ONE HUNDRED-FIFTEENTH YEAR—No. 29

CHELSEA, MICHIGAN, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 19, 1984

20 Pages This Week

IT WAS A MERRY TIME: Seven local organizations received unexpected year-end "dividends" from profits earned during last summer's Chelsea Sesquicentennial celebration. Pictured at the presentation ceremony, held at the Wolverine restaurant, were, seated in front: Stephanie Kanten, Lynda Longe and Anne Merkel, members of the sesqui committee; middle row: Angela Smith (Chelsea Area Historical Society), Katherine Wagner (McKune Memorial Library), Kathleen Chapman (Senior Citizens), Treva Winans (Senior Citizens), Phyllis Muncer (Chelsea High School Scholarship Fund); back row: Will Connelly (sesqui committee), Lenard McDougall (police department), Paul Hankerd (fire department), Joe Merkel (sesqui president), Bill Stoffer (Chelsea Community Fair) and Dave McAllister (sesqui committee member).

Sesqui Celebration Profits Distributed to 7 Organizations

It was a merry Yuletide for seven Chelsea organizations, each of which received checks for $1,285 from the Chelsea Sesquicentennial Committee. Presentation of the checks was made by President Joe Merkel at a gala event held in the Wolverine Restaurant Monday evening. The checks, totalling $8,995, were proceeds from the community's historic celebration which involved contributions of effort and money from hundreds of area celebrants and sesqui organization workers. Checks were given to representatives of the fire and police auxiliaries, the Senior Citizens, McKune Memorial Library, Chelsea Community Fair, the Chelsea High School Scholarship Fund and the Chelsea Area Historical Society. Sesquicentennial Committee members present at the award event, in addition to Merkel, were Stephanie Kanten, Phyllis Muncer, Lynda Longe, Anne Merkel, Dave McAllister and Will Connelly. According to Joe Merkel, $2,024.88 remains on hand. Whatever is needed for any last-minute expense items will be paid. The sum of $1,000 will be invested at compound interest for 25 years as a nest-egg for the celebration of Chelsea's 175th anniversary. A residual sum, estimated at $600, will be held by the committee for repainting the Chelsea railroad depot in its original colors. Chelsea's 150th anniversary celebration was distinguished from some of its predecessors by being a financial success.

Customers Thanked For Support

Village officials expressed thanks to local businessmen and private householders for their support and patience during last week's electrical power outage. "We had excellent co-operation," said administrator Frederick Weber. "During the time we were making repairs, it was necessary to shut some customers off for periods of up to a couple of hours. "When our employees told them what we were doing and why, they understood and didn't give us any trouble. That really helped." All repairs were completed Sunday morning and tests showed the power system is working normally.

Home Meal Service Asks Volunteers

Chelsea Home Meal Service is seeking substitute drivers to fill in for the regulars who deliver hot dinners to local shut-ins. "We have a special need for substitutes at this time of year when some of our regular drivers are away on family trips and vacations," said chairman Mary Ann Merkel. The volunteer service takes about an hour per day. The prepared and packaged meals are picked up at the United Methodist Retirement Home and delivered to the recipients. All that is needed are a vehicle and a little time. Persons wishing to volunteer are asked to call Joyce Manley at 475-2795.

Escape Reported At Cassidy Lake; Fugitive Sought

Phillip White, 18, of Detroit escaped from the Cassidy Lake Technical School about 9 p.m. Monday night and was still at large when The Standard went to press. White was serving concurrent sentences of 3-10 years for armed robbery and 4-15 years for breaking and entering.

Power Failure Hits Downtown Business Area

Much of the Chelsea downtown business district was without electrical power for four hours early last Wednesday morning because a simple connecting device, called a terminator, failed. The outage started at 6:10 a.m. and brought out a full complement of village public works, police and fire employees to direct traffic and maintain safety while the trouble was tracked down and solved. Power was restored by 10 a.m. on Wednesday, although village workers had to spend the rest of the week making permanent repairs to the electrical system. Meanwhile, downtown merchants, where asked to co-operate by being sparing in their use of electricity. Primarily affected were businesses on the west side of Main St. between Summit and Railroad Sts. Traffic was routed off Main between Railroad and Middle Sts. for several hours as a precaution against possible falling overhead high-voltage wires. Fortunately, none came down. There were no injuries and remarkably little inconvenience, thanks to the alert action of those responsible to handle an emergency situation. A Standard reporter driving into town early Wednesday morning observed what looked like either a thunderstorm or a fireworks display from a distance of five miles. Neither event seemed likely. Still, there were flashes of what could have been lightning and noises which sounded like the bang of a cannon cracker going off. It turned out that the power failure caused all the pyrotechnics. What happened, according to village administrator Frederick Weber, was this: At about 6:10 a.m., a terminator in the village-owned electric system gave way. The connecting device is supposed to keep moisture from getting into the power cables. A terminator performs the same function that those little yellow plastic clamp-on gizmos do in household wiring. They keep electricity from going where it isn't supposed to. A terminator on the power pole on South St. near the rear of the Post Office short-circuited and sent a surge of electrical overload north through the main cable along the west side of Main, blowing out transformers along the way. The flashing, banging and small fires resulted. "Our first and biggest problem was to find out what the problem was and where it originated," Weber said. "Once they located that, the public works department employees knew what to do, and they did it quickly and efficiently."

Fortunately, Chelsea's electric system is constructed so that power can be routed around a break-down and brought in from other directions. That made quick restoration of minimum service possible. "Our second problem was to find replacement terminators," Weber said, "and we had to go to Bay City to get them. All the terminators and other damaged parts of the system are being replaced, and that's why you see all the trucks and high lifts out there. "Our third problem is to find out why the terminator failed. They aren't supposed to, and we don't have an answer to that one yet." Police, firemen and sheriff's deputies kept both vehicles and pedestrians off the affected section of Main St., just in case a wire burned through and fell. "It could have been a lot worse," Weber summed up. "Our electric system is well protected and has a lot of flexibility that we can use in emergencies. "All of our village employees did their jobs well, and I'm grateful for the help of the sheriff's department. What might have been a really bad situation was handled so that nobody got hurt or was seriously inconvenienced. "What we're trying to do now is see that it doesn't happen again."

The Police Beat Was Quiet As Christmas Approaches

In the spirit of the Christmas season, all was quiet on the police beat this past week. Crime, traffic accidents, fires and the other bad news a reporter expects to pick up appeared to have taken a holiday. There was, of course, the power failure in downtown Chelsea a week ago today. That story had a happy ending in that nobody got hurt and there was very little actual damage. It was a nuisance, not a tragedy.

On Monday evening there was an escape from Cassidy Lake, but that was about all the news on the police blotter when a reporter made his rounds yesterday morning. "It's been unusually quiet," said sheriff's deputy Lee Collier at the Chelsea sub-station. "There hasn't been much going on." Detective Paul Wade, who works out of the Chelsea station, echoed Collier. "I'm working on some old cases," Wade said, "but there is nothing fresh." The Chelsea fire department's log showed three medical emergency runs but no fire alarms. Village police chief Lenard McDougall thumbed through a small stack of incident reports and came up with nothing more than a couple of very petty thefts. "We're on the job as always," McDougall said, "but we haven't

Chelsea Greenhouse Granted FTD Achievement Award

Chelsea Greenhouse, owned by Walt and Sandy Zeeb, has been awarded the Golden Circle Achievement Award by the Florists Trans-world Delivery Association. This national organization, known as FTD, has 21,000 members and only a few member establishments are chosen each year to receive the coveted award. FTD has been in existence since 1910 and Chelsea Greenhouse at 7010 Lingane Rd., has been in business since 1901. Their 15 greenhouses provide more than 43,500 square feet of cover for countless thousands of plants and flowers. In addition, the Zeebs grow 15 acres of cut flowers and German statice in the summer. Through the FTD, orders for flowers originating in the Chelsea area are sent by the Zeebs throughout the world by telegraph, telephone and satellite.

POWER LINE REPAIRS: Dave Klink and Ray Szymoniak work to repair electrical power equipment damaged last Wednesday during a break-down in the Main St. business district. Power was out for about four hours before being restored on a temporary basis. Workers spent the rest of the week making permanent repairs.

Between 4:30 and 4:45 p.m., Tuesday, Dec. 16, Vogel's Department Store fell victim to a substantial larceny of both currency and personal checks.

An employee who had been counting monies taken in was called to the front of the store to both wait on customers and gather more information regarding money intake for that time period. When she returned to her desk, an envelope containing the money had disappeared.

This past girls swimming season was quite a success for the swim team. They experienced an 11-3 dual meet record, took home first-place honors from the Chelsea Invitational, and placed 78th in the Class B State Championships.

Dr. R. J. Ratzlaff, pastor of Covenant church, announced this week that the congregation has purchased the property at 50 N. Freer Rd., which will be used as the church's new site. The land was purchased from Douglas and Janet Stevens.

What does one do with a turkey dinner planned for 1,600 people in the school system—and they close the schools? That was the problem that faced the cooks of the Chelsea schools and business manager, Fred Mills, Tuesday morning, Dec. 22, when the last day of school before Christmas vacation was called off due to hazardous roads.

Chelsea cooks had been preparing the festive pre-Christmas turkey dinner since Thursday of the week before. By Tuesday morning, all that was left to do was to heat and serve the turkey and dressing. Twenty-four 16-pound turkeys and dressing and goodies to feed 1,600 hungry students and faculty sat waiting—but no one was coming to dinner.

Business Manager Mills was called in to help the cooks solve their problems. The turkeys could all be frozen and be served another day. Perishables such as the 22 sheet pies, and 1,600 servings of fruit salad Jell-O, however, had to be distributed somehow. Mills put on his Santa suit and went to work. By the end of the morning, he was able to dispose of all the pies and Jell-O and had contacted the milk and candy company to pick up their shipment.

An official ribbon-cutting ceremony held Monday morning to signify opening to traffic of the new I-94 freeway across the state from Detroit to Lake Michigan is a "milestone" in more ways than one.

Governor-Elect John H. Swainson, speaking at the ceremonies held at 10 a.m. Monday near the Parker Rd. overpass, called it a "milestone for the people of the state of Michigan" and predicted a business boom for all communities along its route as a result of new interstate and state

State Regulations*Being Eased on Business

The chairman of a special legislative committee reviewing state rules reported a lot of progress has been achieved in reducing regulatory burden on businesses, but said much more needs to be done and a permanent oversight committee will be required.

Rep. Michael Griffin (D-Jackson), in releasing an interim report of the committee's action, also acknowledged several issues raised by businesses will remain unresolved because of policy differences with state government.

Griffin said the biggest differences remain in the Department of Natural Resources.

"There is a wide gap between the department's policies and rules and the business section. It will take negotiations with the governor to resolve these issues," he said.

Among the more contentious of those, he said, is the DNR's insistence that power plants use low-sulfur coal, which the department says is necessary to meet federal air quality standards.

Utilities and businesses objected, with the Michigan Manufacturer's Association saying, "This, most likely, is Michigan's most expensive example of regulatory overkill."

Businesses said low-sulfur coal should be required only if ambient air quality standards in specific areas cannot be met, while the DNR imposed a statewide, standard to avoid competitive advantages.

Griffin said utilities believe the DNR is being arbitrary, but added, "Some of these issues will not be resolved. We're asking governor's Cabinet Council to get involved heavily with department heads because they won't do it (ease regulations) themselves."

Griffin said a lot of businesses' problems with the DNR also involves middle management officials making decisions and imposing requirements not supported by rules.

Review Asked on Telephone Charges

The U. S. Supreme Court was asked recently by Attorney General Frank Kelley to review a decision by the federal court of appeals, which imposed monthly "end-user" charges on all business and residential telephone customers.

In his petition, which was filed jointly with the public service commission of Wisconsin, Kelley charges that a 1983 decision by the Federal Communications Commission, upheld by the federal appeals court, which imposes $2 a month for every resident customer and $6 for each line used by a business customer, exceeded that commission's authority.

The charges are to help defray costs in providing long distance and the FCC subsequently amended that order by deferring residential charges until June, 1985.

Business charges went into effect just this past May.

Kelley argued that the breakup of AT&amp;T made telephone companies such as Michigan Bell local telephone companies, which are not subject to FCC requirements.

The FCC rule, he contended, was improperly applied to all local telephone users, regardless of whether they use long distance services.

The fellows spent part of the session at the country store Saturday night looking ahead to the Next Deal out of Washington, and they give a few worried looks back at the Last Deal. It was Zeke Grubb that said he has studied the situation up one side and down the other and he is full convinced that the Republicans are riding high because they out New Dealed the Democrats.

Even mossback Republican Ed Doolittle agreed his party has found it to easy convince folks they really can drink themselves sober. No need to raise taxes, and fergit the federal deficit, Ed said Republicans are preaching, keep things humming and the economy will grow out of all its problems. If that ain't 30s chickens roosting in the 80s, Ed said he'd like to know what is.

Democrat Clem Webster said Ed ain't been reading the papers. Where we're heading, Clem predicted, is to a flat tax that makes ever bit as much sense as a flat world. From what he can read, Clem said, the next tax deal will give new names to old ways to suck blood out of the same old turnips. Per instant, Clem went on, where a feller was paying taxes and taking deductions he's going to pay taxes and not git deductions.

Bug Hookum said comparing the 30s with the 80s called to mind the story that made the rounds then. It seems this woman had twin boys when the country was pulling out of the Great Depression, and she named em Hoover and Roosevelt. The babies was so much alike she got em mixed up and ask her husband if he could tell which was which. He picked up one, looked at him and set him down. He picked up the other one, looked at him, sniffed and held him as far away as his arms would reach.

"This one is Roosevelt," he told his old lady, "because he's done somepun."

The hard fact is, declared Bug, you can change the twins names to Carter and Reagan with pritty much the same bottomline. Fer all their good intentions, Hoover and Carter got caught holding the wrong end of the stick, and like Hoover, Carter and his party are going to be a long time gitting the smell off their hands.

Actual, Clem said, the picture ain't ever that clear. History might say that in 1984 Minnesota was the only state wanted higher taxes, but would that be right? Reagan said he wouldn't raise taxes, Mondale said he would, and you know who voted fer who, was Clem's words.

The best deal to come out of all the noise this year was a plan Zeke cooked up fer gitting out the vote. He perposes setting up election lotteries in ever state. Everybody that votes gits a chance on $1 million tax free in 10 payments. The Federal Government pulls the $50 million out of petty cash, puts it to drawing 12 percent interest and pays off ever year without touching the principal and with interest left over. The biggest bonus would be that everybody would vote, and it wouldn't be a gamble because it wouldn't cost anybody anything but what they ought to do anyhow.

This series of stories by Paula Blanchard, Michigan's First Lady, spotlights the manifest products of Michigan's farms, forests and factories. Some are as familiar as the Ford in your driveway or the jar of Gerber's baby food on your kitchen shelf. Others are less-known, but equally interesting and important to the Michigan economy. This week's story: "What Makes Anthony Run?"

By Paula Blanchard

Most days Anthony takes his time going home. But not today. Today is Wednesday. And Anthony is hot-footing it.

What makes Anthony run? No, Anthony is not heading for the golf course.

He is an 11-year-old kid in a saggy tee-shirt and, like all kids, he is hungry. What he is hungry for is some pasta. And Anthony knows that Wednesday is Prince spaghetti day.

Okay, so you saw the commercial maybe a million times on television and you knew why Anthony was in a hurry.

But did you know that a lot—about 80 million pounds a year—of the famous Prince brand pasta is produced right here in Michigan?

It emanates from a big, white factory (trimmed in red and green, naturally) on Groesbeck Highway in Warren. The folks in Warren like to refer to it as the "spaghetti factory." Actually, spaghetti is only one of the pasta varieties produced there.

In fact, the list of the varieties reads like a casting-call for an Italian opera: linguine, macaronelli, perciatelli, mezzani, riti, rotini, vermicelli, ditalini, tubettini, acine di pepe, mostaccioli, orzo, torroncini, cannelloni, manicotti, cavatelli and rigatello. I was kidding about that last one; it is an Italian opera.

On top of everything else, the company also produces delicious sauces and cheeses.

The Prince brands include a variety of so-called specialty pastas. One is called Superoni. It is a soy-enriched spaghetti and macaroni with 41 percent more protein than most beef cuts.

Another is what the company calls Light Spaghetti. It tastes as good as the Real Thing, but has only about half the calories.

★ Animals Vs. Humans

Recently animal rights protesters staged a raid on the University of Pennsylvania veterinary labs in Philadelphia, where they apparently destroyed years of vital head injury research work.

These animal rights extremists not only took research animals from the lab, but 30 videotapes representing years of research.

Officials said the raid means that 700,000 people who yearly suffer extensive head injuries have been cheated out of receiving potential new treatment.

Seeing that animals are treated humanely is a worthy cause, but when it comes to doing medical experiments, most people would choose animals over humans. Unfortunately, the animal rights group apparently doesn't see it that way.

Whether it's the Christmas spirit at work or just a coincidence, all departments hope the calm continues. "Police and firemen are there to take care of emergencies, but they would rather not have to respond to any. Nobody—cops and firefighters included—enjoys trouble."

McDougall summed it up when he told the reporter, "I'd be happy if I never had to give you another 'bad news' story. I'm sure I will, but let's hope this quiet period lasts awhile."

The reporter agreed, he doesn't like to write bad news, and there was a happy absence of it this past week.

A VIEW from the CLOCK TOWER

Bill Mullendore

This question came up in the office a couple of weeks ago: How do you spell "marijuana"? We wound up spelling it the wrong way if you believe Webster's dictionary, which has "marihuana" as first choice. Except in the dictionary, I haven't seen that version in print a long time.

"Marijuana is a Spanish surname which translates to 'maryjane.' The letter 'j' in Spanish is 'h' in English. Thus the English word, marihuana, which is correct but almost never used.

All of that is more or less beside the point, but the office discussion set me to thinking. Why don't we call the plant what it is, which is hemp (cannabis sativa)? Hemp once had a legitimate and valuable use. It yielded strong fibers which can be twisted and woven into rope. Until synthetics such as nylon and orlon came along, rope was manufactured from hemp grown for the purpose. Nobody thought of smoking the stuff.

A couple of generations ago, the wild version of hemp was called "loco weed," and with good reason. Cattle love it, and eat it as a favored food. It drives them out of what limited minds they have, and cattle aren't very bright.

Wild hemp grows all over the place. A lot of it grew on my grandfather's farm where I spent my summer vacations from school.

Grandpa kept a small herd of milch cows (and that's the right way to spell "milch" when designating a lactating female bovine animal). He retained enough milk to supply household needs and sold the surplus to a local dairy which sent a truck around every day to pick it up.

Cows that got into loco weed were problems. They went crazy. They were next to impossible to run down and herd, and they had to be tied fore and aft to be milked. The milk was no good and had to be thrown away. It looked bad, smelled awful and tasted worse.

Any farmer caught trying to sell milk from cows that had fed on loco weed could be sure that he would never be allowed to sell any more, and so control of wild hemp was high on the priority list of chores to do.

At about age eight, I was taught what the weed looked like, handed a grubbing hoe, and dispatched to the pasture to chop and dig. You couldn't eradicate the weed in those days before herbicides. Hemp is something like quack grass and dandelions in that it springs from vigorous roots which defy elimination. Any rootlet left will sprout a new plant. The best you can do is keep cutting hemp down as it comes up, unless you spray it with 2-4-D or something of that sort.

I don't know how much loco weed I took out of that 40-acre pasture, but it was a bunch. I chopped the plants off at the ground, bundled and tied them, carried the bundles to the fence and threw them over to where the cattle couldn't get at them. After a couple of days of doing that, I hitched a mule to a small wagon, gathered the weeds and hauled them into the barnyard where they were left to dry out and then were burned. My grandfather made sure that I stayed upwind of the fire. He knew what the smoke could do if you inhaled it.

I have to wonder if people—including police officers—know what wild hemp looks like. I see it growing all over the place around Chelsea during the summer. It's not as common as ragweed or goldenrod, but it is plentiful.

Some of the hemp probably is deliberately planted, but I suspect most of it "just grows," like the proverbial Topsy. As someone, who I won't name for obvious reasons, told me last year, "I don't know why people spend good money to buy the stuff when they can get all they want for free just by driving along the back roads and picking it."

I'm told that wild hemp isn't as "good" as the cultivated varieties grown in some places to the south. That may be so. I've never smoked hemp of any kind. After seeing what it does to cattle and cutting it down by the wagon-load, I never had any desire to try smoking it. I hate the stuff on sight.

Several years ago I had a next-door neighbor who grew a luxurious crop of hemp in flower pots on her patio. What she did with it was none of my business. For all I know, she was growing the plants for decorative purposes. Hemp is kind of attractive, better looking than some plants you pay considerable money for at a greenhouse.

The patio backed up to a golf course fairway. Anybody who hooked the ball off the third tee was bound to see the potted plants as he approached his second shot. A bad hook would likely land the ball on the patio itself or very close to it.

Three police officers whom I knew played that course regularly, and I know they sometimes hooked because I played golf with them at times. None of them ever recognized the hemp plants, and none even commented to me about how "pretty" they were.

Coincidentally or not, that same golf course produced a bountiful crop of poisonous mushrooms every summer and fall. Nobody except me ever bothered about those, either. Fortunately, nobody ever picked and ate any before I could destroy them.

'Christmas Around the World' Studied By 3rd-4th Grades

"Christmas Around the World" was hosted at South school by Miss DeVries' fourth grade and Mrs. Hamilton's third grade as it has been for the past four years.

On Thursday afternoon the songs, dances and play were presented to the student body during dress rehearsal in the school cafeteria.

Friday, Dec. 14, families, friends and North school guests of the two classes were invited to attend, followed by refreshments in the Music Room of candles, cookies and punch from Italy, Scotland, Sweden, Denmark and America.

Hours of practice by Mrs. Hamilton's class have gone into the intricate and graceful dance steps of the German "Kinder (Children's) Polka" and the Hungarian "Csobogor." Both classes sang songs in German, Dutch, Japanese and Spanish with the English translations. The fourth grade presented a play featuring many characters representing the customs and beliefs of other countries.

During the preparation for the production, customs of other lands were examined. Many students expressed surprise that the holidays were celebrated differently around the world, and how some of these customs were incorporated into our celebrations. It was important for the students to learn that not everyone in each country shares the same customs and beliefs.

A popular moment in the presentation is the breaking of the pinata, a large suspended hollow paper basket filled with candy and decorated in the shape of an animal. When hit by a blindfolded child carrying a stick, the pinata breaks and there is a scramble for the treats that fall out.

Costumes used in the production are a combination of articles collected over the past five years by both teachers and what the mothers and students have included. Authenticity is stressed to help the audiences see how Santas around the world look and how different cultures celebrate the holidays.

Besides learning old customs, students of Mrs. Hamilton, Mr. Lazzo and Mr. Beard have started a new tradition of their own. Instead of exchanging $1 gifts during their Christmas party, the students voted to donate the money for the Christmas of a family who would otherwise not have the opportunity to enjoy the holiday. The first grade class of Miss Danborn has donated their gift money to the Faith in Action organization based in Chelsea. These gifts send love at Christmas around the world.

Tobogganing, Sledding Safety Tips Offered

Winter sports enthusiasts should follow these "safety tips" concerning the use of toboggans and sleds, according to Chief Park Ranger Howard Chanter, of Kensington Metropark near Milford/Brighton.

The four basic facts concerning safety are outlined as follows:

1. Know the area you are using.
—Check for hidden hazards. Snow may hide logs, stumps, stones or fences.

—Check snow condition before taking your first ride. Frozen snow and ice can cut like broken glass.

—Do not go down any hill when you cannot see the entire length of the ride.

—Do not use areas or hills where there are bumps or drop-off areas.

—Read and obey posted rules and signs.

2. Use proper equipment
—Wear warm clothing and footwear.

—Protect your face and hands with a hat, gloves and a scarf.
—Have a good toboggan pad securely attached to the toboggan at all times.

—Check your toboggan for broken or cracked boards after each run. Do not use broken equipment.

3. Use equipment properly
—A toboggan is very hard to steer, especially on hard packed snow.

—Do not overload toboggans or sleds.

—Be sure to keep arms and legs inside the toboggan or sled. Hold tightly to side ropes and hold the legs of the person behind you under your arms and do not let go.

4. Use area safely

—Do not use sleds and toboggans on the same runs. Sleds cut ruts and make it difficult to keep toboggans running smoothly. Toboggans pack snow and make it difficult to steer sleds.

—In heavy use areas, allow the group ahead of you sufficient time to get out of the way before starting downhill. Remember, you don't have any method of stopping once you start your ride downhill.

—Use marked returns. Do not walk up the hill where others are sledding. Get out of the way as soon as you stop. Be alert for other groups coming down the hill after you.

These safety tips apply to persons tobogganing or sledding anywhere in Michigan Metroparks that offer sledding or tobogganing areas are: Stony Creek Metropark near Utica (Phone 781-4242); Kensington Metropark near Milford (Phone 685-1561); and Willow Metropark near New Boston (Phone 697-9181).

Nature from Your Backdoor

By Glean R. Dudderar

If there were some way for people to see the results of their good intentions, maybe they wouldn't be so quick to pick up baby animals in the spring.

The results, for the individual animal, are usually tragic.

Why? Because animals raised by people, don't fear people. When they get in some kind of jam, they tend to turn to people for help. And their behavior is often interpreted as an attack or, at the very least, indication that the animal is ill, perhaps rabid. In response to the behavior they don't understand or the fear of rabies, people tend to defend themselves, often killing an animal whose only "crime" is trusting humans.

The owl that landed in a backyard in Williamston recently was luckier than most. The homeowner who called me about it was mostly curious, somewhat concerned and only a little apprehensive when she spotted the large bird sitting on her fence. The owl let us walk right up to it. That told me it was either sick or injured or used to people. It was making a raspy, high-pitched screeching noise that I recognized as a feeding call. When I reached a hand up to it, it went in to its food begging behavior. A wild animal would have reacted to the sudden movement by trying to get away.

Someone who didn't recognize the begging call and posture could have interpreted them as an attack. But in recognizing my hand as a source of food, the owl showed it had been cared for by people. Now, hungry and not knowing how to find food, it was looking to people to feed it.

The homeowner brought out some raw chicken skin and I handed the owl some. Famished, it grabbed my finger in its beak along with the chicken. When I tried to pull my finger out, it reached up and grabbed my hand with its talons. This is a perfectly natural feeding behavior that could have been interpreted as an act of aggression. The talons could have done enough damage to send me to the emergency room, but I didn't jerk back, and as soon as the bird sorted my finger out from the chicken skin, it let go of my hand and I wasn't injured.

That owl was very lucky that the person whose yard it ended up in was curious rather than fearful—and also that the family didn't have chickens, ducks or other small animals they would have felt compelled to defend against a bird of prey like the owl.

The homeowner has been buying and trapping mice and tethering them in the yard to try to teach the owl how to find food in the wild. It's a race against time. The owl has to learn to fend for itself before snow or it will get even more dependent. But if it's turned loose before it's ready, it won't survive. And if it's turned loose before it's been taught to fear people, it will probably get into trouble somewhere down the road when, during a period of stress, it turns again to humans for help. Next time, it may not be so lucky.

There's another animal story in Williamston with the potential for a tragic ending. A young deer turned up skinny and ravenous in a garden. The garden was about finished by then, so the homeowner didn't mind the deer's feeding there. He finds himself in a dilemma, however. If he feeds the deer and it hangs around, he's afraid hunters will get it. If he makes it distrustful of humans, it won't continue to be an occasional, friendly visitor to the man's backyard.

My suggestion is to feed it, get as much fat on it as possible to increase its chances of surviving through the winter, and then chase it off. In the spring, when the new garden is starting to grow, it would be a nuisance. And by next fall, when it's full grown and in the rut, it would be dangerous.

That last step in the rehabilitation process—turning the baby you have raised from a trusting friend into a fearful animal—is the hardest one for most people to take. It doesn't require hurting the animal—swatting it with a rolled-up newspaper whenever you approach it will teach it to associate that experience with humans rather than being fed or comforted. Alienating the animal from human beings in this way is the biggest favor you can do for it. If you're not going to carry through with this last step, it would have been better to leave the animal where you found it in the spring.

A bird that may represent a successful rehabilitation to the wild is winging around the MSU campus these days. It's a very large red-tail hawk. It won't let humans touch it or get within a few feet of it, but it seems to lack much of the shyness you would expect in a wild hawk.

Reaction to the hawk has been varied. Some residents of married housing areas on campus have been concerned because the bird was perching over a children's play area and appeared to be watching the children in a threatening way. Other people have called me to ask what's going on—they know that it's not normal for a hawk to be so willing to mix with people, and they suspect that the bird is ill or injured in some way. Other people are simply enjoying the chance to see a wild hawk up close. The grounds maintenance crews, who wage a constant battle to save the campus plantings from gnawing rodents, think having a hawk around to thin the chipmunk population is just great and wouldn't mind if another hawk turned up.

The reaction I haven't run into so far is animosity. No one has said, "How can we get rid of this killer?" That's the attitude that so often leads to the unjustified destruction of hawks, owls, foxes, ferrets, shrews and other predators. Sometimes controls are necessary—but more often, these predators can be appreciated and even enjoyed as they carry out their appointed place in the scheme of nature from your backyard.

To North Americans, the very idea of eating guinea pigs may seem repulsive, yet to some of the world's poor, meat-starved countries, they've become an essential source of protein, reports International Wildlife magazine. In Peru, where an estimated 70 million are raised, guinea pigs fed table scraps and fresh alfalfa can produce meat more efficiently than cattle, sheep, pigs or goats.

First prize winners in the two categories of the Chelsea Chamber of Commerce residential lighting contest are Durwood Prochnow and Tony Jeurgens.

Production of the new model at Chelsea Manufacturing Corp., unfortunately has been delayed because of various "bugs" in the large dies that stamp out the entire side panels in one piece according to Louis M. Benkert, president.

Stressing the fact that their intention is to avoid causing residents inconvenience which might be considered a "hardship," members of the Village Council at Tuesday's meeting made a motion to amend the existing traffic ordinance to include a provision to prohibit parking on village streets between the hours of 2 a.m. and 5 a.m.

Thursday, Dec. 28, 1950—

The building at the rear of Dr. P. E. Sharrard's home on Garfield street which he used as a dog and cat hospital was extensively damaged by fire late Sunday afternoon. It was believed the fire started near an oil stove used to heat the building.

Excluding defense orders the total business volume in 1951 will be less than that for 1950. However, national income in 1951 will be the highest ever recorded, as war orders take the place of peace production and high prices prevail.

At a meeting of the congregation of St. Paul's church after the morning service Sunday, it was voted not to accept the resignation tendered a week ago by the pastor, Rev. P. H. Grabowski. The pastor had stated that his decision to resign was the result of a doctor's advice who told him the pastoral duties at St. Paul's and at St. John's church, Francisco, which he also serves, are too strenuous for him and that, for the sake of his health, he must curtail his activities to some extent.

SCHOOL GROUNDS BEAUTIFIED: Teachers Ken Sullins and Jim Tallman did their part for "Pride in Your School" week by planting about 20 young trees and shrubs on the Chelsea High school grounds. The way the weather has been lately, they may start to sprout leaves and grow right away.

Plantings Enhance High School

Two years ago Ken Sullins, a math teacher at Chelsea High school, looked around the school grounds and thought wouldn't it be nice to have a little color and contrast around the newest campus buildings.

Use Care With Snowplows

Pulsating amber lights atop snowplowing equipment on state highways are put there for a very important reason—to warn drivers to use caution when driving near them.

Those huge orange machines don't move as fast as most traffic and they often extend farther across lanes than other vehicles. Last winter, motorists ran into snowplows operated by Michigan Department of Transportation (MDOT) drivers 14 times—and MDOT directly maintains highways in only 21 counties. County road commissions do the work under contract in the remaining 62 counties.

Most of the collisions resulted from drivers striking snowplows in the back or side, indicating they were following too closely or passing improperly.

To help motorists avoid accidents involving snowplows, MDOT offers these tips:

—When following a snowplow truck, stay far enough behind it to avoid having snow from its plows reduce your vision to the point that you won't be able to see well and be able to stop in case of an emergency.

—When approaching a plow on a two-lane highway, allow extra room at the centerline for the snowplow blade.

—When passing a snowplow truck, proceed only when your vision ahead is clear. On two-lane highways, snowplows will periodically pull over to let traffic pass. When passing on divided highways, watch especially for snowplows operating in the left lane. They may be moving much slower than traffic and be obscured by blowing snow.

—Anytime you drive past a plow, be alert for wing plow blades which may be in operation on either side of the plow.

"Our maintenance workers have a tough and dangerous job keeping the roads safe for you through the winter. Please help them by taking extra care while you drive," said State Transportation Director James P. Pitz.

Area Enjoys Record Warmth While Rest Of Nation Suffers

While much of the rest of the country, especially including the western and New England states, continued to be slammed by winter storms, southern Michigan went on enjoying an extension of fall this past week.

An all-time high temperature reading of 62 degrees was recorded locally last Sunday as churchgoers shed their coats and emerged from services to bask in the balmy air. Golf courses and tennis courts got considerable use during the afternoon, as did walking trails and other outdoor facilities which are normally buttoned up and often locked in snow at this time of year.

It was the warmest Dec. 16 since the U. S. Weather Bureau began keeping records back in 1889.

Temperatures dropped a bit on Monday and Tuesday but remained well above normal for the season. Advance forecasts called for colder conditions later in the week but nothing serious in the way of really nasty weather.

Severe cold and snow have clobbered the West, the result of repeated storms moving in off the Pacific Coast. Those storm fronts, which looked threatening on weather maps as they moved toward Michigan, have passed to the northeast, causing problems in New England but not here.

A couple of inches of snow fell on the weekend of Nov. 10-11. There has been less than half an inch since. Some rain has fallen on several days, and there has been a lot of cloudiness and fog.

The season so far has been in sharp contrast to that of a year ago when record low temperatures were recorded.

The long-range predictions are that the area is unlikely to have a white Christmas. Above-normal temperatures accompanied by rain, rather than snow, are forecast through the middle of January assuming that the prevailing upper air pattern continues to hold.

After that, it's anybody's guess. About the only people grumbling over the unseasonal weather were some merchants, who felt the warm weather was discouraging Christmas shoppers.

skiers and ice fishermen.

A few random interviews with shoppers discounted the notion that the warm weather has dampened their buying mood.

"I would a lot rather go out and drive when the streets and roads aren't covered with snow and ice," one woman said. "It (the weather) has made it a lot easier for me to shop this year, and I probably bought more than I would have if the driving had been bad. I like snow if I can sit inside and look at it, but I don't like to drive in it."

Said another, "We've put off going to Georgia because the weather has been so good here. We look at the reports on television, and on most days it has been better here than in Atlanta."

"I'm saving a lot of money on heating costs," a man said. "I'm putting the extra money into Christmas."

Chelsea Gives Saline Real Battle for Awhile Before Losing, 79-55

Chelsea gave heavily favored Saline a good game for 20 minutes in the Hornet arena last Friday night before dropping behind and finally losing, 79-55.

"We played good basketball for 2 1/2 quarters, and then things kind of fell apart," Bulldog coach Rahn Rosentreter said. "We were down by only six midway through the third quarter, were pulling up from behind, and had a chance. From there on, it went badly."

Rosentreter quickly added that Saline has a very good basketball team, in keeping with pre-season predictions that the Hornets may earn top-10 ranking among state Class B schools.

"They are big, strong and very quick," he appraised. "Their shot selection is good. They are experienced, well disciplined and well coached. They definitely will not be an easy team for anybody to beat."

"However, I don't believe they are unbeatable. I'm looking forward to playing them on our home court. (That clash will occur on Friday, Feb. 1.) "By then we will be more experienced and, I hope, better."

Chelsea tried to play man-to-man defense against Saline early in the game, and that may have been a mistake as the quicker Hornets poured in points to take a commanding 21-10 lead at the end of the first quarter.

Saline took advantage of numerous fast-break opportunities to pile up the early advantage.

The Bulldogs shifted into a zone defense and managed to hold down the Hornets attack through the second and third periods, only to see Saline break loose for 28 points during the final eight minutes.

"We had problems in the third quarter during our first two games," Rosentreter noted, "and we did again at Saline after coming back and getting close. The fourth quarter was a disaster. They just ran away from us."

Trying to play catch-up, the Bulldogs were forced to foul and attempt to get the ball during the final period. The Hornets foiled that strategy by converting 18 of 28 free throw attempts.

Chelsea took only 40 shots from the floor, a tribute to Saline's tough 2-3 zone defense. The Bulldogs made good on 17 for a 42 percent shooting average, not spectacular but not bad either.

Saline meanwhile was hitting 28 of 65 for 43 percent, nothing to brag about but good enough to win with free throws also dropping. The Hornets also had a big advantage in rebounding, 40-25.

Frosh Cagers Win In Overtime, 44-39

Chelsea's freshman basketball team defeated Jackson County Western in overtime, 44-39, there on Dec. 10.

The game was tied 37-all at the end of regulation play. Greg Boughton took charge of the extra period, scoring all seven of Chelsea's points.

"He did it all—shoot, rebound, hit his free throws," coach Dave Quilter said.

The Bulldog frosh played an excellent first half and led, 20-11, at intermission by playing tough team defense and boxing out well on the boards to get rebounds.

The second half was a different story, Quilter said. "We lost our intensity on both offense and defense. We didn't run our patterns well, we gave up easy second and third shots, and we let Western come back and tie the game."

Chelsea finally got tough during the last 37 seconds of the fourth quarter, breaking up two Western threats to score a winning basket.

The overtime belonged to the Bulldogs as they dominated play at both ends of the floor.

Co-captains Tim Anderson and Clay Hurd led Chelsea on offense with 14 and 13 points, respectively, but it was Boughton's play in overtime that finally pulled out the win.

The victory evened the freshman's record at 1-1 going into last Monday night's game at Jackson Northwest.

Jeff Dils Seeing Action at Hope

Chelsea High school graduate Jeff Dils has seen action in all six of Hope College's basketball games, scoring an average of 3.2 points per game. The Dutchmen, who were undefeated in regular season play last year, are 5-1 so far this season.

Dils plays at guard and leads his team in assists with 20. He is a senior at Hope.

Eric Schaffner scored 15 points to lead the Bulldogs before fouling out late in the game. David Steinhauer put in 12, and Ken Martin had 10 coming off the bench.

"Ken has played very well as a substitute in our first three games and has earned a chance to start," Rosentreter said. "I'm looking at ways to get him into the lineup."

Other Bulldog scorers included Keith Niebauer with six, Mark Bareis and Ray Spencer four apiece, and Tony Hammerschmidt and Jason Pierson two each.

Rosentreter discounted the influence of the unevenly lighted Saline arena as a possible factor in the game.

"I can see where it (the lighting) might be a problem for a visiting team in a close game," he said. "But when you lose by 24 points you can't blame it on the lights."

The loss left the Bulldogs with a 2-1 season record (0-1 in the Southeastern Conference) going into last night's game at Milan. Saline is 3-0. Its other two victories were over Class A foes.

SEC ROUND-UP:

Saline and Lincoln Score Big Wins

Saline lived up to its pre-season billing as the heavy favorite to win the Southeastern Conference basketball championship with a convincing 79-55 win over a game but outclassed Chelsea team.

The small but scrappy Bulldogs kept coming back at the bigger and more experienced Hornets, but couldn't close the gap after Saline pulled out to a 38-25 half-time lead.

The result definitely established Saline as the team to beat if the SEC race isn't to become a runaway.

Lincoln impressed with a decisive 69-36 thumping of Tecumseh, which has a pretty good ball team. The two future meetings between Saline and Lincoln will be interesting, to say the least.

The Railsplitters got 12 points and six rebounds from 6-9 center Joe Ross, who probably is the best individual player in the SEC

Eighth Graders Lose Basketball Game to Saline

Chelsea's eighth-grade basketball team lost to Saline, 41-32, last week. The team held its own in the first half and was down by only a point, but lapsed on defense in the second half, coach Jim Tallman said.

"I think we're capable of playing well on offense, but our defense needs a lot of work," Tallman said. "We kept it close for three periods, then lost our momentum."

Junior Morseau led Chelsea with 13 points. Dave White scored six, and John Collins and Mark Larson four each. Loren Keezer and Jeff Marshall each had two, and Jeff Prentice one.

Tallman cited Larson, White and Collins for having played well.

Saline Halts Winning Streak of JV Cagers

All good things come to an end eventually, and that's what happened to the Chelsea junior varsity basketball team last Friday night at Saline in a game won by the Hornets, 43-38.

The Bulldog hoopsters had won eight in a row, six while playing on the freshman team last year and two more after moving up to the JV squad this season. They had a chance to make it nine straight but fell a little bit short.

A philosophical coach Ted Hendricks looked at the bright side and said, "I hated to see the streak stopped, but I think it taught the boys a lesson. They aren't invincible. They can't expect to play poorly for more than three quarters and then try to come back and pull it out."

The JV's almost did exactly that. Down 39-27 with 4 1/2 minutes to go, they rallied with 10 straight unanswered points to move to 39-37, then messed up an inbounding pass that could have produced the tying basket.

Given that opening, Saline took command and put the game beyond reach.

Hendricks cited poor shooting

(8-20) from the foul line, turnovers and failure to box out for key rebounds as the prime reasons for the loss. "The wonder is that we were able to make it close considering all the mistakes we made," he said.

"I was impressed with the way we came back after we were apparently badly beaten, but we should never have been in that position in the first place. We're not so strong that we can beat a good team unless we play 32 minutes of solid basketball."

The two Matts—Bohlender and Steinhauer—led Chelsea scorers with 12 and 8 points, respectively. Jeff Harvey had 11 rebounds, Steinhauer nine and Greg Haist six.

The loss left the JV's with a 2-1 record going into last night's game at Milan.

The oldest voluntary public health organization in the U.S., the American Lung Association—the Christmas Seal People—was founded in 1904, 80 years ago. Its mission was to stamp out tuberculosis.

Varsity Cagers Win At Onsted, 70-66

Coach Rahn Rosentreter was reasonably happy with his varsity basketball team's 70-66 victory over Onsted a week ago Tuesday to give the Bulldogs a 2-0 record going into league play.

"We were better than we were in our opening game. We played tough defense, even though the score may not look like it. Onsted shot extremely well, especially in the fourth quarter when they hit 65 percent from the floor. That's what made it close."

Chelsea also did its share of hot shooting, both from the floor and the foul line. Eric Schaffner and David Steinhauer each connected on better than half their attempts as they scored 22 points apiece. Mark Bareis had another steady effort with 10 counters.

As a team the Bulldogs shot 72 percent from the free throw line, which Rosentreter called encouraging.

"We have several players who are trying to gain confidence and may be a little bit down on themselves," Rosentreter said. "I think they will work their way out of it."

"Part of the problem may be that I'm trying to speed up our tempo on offense. We have some quickness, and I want to take advantage of it. We won't play run-and-gun all the time, but we definitely will try to move the ball and get position for a good shot before the defense can set up against us."

After staying in a zone defense in its opening-game victory over Brooklyn Columbia Central, Chelsea came out in a tight man-to-man against Onsted and stuck with it. The results turned out to be good.

"Onsted was a little more our size," Rosentreter explained. "We gave away some height but not a lot. We'll adjust our style of play pretty much according to the size of the team we're playing. We're not big, but we have some other things going for us."

Rosentreter was again pleased with the play of his bench, especially Ken Martin who scored seven points. "We have four or five boys who can come in and do the job. That gives us the luxury of being able to run people in and out and keep fresh players on the floor."

What bothered Rosentreter most about the Onsted game was what he called a less than good rebounding effort.

"We're still not boxing out and getting good position, and we have to do that because we are small. We definitely must improve."

Even though Onsted is a Class C school, Rosentreter didn't downgrade the quality of the win.

"Onsted has an excellent basketball program," he pointed out. "They are always well coached. They went to the state quarterfinals two years ago. They may not go that far this season, but they aren't push-overs. I'm happy that we beat them."

The victory put Chelsea at 2-0 entering last Friday's Southeastern Conference opening game against Saline there. The Hornets had likewise won two straight, both over Class A foes.

SPORTS NOTES

BY BILL MULLENDORE

Odds and ends from the sports beat.

Sombody called to tell me that last week's column, in which I said the dunk shot in basketball is a dull play and suggested that maybe the hoop should be raised a couple of feet, was stupid.

Well, to each his own. If watching some seven-footer go up to the basket and drop the ball in is your idea of excitement, fine. It isn't mine. I would like to see those big guys prove they can do something besides grow.

Prediction:

The Detroit Tigers are in trouble and will not repeat as World Series champions next year, or even come close. They will not finish in front in the American League East.

The Tigers' pitching and batting coaches have quit, and several key players are wrangling with the club management over contracts. Success creates its own problems, and the Tigers have a flock of them. They were a one-year wonder.

It's about time owner William Clay Ford took an honest look at his Detroit Lions football team and performed some drastic surgery. The Lions have had a disastrous season, and their performance against the Oakland Raiders, a week ago Monday was downright pathetic, a disgrace for any team that pretends to be professional.

The Lions haven't won anything important since 1957, and that is a long time.

The housecleaning should start with general manager Russ Thomas, who has thoroughly demonstrated his incompetence over a lot of years. Monte Clark is a proven loser as a coach. His teams get worse rather than better.

The Lions haven't had a first-rank quarterback since Bobby Layne and Tobin Rote retired, and that is going back a long way. It's high time they either drafted or traded for one.

Unfortunately, the Lions' sorry record this season probably won't be quite bad enough to give them first pick in the draft. A couple of teams are even worse.

If the Lions management can figure out any way to do it, they should trade their way into the No. 1 spot in the draft, and select Boston College quarterback and Heisman Trophy winner Doug Flutie.

Flutie may be a little small by professional standards, but he can throw both long and short, scramble out of trouble, run if he has to. Most important, he can find ways to win.

The allegation that Flutie is too short to play in the pros doesn't impress me much. One of the best professional quarterbacks I ever saw was Davey O'Brien, who stood all of 5-7. Flutie is considerably bigger.

The Lions' need for a new offensive weapon is made more urgent by the mid-season knee injury to running back Billy Sims. It was a nasty one, and the chances are good that Sims won't be back. Sims was playing on borrowed time. The average career life of an NFL running back is a little more than four seasons before serious injury cuts them down. Shattered knees do most of them in.

The Detroit Pistons are playing without a real center, and have been ever since they traded Bob Lanier. Thanks to an otherwise solid squad, they probably will make the playoffs again this year, but in no way are they going to challenge the likes of the Boston Celtics, Los Angeles Lakers and some other top NBA teams for the championship.

It's remarkable how Detroit professional athletic franchises continually come up a player or two short of having what it takes to be big winners.

Look at the Red Wings hockey team. They haven't come close to replacing Gordie Howe, who left Detroit a long time ago. It wasn't likely that they could find another Howe, perhaps the greatest player in the history of the game, but they certainly should have been able to come up with another all-star performer by this time.

The problem is simply that Detroit owners have learned they don't need to field top-flight teams in order to make money. Long-suffering Detroit fans have shown they are willing to pay high prices to watch losers.

Finally, I've got $5 and 10 points on Michigan to win Friday's Holiday Bowl football game against No. 1 ranked Brigham Young. I have a hunch I won't need the 10 points. Something tells me that the Wolverines are going to win this one. I'm guessing that turn-overs will decide the contest, and that Michigan will get them. Look for BYU to cough up the ball four or more times on interceptions and fumbles.

If I'm wrong, don't remind me. If I'm right, don't say I didn't tell you so.

Wrestling Team Looking Toward Improvement After Struggling Week

Chelsea varsity wrestling team is struggling, coach Kerry Kargel said after his grapplers suffered through a disappointing week of competition.

"We're not doing as well as I had expected," Kargel said. "So far, we just haven't looked very good. I hope we can put things together after the holidays."

Injuries and illness have contributed to the wrestling team's troubles, Kargel noted.

"We've had a lot of minor hurts, mostly elbows and knees, nothing really serious but bad enough to keep boys out of matches so they won't get hurt worse. We've been hit by the flu bug, and several of our wrestlers are not up to their peak physical strength. The illness isn't serious, but it takes awhile to get over."

The Bulldogs lost dual meets to Stockbridge (47-18), Jackson County Western (67-6) and Saline (42-21) last week, and placed only two top contestants in the Linden Invitational.

"All four were tough meets against quality opponents," Kargel said. "I'm not saying we should have won any of them, but we should have shown better than we did. The loss to Western was really bad. They're good, but they aren't that good."

In the Stockbridge meet, Chelsea winners were:

112—Pete Hanna, pin in 1:22.

119—Bob Torres, 2-0 decision. 155—Mark Edick, pin in 1:19. Heavyweight—Dave Shoemaker, 6-4 decision.

Against Western, the only Bulldog scorers were Hanna, who won an 8-0 decision, and Edick, who gained a 6-6 draw.

The Saline meet produced five Bulldog individual winners:

Hanna, pin in 1:47; Torres, 6-4 decision; Ron Bogdanski (128 pounds), pin in 1:23; Steve Wingrove (167), 12-6 decision; Shoemaker (198), 6-2 decision.

Shoemaker placed second and Hanna third in the Linden Invitational. "Pete Hanna is our best wrestler to this point, and should have been first at Linden," Kargel said. "He was in control of his semi-final match all the way until he made a simple mistake that he couldn't overcome. It was one of those things."

Kargel expressed concern about mistakes, especially those that are causing many of his wrestlers to be pinned early in their matches.

"We have a lot of young boys on our team, and we have to teach them how to keep their shoulders off the mat. That's one of the last things an inexperienced wrestler learns. We're going to work hard on it."

Most scientists now agree that the earth came into being 7 to 15 billion years ago.

Junior Varsity Cagers Defeat Onsted, 61-46

Chelsea's junior varsity basketballers went to the free throw line a remarkable 51 times and made good on 37 enroute to a 61-46 victory over Onsted there a week ago Tuesday night.

The win was the JV's second in as many starts and boosted coach Ted Hendricks' personal winning streak to eight. Last year's freshman team, tutored by Hendricks, won its final six games. Hendricks was promoted to junior varsity coach and has essentially the same group this season on the JV team.

"I'm happy about it (the winning streak), but don't give me the credit for it," Hendricks said. "I've been fortunate to coach a fine group of boys who practice hard and play hard. I'm very pleased with them. We work well together. It's fun to win, and I hope it continues. If we lose somewhere along the line, it won't be for lack of effort on anybody's part."

The JV's held a 22-21 lead at half-time against Onsted, then put the game away with a strong second half highlighted by fine free throw shooting.

"It was a strange game," Hendricks said. "Onsted put on a full-court pressure defense in the first half, and it caused us problems because we weren't expecting it. They changed to a zone in the second half, and that opened it up for us."

"When they fell behind, they became over-aggressive and began fouling, and we took advantage of the fouls. That's how we won the game. We shot only 30 percent from the floor, which isn't very good, but we made the free throws.

Onsted was awarded only 14 foul shots as the Bulldogs kept their cool in a game that at times threatened to get out of the officials' control.

Also pleasing to Hendricks is that his charges have forced turnovers 35 percent of the times that opponents have brought the ball up-court.

Matt Steinhauer led Chelsea with 19 points. Jon Lane and Jeff Stacey each had 10. Matt Bohlender had eight and picked off 10 rebounds. Greg Haist scored eight points coming off the bench.

Seventh Grade Basketball Team Splits Two Games

Chelsea's seventh grade basketball team split a pair of games last week, losing 30-25 to Saline and then coming back to defeat Milan, 38-21.

"We probably should have beaten Saline," coach Ron Lazo said. "We were ahead 15-8 at the half and then lost control of the tempo and let them come back on us. They made some free throws late in the game and we missed some, and that was the difference. I didn't do a very good job of coaching in the second half, and I'll take the blame for the loss."

Chad Starkey led Chelsea with nine points, Kyle Plank put in six, Rob Stofor four, and Chad Raymond and Phil Eassa three each.

"Saline has one very big boy for his age who scored 19 points total and hit seven of eight free throws in the fourth quarter," Lazo added. "He's an athlete to keep an eye on as he moves up into high school. He could be awfully good, especially if he keeps on growing."

The Milan game was a different story as Chelsea stormed to a 12-0 first quarter lead and held on to win handily. "We controlled the game all the way, and had fun," Lazo said. "All of our kids got to play, and they enjoyed that."

Starkey and Plank were again the scoring leaders with 17 and 10 points, respectively. Raymond contributed three, and Brett Wales, Erich Hammer and Sinisa Janicevic two each.

Eighth Grade Team Has Easy Time In Beating Milan

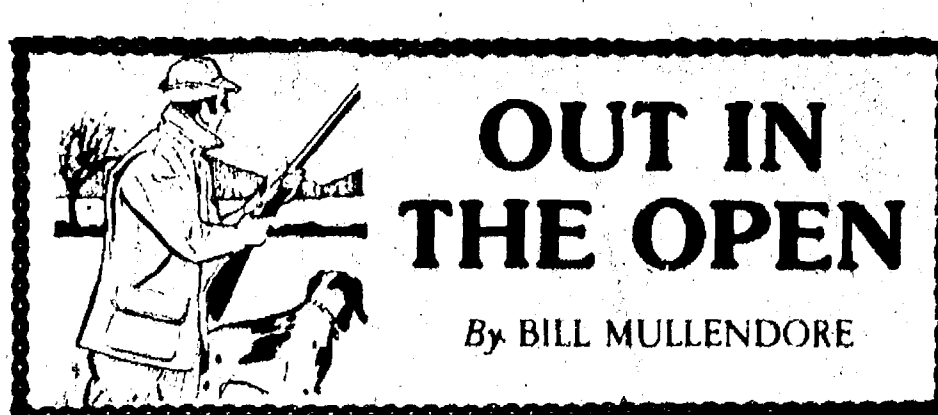

When you hold your opponent scoreless in the first quarter and run up a 16-2 half-time lead, the rest of the game probably is going to be a piece of cake, and that was the story of last week's eighth grade basketball contest won by Chelsea over Milan, 31-15.

"About the only thing that didn't go well for us was that our home scoreboard wasn't working," coach Jim Tallman said. "It wasn't a real problem, but it could be in a closer game."

Junior Morseau paced the Bulldogs with 14 points. Other scorers were Jeff Marshall 5, Loren Keezer 4, and David Adams, Matt Riemenschneider, Craig Maynard and Mike Kushmaul 2 each.

Kushmaul, Larry Nix and Craig Maynard all played good floor games despite not doing a lot of scoring.

OUT IN THE OPEN

By BILL MULLENDORE

The picture, headline and first sentence on the first page of section 3 of last Wednesday's Ann Arbor News told the story in a nutshell. Last week's elk hunting season was another public relations disaster for the Department of Natural Resources.

I know something about that, having participated as a DNR employee in the elk hunts of 1964 and '65. Those fiascos took the department 20 years to live down. Almost all of us who had roles in those two elk seasons have since retired with bad memories. Our successors 'obviously' haven't learned much from our sorry experience.

The Ann Arbor News photo shows a hunter putting a tag on what is described in the caption as a 15-point bull elk. The accompanying story says the animal weighed 232 pounds.

If I haven't entirely lost my eyesight and have likewise not forgotten how to count, the elk carried 12 points, enough to make it a trophy, a "royal" bull. It certainly weighed more than 232 pounds, at least 500 pounds more. A mature bull elk is as big as a small horse.

The headline, "Docile Herd Proves No Match for Elk Hunters," is grist for the mill of the anti-hunters. So were some of the quotes from hunters, who variously described the elk as "easy targets," "quite tame," and "a piece of cake."

The so-called artist who inked in a badly drawn circle around the "eye" of the dead bull has something to answer for. Fakery is bad enough, and poor fakery is worse. The phoney eye isn't in the right place.

Michigan's elk herd in the Pigeon River Country State Forest is simply not a sporting proposition. It wasn't 20 years ago, and it isn't today. The animals are semitame and therefore are easy targets. As one hunter commented, "The only challenge is to find them."

Finding them is about like looking for cows in a pasture when the time comes to herd them in for milking. They may be in the far end of the field, and perhaps hidden in some brush or trees, but they are out there somewhere and you know you are going to come across them if you keep looking. After that, it's easy.

The DNR made two mistakes. One was to hold the elk hunt. The other was to try to justify it on the basis that the Pigeon River herd needed to be reduced. Holding the hunt achieved nothing except bad publicity. The "herd reduction" rationale is a little more complex and requires some explanation.

Let's assume there were 1,000 elk before the Dec. 11 season opened, as the DNR said there were, and that the herd was too numerous for its own good and needed to be thinned to stay in balance with its food supply. Both of those assumptions are not only entirely possible but also probably correct.

As with all other species of mammals, male and female elk are born and survive in approximately equal numbers, a 50-50 sex ratio. Thus you can figure that in a herd of 1,000 there will be about 500 animals of each sex. Of those, about 400 females and 400 males will be capable of breeding and reproducing. The others are too young. The way the mating game works with elk, most of the females will get into the act and most of the males won't. A few dominant bulls keep control over the cows, while the younger males stand around and watch and wish. That means there is a large surplus of males available to be harvested by hunting or some other means. A ratio of one bull to 10 cows is enough to insure successful reproduction.

What the DNR, in its wisdom, did was prescribe a hunting season allowing permittees to take 40 cows to 10 bulls. If reducing the herd was indeed the objective that is a strange way to go about it.

Past research has shown that about 75 percent of cow elk get pregnant during the fall mating season. That means perhaps 30 of the 40 taken were carrying calves. It also means there are more than 300 cows out there preparing to give birth next spring. At least half of those offspring can be counted on to survive to adulthood.

Some fairly simple arithmetic shows that 50 living elk and 30 embryos were taken during the hunt and that there will be a net increase of more than 100 in 1985. If that is herd reduction, the logic escapes me.

Any elk hunt was certain to raise a lot of flak, and it predictably did. If they were going to hold an elk season at all, the DNR should have zeroed in on the surplus bulls. Probably a couple of hundred could have been removed without jeopardizing the breeding stock.

That is basically the way the deer herd has been managed, with great success, over the years: We shoot a lot of bucks and a relatively few does every season, and we keep on having deer. Why that principal has been reversed in the case of elk is hard to fathom. The two species are very similar in their reproductive habits.

I still think a trap-and-transfer elk program should be tried. It might or might not work, but it would be a lot easier to swallow than a token harvest of 50 animals which accomplished nothing from a management standpoint. Not least of the concerns is that 46,000 persons applied for elk permits, which means there are 45,550 disappointed "unsuccessfuls" who paid a non-refundable $4 fee for the privilege of applying. The DNR has enough unhappy clients without going out of its way to make more.

Swim Team Swamps Okemos in Home Meet

Chelsea boy swimmers opened their home dual meet season with a lopsided 115-57 victory over Okemos on Dec. 13.

Winners were: Matt Doan (medley relay), Ted Lewis (medley relay), Scott Pryor (500 free medley relay), Jeff Mason (medley relay), Don Skiff (200 and 500 free relay), Dan Degener (200 individual medley and free relay), Brent Bauer (50 free, 100 fly and free relay), Mike Coffman (100 breaststroke), Jeff Nemeth (free relay).

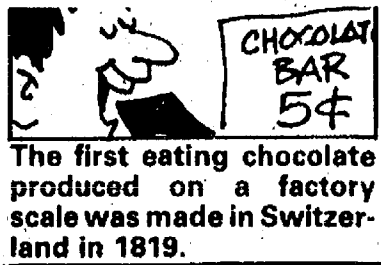

Stars of the meet were captains Skiff and Bauer. Skiff qualified for the state meet in both the 200 and 100 free. His 100 time of :49.5 broke a varsity record. In the same race Jeff Nemeth swam :50.3 and qualified for state.

Brent Bauer swam the fastest 50 free ever in Chelsea, :22.7, and the second fastest dual meet fly time, :56.0. Bauer and Skiff also combined with Degener and Nemeth to qualify in the 400 free relay. The team has now qualified swimmers in seven of the 10 events.

Other outstanding performances included three season bests for Paul Robbins, Doan and Darren Girard, and two season bests for Degener, Kevin Brock, Nemeth, Ted Lewis, Lee Riemenschneider and Jeff Mason.

According to a United Nations study, Europe's stained glass treasures are among the latest victims of acid rain, reports National Wildlife magazine. At least 100,000 objects, some more than 1,000 years old, are in danger of deteriorating from acid precipitation.

COMING ALONG: Construction of the addition to the Kresge House, used for treatment of substance abuse patients at Chelsea Community Hospital, is on schedule. The $600,000 project is targeted for completion early next summer. Contractor for the above-ground work is Gerry Fleischmann of Whitmore Lake.

Robins Stay Around During Balmy Weather

Robert Murphy, who lives on Stofer Rd. north of Chelsea, called The Standard on Monday to report that "hundreds of robins" are hanging out in a woods behind his home.

"I have never seen anything like that before," Murphy said. "I'm not talking about just a few robins. There must be at least 500 of them out there. What's going on?"

ly warm weather so far this fall. Robins are not true migratory birds. They drift south ahead of the cold and snow, but don't make long-distance flights. A few stay around all winter. Those hardy birds touch off the "first robin" reports which come in during the first days of March every year.

Robins flock in dense woods during September, seeking shelter from cold and wind. They stay there as long as they are comfortable and can find enough to eat.

In a normal late fall, most robins will move south when early storms hit. There haven't been any of those yet this year, and so the birds have stayed here. They won't move until and unless the weather gets bad and the food supply runs short. They will go just far enough to find warmer and greener pastures, then return as soon as possible to their traditional northern breeding grounds to set about the business of raising two or three broods of young per year.

The most vigorous robins are those which stay in the north all winter. They claim first rights to the best nesting territories, and so get a head start on the all-important function of reproduction.

WCC Welding Program Satisfies Industry Needs

A survey of local welding firms done by Washtenaw Community College's Welding Technology program shows that at least 80 welding technician jobs will open up in each of the next five years. Furthermore, many employers participating in the survey stated a preference for hiring staff with college training. Many respondents reported hiring WCC welding graduates, and all who did expressed satisfaction with the training they had received at the College.

Funded by the U. S. Department of Education's Title III Institutional Aid Program, the survey was mailed to 52 businesses which employ welding technicians within a 30-mile radius. Over-all, 54% of those surveyed responded. Most of the firms responding used traditional processes such as mig, stick, tig, and oxy-acetylene welding, though some reported using lasers, electric beams, and other new "high tech" modes. Though one-third of the businesses surveyed have automated at least one welding process, the use of automated systems including robotics is expected to increase only slightly in the area.

Since companies are automating slowly and since automated welding procedures do not require skilled operators, local industry's main need is for well-trained maintenance and tool room welders. Specifically, employers want technicians with an understanding of metallurgy, blueprint reading and layout, and metal fabrication, the survey shows. In fact, many respondents felt that the ideal background for a welding technician would include an associate's degree or at least some college-level course in welding.

Additionally, employers were asked whether or not they had hired WCC welding graduates and how satisfied they were with these staff members' performance on the job. All the 29% who have hired WCC welding graduates were satisfied with their performance. Some employers who had hired no college graduates indicated that their staff sometimes take welding classes at the college.

Over half the respondents expressed interest in tailored inservice training for their employees. (Such courses are available through the College's Continuing Education Services Office and Technical Job Training Program.) Participants in the survey also suggested additions and changes to the WCC welding program. The IAP grant provides funding for programs in higher education to review their curricula in terms of changes in technology and professional trends. Each of the College's occupational education programs is reassessing its offerings under the IAP grant.

Prior to World War I, dinner jackets were generally regarded as informal wear to be worn only in the absence of ladies.

THE SIMPLE GOSPEL

By Fred Coulter, Evangelist

We live in a complex, confusing age and along with the confusion we see in political and social affairs we see confusion in religion. However, God designed the gospel to be a refuge from the confusion of the world. He did not design it to be a part of that confusion. Paul told the Corinthians: "But I fear, lest by any means, as the serpent beguiled Eve through his subtlety, so your minds should be corrupted from the simplicity that is in Christ" (Corinthians 11:3). The simple message of the gospel is that Jesus Christ came to the earth, took the form of a servant, lived and died as we all do, but having been buried for three days arose from the grave to never die again [1 Corinthians 15:1-8]. It was Jesus' resurrection that declared Him to be the Son of God (Romans 1:4) and to have the right to claim all authority in heaven and earth [Matthew 28:18]. If we would recognize that authority today, we would not have either religious division or confusion. Our obedience to the gospel is a figurative reenactment of Jesus' death, burial and resurrection (Romans 6:3-6). It is this obedience to the gospel which causes us to be added to the church [Acts 2:38, 41, 47]. If you are tired of the ecclesiastical confusion of denominationalism, return to the simplicity of New Testament Christianity. If you would like to learn more about the simple gospel and New Testament Christianity, send for the FREE booklet, "Neither Catholic, Protestant, nor Jew."

Audubon Society Sets Dec. 23 For Christmas Bird Count

Christmas Bird Counts (called CBC's by Auduboners) have been a tradition for many years. This year, 1984, will mark the 85th such count by members of the National Audubon Society's various chapters, advises Charles Steinbach, a Dexter man who is active in Audubon Society at the both the county and state, as well as the national level, of the Jackson County Audubon Society and Ron Hoffman, who heads the 1984 Christmas bird count for the Chelsea area, centered at Mt. Hope and Seymour Rds.

Purpose of these counts is to find out what birds are wintering here, and in various areas of North America.

In 1983, there were over 1,400 CBC's conducted in the United States and Canada, with an additional 21 counts in the West Indies, Mexico, Central and South America.

Through the efforts of the many people who have taken part in these counts, much has been learned about the winter movement and distribution of many bird species. "For example," Steinbach and Hoffman explain, "in Michigan, we have found that there are years that the Northern Finches (Crossbills, Evening Grosbeaks, Siskins, and Red Polls) are quite common, and years that are related to food crops in the far north, such as the cone crop in the various evergreens.

"We have been able to study the invasion and spread of the House Finch in Michigan by using the CBC's," said Steinbach. "This is a bird that began to appear in southeastern Michigan, and has spread through the south central part of the state in the last several years." The House Finch was first reported on the Washtenaw county CBC in 1982. It is now a year-round resident in the county.

The Fish and Wildlife Service uses the CBC's to assist its personnel in establishing the hunting season and bag limits for all migratory game birds, such as ducks, geese, woodcock, snipe, coot, rails, and mourning doves. The CBC's in the seventies established the scarcity of the black and Canvasback ducks. A major change in bag limits resulted.

There is, however, another function of the Christmas Bird Count, quite aside from the tallying and recording. "It is a time of year when we all get out, meet new friends, renew old acquaintances, and can swap 'birding tall tales'," notes Steinbach. "Anyone interested in participating in this year's count should not hesitate to do so."

"Besides increasing our knowledge of birds," Steinbach and Hoffman agree, "it's just plain fun." They add, "This year, the Christmas Bird Count Day for Washtenaw county will be Sunday, Dec. 23, to count species and numbers." "Also, we will count species of birds seen during the period from Dec. 16 through Dec. 22, i.e. if you see a robin on Dec. 20, but do not see him on Count Day, (Sunday, Dec. 23), add species to the list," Steinbach concluded.

Anyone living in Dexter, Lima or Scio townships who would like to participate, please contact Charles Steinbach, 428-4363.

Residents of Webster township who would like to take part, please contact David Baker, 665-4578. Residents of the Chelsea area, call Ron Hoffman at 517-769-6891.

Auduboners are especially interested in counts of species and numbers at bird-feeding stations around homes in the western Washtenaw area.

Both degrees are required since she plans to pursue a career in the biomedical field.

Gaining experience in the field of her choice, her summer employment is with Gelman Sciences.

In October, she starred in the stage production, "The Runner Stumbles" on the campus of MTU. She also had a major role in a musical last year, "The Robber Bridegroom." She was a member of the Chelsea High homecoming court in her senior year in which she was runner-up and named Miss Congeniality.

Catherine will return to Chelsea to spend the holidays with her family.
