Perhaps Mr. K Has Hastened His Downfall by Removing Stalin's Body

Whether or not Khrushchev makes good on his boast to bury us, he has—for the moment at least—buried "Good Old Joe" Stalin, his former chief and mentor in mass murder. In the dark of the night, while the gruesome mausoleum on Moscow's Red Square was ostensibly "closed for repairs," what remains of the number two hero of the Red Revolution was roused from his eight-year repose beside Public Hero Number One, Nicolai Lenin, and planted ignominiously six feet under a marble slab outside the Kremlin wall.

Khrushchev's final gesture, whether of victory over the faithful—Molotov, Malenkov and the others—who adhered to Stalin's "cult of the individual," or of a fancied emancipation from the influence that had shaped his own bloody career, raises the question of whether Stalin's ghost will be content with the new resting place or rise to haunt Mr. K again.

The charges contained in Khrushchev's bold denunciation of Stalin before the twentieth party congress in 1956—when he launched his "deStalinization" program—were published only in recent days so that the Russian people were not too well prepared for this climax. And since reports from Moscow tell of heated and free-wheeling discussion of this event, it must be assumed that Russians share in the universal disapproval of those who speak ill of the dead. Nor have they forgotten that their present dictator rode to glory over the cadavers of the Ukraine as Stalin's purgmaster.

Whether or not Khrush has at last overreached himself remains to be seen. But there seems little chance—regardless of how early or late he may, himself, be in need of a tomb—that he will occupy the spot beside Lenin that he has made vacant.

Michigan Has Long Been Blessed With Good Management Know-How

Management know-how is essential to industrial success. Like Michigan's other advantages to industry—highly skilled workers, natural resources, great consumer and industrial markets, transportation and excellent community spirit—we have this advantage to a degree that is unsurpassed by any location anywhere in the world.

It was Michigan's management know-how combined with our great skills, that put the world on wheels. It was that same combination, changing to meet the challenges of new times, that constructed the missile which sent the first United States astronaut into space. Management skill in Michigan is able to meet any challenge which industry presents. In fact, it challenges itself with problems no one else had thought of. And, with the co-operation of Michigan's fine workers, it solves them.

This great advantage is a message which all our people should make known throughout the nation. In today's Chelsea Standard there is a public service advertisement prepared by the industry promotion committee of the Michigan Press Association and the Michigan Economic Development Department which sets forth that "Michigan Is Management Know-How." You can aid our local industrial development program if you clip this advertisement and send it to a friend in another State. You will thus have a part in helping build our community.

We wonder if Alexander Graham Bell had any trouble beating his wife to the telephone to make the first call.

Uncle Lew from Lima Says:

DEAR MISTER EDITOR—The fellers at the country store Saturday night was making their customary expert observations on the human race and, judging from their comments, they ain't much hope for it.

Ed Doolittle, fer instant, said he was reading in a magazine article where they is 18 million chronic liars in this country. Ed claimed the two figgers come out perfect and was final proof that all fishermen is liars. And the sad part about it, allowed Ed, was that the number of fishermen is increasing at a steady rate. Zeke Grubb said it was just plain hard to git the truth out of anybody that had ever been close to a fishing pole. He said he wouldn't be surprised if a fish didn't go home and tell a lie about the size of the bait he stole.

Bug Hookum, who looks at things a little on the dark side, was lamenting that persons liberty was disappearing in this country. He claimed if we didn't git some of these lawyers out of the legislature and the Congress, we'd soon have to git permission from the Attorney General to open a bureau drawer. Most of the fellers agreed as how lawyers has managed to git so many laws on the book that there can't be sure a thing no more as a "law abiding citizen."

In the main, Mister Editor, I think Bug and the fellers is about right. I ain't as big a joy-killer as Bug but I ain't never been a feller to look up the chimney fer Santa Claus either. Back in the old days a new state or federal law was passed only after many months of thought, prayer, and deliberation. Fer instant, I can recollect when I was a boy they was discussing a fence law fer cattle. One legislator got up and argued again it, said he didn't want no fence law on account of when a pore man stole a pig he didn't want to make him lift it over no fence. In them days, human weaknesses was took into consideration. It also proves, I reckon, that the pore man voted pretty regular in them days.

Clem Webster told the fellers he was having a heap of trouble this year separating the figgers from the facts. He claims he gits a set of figgers about once a month from the Agriculture Department showing the farmer in doing fine but they don't jibe with his bank book. Clem said, in case the fellers hadn't noted it, they is a difference between figgers and facts. Fer instant, he explained, when you look at a lady with a girde on, you're looking at the figger, but without the girde you're looking at the fact. That Clem is a card, Mister Editor.

Yours truly,
 Uncle Lew.

MICHIGAN MIRROR

By Elmer E. White, Secretary, Michigan Press Association

Speed reading with comprehension has been highly touted in the U.S. in recent months, especially since President Kennedy's reading and understanding abilities were made known.

The experts report anyone can increase his reading speed while maintaining his current level of understanding.

Michigan residents presumably could improve their reading ability the same as others, but incidents reported to Secretary of State James M. Hare indicates many persons need work on their comprehension rather than speed.

Hare's most recent problem with the public's reading habits came in an area which has plagued him for more than two years: reflectorized license plates.

"All communications media gave us excellent coverage on the procedure for returning the 35-cent fees collected for the reflectorized plates," Hare said.

"Yet it appears that a large percentage of Michigan license plate purchasers still do not know that they must get their 'credit card' from Lansing."

An estimated three million people paid the 35-cent fee for the plates approved by the 1959 legislature. The law was never implemented with appropriations for equipment, however, and it was repealed this year.

Refunds credited against the purchase of 1962 license plates must be approved in Hare's, Lansing office from master files.

Michigan Week, a promotion which began nine years ago to encourage state residents to recognize the resources available to them at home, has come a long way.

In recent years the seven-day observance has been used to convince non-residents of the many advantages Michigan has to offer industries, tourists, convention-goers, and every other classification of business and individual.

Plans for the 1962 Michigan Week, scheduled May 20-26, got under way almost before the current year's promotion was finished.

Edwin O. George, Detroit, was named general chairman. He appointed 16 regional chairmen; several weeks ago and most county chairmen have now been named.

The 1961 promotion also brought a new angle: The Prime Minister of Ontario and several members of his cabinet, comparable to Michigan's major agency heads, were shown the "Water Wonderland" and a sampling of her people to emphasize the need for continued good will between the two governmental units.

Michigan Week officials indicated they hoped to invite officials of other states during the promotion each year.

Thus the promotion first designed to make Michigan residents appreciate their surroundings becomes more and more an effort to get outsiders to see us as we see ourselves.

Public officials take an oath throughout the nation to uphold their respective state constitutions and the basic document of the United States, which guarantees the rights of individual citizens.

State Highway Commissioner John C. Mackie recently reminded his colleagues in the roadbuilding field of one way they could further fulfill this obligation: by making roads safer and more pleasant on which to drive.

Mackie urged the nation's highway officials to keep in mind their "responsibility" to preserve natural beauty as much as possible when building new roads.

"If we can add the subtle but pervading note of beauty to our highways, we will have given the motorist a bonus in his ease and pleasure of travel," Mackie said.

Michigan's recently-constructed highways have frequently been praised by department officials as having built-in safety features.

A large portion of these guards to safe driving have been areas where roads were diverted around clumps of trees, which blocked the glare of oncoming headlights.

Mackie pointed out today's modern divided highways become paths of pleasant motoring and are safer to drive on if separated by at least 125 feet. The cost of maintaining the roadways also goes down when there is less conflict between opposing traffic," he said.

"This, the modern highway can become not only a corridor of commerce, but a corridor of safe, scenic attraction," said Mackie.

SEEDING HURRICANES
 Seeding of hurricane Esther in the Atlantic Ocean last month failed to swerve it from its path, but it did make a lot of ice. This report comes from the United States Weather Bureau.

The bureau scientists calculated that about 400 cubic miles of water cloud were converted to ice in about 40 minutes, releasing energy equal to about eight atomic bombs of the 20-kiloton variety. This was still less than one-tenth of 1 per cent of the energy released by the hurricane in the same 40-hour period.

FROM THE GOVERNOR'S CHAIR

By John B. Swainson

The Michigan Farm Bureau's annual meeting presented a well-earned opportunity to discuss the future of the important agricultural sector of Michigan's economy.

The future of Michigan agriculture, I believe, is bright. Markets for Michigan farm products are expanding, opportunities are increasing.

The achieving of our potential, however, will not be automatic. It will take planning and co-ordinated effort with other areas of endeavor. A growing farm market is dependent on a general growing economy.

Not only industrial workers but farmers, too, have a stake in the success of our programs to attract new industry, reduce unemployment and generally stimulate economic growth in Michigan. Unemployed workers do not constitute ideal customers for Michigan farm products. However, programs to aid the unemployed also aid farmers; without insurance payments to the unemployed, their purchasing power would be even further diminished.

Programs to stimulate business and industrial employment therefore, are programs vital to the farmer and deserve their support.

Achieving the kind of agricultural progress we want depends upon the growth in well-being of upon the growth in well-being of industrial workers—and business. It will require the co-operation of all groups in both their private and public affairs.

No group in our state can get the prosperity which it deserves unless the others are prosperous, too. Let us spend our energies getting ahead together.

Awarding of $42,250,000 worth of defense contracts to Chrysler Corp., Ford Motor Co., White Motor Co., and Continental Motors Corp., is cheerful news. Not only will it provide jobs and help our economy, but it emphasizes once again the important role Michigan industry and workers have in the defense of our nation and the cause of freedom everywhere.

Defense procurements are a vital part of Michigan's economy. The new contracts should give encouragement to our smaller industries to seek federal contracts and defense work subcontracts.

It is to assist these smaller industries that the Economic Development Department, my special assistants, Arthur Meyer and Charles Brownell, representatives of the Armed Services and the Small Business Administration are holding conferences throughout our state.

Chambers of Commerce at Muskegon and Grand Rapids sponsored the first of these conferences last night. It is our hope that every industrialist in Michigan will have the opportunity to have the advantage of conferring with the state and federal authorities on federal contract procurement.

MICHIGAN IS MANAGEMENT KNOW-HOW

Michigan offers to industry management know-how in a degree that is unmatched anywhere.

Here in Michigan, management headquarters of mass production, we have more management skills than anywhere in the world. That includes—Pittsburgh, Chicago, Essen—everywhere.

Our management know-how is not limited to mass production industries, although the world looks to Michigan's leadership in that area. Michigan's management know-how excels in production of drugs and the many other products of our State. It is outstanding in the world of finance.

With management headquarters of the Big Three automobile manufacturers located in Michigan, this management leadership extends to supplier companies, management know-how is necessary to industrial development.

With our diversity of industrial skills, natural resources, transportation, markets and management know-how, Michigan is a great place for industry.

Help carry Michigan's message to the nation. Clip this ad and mail it to someone in another state with your comment. Let's talk up Michigan and its advantages for industry. Together we can assure a greater future for all of us.

Conservation Dept. Wants To Check Area Deer Kills

Hunters killing buck near Chelsea or elsewhere in Michigan are urged to call the Conservation Department office at Brighton. The hunter may telephone his collector to this office at AC 9-0500. A game biologist will go to the hunter's residence or frozen food locker, determine the age of the deer by the wear on the teeth, and record its antlers and record the kill. Even if only the head is available, the collector can still obtain the necessary information.

"We are now engaged in an intensive study to secure information vital to the management of the southern Michigan herd. We cannot do the job without the co-operation of hunters with the high productivity of which from each doe, the herd is increasing at a faster rate. First of all we need to know how many bucks are being shot and how many of each age class are being removed by the hunter. This will be followed around the state by a careful tally of all other types of mortality including dogs, fences, farm machinery, etc."

CD Emergency Planning Office Set in Battle Creek

Lansing — In accordance with President Kennedy's call for stepped up non-military preparedness, Director Frank B. Ellis of the Office of Emergency Planning has established an Area Office in Battle Creek, and has named Charles S. Woods as Acting Director. This office in turn has established a direct link with Governor John B. Swainson and Acting State Civil Defense Director Robert S. D'Amelio.

The new structure, however, is separate from the chain of relationship which links Federal, State, and local Civil Defense officials under the direction of the Department of Defense, Office of Civil Defense.

The states served by this area office are Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota, and Wisconsin. Acting Director Woods summed up the objectives of his office by pointing out that non-military defense includes, in addition to Civil Defense: resources planning; economic stabilization; and planning and co-ordinating preparations for the continuity of essential governmental operations.

The Office of Emergency Planning also co-ordinates Federal assistance in natural disasters which have been declared major disasters by the President.

In the event of nuclear attack, normal processes would be disrupted. A considerable time may elapse before Federal controls could be effectively reestablished. Localization of government and economic life would be controlling factors for an indefinite period. The Governor, as the chief executive of the State, must be prepared to exercise, at the instant, most of the functions exercised by the President at the national level. He must act independently until such time as national control can be restored, and as part of the national control mechanism thereafter. In addition, government life of the community to conserve vital resources and direct their use in the saving of lives and the conduct of essential military operations which may still be in progress, and the restoration of essential production.

These and other steps essential to survival come within the scope of emergency planning which State and local governments now are building into their readiness.

This is the broad range of non-military defense. It also includes continuity of government, records management and preservation, economic stabilization, and post-attack recovery, in addition to Civil Defense.

Field units of the many Federal agencies which have non-military defense responsibilities also require coordination for emergency planning.

AGRICULTURE In ACTION

Turkey Market Hurt

People, not turkeys are the gobblers these days, according to new statistics that show turkey consumption up 50 percent from ten years ago. Apparently the nation is giving whole-hearted approval to the custom of linking roast turkey to the holidays as was first done in the Pilgrim colony. Actually, the tie-in of turkeys to the festive season is part of the problem. Profitable turkey production must be more than a reasonable affair.

Producers are doing their best to sell housewives on the idea that every season is turkey season, and a note of urgency has been given to this promotion by the current overproduction of poultry in general and turkeys in particular.

It's no secret that turkey prices are down a good bit and that there is much activity to boost them back to where all producers agree they belong.

Two classic avenues of price-action are under examination by growers these days. The first is government, with some producers willing to push hard for a National Turkey Marketing Order, made possible under the Agricultural Act of 1961.

This order would bring a nationwide quota clamped on the amount of turkeys that could be produced. Some might argue the point, since actual production quotas cannot be set under the order... but the wording is tricky and the end result is the same. Quotas can be placed on the number of turkey eggs allowed hatched, and on actual numbers of turkeys that can be sold, which amounts to roundabout production controls with real teeth.

The other avenue of price-action is for producers to refuse to turn to government, and instead stay at home and sell turkeys. That this can be done with success is demonstrated in Minnesota where the Turkey Federation has used public information campaigns, school programs and effective newspaper advertising. It has raised $35,000 from its own members to pay for such salesmanship.

Turkeys can be sold. Newspaper advertising can be a real key to effort.

Rather than rushing to government more people could well take a leaf from the Minnesota Turkey Federation notebook. And while they're at it, producers could afford to watch the salesmanship techniques of the nation's largest single retailer of turkey meat... Woolworth stores, with their famous coast-to-coast "Turkey Sandwich Special."

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Steinbach and Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Steinbach left Tuesday morning to spend until Sunday at Cedarville where they will visit Mrs. Martin Steinbach's father, Victor Shoberg. The men also plan to do some deer hunting.

Michigan Abounds In Management Know-How Supply

"Management know-how is one of the most important of Michigan's advantages," according to James B. Grant, president of H. M. Seldon Co., Detroit, and president of the Michigan Chapter, Society of Industrial Realtors.

"Management know-how is successful for every business and industry. In Michigan, we have management ability that is unsurpassed anywhere. This advantage, combined with our industrial skills, our natural resources, great market and fine transportation, makes Michigan a fine place for industry."

With management headquarters of mass production located in Michigan, this state has more management skills than any other location in the world. This includes foreign lands as well as the industrial centers in the United States.

It is significant that these management skills are not limited to mass production industries. It extends to suppliers, drug manufacturers and a wide variety of other industries. It is evidenced in our outstanding banking institutions. With Michigan's fine schools of higher education and the training programs in industry, a continuing supply of top management personnel is assured.

Bright students, perhaps the top 20 percent, may be able to complete high school with only 10 years of schooling instead of 12, and so save some money for the taxpayers, according to Dr. Sam M. Lambert, director of the National Education Association's Research Division. He also said that the saving might be used to engage superior teachers with six years of preparation and master's degrees.

Chelsea Implement Will Sell New Mercury Meteor

A Chelsea automobile dealership, Chelsea Implement Co., 3231 Manchester, has been appointed to sell the Mercury Meteor, a completely new-sized car which will be introduced this month.

The Mercury Meteor will be unveiled across the country Thursday, Nov. 30, at about 2,000 dealerships in the Lincoln-Mercury organization. Its introduction will climax the auto industry's fall showings of the 1962 models.

The Meteor is regarded by the Lincoln-Mercury Division as a balance between the industry's compact and big cars. Compared to its companions in the Mercury line, the Meteor is nine inches longer than the Comet and nearly a foot shorter than the Monterey.

William C. Huber, Lincoln-Mercury sales manager for the Detroit district, points out that the Meteor challenges the economy of the compact cars yet offers the interior room of regular-size cars and riding qualities of big cars.

It is not a stretched-out compact nor a cut-down big car. All sheet metal and basic chassis components are completely new and are not borrowed from last year's cars or other 1962 Mercury lines, Huber added.

In appearance, the Meteor emphasizes clean-lined styling. The car, which is built with a unitized body, incorporates features designed to reduce maintenance costs.

The new Meteor will be offered in four body styles—two and four-door sedans in both a standard and custom series.

with F through L, 3:15-4:15 p.m.; and M through R, 4:15-5:15 p.m. From 7 until 8 p.m. will be reserved for those whose names begin with S and the hour from 8 to 9 will be for those in the remaining category, T-Z.

For the benefit of those parents who, because of their work or other unavoidable reason, cannot attend during their assigned hours, the teachers have said they will be glad to see them at 9 o'clock; or, if that is inconvenient, these parents may come at any of the scheduled afternoon or evening hours and teachers will work them in to the planned schedule.

It is hoped that all parents who wish to do so will avail themselves of this opportunity to attend the open house and if those who can will co-operate by attending at the indicated hours, there should be no crowding at any time, teachers believe.

The empty honors that the world bestows do not last beyond the grave.

Religious Leaders Joining In Traffic Safety Sabbath

Religious and lay leaders of all faiths are called upon to focus attention to the moral side of good driving in a proclamation by Governor Swainson establishing Traffic Safety Sabbath for Nov. 18-19. This is the eighth state-wide observance of this occasion. No one person or faith can claim to have originated the observance. It was generated spontaneously in many communities in the state and nation at varying periods and dates.

Michigan was one of the first states in the nation in which a combined effort by a committee of leaders representing major elements of religious faiths affirmed that there was a moral issue involved in good driving as in other phases of everyday living. The committee was concerned that in the minds of so many people, while stealing was understood to be dishonest and disreputable, sneaking through a red light was merely taking a sporting chance and getting away with it was a matter of pride.

Soberly reflecting on the serious loss of life and property and the little considered after effects of the so-called accident in terms of thousands of deaths, lives wasted through crippling injury and financial ruin for many families, the sponsoring committee called on former Governor Williams for the first proclamation establishing a state wide observance.

During the past years participation has increased. Information usually goes to local pastors from denominational headquarters, but many local inter-faith committees now promote the observance. The Michigan State Safety Commission and Traffic Safety Association of Detroit co-operate with the religious leaders in the public relations phase of the program.

Sheriff's Report For Month Shows 136 Arrests Made

The Driver's License Division issued a total of 1,288 licenses which included 43 duplicates, 282 chauffeur renewals, 793 operator renewals and 170 originals. Fees collected amounted to $3,478.50.

In 1960, the average American ate 86 pounds of beef, 65 pounds of pork, 3 pounds of veal and 8 pounds of lamb and mutton.

AUTO-OWNERS NOT RAISING AUTO RATES

The A. D. Mayer Agency said their company belongs to neither rating bureau and sets its rates independently based on experience of Auto-Owners policyholders only. Auto-Owners' only rate increase in the past three years was made last May, and was far less than the average 12% increase now to be charged by Bureau companies.

Dairying Tops Cash Income For Farmers

In the division of cash sales among the various Michigan agricultural products, the dairy industry predominates, says John Ferris, Michigan State University agricultural economist.

In addition to the sales of milk and other dairy products, a large proportion of the marketings of cattle and calves is a by-product of the dairy enterprise. About one-half of the cattle marketed from Michigan farms are cull dairy calves, and nearly all the calves marketed are from dairy cow-vealers sold at six to ten weeks of age.

Sales of cull cows and vealers plus sales of dairy products added up to about 85 percent of the $705 million cash receipts from farm marketings in Michigan in 1960, Ferris says.

Livestock and livestock products made up 50 percent of the total cash receipts. Finished beef cattle plus a number of dairy steers represented about seven percent of the total receipts. In the fall of the year, large numbers of feeder cattle are shipped into Michigan, fed through the winter and marketed the following spring as finished cattle, Ferris says.

Hog and egg sales each accounted for about five percent of total cash receipts. Other livestock enterprises are of minor importance in Michigan, says Ferris.

Field crops accounted for 18 percent of the total receipts. Wheat is the most important cash crop, says Ferris, and dry edible beans, sugar beets, soybean and potatoes are other prominent field crops. Corn is actually the most valuable crop grown in Michigan, but about three-fourths of the crop is fed to livestock.

Truck crops represented about five percent of cash receipts, and fruit accounted for about nine percent, Ferris says. Gross income from nursery and forest products accounted for another five percent of farm marketings and most of the rest of the cash receipts come from feed crops.

President Kennedy has signed an immigration bill making it more difficult for aliens ordered deported to appeal to the courts.

One section of the bill provides that aliens ordered deported can appeal only for judicial review in a United States Court of Appeals. There are only eleven appeals courts compared to ninety-five district courts where appeals could be filed until the new bill was signed.

The Consumer Price Index showed a slight decline in August because of the normal summertime reduction in food prices. This is the sixth decline in the last ten months.

Predictions are that September and October will bring on slight increases while November will show a slight decrease.

Missionaries To Be Guest Speakers This Week at Assembly of God Church

Five missionaries of the Assemblies of God Foreign Mission Department are scheduled to be at the Chelsea Assembly of God church on Old US-12 at services the remainder of this week and are scheduled to speak about the fields in which they work.

Tonight, the Rev. Joseph Brown, a missionary to Egypt who lives at Fort Said, will be the speaker; tomorrow night (Friday), the Rev. Harold S. Bilotta, pastor of the Chelsea church, said all Chelsea area people are invited to attend the missionary rally services.

The Rev. Brown serves as principal of the Middle East Assemblies of God Bible school in Egypt. He will have various and native costumes on display and will also show slide pictures of the Assemblies of God Mission work in Egypt. A 43-minute color film also will be shown.

The Rev. and Mrs. Zents are under appointment of the Foreign Missions Department of the Assemblies of God headquarters in Springfield, Mo. They do missionary work among the Moslem speaking people—approximately four million people in the interior of West Africa where the Assemblies of God is the only Protestant mission in operation.

The Rev. and Mrs. Bolton are now traveling in the United States in the interest of the Assemblies of God mission of southern Formosa and at the conclusion of their furlough, will return to continue their evangelistic and teaching program there and assist in the construction of church buildings.

They will speak at the 9:45 a.m. Sunday school service and the 11 a.m. worship service.

The Rev. Harold S. Bilotta, pastor of the Chelsea church, said all Chelsea area people are invited to attend the missionary rally services.

Farm-City Week Banquet To Be Nov. 27 in Ann Arbor

Washtenaw county Farm Bureau and Ann Arbor Kiwanis club will jointly observe National Farm-City Week Nov. 27, according to Frank Haggard, Farm Bureau public-relations chairman, and Ray McCalla, Ann Arbor Kiwanis Agricultural committee chairman.

Highlight of the week will be a joint banquet of the two organizations held at the University of Michigan Union at 12:00 noon.

Farm-City Week is designed to foster better understanding between farmer, industrial worker, and businessman. Agriculture, industry, and business are the prize-winning team that has made America the greatest productive country in the world.

Agriculture provides the food and fiber for the nation and industry and business provides the products and services which keep the wheels of agriculture turning. The interdependence of farmer, industry, and business is the highest in history. The future holds ever greater interdependence than exists today.

The announcement was based on an analysis of milk in cities in Louisiana, Georgia, South Carolina, Mississippi, Florida and Missouri.

Iodine is a source of potential concern because physicians say extensive overdoses might result in cancer or other injury to the thyroid.

FARM COUPLE HONORED—The Donald Ruhlrig family are shown above at their farm home, 11300 Island Lake Rd. A similar picture was among those flashed on a screen at Michigan State University Thursday evening when Mr. and Mrs. Ruhlrig were honored as district "Co-Operators of the Year." They are one of 11 couples from the entire state so honored at the Michigan Farm Bureau convention. With the couple in the photo are their daughter, Ann, standing just behind her father, and their eight-year-old son, Timothy, who was keeping a sharp eye on dogs and cats scampering around near the cameraman when the photo was taken.

Donald Ruhlrigs Are District 'Co-Operators of the Year'

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Ruhlrig of 11300 Island Lake Rd., northeast Dexter, were honored Thursday evening, Nov. 9, at the Michigan Farm Bureau convention at Lansing as one of 11 couples from all parts of Michigan selected by Farm Bureau Services district "Co-Operators of the Year." District winners were picked from among 60 county winners in earlier competition.

Awards were based on community activities, church work, leadership in Farm Bureau and Extension work and participation in and use of local Farm Bureau supply co-operatives.

The Ruhlrigs were selected to represent District 3, composed of Livingston, Macomb, Monroe, Oakland, Wayne and their home county of Washtenaw.

They have been members of Farm Bureau for 11 years. Ruhlrig served on four major Farm Bureau committees and the past two years was president of Washtenaw Farm Bureau. They operate a combination beef cattle and truck garden farm.

Pictures of the Ruhlrig family and farm were flashed on the auditorium screen at Michigan State University before a large crowd gathered for the 42nd annual meeting of the Michigan Farm Bureau, Nov. 8-10.

Ruhlrig was a delegate from the Washtenaw County Farm Bureau. He was at the convention from Wednesday morning until Friday evening and Mrs. Ruhlrig joined him there for Thursday's special program.

Mr. and Mrs. Ruhlrig moved into their present home shortly after it was built 14 years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Ruhlrig have two children—Ann, a sophomore at Dexter High school, and Timothy, eight years old, a member of Mrs. Firestone's third grade class.

Newspapers Cited for Help In Economic Development

Michigan's industrial development has been given added encouragement and greater attention by Michigan residents as a result of the co-operative advertising program of the Michigan Press Association and the Michigan Economic Development Department started in 1959.

Governor Swainson called for public recognition of the active participation of Michigan newspapers in the State's development. The Governor said:

"Our newspapers are to be congratulated for their activity in industrial development. They have encouraged our people to participate in local programs."

The Standard is one of the 300 Michigan newspapers participating in this program, now in the closing of its second series of quarter-page advertisements which have been appearing at two-week intervals.

A joint committee planned and carried out details of the program. John H. Batdorff, business manager of the Traverse City Record-Eagle, and Vidian L. Roe, publisher of the Fremont Times-Indicator, served as co-chairmen of the Michigan Press Association's industrial promotion committee.

The first ad series directed attention to local industrial development, while this year's campaign expounded Michigan's advantages for industry. As part of the general message each advertisement urged readers to clip the copy and send it to prospective industrial and business prospects in other regions and States.

The joint committee received cooperation from private utility companies of the State who provided the art work used in the campaigns.

Directors of the Michigan Press Association were highly pleased with the results of the initial ad series, which brought commendation from the State Legislature through a legislative resolution of appreciation. Dale Stafford, publisher of the Greenville Daily News and president of the Michigan Press Association, called the campaign a "valuable public service to our State, and a source of satisfaction to us."

MSU Professors See More School Counselors

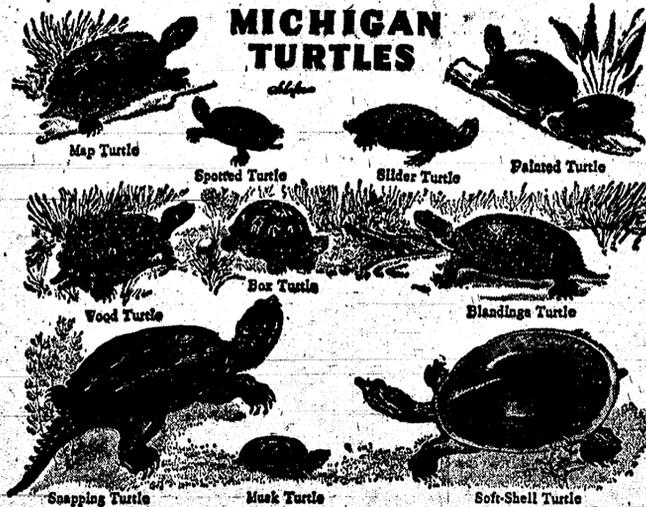

East Lansing—Consolidation of school districts and growth of cities is creating larger schools—and tomorrow they will have more counselors and other "pupil personnel specialists," say three faculty members of Michigan State University's College of Education.

In a new textbook, "Pupil Personnel and Guidance Services," Drs. Walter F. Johnson, Buford Steffire and Roy Edelfelt say, "Academic facts and skills are not enough equipment with which to face today's problems, and so the school now accepts responsibility for many of the vocational, social and emotional needs of the student body."

"They continue, 'In some of these areas the role of the school is secondary in importance—to such institutions as the family, the church, or industry, but in all these areas, the school is now more active than it formerly was.'"

Trees cover over one-half of Michigan's two peninsulas.

Any doctor can treat a patient after nature leads the way to recovery.

COMMON TO MICHIGAN'S LOWLANDS and waters are these ten armored members of the reptile family. Snapper, Blandings, and painted turtles are found throughout most of the state. All others, except wood turtles, are residents of the southern lower peninsula. Wood turtles live in the upper peninsula and northern two-thirds of the lower peninsula. In general, all ten are harmless. Actually, they are beneficial in that most of them keep waters free of dead fish and animals. Some feed on mosquito pupae and insects which prey on fish. A few eat fish or their eggs and young, but only to a limited degree. Their fabled slowness is paralleled by slow growth which perhaps accounts for their long life; some turtles are said to live much longer than humans. Turtles are easily identified by their familiar back shell and belly plate. This armor is their best means of defense, since they are too slow to escape predators by running away.

Michigan Is Home to 10 Distinct Turtle Types

Lansing—Painfully slow afoot and un-equipped to ward off predators—except in the case of snappers—turtles have, nonetheless, plodded the face of the earth for more than 200 million years.

Here in Michigan, 10 distinct types of turtles have trudged down through the sands of time. Snapper, Blandings, and painted turtles are found throughout most of the state. Soft-shell, box, spotted, map, musk, and slider turtles are residents of the southern lower peninsula while wood turtles live in the upper peninsula and the northern two-thirds of the lower peninsula.

The secret of survival which has carried their family name from the distant past to present lies in their familiar tough, horny shells. Armored like miniature tanks, turtles are able to withdraw their head, legs and—in some species—tail into the protected confines of their shell when trouble threatens. The hard-nosed snapper scuffs at this defensive move and, with his powerful jaws strikes back at his enemies, big or small, with a vengeance.

As this might indicate, Michigan's turtles have some differences in appearance, habits, and temperament. Some are good social "mixers" while others are "loners." They prefer different places to live and different foods appeal to their appetites.

On the other hand, these 10 species have many things in common besides their protective plating and slowness. As members of the reptile class, all are cold-blooded. That is, their body temperature rises and falls with that of the air and water.

During the winter months, turtles are very inactive; some species stay on the lake or stream bottom, some bury themselves in the bottom mud, while others hibernate in soil of their liking which may be some distance from water. When warm weather arrives, they come to life in the lowlands and waters. In the summer, turtles bury their eggs in nests dug into porous, upland soils where the eggs are left alone to hatch.

While in their winter hibernation, they go without renewing the air in their lungs. However, in the summer, they need air to breathe and will drown if kept under water long. Their fabled slowness afoot is paralleled by slow growth which, perhaps, explains their long life. Some turtles are said to live much longer than humans. The common box turtle frequently lives for over half a century and possibly reaches a maximum ripe old age of 123 years. Speaking of being slow, one observer clocked a box turtle traveling at one mile per nine-and-one-half hours. This, incidentally, was the turtle's normal cruising speed.

In general, turtles are harmless. Most of them serve as good outdoor "housekeepers" by keeping waters free of dead fish and animals. Some feed on mosquito pupae and insects which prey on fish, or on slugs, snails and other mollusks which harbor fish parasites during certain stages of their life cycle. A few turtles eat fish or their eggs and young, but only to a limited degree.

Michigan's largest and most pugnacious turtle is the snapper which averages about 10-12 inches in length and weighs 30 pounds. (It may exceed two feet in length and weigh more than 30 pounds). A dweller of sluggish streams, ponds, and lakes, the snapper is a vicious fighter. When encountered on land, the snapper holds its ground, thrusts its head forward, snapping its powerful jaws with lightning speed. Sometimes, its large head may be launched with such force that its entire body is carried off the ground. Color of the snapper's back shell is dark olive, brown, or black. This turtle has a pronounced shell, this turtle comes close to the snapper in size and is identified by its long, flexible snout. It likes to bask on sand bars on grassy banks and prefers rivers and lakes with soft, muddy bottoms.

The Blandings turtle is more gentle-natured. Like the snapper, it is aquatic and favors slow-flowing streams, lakes, and ponds. It is marked with a bright yellow throat and light, yellowish irregular flecks or stripes on a brown or blackish ground color. The box turtle has been gifted with a hinged belly plate which allows it to withdraw its legs as well as head inside the shell. Its shell can then be closed slightly at both ends to seal off trouble. This turtle makes an excellent pet.

Few turtles are as attractively marked as the painted turtle. The upper part of its back shell has large brownish or slate-colored plates with yellowish edges. The lower edge of this shell is ornamented with red stripes or spots. Its blackish head is set off by two pairs of large yellow spots behind the eyes. The turtle's throat is marked with yellow stripes that change to red farther back on the neck, and there are red stripes on its forelimbs and tail. The painted turtle may be seen basking on logs and muskrat homes in lakes, sluggish streams and marshes, but not for long as it is quick to scramble off into the water when approached.

One or more rounded, orange-yellow spots on each scale of the back shell help to identify the spotted turtle, rare in Michigan. Small and mild-mannered, this turtle likes quiet waters and marshes.

The wood turtle has a raised, ridge-like keel on the midline of its back shell. This shell is rough, with each of the horny plates raised as a sort of flat pyramid. The wood turtle spends much of its time on land in woods and pastures during the summer, returning to swampy regions in the fall to hibernate.

The map turtle gets its name from an irregular network of yellowish lines on its back shell resembling a road map. Strictly a water dweller, this turtle is fond of basking, and is mildly pugnacious when cornered.

Having a somewhat cantankerous character is the musk turtle. When he envisions himself in danger, this little turtle spews a strong musky odor which has earned him the nickname "stink-pot." At the same time, he opens his jaws widely and hisses. He seldom bites. The musk turtle sticks closely to the bottom of ponds and lakes. An elongated body and frequent line-like red spot behind the eye help to identify the rare slider turtle which is thought to have been rather recently introduced in this state.

All of these turtles are believed to be edible, but the box and wood turtles should be ruled out during seasons when their flesh may possibly be contaminated from eating poisonous mushrooms. The soft-shell is probably the most prized for eating while the snapper runs a close second. The map and Blandings turtles are good for table use, but are not marketed while the painted, spotted, and slider turtles are usually bypassed as food because of their small size. The musk turtle fails to whet but the hardest of appetites because of its pungent odor.

Blood spots in chicken eggs are due to heredity, say Michigan State University poultry specialists.

By NICK PRAKKEN, Manager WHEN STORMS, fires or floods strike, people depend on the telephone to carry urgent—often life-saving—messages. At most Michigan Bell central offices we keep "stand-by" generators or storage batteries that can be used at a moment's notice to supply power needed to maintain phone service until the emergency is over.

This extra "dependability insurance" is a good example of the way your telephone company plans ahead so you'll always have phone service when you need it.

NOT ALL our customers get their telephone bills at the same time of the month. Here's the answer: issuing bills throughout the month spreads the work load, keeping our employees who prepare bills busy during the whole month. This makes most efficient use of billing equipment and also spreads the work load more evenly at bill payment offices. You're served more promptly than you'd be if every bill came due on the same day.

ONE OF THE ways the Telephone Company keeps the cost of your phone service low is by figuring how many calls will be made at any given time. The volume of calls varies with the time of day, the day of the week, the weather and the season. Our studies tell us how many people we need to meet each day's expected work load. Thus there's no wasted manpower that would add to the cost of your service. When emergencies such as storms increase calls, we can quickly bring in extra people. That's why your telephone is always ready to serve you, 24 hours a day.

Private Lands Posted With 'No Hunting' Signs Still Open to Owners

Lansing—Private lands posted with "no hunting" signs remain open to their owners and invited guests for sport during Michigan's regular game seasons, according to E. E. Tucker, head of the Conservation Department's law enforcement program.

Tucker reports that a surprising number of landowners have the mistaken idea that once these signs are up, their lands are off limits to hunting by everyone, including themselves.

He adds that the Department would like to see as much private land left open to public hunting as possible, but it respects the rights of landowners to post "no hunting" signs.

Sportsmen are urged, of course, to heed these signs. They may help their own cause for future years by "asking the landowner first" before taking to the woods and fields where lands are not posted against public hunting.

Federal income tax rules on this point are quite clear, Director Nixon said. Auto or truck lease payments are deductible only if they represent ordinary and necessary expenses of and are directly attributable to the operation of a trade or business, the agency explained.

Under no circumstances are such lease payments deductible to the extent they represent personal use by a taxpayer, such as for vacation trips or driving to and from his place of business or employment.

No deduction will be allowed for so-called lease expenses which, in fact, constitute payments toward the purchase price of autos or trucks, Nixon said. If the lease payments are so arranged as to constitute advance rental, such payments must be duly apportioned over the entire rental period.

Providing housing for retired teachers in Michigan is the aim of a proposed retirement village, named "Meha Village" which has been organized by the Michigan Education Home Association. To be built near Ann Arbor, the village is designed to establish housing facilities for retired personnel of Michigan public schools and colleges. Initially about 500 persons will be accommodated by the village which is scheduled to be completed in the fall of 1965. "Meha Village" will provide the resident with recreational, civic, cultural, and educational opportunities along with such physical benefits as complete medical care which will be available through the University of Michigan hospital and Medical school.

Furniture Refinishing

by BOB WILKIN

Our first four articles got your table stripped, the cracks filled and knots shellacked. Now we're ready for sanding. Don't fall into the let's-get-this-part-over-with-in-a-hurry trap. No amount of varnish or paint can cover up an off-the-cuff sanding job.

Stock up on plenty of fine, medium fine and very fine sandpapers. (If you'd like to set yourself apart from the common herd, call them "coated abrasives" rather than sandpapers. There is no sand in today's sandpapers.)

Q. Any shortcuts

A. Most hardware stores carry a hand sander for flat surfaces that utilizes a strip of roll sandpaper. A workable substitute is a home-made job consisting of a block of wood with sandpaper wrapped around it.

And for curved surfaces too conceive to be worked with a rubbing block, a piece of sandpaper wrapped around a broom handle or other dowel-like piece does the job. Rungs of chairs, slats, etc., can be sanded by using a long strip of sandpaper in the same manner that you use a shoe-shine cloth.

If you are as punctilious as we all should be, you may wish to finish the sanding operation by rubbing with oil and one of the papers specifically manufactured for that purpose—or with oil and polishing-grade steel wool.

Q. I'd like to make this old table look as really antique as possible. Is there anything I can do?

A. Yes. In the later articles on finishing we'll get into one part of the antiquing technique. The other part you can do right now. With your course, medium and fine grade sandpapers, round off the corners and edges in an irreg-

That is rather rough, but we Christians would do well to face up to the truth in it."

WEDDING PHOTOS

Mrs. Frederick A. Weber and Sandra K. Buehler were united in marriage at a ceremony performed at 11 a.m. Saturday by the Rev. Fr. John Weber of Lansing, a cousin of the bridegroom.

Approximately 150 guests were present for the rites at St. Mary's Catholic church, including friends and relatives from Lansing, Jackson, Ann Arbor and Detroit.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Leo L. Buehler of 350 Elm St. and Mrs. William J. Weber of 227 Congdon St. and the late Mr. Weber.

For her wedding the bride wore a floor-length gown of white slipper-satin. The fitted bodice featured long sleeves, ending in pointed-outline at the wrists, and a square neckline accented with re-embroidered alençon lace. The pleated, back-cummerbund had self-material roses at the waistline and the skirt extended into a cathedral train. A crown of aurore-borealis crystals and pearls held her fingertip-length veil of English illusion. Her ensemble was completed with a diamond pendant, a gift from the bridegroom, and a cascade bouquet of white carnations centered with white baby orchids.

Phyllis Weber, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor. Her bell-skirted gown with shirred back panels and two self-material roses marking the back waistline, was of royal blue tulle. The bodice had a scoop neckline and three-quarter sleeves. Carnations tinted to match her gown centered her cascade bouquet of white carnations. Her crown-shaped headpiece was of royal blue velvet trimmed with pearls and a matching blue veil.

The bridesmaids, Mary K. Weber, another sister of the bridegroom, and Janet Bernath wore gowns identical to that of the maid of honor; their bouquets, however, were of all white carnations.

The bride's mother in a princess style jacket dress of gold brocade, wore brown accessories while the bridegroom's mother, in beige and green floral pattern brocade, chose beige and green accessories.

Each had a corsage of gardenias.

Brothers of the bridegroom, Robert L. Weber and William C. Weber, served as best man and usher, respectively. Also assisting as an usher was Donald G. Atkinson.

Child Study Club Entertain Guests

Dr. Chester H. Loucks of Ann Arbor, associate director of the Ann Arbor Council of Churches Youth For Understanding program and four high school exchange students, were guests at Tuesday evening's Child Study club meeting at the home of Mrs. Theodore Faist.

Two of the students are from Germany, one is from Denmark and the other from Sweden. They are Elisabet Cervin of Gothenburg, Sweden, the only girl in the group; Ulmut Schmitt-Siegel of Duisburg, Germany, in the lower Rhine country; Joe Wudtke of Lubeck, Germany, near the Baltic Sea; and Claes Christens, of Odense, Denmark.

Introduced by Dr. Loucks, each of the students gave interesting information about their home schools and their own country, including its geographical features, and made comparisons with what they have experienced and seen in the United States. All said they were enjoying their stay and that they were happy to be here.

One of their observations was particularly thought-provoking. All agreed that the United States did not fit in with their preconceived ideas gained from seeing American movies. The movies, they said, give the old figurative impression of "streets paved with gold," signifying luxurious living for everyone.

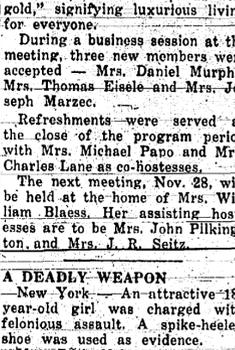

During a business session at the meeting, three new members were accepted — Mrs. Daniel Murphy, Mrs. Thomas Eisele and Mrs. Joseph Marzec.

Refreshments were served at the close of the program period with Mrs. Michael Papo and Mrs. Charles Lane as co-hostesses.

The next meeting, Nov. 28, will be held at the home of Mrs. William Blaess. Her assisting hostesses are to be Mrs. John Pilkington and Mrs. J. R. Seitz.

JOURNALISM CLUB

Under the direction of Mr. Morrison and Mrs. Eckstrom, the Journalism club has been busy getting out the school paper the "Bulldog" and preparing the Hi-Light for The Standard. A new system is being used this year for getting assignments in. Each member has his name on a file card which is turned in with his assignment each week. If more than three assignments are not turned in, the member is out of the club. The Hi-Light this year is edited by five appointed students from the club instead of various members. These systems are proving very effective toward a bigger and better "Bulldog" and more interesting "Hi-Light."

RUSSIAN CLASS

The 1951-52 school year is the first year that Russian is being offered as a regular high school course. Russian has been taught at evening classes for two years prior to this one. The first six weeks of Russian class served to provide students with a grammatically correct, conversational background. After a spoken background, the students began with written Russian during the second six weeks. The class uses the language laboratory on Wednesday for conversational drill. On Fridays the class has a session on Russian culture and geography. The remaining days in class are spent on dictation and conversation. Through the effective use of class participation, and a Soviet version of this week's "Man on the Street," first-year Russian students are learning that the Russian language is neither mysterious, nor difficult as one might think.

HOME EC. II
Many people think home economics is just learning how to cook and sew but home ec. is much more than just cooking and sewing. In home economics girls learn how to handle almost any situation as a home-maker. In second-year home economics classes, students have just finished studying home management, period furniture, and interior decoration, flower arrangement. In home management the girls learned how to save time and energy, doing daily household tasks. Each girl was required to make a time and motion study which is a study to try to find a way to cut down on the number of steps and the amount of time necessary to do a certain task. When period furniture was studied, the students learned to recognize the various characteristics of the furniture used in all the periods from Jacobean to the modern furniture used today. Home ec. II students are now making booklets on period furniture, giving an example for each period. Home ec. II classes are also studying home nursing how. They are learning the symptoms of various diseases and how to handle a sick person. They are also learning what to do in case of an emergency such as an accident. Along with sewing and cooking the girls will study good grooming, nutrition, personal health and other things. Each girl is also required to have a home experience which is something done at home from which she will learn something new. From this I am sure you can see home economics is more than just cooking and sewing.

CHEERLEADERS

The cheerleaders have been a great credit to the school during the past football season for their constant leadership in school-spirit and undying pep shown at all Bulldog games. FUTURE TEACHERS WORKSHOP

Future Teachers club members with their advisor, Mr. Sanborn, attended a Future Teacher Association workshop at Eastern Michigan University, Saturday, Nov. 4. They left at 8 a.m. Saturday and returned at 4 p.m. As soon as they arrived, they were served snacks of orange juice and doughnuts. After this they went to the main lecture hall where they heard a speech by Dr. William J. Crane, Associate Dean of Men, on "The Changing Status of Teachers." After this FTA members went to a discussion group. The groups were: special education, secondary education, FTA activities, or a general college information class. When one group was over the members then proceeded to another group. After this a luncheon was served in McKenny Hall Ballroom. After lunch FTA members were allowed to tour the campus of Eastern Michigan or do anything else that they wanted to do. The afternoon was completed with a football game. Eastern Michigan played Southern Illinois and lost, 14-20. A good time was reported by all.

At Tuesday's meeting, Girl Scouts of Troop 48 discussed the subject of helping older people at the Methodist Home and then voted on the question. The project was approved. The girls are also thinking about helping Albert Warnhoff who is ill. They would help him with the toys he makes for children.

At the Nov. 13 meeting of Girl Scout Troop 148, several of the girls passed requirements for badges and then a game was played. Later Mrs. Brice Graham, at whose home the meeting was held, served home-made cookies. Girl Scouts of Troop 148 who served as babysitters during the Troop 25-Boy Scouts Court of Honor are Kathy Foster, Julie Rosebush, Lee Spaulding, Sharon Sutter, Penny Graham and Carol Foye.

At their Nov. 6 meeting, made arrangements to act as baby sitters the evening of the family meeting of Boy Scout Troop 25 Monday evening, Nov. 13. The girls helped stuff Christmas Seal letters (more than 2,000) at two meetings, one at the home of Mrs. Robert Foye when the girls had a Halloween party and one at the home of Mrs. Brice Graham where all meetings are now being held.

ANNUAL STAFF

The Annual Staff, under the direction of Mr. LaGoe, the advisor, are lining up the pictures of the advertisers; those will be turned in to Sherry Frisinger, the business manager. Sometime in spring the group will also organize papers with the pictures of the underclassmen. When this is finished, the plans will be sent to a company that sets the information in print. The Annual staff is deciding on a book cover from samples from Mr. Zimmerman who also sells class rings for the Balne Co. The Seniors of the club are making up sayings for under the Senior pictures. The rest of the members are working on sayings for the members of the Faculty and Administration. The students you have seen taking pictures at the football games are Bill Allan and Tom Penhallagen. These pictures are for the Annual Sports Review. The boys will also be taking pictures at the basketball, track, and at any other sports events. They are also taking candid shots of the students, the school, activities, clubs, and all other things that may be of interest. The Annual staff is doing a fine job for their school. We thank them for it.

HI-LITE STAFF

Last year the Hi-Lite was written by the Journalism Club members but this year the Hi-Lite is being written by a staff of five members. The members are as follows: Sharon Allan, editor, Doreen Howard, Hila Weir, Joyce Mahar, and Janice Wood. The Journalism Club would like to commend these girls on their good work.

BUZY BEAVERS 4-H CLUB
The regular meeting of the Busy Beavers 4-H club was held at the home of Terry, Duane and Carol Schoonover. Ruth Hannewald, the presiding vice-president, called the meeting to order. 4-H certificates and pins were passed out to their rightful owners. After the meeting the 4-H'ers enjoyed a tuxyride followed by a wiener roast.

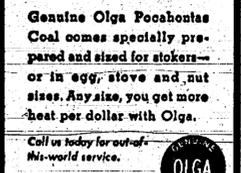

An informal sewing meeting was held after the wiener roast to plan the coming 4-H sewing year. It was decided to buy material and patterns as a group as has been done in the past.

A special meeting of leaders and officers was held a few Sundays ago. The 4-H program for the coming year was planned and Helen Hannewald, the hostess, served refreshments after all the business had been disposed of.

A leaders banquet was held at Crispell Lake last Wednesday. George Liebeck and Marion Liebeck, our former administrative leaders, were honored with a 15-year pin. Helen Hannewald, our present administrative leader, was honored with a 10-year pin. Our Junior Leaders are Diane Reynolds, Dennis Armstrong, and Norman Hannewald.
