President Recommends Legislation To Help Nation's Railroad Systems

President Kennedy, in a special message to Congress on transportation, told that body what everyone in and out of Washington has known at least since the nationalization of the railroads during World War I—that a superabundance of Federal regulation "shackles and distorts" the industry.

Constructively, he asked legislation that would:

1. Eliminate "eventually" controls over inter-city passenger rates except for a maximum rate ceiling.
2. Give all carriers the rate-making freedom on bulk commodities now enjoyed by water carriers exclusively.
3. Extend to all carriers the freedom now enjoyed by motor carriers and freight forwarders from regulation of minimum freight rates on agricultural and fishery products.

These recommendations are all to the good. Altogether, they should be helpful to all transportation, rail, highway, water and air. Furthermore, they constitute the first indication from the White House of any practical concern for economics and the free enterprise system.

In recognizing the need for basic reformation of the chaotic patchwork of Federal controls and in declaring that less Federal regulation and subsidization is in the long run a prime requisite of a healthy inter-city transportation network, the message strikes a surprising and cheering note reminiscent of a braver and more self-reliant day.

But aside from the three points above, there was little to cheer for. The President's request for a $500 million, three-year Federal aid program for expanded public mass transportation in urban areas was right back in the New Frontier groove of politics as usual.

There was vague and general reference to the responsibility of labor in implementing the recommended changes. The President did not urge upon Congress any new legislation in this area. Nor did he mention the recommendations of the Presidential Railroad Commission on modernizing antiquated and ruinous work rules.

Let the Congress act with all speed on measures to spur competition among the various carriers. But let the lawmakers consider, too, the need for strength and progress in every form of transportation.

Hindsight Is Always Better in Any Business, Especially in Foreign Policy

Former U.S. Ambassador and diplomatic trouble shooter Robert Murphy said recently he had recommended the United States break the Russian blockade of Berlin with force in 1948. He said, also, that General Lucius Clay, the commandant of the city at that time, also made the same recommendation.

Murphy, in a speech in the state of New York, said our timidity at that time encouraged the Russians to carry out aggression in Korea. He said our timidity in not backing the rebel attack on Cuba last year encouraged the Communists to push the Berlin crisis to the brink of war again.

Murphy believes the Russians, and the Communists all over the world, are encouraged by every sign of Western timidity and weakness. He believes they would not have dared oppose us with force if we had opened up the road to Berlin in 1948.

Today the question is a different one. But the principle involved is the same. It is likely that today the Communists would not passively accept any use of force by the U.S. Army in Germany—to open up supply routes to Berlin. The situation has been too long as it is, and East Germany is now in the Communist view—a sovereign country.

A minority party is one that thinks up ideas that the other one can steal to keep itself in power.

MICHIGAN MIRROR

By Elmer E. White, Secretary, Michigan Press Association

State Government spending causes a controversy every year without exception.

Every year, also, there are cries to "plug up the spending hole" of the money barrel and we may not have to add new taxes at the other end.

A proposal which gained little note this year was designed to plug the spending hole in the barrel. It was proposed informally by Sen. Lynn O. Francis, a Republican from Midland, but made little impact because of timing.

Francis tried to get attention for his "cut the budget" proposals at the same time a bitter partisan fight on taxes was in the works. The Midland Senator gave his colleagues suggestions of ways to reduce the state spending by a maximum of $131 million.

Francis said he was serious about all his proposals, although some suggestions drew remarks that he was going to a lot of trouble to be sarcastic.

Ideas which might raise serious consideration in the future involve about $5 million in savings, but budget writers feel every "little bit" helps.

A $1 million saving could be realized if bookkeeping and accounting systems were improved. Francis said, there are now about 21 separate computer systems in state government for bookkeeping. The Senator said reduction of this to three systems could do the same job more economically.

An "emergency appropriations commission" within the legislature has received a $100,000 appropriation each year, but has had no expenditures in the last three years. Dropping this, as Francis recommends, would result only in a "paper saving" however, because it is this kind of community accomplishment which we will recognize in the new award competition.

Michigan Week, the ninth annual "brag week" in the state, will add a new feature this year for the May 20-26 celebration.

In past years, there has been an award for the product which contributed most to making Michigan known throughout the nation.

This year, some community organization will receive an "Achievement of the Year" award. Organizations of a community nature, serving a town, village, county or larger area, will compete for the prize.

"Many community organizations have made outstanding contributions to the state by attracting new business or industry or otherwise having advanced or improved the area they serve," said Milton Kendrick, chairman of the awards unit of the Michigan Week planning committees.

"It is this kind of community accomplishment which we will recognize in the new award competition."

Somebody said once the difference between a statesman and a politician was the statesman tries to make history and the politician tries to rewrite it. It seems to me what we been getting lately is mostly a rewrite job.

Per instant, I was reading last week where one Senator told the Congress taxes has gone as high in this country as it's safe for them to go. Now I'd call that Senator a statesman. If he can peg taxes permanent at any level, he has made history. But, for advocating such treason, he'll get thrown in the doghouse by the politicians afore Congress adjourns.

We were discussing these matters at the country store Saturday night and the fellows were all agreed that television has spoiled our politicians. Clem Webster allowed as how, when he was a boy, a politician would get up at the meeting and give you some old-fashioned, long-tail oratory, put on a spell-binder for two or three hours. Like the hood skirt of them days, says Clem, his speech covered everything and touched nothing. But nowadays, he claims they sit up and give you 10 minutes between soap commercials, and the speech still don't touch nothing, says Clem.

Well, Mister Editor, I see where things has got so big in the Pentagon building that the Government Printing Office has had to put out a special telephone directory for that one building. The piece said the directory had 200 pages and listed over 10,000 telephones. And I'll bet they ain't a party line in the house.

Yours truly,
Uncle Lew.

Parents Group Agreed To Work With School Board

A group of approximately 45 parents, called together by the Board of Education of the Chelsea School District as a Citizens' Committee for Schools, will hold a meeting Monday, April 23, at 8 p.m. in the cafeteria of the Chelsea High School.

The group, representing a cross-section of all people living in the school district, was organized to serve as a source of information to and from the Board of Education and the people of the district—and at the same time, to express the board's own ideas and feelings on school problems.

The first meeting of the group was held April 13, at 8 p.m. at the home of Mrs. R. R. Bookner, secretary of the Board of Education. At that time, the group was asked to prepare a list of questions to be presented to the board at the next meeting. The list of questions was prepared and presented at the meeting.

The group is now working on a list of questions to be presented to the board at the next meeting. The list of questions is as follows:

Questions, Answers Given On School Millage Issue

Some of the frequently raised questions and answers related to the requested two-mill operational levy which will be voted on May 14 by the electors of the Chelsea School District are listed here.

Q. Did the seven board members agree unanimously that two operational mills were needed to prevent the school district from operating at a deficit budget?

A. Yes.

Q. What is the main reason for the request for the two mills?

A. To prevent a deficit budget operation.

Q. The statement in last week's Chelsea Standard stated that the electors could vote two mills for operation yet decrease the millage by two mills. How is this possible?

A.

	1961-2	1962-3
Operation	11.5	10.5
No. Elem. Debt Ret.	1.0	1.0
H.S. Debt Ret. Fund	4.5	4.5
	17.0	16.0

*8.5 allocated by tax alloc. board 2.0 voted by electors.

One mill decrease is in the operation budget (11.5 to 10.5) and the other mill is the one that will not have to be levied on the No. Elem. Debt.

Q. The 1961-62 budget included a $33,000 deficit from previous years. Has this deficit been paid off (in full)?

A. Yes. This deficit has been paid and the school district will not be in debt at the end of the fiscal year June 30, 1962.

Q. What is included in the improvement of the junior high curriculum?

A. Typing, industrial arts, home economics, art.

CHELSEA, MICHIGAN, THURSDAY, APRIL 26, 1962

"ACROSS" 7-14

Four Top 4-H Youth Touring Washington, D.C.

Four of Michigan's future leaders are joining 200 similar delegates from each of the 50 states and Puerto Rico in the Nation's Capital, April 21 to 27 for an unsurpassed opportunity to study and appreciate their country's heritage.

The youth have been selected to share this rich experience and take its values to the 2,200,000 4-H club boys and girls they represent in every nook and cranny of the land. They were selected because they've excelled in citizenship, leadership, and community development; and in scientific farming, homemaking, and other learn-by-doing projects that make up the 4-H program.

Michigan delegates are Suzanne Garner of Tuscola county, Dianne Phillips, Barry, Richard Halst, Washenaw, and Lewis Bordenau of Gogebic in the Upper Peninsula.

Miss Garner is a freshman at Michigan State, Dianne is enrolled at Western Michigan University while Bordenau is a freshman at Adrian College. Halst is completing his senior year in high school. State 4-H club leaders Dr. J. Watson, Marie Wolfe and Dr. Russell Mawby accompanied the group to the nation's capital.

Delegates who receive the state's highest 4-H honors will live at the National 4-H Center, which 4-Hers and their friends have built. They'll start Easter Sunday with a sunrise service, be absorbed and attentive visitors at the Washington churches of their choice. They'll consider the price of freedom many have paid as they go to the Tomb of the Unknowns in Arlington National Cemetery. They'll get a look in person at America's space program from officials of the National Aeronautics and Space Agency, observe and study spacecraft models, miniature rockets and missiles, satellites and other exhibits that make more real the Space Age into which we are fast moving.

"They'll fret and worry with the rest of us about the challenges ahead. But in typical 4-H, 'Make the Best Better' spirit, they will talk and plan about the life ahead—for them and their generation."

They and their leaders will think about how they can further adapt 4-H projects to better prepare the 85 to 90 percent of farm youth who will have to look beyond the farm for jobs. Leaders and parents like blue ribbon calves and crops, but are most interested in raising blue ribbon boys and girls.

Then stimulated by what they see and do, experience and learn in the nation's capital, they and the delegates will go home to build toward excellence... on our American heritage!

DELEGATES KEEP IN TOUCH—Constitutional Convention delegates who leave the floor of a conference can still keep close tab on activity in the convention chamber through the closed circuit television receivers that are stationed throughout Convention Hall. Confering in front of one of the monitors are William Suzore (D-Lincoln Park), Robert Blandford (R-Grand Rapids) and Raymond Plank (R-Ludington).

INDUSTRIAL ARTS OPEN HOUSE—This was the scene in the metal shop at the industrial arts department open house at Chelsea High school Wednesday evening, April 18. The television receiver, provided for the occasion by Frigid Products, showed pictures of students as they gave special demonstrations of the various projects and pieces of equipment. The small oblong-shaped apparatus at the right beside the receiver, is known as a "mixer," broadcasting the voice and picture simultaneously. The student lecturer, at right, is John Widmayer who told about arc welding.

HOWARD DORR, at right, was lecturing in the woodworking shop at Chelsea High school on features of the equipment known as a "joiner" when this photo was taken at the high school's industrial arts open house Wednesday evening, April 18. At left is Bob Daines of Detroit, operating the television camera which channeled Dor's picture over a closed television circuit to the TV receiver in the metal shop. Dor was one of a number of students who gave descriptive lectures and demonstrations during the open house event.

Open House Held Wednesday By Industrial Arts Dept.

A closed circuit television demonstration was a high point of interest at the open house held Wednesday evening, April 18, in the industrial arts department at Chelsea High school under the leadership of Jack Musser, electronics instructor.

Other faculty members assisting included Robert Taylor, Tom Hemminger and Stephen Hayden. The television camera, provided by Howard & Smith of Detroit, was operated by Robert Daines, a company representative. A special piece of equipment known as a "mixer" channeled the sound and picture into a television receiver for a live broadcast of the activities. The receiving set was provided by Frigid Products.

Musser gave the lecture on this phase of the demonstrations. Students presented lectures and demonstrations on all machines and work areas of the industrial arts curriculum in which 160 boys are currently enrolled.

Eight boys had been assigned to demonstrate mechanical drawing throughout the evening: Larry Williams, Tom Eisenbeiser, Warren Poruth, Bill Coltre, Bill Spier, Curtis Farley, Bill Dettling and Keith Dams. While two others, Michael Cross and Gary Cattell, worked on advanced drawing.

In the electronics laboratory eight students participated in addition to the lecture by Instructor Musser on the intricacies of the closed circuit television demonstration.

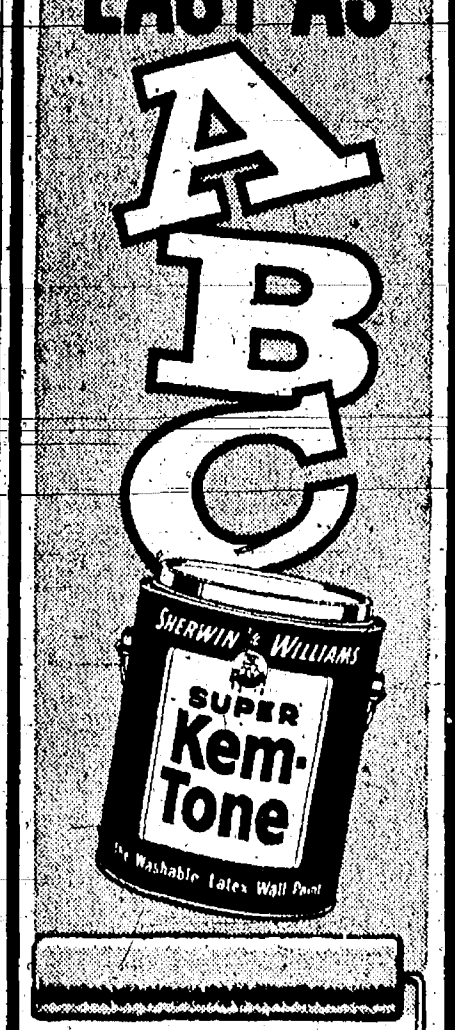

Electrical work demonstrations were assigned to Mike Balze, Richard Reed, Dennis Stoffer, Jeffrey Spaulding, Bill Altenberndt and Gary White, while electronics class lectures were assigned to Eric Knisely and Gerald Schiller. Paul Huber and Robert Reed acted as hosts in Shop I and Mike Balze and Richard Reed served in a similar capacity for Shop II.

Following the demonstrations and lectures coffee and cookies were served by the students of the industrial arts department.

Open House Held Wednesday By Industrial Arts Dept.

A closed circuit television demonstration was a high point of interest at the open house held Wednesday evening, April 18, in the industrial arts department at Chelsea High school under the leadership of Jack Musser, electronics instructor.

Other faculty members assisting included Robert Taylor, Tom Hemminger and Stephen Hayden.

The television camera, provided by Howard & Smith of Detroit, was operated by Robert Daines, a company representative. A special mixer was used to combine the sound and picture into a television receiver for a live broadcast of the activities. The receiving set was provided by Frigid Products.

Musser gave the lecture on this phase of the demonstrations. Students presented lectures and demonstrations on all machines and work areas of the industrial arts curriculum in which 160 boys are currently enrolled.

Eight boys had been assigned to demonstrate mechanical drawing throughout the evening.

Larry Williams, Tom Eisenbeiser, Warren Porath, Bill Coltre, Bill Speer, Curtis Farley, Bill Dettling and Keith Haab—while two others, Michael Cross and Gary Cattel, worked on advanced drawing.

In the woodworking area, the boys who lectured and demonstrated included James Swanson, Glenn Schiller, Frank White, Harry Hadley, Tim Whitesall, Gary Carr, Craig Kuhl, Dennis White, Ronald Weiss, Don Dickel, man, Bob Snyder, Jim Schiller, Bruce Hoover, Bill Bowling, Richard Reed, Howard Dorr, Ron Smith and Darryl Carr.

Their work was in art metal, art metal spinning, plastic, wood in the, woodworking, shapers, table saw, joiner, hand saw and drill press.

In the metalworking area the demonstrations and lectures ranged from sheet metal and bench metal to power mechanics, acetylene welding, arc welding, forging, metal lathe, shaper, milling machine and grinder.

In the electronics laboratory eight students participated in addition to the lecture by Instructor Musser on the intricacies of the closed circuit television demonstration.

Electrical work demonstrations were assigned to Mike Baize, Richard Reed, Dennis Stoffer, Jeffrey Spaulding, Bill Altenberndt and Gary White, while electronics class lectures were assigned to Eric Knisely and Gerald Schiller.

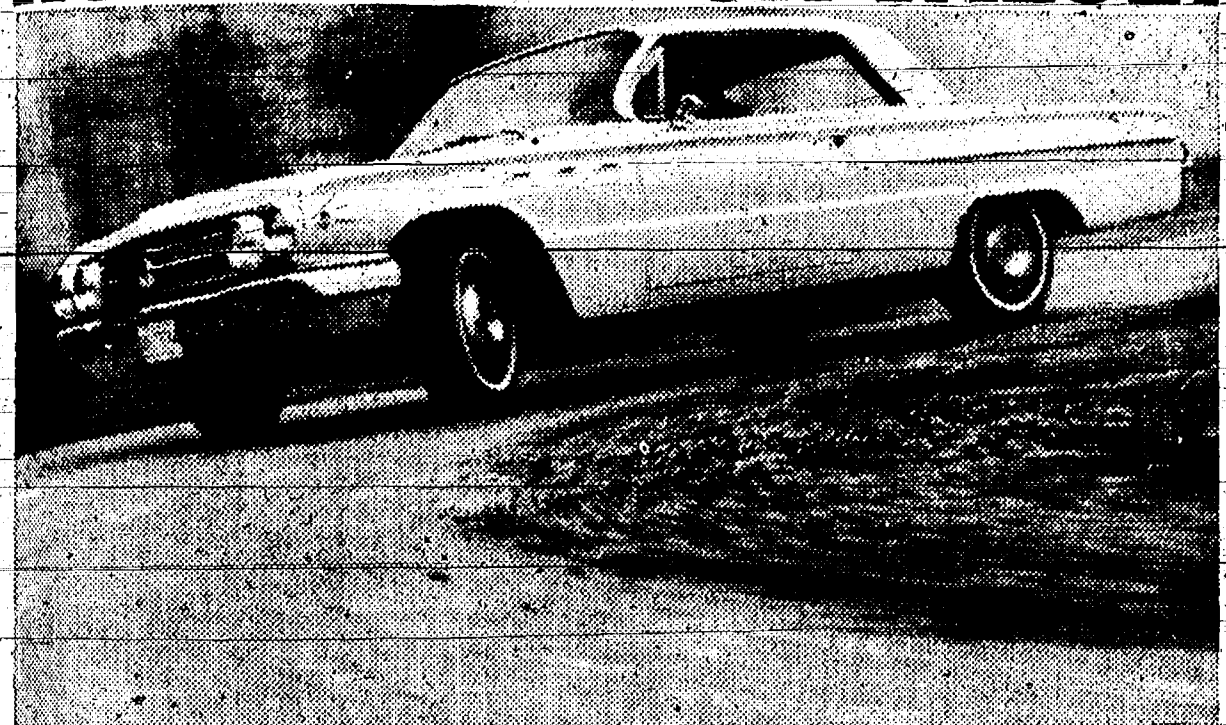

Paul Huber and Robert Reed acted as hosts in Shop I and Mike Baize and Richard Reed served in a similar capacity for Shop II.

Following the demonstrations and lectures coffee and cookies were served by the students of the industrial arts department.

It happened 100 YEARS ago
The oldest incorporated trade association in the country, the United States Brewers Association, was organized in 1862... the same year that

IN MICHIGAN, farmers were harvesting badly needed grain for the Union armies. Michigan was one of the Union's important suppliers during the Civil War. And, after the war, the State's grain farmers found a good market with Michigan's pioneer brewers.

For even then, beer was the traditional beverage of moderation. Beer still provides enjoyment for folks in Michigan and a good living for the many employees and suppliers of the Brewing Industry.

TODAY, in its centennial year, the United States Brewers Association still works constantly to assure maintenance of high standards of quality and propriety wherever beer and ale are served.

Program topic for the evening was "Let's Have a Look at Pathology."
The doctor explained a special cancer detection project in which he is very much interested. Certain cancers which respond to a particular test are 100 percent curable, he explained, emphasizing the importance of early examination and diagnosis.

Following the tour, club members went to a Jackson restaurant for refreshments and a social hour before returning to Chelsea.
The next club meeting, May 8, will be at the home of Mrs. Clark Warren. Cashesses are to be Mrs. Thomas Hunt and Mrs. Lloyd Schneider.
