RICHARD HAIST, 14-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Erwin Haist, is carrying on the Haist family tradition as breeders of prize-winning registered sheep. This two-year-old Corriedale ewe won the reserve champion award at the State 4-H Show in East Lansing last week, and is being exhibited at the Michigan State Fair this week. The ewe and a ram exhibited by Richard received champion awards in the Corriedale division at the State 4-H Show; a fleece he exhibited was judged reserve champion; and topping it all, Richard, himself, won first place in the sheep showmanship contest and first place in livestock judging at the State 4-H Show. Richard's father and his grandfather, George Haist, have raised and exhibited prize-winning sheep for many years. Richard is also exhibiting some fine beef cattle at the Chelsea Community Fair this week.

Chelsea Co-Op Nursery Opens School Year Friday

The palke dot door of the Chelsea Co-operative Nursery School on Chelsea-Dexter Rd. will swing wide Friday morning with "Miss Jane" waiting to greet the eagerly anticipating three- and four-year-olds.

The nursery school is equipped to encourage children to develop through democratic and constructive play situations. Mothers cooperate in providing regular supervised play for their pre-school children, planned and carried out with professional help. This cooperative experience aids in education, growth and better adjustment of not only the children but also the parents. The tuition is low and the mothers help by assisting the teacher, exchanging rides and baby-sitting.

Mrs. Raymond Schaefer is the teacher.

Commenting on the local preschool program, Mrs. Lucille Kelly, kindergarten teacher at South school said: "Nursery school children that enter kindergarten are well adjusted, able to work with others, and have a longer span of attention."

Mrs. John Cannell, kindergarten teacher at the North school remarked that: "The nursery school is a very good orientation for kindergarten. Also, the parents have a better understanding of schoolroom problems."

Those youngsters looking forward to another exciting year are Kristen Boehler, Donny Conklin, James Potts, Bonnie Powers, Nancy and Beth Sanborn, Russell Soule, Cheryl Trinkie, Gregg Way and Johnny Winans.

Newcomers to the group this year will be: Kevin Bradbury, Kathy Crouch, Jeffery Daniels, Mark Jacobs, Tim Lancaster, and Debby Shadoun.

MYSTERY FARM NO. 67—Who owns the farm shown in the above photo as "Mystery Farm No. 67" in the series published each week for identification by our readers? If you recognize it call us at once at GR 5-3531. A free, mounted photo awaits the owner if he will call at The Standard office by Saturday.

MYSTERY FARM NO. 66, originally published in the Sept. 3 issue of The Standard, was identified as the Douglas Kennedy place located on Chelsea-Manchester road. First to call in the correct identification was Mrs. Floyd Brand.

Among those who identified it as the Kennedy place are Mrs. Floyd Brand, Julius Bines, David Pastor, Mrs. Robert Bruestle, Walter Trinkle, Mrs. Ben Breitenwischer, Donald Knight, Dan Foytik, Joan Wahl, Mrs. Douglas Kennedy, Michael Frey and Sharon Jacob.

Kennedy has lived on the 270-acre farm since he and his father, Fred Kennedy, purchased the place 22 years ago. Douglas is now the sole owner and his parents live in a new house they built on the farm about five years ago.

The Kennedy farm has changed ownership only twice since it was taken up from the U. S. Government in 1834 by Charles Kingsley, Kingsley was the original owner of several farms in the area.

In 1837 George S. Peckins became the owner, and the farm remained in the Peckins family until the Kennedys bought the place. Last of the Peckins family to own the place was Nathan Peckins, who never married. He lived in the back part of the house and had tenants work the farm and live in the front part. He died in the early 1930's and the Kennedys bought the farm from his estate.

The house is the original one built on the farm. Part of the fine old home was constructed in 1836 and the remainder of the 11-room place was added in 1874. Thick foundation walls of native stone together with the heavy timbers used for the framework provided the sturdy construction which has withstood the winds and weather of almost a century and a quarter.

Two fireplaces, one in the original rooms and the other in the living room added in 1874, are built of handmade bricks. Barns and other buildings on the place are also the original ones built and all are in well-kept condition.

Modern equipment has been added in the barns and the inside of the house has a modern kitchen and bathroom.

Six years ago Douglas Kennedy was married to Irene Wahl Hartman and their family now includes a daughter, Nancy, who starts school at Manchester this year. Richard and Karen, at home, and James Hartman, 13 years old, Mrs. Kennedy's son by a previous marriage. He also attend school at Manchester.

Members of the family are active in church work at the Evangelical United Brethren church at Rowe's Corners. They are also members of the Short Hills Farm Bureau.

Kennedy does general farming and customarily keeps approximately 400 sheep as well as 16 to 18 head of dairy cattle. He also has a number of feeder steers.

What are the prospects of an early settlement of the strike? At the moment they appear bleak. Payroll losses are running about $70 million a week, but there has been no move on the part of the workers to return to their jobs. As a matter of fact it is almost impossible for such a move to develop. The union is all-powerful and it would necessitate a rapidation of the leaders to go back to work. That is a serious step and conditions will have to get much worse before it is even a possibility.

The struck industry companies are losing money, because they have to maintain their plants even while they are not operating. But there is no evidence that the companies are on the verge of capitulating to the demands of the union. Presumably their offer of any increase in wages which does not force up the cost of production still stands, but the unions will have none of this offer because it means that steel management must be given the right to eliminate certain featherbedding practices.

Government's Role
Is there anything the Government can do? At the moment the answer is "No." The only power the government has, apart from providing a federal mediator, which it did weeks ago, is to invoke the Taft-Hartley Act. Before it can invoke that there must be a declaration of emergency—a declaration that the public welfare is being adversely affected. There is no basis yet for such a declaration. Further, the Administration is determined to keep out of this controversy until it becomes certain that collective bargaining will not, or can not, work. Should it be necessary for the Taft-Hartley Act to be invoked, all it would mean is that the workers would have to return to their jobs for 80 days while a fact-finding commission studied the problem. This commission is not authorized to make recommendations, and the facts are already pretty well known.

August Traffic Death Toll Drops From 1958 Total
Traditionally a month of heavy tourist and vacation travel accompanied by a high death toll, August turned the tables and became the first month this summer in which fewer persons were killed in traffic accidents than in the corresponding month last year.

On the basis of provisional figures compiled by the State Police, August fatalities totalled 111 compared with 134 in the same month a year ago—a decrease of 23, or 17 per cent.

Although delayed death will raise the total somewhat the toll was the lowest for an August since 1945—a war year with reduced travel, when 88 died.

With the August decrease, along with reductions in January, February and March, the net increase in deaths for the eight months period is now down to four per cent, or a total of 858 deaths as against 824 for the same period in 1958, a gain of 34.

The nation's highway death toll has increased five per cent in the first seven months of this year. Michigan reduced fatalities the first quarter, but the toll thereafter mounted each month until August.

Though no official statistics are available yet on mileage traveled last month, rural highway volume counts indicate it probably will be the highest for any month of the year, which makes the improved driving record even more impressive.

Is there anything the Government can do? At the moment the answer is "No." The only power the government has, apart from providing a federal mediator, which it did weeks ago, is to invoke the Taft-Hartley Act. Before it can invoke that there must be a declaration of emergency—a declaration that the public welfare is being adversely affected. There is no basis yet for such a declaration. Further, the Administration is determined to keep out of this controversy until it becomes certain that collective bargaining will not, or can not, work. Should it be necessary for the Taft-Hartley Act to be invoked, all it would mean is that the workers would have to return to their jobs for 80 days while a fact-finding commission studied the problem. This commission is not authorized to make recommendations, and the facts are already pretty well known.

The Steel Strike Becomes Serious

It is trite to say that the steel strike is beginning to become serious. For the 50,000 who walked out on July 14 it was serious on that first day, and for the approximately 125,000 to 150,000 workers who have been laid off since then it has been serious from the date they were out of jobs. But there is another sense in which the strike is beginning to bite. This is the effect it is about to have on the economy as a whole. For the first half of this year steel production was artificially stimulated by feverish buying in anticipation of the strike. No one knows exactly how much inventory was accumulated, but it was large—probably the greatest volume ever held by steel users and warehouses. It was generally estimated that there was enough inventory to last for up to eight weeks before other industries would be hurt. We are now in the seventh week of the strike and, except for relatively few items, there still are no serious shortages. But this situation cannot last much longer.

Half-Year Truck Plates Of Maroon, Yellow Result in Paint Savings

Since May 15, when truck and trailer half-year plates went on sale, 22,857 of these maroon and yellow commercial plates have been sold. Half-year truck plates are valid until Nov. 16. According to Secretary of State, James M. Hare, income from sales of half-year plates has reached $1,872,854.08.

Back-to-School Move Means Extra Caution for Drivers

With more than a million and a half children entering Michigan schools for the fall term, nearly 180,000 of them going for the first time, State Police are reminding motorists to again be vigilant to protect them in the areas where they will be. They also are asked to refresh their memories on the school bus law which became effective last September and requires them to stop from both directions when a school bus stops to receive or discharge passengers. Large flashing lights on the front and back of the bus signal when it is preparing to stop or is stopped for such purpose. The youngsters themselves are cautioned that there are now more cars and more motor scooters than ever before, which means they must be extra alert to get to school and back home safely.

Michigan Regular Trout Season Closes Sept. 13

Lansing—Fishermen are reminded that Sept. 13 is the final day of Michigan's 1959 regular trout season. This date also marks an end to all fishing in designated trout lakes and most trout streams. Some trout streams or portions of these streams will remain open to fishing for other species after the regular trout season closes. Brook trout will remain on the legal catch list through Oct. 15 in Swansy and Alport lakes of Marquette county. This experimental regulation is part of a Conservation Department research project. Rainbow trout may also be taken during an extended fall season—Sept. 14 to Nov. 30—in lakes and streams designated by the Department. A listing of lakes and streams open to hook and line fishing during this season may be obtained from the Department's fish division, Lansing 20, or any of the Department's district field headquarters.

MAYBE you turn your mattress so much you keep it spinning like a top. But you don't need to, if it's a Beautyrest.
 Beautyrest has that independent spring action that keeps it in shape. Just turn it your usual way the first few months until the felt padding has "leveled." Then turn it only 4 or 5 times a year. That's all.
 Once you get your Beautyrest, you might miss all the exercise you had before with your old mattress. Try deep knee bends. As for me, I hate exercise.

Parents Must Help Teach Traffic Safety to Youngsters Starting School

With schools opening all over the country, it is necessary that parents teach their children habits of traffic safety. That is true in both urban and rural areas where young children have to use and cross busy streets and highways on their way to and from school.

Although schools and police departments have consolidated their efforts to protect and teach safety education to these children, their parents should not depend entirely on educators and police. Accident prevention bureaus have laid down three basic rules for parents to teach their children. We think they are good enough to bear repeating.

- (1) Parents need to set a good example and to insist on obedience to crossing guards and traffic signals.
- (2) Children who walk to school should go by the safest route and be sent early enough so there is no need for them to hurry. If they must walk on a highway, they should walk on the left side and face oncoming traffic.
- (3) Before children are permitted to ride bicycles in the street, they should be taught the rules of the road. The bicycle should be kept in safe condition and carry no extra passengers. Bicycles should be ridden in single file without weaving. Riders should keep both feet on the pedals and give hand signals when indicated.

And, needless to say, motorists should realize that children, by nature, are impulsive and unpredictable. Therefore, it is important for drivers of motor vehicles to be particularly watchful and careful in the vicinity of schools and during the hours when school children may be on the streets. They should keep a safe distance behind the car ahead and pass only when it is safe to do so.

Surely, everyone—traffic officers, police, teachers, parents, motorists, and the children themselves, should cooperate to avoid the possibilities of tragedies due to motor vehicle accidents.

MICHIGAN MIRROR

By Elmer E. White, Secretary, Michigan Press Association

Only two of 16 bills labeled "urgently needed" by Gov. G. Mennen Williams cleared the legislature this year.

The governor early in June sent a special message to the legislature urging action on bills dealing with employment, business, education, and highway and industrial safety.

Thirteen of the measures died in committee; another—the controversial "K-12" bill to force school consolidation—passed the House but was shelved in the Senate Education Committee.

One of the bills was the proposal to create a state Seal of Quality for agricultural products. Williams has been advocating this for 11 years.

Success came to a widely-backed motorboat safety bill providing for numbering of motorboats under a federal system. The bill, sought by Williams' Water Safety Commission, extended jurisdiction of local enforcement agencies.

Items in 1958 legislation were corrected by the second of the 16 priority bills.

Certain procedural and technical imperfections were noted after the 1956 legislature passed the Development Credit Corporation Act, a government-sponsored plan used with success by other states in encouraging industrial development.

The legislature corrected this by permitting industrial development credit corporations to acquire land.

Another industrial lure, a measure to permit establishment of industrial park authorities, failed. It would have permitted the acquisition of property, borrowing of money and issuing of bonds to develop industrial parks.

The bill was considered necessary to encourage communities to develop suitable land for plant development.

Michigan stood third last year in apple production with a commercial crop of nearly 12 million bushels worth an estimated $194 million. Among them is the old-fashioned Northern Spy variety which is as typical of Michigan as the Soo locks or inland lakes. A new development known as controlled atmosphere storage, in which Michigan is the largest user, makes it possible for you to have a crisp, juicy apple right now although the fruit was harvested last fall.

Uncle Lew from Lima Says:

DEAR MISTER EDITOR:

In my lifetime I've saw Government agencies get control of roads, rents, prices, production, power, pork, credit, and crops. It's beginning to look like there ain't nothing worthwhile left to control but the hereafter and I figure Congress will get started on that at the next session.

In fact, they've already got one foot in the door on controlling the hereafter by making funeral homes get a license and bury a feller according to rules and regulations set up by law. They've got so much red tape to it that St. Peter has a hard time getting it unravelled when the departed arrives up yonder.

The reason I mention it is on account of this piece in the paper about a feller in Richmond, Virginia, complaining because the funeral parlor boys is joining a labor union. I can't see how a few more complications like this is going to make any difference.

Back when I was a boy they buried a man in a sheet, and a woman in a sheet with lace trim. The departed was laid out on the cooling board while the neighbors built the coffin. The village blacksmith always kept handles made for the box and he was usually the first one notified after the wake in the house was stopped and the mirrors draped. The departed was laid with feet to the east and head to the west so he'd rise facing the morning sun.

They carried the corpse by wagon to the church, where a long sermon was preached, sometimes lasting for two hours or more. Then when they got to the grave they would sing songs for another hour.

I can't see that they've made but one real improvement since then, says Mister Editor. Now they don't devote more'n a ten-minute sermon to the departed.

But like buggy whips and corsets, the old fashioned funeral ain't in demand no more. The relatives is in too big a hurry to get home and divide up the loot. And as cars get faster, things will get worse. The relatives used to have a day or two warning but in the next generation natural death will be mighty uncommon.

Summing up the situation, I can't get too upset over whether the feller that embalms me belongs to a labor union or not. About all a feller can hope for now is that he'll pass over afore the politicians get control of the hereafter.

Yours truly,
 Uncle Lew.

HYBRID CORN INCREASES

High-yielding hybrid corn covers 94.8 per cent of the land planted to this grain crop this year. The older open-pollinated corn makes up the balance of the 85,400,000 acres planted.

Reporting this, the Agriculture Department said that this was an increase from one-tenth of 1 per cent in 1933. Ten years ago the hybrid acreage was 78 per cent. In two states—Iowa and Illinois—the full acreage is hybrid. In quite a number of Midwestern and Eastern states the percentage is 98 or higher. The state with lowest percentage is Arizona, with 35 per cent. The corn acreage there is very small.

LIVING COST UP The cost of living rose three-tenths of 1 per cent in July to another record high, according to the latest report from the government.

The Labor Department said higher prices for all major classes of goods and services contributed to the advance, with food prices leading the way.

The Agriculture Department reports that the number of colonies on hand July 1 was 5,437,000, or about the same as a year earlier.

TOO CLOSE FOR COMFORT... or safety. Although his capers may seem cute to his companions, this "whiz" of the waterways certainly is not impressing these anglers. Such antics not only spoil the fun of others, but more important, they invite accidents. On-Michigan waters, as well as its highway, there is no room for hotrodding. When Poisoning Is Suspected Call Doctor Immediately

"If someone has been poisoned, call a doctor and then follow his advice. Don't attempt to administer antidotes unless the doctor recommends them."

This warning was issued by Dr. F. S. Leeder, director of disease control for the Michigan Department of Health.

"There are so many different poisons, and so many different ways of successfully treating poison victims, that the wrong first aid could do much more harm than good in many cases," he said.

"If the doctor doesn't know the toxic ingredient in a particular poisoning case, he can call one of the sixteen poison control centers or one of the six additional poison treatment centers for information. Today, these centers are only a short telephone call away from any doctor."

"If you cannot reach a doctor," Dr. Leeder added, "the label on the container of the poisonous substance may list an antidote which can be used according to directions. But in any case, guessing at the antidote is dangerous and medical advice should be obtained as quickly as possible."

Change Method of Determining Wheat History If Allotment Is Underseeded

Chairman Max M. Kalmbach of the Washtenaw County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee today announced a change in the method of determining wheat history acreage for wheat farms on which the allotment is underseeded. The change is the result of a law which has just gone into effect and which is designed to help farmers who underplant protect their future wheat allotments.

Under the new law, a farmer who plants no wheat for 1960 harvest may still obtain maximum history acreage credit for 1960 if his actual planted acreage of wheat in either 1958 or 1959—plus any acreage diverted from wheat under the Soil Bank or Great Plains program—was equal to 5 per cent of his farm wheat allotment.

If a farmer does not meet this requirement and wants to get maximum wheat history credit for 1960, then he must meet the 75 per cent planting requirement for 1960. In other words, by planting 75 per cent of his wheat allotment in any of the three years 1958, 1959 or 1960, the farmer assures himself of full history credit for 1960.

In addition, a farmer who is prevented from seeding wheat for the 1960 crop because of unfavorable weather can preserve his maximum wheat history acreage credit if he notifies the county committee by Dec. 1, 1959 (June 1, 1960 in spring wheat areas) and the committee makes an official determination of this fact.

There has been no change in the law or regulations relating to history credit for farmers who overproduce their 1960 allotments, Kalmbach said. The farmer who exceeds his allotment will receive history credit only for the allotment unless he stores his excess wheat or delivers it to the Secretary of Agriculture to avoid or postpone the marketing quota penalty.

Kalmbach urges farmers who have any questions about these provisions to consult the county office in the short time that remains before winter wheat planting.

CONCERN OVER LAOS Secretary of State Christian A. Herter has told foreign policy leaders of the Senate and House that he regarded the situation in Laos, where communist forces are fighting government troops, as "very dangerous."

Special Articles Will Discuss Nixon's Trip to Moscow

By Edward S. Sims, Chelsea Standard Special Writer

New York, N. Y.—The preparations which have been made for the special flight of more than 50 newspaper, television and radio representatives, and some members of Vice-President Richard Nixon's official party, from New York to Moscow, reflected both American drive and patriotism.

Although it had originally been planned to remain rather quiet about it, it became widespread knowledge that the new, long-range jet 707 making the New York-Moscow hop was out to set a new record. This is the Boeing 707 which was originally designed for long-range trans-Atlantic crossings, and this version of the big jet transport is not yet in regular use between the United States and Europe.

Vice-President Nixon met with the group accompanying him for over an hour earlier in the week, outlining the objectives of his trip, as he saw them. The objectives, he said, were described by him as follows:

First, the Vice-President believes that his trip will be useful, in that it will provide the first meeting between Nikita Khrushchev, and a United States official with such high official status, since Geneva. Nixon says that unlike other prominent Americans who have been touring Russia recently, he will be speaking for the U. S. government, and will have the authority to speak for the government.

He believes that this gives him an opportunity to impress upon Khrushchev and other Russian leaders the desire of the United States for peace, but also our determination and firmness, and our resolve not to be pushed around. Nixon also believes it is important to convince Soviet leaders, and the Soviet people, that both American parties and the American people in general, support the foreign policy of the Administration.

Secondly, Vice-President Nixon said he thinks his trip affords him an opportunity to get the American case before the Russian people, to a limited degree. While saying that he did not think one short trip could necessarily accomplish wonders, he does think that his opportunity to go on television, and on the radio, and the newspaper coverage of his trip and his speeches, will offer him some opportunity to correct the caricature of the U. S. people which has been built in the minds

ABOUT YOUR HOME

The hard instinct is strong in America. This is reflected in fashion, social structure, and in the architecture of a great many homes.

Look about at all the successive styles of architecture that have swept the country since its beginning.

First we had the log cabin, a simple, functional home, made from the materials at hand and serving its purpose well.

The sodpox house came into vogue around the turn of the century. These houses were solid, no-nonsense, like the mission oak furniture of the period.

MEA Starts Educational TV Network

Lansing—The first educational television network of its kind will be inaugurated, this fall by the Michigan Education Association in co-operation with Michigan State University.

The MEA, an organization of more than 50,000 teachers and administrators, will produce and distribute to participating Michigan television stations 30 one-half hour kinescope recordings (films) beginning in mid-September.

Entitled, "The Constant Challenge," the series is the first ever attempted on such a large scale by a state teachers association.

The 30 programs are being prepared by the MEA. Michigan State University's television station, WMSB, will handle the production and direction of the series.

To date, 10 Michigan television stations have expressed the desire to be a part of the kinescope network. If no other TV outlets join the network, "The Constant Challenge" will still be seen by a potential audience of five million.

The series, while basically documentary, will utilize film, dramatic scenes and other visual aids to have greater public appeal.

The primary objective of the MEA's TV network is to make citizens of Michigan more aware of the public school program at all levels; to show how free education is vital to a continuing democracy; and to increase public esteem toward the personnel and the program of Michigan's schools.

Executive producer of the series is Jack M. White, MEA director of public relations. Jack Caldwell, of WMSB, is the producer-director. Mel Reiter, of the MEA's public relations department, is assistant executive producer.

Distribution of the kinescopes will begin in September. Viewing schedules in the 10 television areas will be announced by participating stations and nearby daily and weekly newspapers.

With the coming of fall many clubs and organizations will be meeting regularly again. In many instances good programs for these groups will be needed. The Telephone Company furnishes demonstrations, talks and films without charge. A call to Robert Kuhn at NO 8-8083 will give you information about our many available programs.

EVER WONDER HOW some of our Michigan colleges win so many football games? One reason is their ability to employ new strategy during a game that will capitalize on an enemy's weaknesses. Flaws in the opponent's attack are spotted by an assistant in the press box. How does he relay them to the head coach on the field? By telephone, of course. The telephone enables him to feed the coach a steady stream of information that quite often spells victory for your team.

DID YOU KNOW THAT IT takes a lot more effort and money to write a business letter than to use the telephone? According to a business magazine, the average business letter costs $1.70 by the time you figure stenographic costs, mailing, filing and materials. That cost is duplicated at the other end when a reply is sent. If you look at the long distance rates listed in your telephone book, you'll see how many distant places you can call for less than that. Furthermore, a long distance call is easier, faster and more personal.

Modernization Doubles Capacity of MMPA OVID PLANT

Michigan Milk Producers Association purchased the milk processing plant at Ovid, Michigan three years ago. Today, after thorough modernization by MMPA crews, the estimated net worth of the plant has nearly tripled and it is the largest single processing plant in Michigan. Capacity has been increased to 1 million lbs. of surplus milk a day; the annual sales volume is approximately $7,000,000. This tremendous processing capacity helps maintain a more stable market and a fair return to dairy farmers by controlling surplus milk. It is an invaluable marketing tool—completely owned by dairy farmers.

Blanch Vegetables Before Freezing For Home Storage

It's easy to freeze fresh vegetables—but don't over-simplify the process. Take time to blanch those vegetables, says Roberta Hershey, foods and nutrition specialist at Michigan State University.
To blanch foods, you simply scald them in boiling water, then cool them quickly before freezing. Scalding destroys enzymes present in the vegetables—enzymes that cause off-flavors and unnatural colors. Scalding time varies with the different vegetables. This is generally because of the different size pieces.
One research laboratory found that green beans changed in flavor within two weeks after freezing if they were not blanched, Miss Hershey adds.
The vegetable should be cooled in the same amount of time it takes to scald it. For instance, if green beans require three minutes to scald, they should be cooled in three minutes. To test, bite into a piece of the vegetable. It should be cool to the center.
Information and directions for freezing foods is found in Bulletin 216, "Freezing Foods for Michigan Homes." It is available at your county Cooperative Extension office. Copies are also available from the Bulletin Office, Agricultural Hall, Michigan State University, East Lansing.

Production Underway On Metal Tabs for 1960 License Plates

Judging from inquiries at 250 Michigan Department of State branch offices there are many people in Michigan who are not aware that they will not have new license plates in 1960.
Instead, starting on Nov. 1, owners of passenger vehicles will, when registering, get a metal tab, 3/4 by 1 1/4 inches in size, which is affixed to the upper right hand corner of the 1959 license plate. The tab carries a serial number etched in the metal and the number '60 in green on a golden yellow background. This is the reverse of the 1959 plates which carry yellow numerals and letters on a green background. The serial numbers will not be identical with the two-letter four-digit county-designated license plates but will run numerically starting at 1001. According to Secretary of State, James M. Hare, the low numbers will be shipped to Upper Peninsula branches and the highest numbers, which run into seven digits, will be sold in Wayne County branch offices.
"Production on these tabs is well under way at Jackson Prison," Hare said.
"Inasmuch as a new law passed by the Legislature this year calls for completely relettered plates in 1961, we will not be able to use the 1959 plates for three years as we had originally intended," Hare added. "It was our goal to save a quarter of a million dollars over the three year period but now that the plan for so-called permanent plates may have to be abandoned, there is little hope that these savings will be achieved."

SAFETY DEVICES URGED
Some members of the House feel the Government should set an example by requiring safety devices on the thousands of cars it buys annually.
A bill is currently before the House that requires devices such as seat belts, crash-padding and the like on passenger vehicles it buys. The Government has about 45,000 passenger cars and buys about 10,000 replacements annually.

NEWS HOLLYWOOD

Jimmy Stewart made three films this year—four if you count the one he did free for the Air Force. So he won't do another until after January.

Bill Holden is working round the clock with lawyers and a new seven-year contract for Paramount, furniture packers, and shipping his stuff to St. Prax, Switzerland, where he's bought a home.

TODAY'S PICTURE REVIEW: THE MAN UPSTAIRS

In this British film the man upstairs of the title is a yungling scientist lying in a rather dismal middle-class apartment house in London. Acting oddly, he has obviously become mentally unbalanced for reasons disclosed later in the film.
As the film opens, he is seen wandering around seeking help to light his gas heater. His neighbors are of various types, some inclined to be helpful, but prudent, and one in particular is the original "Nosy Parker." This latter our disturbed friend gives a little push in exasperation, knocking him down and breaking his glasses. The busybody calls the police and the disturbed man gets into further trouble when he accidentally pushes a sergeant over a banister, injuring him seriously. Frightened and confused, the sick man locks himself in his room, and from then on the film is suspenseful fare. Foaming he will throw himself out of a window, ways and means of combatting this catastrophe are debated among the residents of the apartment house.
Starkly realistic, the film propounds the question: "Are we our brother's keeper?" Richard Attenborough stars as the mentally ill man upstairs.

Englishman Says Students 'Inoffensive'

Ann Arbor—"The principal aim of most of my American students was to be inoffensive," says Michael Millgate, young Englishman from Cowes, in the Isle of Wight, who was a teacher at the University of Michigan in 1956-57.
"The teacher must be told what he wanted to hear. I was much encouraged at first because most of the opinions my students expressed were recognizably liberal in intention," Millgate says.
"America couldn't do without allies even though they were always costing the taxpayers more and more. There was quite a lot to be said for labor unions, although they had all grown much too powerful and corrupt. It was right and proper to be kind to Negroes and Asiatics, who really weren't so very different from us after all, were they?"
But Millgate points out, "I soon came to realize that these were the 'correct' views of the moment—quite permissible for an Eisenhower Republican, for example—but they were views my students thought I would find acceptable."
Millgate says there was a tendency for the students to ignore, or fail to see the real issues in a problem. "I discussed with them Faulkner's Nobel Prize acceptance speech. I had hoped they wouldn't swallow Faulkner's rhetoric whole, but I was astonished at the vehemence with which they rejected his statement that 'when will I be blown up' had become the only question for the modern young writer."
"Nobody thinks that way," they insisted. It had apparently not occurred to them that they themselves stood at least a 50-50 chance of being blown up. If it had occurred to them, they had shrugged it off as something they could do nothing about.
"One girl said that, while they recognized war as an ever-present possibility, they did not worry about it any more than they did about having an automobile accident every time they got behind a steering wheel. If war was going to come, she said, their anxiety would not stop it."
"I suggested that if drivers were a little more anxious and paid attention to what they were doing there might be a lot fewer road accidents. And might not greater political awareness on the part of individuals do something to reduce the likelihood of war?"
"This argument was coldly received, and I had to admit to myself that perhaps it was I who was being naive."

"America couldn't do without allies even though they were always costing the taxpayers more and more. There was quite a lot to be said for labor unions, although they had all grown much too powerful and corrupt. It was right and proper to be kind to Negroes and Asiatics, who really weren't so very different from us after all, were they?"
But Millgate points out, "I soon came to realize that these were the 'correct' views of the moment—quite permissible for an Eisenhower Republican, for example—but they were views my students thought I would find acceptable."
Millgate says there was a tendency for the students to ignore, or fail to see the real issues in a problem. "I discussed with them Faulkner's Nobel Prize acceptance speech. I had hoped they wouldn't swallow Faulkner's rhetoric whole, but I was astonished at the vehemence with which they rejected his statement that 'when will I be blown up' had become the only question for the modern young writer."
"Nobody thinks that way," they insisted. It had apparently not occurred to them that they themselves stood at least a 50-50 chance of being blown up. If it had occurred to them, they had shrugged it off as something they could do nothing about.
"One girl said that, while they recognized war as an ever-present possibility, they did not worry about it any more than they did about having an automobile accident every time they got behind a steering wheel. If war was going to come, she said, their anxiety would not stop it."
"I suggested that if drivers were a little more anxious and paid attention to what they were doing there might be a lot fewer road accidents. And might not greater political awareness on the part of individuals do something to reduce the likelihood of war?"
"This argument was coldly received, and I had to admit to myself that perhaps it was I who was being naive."

Englishman Says Students 'Inoffensive'

Ann Arbor—"The principal aim of most of my American students was to be inoffensive," says Michael Millgate, young Englishman from Cowes, in the Isle of Wight, who was a teacher at the University of Michigan in 1956-57.
"The teacher must be told what he wanted to hear. I was much encouraged at first because most of the opinions my students expressed were recognizably liberal in intention," Millgate says.

Detroit Is Largest Point of Entry Along Entire U.S.-Canadian Border

Michigan Department of State employees working with Canadians on truck licensing reciprocity problems have come across some interesting statistics, which to the Department's knowledge, have never been publicized in Michigan.

According to Secretary of State James M. Hare, more people entered the United States from Canada through Detroit than through any other crossing point on our common border.

During 1959, 7,985,704 persons came to Detroit from Ontario by water, bridge, or tunnel. Persons entering the United States through Buffalo numbered 6,007,409.

In Calais, Me., where an unofficial International Festival is held each July to celebrate Dominion Day and Independence Day, 1,988,926 crossings are recorded.

Hare reported that there are about 140 official crossing points along the 4,000 miles of the "southern" Canadian-U. S. border and a few more on the "northern" Canadian-Alaskan border.
"I wouldn't be surprised if in ten years one-third of them will join Windsor and Detroit and put on some sort of four-day International Festival to celebrate our July freedom holidays," Hare said. "By that time Canadians and Americans may even decide, in lieu of or as part of shortening our work week, we may declare a four-day holiday in all states and provinces on both sides of the border."

"Some civic leaders in the two Saults and in the Port Huron-Sarnia area have expressed interest in picking up the idea," Hare continued. "The Blue Water Bridge (which, incidentally cut its toll rates this summer) and the authorized St. Mary's River International Bridge will make it easy for these areas to tie together celebrations on both sides of the border."

During the International Festival in Detroit and Windsor the tunnel and bridge not only were useful in getting spectators back and forth, but helped get floats, bands, and good-looking Festival queens from one side of the Detroit River to the other.

Official records show that Port Huron was the point of entry for 2,083,231 persons during 1959 and Sault Ste. Marie for 745,552.

Along the St. Clair River, Algonac accounted for 108,507, Robert's Landing for 93,057, and Marine City for 89,901 persons entering the United States.
