Village Water Rate Hike Will Be on July Billing

If you buy water from the village of Chelsea, expect your July bill, covering the April-June quarter of 1983, to be higher than it was a year ago.

The village council last Tuesday night approved by a 4-2 vote an increase in basic water rates from an average 65 cents per thousand gallons to 98 cents. Individual charges will vary according to amounts of water used.

One goal of the new rate structure, which replaces a schedule that has been in effect since 1971, is to narrow the difference between what small and large consumers pay for water pumped through their meters.

Large users will still pay proportionately less, but not as much less. Whoever buys it, the water costs the village 90 cents per thousand gallons to deliver.

Large-volume customers will pay less than that amount, small ones more. The "subsidy" thus will remain in effect, although it won't be as big.

The council justified the differential on the basis that low water rates will work to keep existing business and industry in the village, and help attract new ones.

A spokesman for BookCrafters, Inc., cast a bit of cold water on that reasoning when he said: "Our company isn't concerned about your water rates. It's your tax rates that worry us."

A representative of the Ann Arbor engineering firm of Ayres, Lewis, Norris & May, which prepared the rate plan adopted by the council, said the new schedule should allow the village water system to operate "slightly in the black." It has been running in the red, to the tune of about $3,000 every quarter.

Built into the new rate plan is a further raise in 1985, to an average $1.08 per thousand gallons.

The extra revenue will be used in part to repair the present water system which, according to the engineering study, has a leakage rate "in excess of 15 percent." That represents water pumped out of village wells and into mains, but not delivered through meters.

"We have neglected maintenance of the water system in order to hold costs down," village president Jack Merkel said, "and we've still been running a deficit. I think it's time we faced facts and realized you can't operate today on a 12-year-old rate schedule."

"We have some real problems on the south side of the village where water pressures are low and we are eventually going to have to put up a new tower. We have a history of not taking care of things in the water system, and the time has come to make up for it."

In response to a question from the audience as to whether it is necessary that every village utility operation show a "profit"—all except water do—differing views were expressed.

Trustee Richard Steele, who voted against the water rate increase because he feels it is too steep, said he saw no reason why all operating funds have to be in the black every year, as long as the total budget balances. "It seems to me we should be flexible enough to shift between accounts, just so we balance the books at the end of the year."

Village administrator Frederick A. Weber and president Merkel had a different view, noting that operations which don't support themselves tend to come out on the short end of funding for maintenance and improvements.

Trustee Joe Merkel, who joined Steele in voting against the rate increase, repeated his argument that repairs should be made to the system before rates are raised. "The village is hurting right now," he said. "We're losing business and industry. This isn't" (Continued on page six)

Knolls Want To Secede From Village

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Knoll of 1220 Old Manchester Rd. live in the village and want out. The village council appears willing to accommodate their wish to secede but isn't sure how to do it.

Because there apparently is no local precedent for such a move, the matter has been referred to village attorney Peter Flintoft for advice on whether the Knolls can be accommodated and, if so, how from a legal standpoint.

The Knolls contend that the services they receive as village residents are not in line with the taxes they pay. Their property is at the extreme south edge of the village and is separated from the main portion.

Dana Moving Assembly Operations to Memphis With No Loss in Jobs

Dana Corp. will close out its drivetrain assembly operation at its Chelsea plant between now and October but will not reduce the work force here, plant manager Tom Green told The Standard in an exclusive interview.

"We fully expect to maintain our current employment level in Chelsea through the relocation period and beyond," Green emphasized, "and I am confident that by 1984 we will have increased our work force by at least 50 percent, approaching the number we had in 1981 before our business dropped sharply because of the recession."

Dana presently employs 165 persons in the Chelsea plant — 122 in manufacturing and 43 in so-called white-collar service jobs. There are 38 hourly rated workers directly involved in the Drivetrain assembly operation that is being discontinued.

"How the report has gotten around that we are going to lay off 75 people right now and maybe close down the plant entirely, I just plain don't understand,"

Green said. "I called a plant-wide meeting last week and told all employees exactly what I'm telling your newspaper."

"We are going to remain in Chelsea, we don't plan to lay off anybody, and we have every reason to think we are going to expand our work force during the next 18 months. Business is picking up, orders are up, the economic indicators are positive. I don't have a perfect crystal ball, but I'm very confident of that forecast."

All of this started with an announcement from Dana Drivetrain Service Division headquarters in Toledo that assembly and warehousing will be moved from Chelsea to a new facility in Memphis, Tenn., in a series of steps which will begin later this month.

"The need for the relocation is dictated by changes in the market-place," Green said. "It will get us closer to our customers. Memphis is the transportation and distribution hub of the United States. There is a larger concentration of highways, railroads and warehouses in Memphis than anywhere else in the country."

"In Memphis, Dana will be located within 600 miles of more than 50 percent of its present drivetrain customers, and so will be able to provide faster delivery and better service in a highly competitive market. That is why the move is being made."

Green acknowledged that another reason for the move is to "partially escape the high costs of doing business in Michigan," pointing out that this state's business climate was ranked last among the lower 48 states in a recent national survey.

"I don't see any signs that this is going to change for the better soon," he added.

The Chelsea plant will continue to manufacture components for drivetrains, also called power takeoffs (PTOs), Green said. The parts will be shipped to Memphis for assembly, storage and distribution.

Industrial Park Plans Move Closer to Reality

Development of an industrial park in the Chelsea area has moved a couple of important steps closer to reality.

Village administrator Frederick A. Weber revealed at last Tuesday night's council meeting that the village's offer to buy a 73-acre tract on Sibley Rd. west of the Dana plant has been accepted by owner Stuart Small. The price is $139,900.

Closing the deal is contingent on a favorable recommendation from the Ann Arbor engineering firm of Ayres, Lewis, Norris & May, which is supposed to submit its industrial park feasibility study report some time this week.

"I can't imagine that the engineering report will be anything but favorable or that it will discourage the Sibley Rd. property as a site," Weber said, "but I can't say for sure until we get the report and read it."

The study was commissioned jointly by the Chelsea village council and the Sylvan township board at a cost of $4,500 to be shared equally.

The idea for the industrial park originated with the township board, and Weber said he will arrange a meeting between officials of the village and the township as soon as possible after the report is received.

Important questions remaining to be answered, assuming there

OFF TO DETROIT: Ready to depart on a specially guided tour of Detroit are Chelsea High school exchange students Mika Kidoaki, Hans Timmer and Gabriella Meier. Their guides were counselors Gene LaFave (left) and Chris Dimanin (right), who both grew up in the big city and know it well.

Exchange Students Tour City of Detroit

Perceptions of the city of Detroit must have been very different for the three Chelsea High school exchange students who were taken on a special tour last week by two guidance counselors.

Making the trip were Gabriella Meier of Switzerland, Hans Timmer of the Netherlands, and Mika Kidoaki of Japan.

They had excellent guides, Both Gene LaFave and Chris Dimanin grew up in the inner city of Detroit and still know their way around it, even though it has changed drastically in recent years.

"We will show them both the good and the bad," LaFave said as the group departed for the all-day tour, "everything from the Renaissance Center to Cass corridor. It's going to be quite an experience for all of us."

(For those unfamiliar with Detroit, the "RenCen" is the latest and most visible effort to revitalize the downtown area. The Cass corridor never recovered from the 1967 race riots and is a spectacular example of urban blight.)

The tour was to include Greek-Town, Indian Village and several other ethnic, architectural and cultural enclaves in the city, as well as the rejuvenated waterfront at the foot of Woodward Ave.

To Mika Kidoaki, Detroit may have looked like a small town. Tokyo, Japan, has more than 10 times as many people. It is the world's largest city.

What Gabriella Meier and Hans Timmer may have thought about this major American metropolis which is trying desperately to fight back from a long-term economic depression created by an out-migration of wealth and tax base is unknown, but it must have made some impressions.

Talking it Out

FUNERAL HOME

WHY AM I AFRAID TO TALK ABOUT DEATH?

You should know first that your fears are common ones which have been fostered for many centuries. Until recent years the subject has been taboo and "swept under the rug" until it affects us personally. Only recently has there been substantial scientific research on the subject.

We don't talk about death because we fear it and we know so little about it. In the interest of mental health, such feelings need to be changed. Public education, based on our new psychological and medical data, offer us our greatest help.

These educational helps are becoming more and more available to us. The librarian (and we) can recommend some very fine books written about death-and-dying; thanatology courses are offered in many schools; many churches now offer classes and discussion groups on the subject.

Here at our funeral home, we can arrange a tour of the facilities and an explanation of our services for you and your friends. We can also be your personal consultants to answer some of your concerns about death.

Report Warns of Future Year Budget Pressures

A Citizens Research Council report warns that Governor James Blanchard's proposed 1983-84 budget may set a spending base that current tax rates will not support in future years, but administrative officials said they would not be seeking any additional taxes in the future.

The council report said the governor's budget "will establish a spending base that may not be sustainable in fiscal year 1984-85 given revenues projected for that year."

The report takes into account not only the tax decrease, but predicts the general fund will have to pay about $275 million in the budget stabilization fund. Management and Budget Director Phillip Jourdan agreed with many aspects of the report, including the projection that the 1984-85 budget will be tight, particularly because the income tax rate will drop .75 percent points that year.

The rate will drop .25 percent points in 1983-84. Jourdan said the governor will not recommend altering that schedule for reduced taxes and will not be supporting additional taxes.

But he said the governor's budget does not set the stage for a spending level that can only be sustained with a tax increase when the Michigan economy once again is hit by a recession.

He added, the governor's budget, in many instances, is specifically designed to restore cuts imposed in the last couple of years or other special projects which are not continuing commitments.

Jourdan said the governor is committed to continuing efforts to cut the size of state government and noted the 1983-84 elimination of 2,000 employees would carry over into the following year and would mean added savings.

Jourdan said the council expresses reasonable concerns, but said the state is engaging in forward budgeting as much as it can, particularly when the use of the budget stabilization fund is considered.

Utilities Charged With Improper Campaign Solicitation

Michigan's three largest power utilities should have about $2.9 million deducted from their next rate cases because of improper use of facilities and staff regarding November, 1982, ballot issues, the Public Service Commission staff reports.

The findings were the result of an audit of campaign expenses by Detroit Edison, Consumers Power and Michigan Consolidated Gas.

The ballot issues included two which banned automatic rate adjustments (one was favored by utilities, the other was opposed) and one providing for an elected PSC.

Staff auditor Charles Geyer said the utilities solicited campaign contributions from their suppliers, using company facilities and on company time.

"I conclude the contributions were not entirely voluntary and the solicitation of these donations were improper. For a corporate officer and employees of a utility purchasing department to actively solicit donations suggests either an element of coercion is involved or that conducting business with a utility is so lucrative a donation is necessary," Geyer said.

The utilities will be permitted to present evidence at a hearing to be scheduled before a hearing officer. Then the PSC itself will issue a final order.

The audit was conducted after the Michigan Citizens Lobby filed a complaint and the PSC ordered a review to ensure expenditures for advertising, electioneering and wages not be recognized as part of the rates of the utilities.

The amounts to be deducted under the staff recommendations include $1.2 million for amounts contributed by the suppliers and $1.7 million more in utility payrolls and overhead expenses.

Yours truly,
Uncle Lew.

Uncle Lew from Lima Says:

DEAR MISTER EDITOR:

Word that all six serious Democratic horses in the presidential sweepstakes are in their starting gates got the fellers talking elections and education during the session at the country store Saturday night. Clem Webster wondered if the recent report on education in this country would be worth any planks in national platforms. Clem had saw where the Commission on Excellence in Education declared that if a enemy of this country had got our schools in such a mess we would regard it as a act of war.

The feller that said we has met the enemy and he is us, Clem went on, must be he is talking about how much of our time and money we invest in our schools. Somebody took note recent, Clem said, that our schools still are set up on the idea that the whole family needs all summer to get the crops in. Longer school days and years won't set well with students just turned loose for the summer. Clem declared, but there's a lot to be said for making fuller use of more of our schools than the playgrounds.

Ed Doolittle said he wouldn't argue Clem's point, but he would say we got to use some stick with all the carrots we're trying to apply to education these days. You can talk about all your freedoms, Ed said, but when we done away with literacy tests as a requirement to vote we didn't do anybody any favors. If you can't read, the onesided keyhole view of the world you get from television ain't enuff to make your vote worth anything, was Ed's words.

What Ed said he would like to see, short of denying the vote to them not able to help make sensible decisions, is ways to make more vote that ought to. He had saw by the papers where a bill in the Massachusetts legislature calls for publishing names of all citizens that don't vote. The feller that introduced it said he was reviving a dead 1835 state law that required all males to vote. I can't help but think what such a national requirement would do for legal ads in the papers.

Acutal, all the civil rights groups would jump on this invasion of privacy and pursuit of happiness like a frog on a june bug, but you probable have visions of all them pages of names of non-voters dancing in your head. Even if the bill is somebody's idee of a joke, you got to admit it's a joke with a mighty strong punch line.

Ed said the carrot might work fer them that vote. We could give them flag pins to show they had done their duty, and we might use the stick by letting only folks wearing flags speak at public meetings. Meanwhile, Ed's plan is to git everybody in shape to vote by pushing education, and he said he couldn't think of a better place to start than reading good newspapers.

I'm with Ed. If it weren't fer the papers I wouldn't know about 12-year-old Linn Yann. She won the spelling bee last month in Chattanooga, Tenn. She had never been to school and couldn't speak or write English when her family came here from Cam-bodie four year ago. Is she this good, or are the other spellers that bad?

OFFICE SURGERY FOR BUNIONS

If you are afflicted with a painful bunion condition that's causing unrelieved foot discomfort, you may want to consider surgical removal.

Bunions result when the big toe leans toward the others rather than growing straight outward. The deformed and enlarged joint located behind the big toe causes the lubricating sac, called the bursa, to swell and protrude. It is this swelling and inflammation of the bursa sac, also known as bursitis, that may cause intense pain. Surgery to remove the bony enlargement may solve the bunion problem.

If you have a serious bunion problem, you should discuss this alternative with your foot specialist.

Eight Grads in Family May Be Chelsea Record

Mr. and Mrs. Andy Brown of 1455 Winters Rd., Grass Lake, watched proudly last Sunday night as their eighth child graduated from Chelsea High School.

School officials could not confirm whether or not that is a record, but joined in congratulating the Browns. "Eight is certainly a bunch," said assistant superintendent Fred Mills. "The Browns have every right to be proud of their children and of their role as excellent parents."

The Brown family graduates include: Star (1968), Dennis (1970), Hattie (1973), Paul (1974), Danny (1976), Leon (1978), Lois (1980) and Norman (1983).

"We have gone to a lot of football games, wrestling meets, concerts and other events in the Chelsea schools over the years," Mrs. Brown said, "and we have enjoyed them all."

"We are thankful to the Chelsea schools for the fine education they have given our children."

Father Andy Brown is retired from North American Rockwell. Mother Rosemary Brown is employed at the Pump 'N' Pantry in Chelsea.

Pork Production Study Offered By Extension Service

Why does food cost so much? How much of my food dollar does the producer get? What can I do to get the most for my money?

You can get first-hand answers to these and other questions about food production and marketing system at Co-operative Extension's first "Farm to Table" event Thursday, June 23. This year's program which follows pork production from barn to banquet is co-sponsored by Washtenaw County Pork Producers.

Schedule for the day which begins at 9 a.m. and concludes at 3 p.m., includes a tour of a Washtenaw county pig farm, a visit at the Manchester Livestock Exchange, a barbecued ham luncheon, and a pork carcass cutting demonstration. You will also learn about the nutritional contribution of pork and how to prepare pork in a variety of ways.

Cost for the entire day, including lunch, is $5. Call the Co-operative Extension Service at 973-9510 for more information, or to register. Registration is limited to 35 and will be honored in the order received.

Class of '53 Plans 30-Year Reunion

Chelsea High school Class of 1953 will celebrate its 30th-year reunion this week-end at Mackinac Island, where the class went on its senior trip.

In May of 1953, 61 class members boarded the S. S. South America in Detroit for a three-day cruise, which took them through the locks at Sault Ste. Marie and a day touring Mackinac Island. The reunion planning committee was reminiscing about the trip and thought it might be fun to go there again.

Any class members who have not made reservations and would like to go, may contact Dan or Shirley at Chelsea Pharmacy before Friday.

Planning Commission Will Set Hearing Date For Legalizing Fair

At the planning commission meeting tonight, a date will be set for a public hearing on a zoning ordinance amendment to allow the Chelsea Community Fair to be a legal use in the Agriculture-1 district.

This ordinance would add fairs and accessory buildings as a permitted conditional use in the district.

Other planned business includes a letter giving Washtenaw Engineering's approval to the site plan of Broderick Tower Shell on S. Main St.

Some 68 clinics assisting people with multiple sclerosis throughout the country are supported by local chapters of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society, including the Michigan Chapter.

Village Negotiating On Building Site

The village council has decided to keep the negotiating door open on possible purchase of property at 304 S. Main St., despite the fact that the present owner and the appraiser hired by the village are more than $100,000 apart on what the parcel is worth.

Owner Richard Kolander is asking $149,000 for the 100 by 227-foot lot which contains a house and another large building, both unoccupied and in disrepair.

R. A. Cooch & Co. of Ann Arbor, which appraised the property at a cost of $750 to the village, placed a $45,000 net value on it—$47,000 minus $2,000 to raze the two buildings. An alternative would be to spend $35,000 to make the buildings usable.

"I guess any property is worth whatever somebody is willing to pay for it," trustee Jerry Satterthwaite said at last Tuesday night's council meeting after the appraisal report was received and reviewed. "In this case the gap between the asking price and the appraised value is awfully big. There is no way we (the village) could justify paying the asking price."

Village president Jack Merkel, who sees the Kolander property as a possible site for a new village office building, suggested that negotiations be kept alive and volunteered to talk with Kolander and his agent, Thornton Realty. "At least we have a lot of room for bargaining," he noted.

Industrial Park Plans...

are no intervening problems, include how the Sibley Rd. property would be paid for and who would be responsible for the costs of developing it into an industrial park.

The purchase offer was made by the village with an implied but never-spelled-out understanding that the township would join in the venture. The land is inside the village limits.

Development costs would include extending utility lines into the property, and building interior roads and streets. It is hoped that purchase and development costs would eventually be recovered from sales of lots to businesses intending to locate in the park.

KINDERGARTEN-SIXTH GRADE SHARING: After the sixth graders gave the books they had made to their assigned kindergartner, the younger children showed the older ones their classroom. Calvin Poe, left, holds a guinea pig for his sixth grader, Kevin McDougall, to pet.

Sixth Grade Students Write Books for Kindergarteners

The books which two classrooms of sixth grade students at Beach Middle school made and which they gave to kindergartners at North and South school last week is more than a goodwill gesture of sharing and giving.

Sixth graders learn much about writing in the process, said Bill Wescott, who designed the three-year-old project with Margaret Koch, another sixth grade teacher.

Students begin by interviewing their kindergartner. The first year, students had a form interview sheet to follow, and it didn't work very well, said Wescott. The kindergartners were intimidated by the size of the older children, and everyone was bored and fidgeting at the end.

He learned at a Sunday school workshop to have the person being interviewed doing something. Since then, the younger children color, while the big children talk to them. That works, said Wescott.

From talking and watching what is colored, sixth graders learn if the younger children have brothers and sisters, pets, or if they live on a farm or in the village.

This way the book can be tailored to that child, said Wescott, and the older children learn how to write to a specific audience, which is important in any career.

Students then write a 14 to 22 sentence story. The plot may not have any super heroes such as Superman or Donald Duck or violence, said Wescott. The teachers didn't want mere rewrites of television shows.

Plots, characters and settings this year ranged from visits to the zoo, ball games, lost puppies, a race car that talked, getting a pet, clowns, eating pizza, and modern characters and events such as Pac Man creatures and playing video games when one gets home from school.

Students lay out four book pages on sheets of paper to help them learn to sequence pictures, which they draw themselves with markers. Each year Judy Parker, a middle school art teacher, talks to them about art for children books and the importance of color.

By making several rough drafts the students also learn the importance of editing and how to write a story in simple sentences, said Wescott. The final product is put onto heavy paper, with stiff covers. Mrs. Koch's husband, Hal, works for a book company and arranges for the books to be bound with heavy spirals.

This year there were more kindergartners than sixth graders, so not every classroom got books, said Wescott. Depending on enrollments, next year the kindergarten classes may be rotated.

The ultimate test of a book's success is the kindergartner's reaction, said Wescott. The sixth graders go to the elementary schools and read and give their books to the young children.

Beach Summer Music Program Will Continue

A summer music education program for youngsters who will be students at Beach Middle school this fall has been announced by the music department.

Registration for both programs, open to all incoming students in grades 6-8, will be held tomorrow from 8 a.m. until noon during the appropriate class times at Beach school.

Enrollees are asked to bring their instruments, strings or band, with them.

The program will be held Wednesday through Friday this week, and Monday-Thursday in succeeding weeks through July 22. All sessions will be held at the middle school.

Although the program is on the list to be cut if the millage didn't pass yesterday, Warren Mayer, middle school band director, said the summer music program would continue some way, perhaps in another location.

Both the seventh and eighth grade band and orchestra are going to Bob-Lo Island today. They will play in exchange for admission.

A WORKOUT STUDIO

'Kiss Me Kate' Cast Chosen

The cast of "Kiss Me Kate," the Chelsea Area Players' musical to be performed July 21-24, was announced June 4 after four days of auditions.

The musical, featuring Cole Porter songs, is a show within a show, so characters are defined by production positions.

Joe Diederich will play producer Fred Graham, and Ruth Kenney is Actress Lilli Vannessi.

Diederich played Emile De Becque in the Players' 1981 production of "South Pacific" and was Alfred P. Doolittle in last year's production of "My Fair Lady." Kenny, who directs the Ann Arbor Civic Chorus, was Bloody Mary in "South Pacific." She sang "Bali Ha'i" from that musical at a recent CAP program for the Woman's Club of Chelsea.

Ric Foytik, who owns Ricardo's Family Hair Cutting, was cast as Broadway Hooper Bill Calhoun, and Marcia Warren will be nightclub performer Lois Lane.

Foytik played Prof. Henry Higgins in "My Fair Lady" and has been both an instrumentalist and background vocalist in other CAP productions. Warren, a Chelsea High school graduate who now attends Central Michigan University, taught Children's Theatre Workshop in past summers. She has performed in 13 high school, CAP and CMU shows. "The King and I" was her most recent CAP production.

Other cast members include Art Steinaway as Harry Trevor; Mike Long as Ralph, the stage manager; Thad Bell, dual roles of Paul and Gremio; Todd Wulster and Tom Muji, gangsters; Sal Jordano, stage doorman; Bob Penskar, wealthy Harrison Howell; and Bev Slater, cab driver.

Mike Smith doubles as Hortensio and the haberdasher, and Kristyn Hohnke plays Lilli's maid, Hattie. Petrichio's servants are Bob Gimmey, David Freitas and Penny Burkes.

In the troupe of players are Linda Ayers, Gayla Bauer, Tammy Browning, Tiffany Browning, Jerri Cole, Becky Finch, Carole Gallas, Norma Graflund, Heather Grenier, Pam Jordano, Bob Mulvihill, Dawn Olson, Pearl Phillips, Marji Rawson, Joann Weber, Elizabeth Williams and Sue Williams.

For early tickets, arrangements may be made at Merkel Furniture and Carpets in Chelsea, 475-8621.

Almost every energy-related innovation of the past century has come from small business—for example, the air conditioner, the gasoline engine, the electric light, the electric auto, and petroleum cracking.

Council Okays Repair Work on Cemetery Gates

The village council voted unanimously last Tuesday night to spend up to $2,000 as its share of the cost of repairing the entrance gates into Oak Grove Cemetery on Madison St. at the east end of Middle St.

The cemetery board will pay the rest of the bill, which is now estimated at $4,000 for cement and other work needed on the cobblestone structures.

Left undecided was whether the village should contribute to restoring the decorative glass light globes which used to adorn the gates. That cost is estimated at an additional $700.

Several council members expressed concern that the lights, if installed, would almost immediately be broken or shot out by vandals.

That led to a discussion of policing problems in the cemetery—littering, dogs running loose, small children using it as a playground. "The situation is disturbing and disgraceful," said village clerk Evelyn Rosentretter, whose late husband is buried in the cemetery. "The dogs are especially annoying. Why people use a cemetery as a place to exercise their dogs is something I can't understand, but they do."

The council informally agreed to look into possible ways to provide better "law and order" in the cemetery, which is private property and therefore not a prime target for routine police surveillance.

Still undetermined for sure is the answer to who owns the cemetery gates. "I think they are part of the Palmer estate," village administrator Frederick A. Weber said, "but we're still checking. The property descriptions are not entirely clear."

That question became important when Donald Cole proposed to buy from the cemetery association a vacant lot immediately north of the gates and move a house onto it. As first described, the purchase might have left Cole owning the gates and a portion of the driveway into the cemetery.

Acting as the Zoning Board of Appeals, the council approved Cole's request for a zoning change on the lot so he can go ahead with his project, specifying that the gates and the driveway are exempted from the rezoning.

Cole, who was present at the meeting, came up with a classic quote when he said in accepting the decision:

"Look, I'm a funeral director. I'm the last person in the world who is ever going to close the gates into a cemetery."

Forty-nine point twenty-one percent (49.21%) of older persons are homeowners.

Teacher Contract Negotiations On Hold Pending Election

Negotiations between the school board and the Chelsea Education Association, the teacher's union, should begin soon for a new contract for the upcoming school year, according to both sides.

The present contract expires June 30.

Not much has happened yet—just an informal meeting of the two teams—since yesterday's millage vote was crucial to the financial future of the school district. (Election results came in after The Standard's deadline.) Bargaining issues have not been declared by either side.

A decision on whether to try expedited bargaining had not been made as of June 9, said Ann Feeney, school board president, and Cathy Vlcek, CEA president.

That bargaining process, which limits time and the number of issues, was tried in spring of 1982 for the 1982-83 contract, but was not successful. Traditional bargaining was later used, and the contract was settled in August. Chelsea was one of the first districts in the county to settle last year.

Johnson is a seasoned negotiator who has represented the school district in the past, she said.

The CEA team will be led by Dick Gray, chief negotiator, spokesman and representative of the Michigan Education Association. Other members of the team are Jim Winter and Robin Raymond, high school teachers; Bert Kruse, a middle school teacher; and Sally Schlup, a North school teacher.

SPELLING RUNNERS-UP in recent North Elementary school spelling bees are Melissa Thiel, left, second grade; Brian Brock, fourth grade; and Leela Vadlamudi, fifth grade.

Spelling Champions Named at North School

Three grade champions have been named in recent North Elementary school spelling bees. Mark Chasteen is fifth grade champion. He won with the word "detective," and stopped spelling with "detour." Leela Vadlamudi was second.

Kyle Erickson won the fourth grade bee with "freezing." Brian Brock was second.

Henry Alvarez was second grade champion, and Melissa Thiel was runner-up.

Third grade champion was decided yesterday, the last day of school.

The top 10 in each classroom's preliminary round competed in the grade contests.

Third through 10th place overall in the fifth grade were Martha Alvarez, Anne Steffenson, Stephanie Wagner, Grant Kidd, Debbie Gerstler, Julie Tobias, Melinda Fletcher and Amy Thompson.

Third through 10th in the fourth grade were Jason Jarvis, Andy Hafner, Lisa Bills, Tom White, Joey Manns, Jeanene Rossi, Justin White and Matt Francis.

Other second grade finalists (not in order of placing) were Dan Zatkovich, Heidi Wisner, Shanti Vadlamudi, Sam Maynard, Vincent Stahl, Tom Poulter, Kris Herrick and Linda Schaffer.

"We will still do all the engineering, the scheduling, the manufacturing," Green said. "All the prime functions will remain here."

Green said the 38 persons presently employed on the assembly line will be transferred into other types of work at the Chelsea plant, and so will the few white-collar workers whose jobs are directly related to the assembly function.

"We will not cut them off. Dana Corp. has always felt a strong sense of responsibility to its employees, and we will continue to display it."

Employees affected will have the opportunity to move to Memphis and take jobs there if they wish, Green stated. Contracts give them hiring preference for jobs created by plant relocation.

Green will stay here, and said he expects almost all other employees to do likewise. "Things are upbeat for us in Chelsea," he enthused. "We're going to work a full month this June, for the first time in 12 months, and outlook right now is pretty good for July."

The plant has been shutting down one week a month since June, 1982.

Two of Three Planning Comm. Vacancies Filled

Martin Tobin and Craig Coltre have been appointed to new three-year terms on the Chelsea Planning commission, and a replacement is being sought for Phil Hume who resigned because he is moving out of the village.

There have been no applicants for the vacancy, village president Jack Merkel said. He asked for suggestions from council members and the public of names of persons who might be interested in filling the non-paying position.

Council Trying To Legalize Zoning For Fairgrounds

The village council decided last Tuesday night to initiate steps to legalize the Chelsea Community Fair.

"It's clear that the fair is an illegal activity under the wording of our zoning ordinance," village administrator Frederick A. Weber said. "The fairgrounds are zoned A-1, and the only use permitted under that zoning is farming. Nothing else is allowed. It's very restrictive."

The council voted to ask the planning commission to suggest appropriate changes in the wording of the ordinance to make the fair legally legitimate.

At the same time, it approved a motion giving the go-ahead for this year's fair, scheduled Aug. 30-Sept. 3. By that time, it is hoped, the legal problems will be ironed out.

Still hung up is a request from the Fair Board for permission to build a new livestock exhibition pavilion at the fairgrounds. The planning commission declined to act on the request pending council action to clear up the legal confusion.

Class of '33 Started Senior Skip Day

The Chelsea High school Class of 1933, which celebrated its 50th reunion June 11, started a tradition still observed now—senior skip day. It was May 13 this year.

In 1933 Dave Mohrlock, then secretary of the school board, caught one of several groups of students on their way out of town. They went in small groups, said Mildred Tompkins Collyer, so they wouldn't be as conspicuous. "We are also reasonably certain we started the first student council," she said, and Katie Staffan Wagner was president of it.

Anna Geddes Kuehn, now of Ann Arbor, was valedictorian. Earl Poore was school district superintendent.

The school they graduated from was on the present site of the aptly-named Schoolhouse Apartments. The big rock which is painted on traditional occasions was between the sidewalk and the street, said Mrs. Collyer. It was partially buried and legend said it was a meteor. Students sat and stood on it for class photographs.

"On the Sidewalks of New York" was a popular dance tune, she said, and silent movie matinees at the Princess Theater, where Merkel Furniture and Carpets is now, cost 10 cents.

Of the original 36 class members, 28 are still living. Most reside in Washtenaw county, but some live in the states of Indiana, Florida, Arizona, Montana and Texas.

One of their teachers is still living. Virginia Bareis, who taught English and speech, now resides in California. Ruth Dancer, who was the librarian, is now deceased. Class members doing research for the reunion tried to track down their other teachers, but couldn't find out anything about their whereabouts.

The prophecies made in 1933 are fun to look at 50 years later. Paul Reichert, now a veterinarian, was to be a New York City political boss. Katie Staffan Wagner, who now manages the Dexter Cider Mill, was to be "set up in a beautiful home and marry her persistent suitor," which she did.

Luella Houston, a registered nurse who recently retired as supervisor of a hospital in Texas, was to be a painter in Paris. Mrs. Collyer, who has been a licensed practical nurse, was to have been a "teacher in Alaska." She was voted "Most Athletic Girl" in 1933, and now she runs with other senior citizens.

Anne Grau Fulford, who has been a beautician, was to "have a charming home and give helpful hints to hopeful housewives."

Reunion festivities began with a social hour at 3 p.m. Saturday, June 11 at the Chelsea Rod and Gun Club. Dinner followed at 5:30 p.m.

The program was short to allow lots of time for catching up on 50 years of news.

THE INTERIOR GREENHOUSE in the house Chelsea and Dexter students in the building trades course constructed this year is also a solar atrium. In winter the heat which collects here is stored in the heat mass of the brick wall to the left and slowly emitted. It can also be vented into the living room. In summer heat may be vented outside. Four sliding glass doors connect the greenhouse to the living, dining and family rooms and to the entranceway. One could put in plantings either in the ground section of the floor or hang them, and it has plumbing connections for a hot tub. Dexter students working on finishing details last week are Lon Danner, standing on the deck; Kim Allen on the ladder in the foreground; and Jerry Stoll on the ladder in the background.

Interior Greenhouse Featured In Building Trades House

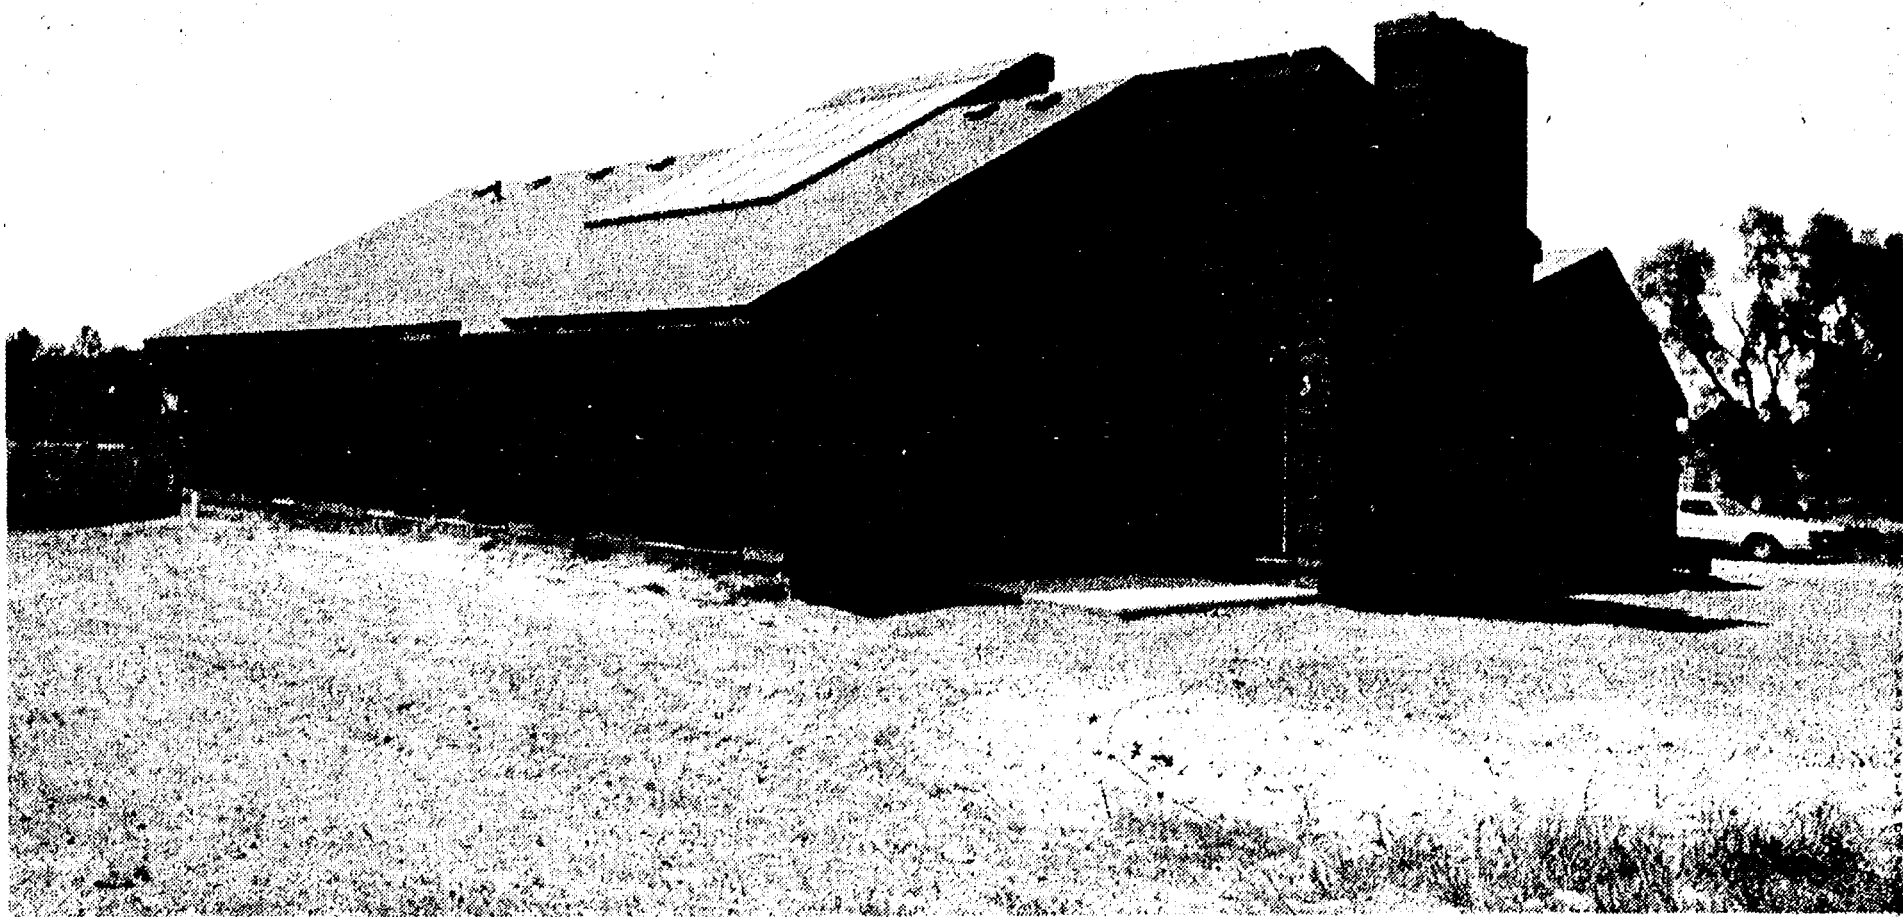

The eye-catching feature of the three-bedroom building trades house built by Chelsea and Dexter students on a one-acre lot at 2264 Weber Dr., Dexter, is the interior greenhouse.

But it's more than an attractive space ideal for plants—it is part of the home's energy-conserving passive solar qualities.

In winter, the enclosed, unheated greenhouse heats up during the day. Excess heat is stored in the heat mass of the brick wall and slowly emitted or vented into the living room. During summer heat is vented out-

THE BUILDING TRADES HOUSE, as seen from the south, at 2264 Weber Dr., Dexter, has passive solar qualities such as the skylights on the roof and the sliding glass doors on the first floor, which let in lots of sunlight in winter. The roof overhang will cut off sunlight in summer, however, to help keep the house cool. Since doors from the kitchen and living, dining and family rooms lead outside, this side of the house would be ideal for a wooden deck with a vine-covered trellis. The 1,673 square-foot ranch is on a one acre lot.

Building Trades Solar House Is Most Ambitious Project Yet

As end-of-the-school-year projects go, the passive-solar building trades house at 2264 Weber Dr., Dexter, has to rank as the biggest, one of the most impressive, and most expensive.

The latter may be the program's death knell. Chelsea school board voted in May to drop the program because enrollment didn't justify the costs and risks of students building a home in a weak housing market.

Dexter, which was fiscal agent for the house this year and which supplied the teacher for the course, "would like to see the program continue and flourish," said David Mills, business manager of the district. Dexter school board has taken no action on the program.

The housing market isn't the only financial factor. Of the five school districts in the South and West Washtenaw Consortium, which co-ordinates a sharing of vocational programs such as building trades, four had millage votes yesterday. Chelsea and Dexter are among the four.

Until the votes are in and districts make budget decisions, the future of building trades and other consortium programs is unsure, said David Mieras, consortium assistant superintendent.

continue the program, said Mieras.

Greg Briggs, building trades instructor for this year's house, says he believes the housing market is improving and hopes the schools don't make their decisions too quickly—"I haven't given up!"

For a long time the only persons who expressed interest in last year's house were out-of-work carpenters and plumbers, he said, who inquired for jobs when they saw one of the few houses in the county being built.

This year's solar house has gotten much more attention, he said. In the past few months, the average rate of visitors and inquiries is two or three a week. Because of the expressed interest, he was optimistic an offer would be made at either the open house June 11 or sometime this week.

Time has become a factor now, he said. If a house is to be built, land must be bought, architectural plans chosen and construction details worked out before school begins.

The up-in-the-air status of the program in recent years has hurt its enrollment, he said. Students have to choose their classes before they are sure the program will be offered, and re-scheduling isn't attractive to them.

Chelsea students in the program this year ate their lunch on the bus to save scheduling time. (The program takes three class slots.) That doesn't sound like a big deal to an adult, said Briggs, but one has to remember lunch is the major social contact time in high school and these students missed it all year.

The program shouldn't be looked on as merely training for future carpenters and plumbers, he said. Few of the students become professionals.

Since a home is usually one's biggest investment in life, most of the students want to learn how to shop, buy and maintain a home, he said. If one doesn't know how a house is constructed,

Girls Softball Team Loses in Finals of Regional Tourney

They made it to the final eight for only the third time in the history of the program, but the Bulldog softball team lost to Allen Park St. Francis Cabrini, 6-4, in Saturday's Class B regional at Oak Park. That ended the quest for a second state championship.

The team made seven defensive errors in the regional finals, and that turned out to be crucial, said coach Charlie Waller. "We needed to play one of our best games to win."

"That just happens sometimes," he said. It was one of those "kick and boot" games.

In 1980 Chelsea made it to the semi-finals of the state tournament. Last year when they won it all was the only time the Bulldogs have made it to the final two.

The regional final certainly wasn't a walk-over. Chelsea had the bases loaded in the bottom of the seventh, but couldn't get a big hit to bring in runners, said Waller.

The Bulldogs scored most of their runs in the final innings, he said, when Cabrini started getting nervous and making mistakes.

Game momentum was going Chelsea's way in the first few innings, he said, but it swung Cabrini's way at the beginning of the fourth when Chelsea wasn't scoring.

Cabrini had a two-run homer in the second and got up to six points run-by-run after that big hit.

Donna Popovich pitched a five-hitter for the Bulldogs. She had 14 really good innings that day, said Waller, but there were mistakes made behind her in the finals.

Although Saturday was hot and muggy, the heat didn't make a difference, said Waller. "We tend to play better in warm weather."

They certainly played well in their 4-1 win over Dearborn Heights Crestwood, the first game of the regional. Waller couldn't remember any defensive mistakes in that game. The defense was "outstanding."

Popovich pitched a two-hitter. Underclassmen on the team have a week off before the season begins in the Ann Arbor fast pitch league for girls ages 13-15 and 16-18. Bill Wescott, junior varsity coach, will coach the younger girls, and Waller will coach the older team. There are still positions open on these two Chelsea teams.

Traditionally the recently-graduated seniors have not played on the Chelsea fast-pitch teams, said Waller. They tend to play for other teams or take a break, playing slow pitch or not at all.

Coaching Vacancies Posted in Schools

Even though a notice listing 22 vacancies on the Chelsea athletic coaching staff has been posted on school bulletin boards, there is no apparent mass exodus of coaches, athletic director Ron Nemeth says.

"We go through this every spring," Nemeth said. "The school district's contract with teacher stipulates that present coaches must notify me by May 15 if they wish to be reappointed. After that date, the positions are theoretically vacant and I have to announce them as being open."

"For one reason or another may of the coaches don't get their letters in by May 15. In most cases it's a matter of forgetting to do it. When they are reminded, they put in the applications."

Nemeth said that, as of the middle of last week, he knew of only four coaches who definitely plan to quit.

Pat Clarke's resignation as boys track coach and junior high wrestling coach was announced last month. Bert Kruse is leaving as an assistant in boys track. Both will continue coaching in other sports.

Also definite are the resignations of Paul Terpstra as boys junior varsity basketball coach and Cheryl Vogel as girls eighth-grade basketball coach, Nemeth said. Terpstra plans to continue coaching girls JV basketball.

"Otherwise, I expect everybody to be back," Nemeth said, "but I won't know for sure until I hear from all of them."

A problem this year is uncertainty over the immediate future of some sports, especially at the junior high level. Several were slated to be dropped if the 2.9-mill school tax increase failed to win approval at yesterday's special election.

"I think some coaches involved in those activities may have decided to wait and see how the election turns out," Nemeth said.

He acknowledged that there is a problem in recruiting coaches for some sports because the pay is relatively low for the amount of time, effort and personal expense required.

"Some of our coaches are registered officials in their sports," he pointed out, "and they can make more money officiating that they can coaching. For instance, we have a person presently in the school system well qualified to coach boys track, but he's so much in demand as a starter and timer that it would cost him money to take the coaching job. One of our basketball coaches is in the same situation. He would be better off financially to quit coaching. I hope we can get him back, but I'm not sure."

ALL-LEAGUE HONORS: Bulldog girls softball team dominated league games and league post-season honors, with five of the 11 first team spots, one second team position and one honorable mention.

Lady Bulldogs Dominate All-League, All-Region Teams

Chelsea, the team that dominated league softball—winning the league title for the fifth consecutive year, also dominated the recently announced all-league and all-region teams.

The Bulldogs had five of the 11 players on the all-league first team, and four of the 11 spots on the coaches' all-region first team. That is more league and region awards than ever before, said coach Charlie Waller. The format of league awards changed this year so the top two teams could nominate seven, the middle teams, five, and the other teams, three.

Donna Popovich, a senior and the team's number one pitcher, has been named to the Class B coaches' all-region first team, the Ann Arbor News' all-region first team, the News' all-tournament first team for the county tournament, and was a unanimous choice for the all-league team.

Her teammates chose her as Most Valuable player this year. Popovich, who has a won-loss record of 12-3 (as of the district tournament) has faced 388 batters, had 91 strike-outs, 19 bases on balls, and an earned run average of .58. Of the 51 hits she gave up, there were only five doubles, two triples and two home-runs.

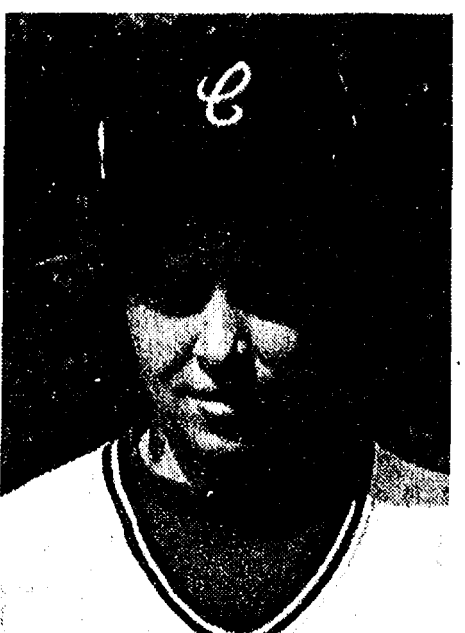

Amy Hume, senior co-captain and second baseman, is on the coaches' all-region first team, the News' all-region first team, and was a unanimous choice for the all-league first team in the infield.

Hume leads the team in hitting with a .388 average and in runners-batted-in (RBI), 29.

Joyce Robards, a junior and catcher, was named to the coaches' all-region first team, the News' all-region second team, and the all-league first team. She is fourth in hitting percentage, .357, and has had 18 RBIs.

Lisa Beeman, a senior outfielder, made the coaches' all-region first team and the all-league first team. She has had 19 RBIs and a .344 hitting percentage.

Jane Verway
Most Improved Player

The other Bulldog on the all-league first team is infielder Celeste Powell, senior co-captain who played third base and shortstop. She ranks second in hitting percentage, .366, led the team in doubles, and had 22 RBIs.

Kim Forner, senior first baseman, was named to the all-league second team as an infielder. She has had 18 RBIs. Cathy Doll, senior third baseman and shortstop, received an honorable mention to the all-league team as an infielder. She has had 25 RBIs and 18 stolen bases.

Jane Verway, a senior and the team's premier base-stealer (20 so far), was chosen by her teammates as Most Improved Player.

Chelsea took the league title with an 11-1 record followed by Saline, 9-3; Dexter, 7-5; Milan, 6-6; Tecumseh, 3-9; Lincoln, 2-10 and Jackson County Western, 1-11.

The coaches chose Walt Koppeler of Dexter as the coach of the year in region 3.

Softball News Depends On Help from Participants

We are into the softball season, and The Standard wants to do the best possible job of covering the more than 75 teams which play softball in this community.

To do that will require the co-operation of coaches, managers and team representatives in getting information to us in a timely and printable way. We ask your help.

Our deadline for news is noon on Saturday. While we can handle a few important, late-breaking items after that time we have to be selective in order to meet our Monday noon printing schedule. We do not work on Saturday afternoon or Sunday. Anything brought in or phoned in after Saturday noon will be accepted on an "if we can do it" basis. Written reports are much preferred over telephoned reports, for obvious reasons. The chance for error in transcribing phone calls is considerable.

We do not ask for a finished-product news story. It is our job to produce those and, frankly, persons without professional training and experience who try to "write news" almost always come up with something that has to be rewritten.

We want facts and information. In the case of a softball game we want to know which two teams played where and when, who won, what was the score by innings, how many runs, hits and errors for both teams, who were the winning and losing pitchers, who hit well and drove in runs, who made outstanding plays in the field. It can all be put down into about a dozen lines of typewriter copy. And, by the way, we would appreciate your using a typewriter. Most handwriting is hard to read and slows us down.

Not everything you turn in will be printed. Our space is limited. We will do the best we can with what we have to work with.

Your co-operation will make it possible for us to give you the kind of coverage that you will appreciate. We will, in summary, print from what we get. We will not try to track down reports that do not reach us in timely fashion.

Chelsea Athletes Train for Triathlon

Twinkies are one of the inspirations for Nancy Cooper, one of three Chelsea athletes entering the Brighton triathlon this Saturday at Burroughs Farm, a one-mile swim, 25-mile bike ride and seven-mile run.

As long as she maintains her triathlon training schedule of running 10 miles daily, swimming one to two miles every other day and taking occasional 25 to 40 mile bike rides, she can eat as many Twinkies as she wants without gaining weight.

Kristin Thomas, a recent graduate of Chelsea High school, says she's doing the triathlon because Cooper talked her into it and because one of her former swim coaches piqued her curiosity about triathlons by entering the Iron Man in Hawaii.

The triathlon of triathlons, the Iron Man is swimming more than two miles in the surf, a 112-mile bike ride, finished with a traditional running marathon of more than 26 miles.

Von Acker, high school girls and middle school swimming coach, says he's doing the Brighton event to get in shape for the August Ann Arbor Blathalon, a one-mile swim followed by a six-mile run.

After this triathlon, he said, the biathlon will be a "piece of cake."

Although the idea of swimming that far in a cold lake and biking and running that distance on a hilly course on a summer's day is enough to send most folks to the refrigerator for a sustaining drink, these three athletes say it's easier than a running marathon.

The appeal of triathlons is variety, they said. One's fitness is more balanced. Swimming develops one's upper body; running, the legs; and biking, the thigh muscles, and neck and biceps from the crouched position.

Another basic appeal is to be able to say "I did it," said Cooper, a special education teacher at Chelsea High school. She has finished three marathons and wanted to do something different.

All the exercise makes her healthier, she said, and helps relieve the stress of teaching. She meditates while she trains, which she always does alone.

She is getting very close to 35, and all this training is like an elixir of youth—it keeps her feeling young, she said.

Acker, 31, agrees with her on that. He made a vow at 28, he said, that he would be in better shape when he was in his 30s.

Thomas' biggest advantage will be her youth, said Acker and Cooper. But Kristin, captain of the girls swimming team this year, has more than youth on her side. At swimming camp one summer, she swam 10 miles in seven hours. She is also a former member of the girls track team and runs daily.

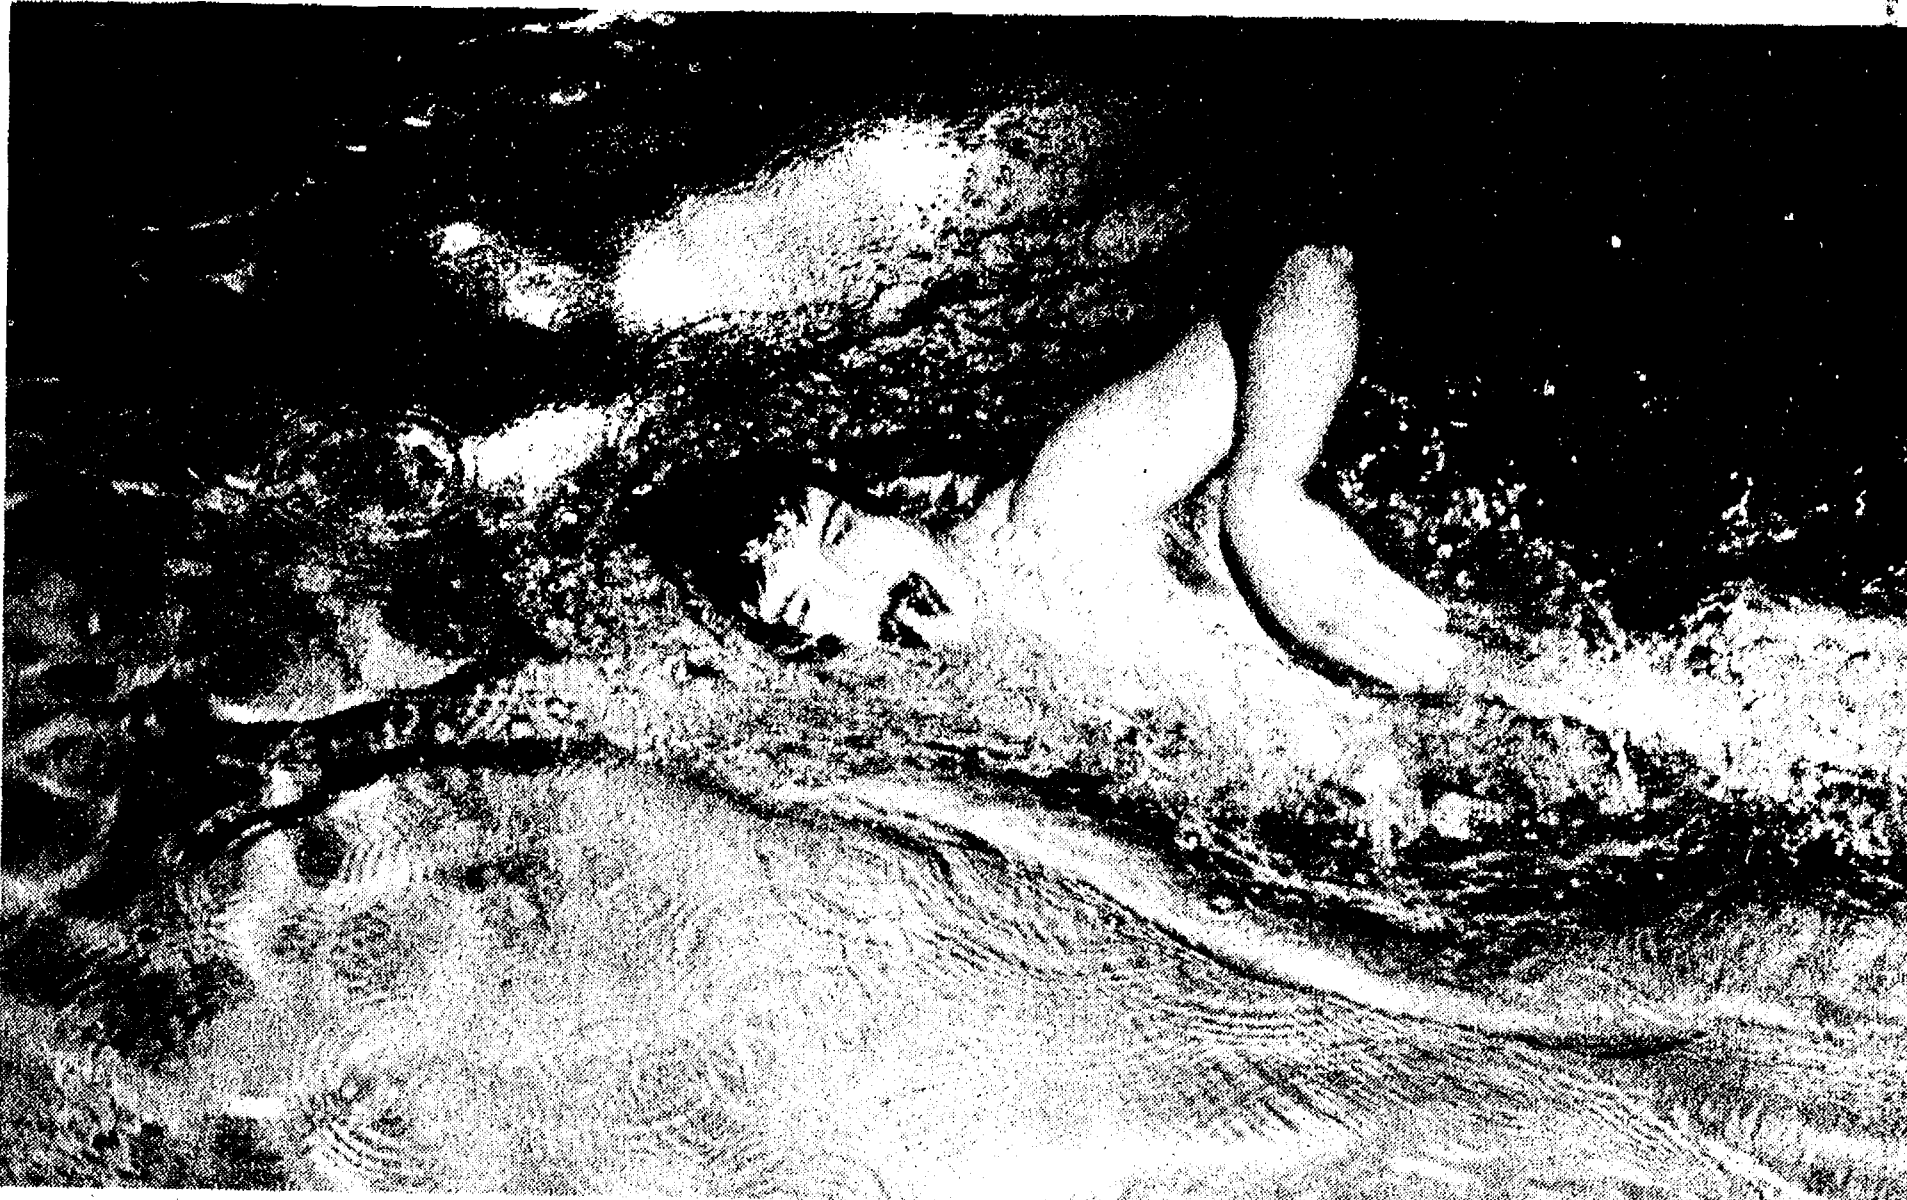

None of them expect the event to be easy, however, or to win. They just want to finish.

Thomas' concern is the running at the end and the muscular transition from bicycling. For Cooper, it's the lake swimming. A friend of hers did the triathlon last year and had trouble swimming straight. One must use the buoys as guides instead of a swimming pool's lane lines on the bottom. Cooper had Acker teach her how to breath on both sides to even out her stroke.

For Acker, it's his bicycle and the strep throat that knocked him out of training for three weeks. His bicycle wasn't working last week when he was interviewed, and he got teased by his fellow triathletes about having to carry it instead of riding it.

If one's bike breaks down on the course, the competitor must fix it by himself. Cooper took a crash course in bicycle repair last week.

Although they plan to drink lots of juice, water and electrolyte replacement drink during the competition, none of the Chelsea competitors planned to eat that day.

VON ACKER, varsity girls swimming coach, middle school swimming coach and co-coach of the Chelsea Aquatic Club, says he expects the one-mile lake swim, the first event in the Brighton Triathlon, to be his strongest leg. A course marked by buoys will be set up in Crooked Lake.

NANCY COOPER, one of the three Chelsea athletes entered in the Brighton Triathlon this week-end, practices her bicycling for the 25-mile ride. If one's bike breaks down during the race, the competitor must repair it alone, so she took a quick course in bicycle repair last week.

KRISTIN THOMAS, a recent graduate of Chelsea High school, has been running daily to prepare for the final seven-mile run in the Brighton Triathlon this Saturday. Experienced triathletes say it takes about three miles of running to make the muscular transition from bicycling, the middle event.

would need a sponsor to be able to afford it.

An Ann Arbor policeman who has entered the Iron Man is one of those people who can get by on four or five hours of sleep a night.

Thefts from Parked Cars Reported

It's fishing season, and one sign of it is reports of cars being broken into while parked at public access sites on local lakes.

Sgt. Don Wenk of the sheriff's department Chelsea station said he knows of two such incidents so far this spring, one at Four Mile Lake and the other at Mud Lake. Fishing tackle, a spare tire and other items were taken.

Wenk said he has assigned extra patrol effort to the fishing sites, and asked persons who observe any suspicious activity to report it to the sheriff's office.

He also urged users of the sites to lock their vehicles and put everything of value out of sight, preferably in a locked trunk.

The nice thing about working in the news business is that you get to meet a lot of people, and all of them are interesting in one way or another. The best thing is that you get to know a few truly outstanding people who change your life and leave their imprints on your future.

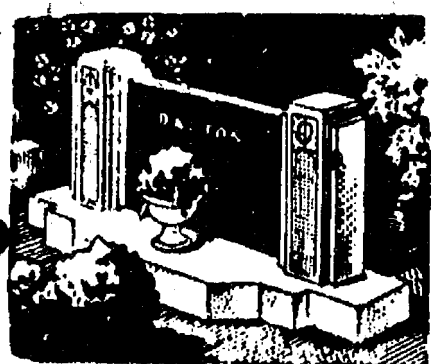

One such individual in my personal history was Dorias J. Curry, who died a couple of weeks ago at his home in Marquette in the Upper Peninsula. Unless you have been a close follower of the affairs of the Michigan Department of Natural Resources over the years, his name will mean nothing. Yet, to me, he is one of maybe half a dozen out of the thousands of persons I have known whom I can honestly characterize with the word "remarkable." In the modern-day vernacular, Dorrie Curry was "something else."

Writing about him is not easy because it is hard to know where to begin. He was, among other things, the youngest lumber camp foreman in the history of Michigan's timber industry, a position he achieved while still in his teens. If you know anything at all about the lore of lumber camps, that will tell you something about the man.

Curry joined the DNR in 1925 at the age of 18 as a forest fire fowerman, became a fire warden and a conservation officer. He rose through the ranks about as rapidly as the rules allowed until he was named regional chief for the Upper Peninsula in 1948. He held that post until 1963 when he moved to Lansing as deputy director for field operations, the most critical job in the department under the organizational set-up that then existed.

Dorrie hated every minute of his life in Lansing and in 1966 volunteered for a demotion that took him back to the UP, swearing that he would never again cross the Mackinac Bridge from north to south. So far as I know, he never did. He loved the Upper Peninsula with a passion that only natives of that harsh and rugged region can understand or appreciate.

It was said of Curry that he knew the UP as well as he knew his own knuckles which had served him well in many a bare-fisted brawl. They called him "King Curry" up there, with good reason. He ran the place, taking a back seat to nobody including governors and other politicians, whom he despised on general principles. The Upper Peninsula was and remains a land where livings are extracted from natural resources, and Curry was in charge of those. He called the shots, and woe unto anybody who got in his way.

FREE HEARING TESTS

Jackson, Mich.—Free electronic hearing tests will be given on Monday, June 20th thru Thursday, June 23rd from 9 A.M. to 5 P.M. at Beckord's Hearing Aid Center.

A hearing aid specialist will be available to give these free tests at 2922 Wildwood Ave.

The tests have been arranged for anyone who suspects they are losing their hearing. Such persons generally say they can hear but cannot understand conversation. Hearing with the latest electronic equipment will indicate whether it can be helped electronically.

Everyone, especially those over 60, should have an electronic hearing test at least once a year. If there is a hearing problem, a free electronic hearing test may reveal that newly developed methods of correction will help, even for those who have been told in the past that a hearing aid would not help them.

For those wishing the free test but want to avoid waiting, an appointment for a specific day and time may be arranged by phoning (517) 782-5724.

These free hearing tests are given for the purpose of making selections and adaptations of electronic hearing instruments.

Available for inspection on the test days will be the All-In-The-Ear hearing aid which is especially designed for nerve deafness.

Poll Shows Hunters Generally Satisfied With Michigan Laws

Michigan hunters are overwhelmingly opposed to proposals to change the opening date of the firearm deer season, according to a survey conducted by Michigan Out-of-Doors, the monthly magazine published by the Michigan United Conservation Clubs.

They also are opposed to allowing crossbow hunting for deer, the survey showed. And they don't care much for the put-and-take pheasant hunting program.

Those were among the opinions expressed on questionnaires returned by more than 1,100 readers of the magazine, which is distributed throughout the state.

They voted 79 percent against changing the start of the deer season from the traditional Nov. 15 opening date.

The sentiment against legalizing crossbows for deer hunting was almost as great (78 percent). Many of the respondents feared that permitting the use of crossbows would play into the hands of poachers.

Michigan's discredited put-and-take pheasant program drew little backing from survey participants. Sixty-five percent of those replying indicated they do not support the program. In response to sportsmen's lack of enthusiasm for the program, the Legislature has ordered the Department of Natural Resources to phase it out.

On the positive side, respondents indicated by a wide margin (77 percent) that they are generally satisfied with hunting opportunities in Michigan.

But they are not satisfied (56 percent negative) with existing hunting regulations. Nor do they believe enforcement of regulations is adequate (68 percent negative).

There was more agreement on the issue of mandatory hunter safety training than on any other question in the survey. No less than 81 percent of the hunters responding believe that Michigan should require hunter safety courses for all first-time hunters, regardless of age. MUCC has been pushing a measure in the Legislature to bring this about.

Hunters heavily favored (64 percent) an earlier start for waterfowl hunting in the northern two-thirds of the state than in the southern Lower Peninsula.

By almost the same margin (63 percent), they went on record in favor of banning lead shot in areas of heavy hunting pressure and high waterfowl concentrations. Waterfowl have been poisoned after ingesting lead shot pellets in these areas.

The majority of respondents (58 percent) think the state should conduct a limited elk-hunting season with hunter chosen by lottery.

Complete results of the hunting survey appear in the July issue of Michigan Out-of-Doors, which is now available on newsstands.

ICB Computerized Job Matching Put to Work

Computer technology has been incorporated into an innovative service for businesses: the Interagency Collaborative Board (ICB) Job Placement Service. Operating on a limited basis since February, 1983, this service is now offered to all county businesses.

The ICB Job Placement Service was established with start-up funds from the federal government. At the end of the start-up period this service will be run under public auspices. Due to an increased volume of job orders and repeat orders from satisfied businesses the ICB Job Placement Service is ready to serve all businesses in the county.

Brochures describing the ICB Job Placement Service have been mailed to several hundred businesses. To ensure total availability, ICB staff are delivering over 2,000 brochures to businesses in every community in the county.

This service can routinely translate a telephoned job order into qualified candidates scheduled for interviews by the employer within 48 hours. Unique or hard to fill occupations sometimes require additional time.

Based on a job order taken by telephone, the staff programs the employer's requirements. Within seconds, the computer provides a list of candidates qualified on the basis of skill requirements, experience and educational background. ICB staff immediately review the application submitted by each candidate selected for referral to screen for special features sought by the employer. The number of candidates requested by the employer are referred for interview according to the employer's instructions. This service does not select employees. Final selection is made by employers from the qualified candidates referred to them by the ICB staff. No fee or cost is incurred by employers for this service.

The computer skills bank includes several hundred county residents seeking employment. Applications are processed into the computer at a rate of 15 per day. As the skills bank increases in number, the diversity of occupational backgrounds available also increases. Over 100 occupations are currently in the computer bank. These skills range from applicants with backgrounds in sales, office clerical, computer operations, medical, occupational, managerial, technical and professional occupations.

Any agencies or organizations that provide for human service needs in Washtenaw county may serve as registration points for job seekers who wish to be entered into the skills bank. The ICB Job Placement Service is sponsored by the Interagency Collaborative Boards (ICBs) of Ann Arbor and Washtenaw county. These are established and successful organizations of business, government, education, labor and community-based organizations.

Aquatic Club Members Post Career Best Times

Several Chelsea Aquatic Club swimmers had career best times at the Golden Serpent's B-C U.S. swimming meet June 4 in East Lansing.

Age group swimming now has events and meets ranked A, B and C, with A being the fastest. One moves up ranks by meeting time standards, so a child could be swimming an A 50 free but a C 200 butterfly.

At some meets, mixed sex relays are swum, such as the 11-12-year-olds at this meet.

An asterisk beside a name or event in results submitted by coaches denotes a career best time.

Three Wild Turkeys Expected To Hatch Eggs Any Day Now

There is good news on the local wild turkey front. Three radio-collared hens are known to be incubating clutches of eggs, and hatching is expected any day.

Locations of the nests are known but will not be disclosed. All are close to possible sources of human disturbance.

Other hens believed to be still alive after being released in the Waterloo Recreation Area late last winter may also have mated and nested. That cannot be confirmed because the remaining birds were not equipped with radio transmitters, which emit beep signals that can be monitored.

In all, 10 hens and five toms, imported from Iowa, were released at two Waterloo area sites. The birds scattered widely, and one hen was killed by a predator.

If the three hens known to be incubating succeed in hatching and rearing young, it will be a positive sign that wild turkeys can be established in this part of Michigan.

Card of Thanks 16

CARD OF THANKS

I wish to thank all my friends, neighbors, and relatives for the cards, flowers, gifts and visits that helped make my 95th birthday so very enjoyable. Mrs. Bert (Edith) White.

CARD OF THANKS

Sincere thanks to our children, Lynda, Gary, Karen, and their families who helped put together the open house in honor of our 40th anniversary. Special thanks to all our friends, neighbors and relatives who helped in various ways to make it a memorable afternoon. We greatly appreciate all the cards and gifts. It was a day that will always be remembered. Wilbert and Helen Koch.

CARD OF THANKS

We, the family of Wilbur C. Calcut, wish to express our most sincere thanks to all for your many prayers, food and expressions of sympathy during his illness, and our time of sorrow with the loss of our husband, father and grandpa. Doris Calcut. David, Thomas, Mark, Edward and Theresa Calcut. Nelson, Catherine and Paul Wesenberg.

THANK YOU

My sincere thanks to my many relatives and friends for the many prayers, masses, spiritual bouquets that brought me through successful surgery. Many beautiful flowers and so many beautiful cards. All this has really kept my spirits up while in the hospital and since my return home, and such delicious food, and for all the visits and telephone calls. God love you all. Leone Weber.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank the entire congregation and pastor for the birthday party in honor of their 90th birthday, the many cards, greetings flowers and cakes were greatly appreciated. God bless you all. Mattie Lucht and Batie Englehart wish to thank Dorothy and Jack Fowler for the birthday party in honor of their 90th birthday. The many cards, greetings, flowers and cakes were greatly appreciated. God bless you both.

THANK YOU

I would like to take this opportunity to thank the following people: Washtenaw County Sheriff's Dept., especially Detective Edwards and Detective Ruger, Denise Martell, Joseph Merkel, Craig Wales, Allen Conklin, and finally Superintendent Ray Van Meer. Again Chelsea, thanks for giving us the chance to help our community, we take our hats off to you. Harold Allen, President, Chelsea Jaycees.

Chelsea won't be getting any federal money this year to upgrade its sewage treatment plant. That was made clear last week in a letter to the village from Valdas V. Adamkus, administrator of the Chicago regional office of the federal Environmental Protection Agency.

Fingerprint File Set Up for Grades, Middle School Children

More than 600 children in the Chelsea elementary and middle schools were fingerprinted during a program recently sponsored by the Chelsea Jaycees.

Purpose is to put fingerprints on file so that the children can be identified in possible emergency situations. The prints do not go into the "criminal" file and are kept separately.

Harold Allen, president of the Chelsea Jaycees, said the response was so good that a "makeup day" will be scheduled shortly. This will give an opportunity for those who missed the program to take late advantage of it.

The Standard will publish the date and location of the make-up session.

Beginning in September, kindergarten classes will be offered the opportunity to have prints taken. This will be done every year, Allen said, in a continuing program sponsored by the Jaycees.

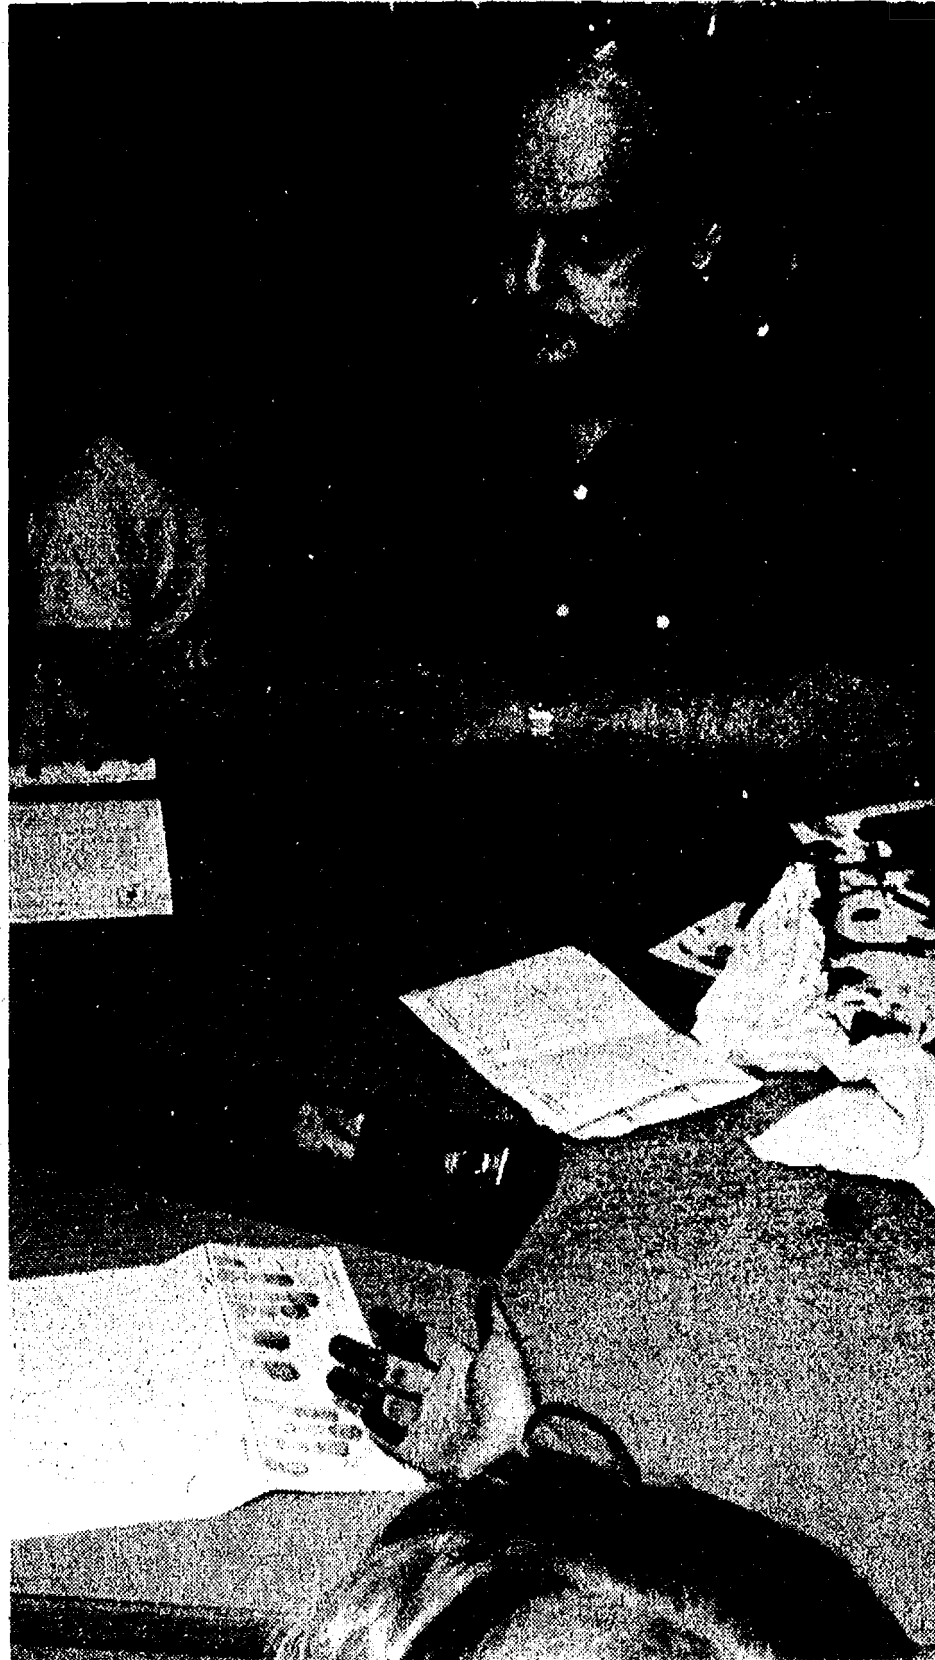

Allen expressed thanks to Joe Merkel, Denise Martell, middle school principal Alan Conklin, the sheriff's department and conservation officer Craig Wales for their help in the fingerprinting effort.

Fingerprints provide the only certain means of identification of any person, young or old. It is said that no two sets of prints are exactly alike among all the people who have ever been born in the world. That may seem hard to believe, but experts who examine prints under the microscope insist it is true.

Commended By Dean At Northwestern U.

Katherine S. Ullman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph L. Ullman of 20931 Island Lake Rd., Chelsea, received dean's commendation at Northwestern University for winter quarter.

That honor is given to students who have at least a 3.75/4.0 grade point average.

FINGERPRINTS TAKEN: Joe Merkel takes the fingerprints of an elementary school pupil while another youngster shows off her ink-smudged hand and the printed record that it made. Merkel, who is a village council trustee, volunteered his services to help the Chelsea Jaycee project.

Zoning Requests Approved

Acting as the Zoning Board of Appeals, the village council last Tuesday approved zoning variances which will allow the Knights of Columbus and BookCrafters, Inc., to go ahead with construction projects.

At the same time the council decided to look at present procedures for handling zoning matters, and perhaps make some changes. As things stand, the council decisions must now go back to the planning commission which sent the matters to the council in the first place.

Then the council has to act again, this time as the council and not as the zoning board.

"It seems to me we're doing something backwards here," village president Jack Merkel commented. "We have built in delays while we bounce things back and forth. Since the council has the responsibility for the final decision, we shouldn't have to make it twice. All that does is keep people waiting through a bunch of extra meetings that take a lot of time and doesn't really accomplish anything. Maybe the planning commission should act on the site plans first, before the council gets involved."

Both the Knights of Columbus and BookCrafters need site plan approvals from the planning commission, and final formal authorization from the council, in order to proceed.

The Knights intend to rebuild and double the size of a porch at the rear of their building at 20750 Old US-12. That requires a variance from the setback requirement on the east side of the property. The new porch would extend within six feet of the boundary separating the K. of C. hall from the neighboring Wolverine Lounge.

Trustee Joe Merkel, who owns the Wolverine establishment, excused himself from the council meeting while the matter was being considered.

BookCrafters will expand the employee parking lot on the northeast corner of its site at 140 Buchanan St. and in so doing will build within five feet of its property line. The prescribed setback is 25 feet.

The project is intended to ease an on-street parking problem created by BookCrafters' employees who can't get into the existing lot, and also to provide better drainage of the site.

DEBORAH ORŁOWSKI, a native of Chelsea and court recorder of the 14th district court, admires the plaque awarded to Judge Kenneth Bronson by The Washtenaw Trial Lawyers Association.

The Blair Moody Judicial Achievement Award to an outstanding jurist will be presented annually, and Bronson had the honor of being the first recipient.

Judge K. Bronson Chosen for First Blair Moody Award

District Judge Kenneth Bronson has been selected as the first jurist in Washtenaw county to receive the Blair Moody Award for Judicial Achievement.

The new honor, bestowed by the Washtenaw Trial Lawyers Association, follows the 1982 death of Justice Blair Moody, Jr., shortly after his re-election to the Supreme Court of Michigan. Moody's eminence as a member of the legal profession is to be memorialized each year.

Bronson's selection as the initial honoree was acclaimed by fellow judges attending an award banquet this month at the Hotel Sheraton in Ann Arbor. They were Circuit Judges Patrick Conlin, Ross Campbell and Henry Conlin, Probate Judges Rodney Hutchinson and Loren Campbell, along with District Judges Karl Fink, S. J. Elden and George Alexander.

The banquet was characterized by family as well as professional ties. Present for the awarding of the honor was Mrs. Blair Moody, Jr., her two daughters, Diane and Susan, and son, Blair Moody, III. The memorial address at the meeting was delivered by Appellate Judge S. Jerome Bronson, brother of the recipient of the Moody Award.

An engraved plaque was presented to Kenneth Bronson by Donald E. Shelton, Washtenaw trial lawyers president and mayor of Saline. In accepting the award, Judge Bronson said that he was gratified that a large number of lawyers with practices in Ann Arbor gave recognition to a judge who has served so many years in Ypsilanti, and out-county courts.

Judge Bronson has also been recognized by the Chelsea Board of Education and the village councils of Chelsea, Dexter and Manchester at the time he was reassigned to Saline by the chief judge of the district. The Dexter village council in a resolution dated Dec. 13, 1982, commended Judge Bronson for "... rendering exemplary and outstanding service to the people of the Village of Dexter. He was noted for delivering fair and equitable decisions." A resolution dated Dec. 6, 1982 was presented to Judge Bronson by the Chelsea School District expressing their appreciation for his "scholarly approach, humanistic demeanor, and strong sensitivity to the people of Chelsea."

Also honored at the banquet was Elmer E. White, past president of the Washtenaw Trial Lawyers Association. He was presented with the WTLA Outstanding Attorney Award in recognition of his distinguished advocacy of the rights of individuals.
