Use Care in Watching Sun Eclipse

The Standard office has received a number of calls this week asking that mention be made of the danger of looking directly at the sun during the eclipse which will be visible in this area Saturday, July 20. The practice is particularly harmful to the eyes of children. There is danger that the sun could be seen through the smoke of ordinary colored glasses. It is hazardous, not only for children but adults, and should be avoided. According to information published in the past few weeks.

In this area which is close to the totality path so that most of the sun is covered, observers may see "shadow bands." A white background, such as a sheet spread on the ground, to make these shimmering rays of light and shade visible. The bands, one to two inches wide and five to six inches apart, are likely to be parallel to the visible edge of the sun. They will move slowly or rapidly, their direction of movement depending on the air currents.

When the partial eclipse is at maximum in this area it begins at 3:30 p.m. and reaches minimum at 4:41 p.m. Many rays of the sun, in the form of a crescent, may be seen on the ground, where sunlight shines between the leaves of trees or through other small openings. That because these openings act like pinhole cameras, causing shaded ground and walls to be dotted with a multitude of solar images, each in the form of a crescent like the partially eclipsed sun but inverted.

It is safe to look at the shadow of the sun on a surface directly at the sun. This is not only when the sun is fully eclipsed, but also when the sun is partially eclipsed, the temptation being greater then.

Even the amateur photographer in the danger of eye damage from a solar eclipse. He tries looking through the window of his camera.

Farewell Reception Planned Sunday For Rusten Family

The Rev. Philip Rusten and his family are being honored Sunday at a farewell reception at the Congregational church. All their many friends in the community are invited to attend.

Mr. Rusten is continuing to serve as pastor at the church, as needed, until the new pastor, the Rev. Robert A. J. Livingston of Kenmore, N. Y., assumes his duties here the second week in August. Mr. Rusten announced his resignation as pastor in January and he and Mrs. Rusten are both teaching school, she in Ann Arbor and he at Jackson Junior College. He is also continuing study toward an advanced degree in his chosen field of counseling.

Sunday's open house reception, planned by his friends at the Congregational church, is scheduled to be held from 2 p.m. until 4 p.m.

Band Concert Slated for Friday Night

The second in the summer series of band concerts will be presented in the downtown parking lot at 8 p.m. Friday, weather permitting.

People of the community and surrounding area are invited to attend this free concert and listen to the combined efforts of adult and student musicians. The built-in bleachers at the south edge of the parking lot are available for seating or concert-goers may sit in their cars to hear the music.

Rehearsals of the Community Band continue to be held on Tuesday nights at the High School and musicians who have not yet elected to join the program are invited to take advantage of the opportunity as soon as possible.

Attendance at summer band classes for younger instrumentalists continues to be very good and much progress is being made.

The Dudley Foster family returned Sunday night from a 12-day camping stay on Beaver Island in the northern part of Lake Michigan.

SO REALISTIC that if the owner, Charles Spencer, were not standing beside it, the circus display shown above would appear to be the photograph of an "honest-to-goodness" circus tent and equipment. The miniature model circus is Spencer's hobby. It will be on display at Palmer Motor Sales for a week beginning Saturday morning, July 20.

Miniature Circus Menagerie Built in 5 Months as Hobby

The familiar circus barker's jargon—"Ladies-z-z-z and Gentlemen, hurry, hurry, step right up; see it all!" would appear appropriate for the miniature model circus which will be on display at Palmer Motor Sales from July 20 until July 28. The display is the handiwork of Charles Spencer who is a member of national Circus Model Builders.

The display depicts the menagerie department of the circus. It is an exact scale model replica of the equipment used by such famous name outfits as Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey Circus and Hagenbeck-Wallace Circus. Spencer calls his display the "Spencer Brothers Circus."

More than five months of time went into the building of the tent and wagons in the display. The display features a menagerie tent which is 12 feet long, five feet wide, 20 1/2 inches high at the center and 10 1/2 inches high at the side walls.

The top is held down by 171 stakes, 167 key ropes, 42 side poles, 41 red quarter poles, 26 blue quarter poles and four main poles.

The top is laced together in 10 sections, each section containing 62 lace loops.

The wagons shown in the photo are so designed that the dismantled tent and all the menagerie equipment will fit in them for transportation, exactly the same as the real circus wagons were used.

The menagerie department, when completed, will include more than 150 animals—some plastic and some hand carved—and 12 cage wagons. Spencer estimates it will take him another nine or ten years of spare time work to complete the entire circus model.

The display as it will appear here all next week will be taken to Baraboo, Wis., for display at the Circus World Museum, Aug. 16, 17 and 18. It will be the last gathering of the Circus Model Builders.

The Circus World Museum at Baraboo was the home and former winter quarters of Ringling Brothers Circus until 1918.

Spencer invites all interested persons of the community to view the circus display at Palmer Motor Sales beginning Saturday.

Legion Post Elects Officers For Coming Year

Thursday evening, at the regular meeting of Herbert J. McKune Post No. 31, American Legion, officers were elected for the year.

Grass Fire Danger Still Very Great

Conservation Officer Donley Boyer said yesterday that although it rained substantially the past week-end, grass fires are still a danger in this area. The dead grass dried out quickly after the rain. Wooded areas are parched and tinder-dry and a major fire could be touched off by a spark.

Boyer said he is still advising fire chiefs to use discretion in issuing burning permits for outside burning.

Before Saturday's rain the last appreciable rainfall had occurred on June 6 and only slight precipitation occurred after that. No rain has been recorded for the 20 days preceding Saturday's downpour.

$4,000 Band Uniform Debt Paid in Full

The final installment on the repayment of the $4,000 loan for the balance of the cost of new band uniforms was made early this week. This successful effort on the part of the many members of the Band Booster Club and people of the area who supported them deserves much praise.

The original agreement on the loan was that repayment should be completed in four years, but the club, under the leadership of Elmer Kiel and with Charles Lancaster as chairman of the ways and means committee, set out to accomplish the goal in only one year. This tremendous undertaking has now been successfully completed. The support of the people of the school district and the hard work of many individuals is much appreciated by all.

It is hoped by them that continued support of future Band Booster projects will meet with the same high level of co-operation as has been evidenced in the drive for uniform funds.

The $4,000 loan was offered to the Band Boosters last year after the organizations had made a down payment of $1,088 on the total cost of $5,088.

Joe Merkel Now Owns Sylvan Hotel

Joseph T. Merkel, Sr., announced this week that he has purchased the Sylvan Hotel and plans to take possession Aug. 15. He bought the place from Henry Clary who took possession from Mike Apel about a month ago. Clary formerly operated the hotel a number of years before Apel assumed ownership.

Merkel said he plans to do some remodeling over an extended period while keeping the hotel and the attached bowling lanes in operation. He also plans to eventually, the present 18 rooms for guests will be augmented by four additional rooms and an apartment, he explained.

Merkel claims a sentimental attachment for the hotel which he feels is a Chelsea landmark deserving of perpetuation as such. He said he hopes to promote its reputation as a comfortable, attractive facility for transient guests and permanent residents.

Mrs. Corn Bessel is a patient at St. Joseph Mercy Hospital, Ann Arbor. She entered the hospital for observation on Sunday. Her room number is 6005.

Be in Right Spot At Set Time for Fantastic Savings

Chelsea's first "Midnight Madness" sale, promoted by the Chelsea Chamber of Commerce retail committee, is expected to draw a record crowd of shoppers to take advantage of the numerous outstanding bargains being offered by participating merchants.

Scheduled for Monday, July 22, from 8 p.m. until 11 p.m., the "midnight madness" effect is achieved by the fantastically low prices at which specials are being offered at various times during the evening—some for all evening, others for a half-hour period only and many for an hour at a time.

Participating stores will close as usual Monday at 5 p.m. and then re-open at 8 p.m.

Items offered during the evening include such wanted merchandise as paint at more than a dollar per gallon off regular price; garden hose at almost half price; large size bath towels at about half the usual price; bread at 15 cents a loaf; costume jewelry at half price. Electrical appliances are also included in the "midnight madness" event as well as men's, women's and children's clothing, furniture, household furnishings; in fact, anything in the way of desirable, seasonable merchandise that customers may be needing at this time.

Each of the participating merchants has included in his advertising this week some of the specials he is offering during the evening and the times they are being offered. Shoppers should check these ads and make sure they will be on hand when the bargains go on sale.

Minor Blaze Extinguished at Chelsea Mfg.

At 1:30 p.m. Saturday, the Chelsea Fire Department responded to a call to Chelsea Manufacturing Corp. on Hayes St. where a wooden beam near a ventilator was discovered to be on fire. Damage was confined to the beam. It was believed the fire started from a welding spark.

Late Monday afternoon firemen were called to the Ida Detling farm on Clutch Rd. because of a grass fire. Site of the blaze was on the west side of the road behind the Richard Ringe home which faces Saginaw Rd.

Surprisingly, the grass fire is believed to have started from a spark from a rubbish fire in spite of the fact there had been a heavy rain over the week-end.

Recreation Basketball Team Still Undeclared in 6 Games

Now that the recreation program has settled into comfortable routine, the fifth week's schedule will run pretty much as they have for the past weeks at North and South schools as well as at the Junior High.

One variation for the week of July 22-26 at North school is a pet show on Friday, July 26, and that day will be Game Day at South school. It looks like a week of work on puppets at Junior High in addition to the usual program.

Here's the schedule for Morning Baseball for the fifth week: Monday, July 22, Little League Warriors will play the Badgers and the Falcons will battle the Flintstones.

Tuesday, July 23, Midget Leaguers will play as follows: Panthers vs. Railroaders and Yankees vs. Buccaneers.

Little Leaguers will play again on Wednesday, July 24: Falcons vs. Wolverines and Flintstones vs. Badgers.

Thursday in the Midget League games, the Panthers will play against the Yankees and the Buccaneers against the Railroaders. Afternoon swimming continues as before with supervised groups going to Groomer's Beach each afternoon at a cost of 15 cents per swimmer or 25 cents for the family. Lessons for beginners on Wednesday.

Evening baseball schedules: Monday, July 22, High School League; Chelsea vs. Manchester at Chelsea, 6:00 p.m. Tuesday, July 23, Junior League, Team B vs. Team C. Thursday, July 25, Junior League, Team B vs. Team A. There will be Junior League basketball at the Junior High gym at 7:00 p.m. Monday, July 22. Tournament dates for the High School League at Jackson are to be announced.

A dance for high school age students will be held at the Chelsea Junior High school Friday, July 26 from 8-10 p.m. South school had a dress-up contest July 12 with some very original entries. Greg Rytton's costume was judged the most unusual, while Carolyn Churchhill took honors for the funniest and Amy Lou Detling's was the strangest.

Basketball Results . . .

Curt Farley who has been averaging 25 points per game scored 35 points that night. Next highest scorers were Dick Laubon with 9 and Jim Hanson 8. Charles Schunk, Jeff Flintoff, Jim Cameron, Gordon Carpenter, Mike Tarasow and Tom Steele each scored during the game that maintained Chelsea's perfect record—6 wins, 0 losses.

"SHINANIGANS" at the Jaycees' annual rummage sale last week-end indicate that "a good time was had by all" and, in addition, the organization grossed a total of $600. The rummage sale is one of the Jaycees' principal money-raising projects—the annual chicken barbecue in October is another—and all proceeds after expenses are paid are used for community service projects. Leo Leach, general rummage sale chairman, said a lot of thanks was due those who donated and those who bought items at the rummage sale which gave the community a feeling of service. Jaycees' community service projects financed by means of the rummage sale and barbecue receipts include the undertaking of extensive improvements at Three Park. The organization also sponsors projects for youth and children—junior tennis and golf tournaments, assistance at Camp Crile for epileptic children. Easter egg hunt—goes all out with support of a needy family at Christmastime in co-operation with Chelsea Social Service; sponsors the community Christmas tree and, in general, plans and carries out various worthwhile projects to benefit the entire community. Dan Maroney, a past president of the Jaycees got a ride in the wheelbarrow being tried out at the rummage sale by Edward Blacklaw as Gene Shoemaker, another Jaycee, looks on. The sale was held Friday and Saturday at Sylvan Town Hall after weeks of preparation by Jaycees. They had staged a number of general pick-ups in recent weeks, accumulating the sale items, and all members had a chance to act as salesmen the two days of the sale.

Congress Will Find People Fed Up With Railroad Featherbedding Issue

The nation-wide railroad strike called by the on-train crews for one minute after midnight on the morning of July 11, will not now occur, because of Presidential intervention, until July 29.

It will not happen then, or ever, if Congress is prepared by July 22 to act swiftly and decisively on legislation to compel arbitration of the featherbedding issue. Distasteful as such action may seem to some, the choice before Congress is now simple and final: an arbitration law or a strike. We are assuming that July 29 is the ultimate and final date since President Kennedy, in asking this postponement, did so "with the understanding that no further such request for a continuance will be made by this Administration."

Just why the President's legislative recommendations are not now before Congress, is not so clear. Since the railroads announced on July 3 that all possible means of settlement has been exhausted and that they would post the new work rules, as affirmed by the U. S. Supreme Court, to be effective at 12:01 a.m. July 11, and the unions replied with a strike call for that hour, the legislative message to Congress should have been ready and waiting. Instead, a third Presidential panel has been appointed and is studying the featherbedding dispute that has been festering for a generation and has been studied and re-studied for the past two years by the previous top-level bodies whose recommendations have been accepted by the railroads and rejected by the unions. In fact, as far as we can remember, the railroads have accepted every proposal for settlement that has been offered—including President Kennedy's last-minute suggestion that Associate Justice Arthur Goldberg, a labor union lawyer for most of his working life, work out a binding settlement.

The unions have rejected all recommendations and proposals. They have rejected arbitration because they know full well that the featherbedding rules cannot survive impartial examination. They will accept only surrender by the railroads and the public who must continue to pay an estimated $600 million a year for work not needed or not performed.

Further "fact-finding" will not change the picture. Congress must find courage to take it from here—or accept the responsibility for a strike that would cripple the nation at a most critical time. It is an understatement to say the voters will not like that.

Weekly Newspapers Have Proven Record of Lasting Community Service

The American weekly newspaper is an institution which is as old as the nation. And it has shown the toughest kind of staying power.

For instance, a recent census by the Ohio News Bureau shows that the state's weeklies exceed the dailies in circulation by a margin of 2,158,237 to 2,102,201. And weeklies, it also found, are read in the majority of Ohio homes.

The weekly—in an era in which all the media are competing almost desperately for circulation and advertising—has proven its durability beyond any question.

There's very good reason why this should be the case. The weekly newspaper is the community historian—an immortal record of births, deaths, marriages, business successes and failures, the growth and progress of the town and the county, the changing attitudes of mind that come with passing generations.

Beyond this, the good weekly is a molder of opinion. Through its editorial columns it provides not only facts but controversial opinion. It stirs debate and curiosity. In a phrase, it makes people think. And this, perhaps, is its contribution to the nation it has served so well, long and faithfully.

For a weekly newspaper to continue to perform the many otherwise neglected duties of encouraging, boosting and helping the hometown to grow and prosper, it needs every bit of loyal advertising support its merchants can supply it. For it is this advertising revenue that enables the weekly newspaper to provide its many services which often may not even be noticed—at least not as long as the newspaper continues to be published. Yes, it's a two-way street. The newspaper needs the advertiser as much as the advertiser needs the weekly newspaper.

Pointed Tax
 Sale of an income tax to the people of Michigan in any size and shape is still very much in doubt.

Of Governor George Romney's eight alternative tax programs only one spells out fiscal reform without an income tax on individuals. In the governor's travels about the state trying to find buyers for one of his several plans, Romney said most people supported an income tax as a replacement for other levies.

The greatest majority of those attending the governor's meetings, however, have been businessmen who theoretically, and perhaps actually, would stand to gain much from the various reforms proposed.

Most of the Governor's plans call for repeal of the business activities tax, a major objection from businessmen since it was enacted.

Heaviest support voiced for the governor's plans at his various meetings was hinged on the idea that any personal income tax enacted should be a flat-rate levy as opposed to a graduated one similar to the federal income tax.

Democrats claim this is a natural inclination of the wealthy businessman. A flat rate income tax would not cut as deeply into the pocketbook of the rich man as that of the low wage earner, they contend.

Legislators who will be called upon to make decisions on fiscal reform this fall say it will be no easy task.

Romney's meetings have drawn some support for one or another of his plans, but the voices from the grass roots are yet to be heard.

It will take a real selling job to convince the general public that the income tax is an equitable and necessary part of fiscal reform which will benefit the state.

Local Opportunity

Community leaders throughout the state are now buning up on a law enacted by the 1963 legislature which places the burden of mental health services on them.

The Community Mental Health Services Act was enacted on the recommendation of a Senate study committee which considered it for two years.

Under the new law communities can get state funds for offering services in mental health such as emergency, hospitals, night hospitals, day care, and cooperative services with courts or schools.

Support for the community program came from many corners during the session.

The trend being started by state provision for community programs was described to the legislature by Dr. Robert Felix, director of the National Institute of Mental Health. "I have no doubt that if communities assume the role that they and only they can play in building strong mental health programs, mental hospitals, as we know them today will have ceased to exist within 25 years," he said.

Several states have already taken the step which Michigan is taking now. New York, California and Minnesota are among the larger states with such programs. Statistics in these states show hospital admissions and waiting lists, and other favorable changes in problems which have plagued Michigan for many years.

Passage of the community health law represented a choice in dealing with the mental health problem. Most spokesmen who testified before legislative committees on the proposal said this measure was not enacted, the legislature's only alternative was to build more large, costly mental hospitals.

Mail Order Struggles

Individuals seeking employment with the state are unlikely to gain any advantage from offers of mail-order schools to teach or train for these jobs.

State Civil Service Director Franklin K. DeWald said a number of these schools have been soliciting enrollment by civil service job candidates. Most schools are not authorized to operate, DeWald said.

The personnel director emphasized that they are not licensed to do business in Michigan and state courts have found such programs to be illegal and against public policy.

Civil service examinations are given for state jobs on an open competitive basis, with points awarded to candidates on the basis of performance on these tests.

The content of the examinations, combined with interviews and specific skill tests for some jobs, gives the Civil Service Commission an indication of which candidates are qualified. DeWald said he emphasized enrollment in the out-of-state "training schools" is not recognized by the Commission in any way.

Uncle Lew from Lima Says:

DEAR MISTER EDITOR:

I see by the papers where one Congressman is complaining about they got 4 full-time plumbers on the White House payroll. He reports they got 20 bathrooms and if they don't all break down at the same time, one full-time plumber would be a plenty. What this poor Congressman don't know is that we got certain standard stock-piling procedures for Government workers as well as for supplies.

The chances are 10 to 1 they got enough plumbing materials stored in the White House basement to build 40 bathrooms from scratch. So they figure the materials for 40 bathrooms calls for 4 plumbers. That's what is known, I see by the papers, as Government "logistics."

I forget this Congressman's name, but the odds is good that this is his first term in the Congress.

Things is getting more and more complicated in the Pentagon Building, according to the piece I got here. It says the Pentagon boys has just put on another "assistant" that's got 33 words to his title. It says here he is "The Assistant to the Deputy Special Assistant to the Assistant for Space Office, Deputy Director, Research and Engineering (Tactical Warfare Programs) of the Defense Department's Tripartite Corporation Program, Sub-Group M, Military Space Research." When that fellow writes a letter, Mister Editor, I reckon he has to put the letter on one page and use another sheet for his title.

It's a great pity, Mister Editor, we can't get some folks in Washington that appreciate the simple things in life. For instance, take that Mayor of a little town in Alabama named Newton. I was reading where they built a new town hall and put a brick planter across the front. The Mayor put turnip greens in it, claimed he didn't know nothing that needed less care and looked so pretty.

Rathermore, he aims to put turnip in the water cooler and is going to rig up a vending machine where the town workers can get a nickel's worth of cornbread. It would be a great blessing to the country if we had a few fellows like the Mayor of Newton in the Pentagon Building.

I have took note through the years that country editors tells about things in simple words the folks can understand, and in a pinch I reckon they ain't no part of America the people has got more confidence in than the grass-roots press.

Even here at home things get more complicated ever day. My old lady went to the country store last week to get a gallon of kerosene. In the old days the feller at the store would stick a Irish potato over the spout, but now he fills the can with kerosene for 20-cent and, to hear him tell it, would have to get another 10-cent for the potato he break even.

Yours truly,
 Uncle Lew

Learn To Use New Appliance So It Can Save Your Time

A new automatic appliance seems complicated—until you learn to use it.

This is what Georgianne Baker, home management specialist at Michigan State University, says about using new home equipment.

Miss Baker explains that you need three things to get a done: your body, your mind, the right tool or appliance. You learn to use the tool, body and mind are still mastered the tool, however, eventually takes over the share of the job.

She points out that one of the things equipment can do is to form routines to make work go more smoothly and quickly. This suggests that you analyze your own work habits relation to equipment before buying.

"Homemakers who find it difficult to change their work habits probably should buy equipment more slowly," Miss Baker cautions, "using used to new equipment cause stresses and strains it really aren't worth it all some women."

Health Department Advises Safe Way To View Eclipse

Lansing — If the weather permits, Michigan residents will be treated to one of nature's comparatively rare spectacles Saturday afternoon, July 20—a partial eclipse of the sun.

During the eclipse, which starts at 3:20 p.m. EST, the moon passes between the earth and the sun, making it possible to look directly at the sun.

"But don't do it," warned State Health Commissioner Dr. Albert E. Heustis, who said that rays from the sun can cause permanent eye damage unless special caution is used in viewing the eclipse.

"Although most of the direct light is gone during an eclipse, dangerous invisible infra-red rays are still present," he said. "And contrary to popular belief, such devices as sun glasses, exposed photographic film, smoked glass, and even welder's goggles will not protect the eyes from these rays."

The eyes take care of themselves in normal sunshine, the commissioner explained, simply because one cannot stand to look at the intense light for more than an instant. However, during an eclipse the bright light is gone, but the infra-red rays are still present.

"These rays can literally burn a hole in the retina much in the same manner that sunlight passing through a magnifying glass can burn a hole in a piece of paper," he said.

"The eclipse is dangerous because it is both a compelling sight and yet one which can inflict irreparable damage to the eyes of unwary observers," Dr. Heustis said. He added a special caution to amateur photographers.

"Looking into the viewfinder of a camera at the sun is highly dangerous. Make-shift filters won't help."

He urged parents to warn children not to look at the sun, and to supervise them closely during the time of the eclipse to see that this warning is carried out.

Damage to the eye would not be felt while looking at the sun because the infra-red rays burn into the retina which is insensitive to pain. It is only after the damage has been done that a person would realize that the ability to distinguish small objects is lost—often for good. Such close-up activities as sewing and reading would be extremely difficult following a retina burn.

There are a few ways to safely enjoy this event according to Dr. Heustis. Some are fairly complicated, but the simplest method is to observe the reflection of the eclipse in a swimming pool, plastic wading pool, or old fashioned wash tub, provided that there is at least 12 inches of water to absorb the dangerous infra-red rays. Smoked glass will be handy for viewing the reflection to reduce uncomfortable brightness.

"The eclipse will last just two hours and 17 minutes from beginning to end," the Commissioner said, "but part of your sight could be eclipsed forever if you are not careful."

U. S. SECURITIES MISSING

A San Francisco Examiner, in a copyrighted story, said twelve negotiable United States Treasury bonds worth more than $8,000,000 have been missing from the vaults of the Twelfth Federal Reserve district bank since last summer.

A Government spokesman explained the Treasury securities worth $7,500,000 have been missing since last summer—but evidence indicates the securities were destroyed accidentally.

Michigan District Governor Addresses Kiwanis Club

Michigan District Governor Laurence J. White of Farmington, Mich., was a guest at Monday's Kiwanis club meeting here and in a talk, following the dinner, he gave an interesting account of his recent trip to Europe where he represented the Michigan District at the chartering of Kiwanis clubs in Vienna, Austria; Basel, Switzerland; and Brussels, Belgium.

The Vienna club was chartered May 4, the Basel club on May 13, and the Brussels club on May 23. Present at each of the charter ceremonies were 147 Americans, Canadians, and Bahama Islanders, all members of the Kiwanis European Mission. The mission was undertaken to permit Kiwanis leaders and members to become acquainted with the nations in Europe into which Kiwanis is now extending and to be on hand to provide proper send-offs for the fledgling European clubs. The Kiwanis European Mission represented 20 states, 2 Canadian provinces, and the Bahamas. Some 52 occupational groups were represented, making a true cross-section of business and professional life in the New World.

Prior to this year, Kiwanis served only in the U.S., Canada, Mexico, and the Bahamas. The latter two countries were entered in 1962.

In talking of his experiences on the trip, Governor White said it took only 57 minutes to travel by jet from Metropolitan Airport, Detroit, to Idlewild in New York City. There they boarded two chartered planes for the trip across the Atlantic.

Merle H. Tucker, Gallup, N.M., president of Kiwanis International, led the European Mission. Tucker was principal speaker at each of the three charter ceremonies. He also presented the respects of Kiwanis International to the municipal leaders of the three cities into which Kiwanis is extending, thanking these leaders for the opportunity to establish Kiwanis clubs there, and pledging the greatest of effort to make the new clubs important adjuncts to their cities.

The group left here April 26 and returned May 16. In addition to the three cities where Kiwanis clubs were chartered, visits were made to Copenhagen, Denmark; Lucerne and Zurich, Switzerland; and Paris, Amsterdam and London.

Eclipse Precautions . . .

People are advised to wait for professional pictures of the eclipse which are customarily published in newspapers and magazines afterwards.

Even a quick look at the sun, without proper equipment may cause permanent eye damage, optometrists have warned. In 1960, 21 people were completely blinded by watching an eclipse.

Double thicknesses of black and white camera film which has been exposed to maximum density is said to afford some protection to the eyes (single thickness of film is not sufficient). Safest practice, however, for amateurs, is to use the indirect method of looking at the reflected image on ground surfaces as filtered through leaves on trees and other partially shaded areas.

The ultrasonics laboratory at Michigan State University is one of the world's best known centers for basic research on high frequency sound waves.

S. R. Booker, last year's president, declined re-nomination because of heavy business responsibilities.

Curriculum—Luther Kusterer, chairman; Paul Mann, Dr. Clare Warren.

Resolution passed to borrow $100,000 against 1963-64 State Aid money due the district—a customary practice in recent years—and bids are to be requested for submission at the August board meeting.

It was agreed to continue a working agreement with Waldeemar Grossman as bus supervisor.

After extended discussion regarding the possible building of a track at the High school, it was decided to table the issue with the understanding it would be considered at the annual budget meeting for 1964-65 to be held in February.

It was decided to continue the current schedule for regular board meetings—the third Tuesday of the month at 7:30 p.m.—to be held in the administration building. The meetings are open to the public.

BLUEPRINTING with leaves and grasses is one of the fascinating projects for Girl Scouts at Day Camp now in session at Camp Newkirk, near Dexter. Equipment used is blueprint paper, sheets of glass under which to place the paper and objects to be blueprinted. The exposed paper is dipped into clear water and then an ammonia solution to develop it and bring out the outlines of the leaves or grasses, as the case may be. The three girls across the front, from left, are Linda Jensen of Ann Arbor, Mary Dee Lambert of Dexter, and Margaret Heady of Ann Arbor. Others, from left, are Julie Elsemann of Chelsea, Lucy Strack of Ann Arbor, Mrs. Richard Dettling who is Dexter Girl Scout Neighborhood chairman, Marlene Brehmeier of Ann Arbor, and Kathie Kitchinmaster, another Ann Arbor Girl Scout. Some of the equipment used in this blueprinting project is shown at center front of the photo.

W. F. Ager, Jr., Sworn in As Second Circuit Judge

Two major changes took place in Washtenaw county's judicial department last week when William F. Ager, Jr. became the county's second Circuit Judge, and William D. Barense, chief assistant in the prosecuting attorney's office since 1963, was appointed to fill the unexpired term of Judge Ager who has been county prosecutor since 1958.

The new Circuit Judge presided over his first cases Wednesday afternoon after having been sworn in by Circuit Judge James R. Breakey, Jr., before an overflowing audience that morning.

Judge Breakey, who has been the only Circuit Judge in the county since he took office in 1945, said to the new judge, "A good judge is a great blessing. From what I have heard and from what I know of you myself, I am sure that you will carry out your high position with judicial temperament and dignity."

The new judge was equally impressed along with Judge Breakey whom he called "one of the towers of the judiciary in the state" and added, "I am glad to have him to guide me."

Judge Breakey and Judge Ager jointly made the appointment of Barense, 38, as prosecuting attorney. Judge Breakey said, "It will be a pleasure to work with Judge Ager and William Barense in the administration of justice in the court and the county. I have complete confidence in the work I know Mr. Barense will do. He is a worthy successor to his predecessor."

Judge Ager was equally confident of the new prosecutor's ability. He said, "Mr. Barense has always been a tremendous help as chief assistant prosecutor. During my term in office I have learned very heavily on him at all times. He will do a tremendous job as the chief law enforcement officer of the county."

Barense is a partner in the law firm of Lawrence, Ulrich, Tripp and Barense whose offices are in Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti, and Barense, his wife, Dorothy, and their three children, Lisa, 10, Barbara, 8, and William, Jr., 5, live in Ypsilanti at 700 Oxford Rd.

Acting in his new capacity, Barense announced Monday that he has promoted his three assistants: William F. Delaney, 38, of Saline who will be the new chief assistant; John R. Hathaway, 34, of 4 Marshall Ct., Ann Arbor, who advanced from second to first assistant; and Casper H. Kaut, 52, of 1200 Linwood Ave., Ann Arbor, who is now second assistant rather than third.

Many Lots Claimed By State for Taxes May Be Recovered

Nearly 200 Washtenaw county lots, reverting to the State because of non-payment of 1959 taxes, may still be recovered by the former owners.

Aug. 5, the Conservation Department advises, is the last date that ex-owners may request that the lots be put up for sale at a public auction. Requests should be made to the Department's lands division, Lansing 26.

Some of the platted lots have houses and other buildings on them.

About 70 lots in Jackson county could also be placed on the public auction docket. All together, some 7,000 parcels in 77 counties are involved.

The Department stresses that former owner requests will be accepted only on those lands involving non-payment of 1959 taxes.

Modern philosophy, "Get away first with the most."

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Stinehelfer and children, Debbie, Dana, Wesley and John, returned home Sunday from a two-week vacation trip during which they traveled through Ohio, Kentucky, West Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Washington, D. C., and points in Canada. They visited the Gettysburg centennial activities, stopped at Niagara Falls, and at Washington, D. C., took a guided tour of the city and surrounding area, visiting the White House, the Capitol, Mt. Vernon, Arlington National Cemetery and many points of special interest including the Smithsonian Institute where they saw the space capsules used by the astronauts, Shepherd and Carpenter. The family took their own camping trailer with them, stopping along the way to get their meals and spend the night.

Mrs. George W. Thompson, the former Pauline Jones, left Monday for her home in Long Beach, Calif., after spending the past week as a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Rha Alexander. She had spent the previous week in Detroit as a delegate to the National Education Association convention as a representative of the Long Beach Unified School District.

Mrs. James W. Hall and daughters, Linda and Elaine, arrived Monday from Wurtsmith Air Force Base, Osceola, to spend until Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Lesser, Sr., before leaving by plane to join her husband, Airman First Class Hall, now stationed at Clark Air Force Base on Luzon in the Philippine Islands. The Halls are returning to the Philippines on a re-assignment, and will be living in the same community they lived on their former stay. Mrs. Hall's brother, Reuben Lesser, Jr., went to Osceola to help her close up her home Monday and bring her and the children to Chelsea.

Housewives Found Good At Shopping

Ann Arbor—The young housewife has become an expert shopper who seeks information in making purchase decisions, according to a University of Michigan authority on economics and psychology.

Prof. George Katona points out that today's young housewife "has on the average very much more education than the average housewife of 50 or even 20 years ago"—a fact with implications for advertisers.

Early marriage and arrival of children often leave the housewife with little time or energy for anything but housekeeping and child-rearing, he adds.

In order to do well at her task, she is looking for sound information to help in deliberation and choice, the U-M authority says.

It is probable, Katona explains, that with increasing education levels the frequency of genuine decision-making through deliberation, weighing of alternatives, and solving—is growing in our society, and is, in fact, more frequent now than a generation ago.

"In order to make a genuine decision, consumers need information from the suppliers," Katona writes in the bulletin, "Psychological Research on Consumer Behavior" published by the Foundation for Research on Human Behavior, in Ann Arbor.

"The sensible consumer wishes to understand why things happen on the market place, and what the characteristics of different products are."

"To promote such an understanding is one of the major functions of advertising. Advertising should aim at assisting the consumer to understand what he is buying. Advertising should not consist of unreasoned appeal to sway consumers' actions."

Katona, a director of the Survey Research Center's Economic Behavior Program, says that providing material for consumer thinking is not the same as attempts to "influence" consumers.

"If modern psychology has proved anything, then it is that changing other human beings, and especially changing them without

MICHIGAN DISTRICTS for MENTALLY RETARDED REVISED

Districts for Michigan's mentally retarded patients have been revised with establishment of a new commitment area for Mt. Pleasant Home and Training School. The new district is composed of 34 counties formerly in the Lapeer and Coldwater districts.

Mt. Pleasant, after 40 years as a training hospital for patients committed to Lapeer, will now receive direct commitments from the courts in the counties it serves. In addition to major hospitals in the four commitment districts there are four transfer hospitals, at Plymouth and Howell in Lapeer district, Ft. Custer in Coldwater district, and Gaylord in the new Mt. Pleasant district.

Fifty beds for retarded have been added at Gaylord State Home, formerly a 125-bed sanatorium, which will now be used exclusively for the mentally retarded. During recent years approximately 140 retarded patients have been located at this facility.

Another commitment district will be established in Southwestern Michigan, states Charles F. Wagg, director of Department of Mental Health, when planned construction of a new hospital in the Grand Rapids area is completed.

Isle Royale Offers True Wilderness to Vacationers

Isle Royale—The most important vacation equipment to take to Michigan's Isle Royale National Park is a pair of comfortable walking shoes.

For here on an island 45 miles long and 9 miles wide (second largest in the Great Lakes) is one of the few remaining areas of genuine wilderness left in the United States. All travel is on foot or by motorboat.

Prof. Warren W. Chase, chairman of the Department of Wildlife Management at the University of Michigan, rates Isle Royale near the top of any vacation list. A longtime hunter, camper and outdoorsman, he takes U-M classes there every summer.

Professor Chase finds Isle Royale "a delightful place to visit, definitely off the beaten track, of interest especially to people who want to experience primitive country. The beautiful boat cruise of several hours across Lake Superior is worth the trip alone," he adds.

"Although the soil is rather thin and rocky, the island is covered with dense growths of hardwood and coniferous trees, and there is some swampland. Off the picturesque, craggy coastline is some of the clearest water in the world, where visitors can see down perhaps 30 to 40 feet. Fishing is excellent."

"Isle Royale is ringed by smaller islands of all shapes and sizes, through which once-passed voyagers from Western Canada en route to Montreal. The Indians used the island for copper mining, and the ancient open pit mines, among the oldest in the world, remain to remind us that this was probably the aboriginal trading center from which the early Americans took most of their copper."

The U. S. Park Service maintains a resort at either end of the island, insect-proof lean-tos and camping areas, and supervises miles of trails. In addition to water travel available, Professor Chase recommends a visit to some of the many inland lakes, some of them several hundred feet above Lake Superior.

"The view from such heights as Mount Ojibwa and Mount Franklin, both reached in hikes of two miles or less, allows one to see into parts of northern Minnesota and Ontario to the west," he recalls.

"Almost every traveler will see moose, the most abundant of the island wildlife, and relatively approachable since there has been no hunting on the island for years. In addition there are eagles and osprey, beaver and a few wolves, but no bears or deer."

Isle Royale vacationers should make arrangements and travel reservations through the National Park Service at Houghton, Mich.

Veteran of Year Will Be Honored At State Fair

Who'll be Michigan's 1968 "Veteran of the Year?"

Nominations for this unique honor have started coming in to the Michigan State Fair. And Walter A. Goodman, State Fair general manager, today urged all of the state's 1,600 local veterans to rush the information on their candidates. Deadline is July 25.

The "Veteran of the Year" will be honored on Veterans Day at the State Fair, Saturday, Aug. 24. This is the second day of the 144th annual Michigan State Fair, which this year runs from Friday evening, Aug. 23, through Labor Day, Monday, Sept. 2.

Joining in the call for veteran nominations was Gerald Lawrence, of Jackson, of the Michigan Consolidated War Veterans Council. Application blanks may be obtained by writing to William J. Hahn, director of special events, Michigan State Fair, Detroit 3.

The winner will be chosen on the basis of his contributions to civic, community and veterans affairs during the past year. A committee of veterans and citizens, named by the sponsoring groups, will choose the winner.

In addition to honoring the "Veteran of the Year," other activities centered around veteran groups will highlight Veterans Day at the State Fair. All veterans and members of veterans groups and their auxiliaries will be admitted free until 3 p.m. on that day.

Safety Experts Thinking of Traffic Accidents as Disease

East Lansing—James M. Hare, chairman of the Michigan State Safety Commission, recommends "treating highway accidents and fatalities as though they were a wide-spread disease and to take an across-the-board attack on the problem as though it were an epidemic."

Hare, addressing the Women's Auxiliary of the American Optometric Association conference in Kellogg Center recently said, "The epidemiological approach to accident prevention seems to be the only realistic way to lower the total number of highway fatalities in America."

As he explored his theme, "The Quandary of Highway Safety" at the Auxiliary's driver improvement conference, Hare told his East Lansing audience of state safety chairman from the United States that "this epidemiological approach to accident prevention is one which is as yet little understood by many safety experts or laymen in this country."

Complex Disease
"If we scrutinize all the facts we have on traffic accidents as though accidents were a complex disease, much as many researchers now approach alcoholism, we may arrive at better solutions to this problem more quickly. The United States Public Health Service is beginning to get significant results from this approach."

"One of the most important questions concerns the amount of information available as to basic causes of accidents. Such knowledge is necessary to organize effective methods of prevention. Unfortunately, however, there is only limited understanding of the interrelationships among the various influences resulting in accidents, and of the effectiveness of the methods of prevention. Many of the studies which have been carried out have been inconclusive because of such deficiencies as: inadequate time sampling, and definition and criteria of accidents; study of single variables out of context; biased sampling of the absence of control groups; lack of appropriate statistical treatment; and the fact that many conclusions are based on intuitive rather than empirical information."

"My medically-inclined colleagues in traffic safety, who have been pursuing this 'epidemic' approach, have shown that when data on accidental injuries are analyzed in a standard epidemiological manner, injuries appeared to follow patterns somewhat similar to diseases, and involve related biological principles. The distribution of injuries showed characteristic variations in regard to age, sex, type of accident, and other factors. Accidents occur at different rates and in relation to different agents and circumstances among different groups of the population."

Team Approach
Hare stressed the fact that the "epidemiological approach to curing the continuing epidemic of accidents involves the study of influences of many kinds, including the characteristics of the persons involved and variables relating to the environment. This usually requires the collaboration of scientists from several fields or disciplines, and the team approach has been essential to many important advances."

"It is this same team approach which has worked so effectively in our Michigan 3-E program of across-the-board action programs in safety education, enforcement, and engineering. It is my hope that the same spirit of cooperation will make it possible for experts with backgrounds in medicine and related fields to achieve significant results in their areas of competency."

"The first step in an in-depth study of accidents involves an analysis of their distribution in terms of the persons who had them, the places they occurred, their times and temporal sequences, taken in regard to different classes of accidents and in regard to different agents and mechanisms of injury."

Strategic Approaches
"The reduction of accidental injury and death may be approached at a number of levels or stages similar to the control of disease. In this way, the findings of research may be applied within a framework of four basic strategies having the common final objective of significantly reducing the consequences of accidents."

"These strategic approaches are: the control of exposure to known hazardous combinations of factors, such as, eliminating risk of head-on collisions by separating opposing streams of traffic; the prevention of accidents in hazardous situations, such as, training drivers to handle skids or to take appropriate evasive actions; the minimization of injury consequent to accidents, such as, seat belts for occupants of vehicles; and minimization of long-term effects of injury, such as, through adequate emergency treatment and management of concomitant consequences."

"Most of the above strategies parallel the basic principles of preventive medicine. These have as objectives, either singly or together, to reduce the susceptibility of persons, decrease the injurious properties of specific agencies, and to prevent harmful interactions between persons and agents of potential injury."

Human Failure
"As the causes of motor vehicle accidents are reviewed in spot studies, the almost invariable conclusion that is reached is that most are attributable to human failures of various kinds. This is an oversimplification and often eliminates the factor of multiple causation, including not only certain human characteristics of the drivers, lack of training and experience, poor personal or inadequate social adjustments, the changes in skill which comes with advancing age, and the impairment in driving performance due to such temporary factors as fatigue, alcohol, emotional moments, the effect of disease processes, and the influence of drugs and medications on the vehicle operator."

NEUTRALITY AND LAOS
A possible breakdown of the efforts to preserve the neutrality of Laos under the pressure of mounting Communist attacks feared by State Department officials.

This breakdown would not end the fourteen-nation accord worked out at Geneva one year ago but, would unleash fighting again in the Southeast Asian area.

Anastasia Cavadas, William Winkler Wedding Performed at St. Paul's Church

The marriage of Anastasia (Tassy) Cavadas of Ypsilanti and William F. Winkler of Manchester, was solemnized Saturday evening at St. Paul's United Church of Christ. The Rev. H. Grabowski, pastor-emeritus of the church, officiated at the ceremony in the presence of approximately 150 guests.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gus Cavadas of 317 North Main St., Chelsea, while the bridegroom is a son of William F. Winkler of Manchester and Mrs. A. Graham of Lamontville.

For her wedding the bride wore a floor-length gown of white tulle and lace. The lace, re-embroidered with iridescent pearls was used for the bodice which featured a scalloped neckline. A large bow at the back added a bustle effect from which matching lace over tulle extended into a chapel train. Her shoulder-length veil was attached to a crown of seed pearls and her ensemble was complemented with a cascade bouquet of white roses and stephanotis.

Mrs. Clarence Stein of Ann Arbor, the former Francine Purfield, was matron-of-honor wearing for the occasion a pink and white tulle street-length dress with a bell-shaped skirt. Her hat was fashioned of white tulle and was trimmed with a short veil. She wore a corsage of pink and white carnations.

Angela Cavadas, a sister of the bride, as junior bridesmaid, and Denise Petsch, her niece, as flower girl, were dressed alike in aqua and white chiffon with nylon net brimmed hats in matching color. Mrs. Cavadas had a corsage of white carnations and the flower girl carried a basket of white chrysanthemums.

Dennis Petsch, nephew of the bride, was ringbearer. The flower girl and ringbearer are children of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Petsch.

James Settle of Manchester assisted the bridegroom as best man. Ushers were Fred Colvin of Ann Arbor and Frederick Petsch of Chelsea.

For her daughter's wedding, the bride's mother wore a beige dress with beige and brown accessories and had a corsage of white roses. Mrs. Graham wore a blue and white floral print dress and white accessories and Mrs. Winkler, the bridegroom's stepmother, wore aqua and white. Each had a corsage of white roses.

At the reception, held immediately after the ceremony in the church hall and dining room, Mrs. Ralph Frisch assisted by cutting the wedding cake; Mrs. Charles Budoff of Ann Arbor, aunt of the bride, poured punch; Mrs. Wesley King of Ann Arbor, also

Film Review... "LAURENCE OF ARABIA"

A superb-rebels film, winner of seven academy awards, "Laurence of Arabia" is all that critics claim it to be. Taking some three and one half hours to show, this spectacle of color has been intelligently put together which is appreciated by audiences of adult mentalities.

Laurence, accepted hero of the film, was leader of a crucial Arab revolt against the Turks in World War I. One must not assume that he is magnificent only as a military hero—but he assumes also the role as romantic poet-philosopher-adventurer in untiring the desert tribes.

Words are inadequate to describe the brutal camel-march across the trackless desert. Thrillingly the photographers' skill shows a tiny speck over the far desert horizon that gradually increases to be come a man and a horse.

Peter O'Toole as Laurence is superb. He's ably supported by Alec Guinness, Anthony Quinn, Jack Hawkins, Jose Ferrer, Claude Rains and others.

Never before has such awesome magnificence been captured so realistically on film.

Michigan apples in 1962 were sold as far south as the gulf coast, all the way from San Diego to Nome on the west coast, airlifted into remote mining and lumber camps in northern Canada, and even exported to Europe.

The NATIONAL OUTLOOK

By GEORGE HAGEDORN

Muddying the Waters

A bill currently before the Senate would impose additional federal controls over industry's practices in disposing of water-borne wastes. It contains the following language: "It is the purpose of this Act to establish a positive national water pollution control policy of keeping waters as clean as possible."

face value we ought to give the country back to the Indians—with some parting advice on their sanitary arrangements. Failing that, we should dismantle such basic industries as steel, petroleum refining and paper-making which are large water users. The effect would be to stop the whole economy dead in its tracks. Most of our people would be without means of livelihood, but they might have cleaner water while they starved to death. We must assume that, despite the language of the bill, its sponsors have no such extreme measures in mind. Nevertheless the bill would give extensive regulatory powers to the federal government which would certainly affect the viability of many industrial enterprises and their ability to provide goods, services and employment.

The public has a legitimate interest in the effects of industry waste disposal on the cleanliness of streams and lakes. The proposal for federal regulation would be justified if there were a clear demonstration that the problem is not being handled effectively in other ways. The record of progress in the control of water pollution proves the direct opposite. Practically all the industrial states have measures for controlling the disposal of waste waters. In addition there are organizations set up by interstate compact—one of the most notable being the Ohio River Valley Water Sanitation Commission—which are doing an outstanding job in improving the quality of water in interstate streams.

Partly as a result of this action on the state level, and partly on its own volition, industry has spent large sums for research and equipment in the field of water use and disposal. Among those who know, it is agreed that there has been a dramatic improvement in stream conditions. While all problems have not been solved, there is no reason to suppose that federal intervention will hasten their solution. A federal administrator would have two choices. The easy way would be to issue uniform regulations for the entire country. These would almost certainly be inappropriate—the problems in the Great Lakes area are vastly different from those in the Southwest. Or he could issue special regulations for specific areas, in which case he would be second-guessing the local, state and interstate bodies who are already in the field. In either case he could do great damage to American industry and the economy as a whole.

Federal regulation is an ineffective and unnecessary method of cleaning up our streams. It could however foul up our industrial growth.

Production Records Told For Area Holsteins

Registered Holstein cows from this area are prominently mentioned in an official production testing report received today from Holstein-Friesian Association of America headquarters at Brattleboro, Vermont.

Leo Bur Robinhood Ann, 4658461, a three-year-old, owned by Leonard Burmeister, Ann Arbor, produced 20,953 lbs. milk and 718 lbs. butterfat in 365 days.

Heidt Iowa Alta, 4915875, two-year-old, owned by Darold Heidt, Dexter, produced 15,825 lbs. milk and 587 lbs. butterfat in 365 days.

According to the national Holstein organization, the new production figures compare to an annual output of 7,211 lbs. of milk and 270 lbs. of butterfat by the average U. S. dairy cow.

Michigan State University supervised the weighing and testing of the Holstein records as part of the breed's nation-wide herd testing programs.

Correction . . .

An embarrassing error crept into the Four Mile Lake news last issue when it was reported that "Wilma Braasow and son" were here from San Francisco. Wilma is here, but she has no children.

The churches of our community may not be the biggest in the world but they can give us more religion than we can assimilate.

Lower Egg Prices Predicted for Fall

Egg prices during the next year beginning in October are likely to average one to two cents less with egg supplies slightly above the current year's level.

That conclusion was reached recently by five leading agricultural economists including Dr. Henry Larzelere of Michigan State University. The five are members of the poultry survey committee sponsored by the American Feed Manufacturers Association and the National Turkey Federation.

"United States farm prices during the July to September period are expected to average 32-33 cents per dozen with prices from October through December averaging 30 cents," says Larzelere.

"The committee reported some indication of improved demand for eggs during the past several months, but improvement is not expected to be great enough to offset the expected increase in supplies," he added.

U. S. farm turkey prices during the September to December period should be about the same as the 22-cent average of a year earlier. A continuing over-expansion in the broiler industry may mean excessive supplies and depressed prices during the first half of 1964.

Water Accidents Claim 83 Persons This Year

Eighty-three persons have died and at least 45 others have been injured in 118 water accidents so far this year in Michigan, State Police provisional figures disclosed Monday.

These represent decreases of 10 in deaths, six in injured and 23 in accidents compared with the same period last year.

Six of the 18 persons who drowned in falls from bridges, banks, docks, piers or through ice were children under 10 years of age, with inadequate supervision indicated according to State Police analysis.

DEFENSE MONEY SLASHED

Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara protested the $2-billion slash in the defense money bill as voted by the House Appropriations Committee.

McNamara issued a statement saying this would force cutting back armed services strength by about 60,000 men and would deny necessary tactical air support "for our combat-ready divisions."

The committee stated that more than half of the cut is in the book-keeping area and none of the money denied is needed for essential activity.

GOVERNOR ROMNEY REPORTS

Many of you may remember seeing newspaper photographs of me running through the snow during subzero weather last winter. At the time, there were exclamations of surprise that anyone would be silly enough to leave the comfort of a warm bed to go trotting through the frosty darkness. Silly or not, I've found that little exercise is performed with unfailing regularity. It has very little lasting benefit. And if you like to take your exercise out in the daytime, and in the night his song shall be with me, and my prayer unto the God of my life.

doors, regularly means in any kind of weather. During the summer months, my favorite form of exercise is a game of what I call "compact golf." This consists of playing three balls for six holes. During the winter or when the links are closed, I usually start my day by running a mile or two. This distance isn't as formidable as it sounds if you start with something less ambitious and build on it.

I got the habit of running in 1948 when I was living in the Milwaukee Athletic Club and getting acquainted with Nash-Kelvinator.

The club had a sign that read, "It ain't the amount of exercise that counts, it's the regularity." Then I met an executive who had a program of physical exercise the year around. He looked at good that I decided to follow his ample.

Why exercise at all? Since I began the regular exercise habit, I've found that if I miss my morning exertion, I don't feel up to par for the rest of the day.

But beyond that very personal reason, I feel that physical fitness is part of the patriotic duty of all Americans.

For much of our country's history, Americans had little or no choice in performing this duty. The rigorous tasks of clearing the forests, plowing fields or even walking long distances to country schools provided more than enough physical activities for our forefathers.

But as more and more Americans moved to the cities, as technology improved to make our lives easier, the amount of physical exertion required in the course of our normal daily activities diminished below the minimum.

The shocking effects of this change became apparent during World War II, when hundreds of thousands of Americans were rejected for military service because they failed to meet physical standards.

Despite this revelation, Americans continued to neglect their physical development. A few years ago a study showed that American youth lagged far behind European youth in levels of physical fitness.

President Eisenhower recognized the importance of the problem and established his Council on Youth Fitness. The council conducted a survey which showed that 10 million of our 40 million school children are unable to pass a test which measures only a minimum level of physical vigor.

The Council initiated steps to remedy this situation. President Kennedy threw his weight behind the program, recognizing that physical fitness is not a partisan matter but a goal for all Americans.

While much of the council's program is being carried on in the schools, parents are being encouraged to improve their own fitness at home.

Parents can and should set an example of physical excellence so that their children will not grow up to find themselves the physical inferiors of the rest of the world.

New Jersey Businessman Named To Head Kiwanis International

Charles A. Swain, Cape May, N. J. businessman, was elected president of Kiwanis International at the organization's 48th annual convention in Atlantic City, according to Robert Daniels, president of the Kiwanis Club of Chelsea.

As head of Kiwanis International, Swain will be official spokesman for some 262,000 Kiwanians in more than 5200 clubs in the United States, Canada, Mexico, the Bahamas, and West Indies. He succeeds New Mexico broadcaster, Merle H. Tucker, who has held the presidency during the year immediately preceding.

Prior to becoming president of Kiwanis International, Swain served one year as president-elect, one year as vice-president, and two years as a trustee of the service organization. He has been a Kiwanian for 35 years.

Swain is a former bank executive and owner and operator of a chain of variety stores in Cape May. He is a member of the Board of Governors of the Burdette Memorial Hospital, a director of the Cape May Chamber of Commerce, a past president of the city's Board of Education, a past chairman of the South Jersey Council of the Boy Scouts of America, and a member of the Advisory Board of the Cape May Baptist Church. He holds the Key of Honor of Key Club International for outstanding service rendered to that organization.

Swain has served as president of the Kiwanis Club of Cape May, as lieutenant governor and governor of the New Jersey Kiwanis District, and as a member and chairman of several Kiwanis district and international committees.

He is a graduate of Carnegie Institute of Technology in Pittsburgh, Pa. Swain is married. The couple have two grown sons. In addition to naming Swain president, delegates to the 48th annual Kiwanis International convention chose a president-elect, two vice-presidents, a treasurer, and six international trustees. The latter will serve for two years, joining six holdover trustees.

New officers and trustees are: Edward B. Moylan, Jr. of Miami, Fla., president-elect; Mel R. Osborne, East York, Ontario, and R. Glenn Reed, Marietta, Ga., international vice-presidents; Edward C. Reefe, Oklahoma City, Okla., international treasurer; Marshall E. Petty, St. Mary's Pa., James M. Stoler, Charles Town, W. Va., Lee Ray J. Olsen, Provo, Utah, (re-elected), James W. Putnam, Hilo, Hawaii, and Claude L. Ryder, Brewer, Me., and Phillip V. Stout, Hilltop, Columbus, O., international trustees.

This was the fifth time that

CHARLES A. SWAIN

Kiwanis International has met in Atlantic City. The convention was characterized by a near record crowd and a slate of headline speakers and feature events. Delegates at the convention adopted resolutions upon which Kiwanis' service programs for 1963-64 will be based, recognized "the best all-round Kiwanis clubs and districts for 1962," and developed new ideas in community service and club administration.

The 1964 convention will be held in Los Angeles, Calif.

County Library Director Curtis Resigns Position

The Washtenaw county library board "regretfully accepted" the resignation of George A. Curtis, who will accept a position in the Wayne county library system Sept. 27.

Curtis, first director of the Washtenaw county library which was founded last summer, said, "It has been an exciting experience to start a new library. I regret leaving Washtenaw county but I just could not turn down this position. The Washtenaw county library is past its infancy stage. It will continue to grow and develop under the guidance of its very outstanding library board."

The board is now seeking applications for a successor to Curtis who, before coming to the county last August, was director of the LaPorte, Ind. county and city library system, a post he held for 10 years. Prior to that he had been on the University of Chicago library staff.

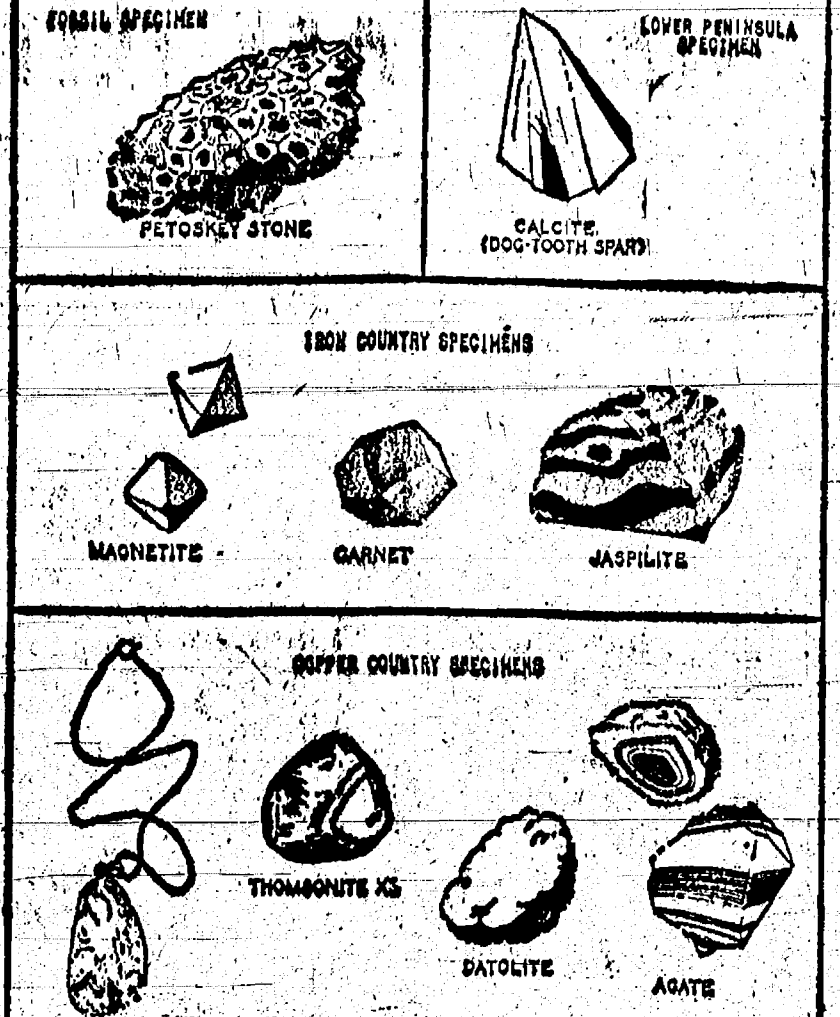

The county library has its headquarters in the basement of the Ann Arbor Public Library and operates a bookmobile six days a week.

ROCK HUNTING "GEMS"—Each year, more people are striking it rich in outdoor fun collecting rocks and minerals in Michigan. Specimens that may be worked into pendants, earrings, and other jewelry are found in a number of places with the foremost area being the Keweenaw Peninsula—"Copper Country." Shores of Lake Superior are some of the best collecting places; colorful agates and thomsonites are much sought after along pebble beaches. Waste rock dumps of old copper mines offer excellent opportunities for finding such treasures as "dottle." Another rock that takes a gem-like finish is jaspilite, found in the Marquette region of the "Iron Country." Garnet and magnetite are other popular collector's items from this country. Among the lower peninsula's outstanding display specimens are calcite crystals, located in limestone quarries near Monroe. The Petoskey stone, a fossil common in beach rubble along the south shore of Little Traverse Bay, rates high on the wanted list of many "gem" hunters. To learn more about rocks and where to find them, write the Department of Conservation, Publications Room, Lansing 26, for a free copy of "Collecting Minerals in Michigan."

Even 3-Year-Olds Benefit From Co-Op Nursery School

In a report submitted this week by the Chelsea Co-Operative Nursery it was pointed out that now, days people seem convinced of the value of nursery school for four-year-olds, but aren't so sure about three-year-olds. They asked Mrs. Arthur Thomas of Baker Rd., Dexter, about her daughter Robin's experience at the Chelsea Co-Operative Nursery School this past year.

"I enrolled my baby in nursery school when she was still in diapers!" she replied. (This, of course, was six months before she actually went.) "She was not quite three and the smallest one there, last September on her first day of school. Now she is a big girl. Both she and I are very glad she has had this year with Miss Jane and the other children."

Mrs. Thomas went on to say that Robin needed a chance with other children and adults because all her relatives are far away and there was only one neighbor, hood-child and a baby-sister to play with.

At a recent meeting, other mothers gave quite different reasons for sending their three-year-olds:

- (1) There are too many children in the neighborhood and it's difficult for the adults to supervise.
- (2) She's the youngest (or the middle one) and rather shy.
- (3) He was so active. It has helped to calm him down.
- (4) He needed a place that was all his own.
- (5) He plays well with the older children, but not his own age. Many other reasons were set forth, as well.

The three-year-olds meet Tuesday and Thursday mornings; the four-year-olds in the afternoon. Most three-year-olds go on to the four-year-old group. The teacher, Mrs. Raymond Schairer, plans a more advanced and different program for the four-year-olds, so no one would be bored in this two years of free activity before kindergarten.

There are openings in the three-year-old group and openings in the four-year-old group. For information call Mrs. Raymond Steinbach, GR 9-5881.

Detergents Creating New Problem in Trout Streams

Lansing — The increasing presence of detergents in Michigan trout streams is attracting the concern of fisheries biologists of the Department of Conservation. To determine the scope of the situation, the Department is conducting a survey in co-operation with the Water Resources Commission. This is a preliminary step to establish guide lines for more intensive research.

Of Michigan's 88 counties, 32 bear Indian names.

Ant Antics

Those who belittle the need for continued farm research have not stepped into a nest of imported fire-ants. These vicious creatures can make confirmed believers of anyone in the need for more funds and better facilities at our agricultural colleges and experiment stations.

"One thing is sure, you don't want the fire-ant in your lawn, garden or farm," says W. A. Ruffin, chief of the Plant Industry Division of the Alabama Department of Agriculture. There, fire ants are a major problem and thousands of acres of rich farmland have been invaded by the pest, which appears to have arrived from South America some years ago.

Each year the ant is found in new areas of the southland and appears to be working north. How to stop its spread is the big question to which the research is applied.

How can one tell the imported insect from common local ants? "By the mounds they build," Ruffin says; mounds that rise from two to four feet high, honeycombed with passages and rock-like when composed of the rich Alabama black soil. "I call it the Alabama chicken-pox," he observes, shaking his head at the several hundred mounds visible in a heavily infested two-acre field.

Southern farmers are not so positive in what they call them, as they dodge around with mowers and combine. "Hit one square and chunks of solid dirt and ants fly in all directions. Worse, chances are you'll stop for repairs with a guard or two gone and some sections missing from the sickle," reports one farmer.

A more subtle loss is caused by the human discomfort the ants bring. "See those blisters?" a farmer asked. "I got them from fire-ants while pulling a few weeds in my garden." The blisters were larger than one would suppose and each contained a bit of pus. This stronger venom of the imported fire-ant is its second stings have put children in the hospital and causes field hands to refuse to work in infested row crops.

Full-scale research projects aim at containing the ant, controlling its spread, and finally, complete eradication. Anyone who enjoys a picnic, likes a nice lawn or garden, or appreciates a smooth hayfield, will benefit.

Manchester Expects To Serve 5,500 at Annual Chicken Broil

Manchester's 10th annual Charcoal Chicken Broil, the most popular event of its kind in the State, takes place today, Thursday, July 18, on the high school athletic field.

On that day some 200 citizens of the town will reveal the legendary exploits of Paul Bunyan. Between the hours of 4:30 and 9:30 they will slow-broil and serve more than three tons of plump Michigan-bred chicken halves to 5,500 guests.

Some 60 white-hatted chefs will supervise the cooking on special turning grates resting on 150 feet of charcoal pits capable of cooking 1,800 chicken halves at one time.

The slow-broil technique, which assures that the chicken will be done to a turn without blistering the skin, was developed by Howard Zindel, head of the Michigan State Poultry Science Department, who personally supervises the big Manchester event each year.

The broil features Michigan chicken, generally plumper and better conditioned than imported varieties. Halves average 18 ounces. Grates of chicken are delivered to the pits from a refrigerator truck, from which they emerge lightly frosted but not frozen.

Also during the dinner, more than a ton of chilled cabbage will be fresh sliced on German sauerkraut slicers and converted into slaw with a vinegar and oil seasoning featuring plenty of celery seed. Buns, relishes, coffee and milk complete the menu.

Although the broil is officially sponsored by the Optimist Club and the Jaycees, practically every organization in town takes part. High school classes supervise soft drinks and ice cream. Scouts, members of 4-H and FFA, church and Farm Bureau lend a hand.

The Manchester Broil, which has become a model for similar mass picnics throughout the Midwest, depends for its smooth operation on the full cooperation of 22 committees.

The largest committee presides over the pits. Here, 80 men supervise the broiling and basting. Special subcommittees will preheat a ton or more of charcoal and deliver it to the pits, deliver the chicken from truck to grid, turn and baste, test the chicken for finish, and deliver the cooked chicken to the serving lines.

ple at one time, and to clean up places for newcomers. There are committees for coffee making, ice cream, soft drinks, and for breaking out potato chips, relishes, and buns, for cutting slaw and bringing it to the serving tables. There is an audio committee, to announce distinguished guests and advise the waiting diners of the chicken supply.

All these specialized committees, well trained in their jobs, assure a smooth-running event. Many visitors come to Manchester not only to enjoy the dinner, but to watch the spectacle.

Last year, several hundred diners were disappointed when the record supply of chicken ran out. This year, a reserve of 500 halves will be on hand, and will be delivered to the charcoal pits in plenty of time to take care of the crowd, even if it exceeds last year's 5,500.

There has not been a serious threat of rain in the 10 years the broil has been held. If there is rain on July 18 guests may take their dinners to nearby shelters, school rooms, and into their cars.

Two fast softball games will entertain guests in the afternoon and evening.

Dogs May Be Trained In Field Nesting Until Spring Nesting Season

Lansing — Dogs may be trained in the field beginning July 15 and continuing through to the beginning of next year's bird nesting time, April 15.

The Conservation Department reminds dog owners of these restrictions: Training hours are between sunrise and sunset except from Aug. 15 to opening of the raccoon season in October. Only sidearms with blank cartridges from Aug. 15 to opening of the law are lawful in dog training; no rifles or shotguns are permitted.

Michigan, the nation's third largest apple producer, had a commercial crop of 12 million bushels in 1961. This was valued at $21 million to the grower. Chief varieties are Jonathan, McIntosh, Northern Spy and Delicious. New development is controlled atmosphere (CA) storage in which the state has the second largest capacity in the country. This makes it possible to have a crisp juicy apple in late spring or early summer.

IT'S NEVER TOO EARLY to learn... and that's true where the telephone is concerned, too. That's why it's such a good idea to teach young children how to use the telephone correctly—especially for emergencies. A child can easily learn how to dial the Operator—and, if need be, ask the Operator to call the police or fire department. When children understand what a phone is for and how to use it, they're less apt to regard it as a toy, or "play games" that could interfere with calls from people trying to reach you.

CAREFREE TRIPS are at your fingertips, this summer... when you remember to phone ahead. It's really amazing how many summer-fun problems the phone can solve for you. And how many ways the phone can add to your fun! Like making sure of your reservations, on a two-week trip. Or inviting a friend to join you for a swim on a warm Saturday afternoon. And when you're on the move, Michigan Bell has 45,000 public phones to serve you. You'll find them alongside highways, near the beach, in stores and office buildings.

COST CONSCIOUS? Costs are on everybody's mind these days. And that goes for your telephone company, too. For example, Western Electric, the manufacturing and supply unit of the Bell System, recently developed a new method of making the familiar "plungers" for the handset cradle on telephones. The new method cuts nearly two cents from the cost of manufacturing each phone—an aggregate saving of over $100,000 a year. Cost reduction is an everyday part of our job, helping us provide you with telephone service that is high in value, low in cost.

Unusual Bridges Attract, Serve Michigan Visitors

A bridge is a monument; a tangible answer to the challenge that natural obstacles have imposed on man's progress.

A feeling of participation in this progress is one of the reasons why tourists will often drive out of their way to see an unusual bridge. Michigan, with more than 10,000 bridges, is a prime area for this vacation travel activity.

Many bridges of unique or unusual design have been constructed to meet Michigan's transportation and industrial needs, according to the Michigan Tourist Council. The bridge builders' task is magnified by the rolling countryside, dotted with more than 11,000 lakes and bordered by 36,000 miles of rivers and streams.

Almost every kind of bridge construction—cantilever, suspension, bascule, turning or siphon—has been used to satisfy particular needs, often with spectacular results.

Topping the list of Michigan bridges is the impressive Straits of Mackinac structure. The five-mile-long suspension bridge was completed in 1957 at a cost exceeding $100 million and is a major tourist attraction as well as a stimulant to travel between Michigan's two peninsulas.

The cities of Detroit and Windsor, Ontario, are joined by the Ambassador Bridge. A clearance of 152 feet above the Detroit river affords travelers crossing the international border a spectacular view of the impressive Detroit skyline. When built in 1929, the Ambassador was the longest suspension bridge in the world—a title now held by the Mackinac bridge.

At Port Huron, the Blue Water bridge is an 8,000 foot cantilever truss span that is the only toll-free bridge between the United States and Canada. Another international bridge crosses the St. Mary's river and connects Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., with its Ontario namesake. This bridge is a series of eight arch and truss spans that give the traveler an aerial view of the world-famous Soo Locks.

Northernmost of Michigan's major bridges is the unusual Portage Lake lift bridge at Houghton-Hancock on the Keweenaw peninsula. The bridge has two levels, the lower of which carries rail traffic, while the upper carries a four-lane highway and pedestrian traffic. An unusual feature is that the whole unit can be raised like an elevator. When no trains are expected, the lower level is raised to permit small ships to pass under while allowing auto traffic to continue uninterrupted over the paved railroad section. Larger vessels can be accommodated by elevating the bridge to its maximum height, giving 100 feet of clearance. The massive structure can be raised 100 feet in 90 seconds.

Bascule bridges, reminiscent of fairly common over-navigable waterways in Michigan, The State Highway Department operates 13 of these bridges. They may be seen in St. Joseph, Benton Harbor, Grand Haven, Manistee and Charlevoix on route US-31 in Detroit and Port Huron on US-25; two in Bay City and another in Zilwaukee on I-75; in Saginaw on state highway 81; on US-23 at Cheboygan; and on state highway 104 in Ferrysburg.

Swing bridges, that pivot to allow water traffic to pass on either side of the span as it turns parallel with the stream, can also be found in Michigan. Three are located on I-94, at St. Joseph, Benton Harbor and South Haven; another is on state highway 64 at Ontonagon; and still another is at St. Clair on state highway 20.

There are a number of other bridges in Michigan that are interesting because of their unusual design. In each case the finished bridge represents a solution to an engineering puzzle.

At Manistique in Michigan's upper peninsula, there is a bridge that is actually below the level of the river it crosses. This unusual structure, called a siphon bridge, uses the pressure of the river water to help support itself. This design was used to avoid making the bridge approaches excessively steep.

In Flint, there is a bridge that is referred to as the "upside-down bridge." The designer used an inverted concrete arch structure allowing floodwaters—at one time an annual problem—to flow across the bridge without destroying it, as had happened to its predecessors.

Wood, steel, cast iron and concrete have been fashioned into a wide variety of bridge designs. Covered bridges, reminiscent of bygone days; ornate iron spans that are almost works of art; or new functional bridges that are models of modern design. Each is a proud symbol of the ability of man to meet and master any obstacle.

In turn the bridges offer a challenge to the camera fans to capture their beauty and utility.

There is no admission charge to enter the grounds or the exhibit and display buildings at the Tonia Free Fair, Michigan's second largest fair.

Council Briefs

The Rev. James Craig, new pastor of the Methodist church, was invited to give the invocation at the Village Council meeting Tuesday evening. Meetings are held in the Council room of the Municipal Building the first and third Tuesdays of the month, beginning at 8 p.m. Citizens are welcome to attend.

Approval was given for a variance of the zoning code requested by Robert Taylor, 346 Washington St., for an addition to his home extending to within seven feet of his east property line. The approval was voted after a letter was submitted from Mr. and Mrs. Derwood Prochnow, next door, stating they have no objections.

The Rev. J. R. Smucker, vicar of St. Barnabas Episcopal church, was present to discuss with Council members the possible consideration of a fair housing ordinance. He asked that consideration be given for formation of a human relations commission within the village. Village President Robert Daniels appointed three trustees to work as a committee with the Rev. Smucker in making a study of the situation. The three trustees are J. V. Burg, II, Howard Hasel-schardt and Stephen Clark.

Resolution passed that a parcel of vacant real estate acquired by the village in 1966 from Mabel K. Foster adjacent to the New York Central Railroad and zoned industrial, be offered for public sale Tuesday, Sept. 3, between 8 and 9 p.m. at the Village Council room. Notice of the sale is to be given by means of six weeks' publication in The Standard and by posting notices in three places in the village.

A report of the July 11 meeting of the Area Planning Commission was given by Trustee Clark. He said plans have been made for a meeting to be held between the Area Planning Commission and the Washtenaw County Road Commission for re-classification of Chelsea-Dexter Rd. from Class "B" to Class "A".

State Homes is represented in this locality by: Mary Wolter, 7421 Portage Lake Rd.

Report given by Trustee Hasel-schardt regarding the Sanitary Landfill. No action by the Council at this time.

Motion approved to have the village absorb one-half of the recent Blue Shield-Blue Cross rate increase and pass the remainder of the increase on to the village employees.

Motion approved to authorize final payment to Rod Mills ($3,768.98) for 1803 street excavation work.

Authorization given for payment to Frederick Belser the amount of $9,000 as part payment for the fire station construction. The firm, Dependable Tree Service, who submitted a low bid of $406 for removal of 10 dead elm trees in the village, was awarded the job after the bid was accepted. The other bid received quoted a price of $500 for the job and was submitted by Heath Tree Service.

Michigan is probably the only state ever to have organized a state before being admitted to the Union, having at the same time a duly elected state governor and a federal territorial governor.

Investigation Underway To Locate Source of Intoxicants for Minor

Sheriff's deputies are investigating a case involving two youths who were found intoxicated and wandering along Old 10th West, just outside of the village on Friday night.

The investigation was triggered by a phone call to Chelsea reporting that two men were in a swampy area. The person alerted, police believed, was a prisoner who was probably in the area.

Chelsea Police Officer Earl J. Kallmeier called the Sheriff's Department. One of the youths had fallen into a roadside excavation and was a first believed that he was injured. He was taken by ambulance to a doctor's office and released after examination. A check is being made to determine the source of the intoxicants the youths obtained. One 17 years old and the other years older.

Abroad at Home

It's something like stepping through Alice's looking glass to pass onto the grounds of United Nations Headquarters.

One moment you're in Manhattan, U.S.A. A step later, you're on alien ground as surely as though you stood atop the Acropolis, in Piccadilly Circus or on the Champs-Élysées.

Without travel papers or border formalities, well over 2 million visitors a year pass the frontier into this exotic international enclave. About half of them take the tour conducted by the rigidly trained, smartly attired U.N. Guide Corps, just beginning its second decade of service.

In the first 10 years 8,523,456 visitors went along on the one-hour guided strolls through the General Assembly Building, the Secretariat and the Conference Building—the U.N.'s three main structures. At the end of its first full year of operation, the Guide Corps escorted 603,710 visitors along the tapestry-hung, mural decorated corridors and into the great assembly halls where delegates debate world issues. Today, the annual total runs to almost double that figure.

Incidentally, New York's Convention and Visitors Bureau rates the U.N. as one of the city's top five tourist attractions, along with the Statue of Liberty, Empire State Building, Rockefeller Center and Times Square.

For Americans, one thing distinguishes the U.N. from the other Big Five sights: A visit to the U.N. is a trip abroad without really leaving the United States.
