Coffee Shop, Bakery Now Open

A new sign for The Village Bakery that's been tantalizing the taste buds of Chelseaites for several weeks finally made its promise of baked goodies come true Tuesday when it opened for business.

The Village Bakery is the product of some retirement plans of Albert and Genevieve (Gene) Werdehoff that came to fruition a bit earlier than they had originally anticipated.

"We were in Manchester, having coffee in a little coffee shop type place there," Gene Werdehoff recalls, "and we just said, 'you know, this is what Chelsea needs.'"

"We originally planned to do this in seven years or so, after retirement," she says. "But this place (the building which formerly housed the House of Orient Beauty Salon at 103 W. Middle St.) became available and so we moved up our plans a little bit."

Their plans have designed a place with "a little atmosphere," according to the Werdehoffs. In addition to a full line of normal baked goods, and a special order service for wedding, anniversary and other "occasion" cakes, the new bakery folks have designed a coffee shop in the front of the building that they hope will attract people during their downtown wanderings.

Waitresses will wear matching blue and white checked-and-flowered pinafore-type aprons, which, combined with the blood red and black carpeting, wood paneling, and new light fixtures to replace fluorescent lighting in the coffee shop section, will make for a comfortable customer.

Baked items will be provided by Bake-a-teria of Jackson, Albert Werdehoff notes, which services five bakeries in the Jackson area. The Werdehoffs of necessity must follow 'Bake-a-teria's' daily schedule, so the Village Bakery will be open daily from 6:30 a.m. to 6 p.m., Tuesday through Saturday.

Mrs. Werdehoff hopes to stock the bakery soon with a complete line of cake-decorating supplies, items she notes are currently unavailable locally. Same-day delivery service will also be available soon from The Village Bakery, she says, to residences within the village limits for orders called in before noon.

The Werdehoffs, with a new business and a new building, also have some peripheral plans for the basement of the bakery. "I'd eventually like to turn the downstairs into sort of a 'good garage sale,'" Gene Werdehoff says, "with dishes, flatware, small furniture—things like that for sale. But that's FAR off in the future."

For the present, the concern is baked goods at The Village Bakery.

LESS THAN A WEEK FROM KICK-OFF of the 1974 Chelsea United Way campaign, area residential chairmen gathered Monday evening at the home of general residential chairman, Mrs. Paul Weber for a planning and training session. In front, from left, are Mrs. Paul Weber, Mrs. Louis Stoddard, and Mrs. Willis Westphal, co-chairmen of section three, southwest area. In back are Mrs.

Michael Dean and Mrs. Herbert Hinz, co-chairmen of section four, the southeast area; Mrs. William Kumpf, chairman of section two, the northeast area, and Mrs. Ted Lewis, chairman of section one, the northwest area. Not present for the photo were Mrs. E. Russell Severn, Lanewood chairman, and Miss Myrtle Blake, Methodist Home chairman.

Uncle Lew from Lima Says:

DEAR MISTER EDITOR:

People is forever talking about the balance of nature, and about how if people would leave nature alone she'd keep everything running slick. Mister Editor, I've studied this claim up one side and down the other and I'm of a mind that nature gits things about as mixed up as folks do.

For instant, why can't a feller face the big decisions in his life when he's 17 and knows everthing, instead of when he's 40 and ain't sure about nothing? How come people have to stick food in their face to git it to their stomach? Why is the outside of our bodies made to stand straight up, when all our inside organs work better when we're laying flat out? And ever now and then nature fergits and lets a feller keep his hair and lose his teeth. When he gits past 50, a man ain't got no use fer hair, but he needs all the help he can git to chew.

We're jest to soon old and to late smart, Mister Editor, and where nature don't mess us up we finish the job. I saw this piece in the paper the other day where the kudzu vine is about to smother the South. It was put out along the roads to keep the land from washing away, and it has growed to where it covers up trees and crops. Some would say we ought to let nature take care of that eroding problem, but fer my money it takes man and natureg working together to git the best benefit out of the land.

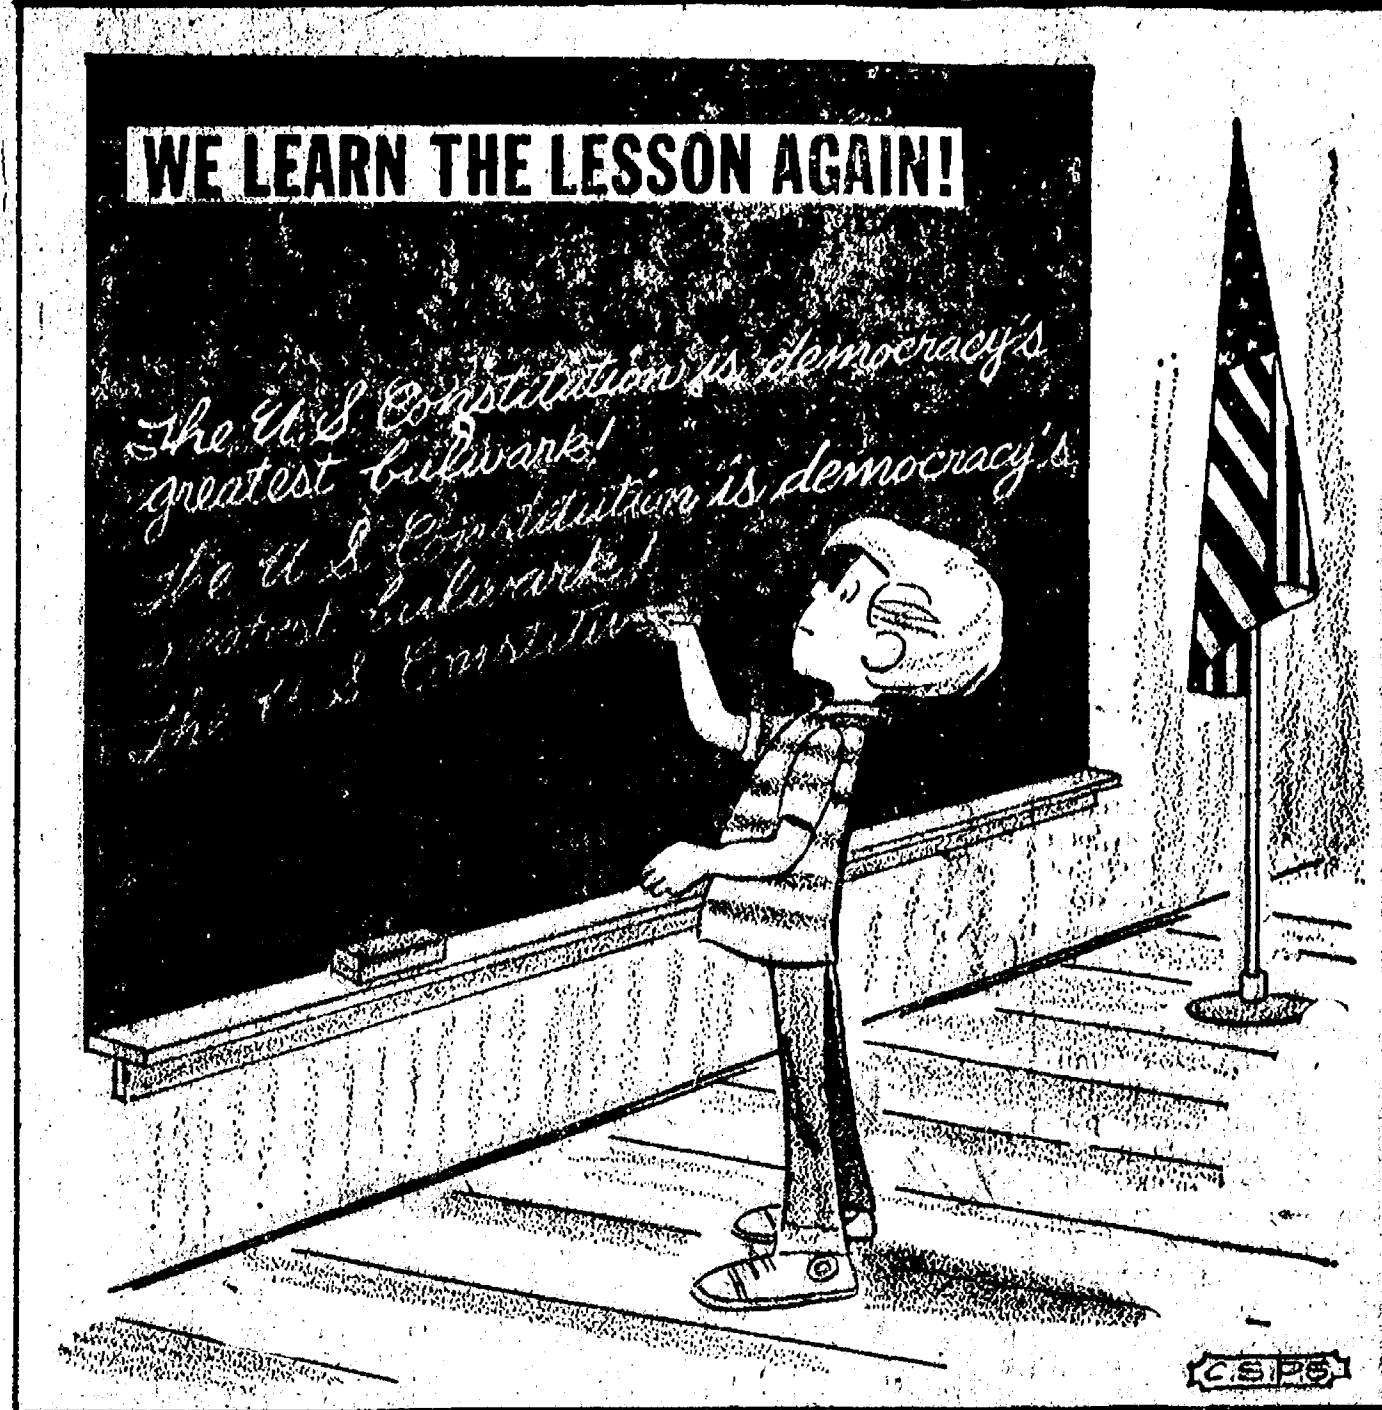

Parts of the country has had a awful dry summer, and corn and other grain ain't going to be what we have come to expect. But farmers and ranchers have come money it takes man and nature and they'll be right back next year to have another go at it.

Actual, fer really messing up the order of things you can't beat the tax laws in this country. Best I can figger, they're opposite all the way. If the little feller in this country has ever found a tax shelter to crawl under, it ain't been since Cal Coolidge come up with his "flexible tariff." My memory gits a little fuzzy, and that's another thing that's backward. When we're young and ain't done nothing to recollect, we can remember everthing. After we git old and have piled up the memories, we can't remember em.

But if I recollect right, Cal fixed it so we could git some tax relief on items like sheep dip, ax handles and paint brushes, stuff a feller with money wouldn't need. Now we got it rigged so you got to have at least a thousand dollars to buy bonds that pay tax-free interest, and if you buy em in blocks of 10 thousand you git higher interest. The more you can afford the better deal you git on the tax.

It's like the old preacher said, Mister Editor, they may not be nothing fer sure in this world but death and taxes, but death don't go up ever time Congress meets.

Uncle Lew.

Help Reduce Burns

Deaths of several burned children—and the recovery of one badly burned seven-year-old mark the beginning of the story of the University of Michigan Burn Center and the National Institute for Burn Medicine.

As a resident at University Hospital in the late 1950's, Dr. Irving Feller concluded at least some of the youngsters dying after being burned could have been saved. They should be treated for infection as well as burn wounds, he theorized.

The young Feller finally won permission from the senior surgical staff to direct care of a child burned over 70 percent of her body. The girl lived.

Then Feller battled for and won approval to set up a small burn unit in the University Hospital general surgery ward.

and, with adequate funds, we can resolve the problem within the next ten years," Dr. Feller has been quoted as saying.

Therein lies another chapter in the story of the NIBM.

It's money that's needed. And, this month—designated as "Burn Month"—by the Michigan Legislature—the Institute is trying to raise some $400,000 in public contributions.

The Michigan Jaycees and Michigan members of the International Association of Fire Fighters will be working toward that goal, with the help of a 16-minute film, "A Fighting Chance," narrated by actor George C. Scott. He serves He serves on the Institute Board of Directors.

Anyone who wishes to make a tax-deductible contribution may send a check to the Institute of Burn Medicine, Box 23, Ann Arbor 48107.

Tax Vote Upcoming

Could the tax bite on your dollars really be a bit smaller? Just might, happen—at least for a little while—if voters decide to repeal the current four percent food tax and the two percent drug tax. That proposal, assured of a spot on the November ballot because of recent Board of State Canvasser action, would take effect Jan. 1 if approved.

But don't expect removal of those taxes to mean any permanent relief. The state would almost certainly have to find a way to make-up for the approximate $200 million it now collects from the food and drug taxes. Most likely route would be an increase in your state income tax.

Those who'd have to figure out where to get that extra money

What's Cooking In Michigan

By Larrestine Trimm
Michigan Dept. of Agriculture
Marketing Information Specialist

Start your family off in the mornings with the most important meal of the day. A good breakfast will supply nutrients for energy, growth and sustained good health.

Michigan produces many of the foods commonly thought of as breakfast foods, according to Marketing officials of the Michigan Department of Agriculture. They include fruits, juices, cereals, eggs, breakfast meats, breads, spreads and milk. Nutritionists say a good breakfast is any combination of foods, whether solids or liquids, that provide the vitamins, proteins, carbohydrates and fats needed by the body.

MDA Marketing officials report that eggs, perhaps the most familiar breakfast food, are a $40 million industry in Michigan with production scattered throughout the state. Bacon, sausage links and patties, ham, creamed chipped beef are generally considered breakfast meats but hamburger, ground beef, and steaks are becoming increasingly popular.

The state's red meat industry is worth well over $200 million, according to MDA Marketing officials. Both eggs and meats are excellent sources of protein, minerals and vitamins.

Milk and milk products are excellent sources of protein, calcium and riboflavin. Whole grain and enriched breads, with spreads like syrup, honey, jam or preserves, are energy foods. Butter is an excellent source of vitamin A.

Nutritionists say if your child refuses to eat the commonly accepted breakfast foods, rather than risk poor health use nutritious substitutes. A grilled cheese sandwich, cottage cheese with fruit, vegetable juices and soups, and sliced tomatoes on toast are a few suggestions.

CONSUMERS' CORNER

SUPREME COURT DECISION ON CLASS ACTIONS

As a result of a unanimous Supreme Court decision, consumers will find it more difficult and more expensive to bring class action law suits. In a class action, suit can be brought by 1 or more persons (plaintiffs) on behalf of an entire group or class of persons who have the same basic complaint.

In this decision, the court determined that plaintiffs in class action suits must notify—at plaintiffs' expense—all members of the class who can be identified "with reasonable effort," such as through use of a mailing list.

The court's reasoning was that under present Federal rules of procedure for class action suits, it is a fundamental requirement that all "identifiable victims" must be notified individually. Notification could be costly, since a class action may involve millions of people—for instance, everyone who bought a particular unsafe or defective product or all owners of property damaged by a factory's industrial pollution. Notifying all identifiable parties in the class makes it possible for affected persons to join the class action case actively with their own attorneys or to remove themselves from the case if they prefer not to be bound by the suit's final decision.

Class action suits have made it possible for persons with small individual claims to join forces and to go to court in a situation where a single person's claim would be so small that it would not cover the cost of the suit. Such suits have been used in recent years in cases involving consumer, environmental, civil rights and antitrust issues.

Turner Finds California Heat Too Much After Visit in Alaska

Editor's Note: Don Turner's latest report from the north country is dated Aug. 20, Gillette, Wyo.

Dear Readers:

In my last report, as I left the Okanagon Valley of British Columbia, I was running into some real summer weather. I continued south on Highway 97, crossing the state of Washington and Oregon and part of California.

At the town of Weed, Calif., Highway 97 merges with Route 99 and No. 5 continues south through the Sacramento Valley. Route 99 takes one through the heart of the valley, where every form of garden produce is grown, along with huge orchards of peaches, pears, apples, walnuts, pecans, and every form of farm produce, alfalfa, wheat, corn, cotton, rice, potatoes, and what have you, along with beef and dairy cattle.

As I went further south, the heat got progressively worse, and one day the thermometer registered 105. The spraying and dusting of the crops and orchards in the Sacramento Valley really created quite a stench, as aircrafts swooped down, letting go streams of insecticides, and huge dusting machines lumbered through the orchards.

My nose and eyes burned and I had a feeling like I was some kind of insect, and it was all aimed at me. I guess I wasn't ready for such heat and industrial smog, having spent most of the summer in clean, cool north country.

My reason for going south into California was to visit my sister, Maxine Mizyski and her two sons, Tony and Michael, at Newbury Park, Calif., a small quiet community about 40 miles northeast of Los Angeles. Sister Maxine lost her husband some five years ago, and moved to Newbury Park and is engaged in real estate as a sales lady. It was our first reunion in five years, and I had to get re-acquainted with my nephews, Tony, 15, and Mike, 10.

My sister Maxine took me on a tour of the Newbury Park and Thousand Oaks area, and on to the coast. Just over the hill from Newbury Park, Dean Martin has his big ranch along with some of the other famous movie stars. I tried my luck at gate crashing, thinking I could meet and chat with Dean himself, but the two-fisted guy at the gate wouldn't buy my yarn that I was an old elbow-bending buddy of Dingo's and that big vicious dog that patrolled the grounds with the gatekeeper looked longingly at an area of my anatomy just below my crotch, so I left in some haste and was content with pouring Dean's ranch from the roadway. Oh, well... better luck next time.

I spent three days with Maxine and the boys, then headed north again, toured part of the coast of Oregon along Highway 101 and looked up some friends.

The coastal area of Oregon is really beautiful, but I traveled over the week-end, and the narrow winding highway was so crowded that all my time was occupied in driving, so I didn't see it like I would have liked to. All the scenic viewpoints were on the left side of the road as I went north, and with cars and campers bumper-to-bumper, I couldn't stop when I wanted to, and so I missed some of the beauty spots.

I stopped for the night at Newport, Ore., and the state campgrounds were so full I couldn't find a parking spot, so I spent the night at a picnic area, along with some 50 other campers and trailers. It seemed as if all of Oregon came to Newport for the week-end.

I left Newport on Sunday, Aug. 11, and drove to a small community, Woodburn, Ore., and looked up two old army buddies, Kenny Schuler and Cornelius Doherty, the only two left in Woodburn of the Woodburn National Guard Cadre that went overseas together in 1942. We had quite a chat - a three-hour reunion - and I learned what had happened to some of the old cadre of Anti-Tank Co. 186th Infantry 41st Division.

Leaving Woodburn, I headed east toward Michigan, but I couldn't leave the northwest without stopping to chat with my friends Don and Dennis Cooper at Deborgh, Mont.

The Cooper boys were hard at work on their new film of Washington, Oregon and Idaho, in which they run the fast, wild rivers of the three-state area in a river boat, propelled with an ancient steam boiler. I predict this film, which Don Cooper will show in Chelsea next spring as part of the Kiwanis Travel Series, will be equally as hilarious as their last one, "Trails of the Mountain West," in which they feature their Model T camper.

I spent the evening with the Cooper families and then pushed on to Spencer, Ida., a small community that has become famous for its opal mines. Spencer is located about 16 miles south of the Montana border on route 15.

Opal, one of our precious gem stones, was discovered by two lost deer hunters in 1951, but didn't get into operation until 1968, and is now open to the public with a fee of $15 per person per day. There are two mines on the same mountain. I operated out of the Mark Stetler mine. Stetler has a campground, store, gas station, and a lapidary shop where he gives demonstrations on what to do with the opal you find. He drives a bus to the mine each day, or you can follow the bus with your own car or camper. The mine is an open mine on top of a mountain, with a beautiful view of the valley below.

One doesn't have to go underground to look and find the opal - you can pick through the huge rock piles Stetler stirs up each day with a bulldozer, or you can work on the hard solid rock where the opal is found.

For tools, one needs a four-to-eight-pound hammer and some heavy chisels to beat and pry the large rocks and boulders apart to find the opal that was formed by volcanic action millions of years ago. When one finds a cup of good opal, the trick is to chisel the precious gem material out without shattering it, as opal is quite fragile.

I didn't have very good luck finding the precious gem stone, but a lady hunting close to where I was found a really valuable opal. Before the day was over, the same lady, Mrs. Ralph Budde, found another prize piece.

There were six of the Budde family hunting opal that day, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Budde and their four sons, and the value of the two pieces Mrs. Budde found would more than pay for the fee for the whole family to dig for the day, and some of the family found less valuable pieces. So that is the way it goes, some are lucky and some are not, so I say better luck next time.

Leaving Spencer, I then drove on to Yellowstone National Park, where I took a quick tour of some of the most scenic parts of the park. I watched Old Faithful erupt twice, and both times it was somewhat of a fizzle, lasting less than a minute each time, and it reached only a portion of its usual spouting height. So even Old Faithful is not always so faithful.

I have seen enough of the park area to whet my appetite to return some day and take some film of the area, but for now I must be running along toward Michigan.

I suppose by the time this report reaches the presses of The Standard, I will be back in Chelsea telling my yarns of my travels first hand.

So until I take off on another adventure, I will hang up the pen for this season.

I hope those who have followed my adventures this summer have gained something from them.

As ever, your wandering reporter,

Don Turner.

DON, MATTHEW, AND DENNIS COOPER make some delicate repairs on their riverboat, which will be featured in their new film that will be shown in Chelsea next spring. Matthew Cooper, Don's son, is a new member of Cooper Brothers film productions. Turner reported that Don Cooper said he was glad to pose for this picture, as it would show that he and Dennis were out of jail at the same time. Dennis said Matthew will become a full-fledged member of the crew as soon as he is big enough to chew tobacco and spit over the side of the boat.

SPENCER, IDA., is a big attraction for these people, primarily due to its opal mines. This particular mine, where Don Turner tried his luck for $15 for the day, belongs to Mark Stetler.

DON TURNER AND NEPHEW MIKE, of Newbury Park, Calif., pose before the palm trees, which Turner rates "quite a contrast" from the icebergs he's reported seeing in other places along his journey.

Beat Shortage, Order Early On Fertilizers

Get your fertilizer order in now for fall and spring needs. That's the advice to farmers from B. Dale Ball, director of the Michigan Department of Agriculture.

Fertilizer shortages cropped up throughout the state in the current season, Ball reminded, and he said it appears that supplies may even be tighter for the 1975 season.

Michigan's fertilizer woes are even more serious than the national picture would indicate, said Ball, as Michigan is far from the production source of most farm fertilizers. "In addition to national shortages that will affect all of agriculture, Michigan has the added disadvantage of being at the end of the line for bulk shipment of fertilizers, produced mainly in the South," Ball added. "And our rail transportation woes are well known."

Many factors, including agriculture's efforts to increase food production, have contributed to the tight fertilizer supply, Ball said. But of critical effect is the fact that natural gas is the primary feedstock for nitrogen fertilizer, and the energy crunch has been acute in the fertilizer industry.

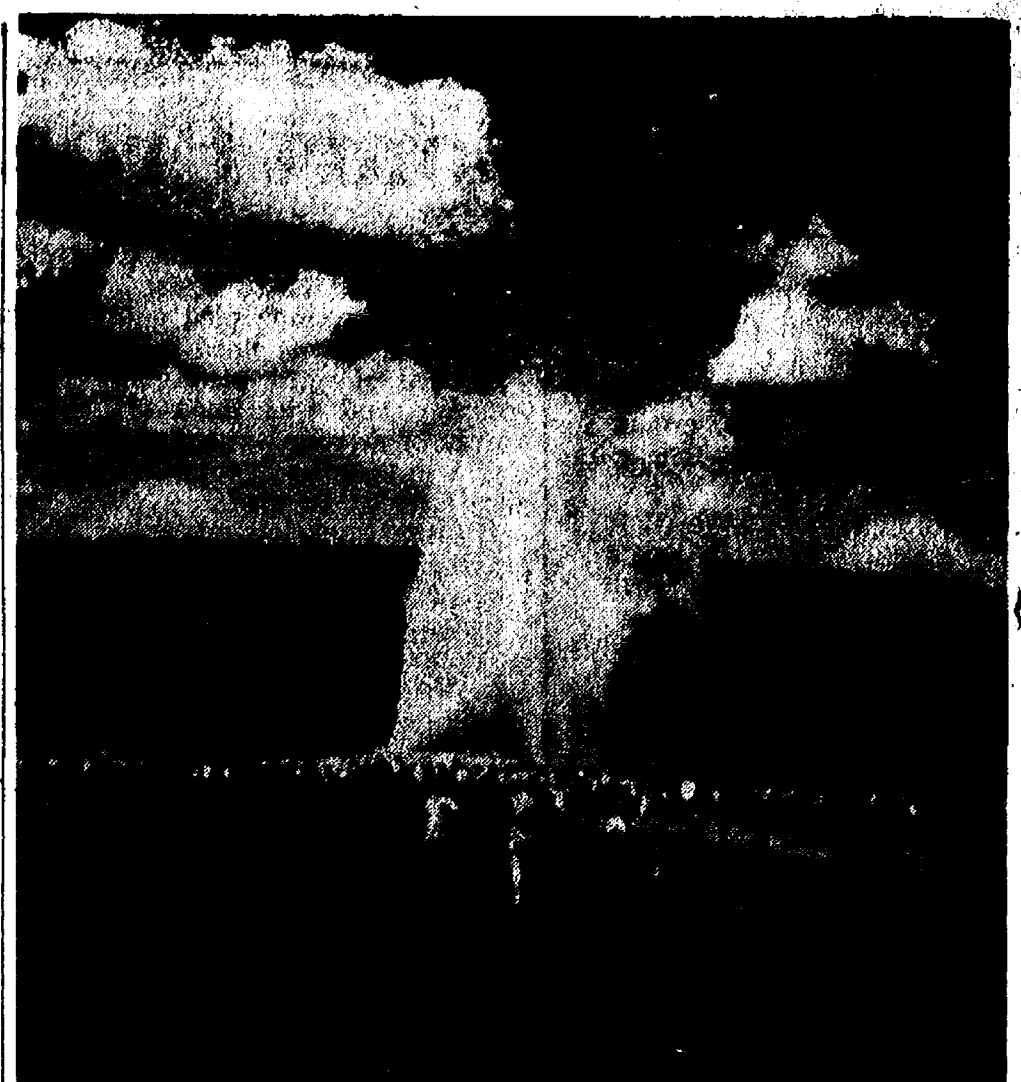

All this adds up to another tight situation for Michigan food production. Farmers should assess their needs for 1975 now, place fertilizer orders as soon as possible, and accept delivery if storage is available.

BASIC BEEF AND PORK

Beef ranks first and pork second in prominence among foods in the meat group, one of the basic 4 food groups. This is the group we rely on for body-building protein plus important vitamins and minerals. It is recommended that servings of a food from the meat group be included in the daily diet.

MORE OIL THAN DEMAND?

The Soviet Union is the only major power that produces more oil than it consumes.

FIZZLE ERUPTIONS was what Don Turner called the eruptions of Old Faithful in Yellowstone National Park that he witnessed. According to Turner, both eruptions that he saw were not more than one minute, although the average is three minutes. Old Faithful erupts on the average of once per hour.

LESS FAT—MORE MEAT

A primary factor in the marketing of livestock and meat is the consumers' desire for a minimum of fat on the meat they purchase. Thus, in addition to developing meat-type animals the livestock and meat industry now markets livestock at lighter weights than was the case 10 to 20 years ago. Moreover, in most instances where there is excess fat, it is trimmed by the meat packer and—retailer.

AMID THE MYRIAD FARM EXHIBITS at the Chelsea Community Fair, last week, a Farm Bureau Queen like Marilyn Feldkamp of Saline could only feel right at home.

SCOTT OTTO, who has won approximately 70 ribbons over the past seven years in the Chelsea Community Fair, this year entered a new competition—baked goods. He entered an apple pie, which placed third, and he has vowed to take first place next year. His previous winners have been in vegetable and rabbit categories.

Selective Service Registration Up

The area Selective Service office in Ann Arbor registered 438 men during August, according to Harold Cross, office manager. The office registered 89 from Lenawee, 164 from Monroe and 185 from Washtenaw counties.

Reports show that draft registration in other Michigan communities have fallen off sharply this summer. Not so in the Ann Arbor office area, Cross pointed out. So far, 3,054 men have registered this year. This reflects an increase of 555 over the same period in 1972 and an increase of 725 over 1973.

The increase is attributed to the co-operation of the local news media, registrars, high school officials and other persons in public offices for publicizing the federal requirement for every male citizen and resident alien to register with Selective Service at age 18, Cross said.

Students may be registered by volunteer registrars in the high schools where they are attending. Individuals unable to appear in person may obtain mail-in registration forms from colorful displays located in U. S. Post Offices, high schools and armories.

Displays in Chelsea are located at the U. S. Post Office, Chelsea High School, and the Chelsea Police Department.

Hi! I'm Tina Marie Cole and this is my chiropractor, Dr. Elwert, giving me my first adjustment. No, I'm not sick — my mom and dad took me to Dr. Elwert so I can stay healthy. Our family found out that it's a lot easier to keep healthy than it is to wait until you've gotten sick before you do anything about it.

What does a Chiropractor have to do with health, you say? Lots. First of all Chiropractors deal with Life and Health. My Chiropractor checks my spine to make sure there is no nerve interference caused by a fall, poor delivery, drugs, etc. You see folks, when you abuse your body, delicate nerves can be interfered with by the bones of the spine pinching them off. When this happens — you get sick.

My chiropractor told my mommy and daddy that only Life Heals — Health comes from within — not from shots or pills or potions — my chiropractor just takes the bone off the nerve and God does the healing.

So if you want your family to feel great like me, see a chiropractor real soon. Don't wait until it's too late.

P.S. My mommy wanted me to tell you that she felt great after having me, and that Chiropractic sure made the difference in her delivery. Well, I gotta go now — it's time for me to see my chiropractor again — see you there!

—Tina Cole.

★ Testing Tires With Laser and Computer

Laser beams and "computers on wheels" represent the latest devices used by tire manufacturers for product quality control and research and development.

The laser beam is used to take tire measurements accurate to within a thousandth of an inch to provide tire development engineers information to evaluate rubber compounds and other materials used in manufacturing tires.

The laser beam is bounced off the tires in much the same way space scientists bounce more intense laser beams off the moon. By measuring the reflected light, tire engineers can determine tread depth and other tire dimensions just as scientists determine the exact distance to an orbiting satellite. The laser system is capable of recording a thousand measurements a second.

The "computer on wheels" is used to measure the performance of experimental passenger car tires. Data gathered from these tests are used by the tire manufacturers to develop new and improved tread designs and rubber compounds for production tires. The computer is installed in the back seat of a club-cab pickup truck, while the test tires are mounted on a specially-designed trailer equipped with remote-controlled brakes and towed by the truck. The weight of the trailer can be varied to simulate either the front or rear axle of an automobile.

Tests conducted with the truck-trailer rig are designed to measure the traction ability of the tires. The test trailer is used instead of an automobile to test tires in order to eliminate variables like the car's suspension system and other components which could distort the data. The tests are run under varying load conditions, at different speeds and on all types of roads, simulating the requirements tires must meet under normal driving conditions.

RETURN OF THE RAILROAD: Chelsea's railroad depot, unused except for storage and a Penn Central dispatcher for a number of years, will undergo a paint-up, fix-up job this week-end, according to John DeLora, chairman of Michigan Association of Railroad Passengers (MARP) pictured above discussing renovation plans with the inquiring Standard reporter, Linda Jones. MARP

Restoration of Railroad Depot Undertaken By Volunteer Group

What was once called "one of the prettiest railroad buildings in the state" now adjoins a none-too-attractive parking lot and looks more than a little incongruous squatting beside the rails clothed in its faded gray-green paint.

Saturday that building, Chelsea's depot, will begin a comeback to the prettiness that used to be, with the help of Michigan Association of Railroad Passengers (MARP), and Chelsea residents who remember the way it was, or would like to see it the way it could be.

Unused by passengers since the 1950s, the station has captured MARP's attention because Chelsea is scheduled to become a stopping point for Amtrak commuter trains that make daily runs between Jackson and Detroit.

The service tentatively is expected to begin in late October, which is also the date MARP has set for completion of its face-lift, and interior alteration of the station.

"What we need right now is elbow grease," says John DeLora, chairman of MARP, squinting in the sun at the weather-beaten paint job. "We intend to scrape off the old paint, repaint the entire building in the old Michigan Central colors of light green with dark green trim, replace all the broken windows, and fix up the adjoining grounds."

"We have donations of paint, glass and lumber for the job," he continues. "And all we need now is scaffolding and people who will donate their time to work."

The station, currently leased by Gambles for storage, will remain primarily a storage building, DeLora says, with the actual passenger waiting area to be a small section partitioned off near the front door.

"We intend to try to make the partition and the molding as close as possible to the original design of the building," he adds, "and the dispatcher's office, which has remained in use, will be in the same place in the building."

Already DeLora has been impressed with the co-operation he has received from some Chelseaites in regard to MARP's restoration efforts.

"In Port Huron, we tried to restore a station, but there was conflict about the track layout, even through trains had been going through there all the time. Other places are difficult because we can't get possession of them."

"But Sam Johnson at Gambles has been tremendously co-operative," DeLora says. "He leases the building, and he's allowing us to use the space for passengers."

"And Diane Borton is working on the Chelsea Historical Society to see if we can get some assistance from them."

Whatever other co-operation and volunteer labor emerges will gather at the depot this Saturday morning and on successive Saturdays to return the station to at least part of its former grandeur. It may not be the showplace it once was, but who can resist an attempt to bring it back to some of its old style?

"The depot, though not so magnificent as that of Jackson, excels it in architectural beauty, and is therefore one of the prettiest railroad buildings in the state."

—History of Washtenaw County, published 1881.

Attempted B&E Reported at A&W

Unknown persons apparently attempted to break into Chelsea A&W some time between Friday evening and Saturday morning, Chelsea police reports say.

Officers believe the prowlers were frightened away from the establishment before entering. There are no suspects in the case.

Stockbridge Squares Perform Dances at Methodist Home

Chelsea Methodist Home was visited by the Stockbridge Squares Friday evening, Sept. 6, where the group did their country and western style square dancing for members of the Home. Their style of dancing was different from the style the members of the home knew in their years of square dancing—some of the calls might have rung a familiar sound, but were danced in a different style.

Stockbridge Squares travel with their caller, Wendell Abbott, when they go to perform for an organization or a home.

Malicious Destruction Reported to Police

Two foam rubber lawn chairs were cut up and Sunday newspapers shredded and stuffed through a mail slot sometime during the day Sunday at the home of John B. Moore, 128 E. Middle St., Chelsea police reports say.

The lawn furniture had been removed from a storage shed and foam rubber strewn over the lawn, officers said. The chairs were valued at $60.

Police believe local youngsters who had been chased away from the residence earlier for throwing stones may have been responsible for this incident. Moore could not identify them, however.

Congregational Church Names Choral Director

As part of its new choral program, First Congregational church has hired Thomas Jenrette as choral director.

Jenrette, who is currently a teaching fellow in voice at the University of Michigan School of Music, where he is pursuing a DMA in voice, plans to establish three choirs—children, youth, and adult—as part of this new program. He also plans occasional special instrumental musical selections utilizing the talent of the congregation as part of the Sunday worship service.

Jenrette has previously acted as choral director at Cummings High school in Burlington, N. C., and later served as Director of Cultural Arts for the entire school system, supervising music, art, and drama for 13 schools.

Locally he has appeared in School of Music and Ann Arbor Civic Theatre productions. He holds an A.B. and M.M. from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Merry Hoffmeyer Enjoys Summer in Switzerland

Merry Hoffmeyer went from "The Gateway to the Waterloo Recreation Area" to "The Gateway to the Bernese Oberland" this summer, and enjoyed every minute of it.

A senior at Chelsea High school, Merry was one of two local students who spent a June-to-August stint as a participant in Youth for Understanding—which means two months living with a family in a foreign country soaking up the rays of culture that happen to come one's way.

Merry's Swiss "family," the Heinrich Enggists, and their three children, are residents of Thun (pronounced like "tune"), Switzerland, a town of some 35,000 that takes its sobriquet, "The Gateway to the Bernese Oberland," from the close proximity of the Bernese mountain range.

Merry spent some hiking time in those mountains with the Enggists, discovering a few relatively surprising things about her interim home—like the Swiss do not ski during the summer, contrary to often-popular notions, and that cattle and other livestock roam freely in the mountain areas, a fact she learned while on a path that a number of cattle had also chosen for a jaunt.

In Thun, which from postcards Merry displays resembles the stereotyped "picturesque Swiss village," more than it does a town of 35,000, she discovered rather surprising aspects of Swiss urban living.

"All the old buildings are kept up," she says, "and used for things, instead of being torn down. The castle in Thun, which was built in the 900s, has concerts and a museum. A lot of the castles are used for prisons . . . some parts of them may be only 100 or 200 years old, but the original building is still there, with additions."

The Swiss fascination with flower beds and gardens also caught her eye. "In this country, we may have gardens, but they often look wilted and dry," she points out. "In Switzerland, almost every house has flower boxes, with beautiful flowers. And people come home and work in their gardens, in their spare time, all the time."

Cleanliness in the cities was also a noticeable aspect of Swiss urban life, she said, as was a perceptible lack of either slums or swankily rich residential districts.

Other differences that she noticed originated with her. Her German, she found, was adequate for reading, but not quite up to par in casual conversation.

"They speak a local dialect, as do people in all the different cantons (districts) — and they shorten words, leave off endings, and drop entire syllables," she recalls with a tinge of exasperation. "They could understand me, but I couldn't understand them most of the time. I could understand better at the end of the time I was there, though."

She recalls the two young boys in the family giving her some news of a car accident by acting out the scene for her benefit. "I'd also go through their coloring books, with them, saying words that corresponded to the pictures," she recalls.

She encountered some negative reaction from townspeople by wearing a pair of shorts in town, which, she said, "nice girls do not wear." Sometimes I could hear people saying that I was an American, but I wasn't about to wear jeans all summer. Mrs. Enggist thought it was cute, anyway; it didn't bother my family."

She agrees, however, with the often-quoted descriptions of American tourists abroad. "Some people—you just look at them and know that they're American tourists," she says, adding that, "Sometimes when I was in town with my family, and American kids were running around in the streets while their parents were off at a party or something somewhere, I would just walk by and look at them, the way the Swiss people do, when a tourist is being obnoxious."

Away from Thun, she found other unexpected treats of sight-seeing, including an ancient Roman town—"I thought I'd have to go to Italy to see a Roman town, but there was one right in Switzerland."

The Enggists also shower her with sights at Lucerne, Geneva, and Berne, the capital. They reached Geneva, she said, by going around a lake and traveling briefly in France.

She returns to Chelsea with slides—"So many slides!"—postcards, an embroidered blouse, pictures and calendars from Thun, and 12 pounds of chocolate—"Swiss chocolate is the very best!"

One of the Enggists' children, Christine, is now a Youth for Understanding student in Battle Creek for the entire year, and reunions are, hopefully, in the future.

CHELSEA, MICHIGAN, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 12, 1974

CANDIDATES SPEAK: Chelsea Kiwanis Club members were addressed Monday night by a pair of GOP candidates for election: incumbent State Senator Gilbert Bursley, far right, who discussed school financing problems on state and local levels, and Cliff Taylor, center, candidate for Congress in the Sixth Congressional District. At left is Kiwanian Herman Koenn.

Youth Charged With Stolen Car

A 1964 Oldsmobile stolen Thursday morning from the Municipal Parking Lot was recovered that evening in Benton Harbor in the possession of two juvenile girls and a local youth.

James Gullett, 17, of Chelsea, will be charged with possession of stolen property in the incident, by Benton Harbor police, Chelsea Chief of Police George Meranuck says.

The two girls, who accompanied memories, there is always the chance—just maybe—of another trip to Europe. Junior Year Abroad, perhaps? Time will tell.

Gullett, both 14, were runaways, according to Chief Meranuck, and will be petitioned to juvenile court on runaway charges.

The car belonged to Mrs. Shelvee Jean Sparks, 101 S. Main, who reported the theft.

Correction on Sale

In last week's edition of The Standard, it was incorrectly reported that the grand champion steer, raised by Gary Thornton, was sold to Schumm's for $1.65 per pound. The correct price was $1.25 per pound. The Standard regrets the error.

Tandem Axle Trailer Stolen Thursday From Parking Lot

A 1973 Tige Line tandem axle trailer valued at $2,000 was stolen early Thursday evening from the parking lot 9 Triangle Sales, Chelsea police reports say.

The yellow trailer, which was equipped with loading ramps, belonged to Don Allen of Stockbridge, who reported the theft of the vehicle, which was insured.

Officers have no suspects in the case.

Gossip is like an egg—once hatched it has wings!

THUN, SWITZERLAND, was home for Chelseaite Merry Hoffmeyer for two months this summer during her participation in the Youth for Understanding program. Thun, looking too picturesque to be a town of 35,000 people, is a typical Swiss city, Merry reports, with its old, old buildings still in use, its numerous flower boxes and gardens, and even its castle (at top). Merry, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Hoffmeyer of 146 Orchard St., lived with a Swiss family during her two-month stay.

ALASKA PIPELINE

Construction costs for the recently begun Alaska pipeline project are expected to exceed two billion dollars. This represents the most expensive privately funded project in history.

PANAMA CANAL

The Panama Canal connects the Caribbean Sea and the Pacific Ocean. Normal passage time is twelve hours and though the depth of the canal varies—it never goes below 40 feet.

Cards of Thanks

CARD OF THANKS
I would like to thank the Chelsea Fire Department very much for the honor of being parade marshal at the Chelsea Community Fair; also thank you for the beautiful American Beauty roses. It was greatly appreciated—I was very excited. Thanks also to Mac Packard for asking me on behalf of the Chelsea Fire Department; thanks also to Sandy and Walt Zeeb for the beautiful corsage they gave me; also thanks to my son, Fred, and Lloyd Bridges Chevrolet for letting us use the Corvette Stingray in the parade. Love you all and thank you very much again.
Gerry Klink and Fred, Jr.

CARD OF THANKS
Many thanks to all who have supported the 1974 Chelsea Community Fair! We are sincerely grateful for the many hours put in by the Fair Board, department superintendents, cooks, with whose names I hope you are familiar, but they alone could not begin to accommodate the thousands of people attending this year's events. Thanks to all the others who generously donated goods and time as individuals or groups—your support is essential to the life of the fair. A special thanks to my wife and family and to all those exhibitors and volunteers who helped with the unending job of setting up, cleaning, and picking up, especially the FFA for cleaning the grounds and Harold and Martha Eiseaman who kindly cleaned the Service Center. A final thank-you to all who came to the Fair, waited patiently in lines, read no parking signs, made the Fair a pleasant place to be and generally enjoyed yourselves. We hope to see you again next year.
Earl J. Heller,
Fair Manager.

Other heat winners were Richard Parreus of Saline, Denny Hayes of Charlotte, Bob Van Splinter of Charlotte, and Ben R. Price of Stockbridge.

To the Editor:
Chelsea Players was formally organized in 1973 for the purpose of presenting community musicals in the summer. Since that time two successful shows have been staged: Fiddler on the Roof and The Music Man. This summer a theatre workshop was established to broaden the performing arts program in Chelsea. The fact that a small community is providing quality entertainment for itself using its own talent is in itself noteworthy.

We hope to continue staging productions for the community as well as educating youngsters in the performing arts in this next year. The response by the citizens of Chelsea to the Players has been most gratifying. The talent being already shown by the youngsters who participated in the Acting Academy is exciting.

On behalf of the Workshop personnel and myself, I wish to thank the many individuals and businesses who helped with this summer's program.

By SUE CALUS

If you have a question on Home Decorating send it to: Decorating, The Chelsea Standard, Chelsea 48118.

O. I am re-doing our bedroom. The room is quite large with two long windows. My furniture is traditional. I want a really elegant look and would like to do this room in red, but I'm afraid I'll tire of this color. Any suggestions?

A. Red is a stimulating color and one that's more difficult to live with in its brightest hues, especially in a bedroom. By toning red down with shades of deep wine to soft pink, you'll achieve a very elegant look.

Start with a large print fabric with shades of wine and pink on cream colored background. Use this for the bed coverlet, bolster pillows and cormice valance, all trimmed with cording in deep wine color velour. Select cream carpeting and cream color fabric for a dust ruffle and matching draw drapes. Use swag drapes in the same deep wine color velour that was used for the cording. Cover a chair in soft pink. Pick colors from the bed coverlet for several throw pillows on the bed.

Now to give your room a finished look with accessories, use gold in lamp bases, picture frames, candle holders, etc. And add a touch of black, by using black candles, matting in pictures, or trim on lamp shades.

Farm Bureau Women Sponsor Treasure Chest Booth at Chelsea Fair

One of the more popular booths at the Chelsea Fair this year was a booth called "Agriculture, America's Treasure Chest, Farm Bureau, Agriculture's Treasure Chest."

An educational display was on exhibit showing how Michigan ranks among the other states in food production. Washtenaw county Farm Bureau women sponsored this booth, with Mrs. Dennis Engelbert and Mrs. Robert Heller in charge.

Roben Rita Terns, Ronald Bush Wed at Methodist Church

Roben Rita Terns and Ronald Bush were united in marriage Saturday, Aug. 31, in a 7:30 p.m. candlelight ceremony at the First United Methodist church.

The Rev. Clive Dickinson conducted the ceremony between the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Terns of Grass Lake, Rd., and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Norwood Bush of Old US-12.

Michael Lepert, a brother of the bride, accompanied himself on the guitar and sang "The Wedding Song." Traditional wedding music was played by Mrs. James Gaunt.

For the ceremony, the bride chose a floor length gown of ivory satrapeau and rose-pointe lace, with sheer lantern sleeves and high neckline. Bodice of the dress was of lace, scattered with seed pearls, and her attached train was edged with rose-pointe lace. A cap of ivory lace and seed pearls held her silk illusion veil. She carried a bouquet of gardenias, stephanotis, and ivy.

F. A. KENNEDY

What is the most attractive department in any supermarket? The produce department, of course, with its colorful array of fresh fruits and vegetables. And today I'd like to tell you some of the things that are happening in the world of produce, to make it a better world for you.

A great deal has already happened, of course. More produce is being marketed than ever before, actually something like fifty-five billion pounds — annually. Bigger and better fruits and vegetables are being grown, thanks to improved hybridizing and farming methods. They are reaching you in finer and fresher condition, thanks to improved transport refrigeration and more scientific control of both temperature and humidity in supermarket storage rooms. And more and more produce is being prepackaged, so you know that the fruits and vegetables you take home weren't pinched, pawed, and picked at before you got to them.

Already, most supermarkets offer watermelons, cantaloupes, and honeydews sliced in half. But in the near future you may find them quartered, or sliced for your convenience. You may find peeled oranges and ready-to-eat grapefruit halves packaged in individual servings. And you may wash and store your lettuce in the container it comes in, complete with draining vents and replaceable lid. Not only that; in the more distant future, produce departments may have skylights, to give you the feeling that you've stepped outside into a lush summer garden, even in the dead of winter!

Those are only predictions, of course. What is true now is that you are already enjoying the biggest, best, finest, freshest product on earth. And if you are shopping Polly's, you are also enjoying the greatest values in town.
