He stressed the "low cost" of a community college, saying that the average taxpayer will pay only approximately $12 a year. A community college, said DeMarrias, is the training ground for those average high school graduates who would not ordinarily find a college education within their means. This is also a place where vocational skills may be taught, and where adults may

Shelter Fund Hits $2,320 From Chelsea

A campaign for funds by the Washtenaw County Humane Society, has collected $2,320 from Chelsea; it was announced this week.

Heading the local campaign was Dudley Holmes, chairman, assisted by Mrs. William Marsh, Mrs. Robert Wagner, Mrs. Alfred Mayer, and Mrs. Dudley Holmes.

An additional 3,038 sq. ft. of space will be provided in the addition planned for the Society's animal shelter. Construction is slated to begin in the early spring.

Architect for the shelter addition is Z. T. Gerganoff of Ypsilanti.

The proposed addition will include a heating plant and will enable the shelter to house 40 more dogs and 30 more cats at a time than they are now able to do. It will adequately house and care for lost, homeless and abandoned animals until someone offers them a home.

The present animal shelter was built in 1951 and is considered to be one of the finest in the country.

In 1964 the combined total of cats and dogs cared for at the shelter exceeded 12,000.

Committee members state that if anyone still desires to make contribution to the fund they may do so by contacting Mrs. Dudley Holmes.

Hold-Up Nets $2 for Young Offenders

A hold-up and a truck theft occurred Sunday night at 11 p.m. as two escapees from Cassidy Lake Training School sought money and transportation at Bailey's Restaurant, on Clear Lake Rd., at the I-94 interchange.

In the restaurant at the time of the hold-up were the waitress, Reba Moyers, and the cook, Julia Gibson.

The fellows entered the restaurant at 11 p.m., after cutting the phone wires, and brandishing a butcher knife, demanded the keys to the truck and the money in the cash register. Two dollars were taken.

GOVERNOR ROMNEY REPORTS

In my second Inaugural Address last week, I pointed out some of the accomplishments we have made recently that have brought Michigan new confidence and recognition.

Two years ago at the last inauguration I said "we must restore the confidence of the nation and the world in Michigan" but that we could not regain the confidence of others if we ignored our problems.

The record since then speaks for itself. We have paid our debts and kept our commitments.

We are closer to the goal of "equal rights for all citizens," regardless of skin color, religion or national origin.

We've reduced the partisan bickering in state government that had long hampered the efficient and effective operation of government.

We have applied the law justly to all groups alike, without fear or favor.

Inauguration Day marks a fresh starting-off point for state government. We intend to apply the lessons we have learned in the past to solutions to the problems of the future. And the achievements of the past will be used as the building blocks for future progress.

And so we start out anew. A new year has begun and it is my intention to maintain continuity in our record of progress. It is my hope that continued progress will span many more administrations to come.

The state is faced with many pending problems. A soaring traffic death toll, the educational needs of the future, burgeoning urban growth and juvenile crime are problems that must be dealt with squarely, and with an all-out effort to find solutions.

The erosion of moral character and family life are evidenced in climbing crime rates and mounting youth problems.

What we need today in Michigan and in every other state is a fundamental redefinition of purpose by citizens generally and by their public servants.

We desperately need a renewed vision of the effective and lasting role of the individual, family, private institutions and government in conquering the complex human and social frontiers on the horizon.

It will be my purpose to do all that a Governor can do to shape governmental policies and programs that will stimulate more effective private effort, more proper public effort—a joint public and private effort where needed.

My present responsibility exists from the role of government. I am concerned not whether government will function but how it will function.

I have often said that states have no rights, only people have rights. States have responsibilities. I believe that only through a direct and dynamic application of our historic decentralized federal principles at the state and local levels of government can we hope to accomplish the ultimate fruits of our society.

In Michigan we have provided a valuable tool for that purpose in our new state constitution. We must apply that tool to its maximum intent of we are to remove the archaic conditions that enmesh our local governments in conflict and expensive conditions and if we are to approach our state responsibilities positively rather than as an excuse for protection of the status quo.

The question we must ask is: How can we best utilize the talents and abilities of people? And then how do we employ this participation of individuals so that meaningful contributions to government and the betterment of the human condition are made?

As we plot new directions for the future and plan the course of state government, we will need the dedicated energies of every body—the citizen, the businessman, the legislator, the Governor. It will require thoughtful search, much toil and courage.

Our only power as elected representatives of the people is to serve the people. Our interest: the common welfare.

If as public officials and as citizens we can truthfully serve our state and each other, then we will have in all honor served the Creator who made us all, for "He that is in the service of his fellow men is in the service of his Creator."

THOSE LONG, COMFORTABLE WINTER EVENINGS

MICHIGAN MIRROR

By Elmer E. White, Secretary, Michigan Press Association

Sunday Options

Opponents of Sunday business activity who supported the new Sunday closing law in 1963 have their work cut out for them in the current year legislative session.

Several leading Democrats, who will hold the ruling hand this year, predict success in 1965 for a long-standing effort to give local government units the option to allow Sunday sales of liquor.

Rep. Edward Michalski, D-Detroit, who "coincidentally" runs a party store, contends that a series of hearings held throughout the state since the 1964 session indicates strong favor for Sunday liquor sales by local decision.

Democrats have generally favored measures of this type introduced in past sessions. Their Party's voice has never been strong enough in both Houses, however, to gain approval of the proposals.

Lobbying pressures against liberalization of Michigan's liquor laws have been great in past years when this legislation has been before lawmakers.

There is no indication that the lobbying efforts would lessen this session because of the change in control.

The only question which prevents Michalski from flatly predicting success at this early date is among his fellow Democrats. This is the question of whether their "yes" votes in the past were just tokens to support a party position, the strength of which was great because they knew the legislation could not pass any way.

This Sunday liquor sales proposal will meet a full test this year as Democrats will be on the spot. The majority members will have to carefully weigh the previous Party support of this measure.

The strong opposing sentiment which in past years has been strong enough to kill the proposal. Unanimity among Democrats this session appears less likely than it has been in the past on other questions as well.

On the income tax proposals introduced in past sessions, for example, Democrats generally stuck together in support of tax reform. Some readily admitted, however, that their position was contingent upon ultimate defeat.

They did not like the income tax idea any more than their GOP counterparts who voted "no," but their Party's stand had to be upheld.

GOP Split

Early indications were the minority Republicans would be operating with at least two distinct factions this year, as they did the last several sessions.

Even as early as the GOP Senate caucus, held two weeks after the November election, the so-called "Old Guard-Moderate" division was apparent among those who survived the Democratic landslide.

In the House, the shift in majority power appears likely to have the opposite effect on surviving Republicans.

While sometimes sharply divided in past early debates, GOP House members usually were able to iron out their differences in caucus and preserve a nearly unanimous front when the final vote was taken. This tightness likely will continue in 1965.

World Program

Michigan Week No. 12 is geared even more than the 11 before it toward spreading the word far and wide of the state's role in various segments of the world economy.

Starting with the theme "Dynamic to World Progress," Michigan Week committees throughout the state hope to draw attention throughout the entire year to the benefits of Michigan.

Actual observance of Michigan Week is May 16-22 this year but theme committees, under direction of University of Michigan Vice-President Michael Radock, range in the New Year with their campaign and plan to continue it through the next 12 months.

Observance of Michigan Week has been aimed during each of the 12 years to as wide an area as one could imagine, but in the first several years the goal fell short and it was basically a state-wide occasion.

In the past few years, much greater emphasis has been placed on dissemination of information about Michigan Week beyond the state borders. This effort was culminated last year in Michigan Week activities at the World's Fair and the publication of a Michigan-promotional supplement in the New York Times.

Plans this year call for even broader distribution of Michigan Week information to make the theme heard not only throughout the state, but across the nation and around the world.

Week is May 16-22 this year but theme committees, under direction of University of Michigan Vice-President Michael Radock, range in the New Year with their campaign and plan to continue it through the next 12 months.

Observance of Michigan Week has been aimed during each of the 12 years to as wide an area as one could imagine, but in the first several years the goal fell short and it was basically a state-wide occasion.

In the past few years, much greater emphasis has been placed on dissemination of information about Michigan Week beyond the state borders. This effort was culminated last year in Michigan Week activities at the World's Fair and the publication of a Michigan-promotional supplement in the New York Times.

Plans this year call for even broader distribution of Michigan Week information to make the theme heard not only throughout the state, but across the nation and around the world.

The NATIONAL OUTLOOK

By GEORGE HAGEDORN

★ The Gold Reserve Requirement

Advanced thinkers, so-called, are fond of pointing out that it is not very logical to take gold that was mined in one part of the world, buy it in vaults somewhere else, and then regard it as the ultimate basis for the value of national currencies. They have a point, but the fact is that gold still commands enormous respect among the peoples of the world as a store of value.

Whether or not this attitude is logical, it exists. It follows that in the making of practical decisions regarding monetary management it is wise to take advantage of the universal respect for gold. In the foreseeable future, gold is likely to be the ultimate means for clearing international trade balances. It is hard to imagine any substitute which would preserve the confidence on which the inter-convertibility of national currencies rests.

Tenuous Link

But if gold is to play this role internationally, our domestic monetary policy cannot be formulated in complete disregard of the gold stock within our borders and of its tendency to flow out or in. At present it is required by law that the Federal Reserve System hold a reserve, in the form of gold certificates, equal to 25 percent of its deposit and note liabilities. The gold certificates are issued by the Treasury against the gold to which it has title.

The gold reserve requirement is at best an indirect and tenuous link between the money supply and the stock of gold within the country. Furthermore, it may be necessary at some time in the near future to abandon or reduce the 25 percent reserve required by law. The loss of gold over the past decade, coupled with the expansion of money and credit, has brought the ratio uncomfortably close to the specified minimum.

For the long haul, there is no reason to assume that the nation's gold stocks will increase at a rate proportional to the increase in money supply needed to support economic growth at stable prices. The hard problem is to free ourselves to create the monetary expansion necessary for non-inflationary growth, and still preserve an effective restraint against inflation.

Reverse Effect?

It is argued by some that abandonment of the 25 percent requirement would strengthen foreign confidence in the American dollar. This would assure the world, it is said, that our entire gold stock is available for supporting the dollar abroad.

It could just as easily have the reverse effect on international psychology if it were taken as a signal that we intended to expand our money supply without limit and without regard to its effect on the domestic price level.

One of the present threats to our continued growth and prosperity is the possibility of a major rise in labor costs in coming years. The cost increase would, in itself, tend to create unemployment. This outcome might be avoided by increasing the money supply sufficiently to produce price increases that would offset the labor cost increases.

If such a procedure became established nationally, it is easy to see that it would feed upon itself. There would be no effective restraint on the cost-increasing demands of labor-union leaders, since they would always have the assurance that monetary inflation would be used to make the cost increases good.

If we do revise or abandon the gold reserve requirement, we had better make it clear to the rest of the world that it is not our intention to pursue a systematic policy of supporting inflation. More important, we had better be sure in our own minds that such is not our intention.

Some Michigan dairymen are increasing production, but not profit, by feeding their cows extra grain, reports C. Ray Hoglund, Michigan State University agricultural economist. "A study of 1963 DHIA participants shows no difference in returns over cost at feed for Holstein cows fed 4,500 to 6,000 pounds of grain per cow," he says.

When you're doing your Christmas shopping, don't forget your winter stopping. This advice from the Police Chief, who points out that stopping distances can be up to 12 times longer on slippery streets than on dry pavement.

Thinking about the serious trouble a driver can skid into in that distance, the chief cites National Safety Council research which shows that tire chains stop cars on icy surfaces more efficiently than any other known device.

MARTIN STEINBACH, Owner

IN THE OPEN

By Lee Smits

On this dark morning in January 1917, Grover Scott, now a Detroit business executive, was hauling an old-fashioned duck skiff with runners over the ice of the Peche Island channel, on the Canadian side of the Detroit River. Giving a certain amount of help at the stern end was this Old-timer.

Grover said "A man went through the ice about here last winter."

At that instant a patch of ice, worn thin by the current, gave way and the man at the stern went in. But for the fact that there was a painter attached to the stern, these lines wouldn't be typed. The current carried me into a horizontal posture which made it easier for Grover to haul me out onto solid ice as I clung to the line.

Before I could let go, my mittened hands were frozen tightly to the painter. By the time I got on my feet I was encased in ice. It took us maybe 20 minutes to get back to Wolf's dock. I was waddling, stiff legged but—and this is the unforgettable part of the adventure—not too chilled. The ice armor insulated my body from the outer air.

After a fast change beside the big kitchen range, we went out again. Up on Lake St. Clair were air-holes, lidded with heavy fog patches. We wore white butcher's smocks and white hoods. Deceys were put out by dipping the anchors in the water then dropping them at the edge of the ice.

It would be pleasant to recall that we had a worth-while shoot. For one thing, the lubricant in an auto-loading shotgun became as hard as glass and the gun refused to function. For another thing, the whistlers we chased out of one air-hole settled down in another not too far away and refused to cooperate.

It was not until the Detroit newspapers arrived by trolley car late that evening that we learned that a record low mark had been set—18 below zero.

It is an odd thing, any time below zero is mentioned, competition ensues. Somebody recalls 30 below; he will quickly hear a counter-bid of 40 below. The conversation is likely to reach a dead center when somebody recalls a winter in Yukon Territory where for three months the mercury never got above 50 below.

We would still be on a diet largely composed of grubs and roots had we not learned to thrive in cold weather. Mankind originated in the tropics; perhaps, in Asia, perhaps in Africa. Apparently one of our strongest instincts is to keep going places, an impulse to expand our range which we share with other animals. Lacking heavy fur we would have been unable to expand very far had we not started borrowing the fur of other creatures and pressing northward into new hunting grounds.

The Korean war taught the armed forces valuable lessons at a terribly high cost—about

95% of Michigan Visitors to Florida Expected To Drive

Ninety-five per cent of the record one-half million Michigan residents expected to visit Florida this winter will travel there by car in less time than ever before, according to Automobile Club of Michigan.

"There will be a 12 percent increase over the 440,000 Michiganders who visited Florida last year," says Jerry E. Fisher, Auto Club's touring manager.

Economy and convenience of car travel plus improved road conditions have aided by Fisher as the reasons the majority of vacationers will elect driving to Florida. It will cost each auto passenger $14.60 daily for travel, food and lodging. There will be an average of 2.5 passengers per car. Average motel fees per couple en route will be from $10 to $12.

"Those taking their own cars to Florida will spend at least three days driving each way," says Fisher. "But, the hours spent behind the wheel should be more pleasant and fewer than last winter because there are more miles of four-lane road."

Motorists going via I-75, which has a 70-mile-per-hour speed limit, will find the most improvement," Fisher adds. "A 503-mile stretch of I-75 recently completed between Perry, Ga., and the Sunshine Parkway (toll road), allows the motorist to travel this stretch in nine hours compared with 12 last winter."

Also, the opening of I-75 through Cumberland Canyon, referred to in the past as the narrows, and the freeway through Atlanta, makes this Lexington, Knoxville, Atlanta to Miami route relatively free of mountain driving.

Auto Club suggests four popular auto routes to Florida. For keeping men warm in cold and wet.

The sporting goods industry has made available in recent years many superior items of cold weather wear. Skiing has stepped up the demand for such products, including fish-net underwear and down-filled garments much warmer, and lighter, than anything available in the past.

There are standard myths relating to severe cold. Rubbing with snow is not the way to treat frostbite. A frozen body surface should be kept at blood temperature. A person exposed to cold shouldn't hesitate to sleep. He'll wake up in plenty of time unless, of course, he is desperately weakened by starvation, sickness or long exposure.

Rarely does anyone contract pneumonia from exposure. Grover "catch" cold. Drinking anything with alcohol in it is of course the worst possible way to combat body chill, so long as exposure continues. There are, however, those who claim that a hot toddy taken after the hunter has returned to a warm interior is justifiable.

Mr. Smits' column is presented through the courtesy of the Michigan Consolidated Gas Co. Mr. Smits will be pleased to answer any questions sent in.

Soil Conservation Districts Have Busy Year in '64

Michigan's 81 Soil Conservation Districts had their busiest year in 27 years of history according to Russell G. Hill, Soil Conservationist for the Michigan Cooperative Extension Service.

With 3,000 new land operators assisted, the number of district co-operators reached 43,200, Hill reports. A number of non-farm requests for assistance came from planning boards, public schools, municipalities and airports.

Of special interest, Hill says, were the 226 farmers who converted all or part of their land into income-producing recreational projects.

Major financial assistance to help landowners came from Agricultural Conservation Program funds and 50 districts had working agreements with the Michigan Department of Conservation in forestry and wildlife management programs on private property.

Hill paid special tribute to the 405 Michigan rural people who volunteer their services as district directors without salary to administer the 81 districts.

Soil Conservation District To Elect Two Directors

The Washtenaw County Soil Conservation District will hold its annual meeting on Wednesday, Jan. 13, at 8 p.m. in rooms 1 and 2 of the County Building.

In addition to the annual report, the election of two directors will take place. Don Zeeb and Theron Schriener's term of office expires omies for the two offices are Robert Breuninger, Bill Fishbeck, Dick Chamberlain and Don Zeeb. Nominations will also be accepted from the floor.

The program will be presented by Doug Sanders from Mason, a 1964 International Farm Youth Exchange to Switzerland.

According to District Chairman Don Zeeb, all farm operators and land owners are invited to attend.

TAYLOR BACK TO S. VIETNAM

Ambassador Maxwell D. Taylor, armed with fresh orders from President Johnson, returned to South Vietnam to work out new plans for intensifying the war against Communist guerrillas. The new military actions could include air strikes against the Communist supply lines that run from North to South Vietnam.

AGRICULTURE in ACTION

FARMER FARMER FARMER

*Fruit Basket Upset

It is a foregone conclusion that the 73rd session of the Michigan legislature, due to convene Jan. 13, will be of special interest to Michigan farmers. In the words of one veteran lobbyist, the November election, based on the new state apportionment, has caused "fruit-basket upset."

More than 80 out of the 140 members of House and Senate will be new this year to the seats to which they have won election. A few members of the House have moved over into the Senate, and several former members of the legislature will be returning this year after periods of absence.

To add to the confusion, two members of the legislature have died since the election. Both men, Republican Senator Paul Chandler and Democrat House member Walter Illyso, are from Wayne county. The seat of another member of the House, Representative Daniel West, is now being challenged by officials who are checking his background and qualifications.

What about the outlook for farm legislation? Some farm leaders have predicted that the increasing "urban orientation" of the legislature will cause difficulty for farmers in promoting legislative programs.

Dan Reed, long-time legislative counsel for the Michigan Farm Bureau, has said that farmers must be much more alert and more complete in their explanations of the need for certain bills and requested actions.

"I can remember the time when any farm issue would cause ears to pick up all around the House and Senate," Reed said, indicating that those days are gone. "That was back when these people were well-acquainted with farm life."

In contrast, the new Michigan legislature will be composed of a majority of people who know little about farming from first-hand experience.

This means that the farmer's job will be mostly one of education and information to help these men and women understand.

Farm leaders will have to work hard at this job. They will have to be careful and sharp in presenting their facts.

DUANE LUICK, Township Clerk

Just A Minute...

By the Rev. James A. Craig

Trying to save a little time, a driver cut across the freeway median. The car made it halfway. Now the job was to move the car out of the hub-deep mud.

Passing by, one feels a little sympathy for the man who is stuck. But, then it is against the law. Maybe he deserved to get stuck. We're sympathetic because we know how we would feel. We're unsympathetic because we don't like someone breaking the rules to get an advantage.

As it so often happens we get stuck when we try to take a shortcut—especially when we know it's one we shouldn't take.

Even so we keep at it. Maybe someday we'll get the message.

If someplace is worth going, or something worth getting, then it's worth our time to be sure.

The shortcutter may have come out where he wanted though he lost more time than he saved.

We have to pay the price of our foolishness—in lost time or in lost hopes.

We claim not to understand. But it's not too hard, really.

Somewhere we can read that "whatever you sow, that you will reap."

Prayer! Let us be willing to take time, to sow well, to harvest wisely. Amen.

Trucks Now Pay One-Third of State Highway Costs

Trucks paid $714,783 of Washtenaw county's share of the $2,337,405 of the Motor Vehicle Highway Fund, according to the Michigan Trucking Association.

Washtenaw county's share of the $2,337,405 of the Motor Vehicle Highway Fund during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1964, is distributed among cities and villages in each of Michigan's 83 counties.

Counties receive 35 percent of the total fund. Cities and villages receive 18 percent and 47 percent goes into the State Trunk Line Fund.

Receipts, which have been steadily rising the past few years, come from motor fuel taxes paid by highway users, and vehicle license and weight taxes.

"Although trucks make up only 11 percent of the vehicles registered in Michigan, they pay one-third of all highway construction and maintenance expenses," said a spokesman for the Michigan Trucking Association in Lansing. The trucking industry, in Michigan and the nation, has always opposed efforts to divert money from the Motor Vehicle Highway Fund for purposes other than highway construction and maintenance, he added.

"The trucking industry, and all citizens of Michigan, have benefited from the fine system of toll-free highways which cover our State," said Jack L. McNamara, managing director of Michigan Trucking Association.

The following list indicates how Washtenaw county's share of the Michigan Motor Vehicle Highway Fund was divided among cities and villages in the county.

Ann Arbor, $595,203; Dexter, $16,247; Manchester, $19,938; Milan, $32,394; Saline, $19,850; Ypsilanti, $148,171; Chelsea, $28,702; balance to county.

Correcting Skill...

If you find yourself in a skid, you've done something wrong," say safety officials in commenting on a common winter driving problem. Usually it's the result of accelerating too eagerly, turning too sharply, or trying to stop too suddenly. But there's still something right you can do: If you skid, turn your steering wheel in the direction in which the rear end of the car is skidding. It's the recommended way to straighten out your driving.

Mrs. Gerald E. Roggenbuck

St. Mary's Church Is Setting for Blalock-Roggenbuck Ceremony

A Christmas motif was carried out Saturday morning at the 11 o'clock wedding of Judith Ann Blalock and Gerald Edward Roggenbuck.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Donald W. Blalock of

Russell Feldkamp, and Mrs. Dale

Keizer.

Introductory committee, which is a new appointive committee, will consist this year of Mrs. Elwood Keezer, Mrs. Alfred Hinz and Mrs. Donley Boyer.

Mrs. Lawrence McDonald, lodge deputy, officiated with help of several other past noble grands in installation exercises, including Mrs. Geno Coltrane.

Business was at a minimum, but one factor decided is that lodge will have a nominee for decoration of chivalry.

LEGION AUXILIARY

American Legion Auxiliary met Jan. 5, with Mrs. William Birch.

Two members reported working at veterans gift shop in Ann Arbor at Christmas time. A basket of food was given to a needy family at Christmas.

Auxiliary is scheduled for coffee hour on May 8.

The group voted to send a girl to Girl's State at Ann Arbor in June and to purchase 1,500 poppies for Poppy Day.

Hostess committee was Mrs. Earl Guenther, Mrs. Ernest Guenther and Mrs. Evelyn Rowe.

WATCH DEPTH

If you're buying new planters to accommodate your growing collection of clay-potted house plants, be sure planters are deep enough, at least two inches more than the depth of the largest clay pot holding your plants. You can offset the difference in plant heights and keep all their tops level by inserting smaller clay pots in the planter and standing shorter plants on top.

COTTON TREATMENT

U. S. Department of Agriculture scientists have developed an inexpensive treatment that improves cotton fabric's resistance to weather and rot. The treatment looks especially promising for awnings, tents, tarpaulins and other outdoor fabrics.

A candlelight service Saturday evening at 7 o'clock in St. Paul's Evangelical and Reformed church, united in marriage Nancy Lee Schmitz and Robert William Guenther. The Rev. Paul Schnake officiated at the double-ring ceremony.

Nancy Lee is the daughter of Mrs. William Nelly and the late Raymond A. Schmitz. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Guenther of Bridgewater.

The bride's gown was a floor-length white lace over tulle with a full skirt with a square neckline featuring a lace insert and white sequins. Completing the dress were long pointed sleeves and a chapel length train.

Her fingertip illusion veil was held by a crown of white pearls. She carried white poinsettias on a white Bible with holly drops.

Mrs. Alva Fouty was her sister's matron of honor. She wore a white brocade skirt topped with a red velvet bodice caught in the back with a bow. Her costume was completed with red shoes and a red bow hat and veil. Her bouquet was of red poinsettias on a white muff.

The bridesmaids were Mrs. Paul Beal, sister of the bride, and Mrs. Jim Colby, her sister-in-law. They wore matching red velvet long-length dresses, caught in the back with red bows, red shoes and bouquets of red poinsettias on white muffs.

The mother of the bride was attired in beige dress, beige patent slippers and a beige feathered hat. Her corsage was of white carnations.

The bridegroom's mother wore a light blue wool suit, black patent slippers, a black hat and a white carnation corsage.

Eldean Guenther was his brother's best man and the usher's were Alva Fouty and Jim Colby of Ann Arbor.

The bride's step-father gave her in marriage.

The reception after the ceremony was held at Mr. and Mrs. Alva Fouty's on Cavanaugh Lake Rd.

The couple will be at home on REBER Rd. in Saline.

Red Cross Says: 'Resolve Now To Donate Blood'

We all enter the new year with a resolution of some sort, even if it's only a vow not to make any resolutions. If you are in doubt as to what resolutions to make, or would like to add a good one to your list, resolve to help save a life in 1965.

"A good resolution," you say, "but how can I fulfill it?" The answer is simple and the need is great. Give blood to your blood club or for a patient in emergency and hardship cases.

Today blood is on hand whenever it is needed for all Washtenaw county Blood Club members, wherever they are hospitalized. We tend to take this for granted and do not stop to think who donates it. We "let George do it."

This year let's turn over that new leaf, give George a hand and resolve to save a life by donating at the American Red Cross Sub-Center, 2729 Packard Rd., Ann Arbor, Friday, Jan. 8, (and every second Friday of each month). The hours are 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. and 6

Michigan's Poultry Industry Growing with Research Help

Michigan's poultry industry is on the move. "This is a $42.5 million business, and its potential for expansion is excellent," claims Howard Zindel, chairman of Michigan State University's Department of Poultry Science. "Michigan poultrymen are producing only 60-65 percent of the eggs, 2 percent of the broilers and 60 percent of the turkeys consumed in the state. This leaves plenty of room for this industry to grow."

Zindel points to research as one of the best means for spurring this growth.

"Science has helped us to extend the productive life of our birds and increase efficiency. I can remember when one man would have his hands full trying to handle 1,000 laying chickens and growing their replacements. Today, this same man can handle more than 20,000 laying birds and have plenty of spare time."

Controlled environment housing, better nutrition and improved vaccines and preventative medicines have been particularly helpful to the industry. They have helped to keep production high while the number of farms and birds has been decreasing across the state.

Then, too, Michigan poultrymen have become more specialized. The result is what Zindel calls a "new" poultry business.

"Until about 1957, a farm family used to keep less than 1,000 birds," he says. "Today, they seldom handle less than 5,000."

"In the egg business, this has meant almost a complete change of operation. The present poultry setup is made up of two kinds of operators: those who stayed in the business and then expanded, and those who are brand new to the industry."

"Generally speaking, poultrymen no longer do the complete job of raising layers and their replacements. They either buy the birds ready to lay and/or concentrate only on growing pullets to sell to egg producers."

Zindel attributes much of this change to larger, better constructed poultry houses.

"These houses have been springing up rapidly all over Michigan," he notes. "In the Grand Traverse area, for example, there wasn't one large poultry house in 1950. Today there are approximately 57, each having a capacity of 3,000 birds or more. In the Huron County area, 30 to 40 new houses enough to handle 300,000 birds have been built in the past three years."

Poultry housing research has also produced changes in space recommendations for the birds. Experiments show that egg production doesn't suffer, even when space per bird is cut to less than 1/2 square foot in a cage operation.

and 1 1/2 square feet in a floor operation. Early recommendations used to call for as much as 3 1/2 to 4 square feet per bird.

Further tests will be run to see if housing space can be even further reduced. In one of these experiments, two birds will be raised in a cage 8 inches wide and 16 inches long and 21 birds will be kept in a space 3 feet by 4 feet.

"MSU scientists pioneered many of the latest advances in poultry housing," says Zindel.

"In 1950, J. M. Moore of our department and Merle Esmy, MSU agricultural engineer, designed a poultry house which was built at the Ray Spencer farm at Attica. It's still one of the best ever built."

"We were able to control temperature at 55 degrees throughout the winter of '56-'57 without use of any artificial heat. All we used was a combination of the body heat of the chickens and the building's proper insulation."

Zindel points to the MSU Experiment Station at Chatham in the Upper Peninsula as one of the nation's leading centers of poultry housing research. "That Experiment Station has done more for improving poultry housing than any other place in the country," he says.

The Chatham buildings were only the beginning of a series of technological developments which have helped to mold Michigan's new poultry industry. Mechanized feeders, gutter cleaners and egg gathering mechanisms have greatly improved poultry management efficiency.

New vaccines and improved feeds have also appeared on the scene. They have brought poultry health and feed conversion to an all-time high.

TOWN IN THE DARK

BURNED PLAYING 'CHICKEN'

Wichita, Kan. — A 13-year-old boy was taken to a hospital with infection of multiple burns on his arm. The boy told police they were self-inflicted during a game of "chicken." He and a friend had put burning cigarettes on their arms to see who would move first.

In May, 1964, the Coast Guard placed in operation the world's first atom powered lighthouse in Chesapeake Bay, Md. It is anticipated that ultimately automatic facilities will supplant many of the manned light stations now in use.
