotics in feed lot rations by Dr. C. K. Whitehair, Michigan State veterinary pathologist; and a discussion on feeding soft corn to beef steers.

Panel members include Wilton Finley, Michigan State beef specialist; Dr. Lee Hileman, Shepherd; Kenneth Smith, Mulliken; Ray Witt, Blissfield; Norman Keller, Blissfield; and Richard VanVranken, Climax.

Visitors to Cattle Feeders' Day will also examine beef feeding research on the Experiment Station farms. Experiments include a study of varying amounts of grain on grass with yearling steers; delayed full feeding vs. limited feeding; tranquilizers in the feed lot; and a comparison of steers and heifers on delayed full feeding and limited feeding.

Tour of experimental cattle begins at 3 p.m. A roast beef dinner is scheduled for 5:30 p.m. in Shaw hall near Anthony hall to be followed by the evening program.

Western Michigan Stock Show Dates Moved

Nov. 10, 11 and 12 are the dates set for the West Michigan Livestock Show. The Civic auditorium in Grand Rapids is again the site of the show.

These dates are earlier than in previous years in order to avoid the holiday rush, say the show's directors. To allow for larger entries of steers, a new class allowing one exhibit to enter three steers has been established.

Genesee wheat, a soft white winter variety, is climbing in popularity among Michigan growers. In 1955, only about 16 per cent of the wheat acreage was planted to Genesee. Now, about half is in Genesee, report Michigan State University farm crops specialists.

Don't jump the "fly-free" date to plant your wheat. Michigan State University pest control authorities say you are asking for trouble from the Hessian fly when you do.

Washington Report

By Senator Charles E. Potter
The latest news from Washington of special interest to Michigan.

WITH CONGRESS adjourned and campaign bags packed for two months of criss-crossing Michigan, this will be my last newsletter for 1958.

Sincere thanks to the public-spirited editors who have carried this column for the past two years. "Senator Potter Reports" has appeared regularly in about 100 Michigan newspapers and several dailies. Press associations, columnists, radio and television commentators have used material from it freely.

I have endeavored to present a factual account of my Senate activities, news items of interest to all parts of the State, spiced with personal comment on domestic and foreign affairs. Regular use of the "Report" in so many media, I believe, a badge of success for the effort made to keep it as non-partisan and informative as possible.

WHAT DOES A MAN think of as he completes a term in the United States Senate and prepares to seek his fellow citizens' support for re-election?

He looks back over six years of committee meetings, debates, handshakes, crises, elation and disappointment. He tries to extract from that complex history the kernel of his usefulness to the men and women of his state.

Under the Potter amendment for school teachers. I sponsored expanded social security benefits which became law in the 84th Congress and supported the increase passed by the 85th Congress.

Certainly I am proud to have been an original sponsor of the St. Lawrence Seaway and connecting channels laws. I have great hopes also that my bill to permit new types of deep-water shipbuilding at Great Lakes ports, passed more than a year ago, will bring hefty new contracts and jobs into Michigan.

The cause of small business, always dear to my heart, received a big boost when President Eisenhower signed into law a measure I co-sponsored, making the Small Business Administration permanent and expanding lending operations.

Back before the opening of the 85th Congress, our long grind on what was to become the civil rights law began. As a sponsor, I look forward to the day discriminatory practices which have worked a hardship on many citizens and damaged America in the eyes of the world will be a thing of the past.

The United States has gained mightily in human and financial terms under the Vocational Rehabilitation Act of 1954 which I had a prime role in framing. Under this humane concept, thousands of handicapped, needy and dependent persons are assisted toward rehabilitation, new jobs, and an active role in the community.

Extension of unemployment compensation benefits, a measure on which I worked closely with the Secretary of Labor, is now in force. Thousands of Michigan workers, and other thousands across the United States, are receiving additional weekly checks to tide them over a period of serious layoffs.

I was able to obtain tax relief for school teachers. I sponsored expanded social security benefits which became law in the 84th Congress and supported the increase passed by the 85th Congress.

Certainly I am proud to have been an original sponsor of the St. Lawrence Seaway and connecting channels laws. I have great hopes also that my bill to permit new types of deep-water shipbuilding at Great Lakes ports, passed more

Under the Potter amendment for missiles, trucks, tanks, or other to the immigration laws, which lifted quotas on alien orphans, childless American couples can now adopt children orphaned by war or poverty.

In the autumn of 1956, during the bloody uprising in Hungary, I was instrumental in bringing two of the first plane-loads of refugees from the revolution to safety and security offered by the great-hearted Hungarian community of Michigan.

The "Mark America" program which I originated several years ago is now in force. It is increasing good will for the United States throughout the world by prominent markings showing origin-of-American exports and aid shipments.

Through membership on the Appropriations committee, I have been able to provide a real stimulus for Michigan's maritime economy by obtaining generous sums to develop the state's rivers and harbors. Also, the research funds which at last give promise of conquering the sea lamprey menace in the Great Lakes, were appropriated through my efforts on the committee.

Michigan's onion farmers will benefit from the Potter bill to outlaw speculation in onion futures. Michigan's wheat farmers will benefit from my victory over the Agriculture Department when it tried last year to downgrade Michigan wheat.

Our State's most serious problem is unemployment. To develop jobs, I have worked continuously to bring contracts into the state. I have personally obtained substantial awards for small businesses which have opened up hundreds of jobs. hardware on which I have not participated at some stage.

In years to come I am hopeful that the depressed areas bill, a long-range program which I sponsored and which now lies on the President's desk for signature, will ease Michigan's chronic unemployment situation. In the meantime, of course, more immediate measures are needed.

A sigh of relief went up from Lake States Senators at four o'clock on the morning of Sunday, Aug. 24. After an all-night battle, we killed the diversion proposal which would have poured off tons of precious Lake Michigan water into the Illinois Waterway. It was well worth the weeks of effort and loss of sleep.

Discharged servicemen will be able to collect unemployment benefits during their readjustment to civilian life, under my bill. Also, through Potter legislation, the Military Order of the Purple Heart and the Veterans of World War I will obtain Congressional charters.

Success, however, did not crown my efforts for repeal of the unfair automobile excise tax. Nor was I able to win through on establishment of a standing Senate Committee on Veterans Affairs. I pledge continued effort on both measures.

I should like to mention also several matters of long-range interest of the United States. I voted for reorganization of the Defense Department, for establishment of a space agency and an aviation safety agency for Alaskan statehood, for the science education program, all offering solutions to the great challenges of our time. I am confident that I voted in the public interest.

These are only a few of the highlights which passed through my mind as I sat on the porch in Cheboygan. I list them here, not in a spirit of boastfulness, but as a brief accounting of six years in which I have been privileged to serve a great state.

MYSTERY FARM NO. 19—Allen Broesamle evidently knows most of the farms in this area since he again was the first one to correctly identify Mystery Farm No. 19—the John Heselschwerdt property on Scio Church road. The Heselschwerdts have lived on the farm since they purchased it in 1925.

John Heselschwerdts Haved Lived on Scio Church Road Farm Since 1925

Mystery Farm No. 19, published Aug. 28 in the current series of farm photographs, is the John M. Heselschwerdt farm at 20235 Scio Church Road.

Mr. and Mrs. Heselschwerdt have lived on the farm since 1925 when they moved from the former Pritchard road farm which they had rented for a number of years. That farm is now a part of the Chrysler Proving Ground. Originally known as the Goodrich farm, the Heselschwerdt place was later owned by Chris Klingler. The late O. C. Burkhardt owned it for a short time and it was he who sold it to the present owners.

Young People Start Back to School

The end of the summer is near, some of the leaves are beginning to turn, and occasionally, even if it may be our imagination, it seems the rustling breeze in the trees is a reminder of cooler days.

To the young student, either in high school or college, the end of summer, whether it seems long or short, heralds another nine months of poring over books. It also brings to mind memories of football, parties, and other schoolday events.

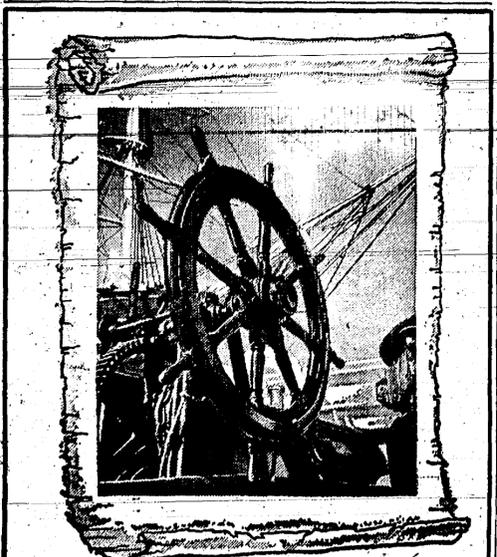

The young people of today are probably no worse than were their parents, although life has moved along at a faster pace and the college student of today is confronted with far more sophisticated surroundings than that which confronted his or her parents. The fundamental values of life remain the same, however, and although some of our young people are attempting to follow the Hollywood example, the great majority of them remain steadfast to the ideals and traditions which made this country great.

These ideals, in general we believe, include a serious effort to gain knowledge in school, a standard of honor which rules out a pattern of dishonesty in the classroom, a personal moral code in dealing with others, and religious convictions.

Of course, no one is perfect, and mistakes will be made by all students. Nor should going back to school entail necessarily depressing thoughts, because school life can be highly enjoyable as well as educational.

If you cannot refrain from drinking, why not start a saloon in your house? Be the only customer and you will not have to buy a license. Give your wife $55.00 to buy a case of whiskey. There are 240 "snorts" in a case. Buy all your drinks from your wife at 60 cents each and in 12 days when the case is gone, your wife will have $89.00 in the bank and $55.00 to start in business again. If you live ten years and continue to buy all your drinks from your wife and then die in your boots with the shakes, your widow will have $27,085.47 on deposit—enough to bury you, bring up your children, pay off the mortgage, marry a decent man and forget she ever knew you.—Contributed by a reader.

TOO HOT TO HANDLE—Latest word from Explorer IV from a position 1,200 miles over South America, indicates that things are tougher up there than was hitherto believed. The four radiation counters within and on the surface of the satellite report radiation of ten roentgens an hour or 167 times as heavy as indicated by earlier U. S. satellites. This means a space traveler would receive (according to X-ray safety standards) a week's permissible dosage in about two minutes, and with every increase of 60 miles in altitude, we are told, the intensity doubles. So perhaps the eager moon-travellers among our readers had better relax a while and see America first.

MICHIGAN MIRROR

By Elmer E. White, Secretary, Michigan Press Association

Investigators from every corner of the state government are taking another look at the result taxpayers are getting for the $62,000,000 spent on mental health.

The field, its importance to humanity and its financial needs are rarely completely understood. House members have a promising project ready for action next January when Rep. Harry J. Phillips (R-Port Huron) will ask for a "complete medical audit of the system."

Chairman of a special committee investigating the operation and policies of the mental health system, Phillips wants answers to these questions:

1. How many children in facilities for the retarded have lost contact with their families and can be moved to other hospitals in the state where space is more readily available?
2. How many patients of each type—mentally ill and psychotic, retarded and deficient—occupy which space in the hospitals and are the differences in treatment of each?
3. What are the different kinds of treatment, how much does each cost, what size staff is required, and what training and skills to treat each type is needed?
4. What facilities now are devoted to each type of illness?

Funds to bring in a team of qualified experts outside of state government to make the survey will be requested by Phillips. When it is completed, the committee hopes to have clearer answers.

The committee already believes that the state built 112 too many beds at Coldwater Home and Training School; that excess space exists for some types of mental illness treatment, and too little for other types of patients.

While some vacant beds are reported in hospitals for retarded children, probate judges are unable to commit and get treatment for mentally ill youngsters.

Probate Judge Arthur E. Moore, of Oakland county, has estimated the figure of emergency cases at 205 and asked for quick action in a special session of the legislature, if necessary.

Another committee, chaired by Rep. Ben Lohman, a Hamilton Republican, is studying mental patient commitment procedures with the idea of providing "civil rights for these unfortunates."

The committee suggests that a mental patient's civil rights be suspended rather than revoked, conditioned only on whether a court believes the patient has recovered.

Present law prohibits a former patient from exercising his civil rights during the three-year convalescent leave period. Suggestions have been heard to abolish or reduce the waiting period.

Another project of the committee is to study whether another form of sending patients to mental hospitals is possible to erase the stigma of formal commitment. The mental health commission, working on an administrative policy level to solve its own problems, will ask the 1959 legislature for planning money for a new mental hospital.

They said it would be constructed in western Michigan, possibly Grand Rapids.

It would be a 1,500-bed institution, 1,000 for children and the remaining 500 for adult mentally ill.

The next year, the commission plans to ask for planning money for a second such institution in eastern Michigan.

As an emergency measure, the commission is trying to make room in the existing state hospitals for the seriously mentally disturbed youths who find themselves in probate court and in trouble.

Prison officials and the mental health department are also working on a joint problem.

Corrections leaders are proposing a $25,000,000 medical center to care for and segregate drug addicts, alcoholics, the mentally ill in prisons and others.

The mental health department is proposing a separate unit of the same general character, probably near Detroit for the criminal insane—serving much the same purpose as the overcrowded Ionia State Hospital for the Criminal Insane now pursues.

Taking the entire picture, it is certain that the 1959 legislature will be asked to make major policy in the mental health field.

PUSHES OWN STOLEN CAR
 Madison, Wis.—When a car stalled at a crossing, Henry J. Klingner helped give it a push. Suddenly he took notice. He was pushing his own car, which had been stolen. Two youths who were riding in the car took notice, too, and made their escape down an alley.

Uncle Lew from Lima Says:

DEAR MISTER EDITOR: I would like to write my piece this week on the subject of jackasses and I hope you folks will keep in mind that there is two kinds of jackasses, the animal and the feller that acts like the animal. I'm confining my remarks this week to the animal on account of the fact that as a usual thing I write about the other kind.

I see by the papers where the Horse and Mule Association of America is predicting that in another five year there won't be no mules left in the country. The trouble, this piece says, goes back to the jackass, rather than the mule. There ain't enough jackasses in the country, it says, to keep the mule family moving. In other words, Mister Editor, the jackass situation is facing a national crisis.

I remember a few year back when Senator Wayne Morse of Oregon and Senator Sherman Cooper of Kentucky called a conference in Washington on this same situation. They had had a lot of jackass conferences in Washington but that was the first time they ever had the genuine article. I don't recall how the conference come out, but I see where things has got worse.

One thing that worries me about the situation is that the Democrats might have to change their party emblem from the mule to the Fordson tractor come the election 1960. It shore looks like the country is on the brink of disaster on account of the shortness of jackasses. I never thought I'd live to see it.

The fellers up at the country store Saturday night was arguing about a picture one of them saw in a magazine of a pretty girl setting down in some soft clay to get her contours for making a comfortable chair. About half the fellers said it wouldn't work on account of no two people had the same rear axle measurements and that a chair that would fit a good looking gal might be torture for a broad as the farmer used to spreading out in a tractor seat all year.

I argued that a feller could get his rear axle measurements coded like they type blood and then the furniture manufacturers could make chairs for all types. If you was a skinny old man with a narrow axle you could go in and call for a chair A-2, or A-3 depending on the situation. If you was of more comfortable proportions you could call for a chair D-2, or something of the order. They'll hit on something sooner or later, because up to now one of the greatest draw-backs to the human race is that in 2,000 year we ain't invented a comfortable chair.

Yours truly,
 Uncle Lew.

Rules Were Made To Be Obeyed

Both of my parents were school teachers, and early in life they impressed me with the feeling that rules were meant to be obeyed. In those days, obedience was one of the prime virtues.

But too much obedience paves the way for dictatorship, and that is not good.

I got a new slant on obedience a few years ago, when I read somewhere that a rule is not like a solid steel hoop, but like a rubber band, which can be stretched to include new situations. Much of our thinking is done in pictures, and the picture of a rubber band has helped me to be more flexible about rules.

Employees in large organizations can seldom be depended upon to stretch rules at the right time.

For example, our church sent some clothing for refugees in Korea, and following the best advice we had at the time, we sent it in care of an American chaplain stationed there. Only last month the church received word from this chaplain, who had been mustered out of the service six months before, that the clothing had been forwarded to his new home in Kansas. He remarked that it was a pity the postal service hadn't handed the bags to his successor in Korea, but he supposed such a decision was too big one for a postal clerk to make.

Or to take another example, a couple of years ago I mailed a check to a firm in Pittsburgh. Something must have distracted my attention while I was writing the check for I signed only my first name and left a blank space where the last name should have been. Well, our local bank fired the check back to Pittsburgh, and the firm sent it back to me, and I mailed a new check back to them, and it in turn had to be forwarded to my own bank for payment. If the teller had recognized my writing and cashed the check, he might have been breaking a rule, but he would have saved four postage stamps and several minutes of several people's time.

A postcard recently came to our post office with my address on it, but through a clerical error it bore someone else's name. The clerk could have returned it to the sender, but instead she had the initiative to turn it over. There was my name on the reverse, so she put it into my box. It may not have been according to the rules, but it was the sensible thing to do.

As George Papashvilly said, "Rules are for when brains run out."

The hardest job of all is that of finding a soft job.

ATOMIC AGE CARGO—This massive, 91-ton stainless steel reactor vessel (shown being transported) was lifted by crane from the barge and placed on a special railway car for the 670-mile trip to the Fermi plant site, seven miles north of Monroe. Clearance problems—trees and underpasses along the railway route—were acute. Though all clearance had previously been checked, a pilot car "mocked up" to reproduce the external dimensions of the cargo preceded the vessel in the train. This furnished the best practical insurance against unforeseeable problems threatening damage to the real cargo. The reactor vessel now is ready for installation in the reactor building where it will go into initial nuclear production in 1960. The steam turbine-generator section of the plant will be built, owned and operated by The Detroit Edison Co.

Alfalfa as Feed or Fertilizer To Be Discussion Topic at Crops Field Day

Is the last year's growth on an alfalfa field more valuable as fertilizer for crops following in the rotation or as feed for livestock?

Visitors to the Michigan State University Crops-Soils Field Day Friday, Sept. 5, at East Lansing will get some answers to that question.

Soil researchers are studying the fertilizer value of the last year's growth of alfalfa. They clip the first cutting, leave it on the field and then plow down the entire year's growth.

The researchers are comparing the fertilizer value of the crop with feeding value. They'll reveal their findings to Field Day guests.

This study is part of a general project on the management of organic matter in soils. Also being evaluated in the project are sewage sludge and stable manure as sources of organic matter.

Other soil management projects to be seen at Field Day include a demonstration of fertilizer placement for small grains, effects of plowing down fertilizer to depths of 18 inches, and a display of minimum tillage equipment being used in tillage experiments at Michigan State by soils researchers.

Visitors to Field Day will also see new forage crops, variety trials, alfalfa cutting management, and foreign crops which are being examined for possible use in forage breeding programs.

Tours to the plots start at 10 a.m. Soil scientists and farm crops researchers will be on hand to explain their research work and answer questions.

Gifted Kids Often Bother Parents

Ann Arbor—Discovery of a gifted child usually begins with a suspicion on the part of his parents that the child is exceptionally talented, says Warren A. Ketchum, associate professor of education at the University of Michigan.

However, he advises, "Before a parent takes a suspicion of his child's giftedness too seriously he needs to consider an important fact. The odds are against him. If the term means only a very select group of children whose intellectual ability is far above most of their age-mates, the odds are still smaller, only about two in 100 children.

What are some typical characteristics which may lead parents to suspect their child of being gifted?

"Most gifted children accomplish almost everything sooner and better than less able children of the same age. There are, of course, exceptions, he says.

"When compared with other children of the same age in a community the gifted child will be more apt and stronger will talk earlier and more, will be more curious about his surroundings, will be more apt to notice events and changes in the home, will need less rest, will be more independent of his parents.

"He will become interested in printed words and numbers earlier and will be more apt to want to go to school before the legal age for entrance. A suspicion of giftedness would be based on the presence of most or all of the characteristics over a period of several years."

A word of caution: Says Professor Ketchum, "The above list of imposing characteristics in a single child won't exactly make him an unmixed blessing.

"He will frequently irritate adults. His curiosity will make it difficult to keep him within sight and hearing. His physical size and strength will enable him to get lost more quickly and effectively than other children.

"He will ask questions about matters which are not thought to be suitable for the thoughts of little children. At an early age he will have real purposes about which he will be very persistent to the utter despair and consternation of his parents and others. He'll probably be labeled a problem child in the neighborhood.

"Parents may even find their suspicions of giftedness smothered by a desire for a more peaceful and uninterrupted existence!" he concludes.

SECRET SERVICE ACTS

A ring that allegedly passed thousands of dollars in fake bills in fourteen states has been broken up by the Secret Service.

Secret Service Chief U. E. Baughman announced recently that thirteen persons had been arrested and that more arrests were expected. He said the investigation began last November when bogus-money appeared in Indianapolis.

Baughman said about $28,000 in counterfeit $10, $20 and $50 bills have been passed and that Secret Service agents have seized about $185,000 in fake currency.

Accidents Claim Lives of 510 Michigan Children in 1957

Lansing—Almost half of all deaths among Michigan children of school age are caused by accidents, the Michigan Department of Health announced today.

"We hope that calling attention to this fact will spur parents and school teachers to attempt to do everything they can to help reduce this unnecessary loss of life," explained Dr. Goldie B. Corneliussen, director of maternal and child health for the state health department.

She said that in 1957, accidents claimed 510 lives of school age children in Michigan, or 47 per cent of the total deaths in that age group. Motor vehicles accounted for the major share of the accidental deaths, causing 294 fatalities, or 58 per cent of the total accidental deaths.

"If we are to keep children from being killed or injured in accidents, we must teach them to observe safety rules at all times," Dr. Corneliussen said.

"It is especially important for children to learn to follow safety rules during those activities which statistics show to be especially dangerous for them. These activities include going to or from school, playing at home or school, riding bicycles, and, if the youngsters are old enough, driving a motor scooter or a car."

Restoration of Old Biddle House On Mackinac Island Recalls Early Historical Background

Many, many moons ago—many more moons ago than even the oldest of us can remember—there lived a beautiful Indian princess. The daughter of a powerful reigning chief of the Chippewa nation, Angeliq, was exceedingly lovely with fair skin and hair as black as the black of the midnight sky. Talented and of queenly appearance, she lived in her father's house learning the white man's ways, absorbing their culture.

Her father, Chief White Cloud, a man of more than average ability, taught her many things. A man of letters, he had collaborated with a white man named Schoolcraft to write the first Indian dictionary based on phonetic sounds. Longfellow, a poet, heard the rhythmic metric sound of the words and wove them into his song, "Hiawatha." Chief White Cloud was wise to the white man's ways; none could cheat him. He could count—by the decimal system—up to the tens of thousands. His daughter was destined for great things.

But the great Manitou called the learned chief home to the Happy Hunting Ground before he could complete Angeliq's education. Her mother, finding favor in the eyes of a white fur trader, married him, and Angeliq slipped quietly into the life of her stepfather Bailey.

Angeliq's story would have ended there and been forgotten, but today, as she stands before the old Biddle House, she is the northern trail to Michigan's historic northern territory to view the latest wonder of the world—the Mackinac Bridge—will pass her home, the Old Biddle House, on Mackinac Island, reputedly the oldest residence in the northwest territory.

Everyone who has visited the island and walked about a bit or taken a carriage ride has seen the house—a very old building in advanced deterioration, its siding hanging on in like the scales of a long dead fish—its age showing. Like Angeliq, it too would have faded into history had not fate and the Michigan Society of Architects stepped in to save it and by so doing saved the story of the lovely Indian maiden.

This year the MSA, together with all others engaged in the building industry, is restoring the venerable old house to its original beauty. Andrian N. Langius, fellow of the American Institute of Architects and director of the Building Division of the State Administrative Department, reports the work is well under way. Carefully, the old structure is being taken down—piece by piece—to be reconstructed in its original form.

"We will use as many of the old timbers as we can," Langius says.

"We are fortunate that so many of the original logs are in good condition. Much of the interior siding and original glass is also available."

The house is of particular interest to the Architects because of its unusual construction. It is recorded by the Historic American Buildings Survey of 1935 as an outstanding example of an architectural system brought to Mackinac Island by early French traders from Canada. This system consisted of vertical timbers erected at the corners and windows and door jams. These were pinned to heavy sills and plates and contained lengths of logs on two sides. Horizontal logs three to five inches in diameter, having tapered ends, were dropped into the slots and piled on the sills, forming the exterior walls. The joints were chinked, although at some later time beaded and beveled siding was added. The inside walls were plastered.

In addition to its great age, it is beautifully proportioned. The interior is surprisingly refined. The door casing and other trim members are carefully detailed and executed. One of the features is a beautifully molded mantel—a strange refinement in the rough-hewn wilderness.

Tradition among Biddle's descendants places the original construction of the home in 1779. This isn't confirmed, but there seems to be little doubt or contradiction that it is the earliest residential structure of the Northwest Territory.

The house consisted originally of one floor, 55 by 20 feet, with a dormered loft. The ground floor had three rooms and a hall. Located on the market street side of the American Fur Company, now a museum, and the Beaumont Memorial—a beautiful tribute to one of the greatest figures in American medical history, Dr. William Beaumont, first physician entering the Michigan State Medical Society.

Here then stands Angeliq's house—an authentic glimpse into the past. To the imaginative, it is more than a glimpse—it is the story of the Michigan's historic past—Angeliq's story.

For it was to this fairy-like island of Michilimackinac that Edward Biddle, son of a prosperous and proud Philadelphia family, came in 1808. Situated in the Straits of Michigan, the island was the scene of those who sought romance and fortune. Coveted prize of three nations, it had been ruled by France, England and the United States. It was the great mart of trade long before Chicago, St. Paul and Milwaukee entered into their first beginnings and it vied as a gay metropolis with its contemporaries, Detroit and St. Louis.

Little is known of Edward Biddle prior to the time he came to the island. Although historical records vary according to a chart of the Biddle family he was the son of John Biddle, brother of Nicholas Biddle, of Philadelphia banking fame. John Biddle was a loyalist and was banished from the United States during the American Revolution.

A young easterner was attracted to the beautiful Indian girl and soon became very attached to her, an affection she returned warmly. Angeliq spoke only French and Indian. Edward did not understand her language; neither did she understand him. But the language of love is universal and in 1810 Edward and his beautiful bride were married by a notary public.

"Would that my pen might do justice to this wedding," a writer of the times said. "It was most picturesque, yet no one can carefully understand its attractiveness and novelty without knowing the beauty of the bride. The bride wore a traditional Indian costume—a dress made of the finest black and blue broadcloth—beautifully ornamented with silk and moosehair work. It was a costume, the like of which she wore all her life. Angeliq, in spite of being the mistress of one of the socially prominent homes in the area, always remained true to her Indian heritage. It is averred by some that because of the fairness of her skin, that she could not have been wholly of Indian blood, but there is no claim on the part of the family that she was not.

The marriage was a happy one. Edward prospered as a business man of the more prominent of the early fur traders. He became a partner in the firm of Biddle and Drew and took an active part in the affairs of his country. He received special distinction by appointment by Lewis Cass, Governor of the Michigan Territory, as Sheriff of Mackinac County, loosely including the area westward to the plains from Lake Superior. He served two terms as sheriff—a position of much power and influence—and later became mayor of the island.

Edward's death was a tragedy. He was known as Biddle's Field. His estate followed him in death for he is buried in the Post cemetery, an honor seldom accorded a civilian.

Mrs. Biddle, the lovely Indian princess, ran his household with unusual dignity and poise. With quiet gentleness she kept the rooms neat and pleasant. Her flower garden was the most beautiful of the community where beautiful flowers were accepted as part of the wilderness heritage. She wore her Indian garb—always.

As they prospered, Edward added to his house. He bought the adjacent Market street lot for the addition of a bedroom. Some records say that he paid $185.00 for the addition of a bedroom. Some records say that he paid $150.00 for this land—others report that $180.00 was the price of the original house. Tradition says that the Lieutenant still returns on moonlight nights to put a rose on her grave—as he is reported to have done in real life.

But this is Angeliq's story—not Sophie's. For fifty years she maintained her island home with her husband. In the old house, which stood almost into the past where it would have remained had it not been for the current interest of the Architects and other members of the building industry to make it a major historical shrine in America.

It is the hope of the MSA that the restoration of the Biddle House will give impetus to an eventual restoration of the entire Market Street area as a historic shrine by the State or other agency. Present plans are that the entire area may be preserved like the French Quarters of New Orleans and Williamsburg. It is well worth preserving as it is Michigan's last real heritage.

The State Medical Society's Beaumont Memorial was an important step in the overall restoration. When finished, the Biddle House will add another link in the story of Old Market Street—a living reminder of the days when Michilimackinac was the main street of the fur trade of the world; a memorial to the men and women of the island and the part they played in its destiny.

Manitou looking down on the thousands who come to see the man-made bridge across his waters will smile as the sentimental stop to watch the workmen rebuild a bit on one side—like a flower drooping on its stem." Edward sent his beautiful daughter out from the island to be educated. The most accepted story relates that she went to Philadelphia to the home of the Nicholas Biddles where she was popular and part of the social whirl. It was here, "he said, that she met the love of her life, a dashing Lieutenant in the United States Artillery. The eastern Biddles, however, disapproving of their kin's relationship to an Indian, had it so whispered about and the love-mittens but weak Lieutenant, rather than defy society, deserted his love. Heart-broken, the story continues, Sophie returned to her island home and committed suicide. Other stories relate that she died there of heartbreak, a story which more believable knowing her Indian heritage. Indians rarely take their own lives, preferring to bear in silence their loves, hates and griefs.

Still another story says that Sophie was sent to the home of the Detroit Biddles where she was the reigning belle of the time and the Lieutenant, to his pleading that she marry him, her answer always was, "Wait until you see my mother." The Lieutenant thereupon took a trip up to the island and upon seeing Angeliq in her Indian garb "shrieked and fled."

In any event, Sophie never married and the old cemetery holds her lovely remains. Tradition says that the Lieutenant still returns on moonlight nights to put a rose on her grave—as he is reported to have done in real life. But this is Angeliq's story—not Sophie's. For fifty years she maintained her island home with her husband. In the old house, which stood almost into the past where it would have remained had it not been for the current interest of the Architects and other members of the building industry to make it a major historical shrine in America.

Other members of the committee are Marvin J. Brokaw, Paul R. Marshall, John J. McGarrigle, Talmadge Rogers, Arthur Allen, Clair W. Ditchy, Willard E. Frasco, Harry W. Gleinsten, Clarke E. Harris, Louis Kingcott, and Walter G. Sandrock.

The restoration will cost an estimated $65,000, Wigen said. Each branch of the building industry will contribute an amount proportionate to the work it would normally put into a house. Wigen said. For instance, the roofers will contribute about two percent of the cost. Also contributing to the project are electricians, plumbers, lumber firms, heating, masonry and cement companies, etc.

And so, Angeliq will have her house again. This time laughing vacationers will stop in her kitchen instead of weary voyagers home from their fur trapping. The visitors will come by streamlined cars, trains and planes instead of skis or in Indian canoes; down the streams and rivers. Wide, modern roads have replaced the green, forest trails. The Mackinac Bridge hangs suspended across the waters, but the imaginative will see the old house as it was in the days when its young mistress loved it well. They will relive her Angeliq's house. He will give it his blessing—once he has withheld from other houses.

It is storied that when plans to restore the Astor House and one other of the wealthy fur traders' buildings on the island were made, Manitou frowned. He looked with disfavor on enshrining the abode of one considered by many as a traitor—a robber and no true friend of the Indian.

"They will never make a shrine of these buildings," they said, when informed that the Mackinac Island Park Commission was to start work on the buildings.

"They will never make a shrine of these buildings," they said as work progressed.

and they never did. The Astor House, partially restored, mysteriously collapsed, damaged beyond repair. The other building burned to the ground—fired, he said, by a blazing arrow from the heavens—Manitou had spoken—they never made a shrine to one who betrayed his people.

romance, grieve with her over Sophie and listen to the whispers in the lilacs.

An old room reads: "That old, old house on Astor street. Has held its meed of joy and care; The goodly garden now is gone. And weeds are everywhere. But thanks to the Michigan Architects and others in the industry, the weeds will be replaced by Angeliq's wondrous garden and who knows, perhaps again the 'old, old house' will hold its meed of joy and care."

PART II

Part of the Louvre was burned during the Commune riots of 1871. But before the end of the century it was again rebuilt and established as a national museum.

Despite its variations in architecture and the admittedly poor workmanship of some colonnades and arches, the Palace of the Louvre, seen today from the banks of the Seine or from across the Tuileries, is one of the most impressive monuments of Paris.

Work on modernizing the interior has been in progress since 1900. Displays and artistic lighting effects of statuary and paintings have been reduced to an exciting scene.

Winged Victory, for instance, when illuminated at night, presents an entirely different aspect than it does in the daylight. The lighting conditions 50 years ago were seen under less favorable conditions.

Today's Louvre contains approximately 200,000 items. It can be visited from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m. daily except Tuesday (when all Paris museums and monuments are closed) for an admission fee of 50 francs (12 cents), plus an extra 50 francs for the right to take photos.

A special request is necessary for permission to take photos with tripod or flash. The request may be made of the Director of the Museum of France, which has a desk near the main entrance of the Louvre.

Best advice for visitors who want to concentrate on various sections, or who are genuinely interested in its collections, is to make several visits over an extended period.

The six divisions of the museum are grouped as follows: Greek and Roman antiquities, Egyptian antiquities, oriental antiquities, sculptures, works of art and paintings.

Items in each division are categorized on the ground floor and on the second and third stories of the sprawling palace.

Besides the Venus de Milo and Winged Victory, there are other marvels from Greece and Rome that even the casual visitor ought to see, such as the Parthenon room, or displays of Greek sculpture dating from the 6th Century B. C. or the collection of early Christian art.

Everyone is fascinated by the precious jewels from this period that are on display.

Traces of civilization in 3,300 B. C. appear in the Egyptian section. The Mastaba funeral chapel has relics of the Pyramid era. The oriental collection is regarded as the richest of its kind in the world. Its ceramics and statues represent early times in Iraq, Lebanon and Syria. Islamic art is in the form of ivory figures, jewels, and carved wood.

Painting exhibits are divided into French, Spanish, Italian, Flemish, German, Dutch and European mannerist and baroque schools.

Here are displayed, along with the Mona Lisa, works by Van Dyck, Goya and David. Several Rembrandt masterpieces are on display in the Holland room.

An hour or two in the Louvre leaves one with the feeling that its collections are almost over-preserved. After a day, you will appreciate the vast expanse of its treasures. But only as an amateur will you really become acquainted with this mighty "storehouse of the world."

Evidence of Michigan's native elk herd of long ago is studied by Olo Felling (left), Conservation Department district game supervisor at Gaylord, and Dr. S. C. Whitlock, assistant chief of the Department's game division. Tests show the antlers, recovered a few years ago in Ogemaw county, are 6,000-8,000 years old. Native elk disappeared from the state about 1870, but releases have re-established the species in several northern counties.

The NATIONAL OUTLOOK

BY RALPH ROBEY

★ Cost of Living Still Rises

Termination of the upswing in the cost of living is still in the future. From mid-June to mid-July the consumers price index, nearest and best measure we have of the cost of living, advanced to another new high.

The July figure for this index was only two tenths of a point above that for June but that was double the increase shown in June over May. At 128.9, it means that these prices on the average are almost 25 percent higher than they were in 1917-18. The increase during the past twelve months has been 2.6 percent.

It is customary for the index to rise between June and July. This time however, the increase was caused primarily by items which do not have such a seasonal variation. A rise in gasoline and used car prices and in transit fares, all of which are included under transportation, lifted the index more than any other factor. None of these normally advance at this time of year.

The next most important element in the up-swing was medical care. Compared with a year ago there is an advance of 4.5 percent, the largest rise in any of the eight broad sub-divisions of the index. Next came personal care, then food, both showing a slight increase. Apparel and miscellaneous goods and services were unchanged. Housing, which includes furnishings, and reading and recreation both declined by a small fraction.

As a result of this increase in the index it is estimated that about one-half million workers will get an upward adjustment in wages. Amount of the raise will range from one to four cents an hour, the difference being determined by whether the escalator clause in their contracts provides for quarterly or semi-annual adjustments for changes in the consumers price index.

In spite of the continued rise of this index, it has advanced in all but a couple of months over the past two years. Ewan Clague, the exceptionally capable Commissioner of Labor Statistics, still believes we are heading into a period of stability. His optimism is based in large measure upon the conviction that food prices will decline enough in coming months to offset any upward trend in other items. In fact, except for the prices of various meats, oranges and orange juice, which still are reflecting the crop-killing frosts of last winter, a decline in the food component is already under way. With larger marketings in the weeks ahead it is expected.

THE DRIVER'S SEAT

They call it the Midvale Tree, it's a magnificent oak and it stands at the northwest corner of the town's most important intersection—the intersection where Midvale avenue crosses a major highway.

The tree is much older than the town itself. Its spreading branches and the pool of shade they offer on a hot summer day had made many friends long before the first trading post was established near its huge trunk.

Inevitably, the Midvale Tree reminds you of other great trees whose names commemorate a great event or treasured legend. There is the Charter Oak of Hartford, Conn., in which tradition has it, the colonists hid their charter rather than surrender it to the British governor. And there are the Packenham Oaks, beneath whose branches died the general who led a frontal attack against Andrew Jackson's sharpshooters at New Orleans.

The Midvale Tree now stands almost alone in the town as a majestic reminder of a past as distant as the ice age is from the traffic that flashes by beneath its branches. Yet, though the tree seems to be a relic of the past, its kinship with the present is precisely defined in terms no town resident is likely to forget.

Unlike its great brothers that keep fresh in man's mind some act of dedication or devotion the Midvale Tree marks no deed of heroism, love or friendship. It now bears a tablet marking the scene of a meaningless death of four youths who sacrificed to senselessness the promise of their future.

In blind impetuosity the boys died. The impetuosity was that of youth; the blindness stems from the tree. Its great branches that had for generations cut off the sun to offer a pool of shade had cut off the driver's vision. He couldn't see the truck moving up the highway.

The blindness belongs to the townspeople, too. The tablet may stand as a tribute to nonsense but it's a futile reminder since the branches still remain to continue their treachery at the intersection.

By opening their eyes the townspeople might realize that there are many ways to make roads safe right now without spending millions. Immediate safety can be obtained at thousands of dangerous intersections by removing the trees or their obscuring branches. Trees, beautiful as they may be, can be made safe as well as beautiful if thoughtful people will only remove objectionable, obscuring parts of them.

Duane Downers Now at Home Following Marriage at Congregational Church

With the Rev. Philip Rusten officiating, Laura Liptow of Dexter, and Duane Downer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Darwin Downer, were married Saturday evening, Aug. 23, at the Congregational church. Approximately 150 guests were present for the ceremony and the reception which followed in the church parlors.

The bride, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Liptow of Dexter, wore for her wedding a floor-length gown of white Chantilly lace over slipper satin, styled with a sabrina neckline. Her finger-ring-length veil was held in place with a crown of seed pearls and iridescent sequins. She carried a white fan with an arrangement of pink roses and stephanotis.

Mrs. Margaret Ball, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. She wore an orchid princess-style gown with matching picture hat and had a bouquet of white mums centered with yellow mums.

Fashion Now
If you are planning a trip you'll love to have several of these little hats. They require no room to pack and you will be able to carry several without any remarks from the husband.
The extreme silhouettes, which are often not too becoming to adults, look wonderful on children. The chemise helps to hide a pot tummy, something all little girls have in common. On mother, it often hides a slim waist and only serves to call attention to her hips—which may be a little large.
The trapeze is made to order for young children. In fact, they have been wearing something very similar to this for many years.
Panties to match are coming back. The only wonder is that they ever went out of children's fashions.
Youngsters take clothes seriously. Any bright first or second grader can tell you exactly the kind of dress she wants for school or some special event.
Suits for the young set have been popular for the last couple of years, and it seems a suit has become as important an item with little girls as with big girls.
Costume jewelry designers tell us that the sale of children's trinkets is higher than ever before. Good jewelry that grows with the child is another popular item.
In the past a string of pearls to grow was about the only type of this jewelry available. Now we have gold beads and even diamond jewelry in this class.

Planned Color Areas Give Room Feeling of Unity

Carefully planned areas of color can help give a feeling of unity to a room, points out a Grand extension home furnishings specialist at Michigan State University. Unity in a room is the feeling that everything goes together—a room with real unity is not "busy" or cluttered looking.

Windows, doors, individual pieces of furniture and accessories group up to suggest and make for a "busy" or confused look. You need to pull these things together. Using one color for most of the large areas in the room is the quickest and most effective way to gain this unity, continues Miss Graf.

When planning a color scheme in a room, plan for large areas first. These include the floor, walls, large pieces of furniture and draperies.

Choose a color that the family likes and that goes well with colors in adjoining rooms. Use this color on two-thirds or more of the room area—concentrate on large unbroken color areas. Look at the size and layout of the room; your eye will tell you what areas make up two thirds or more. If you want a small room to look larger, you'll probably want more than two-thirds of the room the same color.

Don't have fear of monotony when you use one color. Textures and values can be varied. In a kitchen you might use a green spatter pattern on the floor, a lighter green on the walls and a still lighter green for the cabinets.

An area of patterned wallpaper, printed fabric draperies or a patterned floor may be what you'd like to add to interest. Accessories of colorful enamel or pottery, copper, stainless steel, brass, and glassware can be used to lend variety, too.

When you're making your plan, plan in the proportion in which the colors will be used. If light green is to be used on the walls, usually the largest area in the room, have a medium-sized swatch for the lighter green of the cabinets and a proportionate sample of the floor covering. How colors will look in the room depends on the proportions used.

It's a good idea to see a large sample of a color that is planned for a wall or other large surface. The more of a color that is used the stronger it becomes. What looks fine on a small chip sample may be overwhelming when you get it on four walls, concludes Miss Graf.

Family Reunion Held at Leo Merkel Home

A family reunion dinner was held Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Merkel with 27 persons present. Those who attended are Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Taylor and family and Mr. and Mrs. Harold E. McCarty and family, of Detroit, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Merkel and family, of Lansing, and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Young and family, of Clinton.

New Baby May Be Resented as Rival By Pre-Schoolers

When you walk in the door with a new baby, it may seem like a grand entrance to you, but it can be pretty miserable for your pre-schooler. Mrs. Lennah Backus, child development specialist at Michigan State University, says that it will be some time before your child gets used to his new brother or sister.

It is perfectly natural for your child to be jealous of the baby. Up to now, he has been the center of attention; all your love has been directed toward him. Now he must share both your love and attention—and it's very hard for young children to share anything!

There's one problem you may run up against—your child hurting the baby. He may not mean to hurt him—it may just be an over-enthusiastic display of affection. That's all right, but you know that this is one way to get a "rise" out of someone. He may be craving the attention which you have neglected to give him.

Of course, the child sees the baby as a rival, but you can help him turn his rivalry into his helpfulness. Show him how he can help take care of the baby and show appreciation for the things he does. He will probably want to hold the baby—let him! He can sit on the floor on a rug or blanket, in a large stuffed chair, or in the middle of a bed, and with your supervision the baby will be safe.

Don't overdo you "act like a grown-up" approach. If you term everything for which the temporarily weans (like a bottle) "babyish" and everything that he doesn't want to do "grown-up," he will decide that he definitely wants to be a baby! Humor him when he seems to especially want to be babied. If you don't deny him these experiences, he will soon find that they aren't as much fun as he thought they would be.

The bill now goes to the White House.

The Senate also passed and sent to the White House a bill authorizing contracts for the operation of postal stations for a three-year period instead of the present two-year period. The bill is expected to save $80,000 a year in administrative costs.

The control of pests and blights in your garden is simply a matter of knowing the "when and what" to use to keep your garden healthy all year long.

The choice of materials can be easy, provided you know what will be used. Power-operated garden sprayers and the still-useful compressed air sprayers can handle both emulsifiable concentrates and wettable powders. The emulsifiable concentrates are preferable since they leave no visible residue. With thorough stirring they form stable mixtures that do not clog nozzles.

There is no good general-purpose fungicide in liquid form. Only wettable powders are available. With these you must make a thin paste of the material and filter it through a fine screen or a few layers of cheesecloth when adding it to the rest of the spray mixture. Since these wettable powders form suspensions that tend to settle out, frequent stirring or shaking of the sprayer contents is necessary unless an agitator is present.

Personalized Autumn Color Tour Service Offered by Michigan

Guess-work is planning Michigan fall color tours is a thing of the past.

The Michigan Tourist Council announced this week that for the fourth successive year it will offer prospective fall travelers a personalized service to let them know, by individually addressed cards, when the state's autumn color is at its best.

The Council's color information plan is the only one of its kind in the nation, according to executive secretary Robert J. Furlong. "It alerts travelers to the first showing of color in Michigan, and later announces the peak of the autumn display as it marches across the upper and into the lower peninsula," he said.

"A card or letter to the Tourist Council, Lansing 26, is all that's necessary to keep posted on Michigan's fall color season."

Bald Eagles Often Build 2-Ton Nests

Ann Arbor—Michigan has produced the largest eagle nest ever found, says George Hunt, assistant professor of wildlife management at the University of Michigan.

However, the handsome and magnificent bird, which was first seen in Michigan in 1925, is not as common as it once was.

The bird nests near the water because eagle is a water bird. Most of the nesting takes place in the lower peninsula.
