Village Survey Undertaken By Planning Body

Chelsea residents will find an addition to their August electric light and water bills. The Village Planning Commission is conducting a survey of the village to determine future housing needs.

The survey is being conducted by the Village Planning Commission, which is a body of residents who meet regularly to discuss village matters. The survey will be completed by the end of the month.

The survey will also compare the 1960 census data to determine the changes that have taken place in the housing and economic status of the citizens of the village.

Kiwanians Hear Convention Report, Plan Ladies Night

Chelsea Kiwanians heard a report on the Kiwanis International Convention, held in Toronto, at their meeting Monday, July 29. Jack Fowler, lieutenant governor of Division 10, reported the activities of the convention.

At its next meeting, Aug. 5, the Kiwanis Club will hold a ladies night picnic at Pierce Park with a pot-luck supper. Members were asked to bring their own silverware and dishes for the 6:30 p.m. event.

Donovan Sweeny retired Monday morning after 41½ years at Federal Screw Works. "Monday morning at 9 a.m. is the end of the rope," he said with a grin.

Sweeny came to Chelsea in 1926 and went to work for Federal Screw Works a year later, when it was still the Chelsea Screw Co. Until five or six years ago, he said, he drove large and small trucks between Chelsea's Federal Screw Works plant and the plant in Detroit. During the war years, he also made stops at the Ford plant in Detroit.

Groundbreaking Ceremony Held for Extended Care Unit

Business leaders and physicians gathered under the trees behind the offices of the Chelsea Medical Clinic Monday, July 29, to witness the first bit of earth turned for the new extended care facility.

After an invocation by the Rev. John Fall, administrator of the Chelsea Methodist Home, master of ceremony William Rademacher introduced the 24 guests.

John DeCell, vice-president of Medicenters of America, Inc., the parent company, complimented the community on its medical facilities and congratulated the community on the extended care unit plans.

Earth was then turned by Donald Bacon, benefactor of the Medical Center. Dr. Alexander Gotz, chief of staff of St. Joseph Mercy Hospital, Donald Baldwin, village president, and Dr. Otto Engleke, director of the Washtenaw County Health Department. The Rev. Warner Siebert said a benediction at the close of the ceremony.

Later at a luncheon at Schum's restaurant, Dr. Gotz toasted the individuals involved in planning the extended care center on behalf of the 200 physicians he represents at St. Joseph Mercy Hospital.

Dr. Michael Papo, medical director of the Medical Clinic, publicly thanked Bacon for initiating plans for the center and for his early work in support of the project.

Bacon, Baldwin, Gotz and Engleke received silver shovels with the name of the unit and date engraved on them.

Immediately following the groundbreaking ceremony, the tree cutting crew moved onto the grounds and began preparing for the construction crews, expected to begin work Aug. 15.

Others present at the ceremony were John Comiskey, associate administrator at St. Joseph Mercy Hospital, Dr. Beverly Payne, associate dean of the University of Michigan Medical School, Dr. Edwin Place, president-elect of the Washtenaw County Medical Society, and James Daniels, representing Chelsea businessmen.

Also attending were Paul Schaible, Jr., vice-president of Chelsea State Bank, Arthur Lindauer, architect of the Medical Center, Dr. Joseph Fisher, head of Chelsea's Planning Commission, Jack Glascock, regional representative of Medicenters of America, and Robert Kendall, president of Michigan Extended Care Building Corp.

Dr. James Botsford, Dr. Bruce Stubbs, Dr. Jerry Wadlyke, Dr. Eugene Claeys and Gilbert Frimet were present along with Mrs. Mary Dick and Miss Pat Walsh, who are in charge of extended care programs for the Washtenaw County Health Department.

Four Ballots Face Voters in Aug. 6 Primary

Most Heated Contest in County Has 9 Seeking Nomination for Sheriff

Voters will mark their preference for candidates for office on partisan and non-partisan ballots as well as three proposed constitutional amendments at the polls Aug. 6.

The Washtenaw county sheriff's position is the most eagerly sought after with six Republicans and three Democrats seeking the nod. The GOP candidates are Stanley J. Dulgeroff of Ann Arbor, Clare M. LaFrier of Ypsilanti, George A. Petersen of Ann Arbor, Clark Reynolds Shelton of Ann Arbor, George Stauch of Ann Arbor, and Earl Willis, Jr., of Chelsea.

Democrats are incumbent sheriff Douglas J. Harvey of Ypsilanti, David M. Copl of Ann Arbor, and Lawrence P. Oltersdorf of Ypsilanti.

Other county offices on the ballot are prosecuting attorney, county clerk, county treasurer, register of deeds, drain commissioner, surveyor and supervisor.

John M. Toomey and Elmer E. White, both Democrats of Ann Arbor, and Republican William F. DeLoe of Ann Arbor seek nominations for prosecuting attorney. Republican Robert M. Harrison is the single candidate seeking nomination for the post of county clerk from his party. Two Democrats, Lois Jean Owens and Gerald C. Wolf, both of Ann Arbor, are contending for the county clerk nomination.

Democrat Arthur H. Simsar and Republican Sylvester A. Leonard are the single candidates on their parties' tickets for the office of county treasurer. Register of deeds candidates are Republican Patricia Newkirk Hardy and Democrat Ethel M. Howard.

Seeking the nomination for drain commissioner are Democrat Richard E. Nash and Republican John H. Flood. County surveyor candidates are Herbert S. Hicks and Murray J. Knowles, Jr., both Republicans, and Ulrich W. Stoll, a Democrat.

The Aug. 6 primary will also decide candidates to fill the new county supervisor positions created by the recent reorganization, although in the two districts in the western part of Washtenaw county, District I and II, there is no real contest at hand.

In District I, including Lyndon, Sylvan, Lima, Sharon, Freedom, Manchester and Bridgewater townships, only one candidate has declared for the supervisor post—Republican Jay L. Bradbury.

In District II, comprising Dexter, Webster, Saco and Lodi townships and the city of Saline, one Democrat, Harold Hunawill, and one Republican, Neil Must, will appear on the ballot.

In the congressional and legislative section of the ballot, nominees will be chosen for U. S. Congressman from the second district and Michigan state representatives from the 51st district and the 52nd district.

Republican Marvin L. Esch is the sole name on the Republican ticket for representative in Congress. Three Democrats are listed, Weston Vivian, A. Jerome Dupont and John H. McDermott, Sr. Seeking the state representative post in the 51st district (including Lyndon, Dexter, Sylvan, Lima, Scio, Sharon and Freedom townships) are Democrat Joseph W. Kolbe and Republicans Mary Lou McConaughy and Thomas G. Sharpe.

Webster township voters, included in the 52nd state legislative district, will see one Republican, Roy Smith, and two Democrats, Steve Becher and James M. Cregar, on the ballot.

Candidates for the judgeship of the Court of Appeals in District II will appear on the ballot. District II comprises Washtenaw, Genesee, Hillsdale, Huron, Ingham, Jackson, Lapeer, Lenawee, Livingston, Macomb, Monroe, Oakland, St. Clair, Sanilac, Shiawassee and Tuscola counties.

A primary is being held in District II because three candidates have declared for the non-partisan position. They are S. Leroy Bronson of Oak Park, presently a prosecuting attorney in Oakland county; Robert J. Danhof of East Lansing, presently a legal advisor to Gov. Romney; and John F. Foley of Birmingham, presently a commissioner of the court of appeals. Two will be nominated.

Candidates for the court of appeals are appearing at this time because the legislature created three more judgeships. There are 12 judgeships in the court of appeals, and nine positions were filled in 1964.

The newly-created district judgeships also will be filled from candidates seeking nomination in this primary. All five 14th District candidates will be nominated—Patrick J. Conlin, Edward D. Deake, Robert Fink, Rodney E. Hutchinson and Thomas Shea. Three will be elected in the November general election. The 14th District comprises all of Washtenaw county except the city of Ann Arbor.

Townships in the area will also be electing township trustees and convention delegates (or precinct delegates). Following is a run-down on these positions.

SYLVAN—Two are running for nomination for trustee, Democrat Norman Eismann and Republican George A. Merkel. Delegates from precinct 1 are Democrat Mary Kathryn Weber and Republican Howard E. Walz. Five Democrats and four Republicans may be nominated in the first precinct. Precinct II delegate candidates are Democrats Louise Donaldson, Gwen L. LaGoe and James E. Lattie (four to be nominated and Republican Kenneth A. Lindow (four to be nominated).

LYNDON—Democrat Leslie Eikenbeiser is the only candidate for trustee. Also on the ballot will be Democrat Doris Fuhrmann for township clerk. Only one name appears for convention delegate, that of Republican Wilma Kaiser. Other delegates will be nominated on write-in votes.

REPORT from LANSING

State Representative

Thomas G. Sharpe

★ Must We License Attorneys?

Very recently, a man named James C. Turner, who lives in Howell, and publishes a regional magazine called "Today on a modest scale," found himself in one of the strangest predicaments imaginable.

Turner had uncovered what appeared to be extreme irregularities in the handling of the estate of a lady named Rosa Miller. After extensive research, he became convinced that three attorneys, two of whom later became judges, had appropriated for themselves large sums of money that were rightfully due the Miller heirs.

In January of this year, he quite properly turned the evidence he had gathered—statements, affidavits, checks and other documents—over to the State Bar Association of Michigan for investigation.

The Bar Association immediately designated all such documents "confidential"—specially warning Turner that he would be in contempt of the Michigan Supreme Court if he made any of his own evidence public.

Jim Turner didn't worry about this at the time. He was busily checking out a new lead he'd uncovered. Before long, he'd gathered some 70 additional pieces of evidence concerning the property that had been bequeathed to a lady named Orpha Bove—evidence strongly suggesting that one of the same attorneys involved in the Miller case had wrongfully appropriated the major portion of Mrs. Bove's property, leaving her to subsist on welfare payments throughout the last years of her life.

This time, Turner presented his evidence to the Attorney General of Michigan, as well as to the State Bar Association. Once again, all of the documents he'd gathered were labeled "confidential."

Yet again after breaking the Orpha Bove story in his magazine, Turner found himself cited for contempt by a circuit court. He was denied a jury trial. No one attempted to prove him guilty of contempt, or anything else. Instead, he was ordered to prove himself innocent—ordered to produce evidence to back up the charge he'd made in publicizing the Miller and Bove cases, the very evidence that was being legally suppressed, under threat of another contempt citation, by the State Bar Association.

In this situation, he saw no real choice except to let himself be found guilty and appeal the decision, still waiting for the Bar Association to complete its investigation and release his evidence.

I'm not claiming that any form of conspiracy against this man existed. Very probably, he was merely the victim of an unusual set of circumstances.

I don't know whether Turner could have proven his charges of corruption, if he'd been free to use all his evidence. I don't know whether the attorneys he accused of wrongdoing are innocent or guilty.

I have repeatedly said that I have no wish to pre-judge anyone in this matter, or to see the public pre-judge anyone. Lawyers deserve their day in court, just the same as the rest of us.

But I do know that there is something basically wrong with any system that traps a man between two contempt of court charges—any system that simultaneously orders a man to defend himself and prevents him from doing so.

Every judge, every prosecutor and every private attorney in Michigan is and must be a member of the State Bar Association. This arrangement is very much like having Henry Ford, II, Walter Reuther and the members of the Labor Mediation Board all be members of the same union.

Practically all professional people who deal with the public are licensed and regulated by the state—policed by public officials who can be held responsible by the public. Only lawyers and doctors are granted the privilege of policing themselves.

Behind all that has happened in the Turner case, no matter what the outcome now, lies a basic question that we in the Michigan State Legislature will have to face sooner or later:

Has the vast amount of power we have granted to the State Bar Association of Michigan worked for the public good or to the public detriment? Has this Association directed that power to improving its own, zealous and impartial? Or has the Association, all too often, used its vast power to look after its own?

This is not a question to be decided in any court. It is a question to be decided by every citizen who has sought legal help at an attorney's office, or who may be forced to seek such help in the future. It is a question to be decided by the people.

Errant Young Driver

Found To Be on LSD

An off-duty deputy from the Washtenaw county sheriff's Department observed a car being driven in a reckless and erratic fashion on Wednesday evening, July 24, as he was enroute to Ann Arbor to visit friends. Deputy Richard Coppinelli apprehended the driver of the vehicle, Anthony Scott Landiner, 18, of Ann Arbor, after stopping the car, registered to John Schoen of Detroit.

Deputy Coppinelli noted in his report that he "believed the driver to be drunk, but it was later learned that the subject was on LSD." Investigation of the incident is continuing.

City Income Tax
 Demands for more city services have forced nine Michigan municipalities to adopt a city income tax. Other cities are sure to follow suit. The income levy has been found to be an effective means to raise needed revenue without adding burden to property taxes.

Taxation of income by local government, although not used in Michigan until Detroit's adoption in 1902, actually began in 1939 in the District of Columbia, notes Ayon M. Dreyer, Professor of Economics at Central Michigan University. By the end of 1967, some 171 cities in eight states had begun to levy income taxes.

Uniformity of a sort was provided by the 1964 City Income Tax Act. The legislation permits municipalities to levy a flat rate one percent tax on residents and one-half percent on non-residents working within the city limits. Other provisions deal with business and industry profits. The act was deemed necessary to prevent a wide variation in bases and rates and to control maximum rates established by cities.

Cities have found the income tax somewhat difficult to administer.

Critics charge that it is an "upside down income tax," based on the inability to avoid rather than the ability to pay. While it is comparatively easy to determine city residents, enforcing the tax on "outsiders" can be difficult.

Non-resident taxpayers must pay only that portion of wages earned within the city. Employees hired on a contract basis or those with more than one place of employment present difficult problems.

Renters who work outside of the city present other problems. Statistics on the amount of rentable insurance, annuity, and retirement income are not readily available. Corporate profit figures are not published on a local basis.

These problems and others make the city income tax costly as well as difficult to collect. A study of Mt. Pleasant in 1966 indicated that the collection cost would run as high as 13 percent, a direct reflection of the need to establish a separate tax office, staffed by competent personnel.

The blow of a city income tax may be softened by two factors: a reduction in property taxes, and a legal deduction against both state and federal income taxes.

Any property tax reduction depends upon the action of city government when the income tax is adopted. A substantial reduction was granted to Lansing residents, but the tax expert cautions that a city adopting the tax probably does so to wipe out deficits or increase service. In most instances, it is the school rather than the city which accounts for the major burden on property.

Dreyer notes that city tax reduces the taxable income for state and federal purposes. For example, a married man with two children who earns $10,000 a year and is taxed $76 at the city level would find his state and federal income taxes reduced by $29.66. The "real" cost of the city tax would be $46.34.

The tax is not a popular one and 10 percent of the voters can bring it back for voter reconsideration. Dreyer reminds that the tax is one of the very few ways cities can meet demands for more services with present revenue.

Judicial Salaries
 Judges in Michigan are among the highest paid in the nation, according to the American Judicial Society. A comparison indicates that Michigan Supreme Court Justices, who receive $35,000 per year, are the fourth highest in the nation. New York pays $39,000; Pennsylvania and Illinois pay $37,000. All four states have seven high court judges. Michigan has eight until Justice Theodore Souris resigns earlier this year.

"Average salary" for state supreme court justices is $24,640. The lowest pay is in Wyoming, Utah and Oklahoma. Judges there receive $16,500 per year. Compensation for "intermediate" appellate court judges shows the same variation: New York, $33,800 to $40,000; Pennsylvania, $32,000; Illinois, $35,000; Michigan, $32,500; Arizona and New Mexico pay the least, $18,500 per year. The average salary across all states is $27,118.

 The first record of soap being used as a washing agent are found in the writings of Galen, a Greek physician who lived in the second century A.D. But there are earlier mentions of the basic ingredients of soap in the writings of Pliny the Elder, a Roman scholar of the first century A.D.

With six men seeking the Republican nomination and two the Democratic nomination as candidates for sheriff, balloting is expected to be exceptionally heavy in Washtenaw county in the primary election to be held Aug. 3. Although the matter of disposal of the state-owned cement plant at Four Mile Lake has been definitely settled by the state administration, local residents who are interested in the future of the village are making arrangements to stage a fight to the finish in an effort to stop the state in their wrecking of the plant. ## TURNER IN ANCHORAGE:

Finds Good Food Served With Colorful Local History

Palmer, Alaska
July 18, 1968

Dear Readers:

Since my last report I have not traveled very far but I have seen many interesting sights. I have toured Anchorage and looked down onto the city from the top of the tallest buildings—the large hotels. But somehow the large hotels don't fit my fancy. It's the smaller places of business where you'll find the true Alaskan people. They have spent their lives here and seem to have a different outlook on life.

I found one such person here in Anchorage. One day, while looking for a good place to eat in downtown Anchorage, I overheard a couple who had just stepped out of the doorway of an eating place.

The man said to his wife, "Yep, man, that is the best place yet." I couldn't mistake that Texas drawl and I asked if it was really a good place to eat. "Yep, best place we've found."

I took their advice and stepped inside and found a very neat and well-kept place. I was greeted by the hostess and, after a short conversation, I found out that she was the owner. The sign outside said, "Club 25," and a plaque on the side of the building told the building's history. It's the oldest building in Anchorage, built in 1915 by the present owner's father, The Chadming owner, Miss Myrtle Stalniker, told me some more of the building's history and the history of Anchorage.

The building withstood the earthquake of 1964 with very little damage. Although it is dwarfed by the towering Captain Cook Hotel next door, this well-kept building stands proudly amidst the modern buildings of downtown Anchorage.

Myrtle, as she is known by her many friends, greets one and all although she has several waitresses. If any of you travel to Anchorage in the future, I recommend that you stop at the Club 25, located on Fourth Ave. Your favorite cocktail or dinner will be served promptly from a good menu of many choices.

From Anchorage I toured the Terman Arm, including Portage Glacier, a very scenic spot where many large icebergs float around in a large lake. This spot is a photographer's delight.

Then I went down the Kenai Peninsula to Cooper's Landing for some salmon fishing. However, the salmon were not running at that point so I headed for Dawson City in the heart of the Klondike. I also stopped to see some people I had met two years ago, but they were not home.

Oats were just "heading out" in a valley near Palmer, and the cabbages were just starting to head. I was too late for the large strawberries grown there, however.

I didn't get this article finished in time to mail in Alaska and upon my arrival at Dawson City, Yukon, I found Canada is having a postal strike. I hope this gets to you in time.

I will cut this article short with a promise that I will send a more lengthy article next time to include the many colorful figures I encountered at Dawson City.

Your northern reporter,
Don Turner.

Track Meet...

Jim Storey, Storey also won the 60-yard hurdles ahead of Dave Leach and Dave Proctor. Mark Heydlauff triumphed over Dave Leach for a first in the 880-yard run.

Two relays were held, an 880 and 440. The team of Pennington, Matt Heydlauff, Eder and Jody Daniels scooted to a first in the 880. Second-place team consisted of Ann Schablie, Musbach, Morrison and Dave Schablie. In third place were Tobin, Davis, John Daniels and Jim Leach.

Tobin, Bob Swanberg, Jody Daniels and Matt Heydlauff captured top honors in the 440. Ann Schablie, Eder, Rademacher and John Daniels came in second and were followed by the team of Dave Leach, Dave Schablie, Jim Leach and Davis.

PORTAGE GLACIER at the end of the Terman Arm in Alaska, a narrow inlet below Anchorage. Don Turner writes that the spot also features nature trails and a large rest area.

Two Additional Buses Added To Schedule

Recently initiated bus service between Dexter and the communities of Pinckney and Ann Arbor has gained many new patrons during its first two weeks of operation. Eldon Jones announced early this week that two additional runs are being added to the previously announced schedule.

The additional runs will provide more convenient service for patrons who wish to return to Dexter prior to the dinner hour, and also will allow express packages westbound from Ann Arbor to reach Dexter before regular daily business closing hours.

Beginning Thursday, Aug. 1, (today), a bus will leave the area in front of the Sheriff's Department in Ann Arbor at 11:10 a.m., continuing to Dexter at 11:30 a.m., and terminating at Pinckney at 11:55 a.m.

The second new bus run will originate at Pinckney at 12:30 p.m., arriving at Portage Lake at 12:45 p.m., continuing on to the Dexter stop at 12:55 p.m., and reaching Ann Arbor at 1:15 p.m.

These two runs will be in addition to all previously listed runs for the bus service, Jones stressed. Interest in the express package delivery is increasing as local Dexter business men are beginning to realize its possibilities. Bus drivers on the new service include Mrs. Betty Cook, Earl Kapp and Leo Worboy. Owner of the bus company is Arvin Marshall of Ann Arbor.

Charter service is available upon request, bus company officials report. Also connections are made at Ann Arbor with buses serving Ypsilanti and the Ypsilanti State Hospital. For further information call 663-2613 or 878-3731.

County 4-H Show

strations, tractor operators contest, gun safety evaluations and teen leader interviews will be conducted from 1 to 5 p.m.

A fun horse show is slated for 4:30 p.m. The awards program is set for 7 p.m., along with the market livestock sale. Exhibits will be released at 8:30 p.m.

On Friday, the grounds will be cleaned and premiums paid.

ON UNEMPLOYMENT

The Labor Department has reported the U.S. unemployment rate during May remained at 3.5 percent of the nation's working force for the second consecutive month.

Highway Information Centers Serve Record Number in June

Lansing—A June record for serving vacationers has been set at the eight highway travel information centers operated by the State Highway Commission.

More than 100,000 persons stopped for information, a 10 percent increase over the previous June high of 89,558 in 1967. Last year, nearly 700,000 persons stopped at the centers and received more than 2.3 million maps, brochures and other helpful information.

The centers are on main highways at New Buffalo, Port Huron, Monroe, Mackinaw City, Menominee, Clare, Sault Ste. Marie and Ironwood.

Empty hands appreciate empty honors, and there are plenty of them in every community.

TODAY'S THOUGHT

By LOUIS BURGHARDT

Nearly everyone knows the words in the Lord's Prayer, but do we really know what they mean? Do we really know, for example, what is meant by "hallowed be Thy name"? . . . ? Do we really pray with a feeling of awesome respect of His majestic perfection, power and influence? Or do we pray in conversational manner like we talk to people in general? Do we really mean it when we say, "Thy will be done"? . . . ? Are we really willing to accept His will, His decisions, which often require submission of our wishes, wants and desires? Are we really willing to change what we know is a lop-sided way of life in order to live the way He wants us to live? Do we really mean it when we pray, "As we forgive those who trespass against us"? . . . ? Do we really forgive those who hurt us and especially those who neither ask or expect forgiveness for their hurts?

Does not a truthful answer to such questions give us a probable, or at least a partial answer to the question of why He does not always grant all our wishes, wants and desires? . . .

Dexter Girl Finds Teaching in Ecuador Interesting Experience

A present-day Shangri-La, at least climate-wise, Ecuador's mountainous middle area runs the gamut of the four seasons every day.

With an average annual temperature of 55 degrees, the capital, Quito (say key toe) at an elevation of 9,340 feet, affords residents spring mornings, summer days, autumn evenings and winter nights.

The nearby mountains display snow the year 'round, but only an occasional hail storm disturbs the tranquility of the climate in the ancient city, oldest capital and second highest city in South America.

At Inaquito, near the edge of Quito, against a backdrop of Ruco Pichincha, a dormant volcano nearly three miles high, lie the new buildings belonging to the Academia Alianza, academically one of the finest American schools in the Americas (as those south of the border refer to their continent).

It is here that 250 students, children of missionaries, ambassadors and military personnel from various national origins, study under the guidance of 29 faculty members (Americans, Canadians and two Ecuadorians).

Teaching the fourth grade students is Miss Gloria Altenberndt, daughter of Mrs. Daisy Altenberndt, formerly of

GLORIA ALTENBERNDT

Webster township and now a Dexter resident.

A graduate of Dexter High school, Miss Altenberndt joined the Academia Alianza in 1961 and has spent four years teaching and an additional period in coastal Ecuador at a mission station.

A 12-year school, from which 90 percent of graduates attend colleges and universities, its founding by the Christian and Missionary Alliance, took place in 1921. Bilingual, even the smallest students study Spanish as well as English daily.

Miss Altenberndt considers the students the most interesting part of her association with the school as most of them are culturally sophisticated, having lived in various other countries as well as Ecuador.

For example, nearly all of them have traveled by air, which would be unusual even in Ann Arbor or Detroit. Among present students is the son of the Japanese ambassador, pupils from England and Scotland, and a child born in the Netherlands Antilles, whose parents' native land is Holland.

School hours parallel those in the USA, but semesters are different. Classes begin in August in order that the semester may terminate before the Christmas holidays, as most students have many miles to travel before they can be with their families. Commencing again in January, summer vacation starts in the middle of May.

"Snow days" are unknown to those studying at the Academia, but another form of freedom from classes, a bit more dangerous to be sure, exists for them. Called "riot days," they occur whenever a military coup or other such change of government takes place.

There have been several since 1961, and though the school is located in the outskirts, the U. S. embassy often requests that children "stay off the streets."

Though no cast system, such as that in India, exists in Ecuador, it might as well. The Indian, dirt-poor and illiterate for the most part, has made little progress toward being accepted by the pure Spaniards or "whites" as they are most often called, which comprise the "upper class."

Socially above the Indians, according to Miss Altenberndt, is anyone who can grow a beard. This includes mulattoes (mixtures of Spanish and Negro or Indian and Negro). The distinction is made because the Indian is facially hairless.

In Ecuador, there are three distinct native groups, the Jivaro, until very recently head hunters, who live in the jungle; the Quechua, or mountain inhabitants; and the Spanish descendants, who live in the coastal area.

Miss Altenberndt expects to return to the Academia Alianza in August, where classes will resume in much the same way as they do in September in Dexter.

Unless, of course, you're a sixth grader planning to join your class in climbing the 15,000 foot volcano in the back yard of your school.

—or you're in junior high and planning a field trip to visit an Inca pyramid.

—or your classmates come from many of the countries of the world.

Otherwise, school is much the same as here.

Committee Will Investigate Flood Damage

State Representatives Roy Smith and Thomas G. Sharpe submitted a resolution to the House, which was adopted July 24, creating a special committee to study flood disaster results in Washtenaw county.

The resolution was prompted by the recent downturn which damaged areas in Webster and Scio townships, causing destruction in Loch Alpine subdivision and uprooting sewage treatment facilities and sanitary sewers.

The committee consists of five members appointed by the speaker of the House to function until 1969 to study flood disaster in the county and to report findings and recommendations to the 1969 legislature.

Those chosen for the committee are Representatives Roy Smith, chairman, Thomas Sharpe, Roy Smith, William Copeland and Vincent J. Pettipiece.

The committee is empowered to subpoena witnesses, administer oaths and examine the books and records of any public or private individuals or concerns. It may also use the resources of any state agency and its political subdivisions and may employ any assistants it considers necessary to research the problem.

Committee members scheduled their first special meeting in the Loch Alpine subdivision at 2 p.m., Wednesday, July 31.

Embarrassing Moment

South Haven—The dedication of a new bascule bridge carrying M-43 over the Black River was almost a failure.

A key used to operate the bridge was handed to City Manager Fred Timmer for safe keeping, but he fumbled and it dropped into the river.

Fortunately there was a spare in the bridge watch house.

The postmen of America behave in moderation in sending Christmas cards.

ECUADOR'S ACADEMIA ALIANZA, a school of the Christian Missionary Alliance, is set against the backdrop of 15,000 foot Ruco Pichincha volcano, in the Quito suburb of Inaquito. Climbing to the top of the mountain is a favorite pastime of sixth graders at the school.

IN THE OPEN

By Lee Smits

Urban robins are beginning to peep from the insecticide disaster and once more a robin song cheers a city dweller on his way to work.

The song might be called a war-cry. A male robin is proclaiming his determination to defend his nesting territory. It has happened that a male robin mistook his reflection in a bright surface, such as a hub cap, for an intruder and battled his own image day after day.

The robin, Michigan's state bird, is actually a thrush. Homeseekers named it for the English robin, which has a red breast. As the official bird of our state, the jack-paw warbler might be more appropriate.

There is reason to believe that Henry Ford was a major factor in bringing about the enactment of a most important piece of conservation legislation, the federal migratory bird act. We were told that it was the sight of strings of robins, displayed for sale in southern states, that prompted Ford to campaign for the protection, not only of robins, but of waterfowl and other migratory species.

While on the subject of robins, there comes to mind an experience of federal enforcement men who found a small church in the deep south advertising its annual robin supper. The church people had no notion that they were violators.

They explained that the robins were obtained by "whipping." Flocks of robins roosted in thickets. Carrying flashlights, bags and willow whips, robin-hunters invaded a roosting place and flailed had enough robins for the annual feast.

Of course the robins taken for the church event made no real dent in the robin population. More than half of all the robins hatched each year are destined to perish one way or another before they are old enough to reproduce. Only wholesale slaughter, as with poison spray, could seriously reduce the total number of robins.

The robin's morning song comes as house-cleaning fever finds its victims. This infection causes an old-timer to resume the endless task of desk-cleaning. From the outdoor and wildlife compartment come odd items, such as the roof of a 10 Indian families in the northern Kapsakasing district. The northern Kapsakasing district trap lines and last winter harvested enough fur to bring in between $2,500 and $4,500 per family. In past years 20 beaver had been a maximum catch for most of the families. This would mean affluence.

Indians in the Ontario bush country don't have to spend much money for meat. They are entitled to set gill nets, of a specified length, under the ice to catch fish for themselves and their dog teams. They keep supplied with moose meat and, of course, eat the beaver they trap.

The sale of furs is supervised by the Ontario government and Indians are instructed in the special care of pelts to increase their market value. (The skinning, fleshing, and stretching of furs is, of course, the responsibility of Indian women.)

As the hula hoop craze subsided, quantities of hoops were shipped to northern Ontario because they seemed to be just right for beaver stretchers. What was overlooked was that the plastic hoops become brittle as glass in below-zero weather. So the Indians continue to rely on hoops of ash or willow.

The notion that native hunters practice conservation is a fallacy. Indian hunters on the plains drove herds of buffalo over cliffs, utilizing only a fraction of the slaughtered animals. In the fur trade era Indians didn't bother to trap beaver. They ripped out dams and did their best to see that every beaver in a colony was taken.

However, it is the white man who commits the worst outrages against wildlife. Two men from Flint were jailed recently in St. Helens for deer-killing. They had shot two does, each carrying twin fawns.

One of the encouraging signs of conservation progress is the present attitude toward violators. No longer is it considered smart to violate laws protecting fish and wildlife. The man who killed the two does were called upon to pay $325 each in fines, court costs, including $200 for each doe.

Mr. Smits' column is presented through the courtesy of the Michigan Consolidated Gas Co.

It is warm weather to talk about furs but they are being shown at this season for the fall. There is variety in the new coats, dresses and stoles. Different shades of mink are used to fashion garments a darker mink may bind a jacket or be used around the neckline or as a collar. Stoles are still popular and the three-quarter length coat is good. Short jackets are smart.

Jeweled necklines and cuffs on cocktail dresses are favored by some designers.

Colorful shoes with medium heels continue to be popular.

French Role in State's Past Reviewed by WSU Historian

DETROIT — Most Michigan residents, although aware that 1668 is the 300th anniversary of Sault Ste. Marie's founding, forget who the French founder was.

Can you name him? Can you list three other Frenchmen whose names are important in early Michigan history?

"This is a year for remembering that in the two-penninsula area now called Michigan the earliest explorers were Frenchmen, not Englishmen," points out Dr. Philip F. Mason, Wayne State University archivist and professor of history.

"Because of our language, laws, and our system of government," he says, "we tend to assume that our earliest historical ties lie primarily with England. This is not true."

Although they were later greatly outnumbered by other groups, the French were the first white farmers, and more important to early Michigan, the first to activate a fur trade with the Indians, says Dr. Mason.

Etienne Brule, a French explorer, was the first white man to set foot on Michigan soil. He discovered Lake Superior between 1618 and 1622, and landed at Sault Ste. Marie about 50 years before the Soo settlement was established. The Brule River, which forms part of the boundary between the Upper Peninsula and Wisconsin, now honors his name.

The Governor of New France, Samuel de Champlain, who sponsored Brule's voyages, is himself credited with the discovery of Lake Huron three years earlier. There is nothing to indicate, however, that Champlain sensed the magnitude of this lake or ventured into the Michigan wilderness.

"It was Father Jacques Marquette, a French Jesuit," says Dr. Mason, "who founded Michigan's second settlement at St. Ignace, in 1671."

Other important dates in Michigan's "French history" include:

1634—Jean Nicolet paves through the Straits Mackinac in search of a new route to the Orient.

1669—Adrien Joliet (the older brother of Louis) was the first white man known to have visited the Lower Peninsula.

1671—Francis de Sossion, the name of King Louis XIV, proclaimed French possession of the Lake Superior territory and the Mississippi River Valley.

1679—Robert Cavalier, Sieur de La Salle, built Fort Miami on the site of the present-day city of St. Joseph.

1701—Sieur Antoine de Mothe Cadillac established a fort at Detroit. The fleur-de-lis (French flag) floated over Michigan 90 years. It wasn't until 1793 when British troops took control of Detroit, that the French influence in Michigan began to decline.

Today, except for shrines some of these explorers, names of nine of our counties and some of our coastline like Bete Gris, St. Ignace, Chene, St. Au Gres and Cross Pointe—intend to remind us of our early French culture.

Incidentally, it was Father Marquette who established that settlement at Sault Ste. Marie in 1668, three years before he went to St. Ignace.

Road Rally Enthusiasts Find Fun in Hectic Way To Relax

There you are, clutching stop watch in sweat-spotted hand, scratching illegible figures on scraps of paper, leaping through Reid's Rally Tables at a fantastic rate, and trying to find the "first opportunity" to turn right.

Such is the life of a rally enthusiast. Or, if you prefer the French, it's "rallye." (Pronounced the same as English, however.)

The sport of rallying is mushrooming all across the United States, and, reportedly, there is an elite cult who knows all, but chooses to remain anonymous. The cult continues to revel in the intricacies of the sport, not caring for the glare of publicity, the roar of the crowds, or the smell of the grease.

Contrary to many people's notions, rally is not races. A rallyist does not try to break or make speed records. In a rally, the main idea is to coordinate time, speed and driving prowess on a pre-determined course. Neither is a rally limited to sports car drivers. Expensive equipment is not a prerequisite, although many confirmed rallyists find it easier in the long run to invest in costly hand calculators and the like.

However, we have it from reliable sources that a man and his son, driving a Cadillac and carrying absolutely no equipment other than common sense, swept a few first places in beginners rallies in Jackson last year.

Probably a rally is best likened to a scavenger hunt, although some would attest that it comes closer to being a wild goose chase.

Before telling about the next series of rallies in the Chelsea area and about a small car club in the area, let's simulate what a rally might be like for a beginner.

A rally is run with a driver and navigator in each car. Duties may be divided up as you like, but the navigator generally has the toughest job. The driver is there to do just that—drive—but a navigator must operate the stop watch and read the car's odometer, thereby trying to maintain an average speed. Usually, he also reads the directions to the driver.

Probably THE most important thing to keep in mind: DO NOT GET LOST. When you get off course in a rally, you must make up the time it took you to get back on course again. And this is not easy for a beginner.

One of the greatest helps to beginners and those without fancy equipment is a paperback booklet called "Reid's Rally Tables." (There are also others on the market.)

Besides giving a beginner an explanation of the sport and some pointers, it includes a set of tables for each average speed (including fractions of speeds) you are likely to use in a rally and the time it takes to travel miles and fractions of miles at that speed.

"All" you have to do is check your car's odometer at regular intervals during the rally, stop one hand of the stop watch, read the time it took you to travel that distance, and then check with the tables to see how long it should have taken you. If you are slow, then you drive a little faster than the average speed to catch up. If you are fast, then you drive slower until you reach, as exactly as you can, the time stated in the tables. This procedure is followed over and over again during a rally.

By the way, it also helps to have an accurate odometer. During a rally, usually at the 10-mile mark, an odometer check is taken. Your car's odometer should also register 10 miles.

If it does not, you must figure in the difference with all of your speed checks. Rally table booklets will tell you how to do this.

This is a skeletal outline. Getting back to the actual rally, you arrive, quite wet behind the ears, register and wait. You will be given a number to post on your car and will probably be told that rally cars must travel with their headlights on. This is to help identify cars at check-points. At a beginners rally, the rallymaster will explain the sport and give some pointers. He will note the special characteristics of his rally and will generally try to calm your nerves.

Everyone will eventually line up according to the number of his car and approach the starting line at what appears to be a snail's pace. Once there, you will be handed a list of general instructions and the course "map."

The instruction sheet will tell you what official notations you must make to present to the rallymaster at the end of the rally. It will also explain what some directions mean. For example, it will tell you that a "T" is a point in a road at which you must either turn left or right. It might explain that "bear left" means veer to the left on a road that splits gently in two directions. It might tell you that "opportunity" means a road with a name sign on its corner. These things are crucial to know if you want to stay on course.

The course "map" is not really a map as such. It is a map of general directions, numbered one, two, and three, which you must follow to keep on course. Directions are usually quite cryptic, such as "left at stop," or "right first opportunity."

Directions are also usually straightforward in a beginners rally, but in more advanced rallies "gimmicks" are used, such as rhymes and riddles.

The rallymaster will give you the official time and your starting time which you diligently make note of since all calculations will be based on the elapsed time from your starting time.

He will yell, "GO."
And you will go.
And things will start happening faster and faster.
And you will be trying to read the directions and check your average speed and pieces of paper will fall like snow on the floor.
And you will probably get lost.

And you will start feeling very dumb and morose and depressed.

At least until it hits you that it's more funny than anything else.

And then you will know the secret of rallying. As you bump-bump down those blankety-blank dirt roads, you will know the secret of rallying.

And if you ever find the course again and pick up where you left off, you will, beyond a doubt, run into a check-point right off the bat without having the chance to make up for lost time.

A check-point is an official car stationed in a most obscure place. You must stop while the rally official posts your time for that leg of the rally. You are penalized for being too early or too late, usually a point a second. You are not told the penalty, however.

Rallies are run in legs so you can do better on the next leg if you mess up the first one. Which is usually the case. When you leave a check-point, it's like starting the rally all over again. You wipe the slate clean, breathe a deep draught of fresh air and go, go, go. At no time, however, are rallies designed to encourage drivers to exceed posted speed limits, to drive carelessly or to ignore posted driving instructions. You may be disqualified if you do.

If you think you'd like to try something different these summer months, which are ideal for rallying, consider these upcoming events:

August 3-4: Sports Car Club of America National Races, Grattan International Raceway, Grattan, Mich.

August 17-18: U. S. Road Racing Championship Races (Group 7 cars), Mid-Ohio Sports Car Course, Lexington, O.

Granted, these rallies and races are not for beginners, but a good place for beginners to look for learners rallies is through the Jackson Small Car Club which has held two this summer and

Two Dexter Girls Attend Orientation Sessions at WMU

Donna Dermody and Rebecca Sue Mast were among Western Michigan University's prospective fall freshmen who spent three days on the university campus during late July for testing, orientation and registration.

The new students move right into the residence halls for the three days, and while on campus, take a battery of tests, have meetings with their counselors, register for classes, and participate in a get-acquainted tour of the campus.

The orientation program began June 30 and continues through Aug. 2, under the direction of Norman K. Russell, director of orientation and new assistant to the vice-president for student activities.

When Western's fall semester begins, Sept. 2, the freshmen will have additional orientation and meetings before starting their first classes on Sept. 4.

Both Becky and Donna were graduates from Dexter High school with the class of 1968. They served as members of the varsity cheerleading squad and were active in many other school activities.

Donna is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Dermody of Third St. She plans to be a physical education teacher and will be following a curriculum in that area.

Rebecca also plans a career in secondary education, majoring in art. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Glen Mast.

Rallying may not be every one's cup of tea. But if you're the type who is looking for a hectic way to relax, even if you own a Cadillac, rallying may be the thing for you.

MICHIGAN'S "MR. DEER" RETIRING: Ilo H. Bartlett, Michigan's "Mr. Deer" for more than four decades, retired from the Conservation Department July 20. Shown here with one of the animals he loved and dedicated his career to, "Bart" has personally trudged over thousands of miles in northern Michigan's whitetail country and braved the stormy blasts of winter to literally live with deer during their hard times. As a result, he has learned the ways of deer in Michigan and the vicissitudes of their wintry existence as no other man has learned and cared about them. And from this personal communion with whitetails, Bart has worked tirelessly as a disciple of antlerless deer hunting as a merciful measure for managing these animals. Honored as Michigan's "Wildlife Conservationist of the Year" in 1965 and as the Great Lakes Area's "Mr. Deer" the year before, this man leaves an indelible mark on the modern-day program of sound, scientific management of the whitetailed deer.

More than 220 boys have been participating in the baseball program, and 75 children have been taking regular swimming instruction each day. During the recreational swimming program, the average attendance has been 60 children per day.

Loch Alpine Treatment Plant Repairs Studied By Committee

Members of the recently delegated state committee to study flood damage in Washtenaw county and particularly Webster and Scio townships, met at Loch Alpine Wednesday and set up a plan to tackle the immediate problem of the subdivision's damaged sewage treatment plant.

State Representatives Thomas G. Sharpe, Roy Smith and William Copeland and residents estimated the damage to amount to $10,000. The plant, which normally is in operation 97 percent of the time, is now working at only 38 or 40 percent capacity.

The lowered capacity threatens health, recreational parks along the Huron River and overloads Ann Arbor's treatment system. Committee members contacted the State Department of Public Health Wednesday and asked for an inspection of the plant for the purpose of declaring the condition a health hazard.

LET'S LOOK AT THE RECORDS

Gentle On My Mind—the important new song that brought the always popular Glen Campbell to the inevitable point of super popularity. It's a tune moniker... Accompanying himself on guitar, Glen offers 10 other tunes, including a sensitively poignant Mary in the Morning, a well-tempered version of the popular cawwett tour of Bowling Green and thoughtful reflections on the philosophical import of Red Red Hugh's The World I Used to Know.

Under the astute baton of Ralph Carmichael and backed by guest instrumentalists, Tom Thieleman (courtesy of Command Records), Miss Peggy LaProffers a potpourri of songs. Somethin' Groovy that was quit for quality and machine inspiration... Somethin' Spid (opener) gets change around slightly for the album apt title and, at the same time, benefits by Miss Lee's luscious touch... It's followed by Release Me, and such of favorites as You Must Have Been a Beautiful Baby, Make Whoopee, and Love is Here Stay, to name a few... It's swinging Miss Lee, which comes as a surprise to no one. The King of the hills, Willie Edwards, is back with an aching album of the songs of the islands in Blue Skies of Hawaii... Ed Kenney, Hawaii Pua Almeida, Nina Keall, hamana, Kailani Kilmaka and the great Alfred Apaka contribute some of the components of the Hawaii Calls chorus orchestra... Some of the most lustrous cuts are The Boy from Laupahoehoe, Hanohano, Sea and Sand and the apocryphal closer, Aloha Oe, always a winner.

Potent Primary

This year's Aug. 8 primary election may be described as potent and important as any in the history of the state. The primary will make final decisions at the primaries on three proposed amendments to our state constitution.

Not to be ignored is the selection of candidates from each political party for such top offices as Governor, Lieutenant Governor, and members of the state legislature. Another important part of the primary election is the selection of delegates to the county conventions of each political party.

The three proposed constitutional amendments have been placed on the primary ballot to ease the burden in the fall general election where another four will be decided. They include: HJR 1, which amends the constitution to create a nine-member Judicial Tenure Commission, which will be termed as having "watchdog authority over judges of our state. The Supreme Court would have final action on any recommendations.

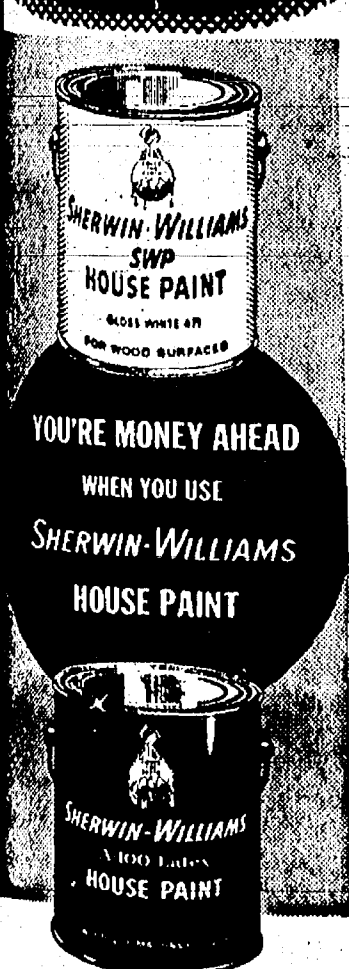

HJR 2, which would return to the Governor the authority to appoint judges to fill vacancies until the next election. HJR 3, which provides that judges be appointed by appointment of a majority of the judges of the state. This system has not been used in the past because of the need for judges much greater than the number of judges eligible to serve.

HJR 4, which creates a State Compensation Commission, with the power to set salaries and expense allowances of members of the legislature, Governor, the Lieutenant Governor, and Justices of the Supreme Court. Their determination on salaries would be final unless reversed by a two-thirds vote of the House.

Decisions to be made in the primary election are far too important to let go by default," says Robert Smith, legislative counsel for the Michigan Farm Bureau, in urging farmers—and others, to become politically active. "Political parties are the foundation of our form of government, yet through apathy, it is present that control of a party, the destiny of a major issue, is decided by a tiny minority," Smith says.

Every person should be willing to listen to others—at least as much as he talks.

Aug. 6 two of the state judges upon which you may see proposition 1 which establishes a judicial tenure commission and proposition 2 establishing a state officers compensation commission.

The judicial tenure commission will investigate complaints about conduct of judges. It would take disciplinary action but not make recommendations to remove a judge for any of the causes.

The commission would be composed of nine members, of whom a majority of five would be judges. The members would be elected by the judges of the circuit courts, probate courts, district courts, and the state bar. The governor would appoint one judge and two non-lawyer members.

Presently Michigan judges may be removed by impeachment or by legislative action, procedures rarely used. The proposal would add a third method for removing judges from office.

Right states have established such commissions. The California commission is similar to what is proposed for Michigan. In 1966, 75 complaints were registered against judges of which 33 required investigation. The California commission maintains the confidentiality of its investigations and has been able to secure resignation without the full publicity of a formal hearing before a supreme court. There have been an average of five or six resignations per year while investigations were underway.

Proposition 2 would create a state officers compensation commission of seven members appointed by the governor. It would set salaries of legislators, the governor, lieutenant governor and justices of the supreme court.

Dissatisfaction with the current practice of setting salaries by legislative act appears to be based primarily on the fact that considerable controversy usually occurs every time legislative salaries are increased. Since 1949 legislative salaries and expense allowances have been increased from $2,900 to $15,000. The governor's salary has gone from $22,000 to $40,000, the lieutenant governor from $5,000 to $22,000 and supreme court justices from $12,000 to $35,000.

The main argument for empowering a compensation commission is to make salary determinations to relieve the legislators from taking direct responsibility for action on a matter in which they have a personal stake. A precedent for this proposal exists in that the state civil service commission, a constitutionally established independent body, is empowered to fix rates of compensation of state employees in the classified service.

The above material is from an analysis prepared by the Citizens Research Council of Michigan.

Council Searching For Old-Time Area Girl Scouts

The Huron Valley Girl Scouts are looking for women who were Scouts in the area in the early days of the movement.

The council was organized in 1958 from several smaller councils and lone troop areas, according to Mrs. Kenneth Hulsing, Plymouth, president of the council.

"What we're looking for," said Mrs. Hulsing, "are women that were in the organization—as girls or as leaders—in the 1920's and 1930's or even before. We'd like to talk with them about some of their remembrances."

This fall will mark the 10th birthday of the Huron Valley Council and plans are being made now for an anniversary observance.

Anyone with old snapshots, newspaper clippings, or other records of early Scout activities which may be loaned to the Scouts is asked to contact the Huron Valley Council office, 310 S. Huron, Ypsilanti.

Three Constitutional Amendments on Ballot

proposed constitutional amendment Three constitutional amendments will appear on a referendum ballot in the general primary election Aug. 6.

Proposal one is to establish a judicial tenure commission; proposal two would establish a commission to recommend salaries of certain state officials; and proposal three would provide a manner to fill vacancies in judicial positions.

Proposal one appears in this form on the ballot: "Shall the state constitution be amended to establish a judicial tenure commission and to provide for its membership and duties?"

The proposed amendment would establish a judicial tenure commission which would investigate complaints of misconduct or disability of judges in office. Nine members would staff the tenure commission—one elected by the judges of the court of appeals, one elected by the judges of the circuit court, one elected by the judges of the probate court, and one elected by the judges of courts of limited jurisdiction; three members (one judge and two attorneys) elected by members of the State Bar of Michigan; and two non-attorneys appointed by the governor. Commission members would serve three-year overlapping terms.

If the commission members recommended it, the Michigan supreme court would be empowered to suspend, suspend (with or without salary), remove or retire a judge for conviction of a felony, physical or mental disability which prevents the performance of judicial duties, or misconduct in office.

The rules necessary to implement this amendment would be made by the Michigan supreme court and would provide for the confidential and privileged nature of commission proceedings.

In present practice, the only way to remove a judge from office is by impeachment or removal by the governor with the concurrence of two-thirds of the legislature.

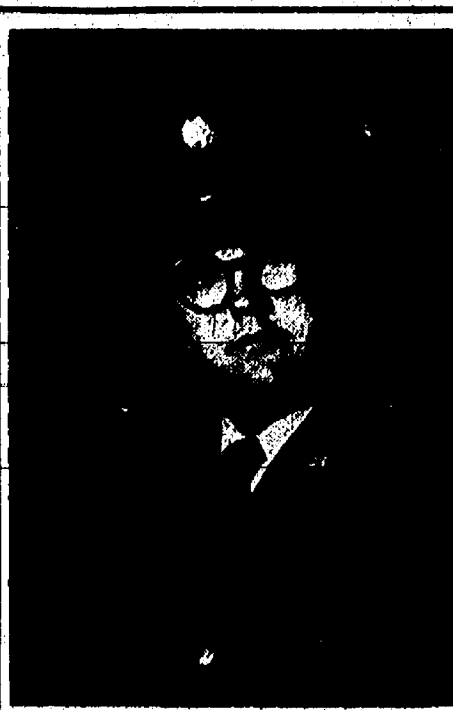

Those favoring the proposal say that, in effect, the present practices are inadequate. They point out that there has never been a judicial impeachment in Michigan and only once has the alternative legislative-gubernatorial method been used.

Supporters also say that people have a right to be protected against an incompetent or misbehaving judge. They contend that the composition of the proposed commission would be well-qualified to investigate complaints, and they say the commission method is fair to the public and to the judges because complaints would be investigated in private and judges would be protected against false accusations while citizens would be protected against judicial incompetence and misbehavior.

Those who support the judicial tenure commission amendment also report that research shows the commission arrangement has worked well in the states that utilize it—California, Colorado, Florida and Texas.

Those opposing the commission expect a Pandora's box to be opened in which irate people who have lost a court case would file charges against a judge on a "grudge" basis. They also say that the two present methods of removing a judge from office are sufficient, and that only other judges should evaluate complaints against judges. Four members of the proposed commission are attorneys or judges.

Opposition forces contend the commission would cost too much and, perhaps, could be gotten around by delegating the Michigan supreme court as a tenure commission. They also feel that the fact that judges can be voted out of office if citizens feel they are effect prior to the adoption of the 1963 constitution.

In addition, the appointed judges would have the privilege of the designation of incumbent on the ballot.

Supporters of the amendment point out that the practice of using retired judges to fill vacancies has not been adequate because not enough retired judges can be found to fill all vacancies often causing the positions to go begging for long periods.

Opponents state that this practice could make a political football out of available judicial positions and that the incumbency designation gives too much of an advantage in elections.

Whatever the case, the decision is now up to voters.

Huron Farm Supply Burglarized Friday

Huron Farm Supply was burglarized sometime between business closing hours on Friday and 1 a.m. Saturday. $180 in change and currency along with a locked cash bag were taken in the break-in.

Richard Palmer showed deputies from the Washtenaw County Sheriff's Department a footprint in the rear door, which had been kicked in and was almost completely shattered. The thieves, apparently were seeking only cash as no tools or other equipment seemed to have been disturbed.

Deputies are continuing their investigation of the incident.

In addition to the above mentioned articles, Dick Palmer notified the Sheriff's Department early this week that one 5 h.p. and one 2 h.p. electric motor was missing, as well as $12 in 4-cent postage stamps. The stamps were a roll bearing Franklin D. Roosevelt's photo.

4 Dexter Girls Attending Session At Camp Linden

Four Dexter girls are now attending Camp Linden, Girl Scout camp in Livingston county. They are: Mary Colby, Donner Rd.; Katherine Miller, Silver Hill Rd.; Nancy Norman, Madden Rd.; and Patricia Rutkowski, of Quigley Rd.

While at the camp, the girls are learning folk dances from Miss Helga Hurtwig, an international counselor who is visiting the United States this summer. She is an elementary school teacher in West Germany, and her specialty is folk dancing. She is in the United States as an exchange camp counselor.

In addition to folk dancing, the Scouts are swimming, boating, hiking, singing and learning campcraft skills. The camp activities are all planned by the Scouts themselves with the guidance of the adult staff members. The Girl Scout philosophy is that when girls plan and carry out their own activities they learn more and become more self-reliant.

The current session at Camp Linden is the last of the season. The girls arrived there July 31 and will remain until Aug. 14. Camp Linden is owned and operated by the Huron Valley Girl Scout Council, of which Dexter is a part. The camp is a member of the American Camping Association.

Driver Pleads Guilty To Reckless Driving After High-Speed Chase

A patrol car from Dexter was called to assist in pursuing a high speed reckless driver along North Territorial Rd., westbound from Whitmore Lake, Monday evening, July 22. Deputy Leonard A. Dexter of the Washtenaw County Sheriff's Department reported observing the vehicle proceeding at excessive speed along Territorial Rd. After the sheriff's patrol caught up with the car near the Hellner Rd. intersection, the driver fled at speeds estimated by the deputy at 80-100 m.p.h. before the sheriff patrol vehicle forced the car off the road about one quarter mile west of the Jennings Rd. intersection.

Driver of the car, James Michael Galuszka, 21, a passenger in the car, William Andrew Winkert, 25, both of Chelsea, were arrested at the scene. Appearing before Judge S. J. Elden in Ann Arbor Municipal Court, the driver pleaded guilty to charges of reckless driving and failure to obey a police signal. Winkert pleaded guilty to a drunk and disorderly charge.

Burglars Break in Park Office, Take Tools, Money

If you spot one or more bright yellow tools, be assured they are not part of Clair's new advertising program, but are, instead, part of the loot taken from a break-in at the Hudson Mills park office some time during Saturday night or early Sunday morning of the past week-end.

Thieves smashed two door windows, apparently reached in and unlocked one of the doors and entered the office. Several desk drawers were pried open with a crowbar, and the intruder took about $5 in change from a soft drink vending machine.

Among the missing tools were a McCulloch saw, valued at $300, a quarter-inch Black & Decker electric drill, valued at $30, a complete set of land tools, including an S-K socket set, valued at $100, and a $50 Emerson record player.

The intruder or intruders left behind a few pools of blood, and several fingerprints by which to be identified. The case is under continuing investigation by deputies of the sheriff department.

UNUSUAL CELEBRATION

St. Louis—J. Robert Devous celebrated his 20th wedding anniversary by handing out flowers to pedestrians and asking them to call his wife by telephone and wish her a happy anniversary. Mrs. Devous spent a busy day answering the phone.

Good packaging and sealing of frozen foods is just as essential as tight-fitting jar rubbers and lids in canning.

SUNDAY'S SERMON

HEAR THE WORDS
How do you spend an hour in church? It is such a short time, and yet for some of us it is an hour that passes so slowly.

Do you hear the words that are spoken? Are your ears closed to the message, or do you let your thoughts wander after and you, back to what happened yesterday, to what you plan to do this afternoon, to the hopes you have for tomorrow?

An hour is so short a time to give. Give it. Turn aside wandering thoughts. Listen to the words. Remember how the Apostles went forth to preach the word of God "unto the ends of the earth."

Remember how the early Christians sacrificed in order to live according to the teachings of Jesus.

So little is asked of us in this modern era. Even the church is designed for our comfort and convenience.

Give fully the time that you give to God. Give it fully and freely. Listen to the words of God, to the ageless message of Christianity.

Spec. Porter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Porter, 9321 Cedar Lake Rd., Pinckney, entered the Army in November 1966, completed basic training at Ft. Leonard Wood, Mo., and was stationed in Vietnam.

The 25-year-old soldier graduated in 1961 from Pinckney High School. His wife, Henrietta, lives at 313 W. Vermijo, Colorado Springs, Colo. Before entering the Army, he was employed by Philips Products in Dexter.

Washington Report by Congressman MARVIN L. ESCH

The 90th Congress may be called many things, but you can be sure it won't be known for reform. Every major reform measure has faced certain death by a disinterested majority. The list includes such important issues as the draft, social security, crime and, of course, a much needed bill to reform Congress itself.

The latest of these to bite the dust was the Election Reform Act of 1968. After much prodding by the minority over a period of several years, the House Administration Committee finally reported this essential measure for floor action only to have it bottled up in the Rules Committee.

It was developed to meet the glaring need for action. In many respects its goals parallel those of the bill I introduced last year to set up a committee on standards and conduct. It would have established a bipartisan Federal Elections Commission to supervise campaign spending. Candidates, individual contributors, and political committees would be subject to realistic and effective regulations requiring full reporting of contributions and expenditures. Safeguards against this one small step toward reform

Costs reveal that present laws invite evasion and are filled with loopholes. The Election Reform Act of 1968 was developed to meet the glaring need for action. In many respects its goals parallel those of the bill I introduced last year to set up a committee on standards and conduct. It would have established a bipartisan Federal Elections Commission to supervise campaign spending. Candidates, individual contributors, and political committees would be subject to realistic and effective regulations requiring full reporting of contributions and expenditures. Safeguards against this one small step toward reform

The case for election law reform is well made and quite sound. Two current laws which deal in this area—the Federal Corrupt Practices Act and the Hatch Act—were enacted 43 and 28 years ago respectively. Studies such as the 1962 Report of President Kennedy's Commission on the Organization of the Executive Branch of the Government have shown that the existing laws dealing with election campaigns.

Air Taxi Service Started To Speed Overnight Mail

Deputy Postmaster General Frederick C. Belen disclosed that a new major air taxi program to provide overnight first-class mail deliveries throughout Michigan as well as to speed up service between Michigan and five other states will be initiated.

Air taxis are two-engine airplanes provided by private owners to move mail on schedules outlined by the postal department.

Speaking at the Michigan State Convention of the National Association of Postmasters, the nation's second-ranking postal official said the expansion has been directed by Postmaster General W. Marvin Watson in line with President Johnson's desire to provide the finest possible postal services.

Belen added that special considerations in Michigan—the physical distance and time difference between upper and lower peninsulas, and the provision of overnight deliveries between Detroit and Chicago—prompted the development of the air taxi plans.

Belen noted the following services air taxi delivery will provide for letter mail; overnight delivery within Michigan; faster connections to other state overnight delivery areas in Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky and Ohio; and ultimately, connections to overnight delivery areas in western Pennsylvania and New York.

TAKE A GOOD LOOK

This is a guest editorial reprinted from the Livingston County Argus-Dispatch, Brighton, Michigan.

You frequently read statements from elected officials who figuratively play the William Tell Overture No. 2, paw the ground and tell their constituents through franked mail newsletters and orally, that there is a fabulous waste in modern government and it comes out of the taxpayers' ever-thinning wallets.

This is just like saying, in the words of humorist H. Allen Smith, "He has that magnificent ability to grasp the obvious." The "I'm watching the cash-register-for-you-folks-back-home" theme is one of the most popular approaches of some legislators and congressmen to obtain or retain endearment in the hearts of voters.

The spiraling costs of any type of government agency or aid in the field of education or virtually any services involving state or federal funds, occasionally are used by some legislators and congressmen to attach bills against which they are personally biased or to submit amendments which can delay, block or kill a bill, although the principal of the measure may have merit.

Modern government has become so complex and fanned out so widely, and is so remote to the average taxpayer, that he can't tell where the buck goes; how it is split and the average guy has a tough time keeping up with his representative, senator or congressman whose views sometimes change and are contradictory. That is why the taxpayer, alias the voter, would be wise to give the candidates in the August primary and the November election, a thorough appraisal and a summation stripped of political eloquence and the flag-waving platitudes.

Now is the time to take inventory on our elective officials—and their records.

In the 51st district, which is Livingston County and parts of Washtenaw County, an important primary election faces the voters next month.

At stake is the Republican nomination for state representative. The incumbent is the energetic, enigmatic and highly controversial Thomas Sharpe, who is seeking another term.

Does Mr. Sharpe who preaches economy on one hand and doesn't mind spending tax money for his own benefit, deserve another term?

Have his opinions of certain major legislative measures been biased to the extent that he has handicapped legislation that has had approval of a majority of both parties and were vital to public interests? Has he voted in the best interests of his constituents in the 51st district?

We think a penetrating study of Mr. Sharpe's voting record would indicate that he has been found lacking.

We think it is time for a change.

Our opinion is based on the records, and the opinions of political observers in Lansing, newsmen and other well informed sources.

Mr. Sharpe yells about increased appropriations for running government.

In the Capital area, however, they are still talking about the 22-day junket he took with three other legislators to Central America (Nov. 8 - Dec. 22) in the interests of "better trade relations" with the various Latin countries visited.

The trip cost Michigan taxpayers more than $1,200, for Mr. Sharpe. A coincidence was that the stopover points included some of the finest spas and recreation centers in Mexico, Costa Rica, Nicaragua and Honduras.

What made it more unusual, was that Mr. Sharpe broke away from the legislative party at Miami on the return trip and took a junket to New Orleans, an extra $62 in plane fare (above the original $660), plus $138 for staying two days in New Orleans to attend a conference on chiropractors.

In New Orleans he stayed at the plush Fountain Blue where his room rent was $21.10 per day. (What the extra dime was for wasn't made clear.)

The lower court reorganization bill permits various counties to form district judgeships and eliminate lower courts such as Justice of Peace, etc. They will be replaced by district judges who must be attorneys, in the forthcoming primary and election.

The reorganization bill had the endorsement of the Michigan Bar Association and various jurists around the state. Mr. Sharpe offered his own plan, which would have permitted each of the 83 counties the option through their boards of supervisors, to retain magistrates or not as desired, in essence exempting the counties from the law if they so wish. This would have provoked a non-uniform set of courts around the state.

Mr. Sharpe voted against the lower courts reorganization bill after the legislature failed to go along with his proposal.

On the Sunday liquor law, which will allow counties, especially in the resort areas, to permit the sale of liquor by the glass on Sundays Mr. Sharpe reversed his views on county option. The bill allows counties to exempt themselves, unless local elections are held.

Mr. Sharpe led a fight against the bill even with local option, on the basis of what lame-duck county boards would do with local option. In other words, he doesn't figure that outgoing county boards could be unbiased about the issue, and voted against the bill.

This is in keeping with his apparent theory that a bill is either all good or all bad.

Along these lines, in an exhaustive study of Mr. Sharpe's views, it can be noted that he has a frequent tendency to condemn the whole because of a part, and refrains from giving the other side of the story.

A good example is his attack on the Michigan Civil Rights Commission because of a big budget increase. Perhaps Mr. Sharpe was right in resisting some of the money asked in the interests of economy.

During his blast at the Civil Rights commission, however, he took occasion to condemn the commission for allegedly sending out "Christmas guidelines" to school districts. "And they are nothing less than a blueprint for keeping Christ out of Christmas, even to such ridiculous extent that the singing of the time-honored and very beautiful carol, 'Silent Night,' not be permitted."

What Mr. Sharpe apparently doesn't realize or failed to mention, is that the commission merely was following rulings of the United States Supreme Court, the Michigan State Supreme Court and federal, district and appeal courts.

Under the court rulings, religion may not be taught in public schools during school classes; nor may religious hymns be sung, nor any way may religion be injected during regular school hours.

So his quarrel in this case should have been with the United States Supreme Court, not the Civil Rights Commission.

When the schools asked for more money in the last state budget, he said, "I challenge the wisdom of increased public outlays for any purpose, no matter how important, over which the representatives of the public in the legislature lose control."

But in another case, he puts the onus on the board of regents of the University of Michigan. This is in reference to the appearance of William Sioane Coffin who spoke at the University and urged students to defy draft laws. Coffin was under federal indictment for counseling draft dodging at the time.

In his attack on the University, Mr. Sharpe "cited many persons who supported the views" against the appearance of Coffin, and declared, "I personally believe that action should be more properly taken by the elected University of Michigan regents who are supposed to be an autonomous governing body."

Mr. Sharpe also cited complaints against unruly elements among students. The unruly elements and antics are on every major campus in the country today and these disturbances are not indigenous to the great University of Michigan.

Mr. Sharpe fails to point out in his blast at the University of Michigan that there are tens of thousands of students attending the University that are there for the serious business of getting an education.

If these incidents are getting out of hand at the University, there might be such a thing as Mr. Sharpe's writing some legislation which would give the administration some authority to invoke more rigid restrictions.

Mr. Sharpe is a very articulate and incisive writer. Besides his own talents, as chairman of the state affairs committee he has at his disposal the gifted talents of Gene Caesar, an expert in research and writing. Caesar works under contract to the state affairs committee on a contract basis, and a fee basis.

Mr. Sharpe's views and news releases have been consistently run in the columns of the Argus-Dispatch. He is entitled to his views, many of which we feel are one-sided.

We also are entitled to our views and our appraisal of his candidacy and suggest the voters take a long look at the record for the primary election next month.

PHILLIP R. KAPLAN

California Youth Elected To Head World's Key Clubs

Phillip R. Kaplan, 17, a member of the Key Club of Warren High School, Downey, Calif., was elected president of Key Club International at the close of the 25th annual international convention of the organization in Montreal, July 7-10.

Kaplan has served as Key Club secretary and lieutenant governor of Division 13, California-Nevada-Hawaii Key Club District and as International secretary last year.

Also elected were two vice-presidents, Keith Higgins, Boca Raton, Fla., and Jay McMains, Baton Rouge, La.; a secretary, David Alley, Springfield, Mo.; and 12 trustees.

Key Club International is a high school boys' service organization sponsored by Kiwanis International. Its 1969 convention will be held in Miami Beach, Fla., next July 6-9.

Ann Arbor—A University of Michigan business economist sees universal service—military or otherwise—as a poor alternative to the Selective Service draft.

Rosa J. Wilhelm, U-M associate professor of business economics, opposes any measure which would require all U. S. youth to serve the country in some way for a given period of time. He cites three reasons: an unnecessarily large manpower buildup, excessive cost, and curtailment in the freedom of young people.

Discussing the subject on the U-M Broadcasting Service program "Business Review," Wilhelm says that based on today's population figures, if every male went into the proposed service at age 18 or 19, there would be a force maintained of around 9.2 million. If women were to serve as well, there would be 0.7 million in the service.

"What in heaven's name would we have them do?" he asks. "The typical young person age 18 or 19 has few skills, even though he may have graduated from high school. The military has no need for such numbers, of course; nor to any of the other agencies such as the Peace Corps or VISTA.

Universal service would require that we create a huge number of additional jobs to be done for which we feel no strong need at this time, and which can be performed by unskilled individuals."

According to Wilhelm, the belief that many of our basic domestic and foreign problems would be solved by harnessing all of the power and energies of our youth is simply not true.

Furthermore, he says, the cost of operating such a program would be prohibitive.

Wilhelm says it is unlikely that the government could pay, house, feed, clothe, transport, train, and administer the force for less than $5,000 per person per year. If only males serve, then the cost for the program would be about $10 billion annually. If women were included, the figure would be around $33 billion.

"This," says Wilhelm, "seems to be a great deal of money to perform jobs we have no need to perform."

The universal service proposal, Wilhelm concludes, would greatly curtail the freedom of young people because they would still have to be forced to serve.

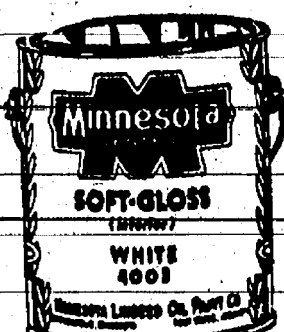

Given a choice, most people do not go into the military, the Peace Corps, or any other form of government service," stresses the U-M professor. "They go on to school, take jobs, get married, and do other things. The imposition of universal service would prevent them from doing what they want to do and it would require that they be forced to serve just as it is now with the draft. On this basis, universal service would be a basis, universal service would since both are based on coercion."

Girl Driver Skids into Parked Pickup Truck

A Dexter girl found herself trying to edge between two trucks on Shields Rd. near N. Parker Rd., Friday, July 12, and realizing too late that she "probably didn't have enough room," Debra Ray Veal of Huron River Dr., applied her brakes, skidding into a 1966 Chevrolet pickup truck driven by Edwin Trinkle of Chelsea. The second truck left the scene of the accident, according to Washtenaw County Sheriff deputies investigating the mishap.

Whittaker-Gooding Office Entered By Burglars

A break-in at the office of Whittaker & Gooding gravel pit on Peters Rd. was discovered early Tuesday morning, July 23, by Raymond Shief. Shief notified deputies of the Washtenaw County Sheriff's Department, that the office of the gravel business had been entered by breaking a glass in the front door. The thief apparently reached inside the broken glass and unlocked the door.

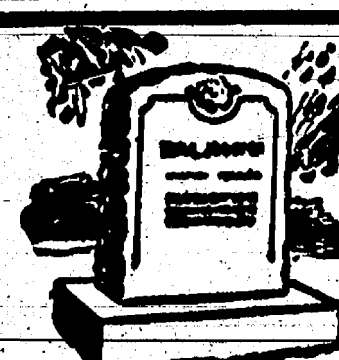

Among the items listed as missing, following the breaking and entering, were a Burrough's adding machine valued at $250, an Ezy ticket machine valued at $40, and a Seth Thomas electric wall clock, $20 value.

Jimmy marks on the desk drawers, damage to sliding supporting an air conditioner, and a damaged microphone, which is part of the public address system, provided deputies with fingerprints which may incriminate the culprit or culprits.

Senator Philip A. Hart's REPORT from WASHINGTON

★ Auto Insurance To Get Attention

The subject of auto insurance has almost replaced travel and children as a reliable generator of self-anecdotes.

Almost everyone has a story to tell about an unjust cancellation, an outrageously small settlement, a prohibitively high rate or a shaky firm that disappeared from under its policyholders.

Bringing up the subject at any gathering and—unless an insurance salesman happens to be in the crowd—the industry will have few defenders.

Complaining letters come to my desk every day. Here is an accident victim who states angrily that the other driver's insurance offered him a total settlement of $131 even though the lowest of three estimates was $205.

Another correspondent notes that his annual insurance bill is now $48 because he has two cars and three teen-aged children, although neither the cars or the children have ever been in an accident.

A woman who claims an accident-free record says she has been turned down simply because she is a divorcee.

The insurance companies' reply to this sort of criticism is that repair costs are skyrocketing and in order to keep rates down they "skim" the market for those drivers with the lowest accident potential.

The "skimming" process has progressed to the point where occupations and home addresses are considered in judging a customer's desirability. One company, for example, is reluctant to write policies for clergymen because "they drive as if they believe the Lord will provide."

Occupations commonly on the rejection list include doctors, housewives, military personnel, farm workers, labor officials, editors, musicians, bartenders and residents of inner cities.

No one will quarrel with the concept that safe drivers deserve a break on policy price. But is it fair to judge a person's accident potential by his job rather than by his personal driving record?

Many of these people live in states where auto insurance is compulsory. So they must pay a "high risk" premium rate. Even then their problems aren't necessarily over because so many of the high-risk firms seem to be precariously financed. No less than 80 of them have gone bankrupt in the last few years, leaving their policyholders unprotected.

The high-risk companies are also often the only survivors of those whose policies have been cancelled, sometimes arbitrarily.

Standard insurance firms will rarely pick up a customer who has been cancelled by someone else. And there is another problem in auto coverage that is not shared by other forms of insurance: the fault system.

Generally speaking, the person who is at fault is the one whose insurance company does the paying. But often, the involved drivers share the fault to some degree and fixing the legal responsibility for the accident is a time-consuming and costly business.

By some estimates, the costs of handling auto claims are so high that it takes $2.40 in premiums to get $1 to the accident victim. Blue Cross, by contrast pays $1 for every $1.07 it collects.

Are there any solutions to all this? Well, many have been suggested.

One bill, which I co-sponsor, would set up a federal insurance corporation, similar to the one that insures bank deposits, to cover policyholders whose companies go bankrupt while policies are in force. This would be a self-supporting agency, financed by insurers who would pay a small portion of the premiums they collect to this Guaranty Corporation.

Another suggestion is to change the system so that insurance companies would pay on the basis of loss instead of fault up to a certain dollar limit, perhaps $10,000. To collect beyond that limit, claimants would go to court just as they do now.

Would such a plan be workable? Not many in Congress are really sure.

So this summer, the Antitrust and Monopoly Subcommittee, which I chair, will begin an intensive examination of the whole problem.

Even in the insurance business, there are many who agree some changes are needed. Auto insurance companies, after all, can hardly be described as bloated profit centers.

And they are aware that the nation's 103 million drivers are getting increasingly unhappy.

Every year, auto accidents kill some 53,000 persons and injure 4,000,000. So even in a nation growing more and more preoccupied with Vietnam, this problem would seem deserving of a few days of Congressional attention.

I hope to see that they are productive days.

Chelsea Youths Enrolled in U-M Summer Seminar

More than 300 students from 48 Michigan counties are attending University of Michigan Summer Seminars for high school juniors in three two-week sessions. Arranged by the University's Bureau of School Services, the seminars are an outgrowth of the advanced placement program which enables students to complete some college work while in high school and receive college credit for it.

Attending from Chelsea are Richard R. Marshall, 750 Planders St., and Lance K. Burghardt, 214 E. Middle St. Both boys chose engineering science seminars for their summer work.

Other seminars offered in this summer's program are in art, great books, history, mathematics, drug science, music, speech and creative writing.

Students make use of U-M facilities in their studies, including such equipment as the nuclear reactor, botanical gardens and computing center. Instruction is by regular members of the faculty. Students must apply for admission to the seminars and must be recommended by their high school instructors. Each student pays a fee of $180 for the two-week program, including room, board, tuition and most books and supplies.

U-M has provided $2,000 in aid to financially disadvantaged students, and some local organizations have provided scholarships.

The boy was taken to his Plymouth home before the information was relayed to police. Mrs. Beal identified the dog as a Dalmatian known to run loose in the area of Middle and Railroad Sts.

Livestock Judging Team Chosen for State 4-H Show

Two teams were selected recently in the county 4-H Livestock Judging Contest to represent Washtenaw county at the State 4-H Show in August.

Winners in the junior division were: Mary Straub, Janet Mast, Stephen Straub, Laura McCalla, Ross Haussler and Mary-Gibbach. The senior division team consists of Bobby Gibbach, Leora Haussler, Jim Burmeister, Gail Gibbach, Lowey Heller and Judy McCalla.

The teams will work under the direction of Bill Lutz.

Stops were made at three farms with two classes of livestock being judged at each farm. The farms were: those of Alton Grau, 2710 Fletched Rd., where sheep were judged; Bill Lutz, 11030 Macon Rd., Saline, where swine were judged; and Neil Haarer, 9740 Saline-Milan Rd., Saline, where beef was judged.

Horton Area Swine Farm Will Be Visited on Management Tour

Horton—Ten years ago a young couple put $3,000 down on 225 acres of rough Jackson county farm land. They brought 35 cows from Ohio, where they had been tenant farmers, and set some goals for the future.

Most goals have been reached. For this year Mike and Kathleen Barton will market between 2,500 and 3,000 swine. Their next goal is marketing 6,000 swine annually by 1971. They live at 8888 Fowler Rd., Horton.

The Bartons, both graduates of Michigan State University, are proof that young people with ideas, management ability and willingness to take risks can move ahead in tough farming conditions existing today.

Their farm in southern Jackson county will be one of the stops on the State Farm Management Tour in August. The tour will be held at the farm at 9:30 and 10:45 a.m. Dale Brown, Coldwater, MSU area swine extension agent, says the Barton farm offers some features in new facilities and management that are as good as any place in the Midwest.

New features on the farm that will interest tour visitors include a new $20,000 feed grinding and mixing unit with limited grain drying facilities. Another new addition is a 66-foot by 80-foot slatted-floor farrowing house. The 62 crates for sows are made of native oak lumber. The farrowing house cost $14,267 and the native lumber cost less than $600.

Barton plans to build another new farrowing house in the spring of 1969 and start a new finishing house in his projected expansion.

Barton sold 8.4 pigs per litter in 1967 or a total of 2,445 animals for a gross marketing income of $112,000. Returns were $196 for each $100 in feed costs, considered a good return by agricultural economists.

Nearly all of the feed is purchased. Soybean meal is now being purchased in carload lots. Corn is bought from neighbor farmers and delivered to the farm.

"I'm a hog man. I don't think I can be as good, or as big in swine production as I would like if I have to know all there is about crop production, too," Barton explained in discussing feed buying. He keeps a close watch on grain and protein markets and buys in quantities when prices dip.

With limited finances when the farm was purchased, he decided to buy rough, less expensive land, plant good pasture for breeding stock to range and buy his feed. He spent most of 1959 and 1960 developing his program, building some facilities and increasing his breeding stock.

In 1961 he launched his market production program and it came just when prices for swine started improving. Sales progressed from $79 in 1961 to $2,445 in 1967. Income from swine sales went from $35,000 to $112,000 in that seven-year period.

Barton is sold on confined farrowing with slatted floors that require no cleaning. He says, "I would rather handle 62 sows and litters in slatted-floor farrowing houses than a fourth that number in bedded stalls. We save at least three hours a day in time with this program and can handle far more sows. Animal waste goes into natural lagoons behind the houses."

Myron Riker, herdsman, has been with Barton for several years. Another man will be added in the expansion program, but with the slatted floors, Barton believes he and two men can raise 6,000 market swine a year.

But the young swine grower

Thieves Lose New Garden Tractor Close To Scene of Their Theft

Probably there are many who steal a brand new tractor, but not too many thieves also lose that same brand tractor.

Culprits who helped themselves to a 12-hp. Ford garden tractor from the Aschliman Road tractor sales on Jackson Rd. were careless enough to bounce back on the road near Jackson and Jackson Rds. At the town of Jackson, the tractor was spotted by a patrolman and called to report to Washtenaw County Sheriff's Department deputies one garden tractor—dent fenders, scratch hood, scraped and bent steering wheel, never been used.

Deputies effected return of tractor to the proper owners. They have participated in Michigan State University Farm program.

Mike was selected in 1964 the first group of 30 young men for the Kellogg Farm Study Program by the Michigan Co-operative Extension Service. He travels extensively to key farms in the north central U.S. to get ideas he can incorporate into his program. The Barton active Farm Bureau members.

The young farmer credits Swanson, Jackson district management extension agent, encouraging him to expand in hog business, and Ed Miller, tension swine specialist at U-M for much technical assistance. Brown, the new area swine agent in Jackson, Hillsdale, Calhoun

Fishing Shanty Removed from Lake - Too Late

Although it's a little late in the season, Gerald L. Douglas, 29, of Clinton, still had a fishing shanty standing on a lake in Bridgewater township. He had, that is. He has no more.

Douglas paid a fine of $10 after conservation officials discovered his domicile and charged him with failure to remove it. Justice C. A. Rogers fined him and ordered him to remove it.

Which he did.

GO LIGHT.

When painting, avoid too much of a good thing. Moderation in loading your brush will pay off in time saved from cleaning up any unfortunate drips and splatters.

Jill Ann Werner, Gary Seitz Wed at Congregational Church

Jill Ann Werner became the bride of Gary Lee Seitz in a late afternoon ceremony, July 27, at the Congregational church, performed by the Rev. Daniel Kelin, pastor of the church, who was assisted by the Rev. Warner Seibert, pastor of St. Paul Church of Christ.

Mrs. Daniel Kelin played the organ and Wilbur Beeman sang "O Promise Me" and "The Lord's Prayer" at the 4 p.m. nuptials uniting the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Werner of 2-413 Wilkinson St. and the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Elkins, 15500 Cavanaugh-Lake Rd. in marriage.

After a two-week wedding trip to Florida and Nassau, the couple will be at home at 987 S. Lima Center Rd.

The bride wore a white organza sheath gown accented with Alencon lace and styled with a flowing train. Her shoulder-length organza veil was secured by an organza crown and she held a cascade of white roses.

Mrs. Douglas Hamilton of Jackson, the bride's sister, attended as matron of honor, attired in an aqua sheath gown of chiffon over taffeta trimmed in avocet green. Her short veil was held by an aqua bow headpiece and she carried a colonial bouquet of aqua gladioli and white roses.

Misses Pat Guest and Wanda Salyer, and Mrs. William Snyder, all of Chelsea, and Mrs. Bradley Richards of Negaunee served as bridesmaids. They wore gowns designed like that of the matron of honor and carried colonial bouquets of aqua gladioli. Miss Lori Werner attended her sister as junior bridesmaid.

The bride's mother selected a pink coat and dress ensemble and wore a corsage of pink roses and carnations. A yellow coat and dress outfit was chosen by the bridegroom's mother and a yellow rose and carnation corsage completed her outfit.

Carrying a basket of aqua petals and dressed in aqua tulle over taffeta with a circlet of flowers in her hair was Tonya Hornung of Highland, Mich., the flower girl. Best man at the ceremony was Larry Barnhill of Grass Lake. Ushers were Daniel Parsons, stationed with the Air Force in Chicago, Gordon Beeman and Ernest Hinderer, both cousins of the bridegroom, of Chelsea, Douglas Hamilton, brother-in-law of the bride, of Highland, and Jerry Hornung of Highland.

A reception followed the ceremony at Inverness Country Club with 150 guests attending. Mrs. Arthur Garrison of Detroit, the bride's aunt, and Mrs. Herbert Hinderer of Chelsea, the bridegroom's aunt, cut the wedding cake. Punch was served by Miss Irene Seitz of Ann Arbor, the bridegroom's aunt, and Mrs. A. T. Werner, the bride's aunt, served coffee. Miss Rebecca Howes, the bridegroom's cousin, tended the guest book, and gifts were opened by Mrs. Jerry Hornung and Mrs. Leona Beeman.

For her traveling costume, the bride chose an orange coat and dress ensemble and matching accessories. She wore a corsage of white roses taken from the bridal bouquet.

The former Miss Werner is a 1967 graduate of Chelsea High school, now employed at Chelsea Drug store. Her husband, a 1968 graduate of Chelsea High school, attended Jackson Community College and will attend Lawrence Institute of Technology in the fall. He is employed by National Seal Division of Federal Mogul Corp.

A rehearsal dinner was given prior to the wedding by the bridegroom's parents. Pre-nuptial showers were given by Miss Pat Guest, Mrs. William Snyder, and Miss Wanda Salyer and by Mrs. Arthur Garrison.

The Irish visitors of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Robbins left Chelsea Saturday, July 27, and arrived at Belfast airport Sunday morning. Mrs. Mary Curley and Miss Finvola Quinn were off for home, a little happy and a little sad.

The Irish ladies were Wednesday evening dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Koch, along with the Bill Robbins and son, Mike, Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Robbins, Tina Koch and John Kazmierowski. They caught trout in the Kochs' pond and enjoyed a fish dinner afterwards.

On Friday evening, Mrs. Curley and Miss Quinn and Mr. and Mrs. Bill Robbins and son, Mike, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Ford at dinner at an Ann Arbor restaurant.

Afterwards, guests of the Bill Robbins were Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Robbins, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Koch, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Nelson, John Kazmierowski and the Irish visitors.

Seeing Mrs. Curley and Miss Quinn off at Metropolitan Airport were Mr. and Mrs. Bill Robbins and son, Mike, Mrs. Boyd Robbins, Mr. and Mrs. John Pitters and son, Dennis, and John Kazmierowski.

Linda Katherine Davis, O. Ousley Exchange Vows at Baptist Church

Oliver David Ousley and his bride, the former Linda Katherine Davis, will make their home on San Luray Dr., Gregory, following a two-week wedding trip to the Smokey Mountains.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Davis of Brooklyn and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ousley of 11750 Michigan Ave., Grass Lake, were married at a 2 p.m. ceremony at the First Baptist church here July 27. The Rev. Elmer S. Steenson performed the nuptial ceremony at which Mrs. Donna L. Howland of Brooklyn sang "Savior Like A Shepherd Lead Us" and "There Is No Greater Love."

For her wedding, the bride wore a floor-length, bouffant-style gown of Chantilly lace over taffeta. The gown was styled with a scoop neckline fitted bodice, long lace sleeves and a cathedral train which flowed from the waist. Her veiling was of imported illusion edged with lace. The bride's mother purchased the gown while in England in 1967.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Glenn Williamson of 137 Buchanan St., the bridegroom's sister, wore a sat in Emire-waisted gown topped with a chiffon overskirt in contrasting shades of blue. A bow graced the back of the waistline, and a circlet of blue daisies held her blue veiling.

Gowns in pastel rainbow colors of green, yellow, apricot, and orchid chiffon over taffeta were worn by bridesmaids Faith E. Dewey and Susan K. Mapes of Brooklyn, Karen S. Crawford of Grass Lake and Deborah M. DuBois of Cement City, the bride's cousin. The Empire waistlines of their dresses were trimmed with daisies to match their circlet daisy headpieces.

The bride's mother selected a powder blue crepe dress and lace coat with matching accessories, and beige accessories completed the bridegroom's mother's ensemble of green crepe dress and lace coat.

Tonja D. Williamson, the bridegroom's niece, served as flower girl to Randolph S. Ousley's role as ring bearer for his uncle. Glenn Williamson of Chelsea served his brother-in-law as best man. Ushers were Robert L. Schittenhelm of Chelsea, another

New 4-H Club Takes "Gingham Belles" Name

Miss Nancy Mahar and Mrs. Anne Alexander started a new 4-H group this year with membership up to 14 girls now. The girls have called their club the "Gingham Belles."

The Belles are helping the Red Cross now by making drawstring bags and supplying filler articles which will be sent to soldiers in Vietnam at Christmas. They have also made boxes to put in the North American Rockwell Corp. office so other people may donate articles for the bags.

On Aug. 17, the girls are planning a get-acquainted picnic. They report that at their first meetings they looked at patterns and tried to decide on projects for the coming year.

Those who profess tolerance should be wary about calling other people names.

Cub Scouts Have Rocket Space Derby

Mr. and Mrs. Carner Slocum of Cavanaugh Lake opened their patio to Pack 415 for a space rocket derby and winner roast, July 21. Slocum is Boy Scout district commissioner.

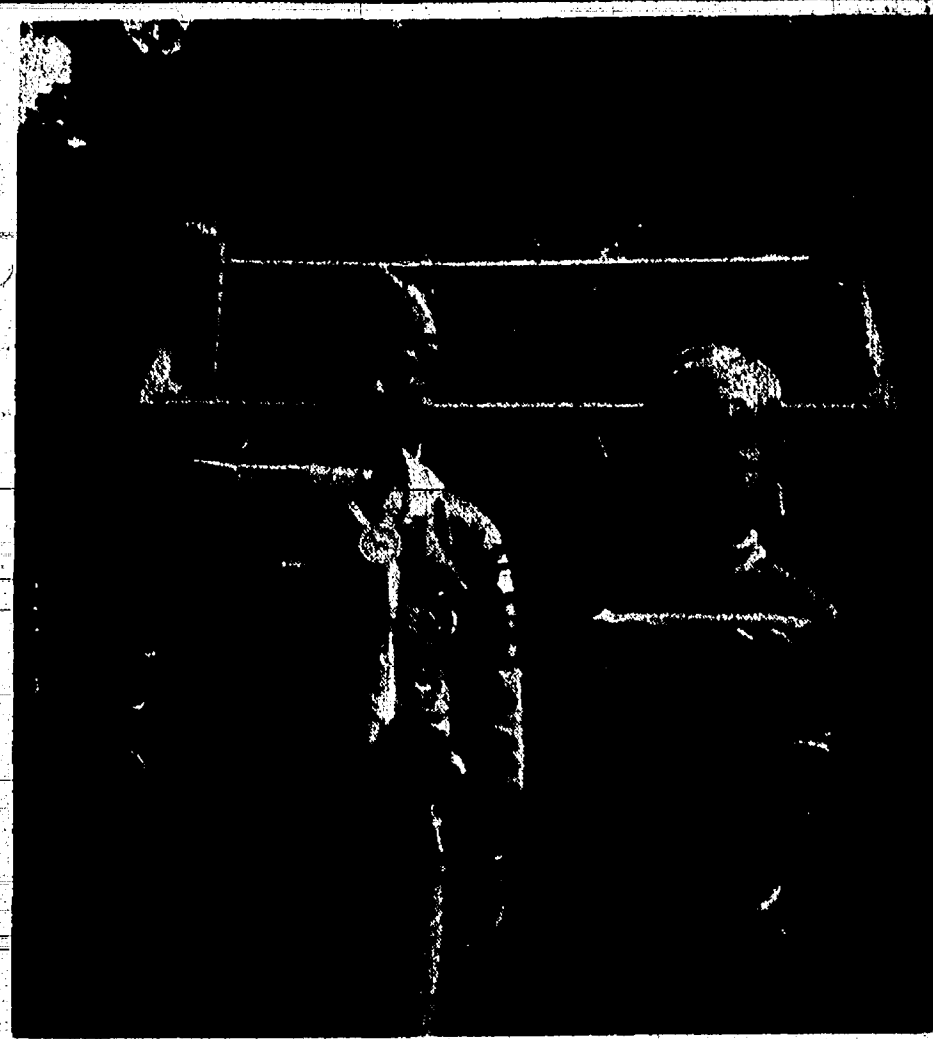

Cub Scouts of the Pack fabricated home-made rockets which they launched from a wooden "rocket launcher" operated at the derby by Roger Schrotenboer. Cubmaster Cecil Clouse, Jr., directed the derby, and Richard Seyfried assisted.

Den Chief Ed Drieman captured a first place in his group with Doug Schrotenboer placing second. In the Cub Scout group, Mike Seyfried won top honors and David Stoll placed second.

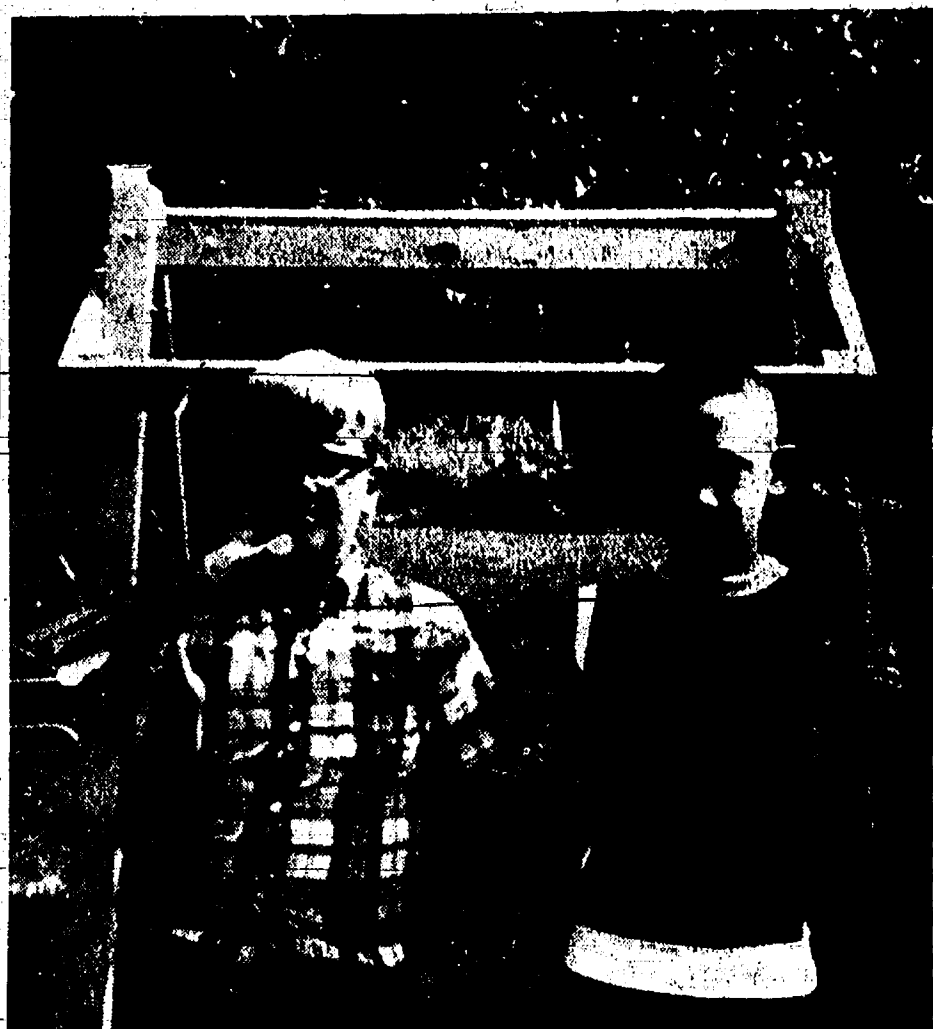

The rockets took a horizontal "trajectory" and awards were given on the basis of distance achieved from the rocket launcher. Cubmaster Clouse also presented Joseph Ferrier with a Boy Scout award, a Citizen award, Sportsman award, Scientist award, and an Arrow of Life. Other awards were a two-year perfect attendance award to Mark Seyfried and a one-year perfect attendance award to Mike Seyfried.

Cubs and their families also enjoyed a winner roast. The summer is at its midway point for Pack 415. The future holds plans for a family hayride at the Beeman farm on Waterloo Rd., Aug. 25, with a pot-luck supper following.
