

Gen. Herbert Vogel Lauded for Service to Nation in TVA Post

The resignation of Herbert D. Vogel as chairman of the Tennessee Valley Authority became effective June 30, after he had completed almost eight years in the post to which he was appointed by former President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

General Vogel, whose term would not expire until May 15, 1960, tendered his resignation to President John F. Kennedy, stating that he had found in his work for the government agency at Knoxville a "matchless spirit of public service and a standard of performance difficult to equal."

In a letter of resignation, General Vogel stated that he was proud of his affiliation with TVA.

In President Kennedy's reply, he accepted Vogel's resignation and thanked him for his "dedicated service to the nation."

"Your skill and leadership have helped to create an understanding of the accomplishments of the American people and the TVA," he wrote.

Vogel's letter of resignation was submitted to President Kennedy early in May, explaining that he felt it was a good time for him to leave TVA when "as I think, things are on an even keel and going well."

In discussing his resignation with newsmen, General Vogel was quoted as follows: "I think 42 years of government service is long enough for anyone and I believe it is time to look for opportunities ahead."

The Knoxville News-Sentinel, in a story of Vogel's retirement, said he "has been one of the great—if not the greatest—TVA chairman."

In a resume of his work as TVA chairman, the paper stated, "It was under General Vogel's administration that the Tennessee Valley Authority threw off all suspicion that it was just a 'New Deal' agency and proved it was an institution that will survive no matter which party is in power nationally."

"He and his board associates had the colossal task of making TVA virtually self-supporting instead of having multi-millions of dollars annually appropriated by Congress. General Vogel contributed vastly toward enactment of an amendment to the TVA Act to permit TVA to sell its own bonds for power plant expansion. Since then TVA has gotten only a nominal few million dollars annually from Congress to support functions that are legitimate for Government expenditure."

The story continues, "General Vogel took the lead in a great do-it-yourself movement; he encouraged peoples and communities not to lean on TVA with hands out, but rather to organize co-operatively to capitalize on their own natural resources with TVA's help. He was the disciple of the theory that TVA helps those who help themselves."

The story was concluded with the statement, "It is good to know that General Vogel's plan now is to set up offices as a consulting engineer here (Knoxville, Tenn.) which means that he and Mrs. Vogel will continue to be valued and effective citizens of this community."

Other Tennessee newspapers—the Chattanooga Times, the Memphis Commercial Appeal and the Nashville Banner, commented editorially, all expressing regret of the Tennessee Valley and its people at the news of General Vogel's retirement.

The Nashville Banner editorial comment began with the statement "As a distinguished engineer and public servant, General Vogel has served his country well—in uniform and out—for 42 years. He has rounded out that career with eight years at the helm of the TVA directorate. His retirement occasions wide acknowledgment of an over-all job well done."

Tennessee's Governor Ellington, Chattanooga Mayor F. E. O'Connell and others joined in expressing regret that Vogel was resigning.

Senator Estes Kefauver, commenting on Vogel's resignation, said he had served "as a capable chairman and an able executive" and added, "We all regret to see him leave and hope he will continue to make his home in Tennessee, where he has become an integral part of our community."

Tennessee Representative Joe E. Evans told newsmen he remembered that Vogel was "not the strongest believer in the TVA at the outset but became impressed with its services and contributions and became one of its strongest advocates." He gave good service to the agency."

Another Tennessee newspaper, the Knoxville Journal, broached the possibility that "if political opportunity offers" Vogel would "make a great governor of Tennessee."

The article stated "His name is known favorably to more citizens of Tennessee than at least two-out of the three candidates for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination."

"From the standpoint of political affiliation, there is nothing in his record to indicate support of either Democrats or Republicans. He was an appointee of former President Eisenhower, yet he has headed the operation of a bureaucracy created at the instance of the late Franklin D. Roosevelt, and has managed to avoid all the pitfalls of partisan politics."

The story is concluded with the statement that "as a fusion candidate, qualified to be one from standpoint of his established appeal to both parties in the state, General Vogel could easily be a formidable opponent for the winner in the August Democratic primary. The possibilities in this situation must have occurred to a good many Tennesseans besides us."

For two years prior to his retirement from the Army, Aug. 31, 1954, General Vogel was division engineer of the Dallas, Texas, headquarters of the Army Engineers of the Southwest Division.

He had previously held important Army posts in the Panama Canal Zone and in various parts of the United States in connection with his work in hydraulic engineering.

He had received his engineering degree from the University of Michigan; graduated from the Military Academy at West Point in 1924 and subsequently earned additional degrees in other schools in the United States and abroad.

During World War II, General Vogel served in the Pacific Theatre.

Following his appointment in 1954 to the TVA, congressmen from Tennessee, in public statements, said he was "unusually well qualified" for the position and "Tennessee Valley people might consider themselves very fortunate to have him head the Authority."

Comments of present senators and congressmen from Tennessee being in the same vein, indicate that the general fulfilled the predictions made at the time of his appointment.

A brief resume of his career states that his first assignment for the Army was at Fort Belvoir, Va., in the Army Engineer School.

In 1927 he went to the University of California for his master's degree in engineering and then studied at the Berlin Technical University in Germany on an exchange scholarship. Later, he earned another U. of M. degree in experimental hydraulics.

Other appointments during his Army career included director of the Waterways Experiment Station at Vicksburg, Miss.; Command and General Staff School at Fort Leavenworth, Kans.; instructor Fort Belvoir, Va., teaching river and harbor engineering and flood control; district engineer in Pittsburgh where he was responsible for constructing 10 large flood-control dams and operating the navigation system of the Ohio, Monongahela and Allegheny rivers; participated during World War II in building TNT plants, airfields, cantonments and industrial plants, holding logistical commands in Australia, New Guinea, the Philippines and Japan; district engineer in Buffalo, N. Y., where he built flood-control dams and directed maintenance and development of all harbors on Lake Erie and Lake Ontario; maintenance engineer for the Panama Canal Zone and, in 1950, named lieutenant governor for the Canal Zone and was also director and vice-president of the Panama Canal Co.

From the Canal Zone he went to the position at Dallas where he was in charge of civil and military construction in eight states and served for two years as chairman of the Arkansas-White-Red-River basins interagency committee of federal and state agencies engaged in developmental soil and water projects affecting one-eleventh of the United States.

Ohio Youth Drowns in Bruin Lake

James H. Fuller, 16-year-old son of the Rev. and Mrs. William Fuller of Marietta, O., drowned late today afternoon at Bruin Lake where the family was vacationing. The drowning occurred near Had Rd., in Lyndon township.

The youth's sister, Alberta, 14, an old, told sheriff's officers she was standing on a dock at the lake when her brother drowned. She said she saw James leave the dock about 100 feet out in the lake and begin swimming toward shore. When he reached a point about 100 feet from shore the girl said he heard her brother shout that he was tired and call for help. Officers said James was taken to the hospital and then taken to Ohio.

The London paper commented that "Hell was carrying on a campaign to put itself on the map as a good place to 'live, work and play' and was offering a prize of 10 pounds."

Chelsea Lanes Re-Opening Under New Management

Chelsea Lanes will re-open Saturday under new management after being closed the past two weeks to permit resurfacing of the bowling lanes.

Improvements also included blacktopping the adjacent parking area.

Olle Johnson who has managed the lanes since they were opened two years ago, has sold out his interest in the business and Edwin Greenleaf, who opened a new service station a short distance south of Chelsea Lanes in April, 1961, has been appointed full-time manager of the lanes, relinquishing management and operation of the service station.

Greenleaf formerly operated a service station at Lima Center.

Johnson will assist at the lanes until Greenleaf completes an 11-day course at the Brunswick School of Management in Chicago, which he will begin Aug. 1. He plans to be prepared to take over complete management of Chelsea Lanes by Aug. 15.

CAP, Inc. Described for Kiwanians

Mrs. Vineta Dickerson, who was active in the formation of CAP, Inc., an organization formed for the purpose of helping handicapped people of the county to be gainfully employed, and John Mader, director of special education for Washtenaw County schools, were guest speakers at the July 9 meeting of the Kiwanis club. They were introduced by the Kiwanis club program chairman for the evening, Floyd Fowler.

Approximately 50 handicapped persons are now benefitting from jobs provided at the CAP factory on Jackson Rd., Ann Arbor, which contracts, on a competitive basis, for work of various kinds suited to the capabilities of the men and women who participate.

Mrs. Dickerson pointed out that CAP has been the successful bidder on jobs for several Chelsea industries.

Mader spoke of the value of the program for handicapped persons, giving them a feeling of being useful while permitting them, as well, to earn wages for their efforts.

Mader mentioned, too, the value of the program as a retraining center.

Out-of-town Kiwanians who attended Monday's meeting were Dr. J. B. Casey of Jackson and Howard Peebles of Ypsilanti.

Also a guest at the meeting was James W. McCready.

Promoted to Three-Star Rank With Assignment

Major General Dwight E. Beach, was promoted, effective July 1, to the three-star rank of lieutenant general and at the same time was assigned as Army Chief of Research and Development. He succeeds General Arthur G. Trudeau whose retirement became effective June 30.

General Beach joined General Trudeau's staff in 1958 and since May, 1961, has served as deputy chief of research and development.

It was pointed out that Army career management officials might be tempted to cite General Beach as a sterling example of how Army training, educational opportunities and progressive assignments prepare talented men for top leadership positions.

With respect to his new responsibilities, General Beach gained valuable experience as Director of the Office of Special Weapons Development, U. S. Continental Army Command. Then came three years as Director of Guided Missiles, Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Military Operations at Army Headquarters in Washington, D. C.

The 54-year-old general started his Army career following graduation from the United States Military Academy in 1932. Prior to World War II he served with various units—horse-drawn field artillery units. Assigned to the Southwest Pacific following Pearl Harbor, he organized and commanded the 167th Field Artillery Battalion, using wild horses purchased in Australia.

The 167th FA Bn. later converted to tractors and General Beach participated with it in the Southwest Pacific campaign, the Philippines and Japan. He also took part in four amphibious assaults at Aitape, Maffin Bay, Wake and Palawan, and in the follow-up phase of amphibious operations in Borneo and Zamboanga.

Since World War II, General Beach has commanded the artillery of the 11th Airborne Division, the artillery of the 46th Infantry Division in Korea, and served as Artillery Officer and Deputy Chief of Staff for Plans and Combat Operations, Eighth United States Army in Korea. In November 1954, he was assigned as Chief of Staff, Eighth Army in Korea.

Before joining General Trudeau's staff in 1958, General Beach served 22 months as commander of the 82nd Airborne Division, Fort Bragg, N. C.

Born in Chelsea, July 20, 1908, the general graduated from Chelsea High school and attended the University of Michigan for two years prior to enrolling in the United States Military Academy. He has served as an instructor at the USMA and various schools from which he has graduated, including the Command and General Staff College, Army War College, and the Field Artillery School. He

Few Simple Safety Precautions May Help Prevent Drowning Tragedy

The arrival of summer and the swimming season always seems to bring a number of unnecessary deaths by drowning in our area lakes. Many of these deaths could be avoided by learning and practicing a few simple precautions.

We were shocked Monday to read a news story from the Michigan State Police reporting that on many week-ends and holiday periods drownings now exceed the acknowledged high toll taken by traffic accidents on our highways.

A few hours later tragedy struck at Bruin Lake when the body of a young boy from Ohio, vacationing with his parents, was recovered about 75 feet from shore.

For each of several years past we have warned of the dangers in water sports and we still feel it is advisable to repeat these simple rules in the hopes that maybe someone will heed them and save a life.

1. Do not go swimming too early in the day.
2. Use supervised pools or beaches or go swimming with other good swimmers—not alone.
3. Stay ashore in heavy weather.
4. Keep children out of boats not equipped with life-preservers, or without expert swimmers aboard.
5. Teach children to swim at an early age.
6. Wait an hour after eating before swimming.
7. Use extra caution when fishing from a boat after dark, especially if in strange waters.
8. Always carry extra life preservers in boats.
9. If you are deathly afraid of water, stay away.

One other word of caution is the suggestion that you try one of several floating techniques when next in the water. Many people can float indefinitely without any effort if they will hold their head back so that only the nose is above water. The feet may extend downward vertically from the surface, but if the individual will be careful to keep his head far back, he will find that he can float for hours in this position without physical effort. If you try it, or some other floating technique, it may save your life this summer.

AGRICULTURE in ACTION

★ Tractor Accidents

Hit a slow-moving tractor with a fast-moving car and you might as well plow into a brick wall—and results are about the same.

Add an unprotected man atop the wall, and the rest of the tragedy unfolds. Humpty Dumpty fashion.

Witness: photos of a large modern tractor split completely lengthwise, its rider nearly so. Witness: the pretty teen-age girl lying in the ditch UNDER the tractor she was driving to "daddy" in the nearby field.

In accidents between tractors and cars, the slow-moving vehicle comes out a poor second. Its operator hasn't a decent chance. In accidents between tractors and cars, 75 percent of the fatalities occur to the tractor operator.

Nearly one-third of all deaths involving tractors happen on highways. Nearly one-half of the highway tractor deaths occur to drivers under 16.

Accident files are filled with evidence to show what happens in a moment of carelessness, caused in many cases by increasing farm use of highways and pressure of harvest-season work.

When the hay is down, when grain is ripe, when the weather is threatening, farmers spring into action. Not all farm-land is adjoining. It is common for one farmer to work several farms some miles apart.

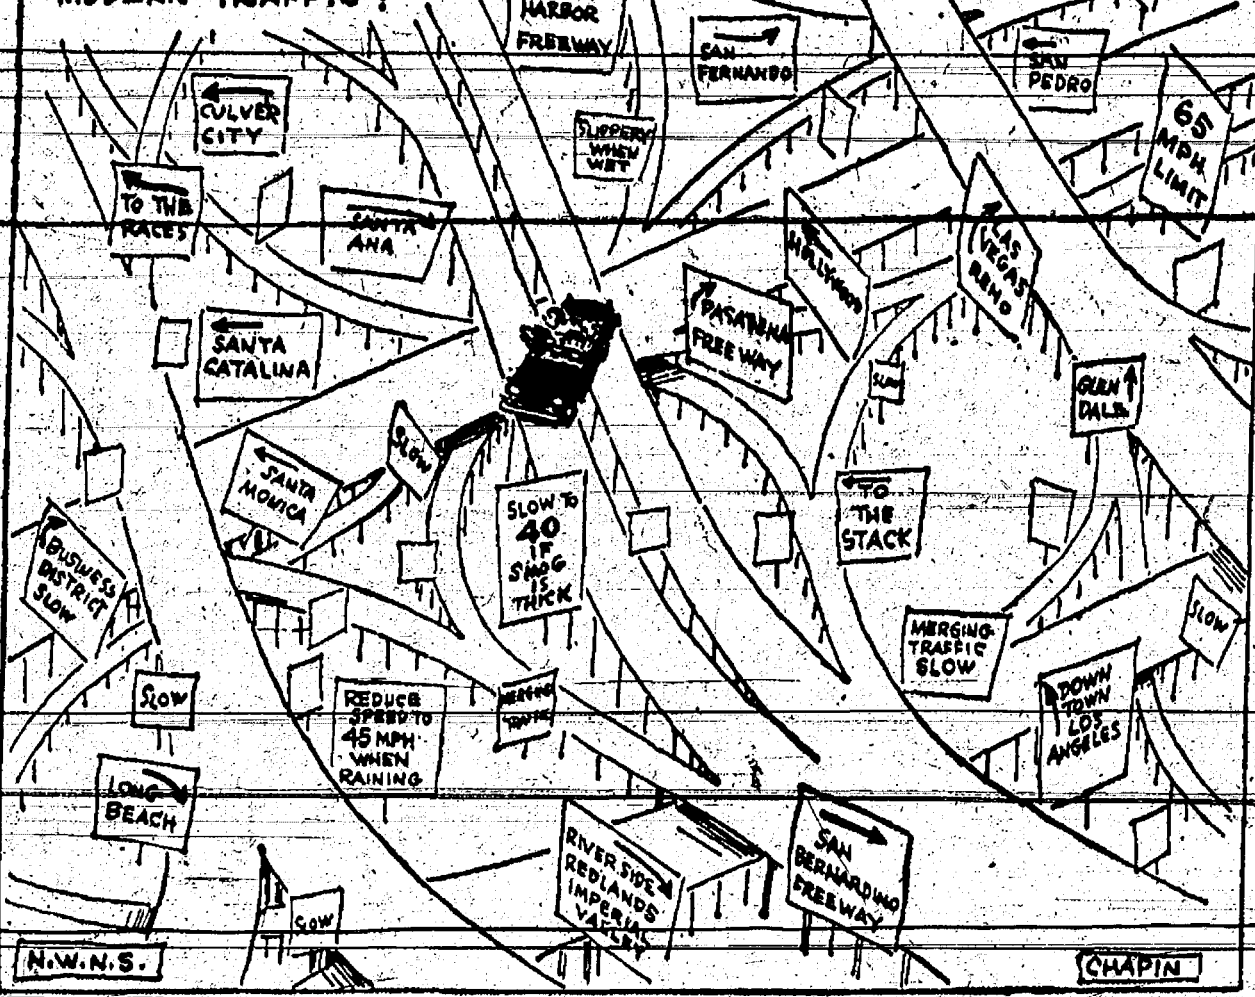

Farmers must remember that tractors are "motor vehicles"—defined as such under the motor vehicle code—and when on highways they should be handled the same as cars. Not that they are expected to whiz down roads at car speeds; rather that the basic rules of the road do apply.

These rules include arm signals when turning, lights at night (white light in front, red in the rear)—and of course, common courtesy. If through slowness, a tractor driver is holding up traffic, common courtesy (and common sense) dictates that he take to the shoulder of the road.

The moral? "All the King's Horses and all the King's Men can't put Humpty Dumpty together again."

Michigan's fourth medical education facility is well on the way toward becoming a reality at Michigan State University.

The legislature has specified, in the 1962-63 appropriation for MSU, that the proposed two-year pre-clinical medical school shall not be expanded to a four-year training program without prior legislative approval.

University officials, with little choice, plan to abide by this dictate.

MSU's Institute of Biology and Medicine is scheduled to officially start operation in 1964 to prepare medical doctors, biologists, nurses and medical technicians.

Dr. Richard U. Byerrum, acting director of the institute, said he consulted a group of leading medical educators to help work out details for the new program.

"Since our approach is new, we wanted to know if it would be acceptable to medical educators," he said.

The educators consulted, from medical schools at various universities throughout the country, were "generally enthusiastic" about the MSU plans, Byerrum said.

The Institute will be designed to help relieve the national and state shortage of medical doctors and biologists. Because the two-year program will instruct in only pre-clinical work, it will not require extensive hospital teaching facilities.

Students who complete it, however, will be ready to fill the many vacancies which occur annually at the third-year level in the nation's medical schools.

One bit of advice offered by Dr. Morton Levitt, assistant dean of Wayne State University's medical school, will likely be incorporated as plans for the Institute program develop, Byerrum said. Levitt recommended that the medical program in the Institute follow traditional patterns since students will be going to other schools for their final two years of training.

MSU plans several modifications in the Institute program which are not generally used, such as allowing students to progress well into their education before being required to declare their specialty preference.

"Appointment of the year in state government may be that of Gary D. Hansen as director of Michigan's Commission on Aging."

The Commission, which deals with services for the senior citizens of Michigan, previously has had individuals with personal "experience" as members or leading it.

Most participants in the Commission work are "up in years" or nearing the age which the unit is designed to serve, Hansen is 25.

His age, however, appears to have little to do with his qualifications for the job. If education and work records are any indication, Hansen is well qualified.

At his young age, Hansen has completed requirements for his doctoral degree at the University of Minnesota where he taught for several years.

Prior to his appointment with the Michigan Commission, Hansen was supervisor of a demonstration-research project on chronic illness and aging problems in rural Minnesota.

The new director has written extensively on aging, social security and rural retirement, including a book on aging in the Midwest which is now being published.

Secretary of State James M. Have has a reassuring warning for Michigan drivers traveling outside the state.

The warning is an annual one: Michigan's point system is applied against traffic violations committed in other states and provinces of Canada under co-operative agreements between the governmental units.

The reassuring part of Have's warning is that the points added to a driver's record are based on Michigan's system. The Secretary of State's office recently has had several questions from motorists charged with violations in Ontario.

Where provincial officials recently stiffened the penalties under the "driver demerit-point" system.

"The point system in use in the state where the conviction was received has no bearing on the points he receives in his home state of Michigan," Have said.

"If the driver has been convicted of driving through a stop sign in Toronto, he gets the same three points he would if convicted of the same offense in Alpena."

A little-known service of state government has been offered for the past 14 years to a select group of citizens as a co-operative project.

Uncle Lew from Lima Says:

DEAR MISTER EDITOR: Zeke Grubb's preacher come by the country store Saturday night, reported that things were really popping at his church these days. It all started, he allowed, when Hezekiah Adams got up at a meeting of the Ping-Pong Committee two weeks ago and said he had an important announcement.

Hezekiah announced that the church down the road was remodeling their steeple. He told the Committee he couldn't recollect when his church didn't have the highest steeple for miles around, but now the word was out that this other church steeple was going to be about two foot higher'n any in the community. They wasn't but one answer, allowed Hezekiah, and that was to build a new church.

Well, sir, said the Parson, this piece of shocking news really threw the Committee into a dither. He told the fellows he'd been trying to talk his congregation into building a new church for years, had told 'em how they needed more space to carry on the Lord's work. But nothing he ever said, claimed the Parson, stirred up his folks like Hezekiah's announcement.

First off, reported the Parson, a meeting of the whole congregation was called for the next night and things is now gitting in high gear, he said. The wimmen folks is going to put on a chicken noodle supper twict a week. They decided on this on account of it not taking much chicken and they got plenty of well water. The men folks is going to raffle off a white-face heffer. The Parson said this might look a little bad at first, on account of the church being agin gambling, but it was decided that when the church steeple was at stake, the Lord would forgive 'em.

A meeting of the whole congregation was called for the next night and things is now gitting in high gear, he said. The wimmen folks is going to put on

POISON IVY POISON SUMAC

TROUBLESOME TWOSOME — These two plants look innocent enough and are Michigan's outdoor greenery, but don't be fooled. Their leaves and stems are covered with itchy trouble for unwary vacationers. Most common of these two is poison ivy which grows in roadside patches, small open ground clusters, and in mats on a forest floor. Being a climber, it may coil inconspicuously around trees and bushes and even rise to heights above your head. Its color varies from spring's pale green to summer's dark green to fall's reds and oranges. Poison sumac is found in swampy places, chiefly around small lakes or swales, or along streams. If you come in direct contact with either plant, treat your trouble immediately. Wash the exposed area with a strong soap, being careful not to smear other parts of your body with oil which has rubbed off from the plants. If it seems necessary, apply some form of drying lotion. Avoid greasy and oily ointments for fear of spreading the poison. Don't hesitate to see a doctor if you aren't satisfied with the progress of your own treatment.

Poison Ivy, Sumac Plants Are Often Hard To Identify

Lansing — The oil Rhustol, that's the culprit that puts the "poison" in poison ivy and sumac.

It covers their leaves and stems throughout. When seen afield, these two plants look little different from other greenery. But their surface oil is particularly troublesome to those who come in contact with it.

By far, the more troublesome of the two plants in Michigan is poison ivy, simply because it is so much more common. Poison sumac is limited in range, being found in swampy places, chiefly around small lakes or swales or along streams.

Sumac has both poisonous and non-poisonous varieties in Michigan. If you get out in these swampy places during the hot months and come in contact with the poisonous variety, you may have trouble. It is, however, much less a problem than poison ivy.

So-called "poison oak" is a popular name for either poison ivy or poison sumac in Michigan. The real poison oak, a type of wood bush, is mainly found in warmer, or moister climates than this state's. It is not listed among Michigan's native plants.

Poison ivy, however, is a different story. It may be found anywhere. It grows in roadside patches, in small open ground clusters, in mats on a forest floor, being a climber, it may coil around trees and bushes and even reach heights above your head.

It looks quite innocent. Coiled in with other foliage, you may not see it until too late. Its color varies with the season, from spring's pale green to summer's darker green, to fall's reds and oranges.

There are many stories about transmission of poison ivy by air. The general drift of these tales is that wind carried the oil through the air to more susceptible patients. This is doubtful. More than likely, the sufferer who is easily poisoned has somehow unknown to himself come in contact with the plant, or his clothing has picked up the oil and a few days later it is transmitted to the skin.

When ivy is burned, however, the smoke is quite different. Smoke from fire can carry tiny droplets of the poison oil through the air, into faces, lungs and onto all exposed skin. If this happens, victims can become extremely ill and require a good deal of professional medical service.

More commonly, the victim picks up a localized dosage of the oil on ankles, hands, or other exposed skin. When this occurs, don't wait the day or two it takes the blisters and itching to start.

Immediately wash the exposed area with a strong soap. Be careful only to wash the exposed area so the oil can't smear to other parts of the body. If further treatment seems necessary, apply some form of drying lotion. Grease or oily ointments should not be used for fear of spreading the poison. The blisters which develop contain a fluid mixture which includes some of the troublesome oil. When these blisters break, the draining fluid can spread the irritation to other unaffected skin. Keep the area as dry as possible and as localized as possible.

Once you contact the poison with blisters beginning to rise, the main hope is to alleviate the discomfort and to shorten the time it stays. There are no universal wonder cures. If it's a yearly occurrence and the affected area remains small, you are perhaps the best judge and have the most experience in how it should be treated.

Your treatment may not work for somebody else. Don't hesitate too long to see a doctor.

Chelsea's score was 700 out of a possible 800 points.

Competence and confidence go hand in glove!

The competent individual is able to do a job and do it right. And usually, competence and confidence go hand in glove. The good ball player knows that he is good.

It's pretty much the same with business firms. The stores with a reputation for service and customer satisfaction are good stores. They have proved it through the years.

Yet, neither a business nor a baseball player can afford to rest on laurels. Each day is a new day. Each game is a new game.

That's why local stores continually try to please you in every way they can.

Do you always give them first chance?

Everybody wins when everyone trades at home.

Trade at Home for your own sake and community progress.

Drownings Exceed Traffic Toll on Some Week-Ends

Some week-ends and holidays are now reporting more lives lost by drowning than in traffic accidents.

Eleven drownings in Michigan during the 30-hour July 4 period exceeded the traffic toll, which totaled nine, the State Police reported.

The drownings pushed the state's water toll for the year to 104 and at least 51 injured in 152 accidents. This compares with 91 deaths and 66 injured in 165 accidents in the same period last year.

The year's water deaths up through July 4 included 12 boat operators, 10 boat passengers, 38 swimmers or waders and miscellaneous causes including falling from banks, docks or piers, skin or scuba diving accidents, falling into wells or septic tanks, and attempting to rescue others.

The holiday traffic deaths resulted from seven fatal accidents, one of which claimed the lives of three persons in a head-on collision.

Since the first of the year up through July 4 there have been 668 traffic deaths in 574 accidents. This compares with 712 deaths in 618 accidents in the same period last year.

Mel Moore Named American Oil Co. Agent

Melbourne Moore, who has been a driver salesman for Standard Oil Division, American Oil Co., in the Chelsea area the past seven and one-half years, has been appointed commission agent at the Hanover bulk plant of the company. He took over his new duties July 5.

He was recommended for the Hanover post by George Knickerbocker, Chelsea commission agent, and by Paul Coutch of Jackson, sales representative for Standard Oil Division.

Moore and his wife and their five children will move to Hanover as soon as they find living quarters there.

Manchester Chicken Broil Set July 19

Manchester's now-famous gitanic chicken broil is scheduled for the town's athletic field, Thursday, July 19.

On this day, more than 5,000 people from a half dozen states will line up to enjoy large Michigan chicken halves averaging a pound and a quarter in weight, slow-broiled over charcoal pits totaling 150 feet long. The Manchester broil in the last nine years has become one of the biggest community feasts in the Midwest.

The event, a model of its kind, is sponsored by the Optimist Club and Jaycees, and proceeds go to recreational facilities for boys and girls of the community. Prices are the same as they were nine years ago—$1.50 for adults and $1.00 for children.

No ladies take part in the Manchester feast, although most of them take the afternoon off to eat the chicken. The affair is run by a crew of 175 businessmen and farmers, under the direction of Luther Klager, local hatcheryman, and Howard Zindel of the Michigan State University Poultry Department. Co-chairmen are Rolfe Gossman, Dan Boutell and Jim Cannon. The slow-broil method of cooking chicken and the equipment for it, was developed by Michigan State, and the Manchester broil has become a model for the nation.

During the five hours between 4:30 and 7:30, diners will consume some three tons of chicken halves and one ton of cabbage converted into coleslaw by old-fashioned Dutch cabbage slicers, plus an untold amount of potato chips and relishes. More than a ton and a quarter of charcoal briquettes, judiciously pre-heated, will be used to cook the chicken slowly, so that the skin will neither blister nor burn. The halves will be basted with 40 pounds of butter and the 70 chefs will use up 200 pairs of white work gloves, as they individually test each half.

Guests, who now travel 100 miles to attend the Manchester broil, will have a number of side events to entertain them as they wait for dinner, or linger on after the feast is over. During the day there will be a Little League baseball game, and later two first-rate teams of adults will play a softball game.

Alongside the cooking area, Paul Bunyan's seven-foot skillet will be in use, plus an assortment of backyard barbecue equipment. On the other side of the serving area the Oakland County Police exhibit will be on view. This is a large lighted trailer containing a miniature landscape and network of highways animated with small figures showing all kinds of police work—traffic control, handling arrests and accidents, and even skin-diving in a miniature lake to recover bodies. The display is a popular feature of county fairs and is much in demand.

During the previous eight years, rain has not seriously threatened, but in case of rain, guests will be supplied with take-outs to eat in their cars, or in nearby shelters.

Weather Station To Be Established Soon in Hell

The Hell Chamber of Commerce has received word from the Department of Commerce in Washington this week that its application for establishment of an official Weather Bureau station has been approved.

The exact temperature of Hell will be scientifically measured for the first time in about two weeks.

Maximum and minimum temperature recorders, rain and snow measuring instruments and several other pieces of meteorological apparatus were ordered by the C. of C. from Science Associates of Princeton, N. J., for about $250, when the approval was received.

The measuring station is to be housed in a building on the grounds of the Playland Recreation Center.

Mel Reinhard, president of the Chamber of Commerce and owner of Playland, says information will be available to the public by a C. of C. answering service at UP 8-6807.

21 More Miles of Freeway To Be Opened for Traffic

Lansing—Twenty-one miles of Interstate highway will be added to Michigan's freeway system during the next week when two projects are opened to traffic.

State Highway Commissioner John C. Mackie said nearly nine miles of Interstate 94 Freeway between Sawyer and New Buffalo in Berrien county will be opened to traffic Friday, July 13.

Three days later—Monday, July 16, a 12-mile section of Interstate 75 Freeway between Waters and Gaylord in Otsego county will be opened.

Completion of I-94 south of Sawyer will provide motorists with 224 miles of continuous freeway from downtown Detroit to New Buffalo—3½ miles north of the Michigan-Indiana state line.

It is the nation's longest toll-free Interstate highway.

The Sawyer-New Buffalo section of freeway was built at a cost of $6.5 million, including right-of-way and has interchanges at Sawyer, Union Pier and New Buffalo.

Chief Engineer John E. Meyer will participate in dedication ceremonies being planned at Gaylord to mark the opening of the Waters-Gaylord section of I-75.

Built at a cost of $5 million, including right-of-way, this section of freeway has interchanges at Waters, old US-27 about three miles south of Gaylord and at M-32 west of Gaylord.

Lafayette Clinic, Michigan Department of Mental Health research and training center in Detroit, has a staff of nearly 300 employees engaged in research activities, training programs and the care and treatment of 335 patients in the inpatient service; over 15,000 outpatient interviews were conducted last year.

More than 14,000 persons are seen annually by Michigan Department of Mental Health outpatient clinics and over 4,000 more are seen in the outpatient clinics maintained at the hospital facilities.

About 95 percent of Michigan's cherry tonnage goes to processors. Less than half goes to canners, with freezers taking more than half. For the past decade the state has annually produced more than 50 percent of the total national crop, and Michigan has long been the nation's No. 1 red tart cherry producer. This year the crops is estimated to be 62 percent of the national crop.

The most common variety of red tart cherry grown in the state is the Montmorency. The variety is an old one that traces its ancestry, according to reports to Montmorency, near Paris in France.

A popular ingredient for pies, Michigan red tart cherries have a wide variety of uses. They are utilized as a sauce to go with meat, in aspics, salads, and in baking.

Canned or frozen in the home, they are ideal for sauce as a dessert and lend themselves to numerous other dishes.

Most of the cherry crop is harvested in the western part of the state in a narrow belt that parallels Lake Michigan from the Indiana line almost to the Straits of Mackinac. The heaviest concentrated production is in the Traverse City section where each year in July the National Cherry Festival is held.

Sweet cherry production for Michigan is estimated at 16,000 tons, 2,000 tons more than last year.

Early Settlers Bypassed Michigan's Muddy Trails

Lansing—Hardly anyone questions the desirability of good highways.

But 100 years ago, the Michigan constitution contained a provision that no state funds could be used to build roads.

This was seen as a reaction against earlier attempts by state authorities to build highways. Their efforts ended in financial disaster and for many years private companies and individuals shouldered roadbuilding chores.

Some students of history report that Michigan was mired in mud during most of the last century, and paid a heavy price for it. While settlers swarmed into Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, Michigan was bypassed, largely because of its reputation for having poor transportation. Those who did settle in Michigan relied on Indian trails and animal tracks for overland travel.

It wasn't until the turn of the century that the public became aware of the need for good roads. Bicyclists and the first primitive automobiles were largely responsible for this new awareness.

In 1906, the Michigan State Highway Department was formed to promote the cause of better roads. At first, the department was limited to handing out money and advice to counties. But in 1919, the Highway Department was reorganized and became an active participant in design and building of roads in Michigan.

Today, Michigan is the No. 1 roadbuilding state in the nation, a complete switch from the position it held at the turn of the century.

Administrative Helper Named by Road Commission

The Washtenaw County Road Commission has announced appointment of Melvin Dick as administrative assistant to H. G. Minier, superintendent manager, with the direct responsibility for issuing all permits, all traffic control investigations, maintenance of Road Commission buildings and properties.

Also announced was the appointment of Walter Lewis to the position of superintendent of maintenance; Elbert Keast to the position of maintenance supervisor; and Donald Gould as assistant purchasing agent.

The new appointments followed announcement of the retirement of LeRoy Osborn who retired, effective July 6, after 40 years of service with the Washtenaw County Road Commission.

Osborn has worked in various supervisory positions and on Jan. 6, 1956, was appointed superintendent of equipment.

The organizational changes and the appointments announced resulted from reassignment of Osborn's various responsibilities to other members of the staff. Requests for permits, traffic control investigations and Civil Defense responsibilities of the Washtenaw County Road Commission, it was announced by H. G. Minier, superintendent manager.

Osborn was honored at a service award dinner, at which time he received a service certificate and was presented with retirement gifts from his fellow employees.

ON ONE-MAN RULE IN LAOS
The United States is working to head off a situation that would put pro-Communist Prince Sontaphony in temporary control of the new coalition government of Laos late this month.

Since two other members of the three-man regime are scheduled to be out of the country, United States officials said that at the very least they considered it bad psychology to leave command in the hands of just one member of the ruling group at this budding stage of the coalition.

The University of Michigan was originally chartered in 1817 by the Territory of Michigan.

AUTO TIRE DILEMMA

We don't tell drivers what mileage they can get on their tires any more, unless we know the kind of drivers they are. Some are lucky to get ten thousand miles and others are still going at fifty thousand. For example: According to tests made recently, a fast turn around a city corner will give a tire the equivalent wear of ten miles of straight driving. Fast, screeching starts equals a hundred miles of straight driving, and sudden stops even more.

Of course, misaligned wheels and unbalanced tires create the mileage, too. For better tire quality, 620 South Main Street for information. You'll like our complete tire services, because straight driving. Fast, screeching starts equals a hundred miles of straight driving, and sudden stops even more.

Farm Management Tour To Visit Former Dairy Farm

100 Attend Annual Gelman Co. Picnic

Approximately 100 people enjoyed the annual Gelman Instrument Company picnic for employees and their families at the Miladore-Liebeck farm Sunday afternoon.

Outdoor-broiled steaks, softball and other sports made up the day's activities planned by James McMahon of Dexter and Maxine White of Grass Lake. Other members of the arrangements committee were Dan Reese of Ann Arbor, Jim Marshall of Grass Lake and Joe Laban and Glen Salonen of Chelsea.

Special guests included Professor and Mrs. Gerald Gill of the U. of M., Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth MacKenzie and Mr. and Mrs. William Thomas.

Night Blooming Cereus Plant Produces Buds

Mrs. Emma Seitz has a night blooming cereus plant which has produced four buds that are rapidly developing to the point where they may be expected to open at any time.

This is the first time the plant has shown any indication of blooming.

Described as a form of cactus native to the western part of the United States and in South America, the plant receives its name from the large waxy blossoms which may be watched as they unfurl. The blossom opens only at night.

The thought of changing from a dairy operation to a beef and swine feeding farm program is rolling around in the minds of several Michigan farmers today.

Farm management specialists at Michigan State University say those who have these thoughts should not fail to visit the Simmons Brothers farm on the State Farm Management Tour, Aug. 1. This 447-acre farm located two miles east of North Branch on highway M-90 in Lapeer county is one in transition.

Jack and Bill Simmons decided about two years ago to get out of dairy and into hogs and beef. They sold their neighbors, the Lake Brothers, their dairy herd.

This year the Simmons fed out 180 steers and with new facilities under construction can expand to 400 to 450 feeder cattle this fall. They remodeled two old dairy barns for their swine operations.

A heated barn has 22 farrowing stalls where 68 litters were farrowed from 34 sows. They are gearing for a capacity of 700 in the present facilities.

Hogs and beef are mechanically fed high moisture corn and corn silage.

For this operation they need lots of corn. With minimum tillage and high plant populations, they hope to get it from more than 400 acres of corn. The Simmons Bros. will have storage for 13,000 bushels of high moisture corn, 13,000 bushels of high moisture corn and cob meal and 1,300 tons of corn silage.

The tour begins at the Simmons farm at 9 a.m., Aug. 1.
