

Park Opponents Hit BOR 'Biased' Preliminary Impact Study

Opponents of the proposed Mill Creek metropark turned out in force at Beach Middle school Tuesday evening to present near-volumes of research and statements that dispute the findings of the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation's preliminary draft environmental impact statement.

The preliminary draft EIS, prepared by the BOR as a prelude to granting Federal financial assistance to acquire lands for the Huron-Clinton Metropolitan Authority park, has been public for the past 30 days, to allow sufficient time for preparation of comments regarding its adequacy and thoroughness in dealing with the potential impact of the park.

Statements presented at this public information meeting, a structured affair that allowed no opportunity for debate upon the merits of the proposed park itself, but only about the EIS, ranged from numerous charges of bias in preparation of the report to pointed suggestions of means to improve it.

Linda Koch, leading off the vocal opposition to the park, presented a lengthy statement that began with the observation that the preliminary EIS was "exactly what we expected it to be" with the "built-in bias" of one recreational agency evaluating another's performance.

Koch suggested that the EIS was already dated in its presentation of the facts, due to its use of statistical information based on the 1960's. She asked that the BOR further explore current information, including reduced population projections, food shortages, energy shortages that require slower speeds and restrict the uses of fuel, recognition of land-use management, and current changes in recreational demands prior to preparation of the draft EIS.

She also dealt with specific shortcomings of the report, notably in the areas of the Brader and Cannon hydrology and water quality reports, which, she said, failed to mention that raising the water table in the impoundment would raise the water level in adjacent farmlands, and thereby shorten the growing season.

She also mentioned "data gaps" regarding nutrients and phosphorus levels in the area, absorption and retention levels, and the adequacy of the depths proposed for the upper and lower pools.

She asked that the final draft EIS consider the cumulative effect of Briarwood, the University of Michigan, and this proposed park on the adjoining I-94 freeway, costs of increasing local roads maintenance, traffic noise, and cost to the surrounding area of the new Fletcher interchange that the EIS rated necessary.

Koch rated the preliminary draft EIS "not adequate under the law" and asked also that the index to the already-ponderous document be detailed, and maps and graphs included in the index.

Tom Irvin of Ann Arbor presented what he called "a position paper" on the Mill Creek EIS, noting that the EIS included "limited alternatives" to the proposed park, since 228 of 234 total pages in the document were about Mill Creek. Irvin said that the document "can not be used effectively to determine the least impact."

The National Environmental Policy Act, Irvin said, stipulates that such documents as the EIS must provide "appropriate alternatives" and include "rigorous exploration."

Irvin said appropriate alternatives should include no action, action pending study, and action totally different from that proposed, "including total abandonment of the project."

Noting that the EIS presents a feeling that "urban sprawl is inevitable" the statement justifies actions to "speed the sacrifice of several thousand more acres to urbanization."

Tom Roberts of Freedom township presented a quick series of questions and listing of "silent areas" in the EIS before coming to the conclusion that the EIS is "woefully incomplete" and does not provide a "questioning look" by the BOR; and that the report raises question about HCMA— "either they are in violation of the public trust" or "they are incompetent and not to be trusted."

Dan Robbins, of the Michigan United Conservation Clubs (M.U.C.C.) reported his organization's opposition to the park on the grounds of unwise land use, the currently availability of the Waterloo Recreation Area, and the need for parks near centers of population. To encourage travel, Robbins said, "is a sin."

International representative of the United Auto Workers Charlene Knight presented an emotional and factual plea "for the have-nots of the City of Detroit," who, she reported, have seen $56.8 million of their tax dollars go to HCMA since 1942 — a total amount collected through those years has been $84 million— "and still don't have a single park of their's (HCMA's) in our county."

Knight cited continuing grieences against HCMA that should be included among the potential impacts of the park, she said—all of which revolve around the fact that "Detroit's needs are still not met" while metroparks cater to the recreational needs of the upper and middle classes.

A representative of the Huron River Watershed Council, Owen Jansson, said that HCMA has given "less than good consideration to being a good neighbor," in its lack of safeguards regarding outflow and other controls. Without such safeguards, he said, he could not support the proposed park.

Dave Bacon of Mill Creek Research Council compared the use of the BOR to prepare an EIS on its fellow recreational body as somewhat akin to "letting the fox guard the hen coop."

Major sources of the BOR's information, Bacon noted, were HCMA surveys, assessments, or HCMA-sponsored researchers. Other sources, some of which are already available, are needed, he said.

Bacon presented his own "survey" of the nutrient level of Mill Creek with a jar of creek water. "It's really good and scummy," he observed, holding the jar aloft. "Further out, you could probably walk on the water without being Jesus."

Bacon also discussed some of the surveying methods used in the report—an HCMA survey, he said, that "never asked the hard questions, like 'are the parks too far away?' but instead, 'what don't you like about metroparks?'"

He also noted a tendency in the report to use data "in two different directions"—particular-

Early Loads Point to 'Good' Wheat Harvest

Until this week's rains, local wheat growers had experienced an unusually dry Michigan growing season that has made their crop "of good strong quality this year—really high weight, and really low moisture—a very good combination," in the estimation of Jerry Heydlauff of Honegger's.

Bill Ames, Washtenaw County Agricultural Extension Service agent, echoed Heydlauff's rating: "The test weight is very good, the quality is very decent, particularly in light of all of the wheat diseases that have been going around."

Dudley Holmes, although qualifying his statement with the fact that Chelsea Milling has seen "only very little last week before this rain started" agrees that "it seems to be a good crop at this stage of things."

Yields for the season are still in the unpredictable stage since places like Honegger's and Chelsea Milling received their first loads only last week. "Friday and Saturday were our two big days so far," Heydlauff reports. "I guess we had about 50,000 bushels come in within those two days."

Holmes is less willing to predict. "I have no idea, from the few loads that have come in, what the yield will be. We can never really know anything on the yield until we're finished with everything. Around December we should be able to get something reasonably accurate from the state."

Ames notes that an average yield is difficult to forecast because more land is in wheat cultivation this year—primarily formerly subsidized lands that have been planted with wheat for the first time in a number of years. "The average yield may be somewhat down, because these lands will be less productive than our good wheat lands," Ames points out.

What is significant about this year's harvest is neither the quality nor the projected yield, however, but the fact that, like other wheat men across the nation, local growers are storing their wheat, waiting for higher prices, a disclosure that may cause chagrin in some budget-conscious households.

The July 15 issue of Newsweek reprinted an admonition from a Kansas wheat grower last week that more than adequately assesses the wheat growers' motivations:

"Be proud of your wheat. It is more precious than gold and even more palatable. Sell it only for what it is worth and not for what you are offered."

The feeling in Washtenaw county seems much the same. Jerry Heydlauff estimates that 75 percent of the wheat in the area is in confined storage; Dudley Holmes says that percentage may run up to 85 percent, which, he notes, "is around the national figure that's going around right now."

Bill Ames says, cautiously, that, although he is uncertain of the percentage, he is "certain that a great deal of growers are holding back their wheat crop."

"Gambling isn't legal in Michigan, but farming is the biggest gamble around," Heydlauff asserts. Tuesday at Honegger's, the price of wheat was $4.14 per bushel, he said, and "men are talking about holding out for $4.50 or $5. Obviously winter wheat prices will be higher."

Although a certain amount of grain is put into storage every year, that amount is, according to all three men, much more obvious this year. Expressing what must be the prime concern to the farmers, Ames declares, "You're

Youth Dies Early Sunday In Auto Crash

A 19-year-old Chelsea youth died early Sunday morning when he lost control of his car on a turn on Werkner Rd. Another youth remains hospitalized from the accident.

Robert J. Parks, of 2475 Jeanette Dr., was pronounced dead at the scene of the accident by a medical examiner from Chelsea community hospital.

Parks' passenger, Christopher Tompkins, of 3683 Chelsea-Manchester Rd., was reported in fair condition early Wednesday morning at University of Michigan Hospital in Ann Arbor.

Sgt. Dexter of the Washtenaw County Sheriff's Department reported that the accident apparently occurred at approximately 3:30 a.m. Sunday when Parks was southbound on Werkner, four-tenths of a mile south of Island Lake Rd., in Lyndon township.

The vehicle apparently entered what is locally described as "a bad curve" near the Noah farm and went out of control, careening off the edge of the road. Investigators then determined that Parks apparently pulled the car back onto the road, only to slide sideways off the other side, striking a tree.

Wanted: Cook To Supervise Fair Kitchen

"Desperate" is the terminology being thrown around currently about Chelsea Community Fair Board's need for one major item: a cook to supervise the fair kitchen for the five days of the fair, Tuesday, Aug. 27, to Saturday, Aug. 31.

Without a kitchen supervisor, not only will there be no kitchen, but one major source of revenue for the fair will be cut out, Fair Board members warn.

Anyone qualified and interested in managing the fair kitchen should contact a Fair Board member at once.

MRS. MARCELENE COX, columnist and staff writer for Ladies Home Journal for 22 years, is currently living in the area on South Lake Rd., near the home of her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Ted Bonus. Mrs. Cox reports that she is sporadically working on a novel that originated with one of her short stories, "Tramp Printer," which appeared in the Journal.

Mrs. Ted Bonus. Mrs. Cox reports that she is sporadically working on a novel that originated with one of her short stories, "Tramp Printer," which appeared in the Journal.

Former 'Journal' Columnist Now Writing Book, Despite Watergate

It seems that journalism and journalists just follow Marcelene Cox around.

Mrs. Cox, who for 22 years wrote a column called "Ask Any Woman" in Ladies Home Journal, now lives at 2000 South Lake Rd., in a cottage near Mr. and Mrs. Ted Bonus, quietly working on a book that has been interrupted repeatedly, she asserts emphatically, by Watergate.

"I can't get a thing done with all this Watergate going on," she laments with a gleam in her eye. "As long as things are on television, I can't work." Upon mention of the fact that the House debates on impeachment might be televised this week, she sighs, "Well, I certainly won't get anything done."

The interruptions are not all that displeasurable for a woman who has been surrounded by publications and politics all her life.

The story begins, as Mrs. Cox tells it, with her father, Fred Koister, who published the Ionia County News for a number of years and wrote a column called "Single Top Trail."

A political writer, he also wrote publicity for Herbert Hoover's campaign that covered a five state Mid-Western area.

After her father's death, Mrs. Cox's brother, Fred, Jr., took over the paper. Soon thereafter Mrs. Cox, living with her husband, an instructor at Earlham College in Richmond, Ind., began contributing her own column.

"The column was called 'Sister Says,'" she recalls. "That was a logical name, since I was always called 'sister'—the only girl in the family. At first, since my father had written a political column, I tried to write political things, as that was the vogue, with writers like Dorothy Thompson, who married Sinclair Lewis. But I then began to write epigrammatic columns about things that I knew."

Before long Mrs. Cox received a telegram from Bruce Gould, of Ladies Home Journal, requesting that she come to Chicago for an "introductory interview."

"My friend, Margaret Landon, who wrote Anna and the King of Siam, said to me, 'Marcy, this is unprecedented,'" she recalls. She was so floored by the invitation that when she arrived at the interview and Gould asked her what her favorite authors were, Mrs. Cox, an English major at Eastern Michigan University and University of Wisconsin, remembered, "I couldn't think of anything—not even the Bible. I finally managed to come up with the name of Willa Cather."

"Mr. Gould then asked me to send him some things I had written when I returned to Indiana," she continues. "I thus went onto the staff of the journal without even a rejection slip."

Her column, "Ask Any Woman," ran for 22 years. She also frequently worked on assignments for the continuing series "How America Lives," which probed the problems of various families across the country in an in-depth article devoted to each. "That involved a lot of personal, in-depth interviewing," Mrs. Cox recalls. "When there was a problem—such as a wife who absolutely could not cope with housekeeping and the household—that was when I would be called in."

Occasionally her short stories would also appear—the first was "Aunt Ella Takes a Trip," which was illustrated by Norman Rockwell, certainly a thrill for any young writer, and Mrs. Cox was no exception in her reaction. "I tried to get the original of the photo that appeared in the Journal, but it had disappeared. So," she says, pointing to a copy of the picture on her wall, "I had to content myself with a copy of it. I painted that myself." She also still possesses a copy of the Journal with the story and Rockwell picture intact.

She has hoarded her copies of the Journal over the years, she says, and had a complete set of them during the years she worked on the staff. Then she sent some people collecting magazines and newspapers into her storage room with the admonition to "take anything but the Journals."

"I went in there later, and they had taken all my Journals, except for these," she says, with three or four on her lap.

Instead of her own copies now, though, she has some bound volumes of Journals that Bruce Gould provided to her when the Journal cleaned her house. "Some of them date back to the 1890's. On some nights, instead of looking through pictures or something, we just pull out one bound volume of Journals for entertainment."

Her stay at the Journal ended with the latest transition in publishers. "I was going on vacation, and had written columns to cover my absence. When I returned, I was told the column wouldn't be running anymore."

Since leaving the Journal, her life has hardly been devoid of the media, however. She provides an article from the "Aunt Ella Takes a Trip,"

'Music Man' Opens Next Wednesday

There will indeed be trouble right here in River City, beginning next Wednesday night, and River City will be nowhere else but Chelsea High school's auditorium.

Leading the big parade of local performers in the cast "will" be Jeff Daniels, cast as Harold Hill, the music man. Other leading roles will be filled by Tom Schill as Mayor Shinn, Chris Alber as Marian Paroo, Michelle McClear as Eulalie Mackecknie Shinn, and Jaon Yocum as Zaneeta Shinn.

The play will open Wednesday and continue through Saturday, Aug. 3. Reserved tickets are on sale at Chelsea State Bank for all performances.

CHELSEA HIGH SCHOOL TENNIS PLAYER Debbie Bertke displays the trophy she received this week for winning the upper division tournament at Ramey Tennis School in Gainesville, O. Debbie, who was number one singles player at CHS during this past season in her junior year, is participating in tournaments this week in Dearborn and St. Clair Shores.

Debbie Bertke Earns Tennis School Trophy

Debbie Bertke, who this past season was Chelsea High school's number one singles tennis player, returned to Chelsea Sunday with a trophy from Ramey Tennis School in Gainesville, O.

Debbie, the only girl at the school placed in the first (best) group, earned the trophy for her victory in the upper division tournament that concluded her two-week stay at the school.

Tuesday she was off to the courts again, in competition in a tournament in Dearborn, hoping for another victory.

Debbie's mother, Mrs. Robert Bertke, expressed particular pleasure in her daughter's performance in light of Debbie's illness last summer. "We almost lost her," Mrs. Bertke says, "and we certainly didn't think she'd be able to play tennis again."

On the contrary, Mrs. Bertke reports, instructors at the Ramey school suggested that Debbie attend.

Uncle Lew from Lima Says:

DEAR MISTER EDITOR:

Ever now and then some outfit figures out how long it takes folks to do this or the other. Usual it's how long a working man has to work to pay his taxes and buy his groceries. Most of these surveys that I've seen compares the average American with the average Russian, cause for a long time that was who we was supposed to be busting our gut to stay ahead of in everything.

Well, Mister Editor, Saturday night at the country store Zeke Grubb come with a clipping that compared Americans with Americans. This survey give a report on where a average worker's day went 10 year ago and today. Zeke said he was surprised at some of the things the Tax Foundation come up with, and passed along some of em fer general enlightenment of the group.

In 1964, reported Zeke, a feller had to work two hours and 35 minutes to pay taxes on all levels. Ten year later, he works two hours and 38 minutes of ever eight-hour day to pay his taxes. Housing in 1964 cost him a hour and 22 minutes of labor ever day, and this year he spends a hour and 24 minutes keeping a roof over his head. Today, he works 61 minutes to buy food for his family, and 10 year ago he had to work a hour and 37 minutes to keep somepon on the table.

Zeke said probablie what the figgers prove is that you can prove anything with figgers. It looks like, though, declared Zeke, that the working man then and now is about in the same boat, and no matter how hard he rows he stays in about the same spot up the creek. He's working five ours, and three minutes now to provide food and shelter and pay his taxes, where these hard facts of life cost his five hours and 34 minutes 10 year ago. Course, some time up in the middle of the afternoon, said Zeke, he's going to have to look out fer somepon to wear and he's going to have to put some aside fer gasoline to git back and forth to work.

Actual, broke in Ed Doolittle, "hey ain't no way to account for all the surveys. Ed said he recalled everybody was crying about high prices back in 1964, but back then the federal Government talked about debts of strength and debts of weakness, and we was operating on a dollar based on the 1939 value. Ever now and then, Ed said, we raise the year we base the dollar on so can say the dollar is worth 53 cents of the 1939 dollar. Then we turn right around, said Ed, and declare that the copper cent costs more 1974 copper to make than it's worth any year.

General speaking, the fellers was agreed with Ed that what the average working man needs in this country is 1974 wages and 1939 prices. Aside from that arrangement, they said, we might as well keep being compared with the Russians fer all the good it'll do the feller that spent ever cent he could rake and scrape then, jest like he does now.

Yours truly,
Uncle Lew.

Watch the sound level on those portable radios and stereo tape-decks in Michigan's state parks and recreation areas this summer. If they're too loud, you could end up outside the park.

The Natural Resources Department reminds campers and others that it is illegal "to use a loudspeaker, public address system or sound amplifying equipment of any kind without written permission" in these areas.

In addition, the rule about noise says that "permission will not be granted if such system is capable of interfering with the use and enjoyment of the park by others. No person may operate any motor, motorboat, motor vehicle, radio, television or any device in such a manner that it produces excessive noise."

"Our intention is to enforce present rules vigorously when it comes to disturbances in our parks," says Parks Division Chief O. J. Scherschligt.

"Young people and others who operate loud, noise-producing equipment in state parks should be aware they can be arrested or ejected from the area if they are in violation," he says.

The department says campers who are disturbed should report the incident to the park ranger immediately, giving a description of the violator and the equipment he or she is using.

"If other campers are being disturbed, we are empowered to arrest the person operating the offensive equipment," Scherschligt says.

"We would prefer it if all campers took one another into consideration which they enjoy our parks."

Safety for Workers

Michigan wants to look after the health and safety of its own working force—not leave the task to federal authorities. Under terms of a bill signed into law recently by Gov. Milliken, the state can do just that.

"This bill will allow Michigan to provide greater protection for the health and safety of its workers by keeping the inspection and enforcement powers at the state level—much closer to the worker and his or her machine," the governor said. Without the legislation, the U. S. Labor Department would take over jurisdiction.

Barry Brown, director of Michigan's Department of Labor, led a successful effort to keep Michigan's safety administrative effort so effective, that there was little problem with federal officials.

Milliken says the new law gives the state authority to "take the steps necessary to protect workers from injury, disease and death."

Hopefully, he adds, it also will bring about a "significant reduction" in current injury statistics. There were some 43,533 compensable injuries and 435,000 lost-time injuries in Michigan in 1972. Last year, the figures jumped to 47,248 compensable injuries and 472,000 lost-time injuries.

Under the new law, the state departments of labor and public health will set standards, and each will have a commission made up of four labor representatives and one representative from the general public.

The departments are allowed to inspect work places without notice—either on their own or after complaints from workers.

Top trooper

A 10-year-veteran of the Michigan State Police force is the "Trooper of the year" for 1973. Richard C. Humbarger, 37, of the Flint post, won the top honor over six other nominees. A juvenile-community relations liaison officer at Flint, Humbarger is credited with establishing the emergency foster home concept in Huron county. He also has promoted law enforcement programs in the county through St. Clair Community College.

Humbarger, the 13th winner of the annual Gerstacker award given to a state police officer, was cited for "outstanding community service." The award includes $1,000 and a personal plaque.

Who knows what the reason? Watergate, disenchantment with the Republican administration in Washington, more regional phone lines.

Whatever, Michigan Democrats picked up nearly $200,000 for their party endeavors through the recent national Democratic Party telethon.

Michigan's total contribution in pledges was some $262,000, two-thirds of which goes directly to the state party.

The telethon, which featured scores of Hollywood and political personalities, lasted for 21 hours and grossed some $7 million, $2 million more than last year's six-hour prime time telecast.

Michigan's Democratic Chief, Mervyn Morley Winograd said there's "no question about the success of this telethon. The Detroit total alone exceeded last year's total of $150,000. Detroit," he noted, "pledged $168,000 this year."

Michigan this year set up six regional phone centers, at Flint, Grand Rapids, Lansing, Kalamazoo, Marquette, and Detroit. Last year, those wishing to contribute had to call Detroit with their pledges.

MEL FOX'S 1913 STEAM ENGINE starred in this year's annual old-time wheat harvest day on Don Irwin's farm at Sharon Hollow and Grass Lake Rds. While oldtimers gather around to comment on the quality of work done by young men who toss the wheat into the separator, Mel and Jan Fox keep their steam engine chugging along.

Old Fashioned Wheat Harvest Revived at Don Irwin Farm

As doubtlessly any old-timer would agree, there is a right and a wrong way to do things. And some of the things going on at Don Irwin's farm Saturday that passed for work reminded some old timers of the right way.

Just watching those young fellows up there (gently tossing loosely-bundled wheat into the separator) makes me think that we would have been kicked in the pants if we had worked like that. It was long hours, and we had to work fast. But sure, these guys are just here to have a good time. But it sure is different," said Fritz Irwin as he observed the festivities.

The idea of Don Irwin's annual old-time wheat harvest get together is more for the mood of the old-times, complete with the old machines, than for the actual get-down hard work. If it was hard work they were after, Irwin would probably leave more than four acres to harvest.

Undoubtedly the star, once again, of this annual wheat season affair at Irwin's land at Sharon Hollow and Grass Lake Rds., was a 1913 steam engine owned by Mel and Jan Fox of Napoleon, members of the Early Days Engine and Tractor Association.

The 40-horsepower engine, which the Foxes purchased near Benton Harbor for $1,600, probably sold for "three or four times that when it was new," according to Mel Fox. "And that was when you made $6 a month," adds Don Irwin.

While the engine suffered momentary setbacks and Mel Fox attempted to build up his head of steam once again, other inadequacies of the moderns were pointed out by old timers. "Look at those belts," jeered one man, pointing at the belts that run from engine to separator. "That's the worst belt line-up job I've ever seen. You can sure tell this is for fun."

Fun or not, the separator and steam engine do more than provide a stack of straw for the kids to play in (which is one old-time aspect that apparently has not changed).

For other city slickers like some local reporters, the explanation of the job done by the separator is this: the loosely-bundled wheat, which is piled on an adjacent wagon, is tossed into the separator, where, as it goes through the mechanized grabbing metal fingers at the neck of the machine, the grain is separated from the straw.

Straw then is blown up through a spout and out into the stack for the kids to play in; the grain falls into a collecting bin.

What in description sounds like a relatively simple process, and not one of the hardships lamented about from the old days, in observation seems more likely to have been an abnormally sweaty job.

The workers who toss the wheat into the separator look like their work is effortless; but in a for-fun exhibition like this, they're obviously not about to do it all day, which is the way it had to be done "in the old days."

Where Mel Fox was perched atop the steam engine does not Canary Islands Sun dated February of this year, that is a feature on Mrs. Marcelene Cox, written by a friend who wrote for the newspaper. And then, of course, came a Standard reporter asking for some of her time.

The book that Watergate keeps interrupting, she says, is based loosely on one of her short stories, "Tramp Printer." Changes, she says, may be made in the novel, since it is now in the first person, and she thinks that might be better altered.

Maybe when Watergate gets behind us, she'll be able to complete her work, too.

seem to be a particularly choice spot for enjoying the day either, especially since the coal fire that's continually roaring to keep the engine's steam up is about two feet away from his legs.

All in all, it's probably best to remember how good the old days were, rather than re-live them for any length of time. A one day wheat harvest at Don Irwin's is just about right.

Moth Control Measures Unnecessary

Since the Spruce Budworm Moths came to Washtenaw county on its wings of storm, homeowners have stormed the Co-operative Extension Service, nurseries and grounds maintenance services with questions on how to control the moths. Those who called were greatly relieved when told, "There is no need for control at this time."

The adult moths do not feed or harm trees in any way. They have caused some alarm because of their numbers, but by next week they will probably be dissipated to the point where they are no longer a nuisance.

Because the moths are out of their natural habitat and climate, we do not even anticipate a significant amount of mating and egg laying," according to Joseph W. Ames, Extension Agricultural Agent. "If the light green, scale-like eggs are laid on the underside of needles of spruce or balsam fir, they will not hatch until next spring. Any larvae which emerge may be effectively controlled in late May and early June."

Where moths are too great a nuisance, homeowners may spray with Malathion, according to manufacturers directions. However, the Co-operative Extension Service does not recommend any control at this time.

"We can assure homeowners that the situation will be carefully monitored, and in the event that control does become necessary next spring, recommendations will be made at that time," Ames stated.

Led by Alfred D. Amazons Keep Pace in Girls Softball Race

In Tuesday afternoon's girls softball action, Amazons kept pace with the league-leading Wildcats by downing the Tomboys, 13-7.

Leading the way for the Amazons were Laurie Inbody and Penny Collinsworth, who each clubbed five hits, including a home run. For the Tomboys, who dropped below .500 with the loss, the only offensive punch came from Donna Bauer, who collected four hits.

Queens inched their way one game closer to an all-even record, downing the White Sox, 28-24, to earn them a current standing of 2-3. Sue Heydlauff led the Queens' attack with a pair of round trippers, while Becky Dawson and Laurie Barth each added solo homers.

In the White Sox losing cause, Veronica Satterthwaite pounded out a home run, and Colleen Collins added six hits.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,
 On July 21, I attended a family reunion at Pierce Park. After having overheard, I needed the services of a rest room. Having seen no toilet tissue in the one at Pierce Park (as I also haven't in previous years), I had to go to the gas station and use their rest room. This was an inconvenience on me, and I'm sure, on other park users.

Now, what is wrong with the village council that they can't provide a roll of toilet tissue in their park restrooms? There is not even a roller in there. Why were those restrooms built if people could do just as well behind a tree? I am surprised that the lawn was kept up. That's more expensive than a roll of cheap toilet tissue.

Fred Clark.

Employment Tax Deadline Near

Detroit—Wednesday, July 31, is the last day for Michigan employers to report and pay Social Security and withheld Federal income taxes for the second quarter of 1974.

Employers have until Aug. 12 to file Form 941, "Employer's Quarterly Federal Tax Return," if they have deposited the entire quarterly tax liability on time in a Federal Reserve Bank or authorized commercial bank," said R. L. Plate, IRS district director.

Employers should use the pre-addressed Forms 941 mailed to them by the IRS, or obtain copies of the form from the nearest IRS office.

IRS Publication 15, "Circular E—Employer's Tax Guide," is available free from all IRS offices to provide more information for employers.

Impact Statement Draws Fire...

By in regard to size of land parcels needed to be acquired at Mill Creek and other sites, and in the distance to Waterloo Recreation Area, which some, how became "critical," he said. Robert Daniels, noting that Chelsea Board of Education passed a resolution May 8 unanimously in opposition to the proposed park, said that despite the EIS rating of the loss to the school district as "no great impact," the effect will be felt in the area of debt retirement, where "one-quarter million dollars will have to be distributed among the rest of the property owners of the district. This is impact," Daniels said.

Virginia Denham, chairman of Lima Township Planning Commission, presented an in-depth study of only section 3 of the EIS, which deals with the impacts of the proposed action. In the area of agriculture, she said, the EIS glossed over the loss to farmers not only in production from land acquired by HCMA, but also in their original capital investment, which may never be regained by replacement land.

The Department of Agriculture, she noted, has stated that conversion of agricultural crop land should stop immediately in some select areas. BOR, she suggested, should await publication of those select lands prior to a final draft.

More precision is further needed in surveys regarding drainage, hydrology, and flora and fauna, Denham said. A study of air quality, which the EIS said did not exist for the area now, without the park, and so could not be predicted with the park, should be initiated, she suggested.

Public services and public roads are also discussed lightly, without regard to the surrounding area, she said. Further, "a rigorous analysis" is needed in regard to growth, population, and characterization of the township for the future, both with and without the park.

A University of Michigan water biologist presented a short description of the possibility of swimmer's itch, which he said, could be rampant with current and projected conditions at Mill Creek.

Margaret Sias asked that BOR "study alternative sites in the same depth as Mill Creek," and asked a series of questions relating to the base theses of HCMA, including, why park land may not be flat, why a large body of water is needed, and so forth.

Jerome Fulton, Washtenaw County drain commissioner, called the EIS "biased," and said that it assumed that "we can't stop urban sprawl." The park, he said, "may be the straw to break the camel's back in opening up this area for urbanization."

Fulton also declared, "I intend to maintain the drain—they won't impound it."

Written copies of these statements and others presented at the Tuesday meeting, plus any submitted prior to publication of the draft EIS, will be included in the final document.

EIS. "All comments on the adequacy of the preliminary draft statement will be given full consideration in preparation of the draft EIS," a notice distributed at the meeting said.

The draft EIS is the document upon which is based the final decision of the Department of Natural Resources of whether or not to submit the project for funding.

Miller Seeks Nomination For Court Post

C. E. Miller, 48, an Ann Arbor attorney, seeks the candidacy to the newly-created 14th District Court position.

The judgeship under consideration is the fourth in the 14th District, which holds jurisdiction over all the county except the City of Ann Arbor. The seat itself was created by the Michigan legislature and signed into law by Governor Milliken. The position when it is won shall be held for a period of six years and will be filled in the November election.

Miller, 48, has practiced law as a defense attorney in criminal matters and civil suits. He has been associated for the past several years in the firm of Paulson and Miller. The firm engages in litigation in not only the county of Washtenaw but also in the adjoining counties of Wayne, Oakland, Livingston and Monroe.

Miller has resided at 4158 Washtenaw Rd. for the past 20 years. The address falls into the geographical area of the 14th District Court. Miller and his wife, Stephanie, have raised two sons. One son, Kenneth, is a graduate of the U-M Law School and is a practicing attorney in Lapeer. The other son, Chip, is a senior student in the Business School at Eastern Michigan University. Miller himself was raised in Gary, Ind., where he attended Horace Mann High School. His father was a prominent attorney in the State of Indiana who served as president of the Indiana State Bar Association and was a frequent guest lecturer at various midwestern law schools. Miller also has a brother who practices law in the State of Indiana.

Miller, as a hopeful candidate to the November election, brings a diverse practical experience in his wake. He spent approximately 15 years in the automotive industry in Detroit in which he involved himself with problems of manufacture, sales, as well as engineering and design of motor vehicles. Later Miller engaged in his own business in the City of Ann Arbor.

Hudson Mills, Dexter-Huron, and Delhi Metropolitan Parks, located along the Huron River near Dexter, provide recreational and picnicking facilities including tables and stoves, wells, toilets, shelters, swings and slides, softball diamond, nature trails, fishing sites and canoe camp.

About 86 percent of Eastern Michigan University's more than 50,000 living alumni reside in Michigan's Lower Peninsula.

Phillies Undefeated In T-Ball Action

Only T-Ball's Phillies remain undefeated in boys baseball play in the previously undefeated Giants in Little League dropped their first to second-place Dodgers last week by a 17-12 score.

In T-Ball action this week, the Phillies continued dominant with a pair of victories over the Expos and the Mets, to put their record at 7-0. Expos, now under .500 at 3-4, split in last week's action, losing to the Cardinals, but dropping one to the Phillies. Cardinals also defeated the Cubs this week to even up their record.

Currently rated outstanding players in the T-Ball league are Marty Steinhilber, Frank Waller, Dave Bettling, John Hoffman, and Matt Gray.

In Pony League, Athletics kept a one-half game lead over the Rangers. Wednesday games saw Angels defeat the Rangers behind some good hitting by Chuck Moore and Bob McAllister to bring the Angels up to .500 level. White Sox also pounded the Royals Wednesday, 19-5, as Jeff Stirling hit for the circuit and the team pounded out four home runs.

In Friday Pony League action, Royals trounced the Athletics, 9-2, with the manager reporting that "everybody did a good job." Angels also edged out the Rangers, 2-0, on some fine pitching by Al Augustine.

In Little League, despite the Giants' first loss to second-place Dodgers, Dodgers fell to the Astros, 17-14, to stay a game behind. Over-all team play has marked the Giants' play, according to coaches, with good pitching from John Welton and Dave Wojcik.

In one of their best games of the season, Padres lost to the Giants Friday night, with Scott Wild continuing his fine play.

In a high-scoring contest, Astros dumped the Braves, 31-22, led by good hitting from Todd Sprague and Mike Quinn. Mike Gipson and Shawn Pierson paced the Braves' attack.

Overgrown Pine

Christmas Trees Suitable for Pulpwood

Michigan's oversized Christmas trees may be one answer to the nation's paper shortage, according to Walter A. Lemmlein, Michigan State University resident forester at the W. K. Kellogg Forest.

Overgrown Scotch pine trees, intended to be Christmas trees, could be a new source of pulpwood, the forester explains.

Located throughout northwestern Michigan, the trees were planted in the late 1950s and should have been harvested nearly seven years ago.

Owners neglected them, and the plantations are now over-crowded and insect-ridden. The pines now serve only as a refuge for wildlife and erosion control. Without proper management, some of the wildlife will be forced to leave.

More than 300,000 tons of paper can be obtained from forest thinnings before the final harvest around 1990.

The trees should not be forgotten, advises Lemmlein, since only five percent of the trees are unusable as pulpwood.

Tennis enthusiasts have the opportunity to enjoy one of four composition tennis courts at Metropolitan Beach near Mt. Clemens daily during the summer months. Court rental is 25 cents an hour per person, with the same charge for racquet rental.

Swimmers may enjoy the 1 1/4 mile Lake St. Clair waterfront at Metropolitan Beach or the Olympic-size swimming pool.

Independents and Jiffy Mixes continue all tied up for the lead in Men's Fast-Pitch League with identical 9-2 records, although both had to suffer through tough times last week to maintain that standing.

Independents were squeezed out by the Sweepsters, 4-3, Wednesday night, they dropped a tight one to an improved Thompson's Pizza team, 10-9, Thursday night. Jiffy Mixes managed victories in both of last week's games, but had to come from behind each time. you sell straight out of the fields."

An agricultural economist from Kansas State University, Leonard Schuber, who was quoted in the newsweek article, said of holding wheat, "These guys have got a tung real bad for the past two years. They're bound and determined to hang on."

"Hanging on" for higher prices a speedily dismissed by one local nan, who said, "If they get $5 a bushel they'll want $6; I swear, sometimes I think that if they got $100 a bushel they'd want $200."

But the fact remains, it seems, that wheat flooding the market at minimal prices at harvest time may be as much a sign of the past as those machines out at Don Irwin's place last week-end.

Youth Theatre Plays Ready For Saturday

Maybe in the background there are a few mothers who expect their kid to be another Judy Garland or Mickey Rooney, dancing their ways into the hearts of millions.

If they're looking for that, they'll be able to get on-stage proof of the offspring's talent or shortcomings, this week-end when Chelsea Players Theatre Workshop Academy for Young Actors stages its five musical shows Saturday.

Not only do Academy participants sing, dance, act, and do make-up, lighting and technical work, BUT they also write their own press releases—certainly a reliable sign of a child prodigy.

From Linda Hamilton and Melanie Lee of the cast of "The New Kid in Town," comes the word that their play, written by Chris Alber, concerns the experiences of a new kid, Meg Stirling.

When kids come along, the new kid "asks if she can join their secret club; but they think she's not cool enough, they have to find some kind of a test. In scene 2, they agree on a test. In scene 3 they are preparing for the test, the new girl comes, then there is a surprise ending."

The basics of "The Little Prince," adapted from the Antoine De Saint Exupery book and directed here by Jan Koenigter, are that "our play is about a little prince who leaves his own planet, searching for friendships. On his journey he meets many grown-ups. After he visited the grown-ups he concluded that grown-ups are certainly very strange."

After that conclusion, the little prince teams up with a fox he encounters on earth, who discloses to him a very important secret. "Alexander" will be performed by Joan Yocum's group of players. The play, adapted from a story by Judith Viorst, is about "a young boy, his family, friends, and all the bad things that happen to him during the day. Everything goes wrong for Alexander."

Among the cast of characters are "a run-down, grouchy dad," a mother, brothers and sisters, and a fast talking saleslady.

"The Pail and the Purse" directed by Jeff Daniels, concerns a "high-society lady who can't see much more than her sparkling diamonds," with the intriguing name of Madam Billowatt, and a street cleaner, and the "encounter" between the two on a street corner.

After complications when Angelo the street cleaner, "meets two construction workers and some angry people from the subway," Angelo "teaches Madam Billowatt her lesson though, in a rather peculiar way."

One group, however, unfamiliar as the youngsters are with the press of deadlines, failed to submit a press release. "Cinderella and Friends," directed by Keith Pfeiffer, will be the production of that group. The play, written by Val R. Cheatham, through manipulation of personalities by the author, turns the fairy tale into a spoof.

Plays will be presented Saturday, beginning at 2 p.m., in Chelsea High school auditorium.

Campfire Program Closes Summer ELP

A special campfire ceremony, the final program of the first year of Chelsea Recreation Council's Earn, Learn, and Play program, is scheduled for Thursday, Aug. 1.

The special campfire program will begin after the regular schedule for the day—earn hour from 9 to 10 a.m., arts and crafts from 10 to 11 a.m., free play from 11 a.m. to 12 noon, and lunch from 12 noon to 1 p.m.

Fast-Pitch Tournament Starts Monday

Chelsea Recreation Men's Fast-Pitch League single elimination tournament will begin next Monday, July 29, with the championship game scheduled for next Friday, Aug. 2.

In Monday's opening games of the tournament, Dunlavy Farms will battle it out with the Independents (game No. 1) in the early game, while Westgate Auto will tangle with Chelsea Milling in the late game (game No. 2). All games are played at Chelsea High school hardball field.

Tuesday, the winner of game No. 1 will meet St. Paul's in game No. 3 early, followed by the winner of game No. 2 slugging it out with 3-D sales in game No. 4, late.

Wednesday will see Zion Lutheran vs. Thompson's Pizza in game No. 5 in the late game, while Jiffy Mix and the Sweepsters will meet for game No. 6 in the early game.

Thursday's semi-final action will see the winners of games No. 3 and 5 in competition in the early game. The victor in games No. 4 and 6 will battle in the late game.

Finals between the winners of these two contests are scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Friday at the high school hardball field.

Three former presidents of the Association of American Geographers were graduates of Eastern Michigan University's department of Geography.

Youngsters Compete In Friday Bike Rodeo

Decorated bikes and pitiful paint jobs, shiny new numbers and old clunkers, fast bikes and those just-speedier-than-walking; it didn't really matter what kind of category their bike fit into; all Earn, Learn, and Play youngsters were eligible for last Friday's bike rodeo at South school.

Some 125 participants showed up for this special afternoon devoted to bikes, and competed in categories for decoration, coasting, slalom, and figure eight. Prizes were awarded for all place winners in each category, and for each age group.

First prize was a choice of toys (fishing poles, beach balls, and batons); second prize was candy bars; and third place was a choice between small candies and baseball cards.

Winners in the bike decorating contest were: 6 years old, Pam Mullaly and Tammy Mullaly; 7 years old, Steve Fleischman and Beth Fayhe; 8 years old, Frank Waller and Mary Vaught; 9 years old, Brent Martin and Dee Dee Hammell; 10 years old, Dawn Scripser and Dale Scripser; and 11 years old, Susan Prinzing.

New Pastor At St. Thomas Lutheran

A new pastor, the Rev. Jerome Dykstra, will be installed at St. Thomas Lutheran church, 10001 W. Ellsworth Rd., next Sunday, Aug. 4, at a special service at 4 p.m.

The Rev. Dykstra, a 1973 graduate of Concordia Seminary, St. Louis, Mo., has been attending the graduate school of Concordia Seminary during the past year. While serving as St. Thomas' Pastor, he will continue his work toward a graduate degree in Old Testament in the University of Michigan Department of Near Eastern Studies.

The Rev. Dykstra, who has spent the past two months as part of an archaeological excavation at Caesarea Philippi in Israel, lists his special interests as Old Testament and systematic theology.

During the past year, he served as pastoral assistant at Beth Lutheran church in University City, Mo., with responsibility for the congregation's evangelism program.

Born in Lafayette, Ind., the Rev. Dykstra grew up in Kansas City, Mo., and received his undergraduate education at St. John's College, Winfield, Kan., and Concordia Senior College, Ft. Wayne, Ind. He and his wife, Susan, are the parents of one son, Christopher, born in February of this year.

Booklet of 1915 Era Designed To Lure Workers to Chelsea

"Come to Chelsea" intones a rather stolid handbill-type ad that opens Old Chelsea Village, a tiny book of pictures that rests virtually unnoticed on the shelves of McKune Memorial Library.

The advertisement, designed to "lure workers to the village," according to the book's commentary, was sponsored by Lewis Spring & Axle Co., which manufactured the Holler Eight automobile in the village around 1915. Making Chelsea sound more than vaguely similar to Utopia, the handbill states its case:

You have more time for recreation. The life is convenient and free. All reasons are for it. Working hours are few. You can save money. Rents are cheaper. Yards are larger. The air is clean. Necessities cost less. The living is healthier. You'll like the social life. Vegetables and foods are pure. There's every field and water sport.

The best moving pictures are shown. Many lodges and national societies are represented here.

Your family will like it better and you will be happier.

Discounting obviously dated references like the one to the best moving pictures, no doubt many would assert that all the other references are, indeed, still the facts about our village.

The ad continues with a description of the product: "The Holler is the first eight-cylinder car priced around $1000. It is high-class, efficient in every way. Only the enthusiasm of well-paid, contented workmen provided with every manufacturing efficiency could make possible such a splendid car for the price. You, like the rest of our men, will be proud of your part in the production of these machines."

Holler, unfortunately, didn't last very long, but by that time Chelsea was already a booming little place on its own. There were, of course, the Glazier Stove Works, manufacturing B & B stoves ("brightest and best") and advertising recreational facilities as "part of the factory equipment—FREE to every workman."

There was W.P. Schenk Dry Goods, which was razed to build Glazier State Bank, and was moved to what is now Dancer's. There was Freeman and Cummings Co., a prosperous-looking establishment graced by dandies in mustaches and suspenders lounging in front of the store, which are now Strieter's and Schneider's.

There was Tommy McNamara's Saloon, the first brick building in the village, which is now Seitz's Tavern. A photo shows the long expanse of the bar, with spittoons placed carefully and strategically beneath it, with George Seitz tending bar and George Alber and George Hoover lounging in front.

Kemp Brothers Bank, which later became Kemp Commercial and Savings Bank, and took a new location, displays in one photo the questionable advertising policies of the time: a large sign reads "Interest Paid on Deposits with a 'No' preceding, barely, readable in the picture."

Other sites have lost some of the glory that was apparent in the early pictures. A favorite place for group photos—one shows Civil War veterans in 1910—was the then-stately Michigan Central Railroad depot. It then sported a fine paint job, a well-kept lawn with flowers enclosed by a post fence, and seemed a center of activity when trains had scheduled stops, instead of ones that block Main St.

Various teams, and school groups are well-represented among the book's pictures, too—St. Mary's basketball, where girls in bloomers and middie blouses and carefully curled hair gathered with a basketball for their team picture; Chelsea's Class C basketball team of 1923, of young men with slick hair parted in the middle more often than not, wearing the circular knee pads of the day, their socks rolling around their ankles.

From big-wheeled horse-drawn buggies to Chelsea's first automobile (proudly piloted by Harold Glazier and company down Main St.) and further toward the present, the book in its few pages, presents an intriguing photographic history of the village, as it was.

Traffic Safety Improvement Program Initiates First Phase

Washtenaw County Sheriff Frederick J. Postill has announced the implementation of the selective enforcement phase of a Traffic Safety Improvement Program in which the sheriff's department and the townships of Dexter, Pittsfield, Scio, and Ypsilanti are presently engaged.

The program is being co-ordinated by Sgt. Leonard A. Dexter, commander of the traffic safety division of the sheriff's department. It is financed by local and federal funds. The federal government will pay 50 percent of the program's costs in the first year, 35 percent in the second year, and 20 percent in the third year. Total cost of the program over the first three years will be $422,000. After the third year the county and townships will assume full funding responsibility.

Purpose of the program is to reduce the number and severity of accidents in the participating townships. This is to be accomplished through selective enforcement procedures and by providing traffic safety planning assistance to local units of government.

A further objective of the program is to develop a level of co-operation within the county's criminal justice system which insures a co-ordinated approach to discouraging traffic violations.

The program began in April of this year and implementation of the selective enforcement phase began in early June.

Selective enforcement is the primary feature of the program and is that part which the public will be most aware of. It involves the pinpointing of high accident locations throughout the participating townships and the identification of the days of the week and times of the day when most accidents occur at these sites and of the types of violations which have caused most of those accidents. Once this data has been collected and analyzed traffic safety units are stationed at a particular site during its high accident hours. This unit will be watching for those types of violations which cause most of the accidents at that site; these types of violations will be highest on their priority of enforcement.

This method of increasing traffic safety has proven to be highly successful. It has been used in Lansing where accidents along a stretch of Michigan Ave. were cut significantly after only a month of the selective enforcement procedure.

The Traffic Safety Division of the sheriff's department has designed and will co-ordinate a long-term traffic safety program for the county. This division will be responsible for developing a personnel base who will encourage the continuation of traffic safety activities. It will also design new scheduling practices to fit the program. It has identified 15 high accident sites in the county which will be patrolled as part of the selective enforcement procedure.

The location in Washtenaw county with the highest accident rate is Washtenaw Rd., between Carpenter and Golfside. An analysis of the accident data has indicated that most accidents at that site are caused by improper turns and lane changes. These will be the violations which will be the focus of selective enforcement at that site.

Other high accident areas which will be patrolled are Jackson and Wagner Rds., in Scio township, a 12-mile stretch of Dexter-Ann Arbor and Dexter-Pittsfield Rds., in Territorial-Hankard Rds. in Dexter township, as well as areas in Ypsilanti and Pittsfield townships.

Costs for the program are partially being absorbed by the townships. Dexter and Scio townships are sharing one man and car at a cost of $4,000 per year for each township.

What's Cooking In Michigan

By Larrestine Trim
Michigan Dept. of Agriculture
Marketing Information Specialist
Michigan's green leafy vegetables have arrived on the scene. Fresh loads of locally grown cabbage, collards, mustard, turnips, and lettuce fill the market-places. The colorful array of vegetables is not only pleasing to the eye but of high nutritional value. Top quality Michigan cabbage is produced on 4,900 acres of farmland in several counties throughout the state, according to marketing officials of the Michigan Department of Agriculture. Popular dishes are cole slaw and cabbage cooked in wedges with Polish sausage.

For tasty cole slaw, buy a firm head with crisp leaves and shred with a grater. You'll pay less than if you buy pre-packaged shredded cabbage in the transparent bags at the supermarkets. With the pre-package cole slaw, you pay for convenience.

Nutritionists say dark leafy greens are an important part of your daily diet. Long leaf collards are a southern favorite and a current rage with soul food cooks. Collards require longer cooking than most other greens and are often seasoned during cooking with pig hocks, salt pork or ham.

Mustard and turnip greens are sometimes cooked together for a tantalizing taste. Fresh mustards have a nippy flavor, while turnips have somewhat of an earthy tang. Turnip roots can be sliced and cooked with the greens or cut into thin strips and served raw as vegetable nibblers.

As a guide for thrifty shoppers, when buying lettuce, don't judge size by the eye or hand feel but weigh the lettuce on the produce scale to determine the best buy. Some lettuce is the loose-packed type, others have tight insides which gives more for the money.

Did you know that farmers receive only seven cents for every dollar spent on corn flakes?

Feed Your Best with Wayne Brood Sow Supplement

Wayne Sow Blox... Wayne Brood Sow Supplement... both excellent ways to feed your breeding herd. For those swine producers who prefer a grind and mix ration, Brood Sow Supplement has the edge.

Sows need plenty of protein to bring out the very best in that forthcoming crop of pigs. They need a good, all around complete diet to "toughen" the pigs for what often proves to be the "rough road ahead". A mixed ration consisting of Wayne Brood Sow Supplement, Wayne Sweet
Bulky and farm grains has everything needed to provide performance that will show that you have fed your best.

CONSUMERS' CORNER

A needle and thread is no longer the only way to sew. The fusible products now on the market mean new "sewing" possibilities, both for those who sew and those who don't.

The new fusible is merely a product that melts when heated, and the way it works in sewing is to lay this product, the fusible, between two pieces of material that you want to have fastened together. Press with an iron.

But all fusibles can come "un-used" if they're not treated properly.

For one thing, not all fabrics use well. Sometimes the iron temperature and the amount of time required for fusing can damage the fabrics you're trying to stick together. Or the fabric you're working with may be too thick or sheer to hold a "fuse" job. Experiment first with a scrap of fabric and the fusing material. It may save you some grief.

Also do a thorough job of reading the label on the fusible before you buy. Many of the products indicate which fabrics are not suited to their particular type of fusing.

Follow the directions carefully. Not all fusibles are used alike. But fusing can offer a whole new way of sewing by combining the right fusible on the right fabric with the right method.

The past week has been spent washing windows and hanging curtains. One major repair remains that the women cannot do. As the old saying goes, "We still need a man around the house."

Bike Hike Slated Saturday Along Huron River

The Washtenaw County Road Commission, the County Parks and Recreation Commission, and Ann Arbor, Scio and Webster townships, are jointly sponsoring a "Bike Hike" on Huron River Dr. for Saturday, July 27.

The route will operate by keeping their motor vehicle trips to a minimum. Those bikers who desire to transport their bikes to the site by car may use the parking lot at Forsythe Junior High school at no cost. The bikers can then bike to Huron River Dr. via Newport Rd. Those desiring to park their cars at one of the Metro Parks are reminded of the $1 park entrance fee. Those biking to one of the Metro Parks for a picnic or rest will not be charged the entrance fee.

Sponsors of the County Bike Hike are hopeful that bikers of all ages will enjoy the occasion. With the road closed to through traffic, a safe and carefree hike is anticipated for all. Any participants who would like to see his kind of an activity continued on a one day a month basis, are asked to write the Washtenaw County Road Commission.

People wishing to learn folk, square or round dancing may receive free lessons at the open-air dance pavilion of Metropolitan Beach this summer. For a complete schedule persons should write to Dance Program, in care of Huron-Clinton Metropolitan Authority, 600 Woodward Ave., Detroit, 48226 or phone 961-5865.

Lukasiak Leading In Babe Ruth League

Lukasiak team chalked up three victories in last week's Babe Ruth league action to put their league-leading record at 11-3 over-all.

Lukasiak 7, Machesky 1. In Saturday's action, Machesky opened the scoring in the first coming home on Mike Machesky's single, a wild pitch, and another single by Steve Dresch that scored Machesky.

After the first, however, it was a long row of goose-eggs, as the Machesky squad picked up only one further hit; a single in the fifth off the bat of Mike Machesky.

Lukasiak's team came alive in the fourth, taking the lead, 2-1, by virtue of only one hit, an opening single by Mike Check. After Check, Machesky team yielded an error on Pete Huston's grounder, and then two runs scored on a pair of fielder's choices.

Late Lukasiak scoring came on hits by Anthony Houle and Mike Check in the fifth and by Jeff Powell, Brian McGibney, Pete Huston, and Mike Check in the sixth and seventh.

Winning pitcher Kurt Owings boosted his record to 5-1 for the season for Lukasiak.

Lukasiak 7, Sweeney 6. Tuesday night's contest between Sweeney and Lukasiak went right down to the wire before Lukasiak finally pulled ahead on a walk, a single, and wild pitch in the final moments of the game.

Sweeney scored first on a series of walks and a base hit by John Adams that scored Steve Hegadorn, but Lukasiak came back in the second, forging ahead on a double by Anthony Houle, a pair of singles by Mike Check and Steve Pennington, and a Lukasiak miscue.

Lukasiak added a single run in both the third, on a single by Kurt Owings, and in the fourth, on singles by Mike Check and Don Aldrich, to put the score at 4-1.

Sweeney bounced back in the fifth, however, collecting four runs in a spree that included a double by John Adams, a single by Tim McAllister, and four walks, to move ahead, 5-4.

Lukasiak picked up a single run to tie the score on a double by Steve Check and a lg single by Brian McGibney, which sent the game into extra innings, to be completed Saturday.

On Saturday, although Sweeney opened the scoring in the eighth with a hit batter and a single that scored Phil Frame, Lukasiak came back on a pair of Sweeney pitchers, to score two to record the win.

Lukasiak 21, Lapanowski 6. Wednesday night ball saw a out of Lapanowski by the Lukasiak squad, as Lukasiak pointed out a b.g. 20 hits to Lapanowski's wo. Starting pitcher John Daniels recorded the win for Lukasiak.

The defeat dipped Lapanowski's record to 7-7.

Sweeney 10, Machesky 0. Mike Sweeney suffered through a shaky first inning, when he loaded the bases, but then reared all other Machesky opponents in order to record a no hitter for the Sweeney squad.

On the way to the victory, the Sweeney team collected 13 hits, led by Pete Feeny and John Adams, who both went 3 for 3. Adams, Sweeney, and Phil Frame each pounded out two-baggers in the contest.

Lapanowski 10, Machesky 2. Monday night's Babe Ruth game saw Lapanowski clobber Machesky, 10-2, to boost their season record to 7-6.

ALL ABOUT FOOD

F. A. KENNEDY

A long time ago, the famous lawyer Clarence Darrow was quoted as saying, "I'm glad I don't like spinach, because if I did I'd eat it, and I can't stand the stuff!"

Well, if you remember Clarence Darrow, you also remember when spinach was considered the next thing to medicine — we knew it was good for us, but we hated to "take" it — and magazines ran articles advising parents how to get their children to eat their spinach.

And then, along came a man — A sailor, as a matter of fact — who changed all that. He first appeared on January 17, 1929, in a comic strip called "Thimble Theatre". And his name — surely you've guessed it — was Popeye.

Actually, the creator of the comic strip, the late E. C. Segar, had intended to use Popeye in just one story. But somehow the character caught on and became the hero of the strip, along with the heroine, Olive Oyl . . . and the lazy, hamburger-eating Wimpy.

Curiously, Segar first portrayed Popeye as a bit of a sissy. But one day, while he was trying to save Olive Oyl from a villain — and getting clobbered in the process — Popeye popped open a can of spinach, swallowed it in one gulp, and became at once a man of superhuman strength.

Almost overnight, spinach had a new "image". Children no longer had to be asked to eat it. Sales rose thirty-three per cent. And grateful parents sent Segar crates of spinach . . . which he passed along to orphanages.

And today, Popeye is still around, and can occasionally be heard singing "I fights to the finch 'cause I eats me spinach!" Which is my cue to remind you to eat your spinach, and to get all your groceries at Polly's where we may not have Popeye, but we do have some eye-popping values!
