Depot Exterior Nearly Ready for Repainting Operation Next Week

During the past several weeks craftsmen working on the restoration of the Chelsea depot have had to spend more than 100 hours of unexpected labor to replace and sometimes rebuild parts of the 106-year-old building that have been found to be damaged or deteriorated. This extra labor, plus the cost of materials, have added several thousands of dollars to the cost of the project. "These are not 'cost overruns' which often occur on construction projects," a depot spokesman stated. "In restoration work you start out with ballpark estimates and do the job on a time and materials basis. We are not too far above our original estimates but we sure appreciate those donation envelopes as they continue to come from day to day to our Post Office Box C."

With this issue of The Standard are photos showing the rebuilding of a finial—a decorative architectural ornament fashioned from wood and used at the crown or center of a roof. One has been completed for the west end of the depot. Eventually another will be restored to the track side of the building. While the interior is being painted and modernized two chimneys will be placed atop the building to replicate the original rounded and contoured chimneys installed in 1880.

Removal of paint from the exterior of the building is almost complete and painting will soon begin. The exterior is expected to be completely refinished by June 27 according to contractor Charles Shiver. While the interior work is underway a wheel chair ramp will be constructed along the southeast wall.

Village Considers Buying Computer

Village of Chelsea may soon enter the computer age. The village is planning to purchase a computer system to replace its outdated NCR bookkeeping machine. Several systems costing between $38,000 and $52,000 are being considered, according to Village Manager Fritz Weber. He said a final recommendation will be made to the village council sometime in July. Whatever computer system is chosen, Weber said, would handle all the village's accounting functions, such as billing, payroll and general ledger. It would also be able to track inventory. Other likely uses are for voter registration and word processing. (Continued on page four)

Oldest Grad Earns His Diploma at 68

Charles A. Curtis was one of 16 graduates who received high school diplomas Thursday during 8 p.m. commencement exercises, held at the Chelsea High school auditorium to honor graduates of the Chelsea School District's Community Education Department program. Curtis, 68, now retired from Rockwell International, returned for his diploma after his wife, Lottie, received her's last year. He said the hardest part about the whole thing was making himself go through with the registration procedure.

Superintendent Raymond Van Meer addressed the graduates. He said they had taken the first step toward the future, adding that education will remain a part of their lives forever as a result of this achievement. Van Meer also noted that continually changing technologies demand constant educational efforts if one is to stay abreast of advances. Director of Community Education Jaclynn Rogers welcomed the 200 people in attendance. She recognized the graduates and their teachers for their hard work. She also challenged the graduates to find others as deserving as they are to come back to school and complete their high school studies.

Diplomas were presented by Chelsea Board of Education president Dale Schumann and trustee Ron Satterthwaite. The Rev. Jerrold Beaumont of St. Barnabas Episcopal church delivered the invocation. Members of the graduating class were: Connie Arnett, Floyd D. Alexander, Charlotte M. Salyer Craft, Charles A. Curtis, Michael A. Dixon, Paul E. Fletcher, Jr., Ruth E. Fletcher and Donald E. Fritz.

cher, Jr., Ruth E. Fletcher and Donald E. Fritz. Also graduating were: Finn Jensen, Barbara J. Kaiser, Randy A. Layher, Sandra K. Gleske Neff, C. Britton Nelson, Randall S. Risner, Cynthia K. Rosentreter and Scott L. Sharum. Inquiries about the high school completion program should be directed to Jaclynn Rogers at the Community Education Department, 475-9836.

School Files Class Action Against State

Chelsea School District has joined a class action suit against the State of Michigan that argues the state has under-funded special education and mandated lunch programs since 1979. Chelsea superintendent Ray Van Meer said he has no idea how much money the school district may have lost since 1975, but that joining the law suit shouldn't cost the district more than $300 to $400.

The district was notified that it may have been shortchanged by the law firm of Thrum, Maatsch & Nordberg, of Lansing, who handles all of the district's legal tax articles and notices of election.

"They recommended we file a claim," Van Meer said. "There will probably be a lot of districts who will join the suit." Van Meer said he doesn't know "if we're talking about $7,000 or $70,000," that Chelsea may have lost, or how the discrepancy may have occurred.

School District Updates Achievement Testing

Chelsea School District has switched to an updated version of the California Achievement Test for its standardized testing program. The tests are taken annually by second, fifth, eighth and 11th graders. The results of those tests help educators assess the progress of each student, and make curriculum decisions. In addition, the district has decided to drop the Metropolitan Readiness Test in favor of a California Achievement Test. The Metropolitan test has been taken annually by children either finishing kindergarten, or beginning first grade.

"Test companies update their tests every seven to 10 years," said Dr. Laurice Bissell, Chelsea's curriculum director. "The new tests (except the kindergarten test) put more emphasis on thinking skills and also have sections on science and social studies. The old ones tested only language arts and math skills. The new ones are adjusted for new national norms." She said the new tests will also more accurately reflect subject matter taught in newer textbooks. Bissell said she likes the idea of using only the California Achievement Test rather than two different tests because there is more consistency, and it should be easier to evaluate a child's progress. Bissell said there has been some talk of having third and sixth graders also take their levels of the California test. She said those results would be used more for curriculum guidance than to evaluate a student's academic progress.

Chelsea Police Officers Complete Driving Course Eight Chelsea policemen completed a precision driving course in Howell on June 10. The eight officers were David Dettling, Frank Kornel, Dennis Hall, Chris Minick, Tom Gilbreath, Terrance Parsons, J. Glenn Culler and Mike Liszynai. The rest of the force is scheduled to complete the course later this month.

MORTARBOARD AND SHEEPSKIN for Charles A. Curtis, 68, the most senior graduating senior, presented in a special commencement June 12. Curtis, retired from Rockwell International, said he was inspired to return for his diploma after his wife, Lottie, received hers last year. Jaclynn Rogers, left, director of community education, addressed the class of 16 with Raymond Van Meer.

MAY I HAVE THIS DANCE? Kathleen Chapman, president of the Chelsea Area Historical Society, found a new friend last week. He's not exactly the life of the party, but he can hold a pose forever. The historical society bought the mannequin from Dave Strieter, who is liquidating his men's wear business. The society plans to use the dashing young man as part of a display in the Chelsea Depot once renovation is complete. There is talk of having a contest to name him during the August Sidewalk Days. Dave also gave the society the class display case behind Kathleen, which will be fitted with locking doors. The society bought a second display case at a greatly reduced price.

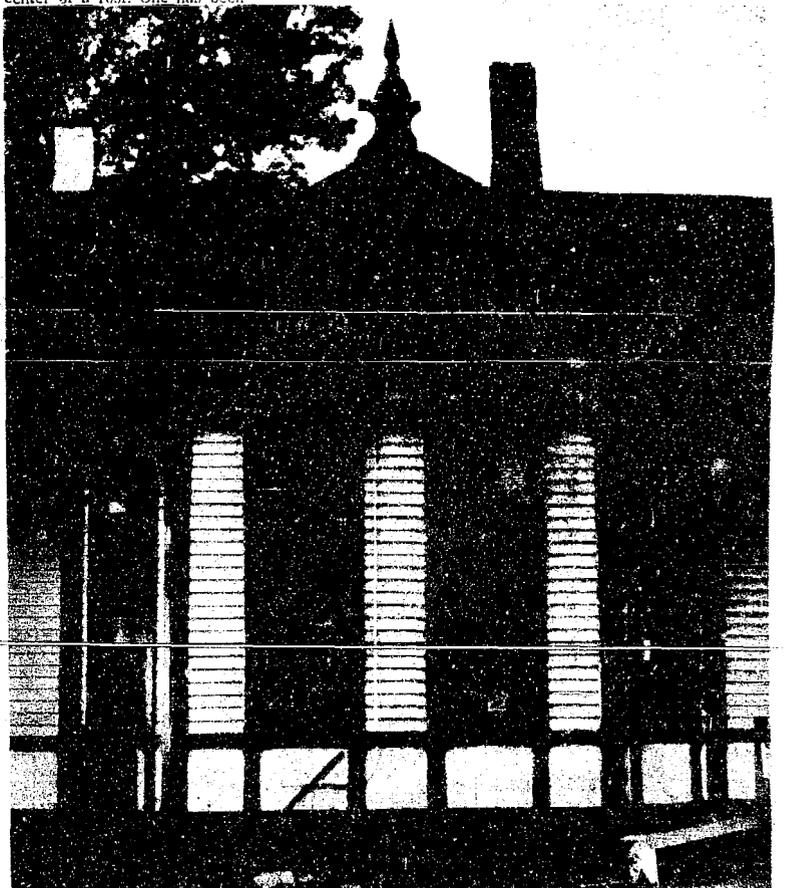

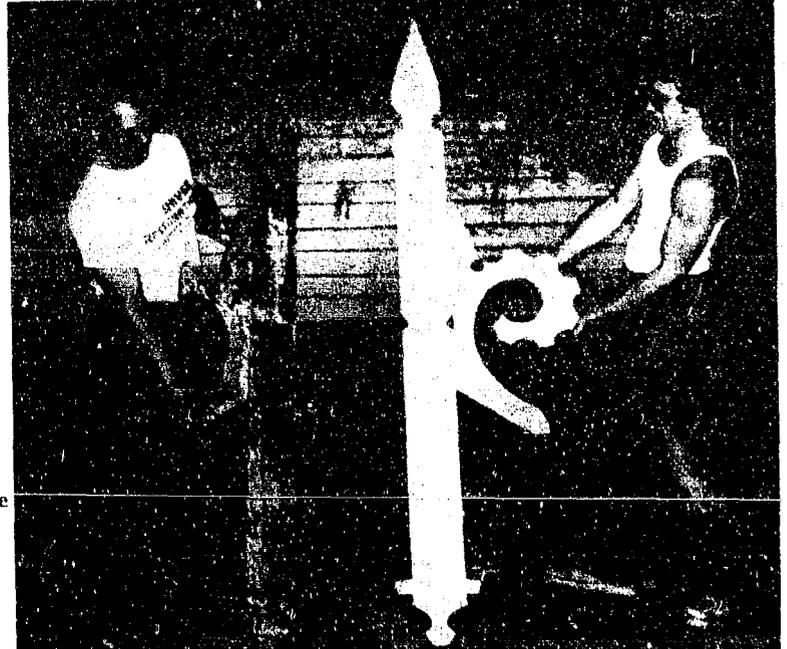

PHOTO OF WEST END of Chelsea depot is believed to have been taken in 1916. The broken wood ornament at the peak of the roof is known as a finial. Foliated parts of the finial had broken away since the depot was built in 1880 and are now being restored.

Real Ale Co. hopes to start suds flowing in a few weeks in the new brewery in the Clock Tower building. Owners and operators of the brewery are Ted Badgerow and Gordy Averill. The initial brewing schedule is geared to produce 650-700 cases of dark ale, porter and stout per month, bottled in 12-ounce brown bottles. They will brew with malt, hops, water and yeast only, so the product doesn't taste like anyone else's product. Instead, the taste is stronger, richer, maltier, hoppier, sweeter, darker. The labels will say "Chelsea" on them, and picture the "Clock Tower." No tap room or public consumption will be allowed on the premises.

Kelley Calls Midland Conversion Expensive Power Option

Consumers Power Co. is misrepresenting its proposal to convert the incomplete Midland nuclear plant to a gas generator, Attorney General Frank Kelley said recently in releasing studies concluding the conversion would be the most expensive way to produce additional power.

Kelley said the proposal is meant only to insure the utility can recover a large portion of the costs of the nuclear investment and make customers pay for management mistakes.

"While I understand that one of the responsibilities of corporate management is to look out for the concern of stockholders of the company, this attempt to stick the rate payers with a $1.683 billion plant that should cost $375 million is simply ludicrous," Kelley said.

He forwarded his information to the Public Service Commission, which is considering whether to permit further work at Midland.

Consumers is proposing to invest $430 million to convert the plant to a 730 megawatt gas generator, using steam turbines and other power facilities installed there at a cost of about $1.2 billion; and it is seeking rates to cover about $1.9 billion more of the unused Midland costs.

Kelley said a new "ground-up" gas plant would cost $375 million, and a U.S. Supreme Court ruling affirming an Indiana decision disallowing recovery of costs of an abandoned nuclear plant makes it unlikely Consumers will collect any of its investment if it is not converted for some kind of use.

Kelley's consultant, Energy Systems Research Group of Boston and power plant engineer Stephen Milliaras, said the projected costs of the conversion are underestimated, technically unfeasible, would be inefficient, and far cheaper alternatives exist through purchased power, rehabilitation of older plants, cogeneration or building a separate plant.

Richard Rosen of ESRG said the additional power capacity is not likely to be required before 2000, that a rate decrease could be possible by 1995 rather than the 29 percent increase required for the conversion project, and that the other methods are more desirable and economical ways of providing that increased power.

Kelley said the utility is misrepresenting the case by focusing only on recent growth in power demands while current demand is not much higher than in 1979.

Consumers Power chairman William McCormick, Jr., said the consultants had an anti-utility bias, while its own feasibility study of the conversion involved some of the world's top engineers.

And, he said he disputed the consultants' claim that a new plant would be cheaper, asserting it would cost up to $1 billion to build a new plant in a new location.

And, he said it is "patently absurd" to assert the conversion is not technically feasible and discounted fears of underestimated costs.

"The bottom line is that we are prepared to guarantee the cost of the facility at Midland and those costs will be fully competitive with any comparable alternative—including purchased power from outside Michigan or a new gas-fired plant," McCormick said.

Utility spokesman Paul Knopick said the utility and its contractors would guarantee a cost limit determined by a detailed engineering study, which itself would cost about $50 million.

He added Kelley is wrong in asserting none of the Midland costs will be recovered by the utility unless some use is made of the plant, saying utilities in three cases have permitted recovery of "prudent" costs of canceled facilities.

The PSC is close to ruling on Consumers' request that it be relieved of a prohibition against spending additional amounts at Midland without PSC approval.

That prohibition is part of a $91 million a year financial stability rate approved last year, and which Kelley said should be given up if the condition is lifted.

Uncle Lew from Lima Says:

DEAR MISTER EDITOR:
After the secondhand lecture the fellers got the week before from Zeke Grubb's preacher's wife through the preacher, the fellers natural put wimmen on the agender at the country store Saturday night. The preacher's old lady sent word that the bitter halves were restless on account they were gitting about as much attention as the other appliances in the house.

Since he was safe from the ears of his old lady and Zeke's preacher, Bug Hookum declared right off the bat that fer what little a wife eats he wouldn't be without one. And Bug went on to say there is somepun to comparing em to the appliances because you can say about a wife what you can say about a refrigerator; they never wear out, we jest git tired of looking at em. Bug went on about giving wimmen an inch and they think they're rulers and final Clem Webster broke in to say Bug was laying it on pritty thick fer a feller that ain't bought a stitch of clothes in the last 40 year that his old lady didn't pick out fer him.

Practical speaking, went on Clem, he is glad to see wimmen doing more on their own. Clem said he never had a doubt that wimmen control the money and the men in this country, and that wimmen know jest how to use the power of weakness to keep their menfolk in line. The trouble he has, Clem allowed, is like the old feller that saw his first Thermos bottle. When he was told the bottle keeps hot stuff hot and cold stuff cold he wanted to know how it could tell which to do. Men know wimmen can do everthing they want to do, but the trick is figuring out what, was Clem's words. The plot thickens, he said, because wimmen know we know they know we know what they're doing to us.

Jeff Martin of Grass Lake Rd., is in the Philippine Islands on a five-week tour with the Athletes for Christ basketball team. The team is made up of eight young men from Cedarville College along with the varsity basketball coach from the college. They will play Philippine teams in many areas of the islands and present a gospel service at half-time. Jeff graduated from Chelsea High school in 1984 and has attended Cedarville College two years.

Truck Tires Slashed In Parking Lot
A patron of the Wolverine Food & Spirits had three tires on his pick-up truck slashed while it was parked at Chelsea State Bank on June 13.

According to Chelsea police, tires belonging to John H. Pidd of Gregory were cut between 10:15 p.m. and 12:45 a.m.

General speaking, the fellers lined up with Clem. Ed Doolittle said his daughter that works in the city has changed his thinking. With this being the big marrying month, Ed recalled how wimmen use to feel sorry fer wimmen that weren't married and mothers by 25. The pore things were missing out on life. Ed said his daughter was well past 30, she enjoyed her work and her men and wimmen friends and she wasn't about to give it all up. It's true that wimmen as well as men can marry and work outside the home, Ed said, if that's the choice they make, and it's good wimmen know they have the choice. The idea that pops up ever now and agin about men paying their wives wages fer keeping house is crazy, Ed said, because it puts wimmen right back in the place they're trying to git out of.

Final, Zeke wanted to know whatever happened to Wilma Mankiller that was elected president of the Cherokee Nation last year. With a job like that fer a woman with a name like that, Zeke said, you got to know some changes are being made.

Yours truly,
Uncle Lew.

Registration is now open for courses offered by the Matthaei Botanical Gardens' Adult Education Program.

Classes will be held in lake canoeing, hiking in West Virginia (staying in mountain cabins), remote sensing of the environment, edible wild plants of summer, mushrooms of summer, two fern forays (with the University of Michigan's "Outstanding Teacher of 1985"), the making of dried herbarium specimens (plant), wildlife and people (by a conservation officer with a penchant of undercover work), backpacking the Wasco Loppet trail (after a ride to the starting point on the Algoma Central Railroad), a day trip to see the interesting plants and habitats of Pt. Pelee, and an amazing look into some recently rediscovered old botany areas (from a 1924 Flora of Washtenaw County), which have yielded some truly remarkable plant finds.

To receive a free brochure, call or write to the Botanical Gardens: 1800 N. Dixboro Rd., Ann Arbor 48105. Tel. (313) 763-7060.

Michigan's Largest Farm Show Slated

More than 300 commercial farm exhibits, field demonstrations about forage production and marketing and a forage machinery clinic will highlight Ag. Expo '86, July 22-24 at Michigan State University.

The main exhibition will be open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. July 22 and 23 (Tuesday and Wednesday) and 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. July 24. Field demonstrations will run from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday and Wednesday and from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Thursday. A variety of tours and educational exhibits will round out the program.

The more than 50,000 people expected to attend the event will see more than 35 acres covered with just about every kind of equipment and supply needed for a good farm operation.

"I'd be very surprised if a farmer went away from Ag. Expo without at least one new idea that could benefit the farm operation," says Bill Bickert, Ag. Expo chairman. "I don't know of another place in the state where farmers can see as varied and as broad a collection of the latest farm equipment and production guidelines as they can see at Ag. Expo."

The main exhibition area, located at Farm Lane and Mt. Hope, will hold displays worth millions of dollars. Visitors can see irrigation systems; field machinery; dairy equipment and supplies; livestock handling equipment; grain harvesting, handling and storage systems; crop sprayers; farm buildings; and seed and fertilizer supplies and services.

A wide variety of university educational exhibits are being planned for Ag. Expo. Most of these will answer questions on crop, insect, weed and disease control, soil testing and erosion prevention, computerized farm record keeping, livestock health management and other farm-related topics.

Daily field demonstrations will focus on how to establish a good forage stand and harvest a quality product, guidelines for selling forage as a cash crop and the importance of testing forage samples. There will also be a trouble-shooting clinic for forage equipment.

Ag. Expo is free and open to the public. Visitors will find plenty of free parking. Free shuttles will be provided from the parking lot to the main Expo site and also to all the field demonstrations and research centers.

Ag. Expo is sponsored by the MSU Department of Agricultural Engineering, the Agricultural Experiment Station and the Cooperative Extension Service in co-operation with exhibitors from 16 states and Canada.

25th ANNIVERSARY: Judy and Walter Blanchard, 9930 Beeman Rd., celebrated their silver wedding anniversary with a dinner and dance for more than 100 friends and relatives at the Chrysler Local 1284 Hall last Saturday, June 14. Their actual anniversary is June 24. The couple was married at the First United Methodist church in Ypsilanti. The surprise party was arranged by their children—daughter Cheri Norris and her husband, David, and their son Jeff. Also in attendance were their grandchildren Tyler, 3, and Amanda, six months. Judy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert O'Hara, of Ypsilanti, and her brother and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Robert R. O'Hara, and their daughters Jennifer and Dieder, took part as well. Walter's sister, Bernice Holton, made the trip from Clare, and his sister, Margaret Grant, from Milan attended, as did his uncle, George Blanchard, from Jonesville. The couple plans to take a hot air balloon ride this week as part of their celebration.

Village Considers Buying Computer

 "The problem is that our equipment is relatively old, and supplies are extremely hard to get," Weber said.
 "According to NCR, there are only two machines like this in the area, so they don't keep well-stocked with parts. I'm really afraid it's going to break down and it won't be repairable."
 The new system would actually be composed of three computers, all linked together in a network, Weber said. It would be backed up by a hard disk system, which is a way to store information permanently. There would also be other peripheral equipment such as printers.
 Whoever supplies the computers would supply the specialized software and updating of the software when regulations or conditions change, Weber said. They'd also provide training, and repair of the machines.
 Weber said the difference in price of the systems is due mostly to them all having slightly different features. He said he's been most impressed with a package supplied by Manatron, Inc. of Kalamazoo, which also happens to be the least expensive package.

 Manatron's system would use Burroughs computers, he said. Other systems being considered are those supplied by New World, and NCR.
 "Most of the people we've talked to who have dealt with Manatron are fairly happy with it," Weber said.
 Companies that specialize in computer systems for municipalities are not plentiful. It is also not possible to go to a computer store in Ann Arbor and buy a couple of micro computers and off-the-shelf accounting software that would be adequate for the needs of a village, Weber said.
 Weber said it would probably take a year to have the system fully operational once a decision is made to purchase it because there is an enormous amount of information to enter.

Men Wanted for Prostate Cancer Research Project

Approximately 400 men over the age of 60 are needed as volunteers for a screening program at St. Joseph Mercy Hospital for the early detection of diseases of the prostate.
 Fred Lee, MD, a radiologist at SJMH, who is supervising the screening, is considered a pioneer world-wide in his use of transrectal ultrasound in detecting diseases of the prostate, most notably prostate cancer. His initial study involving 380 randomly selected men identified nine cancerous lesions and four precancerous lesions. Twelve of those 13 conditions were diagnosed by ultrasound; only seven were discovered by the routine digital examination.
 The additional screenings are being conducted to further develop the method of transrectal ultrasound detection of prostate cancer.

The screening will consist of a rectal examination by a physician from the SJMH Department of Urology and an ultrasound examination by a Department of Radiology physician. The ultrasound examination is done with a probe that provides a photographic image of the prostate.
 Volunteers must not currently be under the care of a physician for prostate cancer nor have had prior prostate surgery. They cannot be on anticoagulants (blood thinners), have serious heart disease or be allergic to local anesthesia.
 The volunteers will be informed if any suspicious abnormalities are found by either examination and a biopsy of the lesion will be performed under local anesthesia. A detailed pathology report will be sent to the patient's physician.
 To volunteer, or for further information, call 572-3050.

Smoking is a major risk factor for peripheral vascular disease. This disease is a narrowing of blood vessels that carry blood to the leg and arm muscles. If a blood clot blocks an already narrowed artery, then the result could be the damage or even loss of an arm or leg.

A VIEW from the CLOCK TOWER

By Will Connelly

Ever since moving to Chelsea we have been under the impression that at least half the houses in town, and practically all of the homes out in the townships, had family dogs. With 2,600 taxpayers in Sylvan township, we figured there must be something like 1,500 pooches in residence.

Fred Pearsall, Sylvan treasurer, says, "Maybe so, but we only issued 334 dog licenses in 1986." He says he gets more grumbling about the necessity for $10 dog licenses than from people who quietly pay him property taxes totaling millions of dollars.

Hundreds of dog owners who are aware that their dogs must be vaccinated against rabies do not know that their dogs must also be licensed every year and that they must be kept under owner control—penned, chained or walked on a leash. Prudent owners make sure that in addition to wearing license tags, their dogs also have identification tags giving the animal's name, owner, home address and phone number.

Every man or woman who has seen military service is familiar with the wearing of "dog tags" which provide quick identification for wearers found dead or wounded in battle.

Thousands of pets, supposedly under control, stray every year. Loose collars slip over the dogs' heads or break from long wear. Other dogs jump out of open car windows in parking places or nose open the gate latch of their kennel pens.

If they have been treated well and affectionately by their owners, their failure to come home may be because they have strayed too far and gotten lost. The happiest outcome is when the dog is befriended by a good-hearted citizen who reads the ID tag and calls the owner. Almost as good is when a citizen or police officer gets control of the dog and can track down the owner.

The saddest outcome is when the animal is killed by a motor vehicle or becomes lost in the country where it may starve to death.

Stray dogs sometimes form packs and chase deer. They pursue a deer until it falls from exhaustion and then attack it. People call the DNR to report such events or the sighting of stray dogs on their farms. This is a mistake. The DNR is seriously concerned, but has no jurisdiction over stray dogs. This duty belongs to the county and is assigned here to the Animals Control Section of the Sheriff's Department (phone 971-8400). Two of the department's three animal control officers patrol the vast areas of the county beyond city limits. They handle more than 2,300 complaints a year and pile up 64,000 miles on the road responding to complaints or found-dog reports. If a dog can be identified, it is taken home. If the returned dog is unlicensed, the owner is advised of the law about licensing and may be given a citation allowing 10 days in which to comply.

Problems also arise from dogs at home who are not properly restrained and this led me to wonder if our mail delivery people in Chelsea were menaced by dogs. Postmaster Larry Williams said that while unfriendly dogs are a constant concern, it had been five years since a Chelsea carrier had been seriously bitten. Larry then loaned me a copy of a Dog Bite Addressing Kit for Postmasters published in May. In it, Frank Johnson, Jr., Assistant Postmaster General, revealed that summer is a high risk season for dog bites. He also said, "more than 5,000 carriers suffered the pain and emotional trauma of being bitten by a dog in 1985."

Unidentified stray dogs picked up by animal control officers are taken to the Humane Society of Huron Valley (phone 662-5585). According to Steve Diuble, shelter manager for the society, 4,921 dogs came into their care in 1985, 2,741 of these were strays. Thirty percent were returned to their owners who were wise enough to phone, and then visit, the society's establishment at 3100 Cherry Hill Rd. During the year 1,202 dogs were adopted and could begin new lives in homes where they were wanted, loved, licensed and identified. Anyone seeking a pet of no specific genealogy should certainly go to the Humane Society for an adorable dog or cat who needs a home.

Some 2,436 dogs at the shelter that no one wanted were painlessly euthanized. The Humane Society has a limited amount of space and money for unwanted animals and, according to Diuble, "Washtenaw county is overpopulated with canines. With the exception of dogs used for breeding, the Humane Society urges pet owners to have their animals neutered."

We once had a beautiful Irish Setter named Terry whom we did not have neutered. He had AKC bloodlines extending back for generations and when he sat on the front seat of our Ford truck, people got the impression that a Cadillac had just passed by. He was trained to stay out of the road and within our property lines. Unfortunately, with his wondrous sense of smell, a male hunting dog can be aware of a female in heat at unbelievable distances. Three times Terry ran away and on the third he was killed by a car near his own home.

Our present dog, a seven-year-old Golden Retriever named Sandy, is neutered. He very seldom leaves our home turf, but his love of children did draw him to meet them on their way to or from school until the children themselves taught him to wait until they came into his yard. What has surely saved Sandy's life is his surgical relief of interest in the opposite sex.

The cost of neutering an animal is about $50, a very small price to pay for protecting a beloved pet.

Medical care for a dog has more or less kept pace with inflation compared with the staggering increases in the cost of human medicine.

Once every three years, each dog is required by law to have a rabies shot. At the same time the animal is given a professional checkup by a registered doctor of veterinary medicine (DVM). This includes on-the-spot, while-you-wait, microscopic examination of a blood sample for symptoms of the dreaded, fatal heartworm disease. The malady is transmitted via mosquitoes and during the mosquito season the dog's diet must be faithfully supplemented by good tasting, cookie-like pills.

Dr. Wilfred C. Lane of Chelsea, who has been practicing veterinary medicine for 36 years, is now aided by a staff of DVM's. They take care of about 5,000 pets per year. Their services not only include physicals, shots, tests, prescriptions and urgent promotion of ID tags but also include the treatment of animal injuries and illnesses. Two thirds of Dr. Lane's four footed patients are dogs. They come from miles around, including Ann Arbor.

Dr. Lane warns dog owners, faced at this time of year with days of hot weather, no to leave a dog in a hot car. Lowering the windows an inch or so will not provide sufficient ventilation for the dog to survive for long.

He also warns dog owners against allowing a dog to stick its head out of an open window of a moving car. This can injure the dog's eyes. Dangerous, too, is permitting a dog to ride in the bed of an open pickup truck because the dog may jump out of the truck while it is parked or, worse, while it is in motion.

Dr. Lane was pressed for time during our interview but he pro-

FOUR CABINETS FULL OF HISTORY were wheeled into the Chelsea High school media center on Monday morning. That's when the complete microfilm set of the New York Times arrived at the school. ## High School Math Teacher Offers Motivational Course

Chelsea High school math instructor Ken Sullins has spent the last two years running what amounts to a motivational course for any interested students called, "Because I Care."

Sullins has been running the program on his own time, has spent a lot of his own money, but is not officially backed by the high school administration, he says.

Two years ago about six or seven students took part, but last year the number fell to four. He has no idea how many will turn out next fall, although he's considering a different approach to promoting the program. He thinks having about 30 students would be a "tremendous number," although he'd love to have 100, about the same number who regularly participate in a similar program run in Royal Oak.

His program is modeled after several other successful programs, such as "The Winner's Circle," from the Success Motivation Institute. It's designed to help students understand exactly what success is, and how to achieve it. And he stresses that success is not necessarily achieved by a 4.0 grade point average, or becoming an all-state forensics student.

Although his program may sound as though it's for high achievers or academically gifted students, he's really aiming it at all students.

"I started putting this program together when I was teaching at Carsonville six years ago," Sullins said.

"I had one student who was valedictorian of his class and all he knew was he wanted to go to college. He didn't know where he wanted to go, or what he wanted to do. I also had another boy who was an all-state football player who wasn't a good student. But when he made all-state he thought maybe he could go to college, but I couldn't get him in anywhere. He hadn't seen college as an option until it was too late. I realized that if I had the best kid academically and he didn't know what he wanted to do with himself, and I had a below average kid who doesn't see his options, then there are probably a lot of others like them."

Sullins' course is about how to set goals and how to achieve them. It's about helping students longed it for a final observation. "People call dogs and cats 'dumb' animals," he said. "Dumb, of course, has its origin as the inability to speak, but it has become equated with stupidity. Believe me, in this sense, animals are not dumb. They are intelligent, and the more you appreciate this intelligence, the more you and your dog will get out of each other."

To dig out info for this column I had professional interviews with Dr. Lane, Carl Strom, an animal control officer of the Sheriff's department, and Postmaster Williams. I also had phone interviews with Fred Pearsall, Connie Weaver of the DNR in Jackson and Diuble of the Humane Society. It seemed to me that at least one of these people would give me a hilarious experience they'd had in their work with dogs. But no. Facing someone who represented The Press, they had no intention of having their enlightening viewpoints diluted with levity.

A bit disappointed, I came back to my office and consulted Bennett Cerf's vest pocket joke book which has a little chapter on dogs. I quote:

At the National Dog Show a dowager asked, "Do you know the way to the Labradors?"

"Yes'm," answered the attendant. "The gents' is in the basement; the ladies' down the hall on your right."

Nursing Home Information Offered in New Booklet

Potential nursing home residents and their families ask: How much will it cost? How can I pay? Skilled or basic care? Are there religious services? How many residents in the facility? Is there a community council?

The answers to these important questions and more are now in one easy-to-read informational booklet entitled "Washtenaw County Nursing Homes and Homes for the Aged." Developed by the Community Councils Association with assistance from the Washtenaw County Council on Aging, the booklet was funded by a grant from the Ann Arbor Area Foundation.

The 40-page booklet lists 11 nursing homes and six homes for the aged in Washtenaw county. Type of ownership, level of care, accepted payment sources and services provided by each facility are available at a glance. Inside, a periodically updated insert includes staff names and daily rates.

Dedicated to enriching the lives of nursing home residents, the Community Councils Association promotes and develops community support in nursing homes in eight counties in southeastern Michigan. CCA links nursing home residents with families, friends and community groups and individuals. The new nursing home information services now offered is just one more way CCA helps make the transition to a long-term care facility easier.

To get your copy of this helpful guide to area nursing homes call CCA at 663-3737 or write to Community Councils Association, P.O. Box 8101, Ann Arbor 48107.

Substance Abuse Agency Schedules Public Hearing

The Substance Abuse Coordinating Agency for Livingston and Washtenaw counties will be holding a public hearing on the 1986-87 Guidelines for Funding for area programs.

Written testimony will be accepted before June 23 by the Washtenaw County Community Mental Health Services Board. For further information, call 313-994-2601.

Safety Town Held For Pre-Kindergarteners

It's that Safety Town time of year again.

Every summer before taking their first crack at kindergarten, about 120 Chelsea five-year-olds gather for a Safety Town exercise. The current one at South Elementary began Monday and continues through June 27.

Program co-ordinator Kathy Thompson said it teaches kids some new aspects of safety and reinforces what their parents may already have taught them about crossing streets with the aid of traffic signals and crosswalks.

The eight groups of 15 are split into morning and evening sessions of four classes each. Teachers Mary Jane Davis, Marsha Hansen, Carol Smith and Debbie Wales guide the kids through their activities.

A $10-dollar entry fee was required and provides the source of payment for the teachers' salaries.

Volunteer aids were Tracey Wales, Shana Vosters, Kristy Smith and Monica Hansen. The Safety Town program, which has instructed 600 kids since 1981, is co-sponsored by the Chelsea Police Department and the Washtenaw County Sheriff's Department. Chelsea policeman Chris Minick and Washtenaw County deputy sheriff Joe Yekulis volunteered their time.

JEFF HARVEY shows off his winning entry in a model home competition as part of Jim Tallman's architectural drawing class. Jeff's was judged better than 11 other models.

JASON PETTY designed a contemporary ranch home for Jim Tallman's architectural drawing class at Chelsea High school. The students competed with each other, and Jason's model came out the runner-up.

Architectural Drawing Class Completes Model Home Contest

Junior Jeff Harvey was the first-place winner in a model home contest for students in Jim Tallman's architectural drawing class at Chelsea High school. It was the culmination of the year's activity in Tallman's class, and 12 students took part in the contest. The students used foam core matboard to build the homes. Each home was initially drawn in painstaking detail. Then students built the models from their plans, using small hand tools.

Tallman said each student spent about 100 hours actually building the models. He said the models were judged on attention to detail, craftsmanship, creativity, and degree of difficulty.

Jeff's model was of a contemporary home, complete with a solarium on the back of the house. He even had a car parked in the driveway.

Second-place winner Jason Petty, also a junior, designed a temporary ranch home. His home came complete with orange trees in the yard, and numerous windows, all put together with meticulous attention to detail.

Shawn Fleming Graduates from Air Force Academy

Shawn R. Fleming, whose former guardians are Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Pedersen of 8045 Chilson Rd., Pinckney, was commissioned a second lieutenant upon graduation May 28, from the U.S. Air Force Academy, Colorado Springs, Colo., and awarded a bachelor's degree in astronautical engineering.

The academy is a four-year educational institution graduating men and women to serve as career Air Force officers. In addition to military training, the academy offers athletics and an academic curriculum which includes basic and engineering sciences, social sciences and the humanities.

The lieutenant is scheduled for pilot training at Williams Air Force Base, Ariz.

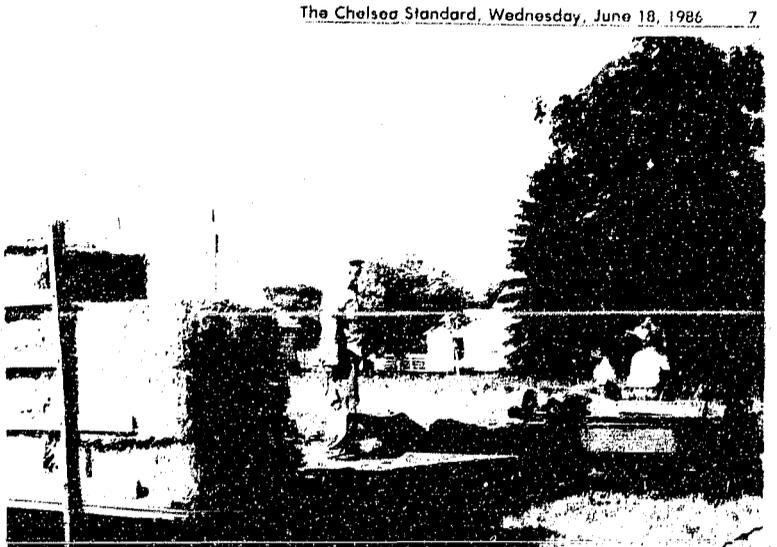

He is a 1982 graduate of Pinckney Community High School.

Break-in Reported At North School

Washtenaw County Sheriff's Department is investigating a break-in at North Elementary school last week in which apparently nothing was taken.

According to principal Bill Wescott, the break-in probably occurred Thursday, June 12. He said that there was no sign of forced entry and he had not determined that anything had been taken. He said there was some vandalism, such as writing on the walls.

"A lot of people use our building and even though we check the doors, it's possible one could have been open," Wescott said.

HURRYING TO GET HIS HAY BALED before it was any damper, Richard Bareis of Dexter-Chelsea Rd. rode the wagon and his son drove the tractor while the pair cut and baled in advance of more rain predicted before nightfall. "Hay's wet enough already," Bareis advised. Many area farmers faced a similar problem as rainy days seemed to alternate with the strong sun which shone on the other days recently.

A Billion Eggs!

Egg producers are benefitting from the addition of breakfast to the traditional fast-food restaurant menus. Since McDonald's introduced the Egg McMuffin in 1973, fast-food operators have recognized that breakfast offers a far better prospect for growth than lunch. In the last year and a half, the number of chain outlets serving breakfast has almost doubled. With all the competition, McDonald's maintains it serves breakfast to one out of every four people who eat breakfast outside the home and expects to crack over a billion eggs this year. That's good news to egg producers!

Henry Huelsberg Struggles To Keep Ahead of Jade Plant

Henry Huelsberg and Ronald Reagan have a lot in common. Both men are in their mid-70's. Both have had operations for cancer. They even wear the same brand of hearing aid. But reports from Washington have never indicated that Ronald Reagan has a 15-year-old jade plant in his living room.

Henry Huelsberg does. "It was the size of a wishbone when my wife passed away," says Huelsberg, who lives at 21000 Sager Rd.

The bare wishbone of 15 years ago became an overstuffed glutton of a tree. It outgrows potting containers the way people with eating disorders outgrow stretch slacks. Its current pot, an industrial-strength terra-cotta number, was summoned for duty four or five years ago.

"It cost $40 back then," he explains.

Today, the roots have appropriated all the available space. A physicist would say the jade has achieved its critical mass. This hulking succulent rides defiantly around Huelsberg's living room on a dolly he built in his woodshop.

Put it in a larger pot and it will grow even more. It will kick Huelsberg out of the house, make him live in the shop (where he was all set to live anyway, a few years ago, until the County said it was too close to the road to serve as a residence).

"This is the last time for repotting," he threatens. The jade seems to wither just a bit.

Then he looks fondly over at his cyclamen, which is only eight years old and was a gift another time he was in the hospital. It is a beefy plant, one whose nodding white petals unfold at the rate of 22 blossoms per month, beginning in January and petering out by June.

Last year Huelsberg counted 99 blossoms altogether and he probably would have counted more this season. The tuberous plant showed a pig's appetite. It slurped up a quarter-gallon of water a day and gobbled down its plant food once a week. Feeding time was "every noon when I came in [from the shop]"—usually before his 45-minute nap but sometimes after.

But then in April, with the blossoms still coming on like bad habits, Huelsberg had a terrible night during which bleeding ulcers made him lose five pints of blood. Hospitalized for three weeks, he turned out to have cancer, too, and the surgeon

Neighbors Dave and Darlene Schaffer helped out, watering the big jade, the cyclamen and the two or three smaller jades that sit demurely off to one side. Norm Hinderer, who has a place over on M-52 that Huelsberg wouldn't trade for, cut the lawn.

People sent 85 cards—86 if you count the one that just came from Dexter.

And when Huelsberg came home on May 9, there were 14 ladies planting a flower garden for him. They hung up a banner in the dining room, and they baked a cake for the occasion.

"I ate it all," he admits, "because what they didn't eat, they wrapped it up and put it in the deep freeze. I got about the nicest bunch of neighbors."

For a time after coming home, he couldn't keep his weight up. But now he's drinking a bottle of beer a day and eating five small meals instead of three big ones, and he's feeling just fine. He says he has to live 40 more years in order to outlive the oldest Huelsberg ever, a man who made it to 116.

So he's back in the woodshop at 6:30 a.m., then back in the house at noontime to nap and to feed his guzzling plants. And he's back noting the routines of his good neighbors. At 3:40 p.m., a red pickup wheels west on Sager Rd. toward M-52 and the Chrysler Proving Grounds.

"The people that drive by in the morning and afternoon, you can set your watch by 'em. I like that."

About the only real change he's made is to drive his Buick more than his pickup. The car is 11 years old, but shiny, rust-free and comfortable. The way Huelsberg figures it, he might as well use the car; it's no good to anyone just sitting there in the garage.

With the mileage it gets, it's more economical to run than that wolf of a jade tree that's taking up most of the front room.

John Duffey Completes 8 Years in Marines

After eight years of service in the United States Marine Corps, eight years of intensive instruction and hard work, and eight years of "travels and seeing everything," a Chelsea native is enjoying a few days of leisure at his parents' home before he starts looking for a job and really settling into civilian life.

"It's been a long time since I had some time off," said John Duffey, who received an honorable discharge from the Marines and returned to Chelsea on May 22.

It was Sergeant Duffey's second honorable discharge. Four years ago, after his first tour of duty, the 1978 Chelsea High School graduate re-enlisted with the Marines.

"I can't knock the Marine Corps," he said. "I had a good time."

Duffey's stopping points during the eight years were bases at Camp Pendleton, Calif., Camp Lejeune, N.C., Yuma, Ariz., and Okinawa, Japan.

He served as a heavy-equipment mechanic, a piston sergeant, a training non-commissioned officer and a safety NCO. He took numerous courses and received certificates in military training, personal finance, applied management and military law, among others.

He said he will seek work in an engineering-related field.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald E. Duffey, 23 Chestnut Lane, observed that the Iran hostage-rescue mission, the invasion of Grenada and the bombing of the Marine Corps barracks in Beirut all happened during his period of service.

He reported "feeling very close" to his fellow Marines and "wanting to go over" after those events. He spoke of a strong bond that joins all Marines.

"No matter where you are with the Marines, the Marine Corps itself is like a family. You don't feel alone even though you're thousands of miles away."

Thursday, June 19, 1952—

Senator Blair Moody was favorably received here June 14 when, as the guest of his friend, Donald Bacon, president of Central Fibre Products Co., he met Chelsea people at an open house reception held in the Central Fibre plant offices and was the principal speaker at the company's annual employee-management dinner at the Congregational church. Following his talk, Moody answered questions informally touching on matters such as the steel situation and the St. Lawrence waterway project.

At the annual meeting of the Chelsea Friends of the Library, Henry Schneider resigned as a member of the executive board and as secretary, because of ill health. Harold Jones, president of the library group, regrettably accepted Mr. Schneider's decision, and said all members and friends of the library experience a feeling of great loss. Other members mentioned the many fine things Mr. Schneider has done for the library, his church and the community, all in such a quiet, unassuming manner that many people do not realize the extent of his voluntary work for the good of the community.

General Development Plan Changed for Village Parcel

Land south of Taylor St. to Old US-12 has been redesignated in the village's General Development Plan to allow "medium density" housing in part of the area, and commercial businesses in another part.

The redesignation followed a public hearing last Tuesday, June 10 at the regular meeting of the village planning commission. The changes had been recommended by the village's planning consultant, Carl Schmult, Jr.

The area that was redesignated for medium density housing, defined as six dwelling units per acre, runs roughly from the south end of Taylor St. west to just east of Arthur St., south to Old US-12 (excluding a rectangle from Old Manchester Rd. to Main St., and north a couple hundred yards, which was designated for commercial use).

The planning commission also approved a suggestion by Schmult that Taylor St. eventually be extended to intersect with Old US-12 at Old Manchester Rd. Schmult's recommendations were based on a number of points. He said the topography of the area is not suitable for "single family detached housing," or another project similar to Lanewood; the soil condition is poor in parts of the area; part of the land fronts on Main St. and it is not reasonable to expect homes to be built there; and the village has already rezoned a part of the land in the west part of the area to allow medium density housing.

Schmult also recommended that another street be built connecting the Taylor St. extension and Main St. However, the planning commission turned down that recommendation.

Schmult also recommended that additional sidewalks be built between the Taylor St. extension and Main St. to allow an easy walking route to Pierce Park.

The area in question is 45 acres of a section in the General Development Plan known as "Neighborhood 7," which is bounded on the north by Middle St., on the south by Old US-12, on the east by the central business district, and on the west by Wilkinson St.

Cause for Celebration

The Tax Foundation reports that on May 1 the average U.S. worker had earned enough to pay local, state and federal taxes. In 1986, the average worker will have to work 2 hours and 39 minutes of each eight-hour day to pay his or her taxes. Federal taxes takes the biggest portion of that time—1 hour and 44 minutes. This is more time than it takes the average worker to earn his or her "daily bread" (1 hour) or to provide housing, and household operations (1 hour and 26 minutes).

Kelly-Miller Circus Coming to Ann Arbor

Clowns, jugglers, acrobats, elephants and a giant steam calliope will take to the streets of Ann Arbor when the Kelly-Miller Circus comes to town June 27-28-29.

Circus tents will be raised at the Ann Arbor Municipal Airport and a parade will be held through the streets of Ann Arbor on June 27. Three shows will be presented under the big top Saturday, June 28, and two shows Sunday, June 29.

The tent raising will be at 7:30 a.m. at the Ann Arbor Municipal Airport at the corner of State and Ellsworth. This free event will feature one of the circus elephants pulling the large tents into place. Spectators will also be able to watch the circus crew unload and feed the animals.

Catherine McAuley Health Center of Ann Arbor is sponsoring the circus. Funds raised will be used to benefit the labor and delivery units at St. Joseph Mercy Hospital in Ann Arbor.

Betsy Durbin, chairperson of the Circus Committee said the parade, co-sponsored by Tally Hall, will start at noon at Tappan and South University then will proceed down S. University, State, Liberty, Main, and William to State and S. University.

A main attraction of the parade will be the giant steam calliope pulled by a team of Belgian horses. The last time a calliope was paraded through the streets of Ann Arbor was in 1939.

The parade will also feature elephants, llamas, equestrian units, clowns, local 4-H groups, still-walkers, jugglers, unicyclists and musicians.

The performances Saturday, June 28, will be at 11 a.m., 2 p.m. and 6 p.m. Sunday, June 29, performances will be at 2 and 4:30 p.m. Tickets are $6 for adults, $4 for children under 12. There is no reserved seating and tickets for the various shows are not interchangeable.

Durbin said tickets are expected to sell out in advance, so early purchase is advised. For more information call 572-3069.

Each performance will feature clowns, jugglers, animal acts, aerial acrobatics and more.

Bulldog Summer Team Drops Two to Howell

Chelsea High school's summer baseball team opened league play Saturday, June 14, by dropping a double-header to Howell, 13-2, and 8-1, at Pioneer High school.

In the first game, Howell took an early 4-0 lead on a three-run homer and an RBI single against starting pitcher Greg Haist.

Chelsea got two of those runs back in the second inning as Greg Boughton and Tim Anderson scored.

But some shaky Chelsea defense allowed Howell to break the game open with five runs in the fourth inning, and four more in the sixth.

Haist was relieved in the fourth inning by Randy Ferry.

Chelsea could manage only four hits, all singles. Rob Murrell had two, and Brian Coy and Tim Anderson, one each.

"Our defense wasn't much to write home about," said coach Akel Marshall.

"We made quite a few mistakes, but there were also some encouraging signs."

In the nightcap, Chelsea did play better as they trailed by only 3-1 entering the bottom of the sixth inning.

However, after two were out in the sixth, Howell scored five times as, "our pitcher tired and gave up a few hits," Marshall said.

Chelsea's batting slump continued as Murrell and Coy had the only two hits of the game for Chelsea.

Boughton was the starting pitcher, but developed a blister in the second inning and was relieved by Matt Kemp. Kemp held Howell in check until the five-run sixth inning.

"We're going to be all right," Marshall said.

"We only had six hits in the games, but we did hit the ball pretty good for our first game action."

Chelsea's team is composed of players who will be trying out for the varsity team next spring. They'll be playing in two leagues in Ann Arbor. During the week they play in the Ann Arbor

SPORTS NOTES

BY BRIAN HAMILTON

I play for perhaps the worst softball team ever to pick up a Bombardier in the Monday night Municipal League in Ann Arbor—the ADP Nickel Boys.

About the only thing that has gone right for us this year is we were able to get sponsorship by ADP Network Services, a computer company I used to work for several years ago. As a matter of fact, most of the team is made of ex-ADP people. About a month after the company signed the check, they had a massive layoff, which included quite a few of my teammates. Now there are far more guys on the team who are unemployed than work for ADP. The joke is that there are more guys on the team than there are ADP employees. That's not quite true, but the Nickel Boys can be a barrel of laughs.

As an illustration of just how bad we are, through the first four games of the season, we had been out-scored 62-2. That's not a misprint. It's probably needless to say that we didn't win any of those games. Our manager figured that over the last five years the team has an over-all 14-56 record, and several of those wins came via forfeit. However, last Monday we almost broke out of it in a big way and scored 19 runs but still lost the game.

Our team, the finest collection of non-athletes I've ever sported with, has had a nasty habit of snatching defeat from the jaws of victory. We tend to play pretty good defense for four or five innings, and horrible defense the other two. With our team, you can't always predict when those two innings will come. But they always do.

Last Monday night, though, it was our Keystones offense that failed us. Late in the game, with the score tied and one out, our opponents pulled off a most unusual double play. With runners on first and second, our slugger hit a pop-up between home plate and the pitcher's mound. The pitcher tried to field it, but dropped the ball. It didn't matter because the umpire correctly called the batter out on the infield fly rule. The pitcher fired to third to try to nail our speedster, but the runner was safe, and the ball trickled away.

Meanwhile, our runner at first had made it all the way to second base. When he rounded the bag he heard the ump yell, "out," referring to the batter. So, of course, seeing the ball on the ground, the natural thing to do was hoof it to third. He dove head first into third base with a slide. Kirk Gibson would be proud of it, but was dismayed to discover a teammate already standing on the bag. We may be inept, but we do understand that having two runners on a base just won't do.

Having our offense fail us like that is unusual because we rarely have two guys on the bases at the same time. Generally it's our defense that buries us. We throw to the wrong bag, overthrow the cut-off man, misjudge fly balls, and try to throw runners out at the plate even though we've maybe thrown out one guy at home in the last four years.

My lovely wife, who plays for Jiffy Mix here in Chelsea, which happens to be a pretty good team, says her team would give us all we could handle. That's probably not too far from the truth. In every one of our games, after the first inning or two, our opponents realize they've considerably over-estimated our power and pull their outfield so far in that it looks almost like a second infield. It's probably about the same depth women's leagues play. They're willing to risk an occasional home run to blunt our singles attack. It's the perfect strategy.

The other night I watched an inning or so of a game between the mighty Cavanaugh Clams, a team that features Jeff Daniels and Wayne Walton in the infield, both former Chelsea High jocks, and Wolverine Food & Spirits, whose team picture you can find in this newspaper. That one inning was enough to convince me that either of those teams could whip the Nickel Boys. As a general rule, any team whose players all wear cleats and matching uniforms can beat us. It shows a level of commitment to the game we simply don't have, although our shirts usually all match.

You have to look long and hard to find a team like the Nickel Boys. I'm sincerely grateful I stumbled onto them a few years ago. It's a rare team because it genuinely doesn't take the game very seriously, although we'll probably party into the wee hours if we ever do win a game.

A lot of teams claim they aren't real serious about it. But I think that's a way of lulling their opponents into complacency. Many of those teams get downright nasty when they fall behind. They yell at the umpires, they yell at each other when someone errs, and when they pop up, they commit Hara-Kiri at the plate. A couple of years ago, we saw a guy hit his own car with a Thumper after his team lost a game.

There are two or three teams like that in our division. They are teams full of gorillas who entered our league simply because they want to win every game. The team we played last week had a manager who didn't play. He was calling out defensive alignments from the sidelines, which seemed a little excessive for recreation softball. He also had a clip board and kept writing things down. Just what could merit that kind of attention was hard to figure. It was fun to watch him writhe in pain when we tied the game up in the fifth. If only he'd known our proclivities, he might not have gotten so wound up. But we sure weren't going to tell him. There's something about excessive enthusiasm on the part of our opponents that brings out what little killer instinct we have.

From what I've seen of the Chelsea recreation leagues, the Nickel Boys would not fit in here. Most teams here play to win. There's nothing wrong with that. Softball is a great outlet for that kind of competitiveness. I just wish there were a few more teams like the Nickel Boys. Then maybe we'd win a few.

(Late bulletin: The Nickel Boys were shut out again Monday night, 12-0. Our manager said he saw no encouraging signs whatsoever.)

Sixth Graders Complete Books for Kindergartners

For the seventh year in a row, Beach Middle school sixth graders paid kindergartners at North Elementary a visit, and for the seventh year in a row, children in both grades went home enriched by the experience.

The May 27 episode was the last in a series of episodes which saw students from both grades team up to produce a book—one child writing and illustrating it and the other serving as the subject.

"It's a project that the kindergartners and the sixth graders look forward to every year," said Joe Beard, whose sixth-grade class was one of three from Beach that participated.

The books, from 12 to 22 pages long, were written for the kindergartners and were based on an incident in their own lives. The children met and discussed that incident during an interview session held five weeks ago. The older kids then set to work fleshing out stories like "Brian Reilly's Crazy Dream," "Brand's Visit to the Fair" and "Howard and the Moaning Cave."

With the stories written, the kids then started on the illustrations. The emphasis, Beard said, was on bright colors and interesting shapes rather than on draftsmanship. For five weeks they worked, harboring a sense of anticipation that is exceeded by only one other event: Sixth-grade camp.

The project also gave the children a sense of urgency.

"They had the feeling that somebody out there was depending on them to produce," said Beard. Her termed the over-all results excellent.

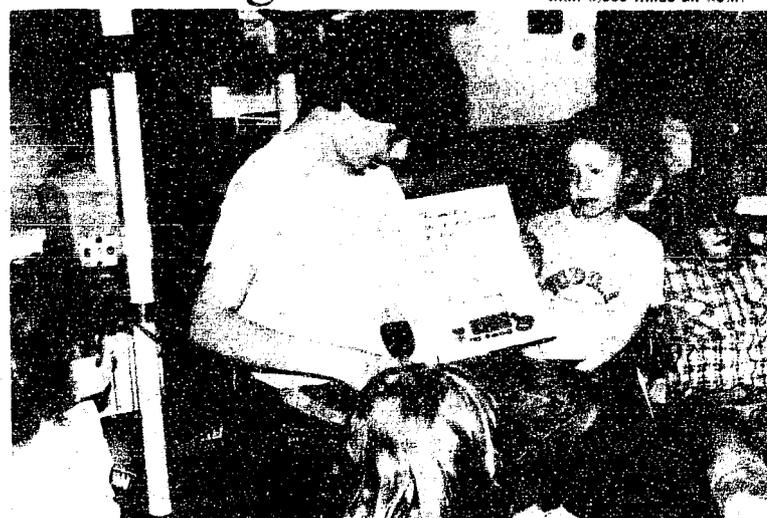

The exchange also tied the two schools together.

"Some of the attachments the kids develop is amazing," he said. "It's nice to see the relationships that develop."

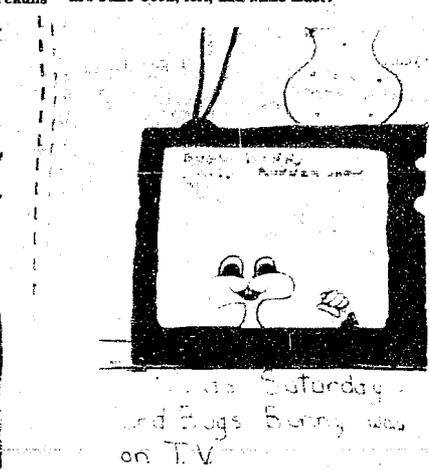

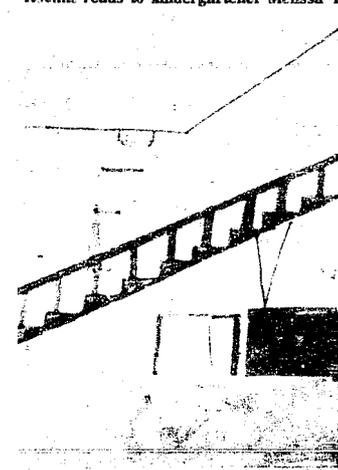

Sixth-grade teacher Margaret Cook, who is retiring this year, can take all the credit for the exchange program, Beard said. She started the event and has kept it going for all seven years. She even takes care of the minor details like arranging for supplies.

"Without her, this would never have continued on for as long as it has."

Once Beard's students finished, they brought the books to the kindergarten class of Sherri Plank. It was what she called an

"enrichment experience." Each sixth-grade author read his kindergarten-subject's story before the whole class. The stories were short, averaging just a couple of minutes. Polite applause followed at the finish of one. Then another author-subject team went to the head of the class for their reading.

At the end of the session, the kindergartners got to keep the books. Since there were 24 sixth graders and just 17 kindergartners (two were sick, one out with the chicken pox), the seven extra books—written on a (Continued on page 18)

Area Pork Producers Urged To Vote in National Election

Area pork producers have the opportunity to participate in a U. S. Department of Agriculture sponsored state-wide election, July 7-11, to help select individuals for appointment to an industry-wide body that will administer a promotion, research and consumer information order for pork.

Joseph W. Ames, county extension agent, said all pork producers in Michigan are encouraged to vote in the elections. Candidates receiving the highest number of votes in each state will be eligible for appointment by the secretary of the U. S. Department of Agriculture to the state's allotted positions on the national Pork Producers Delegate Body.

The delegate body, consisting of approximately 165 producers, including two or more members representing each of the 50 states and four importers, will be responsible for administering all aspects of the pork order.

Ames said that voting in Washtenaw county will take place at the Extension Office, 4133 Washtenaw Ave., P.O. Box 8645, Ann Arbor. The office will be open for voting each day from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Pork producers can vote in any county in their home state after signing a voter registration list certifying that they are pork producers in that state.

Pork producers are urged to vote in person at the county extension office. If that is not possible, an absentee voting packet containing a ballot and registration form may be obtained from Jim Epstein, National Pork Producers Election, P.O. Box 23762, Washington, D.C. 20026-3762, telephone (202) 475-5407. Absentee ballots must be post-marked by July 11, and received at the above address no later than July 18.

Votes will be tallied at 9 a.m. on July 15 at the local county office of USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

Tent Revival Meeting Set at N. Sharon Church

Evangelist Randy Taylor will be at North Sharon Bible Church Monday, June 23 through Sunday, June 29 with Pastor Tim Booth. Evangelist Taylor is one of the few evangelists who still hold revivals under the old-fashioned gospel tent.

Evangelist Taylor began preaching April 7, 1975, and since that time has held a two-year youth pastorate at the Open Door Baptist church in Mesquite, Tex. He has held hundreds of meetings throughout the country—seven day revivals and tent meetings. While attending Hyles-Anderson College four years, he held rallies and week-end revivals.

The meetings will be at 7 p.m. nightly. On Sunday the meetings will be at 10 a.m., 11 a.m. and 7 p.m.

North Sharon Bible Church is located at the corner of Washburne and Sylvan Rds., Grass Lake. For further information call (313) 428-7222.

Puppeteer Group To Perform Sunday At Free Methodist

The Seed SAC & Company, a team of puppeteers from Spring Arbor College, will present a program at Chelsea Free Methodist church on Sunday, June 22, at 9:45 a.m.

Seed SAC & Company features a partnership between five Spring Arbor College (SAC) students and a cast of lively puppets sharing the Word of God (the Seed). Their presentation offers a wide variety of ministry which includes music, drama, storytelling, clown ministry and a full Bible School program. The main feature of their repertoire is a musical entitled, "Naaman," based on the biblical story. Seed SAC's program is appropriate for churches, schools, camps, and Vacation Bible Schools. Young and old will enjoy and benefit from seeing biblical truths dramatized by puppet-type puppets.

Lower Costs Help Farmers Cut Expenses

Lower costs on many items of production are helping farmers cut expenses. The U.S. Department of Agriculture says many items farmers buy to use in production were down an average of 5.2% last month compared with a year earlier. Included in the lower-priced items were motor oil, gasoline, tractor tires, some fencing and nails, and baler twine. While some big ticket items like tractors have eased some since a year ago, some tractor-drawn implements cost more this year.

Red Cross Launches Campaign For Expansion of Headquarters

Washtenaw County Chapter of the American Red Cross will launch a $1.1 million capital campaign this spring to expand and renovate its 25-year-old facility on Packard Rd., in Ann Arbor. This announcement was made by David McAllister, local Red Cross board member and chairman of the chapter's Facilities Research and Development Committee, at the Red Cross annual meeting.

"This is the first capital campaign our chapter has conducted since 1961. We have tripled the amount of services and number of people we have served in the past two decades. Our volunteer force has grown to more than 2,500. To keep up with the community's demands and meet the future needs of Washtenaw county, we must expand our facility," announced McAllister to the more than 100 members gathered at the annual meeting held at the Campfire Restaurant in Milan.

Called the Leadership Fund, this capital campaign will provide the finances to add a new community services center to the current site. The addition will triple the amount of educational classroom space and provide working area for the chapter's growing volunteer staff. The new center will also include interview rooms for Red Cross representatives to meet with disaster victims and other clients in a private setting. A supervised child care area is planned which may be used by volunteers, blood donors and clients.

Other features in the expansion include new radio broadcast facilities and communications tower, a retail store for educational supplies, a library area, volunteer lounge, and shelter for emergency vehicles. The current Red Cross building will be renovated to be used as an administrative and teaching wing of the new center.

The local Red Cross chapter has been designated a Key Resource Chapter by the American Red Cross, an honor which puts it in the top 10 percent of all chapters in the nation. Last year it provided 64 first aid and cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) certificates for every 1,000 residents. The national average is 22. The local Red Cross, a participating chapter with the Southeastern Michigan Blood Region, provides 100 percent of the blood supply to Washtenaw county. In total, the Red Cross touches the lives of more than 100,000 area residents.

Comparing Red Cross statistics from the early 1960's to the present shows the need to expand its facilities. From 1961 to 1985, the number of Red Cross volunteers has increased from 1,250 to 2,560 and the total number of volunteer hours worked has gone from 35,238 to more than 100,000. In 1981, 3,460 residents received Red Cross certificates in first aid and swimming. In 1985, more than 22,000 certificates were granted. Units of blood annually collected by the Red Cross has grown from 3,867 to 31,000 in the past 25 years.

Two local firms have been hired to develop the community services center. Anderson Jacobs Architects have designed the renovations and addition. O'Neal Construction will build the center.

Campaign co-chairman for the Leadership Fund are Doug Ziesmer, president of Gallup-Silkworth, Inc., and Robert M. Harrison, Washtenaw county clerk and registrar and board member for the Red Cross.

Concluding his remarks, McAllister stated, "This new Community Services Center is absolutely necessary to meet the increasing demand for educational, health-related and emergency relief services the Red Cross provides. It will meet the needs of Washtenaw county residents through the 21st century."

Farmland Value Declines Sharply

The decline in farmland values continues to be of concern to Michigan farmers. The U.S. Department of Agriculture reports that the average value of an acre of farmland in Michigan is now worth about $936, down 11% from just one year ago. Farmland values of Michigan's neighbors, Indiana and Ohio, are also down. Ohio farmland today is worth $1,013 an acre, down 10% from last year. In Indiana, farmers have seen a 16% drop in the value of their land to an average per acre of $1,058.

Nationally, the largest decline in farmland values occurred in Minnesota where values dropped 26% to $609 per acre. Eleven states posted an increase in farmland values. The state with the most valuable farmland (dollarwise) is New Jersey at $3,913 per acre.

Director Burr Shines In 'The Chorus Line'

By Russ Ogden
Free Lance Drama Critic and Professor at EMU

Involvement in two musical productions at the same time whose stories are at the opposite ends of the performing poles must be a chore for Charles Burr, director in residence of the True Grist Dinner Theatre in Homer, as he appears as Zach in "The Chorus Line" currently and during the day directs an upcoming "The Sound of Music."

Auras of brilliance surge around actor/director Charles Burr in "The Chorus Line" running through June 15 at the True Grist Dinner Theatre. His directorial talents following True Grist will be expressed when Tibbitts Opera House in Coldwater presents "Crimes of the Heart" with Burr at the dramatic directorial helm.

This 1975 Canton High school graduate's intelligence does not blatantly hit you, but if you observe and listen to this learned young man the expertise of the total theatre will be expressed in his verbal thoughts.

Burr's dry sense of humor is encompassing as time forges ahead. Graduating from Eastern in four years "was an accomplishment," he smilingly chortles. Most students take from five to seven today. Kenneth Stevens, director of the Quirk-Sponberg theatres, was his mentor at Eastern with the two of them combining efforts in the establishment of Eastern's musical drama division of the theatre.

Burr's love of music was encouraged by his home environment in the Plymouth Symphony's activities while his mother is a middle school teacher who felt piano was a must for any young child. His grandmother, however, really appreciated music and all of its ramifications and may be the reason for his continual search for the undiscovered in music-stage music, that is.

"Musical theatre today is desperate, not knowing where to go!" "Perhaps we are moving closer to the opera concept, singing the entire libretto rather than incorporating a mutually satisfying drama and music interlaced." Rice and Weber's productions illustrate this in "Cats," "Evita," "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat," and "Jesus Christ Superstar."

Popular music in the 40's, 50's, and 60's came from the musical theatre. But today with rock... popular music is a repeated message literally pounded out with repetitious loudness and a sometimes melody."

Why did Charles Burr go into acting? "To better understand himself and the human condition. Personal exploring!" are his answers as to why he became an actor. Well, then, what about Burr the director? Burr believes that you must be an actor, first, a director second. And perhaps, ranking third (in his world), an authority on the compilation of musical revues, musical theatre.

His biggest disappointment as a director "is that few people are prepared." "Hardly anybody reads plays," he states. "No one knows what's currently being done. People do not or cannot read plays. No concept of where musicals or drama have been historically. Absolutely no perspective. Sad!"

Besides home surroundings including music, Plymouth's East Middle School English teacher, a Ms. Ardy Hayskar saw the boredom expressed by student Burr and titillated his inquisitiveness by offering him English play scripts to read. A second professional bumping occurred with Gloria Logan, a teacher who shaped the drama departments of the Plymouth Canton Salem systems in a fantastic department. Burr's professional hat was doffed to her several times during his conjuring up past experiences.

Why is he such a good director? Empathy. A good direction will include empathy especially if the director is a competent actor. Actors do not know how to relate on stage. Keeness and awareness of just the situation is necessary. The director then must mold, explain; leading the actor into a natural easiness of the role and the situation.

Is dinner theatre a second cousin to the legitimate theatre? Dinner theatre is great. Great differences between the two was not evident at the True Grist Dinner Theatre. Pretty much the same as other places. Good theatre over buffet. "Burr has never pandered to dinner theatre." He does not believe in editing a production in anyway; "the play always comes first." Present very challenging theatre and the audience will follow.

To me one of the finest performances in a non-singing role is that of Charles Burr as Zach in "The Chorus Line." He has developed into quite an attractive, positive dramatic force on stage. Zach's role seems so simple and yet if it is under or overplayed, the character can be crushed. Burr's Zach is truly a gem. Nice to see a director who can act.

RICHARD L. REED

Richard Reed Seeking GOP State Senate Bid

Richard L. Reed, 41, of Ann Arbor, has announced his Republican candidacy for the state senate in 18th senatorial district, which encompasses Ann Arbor and most of Washtenaw county.

Reed, a local builder and restorer of historic homes, was born in Chelsea and raised in and around Ann Arbor. The son of former Washtenaw County Deputy Sheriff, Frank L. Reed, candidate Reed believes his upbringing gives him a unique perspective for serving Ann Arbor and Washtenaw county in the state senate.

"Growing up in a law enforcement family," Reed says, "I was able to see, through my father's experience in his job, the full range of human behaviors from the very worst to the extremes of human nobility. From that kind of exposure there comes a sensitivity to the real needs of people and of communities at every level. There comes, also, an awareness of the political realities concerning what can be done in the real world to meet those needs."

In electing to run for the senate seat now held by Democrat Lana Pollack, Reed, a one-time Democrat, himself, says, "It is simply a matter of necessity. The 18th District cannot afford the luxury of being represented by a state senator who is unable to identify with the total needs of the 18th District."

"Where has she failed? Almost everywhere."

"Sen. Pollack not only has little understanding for the business community here, she has been overtly hostile toward business, and her voting record in the Senate is decidedly anti-business."

"Sen. Pollack's inflexible positions on education for the young in this district have shown a serious disregard for both the young and education. Her highly vocal and active support for the recent divisive actions of the Ann Arbor school board and her undisguised contempt for those whose opinions are different from her own, demonstrate clearly that she is not the person to best represent all of the citizens of this district."

"Though elected to represent all of the people, she has given little attention to any who are not connected with the University or to the liberal Democrat establishment in Ann Arbor. With respect to the University, the irony is that she has been a friend to neither the University nor to its student body. In fact, the state legislature's and Sen. Pollack's shameful disregard for the needs of the University had led to increases in student costs that place a college education at the University of Michigan almost beyond the reach of the average Michigan family. And her utter disinterest in the needs of Eastern Michigan University consistently mirror that of the state legislature as a whole."

"Her disregard for the distressing plight and the problems of the family farmers in Washtenaw county has further alienated her from a significant segment of those she was elected to serve."

"Finally, Sen. Pollack has never understood the role the arts play in the quality of life of communities in general and of Ann Arbor in particular. For the arts to survive, they need constant

Nature from Your Backdoor

By Glenn R. Dudderar

Lots of people feed birds in the winter—about one-fourth of all households, in fact. Spring and summer activities with birds may not attract them in herds the way winter feeding does, but they do give you a chance to see birds you'd never find at a winter feeder.

Summer feeding is one of these activities. Because various natural foods become available and bird feeding habits change through the summer, your feeder won't be as attractive as in the winter. You may see some birds that are in Michigan only in the summer, however, as well as those that pass through here on their way to other parts.

The standard seed mixtures may get you lots of grackles and redwinged blackbirds. They may also attract mice. Varying the food you put out may lure some less common visitors to your yard. A hummingbird feeder combined with a hanging basket of fuchsia or cascading petunias will appeal only to hummingbirds. To try to attract orioles to your yard, you can feed oranges or grape jelly.

My success with oranges has been mixed. I haven't tried grape jelly yet, but some specially designed jelly feeders are available commercially now and I'm going to try one this year. I grew up in Baltimore, so I have a sort of hometown interest in the oriole. I think it's at least as striking as the cardinals that some people go to such lengths to attract in the winter.

Another spring and early summer activity is to provide nesting material for birds. April and May are peak nesting months, but most birds that nest in the backyard are multiple nesters. That is, if they complete a successful nest and raise their young, and if they have time, they will nest again. All of them, if they lose a nest before the eggs hatch, will re-nest. So June isn't too late to put out nesting materials. In fact, the bad weather that began in mid-May may have wiped out many nests and started the whole nesting process again. I started putting out nesting materials on purpose this year after an old softball had had the cover knocked off it and the birds in my yard began to make off with the inside wrappings of the ball. I then put out some three-ply cotton cord that I had unraveled and cut into 10-inch lengths, and some gauze bandage strips about the same length. Unraveled baling twine is also good. Robins, sparrows, orioles, grackles and other birds will pounce on these materials, whether you stretch them out on the lawn or drape them over a tree branch or shrub.

Birds will also take advantage of lawn clippings. If you live in a neighborhood where everyone bags or rakes clippings, save some the next time you mow. Let them dry, and put them in a pile in the lawn where the birds will find them. If nesting materials are in short supply, that pile of grass won't last long. The same might be true of a pile of eight-inch twigs. Doves looking for nesting materials will take advantage of these.

In a very dry spring, try making a mud puddle in the garden for birds that use mud in their nests. Robins line their nests with mud, and various swallows also use mud in nest building. A puddle in my garden becomes a point of contention between nesting robins because it is located in one robin's territory and he tries to drive all intruders out. They, in turn, try to swoop in, scoop up a bill full of mud and dart away before they're caught trespassing.

A birdbath during dry weather will get a lot of attention from the local birds. Until the rain began in mid-May, my birdbath was used heavily, and often by such birds as orioles, catbirds, brown thrashers and rose-breasted grosbeaks, birds that wouldn't have been so visible in my yard if all I'd offered was a conventional feeder.

Baggy Paragraphs

By Ronald Moore

My Michigan driver's license came in today's mail, three weeks after my wife's license even though she took her test just a day before me.

Now, I know the importance of having a good picture on that card. Grocery clerks and bank tellers form crucial opinions about you based on that picture. You want them to believe your checks are good, and a mug shot of a probable convicted felon with three days' growth of beard won't instill that belief.

So before this picture, I took all the precautions. For instance, I had my hair cut by a nice barber in Dexter. He told me all about investing in stocks that I will never own and then clipped me for enough money to buy a few shares on margin.

The morning of the picture, I shaved carefully in order not to hurt myself. Who wants to look at an open wound until his birthday in 1989?

Next, I put on a white shirt and necktie. For my last driver's license photo, I wore a shirt I hated. (My other shirts were in the laundry.) I cringed at the sight of it every time my wallet flipped open. Coming to Michigan proved to be the opportunity to dump that picture.

Also from prior experience, I know that the most important thing is to smile. Once, a trigger-happy driver's license photographer caught me off-guard. Without a smile, I look like a habitual user of pharmaceutical-quality drugs. Try cashing a check at your pharmacist's with a picture like that.

Since I solve problems by overcompensating, I started smiling when I walked into the Secretary of State's office, and I didn't stop until after the camera flashed.

The result is much better. From the fatigue of smiling so long, my face had frozen into a half-smile and half-grimace. It looks as if I've just learned from my insurance man that my policy will indeed cover the accident, but since the time I last paid my premium the deductible has risen from $50 to $2,000.

My prior narcosis has given way to the look of the financially stunned.

As I said, the envelope from Richard H. Austin finally arrived with my license. What I found inside makes me wonder about the licensing authority in Michigan.

It seems that our Secretary of State really cares nothing for my driving skills. What concerns him are my vital organs and major glands. A Michigan Medical Information and Organ Donor Label accompanied the driver's license. Applied to the card, this label will inform the authorities who might pull my body from the wreckage that my corneas and kidneys can be considered spare parts.

It turns out that all this time Mr. Austin has regarded the drivers of automobiles not as a fleet of motorists but as an organ-donor pool. He must occasionally sit back in his chair and reflect happily that there are still eight or 10 million good kidneys driving around in Michigan, each pair needing only a good head-on collision to liberate it for a more useful existence.

Well, transplants are fine, but it makes me ask whether kidneys are really in Mr. Austin's domain. I think that from now on we should go to the Surgeon General for our driver's licenses.

And there should be an improvement made to the photo as a result: Tiny facsimiles of the lucky organs and glands I want to donate should be grouped beside my happily grimacing face.

It would make a nice composition. And it would represent an improvement over the traditional method of wearing your heart on your sleeve.

THE MARK OF A GLACIER at a field in Lima township: Stones—the springtime harvest—are borne by this wagon, which except for the rubber tires looks old enough to have seen the glacier pull out some 10,000 years ago. Economic planners never have found a way to market fieldstones.

'The Sound of Music' Opening at True Grist

True Grist Dinner Theatre of Homer, located in southcentral Michigan, will present "The Sound of Music" June 19 through July 20.

"The Sound of Music" is an honest and simple story of love and faith based on the book "The Trapp Family Singers" by Maria Augusta Trapp. It is a story of tremendous courage and indomitable strength against the evil forces that threatened to engulf the world of 1938. "The Sound of Music" has held a special place in the hearts and minds of theatre-goers throughout the world. The extremely popular movie released in 1965 increased its loyal following a hundred-fold and countless productions and revivals have been produced from Tokyo to Spain to Australia and London.

The music alone boasts a number of cherished songs played on radio and TV daily. And it's no wonder since the score is by the beloved team of Rodgers and Hammerstein. To list a few of the popular songs is to list the entire score: "My Favorite Things," "Do-Re-Mi," "Sixteen Going On Seventeen," "So Long, Farewell," "Climb Ev'ry Mountain," "Edelweiss," and more.

Portraying the young postulant, Maria, is Mary Bills, last seen in "A Chorus Line," and fondly remembered as Ado Annie in "Oklahoma" three years ago. Gail Betts-Trader, who will forever be the crazy aunt in "Arsenic and Old Lace," and last seen in "Vaudeville Or Bust," turns about face to portray the Mother Abbess with tender understanding. David C. Rhinard plays the stern Captain Von Trapp.

Others in the cast include Carrie Johnson, Dennis McKeen and Mary Chadwick, all of Battle Creek; Brandon Whitesell and Dana Groat, of Marshall; Cloe

Fox and Kim Heath, of Albion; Michelle and Kristin Galbreath, Windy Hartman, Trish Tarasiewicz, and Brooke Forbes, all of Jackson; and Jason Konecny of Coldwater.

"The Sound of Music" is directed by Charles Burr and musical direction is provided by David Wohl.

True Grist is a year around non-profit theatre with performances Wednesday through Sunday. The Bin Room Restaurant, connected with the theatre, open seven days per week, luncheon and dinner. Reservations may be made by calling (517) 568-4151 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. daily.

"The Sound of Music" is being produced by Drake Plating, Inc., of Homer.

Over the seven years, these extra books have amounted to a substantial collection that stays in the room, and Plank said they are real favorites of the kindergarteners.

"They pore over those books every day," she said.

On another level, having a book that is exclusively about you, it would be quite a boost to your self-esteem. Asked to describe how it feels, Jacob Szczygiel, 8, subject of "Jacob's Trip to Florida," had this matter-of-fact reply.

"Fine," he said.

Would Jacob take his home and read it to his brothers and sisters? Yes, he acknowledged, but he only has one sister.

Summer Jobs Available to Area Youth

Youths age 18 to 21 are eligible for summer jobs in the Michigan Corp. Jobs are available in most localities so driving should not be a problem for most youth. The jobs pay $3.35 per hour and are usually full-time throughout the summer. Besides the age criteria, the only other requirements are that the youths be Michigan residents and be unemployed.

How does a person apply? Application cards are available in each high school office or from the South & West Washtenaw Consortium office at Saline High School. The applications are sent immediately to the Michigan Employment Security Commission (MESCC) office in Ypsilanti and referrals are made to jobs in a person's local area.

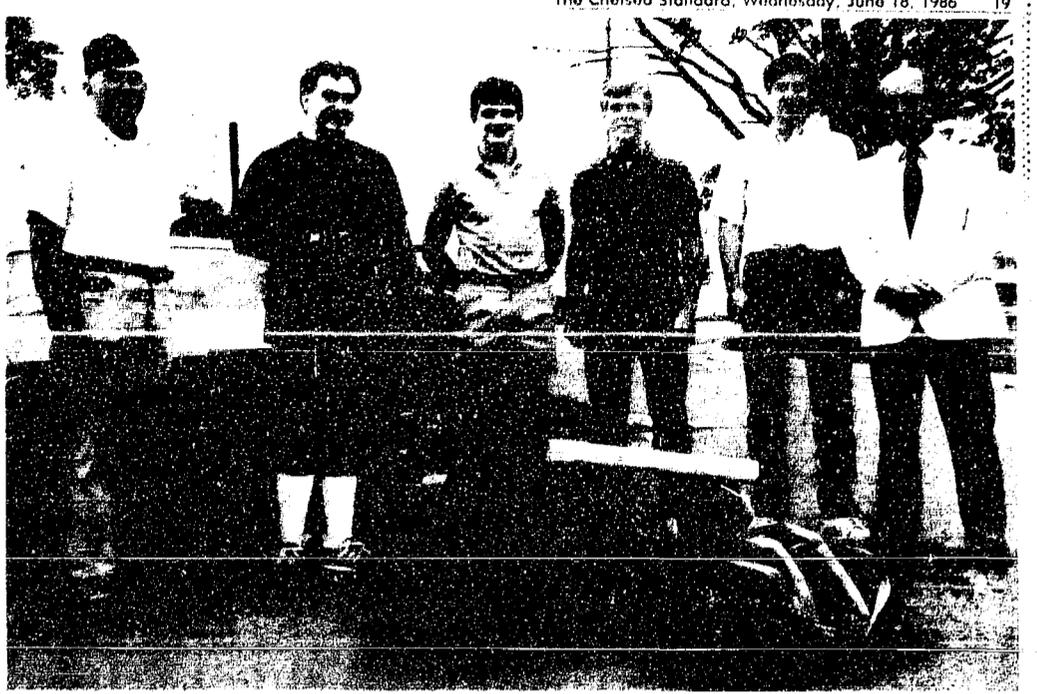

Typically jobs are at local schools, the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) in the Waterloo Area, and the area Soil Conservation Service.

For additional information calls may be made to Bob Miller, job placement co-ordinator, at 662-9898.

Joint Open House Set June 29

Enjoy an afternoon of pets, plants, and nature—for free! The Humane Society of Huron Valley and the Friends of the Matthaei Botanical Gardens will be sponsoring their first Joint Open House on Sunday, June 29, from 1 to 4 in the afternoon.

"The Gardens have had a Spring Open House for several years and we are very excited in joining our neighbors for this year's event," states Janet Griffin, director of development at the Humane Society. She added that "The public will have a chance to see first-hand what these two organizations are about and at the same time take advantage of a free, enjoyable, and educational afternoon."

will have showings of their new video about the Gardens. Refreshments will be served at both locations.

The Humane Society of Huron Valley is located at 3100 Cherry Hill Rd., and the Matthaei Botanical Gardens is at 1800 N. Dixboro Rd., both near Ann Arbor.

It appears as if the gap between man and ape is closing, says National Wildlife magazine. One young chimp, Louis has learned over 50 signs from Washoe, the more famous female who acquired the language 20 years ago.

Rep. Margaret O'Connor Will Seek Re-Election

Widely regarded as the state's staunchest proponent of free enterprise and traditional American values, State Representative Margaret O'Connor (R-Ann Arbor) has announced that she will seek re-election to a third term as the 52nd District's Representative.

O'Connor, whose last two terms have been dedicated to instilling a spirit of fiscal responsibility in the State Legislature, was cited by the Michigan Conservative Union as the legislator most careful with the taxpayer's money.

"I believe that most Michigan residents would be absolutely appalled by the total lack of fiscal restraint displayed by their elected officials at the state level," O'Connor said.

"In my past two terms, I have been guided by two forces, the first being the will of my constituents. The second is the Jeffersonian principle that it is the government which governs least which governs best."

A proponent of deregulation and privatization of government, O'Connor believes that the state and federal government should do only those tasks the private sector is incapable of performing.

O'Connor believes that the excessive taxation of Michigan's citizens that presently exists is damaging and restricting the state's economy to the detriment of everyone. "In a free enterprise system the poorest financial planning is that which takes place at the government level," she said. "If people are allowed to keep their money, their reinvestments in our state will provide a strong financial base upon which we can experience significant growth," O'Connor said.

In a display of personal financial restraint, O'Connor spent a total of $400 on her last re-election campaign—all of which was her own money. "I don't have fundraisers and I don't go to fundraisers. I don't ask for or accept donations and I don't go to lunch with lobbyists, it's as simple as that."

In addition, O'Connor refuses to accept the pay raises the legislators voted for themselves during her two terms of office.

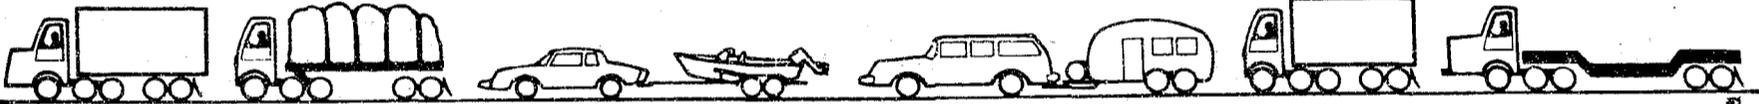

O'Connor believes she has been elected previously because her philosophy reflects that of her constituents.

School Board Notes

Present at a regular meeting of the Chelsea Board of Education Monday, June 9 were Schumann, Dils, Grau, Comeau, Feeney, Redding, Satterthwaite, superintendent Van Meer, assistant superintendent Mills, principals Williams, Stielstra, Benedict, Wescott, assistant principal Larson, community education director Rogers, special education director DeYoung, athletic director Reed, curriculum director Bissell, guests.

Prior to the regularly scheduled meeting, the board conducted a public budget hearing.

Regular meeting of the board called to order at 8:30 p.m. by president Dale Schumann.

Board approved the minutes of the May 19 meeting.

The board received a communication from Mary Ann Guenther in which she expressed appreciation for the recognition given at the previous board meeting.

The board received $300 to purchase books for the North School library in memory of Thomas Rodger, a former Garden City resident. Mr. Rodger's grandchildren, Jacob and Casey Rodger, attend North school.

President Schumann presented a certificate of appreciation to Memarie Walter in recognition of her diligent efforts with the junior class members in arranging the junior-senior prom.

Athletic Director Reed reviewed with the board a recently prepared philosophy statement dealing with the district's athletic department. Reed also discussed a communication pertaining to concerns expressed with regard to the scheduling of double-header baseball/softball games.

Superintendent Van Meer, updating the board on the 1985-86 board goals, reported that progress has been most satisfactory.

Curriculum Director Laurie Bissell reviewed with the board the revised standardized testing program for the district. It was proposed that the district adopt the new edition of the California Achievement Test, Form E, which includes a science and social studies section, higher level thinking skills, and updated norms.

The board accepted, with regret, the resignation of William D. Chandler. Bill has been on a leave of absence during the 1985-86 school year, and plans to make a career change.

The board approved an unpaid parental care leave of absence from Sept. 20, 1986 to Jan. 26, 1987, for Sally Weber, teacher/consultant, south school.

The board approved a resolution honoring Dale Schumann and Ann Feeney for their service to the Chelsea School District. Dale has served the board in the following capacities: trustee, 1978-79 and 1979-80; secretary, 1980-81; vice-president, 1981-82 and 1982-83; as president during 1983-84, 1984-85 and 1985-86. Ann has served as trustee, 1976-77, 1977-78, 1983-84, 1984-85, 1985-86; treasurer, 1978-79; vice-president, 1979-80 and 1980-81; and as president during 1981-82 and 1982-83.

The board approved the dates of June 23 for a second June meeting, and July 7 for the board certification meeting.

The board authorized a resolution adopting the tentative 1986-87 general fund operating budget for the Chelsea School District with a revenue of $8,189,881 and expenditures of $8,166,428.

The board approved a roofing bid from Gundrum Roofing, Ann Arbor, for the following work: Beach Middle school, east end of Section B; Chelsea High school, gymnasium; South school, general roof repairs; north school, replace skylights and general roof repairs. The funds for the $59,495 bid will come from the maintenance millage.

The board authorized an amendment to the Chelsea School District claim against the State of Michigan for the underfunding of mandated lunch programs.

The board approved appointment of Ann Feeney, effective July 1 as a non-board member to the Recreation Council. Ann will be replacing Ron Nemeth who plans to move out of the area.

The board certified the election results as follows: total votes cast: 1,864; tax rate limitation increase: yes, 1,140; no, 717; invalid. Board of Education candidates: Craig Wales, 758; Barbara Cherem, 530; Raymond Coulter, 151; Tom Flynn, 383; Pamela Holloway, 147; Roger Katakowski, 107; Robert Kinel, 145; Leonard Kitchen, 117; Rochelle Martinez-Moulliseaux, 348; Robin Raymond, 389; Barbara Rose, 143.

PORTER CEMETERY IN 1980, when volunteers beat back the thicket and reclaimed gravesites of original Lima Township settlers. Helen Valant led the drive to restore the cemetery but now fears bushes and shrubs will make a comeback without the co-operation of visitors.

Shrubbery, Flower Plantings Threaten Restored Cemetery

Helen Valant looks at all the improvements at Porter Cemetery and wonders if things haven't gotten too good.

Six years ago the small cemetery at the intersection of Sager and Fletcher Rds. was a thicket. Valant led an effort to clear away the brush and trees and restore the grave markers.

Now, with the lawn thriving, people are visiting the cemetery again. They are also planting things, and Valant worries that putting shrubs and flowers near the headstones will start the cycle of thicket-making all over again. The rosebushes planted at one grave keep the mower—a service provided by Lima township—away from the stones.

"When it was brush, they didn't come and clean the graves up of their loved ones," said Valant, who since 1936, when she came here from Detroit, has had an unofficial stewardship over the cemetery. Back then, she lived just across from it.

"It was nice and clean like it is now, but the tombstones was all layin' in the ground," she recalled.

Porter Cemetery was established in 1839 when Noah Porter gave the land to the township. Porter arrived in the area five years earlier (the oldest tombstone is dated 1834) and began operating a mill. The school building, which today is a dwelling, adjoined the cemetery and was known as Porter school.

The cemetery also is the site of a marker to William Wedemeyer. A Lima township native who became a U.S. Congressman, Wedemeyer committed suicide in 1913 by jumping overboard from a ship between Panama and New York. His body was never recovered.

Valant was personally acquainted with a man who is buried in the cemetery. (The last burial reported there was in 1958, but Valant has planned for her own burial in Porter Cemetery and her headstone already stands in place.) That man, Charles Jenks, died April 10, 1947 at the age of 96. Valant cared for him the last three years he lived.

According to Valant, Jenks came to Michigan in 1842. In 1862 he built the house in which Valant now lives. In his last years he was healthy and spry. He rose daily at 6:30 a.m., and subsisted on a diet of milk, bread and vegetables.

"He was healthy all the while," she said. "He had a good stomach."

Valant recalled that for some reason he never explained, Jenks called her Jacob. After a while even her own children began to call her by that name.

A document signed by a relative of Jenks' on June 1, 1891 remains in Valant's possession. It is a purchase order from John Baumgardner, Marble, Granite and Stone Dealer, Ann Arbor, that states Jenks' intent to pay $90 for "one monument of Georgia Marble, sizes and sketch attached."

The document was written and signed by Ed Zinke of Pleasant Lake Rd., a nephew of Jenks'. Valant recalled that Zinke used to come to the neighborhood once a year and buy provisions at a store there. He would then visit his uncle and leave him a bottle of beer and a plug of tobacco. Valant said Zinke was Jenks' only living relative who maintained contact. Jenks was buried in Porter Cemetery next to his wife and two sisters, all of whom preceded him in death. Each has an individual marker, and the monument ordered in 1891 stands nearby.

LEAVING NOTHING TO CHANCE, Helen Valant already has her marker in place at Porter Cemetery, the Lima township graveyard she fought hard to reclaim. In the background are the markers of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jenks and a monument to the Jenks family.

Don Shelton Bidding for State Legislative Post

Don Shelton, present mayor of the city of Saline, has announced that he is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for State Representative from the 52nd District.

In a prepared statement telling his plans, Shelton made the following comments.

"The people in this District need effective, positive and constructive representation in Lansing. In my service in local government, I have learned that negative people get negative results and positive people get positive results.

"In Saline, we have shown that government can work in an active partnership with business and labor to improve the economic future of our citizens while being fiscally responsible. We have built a viable economic base in the area and provided high quality services while lowering the city tax rate by 11% since I first became mayor eight years ago.

"I know from my experience in Saline, in Washtenaw county and in other areas of southeast Michigan that our schools, local governments, farmers, and all citizens need the positive assistance of state government to have quality services without tax increases. We need the return of our fair share of state taxes. I know from my experience in local government and in Lansing that the positive and constructive people of the 52nd District are not being represented effectively now.

"I will appear on the Democratic ballot. My candidacy is the result of encouragement from people of both political parties and by independent voters who want an independent and positive voice in Lansing."

DON SHELTON

Rev. G. T. Nevin

805 W. Middle St., Chelsea
The Rev. George T. Nevin, age 95, died June 9 at the Chelsea United Methodist Home after a brief illness.

The Rev. Nevin was born June 16, 1891 in Port Sanilac, the youngest of 11 children born to Hugh and Maria Nevin. He attended Albion College and was a member of the Detroit Methodist Conference for 60 years.

He served as minister of the North Lake and Salem Grove Methodist churches from 1964 until 1972. He began his career in the ministry in Standish and Sterling in 1924 and served there until 1935 when he went to serve in Elkton. Mention cricket and you think of an insect about the size of a paper clip. But in New Guinea, there are crickets longer than 10 inches with a wing span to match, says International Wildlife magazine.

Kindergarten Classes Have Commencement

Chelsea High school wasn't the only place to have commencement ceremonies, as the combined classes of Mary Lou Bower's and Gena Klink's kindergarten students "graduated" to first grade Tuesday, June 9.

As the traditional strains of "Pomp and Circumstance" played through the South school cafeteria, the graduates marched

JCs Sponsoring Teen Dance Friday Evening

Chelsea Jaycees are sponsoring their second annual Teen Dance on Friday, June 20 for area teens aged 13-19. The theme of the dance is "Surf's Up" to usher in the summer season.

Youths attending the dance are urged to wear beach wear (shirts, shorts, sandals). There will be various contests throughout the dance to pick the best dressed, best tan, etc.

Entertainment will be provided by D.J. Chris Alexander, better known as "Audio Express." Dance hours are from 8 to 12 p.m. and it will be held at the Chelsea Fairground Service Center.

The project is co-chaired by Connie Woodruff and Anne Merkel.

Each student was then called individually to receive his or her diploma, after crossing the "bridge of graduation." The diplomas were presented by the teachers, with Mr. Benedict on hand to personally congratulate each student.

The teachers were next honored, as Mrs. Klink received a bunch of flowers, and Mrs. Bower was given a wall hanging bearing the poem "Through A Child's Eye."

After the presentation, the new graduates proceeded out, while the familiar music once again played in the background. The students were congratulated by friends and family directly afterwards at a reception with cookies and punch.

QUITE A CROWD gathered last Wednesday, June 11 at Chelsea Family Practice Center, as all Chelsea School District athletes had their required physical exams. Nearly 400 children were processed by the staff. Exams included a check of height and weight, blood pressure, and vision tests.

ADAM HEETER has his blood pressure checked by Linda Warren, a registered nurse at the Chelsea Family Practice Center. Heeter was one of nearly 400 athletes who had physical exams last Wednesday, June 11 at the center.

Report Cards In the Mail

Wondering why the report card you were dreading still hasn't shown up in the mail? It could be that you or your child owe a library fine or have another matter to clear up at the school office. If that's the case, you can come on by and settle up, officials at both Beach Middle and Chelsea High schools say.

With grade reports from Beach already in the mail and those from CHS on the way later this week, the bad or good news is near at hand. If a visit to either school is necessary, you can stop by the office most any time during the coming weeks. Give a call first to make sure someone is in that day.

Beach school also invites students and parents to retrieve lost-and-found items that are available for inspection there. It may be that some report cards that had been thought lost will also turn up in that pile.

Planning Reunion?

Planning a Family or Class Reunion during the summer or early fall months? The Chelsea Standard is pleased to help you with notice of the coming event as well as an account to assist in sharing who came and what and where it happened as a follow-up story. Why not give a call and give us the information.

Dial-A-Garden Tapes Returning

Have you ever wondered what is the best way to water your lawn? Or how to renovate your strawberry bed so it will produce next year? Or if those spots on your maple's leaves mean the tree is going to die?

These are just a few of the many gardening questions you can learn the answers to by calling Dial-a-Garden.

Dial-a-Garden is a phone-in service that you can access 24 hours a day, seven days a week. Each time you call 971-1122 you can listen to a short tape covering a timely gardening topic. These tapes give tips on how-to-do projects, when to do them, how to diagnose problems and what to do to control or prevent them.

Each week Dial-a-Garden topics will be listed in the gardening section of this paper. Topics for June 18 to June 25 are:

Wednesday, June 18—
"1 PM-What is it?"

Thursday, June 19—
"Caring for Cut Flowers."

Friday, June 20—
"Choosing Chemicals for Home Vegetable Gardens."

Monday, June 23—
"Vegetable Garden Disease Control."

Tuesday, June 24—
"Keeping Houseplants While on Vacation."

Wednesday, June 25—
"Iron Chlorosis."

Bike Safety Program Set By Explorers

On July 12 Chelsea Police Explorer Post No. 461 will sponsor the annual Bike Safety Program. The Bike Safety Program will be held at Beach Middle school from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. The Explorers will go over all areas of bike safety and have a test course to try these skills. All youth passing this program will receive certificates from the Chelsea Police Department.

Also at the Bike Safety Program, there will be a fingerprinting desk set up for the parents to have fingerprints of their children made.

Police chief Lenard McDougall is also reminding bicyclists that when riding a bicycle at night, they should always have a strong light on the front and good reflectors on the back. Also wear light colored clothes and stay away from busy streets.
