LATEST ORDER of engraved bricks was recently put in place by the Depot Association. Engraved bricks now extend half way from the depot to Main St. Proceeds from the brick sales were used to complete the large east room which will be open for public viewing during Sidewalk Days on July 28. Brick order forms are available at the Chelsea Historical Society and the Chelsea Area Chamber of Commerce, located in the west end of the depot. The chamber and historical society are open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Monday and Thursday and 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Saturdays during the summer in conjunction with the Farmer's Market. Above, Lynda Collins and Elmer Kiel work on the sidewalk.

School Board Accepts Bid for Renovation Work At Bus Service Center

Chelsea Board of Education approved a bid of $101,766 for the renovation of the gasoline pump system at the Elmer Lindow Service Center.

The bid, submitted by Parks Installation of Milford, was nearly $31,000 lower than the only other bid submitted.

Work will include removal of old underground tanks and installation of new ones, a monitoring system, new dispensers, and improved lighting. It does not include the testing of soil after the old tanks are removed, ac-ording to superintendent Joe Piasecki.

Piasecki said the bid was about $25,000 more than the budgeted amount, which caused assistant superintendent Fred Mills to reduce other improvements scheduled in the district's maintenance millage.

In other board business Monday night, social studies teacher Rahn Rosentreter was recalled to take a part-time job after being laid off for two years. It is a 4/7 position at $19,838.71.

Other hires included Kathleen Thompson as a teacher-consultant at North school at $43,117; Lisa Nickel as a special education teacher at North school at $27,031; Roger Cox as a sixth grade teacher at Beach Middle school at $43,117; Amy Poljan as a 5/7 science teacher at Chelsea High school at $19,307.86; and Crystal Porath Heydlauff as a third grade teacher at South school at $23,959.

Cox was hired under a one-year contract to take the place of Marion Krutty, who is on a one-year leave of absence. He will also be an assistant football coach as he was previously head coach at Lincoln High school. Piasecki said it's likely there will be an opening in the district next year for which Cox is qualified.

Poljan will also become the new head softball coach, taking the place of Pat Clarke, who resigned. Heydlauff may also help on an unpaid basis with the cross country team this fall, Piasecki said.

"We've made an attempt to hire some people who are good teachers who can also help us with our extra-curricular program," Piasecki said.

Much of the meeting was taken up by a presentation by Kingscott & Associates on facilities needs for the district.

Police Capture Camp Escapist

Chelsea police captured an escapist from Camp Waterloo on I-94 Sunday morning after a foot chase through a cornfield west of the village.

According to police reports, Jeffrey Sansone, 26, of Detroit, escaped from the prison about 7 p.m. Saturday night and a search began about 10 p.m.

Late Sunday morning officer Norm Paton, on routine patrol in the village, saw a man who answered the subject at a telephone booth near I-94. When Sansone saw the police car, he took off running west through the field and Paton followed.

Sansone managed to elude Paton. However, about a mile east of Pierce Rd. he walked onto I-94. Officers Riley Sumner and Dennis Hall were waiting for him in Sumner's pick-up truck in the eastbound lane.

Sumner and Hall reportedly drove up in the eastbound lane and asked Sansone whether he wanted a ride. Sansone reportedly said he wanted to go in the opposite direction. At that point Sumner and Hall identified themselves as policemen and another foot chase ensued. Sumner chased Sansone up a hill and jumped a fence. Eventually Sumner was able to catch up to him after a quarter-mile chase through heavy woods, and Hall followed to help.

Police initially thought Sansone was responsible for stealing a truck Saturday night from a Cavanaugh Lake Rd.

Manager, Planners May Wonder Why Village Council Isn't Listening

Village President Pro Temp Joe Merkel led a village council meeting last Tuesday, July 10 that was conspicuous for its lack of action on a key issue as well as action contrary to the advice of village manager Robert Stalker and the village planning commission.

President Richard Steele was called away on business minutes before the meeting was scheduled to start, forcing Merkel to run the meeting.

Perhaps the key bit of no-action was on the appointment of an assistant village manager.

Deborah L. Kuehn, a planner from Jackson living in Ann Arbor, was Stalker's choice to replace Tom Warstler. He had recommended hiring her at an annual salary of $32,500, the same as Warstler's salary. Village council sat in on the interviews. Personnel committee members Dennis Hall, Stephanie Kanten, and Merkel were all in attendance last Tuesday.

However, council tabled action on the recommendation after a motion by trustee Jack Myers to appoint Kuehn died for lack of support.

Stalker said after the meeting that he assumed council wanted to wait for full attendance before taking a vote.

The matter was scheduled to be reconsidered at last night's regular meeting.

Also postponed was an executive session to discuss an evaluation of Stalker.

Council took no formal action on an amendment to the zoning ordinance that would allow an automated car wash to be built next to the Parts Peddler on S. Main St.

Car washes are allowed in the village's C-3 zoning district, which is essentially the area on M-52 north from I-94 to Old Manchester Rd.

The proposed car wash would be in a C-4 district. However, the self-serve wash next to Chelsea Lanes is in the C-4 district and apparently pre-dates zoning.

The planning commission recommended against changing the ordinance because there are no extenuating circumstances that preclude use of the land, a car wash is inconsistent with the "C-4" goal of lessening traffic congestion, it is not consistent with the intent of a restricted commercial district, and generally that amendments to the zoning ordinance should not be made to accommodate specific situations.

However, council indicated to developers that it would be at least willing to listen to their proposal after questions concerning water pressure and sewer availability are clarified, perhaps indicating it was not persuaded by the commission's reasoning. Several council members said they believe Chelsea needs a car wash.

"Right now, if there's a fire out there, everybody else closes their doors," Merkel said, describing the lack of water pressure in the area.

Trustee Frank Hammer, who represents the council at planning commission meetings, said the commission had "very good reasons" for the recommendation and council should at least consider their reasons. That, however, did not happen in the form of a motion to support the commission or even in much public discussion.

One council member said after the meeting, "why should we even have a planning commission if we aren't going to listen to them?"

Council also discounted the advice of Stalker in regard to allowing Roberts Paint & Body, located in the industrial park, to buy damaged cars and re-sell them to the public.

Stalker argued that although the appearance of the business to the casual observer would be the same as it is now, the company legally would need a use variance for the new phase of the business. However, council voted to authorize zoning inspector Rosemary Harook to sign Roberts' Vehicle Dealer Application to give the zoning approval.

A company representative told council that the company wants to purchase about two damaged cars per month through insurance auctions, repair them and re-sell them at a different location.

Village Has To Sit and Wait As Others Decide Fate of Building

The village has apparently run into at least a couple of roadblocks in its attempt to deal with the abandoned Hop-In building on S. Main St.

The village has been told by the Washtenaw County Building Department that as long as the building is secure and unoccupied, no action will be taken by the department to force renovation or demolition.

In addition, the village has been told by its attorney that it would have a hard time enforcing its dangerous building ordinance under the current circumstances.

There are other problems as well. The owner of the building and the Department of Natural Resources apparently can't agree on what kind of clean-up of the site is needed. Tests have shown that the soil, and perhaps the groundwater, are contaminated by former businesses.

The building has been the subject of increased interest lately as consultants for the Downtown Development Authority put together their beautification plans for the downtown. Consultant Howard Dardoff has called McKune Memorial Library, which sits next to the abandoned building, one of the keys to the downtown. He has gone so far as to propose creating a village cultural center in the area.

Demolition of Village Garage May Be Cheapest Alternative

A structural engineer hired by the village has determined that the village would be better off demolishing its service garage rather than trying to support it during excavation of contaminated soil.

Consultants have determined that soil around and under the garage at 40 W. North St. is extensively contaminated as a result of leaking underground gasoline storage tanks, which have been removed.

Village manager Robert Stalker told council that contamination is present "under a significant portion of the western-most section of the building." However, it was not known by press time whether excavation of those soils would be required.

Indian Statue Stolen from Home

A N. Main St. resident told Chelsea police that someone stole a statue of an Indian from their front yard last Friday night or Saturday morning.

The statue, about two-feet tall, was sitting about six feet from the front of the house. It weighed about 80 pounds.

Mr. B Returns for Sunday's Second Concert in Pierce Park

Mark Lincoln Braun, otherwise known as "Mr. B," brings his boogie-woogie piano back to Chelsea this Sunday for the second installment of the Concert-in-the-Park series sponsored by the Chelsea Area Chamber of Commerce and the Chelsea Recreation Council.

Also scheduled to perform is Chelsea resident Deborah Hinderer Rusinsky. She'll be accompanied by Heidi Cowan of Ann Arbor on piano. Rusinsky plays English horn and oboe and will open the concert. Rusinsky is in her 17th season with the Toledo Symphony.

Mr. B, a critically-acclaimed piano player from the Ann Arbor-Detroit area, has put out four albums, including three as a soloist and one with jazz greats J.C. Heard, Marcus Belgrave and others. He has performed for audiences coast to coast and all over Europe, Canada, and Mexico, including the Pianissimo Series at the National Center for the Arts in Ottawa.

He's also considered an adept storyteller, taking his cues from the bluesmen he has hung out with—Blind John, Little Brother, Sunnyland Slim, and Champion Jack Dupree, among others.

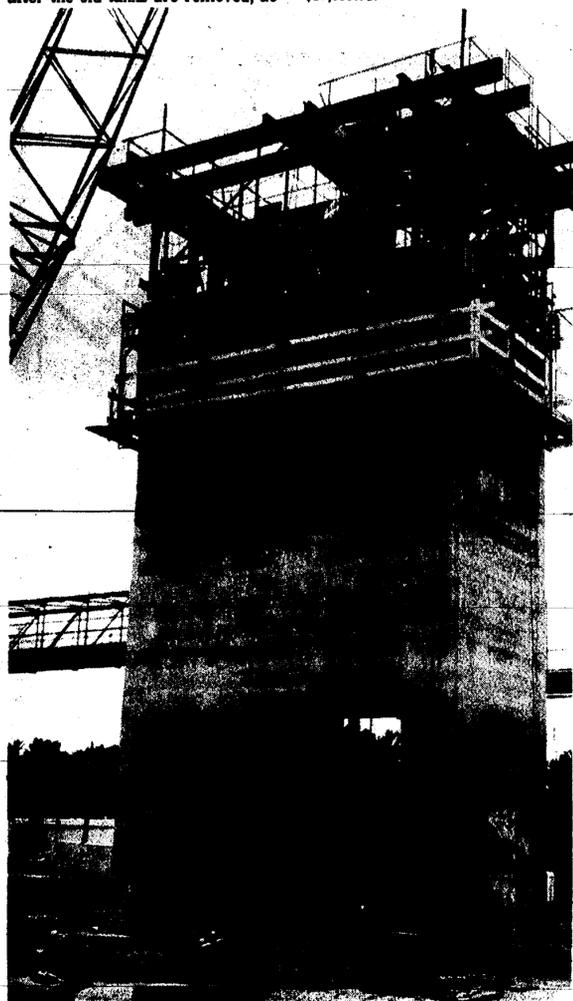

As he did last year, Mr. B will serve solo set of foot-stomping boogie and blues. His repertoire features his own original music, such as "Joybox Rumble," and "White Sox," as well as standard numbers such as "Swinging the Boogie," and "Kansas City."

The free show will start at 4 p.m. in Pierce Park.

MR. B will pound out the blues and boogie on his piano this Sunday afternoon in Pierce Park.

WORK HAS PROCEEDED virtually around the clock on a new tower at Chelsea Milling Co. to store by-products of the wheat milling process. The tower will actually have two storage silos, one for wheat bran, the other for midds. The bran is sold to the cereal industry and the midds are sold to Provico Big-H for animal feed. The storage now takes place in two steel tanks that hold about 80,000 pounds, which is less than a day's worth of by-products. The company accumulates about 80,000 pounds of bran each day from the 600,000 pounds that's milled each day into Jiffy Mix products. The new tanks will hold about 200,000 pounds and allow trucks to be loaded by gravity in about 10 minutes. It now takes about 90 to 110 minutes to fill a truck, according to Dudley Holmes.

Dexter Jaycees sponsored the organization's second annual Huron River Raft Race, during Dexter Daze. The race was held Aug. 9, with a 12 noon starting time from Hudson Mills Metropark. Prizes were awarded in several divisions.

The May 11 fire at McKune Memorial Library not only caused $8,000 damage to the 136-year-old building's rear porch and office, it forced the rescheduling of the library board's long-range improvement plan. Repairing fire damage preceded the expansion and remodeling planned to provide better lighting and new furniture in the circulation desk area. Money raised in 1985 also allowed the library to buy a Gaylord checkout system that speeded the book checkout process.

Village of Chelsea spent $56,851 for an IBM computer system for the village offices and the police department. In addition, the police department got software for tracking complaints (how many times a certain resident has complained about a particular item, for instance), licenses, parking tickets, personnel, vehicle maintenance, and bad checks. The police department also had the only color terminal.

On July 29 the Waterloo Farm Museum provided the background for a colorful gathering of Girl Scouts from 35 countries including Europe, South America, as well as girls from across the United States. Dressed in native clothes, the international Girl Scouts, and their American sisters, visited the Waterloo Farm Museum through the sponsorship of the Irish Hills Girl Scout Council. On the four-day trip the girls spent two days in the Jackson area, and two days in the Detroit area, where they visited Greenfield Village and the Science Center. The girls were being housed by Jackson-area families.

Waterloo celebrated the Bicentennial over the previous week-end with games for all ages, a parade, street dance, and community picnic. Starting Friday afternoon, there were bubble gum blowing contests, a crosscut saw competition, balloon bursting trials, and a softball game.

Chelsea Education Association sponsored a girl's softball tournament on July 17, at the high school field. The tournament was for seven local girls teams. Ribbons were awarded to both first and second-place finishers.

One of the most successful musicals in stage history, "Hello Dolly," opened in Chelsea High School Auditorium with performances on three different nights. The show that helped elect a president when its title amended to "Hello Lyndon" in the first year of its run, continued to draw thronging audiences on Broadway for more than five years. After that, and to the delight of the theatergoers from London to Tokyo and Melbourne, it became one of the long-run record-holders of all time.

Chelsea firemen spent a sleepless night when they were called out twice in the early morning hours. The first call came when a shed behind the home of Bentley Luttral caught fire and burned to the ground. Nothing was in the shed at the time of the fire. Cause of the fire was unknown, according to Fire Chief James Gaken. The firemen had barely managed to get settled down again when the fire alarm sounded once more at 4:41 a.m. and they were called to an unoccupied farm owned by Dale Heburn. The fire started in the unoccupied house and quickly spread to a nearby hipped roof barn. By the time the fire department arrived, the house had been almost completely destroyed by the flames and the barn was also burning out of control. The Chelsea Fire Department called the Manchester Fire Department for assistance. Both the barn and the house were total losses.

Chelsea Jaycees announced plans for a local invitational "Cracker Box" Derby race to be held. This race was opened to local boys who had constructed approved Soap Box Derby cars. A field of nine boys was expected to participate. The local race was held down the W. Middle St. hill.

Two brothers, both outstanding Chelsea High athletes when they were students here, returned to Chelsea High. When school opened the next fall, Philip Bareis took over the reins as the head football coach in addition to teaching mechanical drawing. His brother, Richard Bareis worked with the junior varsity football and basketball.

Blanchard Proposes 20 Percent Insurance Rate Cut

A one-year 20 percent cut in auto insurance rates for mandated coverages and a system to cut insurer payments for medical benefits has been proposed by Governor James J. Blanchard. Because the mandated coverages account for 35-45 percent of a typical auto insurance policy, a driver would see a cut of about 7-9 percent from the total premium.

The plan, released less than a week after Blanchard attacked his election challenger for not supporting far deeper cuts, also requires insurance rates to reflect income from investments of premiums and would establish the same type of fee schedule for medical care as the workers' compensation system. Insurers now are required to pay all "reasonable and necessary" medical costs.

"High insurance rates are a major burden on Michigan motorists, particularly working families. Our studies show the rates are too high," Blanchard said.

Acting Insurance Commissioner Dhiraj Shah, who said in November that bureau studies showed rates cannot be rolled back without a cut in costs, said a cut "is needed. This is a real solution to a real problem."

A Senate report on auto insurance rates found that from 1982 to 1987, the 49 percent increase in Michigan's rates ranked 32nd in the country, and the average premium of $486 in 1987 was the 22nd highest among all states. It noted the Michigan system pays more in benefits relative to premiums paid than do most states.

The rate cut, which the governor said would reduce insurance premiums by $280 million a year, falls substantially short of a 30 percent cut of all coverages approved by the House in December.

The Blanchard campaign last week began running ads attacking Republican challenger John Engler of Mt. Pleasant for not supporting that bill, although the governor took no position on it and now calls it just "a good proposal to get the ball rolling." Blanchard said Engler has opposed any relief in insurance rates.

Engler campaign spokesman John Truscott called the new Blanchard proposal a temporary cut that is "politically expedient. If the governor had a genuine concern about the insurance rate problem, he would have been involved in the debate in the Legislature."

Blanchard said he did not take a position on the House plan nor on a Republican package to cut rates by 25 percent for just mandated coverages but tied to reduced benefits because he "did not want to get in a bidding war."

The proposal he outlined Tuesday still has not been drafted into bill form. The mandated coverages include personal injury protection, property protection and liability.

The rate cut movement was spurred by a California ballot initiative cutting insurance rates in that state and a November report by the Michigan Citizens Lobby which said rates could be reduced by 10-25 percent, depending on the company, without reducing benefits.

Brian Johnson of the MCL called the proposal a step forward, saying, "The governor is being conservative on the rollback, but aggressive on the follow-up."

He said a key feature is incorporating investment income in ratemaking, saying if companies do that now, they do not make that information public. Another important feature, he said, is that benefits are not reduced, as would be the case in the Republican plan.

Johnson said MCL is concerned about how the medical fee structure would be implemented, saying it would be a problem if it was inadequate in its reimbursement rates as is Medicaid.

Nancy McKeague of the Michigan Insurance Federation called the plan "much better" than the House-passed version but is a temporary solution because it does not address underlying costs.

Uncle Lew from Lima Says:

DEAR MISTER EDITOR:

The heat had some of the fellers out of sorts by the time they got to the country store Saturday night, and Bug Hookum didn't spread much cheer with his report on the move in Congress to repeal the Gramm-Rudman-Hollins Act that tries to slow the hemorrhage of red ink. Bug had saw where a 40-member joint House and Senate committee claims the law does more harm than good. It says the hole Congress is wasting time dreaming up budget gimmicks to get around the law and shift the blame for deficit spending.

Actual, Bug said, what this country needs is a few hundred Congressmen that spend our money like it was theirs. But all hell needs is air conditioning and a better class of folks, Bug went on, and we are as likely to get one as the other. For sure, he said, Congress can't stand blame. The reason members have a 98 percent success rate of getting reelected is because they never do anything that doesn't have at least a 65 percent approval rate in all the polls.

You get to know, declared Bug, that the thawing of the cold war, the calming in South America and threats of peace breaking out in South Africa and other places is making these folks uneasy. Pritty soon, they're going to run out of reasons to keep pumping billions of borrowed dollars into invisible airplanes and studying ways to make war among the stars. If the Pentagon can't come up with enemies a little above us in somepun they're going to have to make up a new agender. It's true that people drown in water a little above em, Bug went on, but that line of thinking counts fer spending over our heads to.

The spending talk got a rise out of Republican Ed Doolittle that said throughout the history of this country politicians have been magicians. They do the difficult in a flash and the impossible takes only a little longer before the election. After they git the vote they disappear before our very eyes. Farthermore, Ed went on, Democrats that control both houses in Congress are masters of creative budgets, giveaways and what they use to call deficits of strength.

Democrat Clem Webster worked up a little head of steam going to the drink box and back. Then he said the Democrats try to git everybody's head to the public trough fer a taste, but if you foler the Reagan and Bush line at all you got to know the Republicans kick the little feller away and invite the big money boys to crawl in the trough and lay down sideways.

General, the fellers wanted to move the talk off that broken record. Zeke Grubb picked up on looking fer enemies and noted the recent report where American troops were their own worst enemy in the Panama drug bust. It's a good thing the Army's new helicopter couldn't fly and couldn't shoot, Zeke said, since our self destruct plan worked to good without it.

But Zeke come with good news fer fighting the heat. After all the jokes about air conditioned umbrellas, a feller in Chandler, Arizona actual has invented one. Fer $150 you can buy a seven pound unit that straps on your back and lowers outside temperature where you are by as much as 25 degrees. He has come up with a bigger $350 model fer golf carts.

At last report, Zeke said, the teler was planning to rent units at baseball games. If he can git the hell concession, Zeke said, Bug's plan to cut spending in Congress could be next.

Yours truly,
Uncle Lew.

McKeague said companies already include investment income in rate setting and said the fee schedule would not have a direct relationship to the rate cut. She reiterated industry arguments that "there is not a dramatic level of profit in auto insurance."

She said the fee schedule would bring costs down, however, adding auto insurers pay higher rates for medical services than does any other entity such as Blue Cross of workers' compensation.

Sen. Richard Posthumus (R-Alto), one of the authors of the GOP rate/benefit cut plan, called the Blanchard proposal "worth looking at. It appears to take some of our ideas, including a schedule of fees." He said he is concerned that the Michigan system not be harmed, but said rate cuts are possible if insurance costs are reduced.

Dan Farhat, manager of government relations for the Michigan Medical Society, said doctors are not opposed to a fee schedule per se, but said such a system must rely on physician participation. He said MSMS is unhappy with a fee schedule now in place for injuries covered by the workers' compensation system.

"We do think that there is abuse in the system and the providers are more than willing to sit down with government to resolve where the abuses are occurring," he said.

Nancy Fiedler, spokeswoman for the Michigan Hospital Association, opposed the concept of a fee schedule because its members are so short-changed under the Medicaid system.

She said auto insurers probably pay $1.13 for each $1 of service provided to an accident victim, but said, "This gets into the only avenue open for providers to recover any portion of federal and state underfunding. To take away this avenue is a design for disaster for the health care industry," she said.

The Blanchard administration has lost a court suit, which it has appealed, that it does not sufficiently reimburse hospitals for services under the Medicaid program.

Rep. Mary Brown (D-Kalamazoo), who ushered the 30 percent rate cut through the House, said the proposal will be priority in the fall. She said it does not cut benefits but will produce "a marked reduction in premiums that will not hurt insurance companies."

Hospital Offers Forms for Medical Treatment of Children

The Emergency Services staff at St. Joseph Mercy Hospital, Ann Arbor, wants parents to be aware that children brought to an emergency room by anyone other than the parent or legal guardian may need to have an authorization for medical treatment form filled out in advance.

Hospital spokesman Bill Brauker said that in an emergency situation a child may be treated without a parent's consent if a physician determines that immediate medical care is necessary. If it is not an emergency, but a child needs unexpected care, parental consent is necessary, he said.

"Forms should be completed and provided to any adults who may care for your children in your absence," Brauker said. "In addition to providing authorization to treat the child, the form will include insurance and medical information that will be helpful to anyone providing treatment to the child."

Forms may be obtained from the hospital by calling 572-5946.

The Job Training Partnership Act was passed to prepare economically disadvantaged and dislocated workers for productive employment.

Free auto safety checks were conducted by the Chelsea Jaycees. The inspections were offered as another of the Jaycees' community service projects. A safety-check lane was opened at the Stop & Shop supermarket parking lot. Area residents were invited to bring their autos to the parking lot for inspection. At that time, Jaycees checked brakes, front and rear lights, turn signals, steering, tires, the exhaust system, glass, horn, windshield wipers, rear-view mirror and seat belts.

One of four voting machines that were to be used for the first time in the Aug. 7 primary election, was being set up for demonstration purposes in the Chelsea Electric Light and Water Department office in the Municipal building. The machines were on a rental basis. Voting machines were an alternative to forming another precinct in the township because of the increasing numbers of electors.

Heinz Deidchoff, International Farm Youth Exchangee from Germany, arrived in Washtenaw county for a three-week stay with the Meyer family. Deidchoff's visit to Washtenaw county was part of a six-month program in which he visited farms and lived with farm families in Michigan and Kansas. While in Washtenaw county Heinz took part in all family activities with the Meyer family. Deidchoff and his father operated a 130-acre livestock farm in the north-western part of Germany. The primary purpose of this program was to promote greater world understanding. Rural youth from 45 countries accomplished this by living and working together.

BEHIND THE HEADLINES:

Nuclear Weapons at Risk in Soviet Union

By Philip C. Clarke

Behind all the talk at the Washington summit this June was an unspoken fear: What might happen if mounting strife in the Soviet Union erupts into a nuclear civil war? Although the danger may not have been discussed directly by Presidents Gorbachev and Bush, it was very much on the mind of Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze when he accepted nomination to the 28th Communist Party Congress in Moscow this month. "No one," said Shevardnadze, "can calculate the consequences of a social explosion capable of igniting not only defogged minds but also giant stockpiles of nuclear and chemical weapons..."

The Soviet Foreign Minister was making a pitch for continued control of the country by Mikhail Gorbachev's centralized authority. But a recent report by Radio Free Europe/Radio Liberty confirmed that the Kremlin leadership appears to be "seriously concerned about the long term security of its estimated 33,000 nuclear warheads located throughout the country." According to the radio services' Soviet/East European Report, after Lithuania's declaration of independence last March, "Moscow took steps to protect tactical nuclear stockpiles in the Baltic republics by moving them to more secure places in the Russian Republic."

But there have been other incidents of a more dangerous nature. According to the Radio Free Europe/Radio Liberty account, "during the latest round of ethnic clashes in the Transcaucasus in January, extremists were said to have attacked an arms depot near Baku containing a stockpile of 100 KGB-guarded tactical nuclear weapons." It added that "this was one of the reasons for Moscow's decision to send troops to Azerbaijan."

There are concerns in the U. S., as well. During the fighting between Moslem nationalists and Red Army units in the Azerbaijani capital last January, the Pentagon revealed that a large stockpile of nuclear weapons was stored just south of the city. And control of the storage area was described as uncertain. Earlier, Vice-President Quayle told a National Defense University symposium in Washington that "a frightening question is emerging in this nuclear era: Who controls nuclear weapons during a period of intense civil strife, and who has the authority to release them in a time of great instability, or a prolonged internal crisis? This is something that we have not debated... but that we must think about."

Until now, most attention has centered on the proliferation of nuclear and missile technology among Third World nations. By the end of the decade, at least 20 nations are expected to have the capability to launch missiles with chemical, biological or even crude nuclear weapons, including Iraq, Libya and North Korea. But according to Harlan Jencks, a research associate at the University of California at Berkeley, the possibility of nuclear civil war in both China and the Soviet Union poses an even greater threat to world peace. Jencks says the danger is especially acute in the Soviet Union where, according to his research, "there are nuclear weapons in most of the 15 republics." In fact, he adds, "each tank rifle division has a nuclear-rocket battalion."

For Americans basking in the belief that the Cold War is over, such warnings should serve as reminders that the world remains a dangerous place. All the more urgent reason, argue realists, for early deployment of the Strategic Defense Initiative, providing a now vulnerable America with a shield against the danger of missile attack—from whatever source.

BookCrafters Names Employee of the Month

Wilma Keiser is a very special lady; in fact, one short meeting with her would convince anyone of that. She takes her position at BookCrafters seriously, giving all the work-crafters the assurance of detailed attention. Wilma is a nine-year veteran opaquer at BookCrafters, and she deserves the honor of Employee of the Month for July.

As an opaquer, Wilma checks and rechecks customer's negatives, making certain finished copy is perfect. Since she is also familiar with the other jobs in her department, Wilma can be depended on to "fill-in" as needed. Wilma admits that she enjoys her job and likes the people she works with. And it's quite obvious her co-workers like her, too. Nominations include the following remarks:

"She is the best example of what I look for in an employee—hard working and very pleasant. BookCrafters should be very proud."

"She has been very helpful to me during the past few weeks I've been employed here. Wilma is very personable and has made me feel at ease during this time..."

"She is a very good example of an excellent employee. She is willing to help new employees with their new job tasks. She tries to make you feel at home right from the beginning..."

"She takes pride in what she does and is willing to put forth the extra effort to go above what is expected of her..."

Wilma's interests outside BookCrafters include a husband, who farms a 91-acre farm as well as additional acreage he rents, four children, and four grandchildren. As she explains it, "My family is my life." Lucky people!

U-M Law School Offers Legal Help to Poor Women

Students at the University of Michigan Law School have volunteered to offer legal assistance to indigent women who are victims of domestic violence.

"Our Family Law Project is the only place many battered women can turn to in Washtenaw county, since public legal services no longer handle cases like those," says Jeff Nimz, a second-year U-M Law School student who is one of 100 volunteers in the project.

Describing his experience in the June issue of Michigan Today, a U-M alumni publication, Nimz calls the process of defending a poor woman seeking a divorce from an abusive husband "difficult, but exciting."

Armed only with training he had been given by his case supervisor and what he had learned in class, Nimz had to negotiate against an experienced attorney in one such case. Despite "first-case jitters," he achieved what he considers a fair settlement for his client.

"Abuse can range from hair-pulling to beatings, broken bones and stab-bings," said Ann Arbor attorney Nanette LaCross, who directs the project. A few years ago, one of the project's clients was killed.

"For their own protection," LaCross said, "we urge clients to leave their homes for a shelter, and not to tell anyone—not husbands, families, friends or co-workers—where they are."

One reason the project nets so many volunteers is that it allows students to test their abilities and act as real lawyers. Case supervisor Carole Corns, a second-year U-M law student, finds the work "a learning experience for us student attorneys—but we have to be ready to play hardball when necessary."

The residents of Alaska move from one home to another more often than residents of any other state.

Grass Lake Twp. Still Waiting Word On Big Project

Grass Lake township has still had no further word on the massive development project planned by Agee & Associates.

Township supervisor Al Mollenkopf said the project, "could be dead or could be alive, but truthfully, I haven't bothered to check."

The development was essentially the building of a small community complete with housing, shopping, and a wastewater plant.

No plans have been submitted for any part of the project on land owned by Traveler's Insurance Co.

Weight Loss Pill 'Baffles' Scientists

WASHINGTON—Scientists are baffled by a natural food ingredient that causes people to lose weight even though they don't change the way they normally eat.

A study published in The British Journal of Nutrition says that the ingredient, often used to thicken ice cream, can cause significant weight loss without dieting. Although several explanations for the weight loss are suggested, the most likely according to scientists in a Finnish study, is that the ingredient seems to decrease the intestinal absorption of calories.

National Dietary Research, an organization committed to the research and development of nutritional solutions to world-wide health problems, along with consulting scientists, have successfully isolated and incorporated the ingredient into an improved method that greatly enhances the potential for weight loss over the ingredient alone. Called Food Source One, the significant breakthrough in nutritional weight control provides a three-way scientifically designed method to help prevent calorie absorption.

The mechanism by which Food Source One works to decrease body weight is a complicated process called nutri-bonding. When chewed and swallowed immediately before meals, high calorie fats are replaced with lower calorie nutrients, thereby providing optimum nutrition and a minimum number of fat calories as explained in an instruction sheet that accompanies the tablets. The instruction sheet should be followed for optimum results.

Food Source One is unlike any other product on the market and is available immediately because it is not a drug and only contains natural ingredients already known to be safe. Physicians and pharmacists are praising Food Source One as a natural, drug free alternative for the treatment of obesity.

Food Source One is available in chocolate, vanilla or strawberry. A 100 tablet supply only $24.95.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

A few years ago I wrote to alert you and your readers to take the necessary steps to rezone property to prevent the construction of a mall in the village limits. I believe my message was that if village trustees did not heed these words that the old downtown would be "mauled."

While the message was heard by some people, nothing was done to prevent the predictable outcome—the demise of the "traditional" village center.

As one walks around downtown today one is appalled to see the number of vacant buildings and the loss of the old center. One can only hope that the owners of the vacant buildings can find new tenants. If they cannot, the obvious is in store. Whatever the outcome, the traditional downtown which we have known, loved and used is now undergoing significant and irreversible change.

In my opinion, little can be done to try and preserve the unique character that once was the village center. What is so sad to me is that it was all so predictable. Since it was predictable, why did this happen here? It appears to me that some village officials and many local people simply did not care enough nor appreciate the old downtown to protect it. They wanted the change and the prospect of additional tax revenues.

Like many things in life, one often does not appreciate something until it is gone. It seems like the downtown will go this way too—how unfortunate!

To the Editor:

Concerning Katie Neal's letter about the painted rock.

The rock, used in the proper spirit, is a fine tradition. However, when adorned with a marijuana leaf and "Goodbye Chelsea High" it is an eyesore and an embarrassment to the community.

As for the youth of Chelsea, if they are so hopelessly uncreative, they have to resort to vandalism as a pastime. I fear for the future of the community. While I don't feel it is necessary to eliminate the rock, I do feel it should be moved to a more appropriate, and less conspicuous, location such as the high school. That way the hapless youth of Chelsea can keep their rock and the rest of us can keep our civic pride.

Theresa Merkel.

To the Editor:

In regard to Katie Neal's letter about the painted rock. Growing up in Ann Arbor, we never had a rock to paint. All we could ever muster up to do during the day was swim, fish, hike, boat, play softball, volleyball, basketball, tennis and golf. (I think there were a few other things, too.) We once even went to a park and had a picnic and enjoyed the weather. At night all we could do was take a walk, go bowling, read, listen to music or watch TV.

Granted these things will not kill the entire summer, but most are things you can do alone. Does Katie have family and friends? Try spending time with them, you would be amazed at the fun you can have with them. Or how about this. Get a job. Think of how much time that would fill. Plus you get paid, which leads to your next major fun, shopping.

If you still need something to paint, my apartment needs it.

"The usual choice is not between the good and the bad but between the bad and the worse . . ."

—French Proverb

This little bit of cynicism is more than a sad commentary on human affairs . . . it is something of a buffer against disappointment.

Firstly, the proverb admonishes us not to be frustrated by the rarity of nice, clean-cut "good or bad" choices. They are few and far between. We should condition ourselves to get used to lesser-of-two-evils situations. Additionally, we can always justify our poor judgment with the explanation that the alternative would have been worse.

ROADSMART

Presented by Huron Valley Traffic Safety Committee

Q. Does alcohol play a big part in the fatal accident rate for younger drivers?

A. Most definitely! About 60% of the drivers aged 16-24 who were killed in vehicle crashes had been drinking.

Q. How many people are killed due to alcohol-related crashes?

A. About 22,000 people each year or 400 each week. This is the equivalent of the entire population of one of the following Michigan cities each year: Adrian, Berkley, Holland, Monroe, Mt. Clemens, Mt. Pleasant, Norton Shores, Novi, Romulus, Trenton, Wayne, or Ypsilanti.

This year marks the second year the tournament has taken place in Canton. Prior to that, from 1982 to 1987, the competition took place in Midland's Emerson Park.

In all, 678 athletes with mental retardation are slated to participate. In addition to the 44 squads entered in team competition, 76 athletes will take part in individual skills competition.

Teams will screen Friday afternoon. Competition will begin at 6 p.m. on Friday, followed by Opening Ceremonies. A dance will conclude Friday's activities at UAW Hall No. 735.

Saturday morning opens with competition at 9 a.m. and concludes at 3:15 p.m. with Closing Ceremonies.

Children's Resale Boutique Being Opened in Ann Arbor By Walter Hamilton, Jr.

On June 18, Children's Orchard, Inc., a Newburyport, Mass. franchisor of children's resale boutiques, signed an agreement with Walter F. Hamilton, Jr., of Chelsea, under which Hamilton will establish a minimum of 21 boutiques in Michigan. These very attractive stores sell children's clothing, toys, books and equipment, acquiring most of the merchandise from parents of infants and young children.

The first boutique in Michigan will be having its grand opening in Ann Arbor by early September. This store will be managed by Cathy A. Marks of Ann Arbor. This Ann Arbor boutique will serve as the facility for training future Michigan store owners and managers.

Children's Orchard, Inc., was founded by Karen A. Lynch in 1980, in Newburyport. There are now over 40 Children's Orchard boutiques in New England and the Southwest. Women have been very successful operating these businesses as have women-man partnerships. Near future expansion is planned in Arizona, California, Florida and New England as well as Michigan.

The concept of sensible recycling is applied here in a very attractive environment. Before Children's Orchard, only "bare-bones" thrift and consignment shops existed, usually with little success. Children's Orchard has added a touch of class through merchandise quality and boutique ambience.

Hamilton and Ms. Marks are a father-daughter team. Hamilton has extensive business experience, most recently as executive vice-president of Edwards Brothers, Inc., in Ann Arbor. He has served in our community as chairman of the board of Chelsea Community Hospital, president of the Chelsea Civic Foundation and he was just elected to the board of trustees of a new joint venture in substance abuse care co-owned by the University of Michigan Hospitals and Chelsea Community Hospital.

Ms. Marks earned a bachelor's degree in interior design and marketing and a master's degree in business administration from Eastern Michigan University, and she has several years of retail experience. Ms. Marks worked as a retail manager at the Briarwood Hudson's store until the end of June. In addition to managing the Ann Arbor store she will train franchisees and help them solve problems in their stores.

Credit Repair Companies Must Be Licensed

Do you have credit problems? You've probably seen ads that promise credit approval in spite of your credit, or repair of bad credit. Before you do business with such a company, you should know two things. First, if you have a bad credit rating, no one can fix it overnight. Such promises simply are not true. Second, credit repair companies must now be licensed for your protection.

Be sure that a company is licensed by calling Michigan Financial Institutions Bureau before you do business. The number is (517) 373-8874.

Today's Investor

By Thomas E. O'Hara
Chairman, Board of Trustees
National Assoc. of Investors Corp.
& Consulting Editor, Better Investing

Q. Would you please discuss mutual funds that emphasize income?

A. There are several types of mutual funds that emphasize income. Money market funds emphasize both income and instant liquidity, and are very popular for those purposes. Many daily papers, such as the Wall Street Journal and Investors Daily, run a list of money market funds by rate of return at least once a week so you can easily see which ones will give you the most income. These funds do not pay a guaranteed rate. Their rate changes every day and depends upon what securities the fund is currently holding and earning. While these funds have been very safe so far, it is possible that an investment could go bad at some time. The funds which invest only in U.S. Government obligations are probably the safest.

There are a number of mutual funds which emphasize income, but invest in bonds and stocks where the yield is very good. These funds are shown on the various lists as income funds and their records for five and ten years are shown in the Forbes and Business Week annual mutual fund editions.

There is also a group of mutual funds which invest in regular stocks, but emphasize stocks which increase their dividends regularly. Those funds will not yield as much on your investment today as some of the other types, but you might expect the income to increase each year by around five percent.

Some funds invest strictly in bonds of corporations where the rates are higher. The risk, of course, is also higher, but you have the skill of the fund's management and the diversity the fund provides helping to reduce that risk.

If you are in a high tax area, you might want to look at tax-free municipal bond funds. Some of these are only tax free as far as federal income tax is concerned. Others are tax free both for federal and state taxes and you can even find some that are tax free in your city as well.

Mr. O'Hara welcomes your questions and comments, but will answer them only through this column. Readers who send in questions on a general investment subject or on a corporation with broad investor interest and whose questions are used, will receive a complimentary one-year's subscription to the investment magazine, Better Investing. WHO WILL DAISY MAE MARRY? Will Li'l Abner (Tim Lovelace), right, come to the rescue of Daisy Mae (Lynn Williams) after Earthquake McGoon (Art Finger) claims he is taking Daisy Mae for his bride in the Chelsea Area Players' musical comedy, "Li'l Abner," which is being presented July 20, 21, 22, 27, and 28 at the Chelsea High school auditorium. Tickets are on sale at Casual Sports, 103 N. Main, Chelsea. The July 22 performance is a Sunday afternoon matinee.

Players Will Keep It Cool In Auditorium

According to Shelley Wheaton, producer of the Chelsea Area Players summer musical "Li'l Abner" which opens Friday, July 20, at the Chelsea High school auditorium, "We are making provisions for keeping our audiences as cool as possible during the five performances of our 1990 production. We will open the vents above the stage, place large fans in doorways on both sides of the auditorium, leave all of the doors open, and provide hand fans to the audience. That's what you call a 'cool' production."

Also, Wheaton stated, "Ticket sales are brisk, and we are hoping for a good turnout." All seats are reserved, and tickets may be obtained at Casual Sports in Chelsea. The play runs July 20, 21, 22, 27, and 28. The performance on Sunday, July 22, is a matinee at 2 p.m., and should be over in time for theater-goers to attend the concert in Pierce park which begins at 4 p.m.

"THERE'S NO PLACE LIKE HOME—Dogpatch, USA," Pappy Yokum (Thad Bell) tells a smiling Mammy Yokum (Kate Peckham) during rehearsal for "Li'l Abner," the Chelsea Area Players' summer musical which runs July 20, 21, 22, 27, and 28 at the Chelsea High school auditorium. Tickets are available at Casual Sports in Chelsea.

Dexter Man Convicted of Criminal Sexual Conduct

A Dexter man could face a life prison term after his conviction of first-degree criminal sexual conduct last week.

According to reports, the incident occurred nearly six years ago when Nolan Johnson, 54, was visiting the home of a nine-year-old Chelsea-area boy. The victim testified that he told his father about the incident after his brother admitted that it also happened to him.

Johnson was reportedly a family friend who had visited the home once or twice a month for several years. The victim testified that he was molested more than once by Johnson.

The boy's father testified that he went to Johnson's home and confronted him with the allegations, and Johnson admitted he had a problem.

Sweet potatoes were unknown in Europe until Columbus found them in the West Indies and took them back with him. They have turned into one of the world's cheapest food crops.

Bulldogs!

Native Daughter Named New CHS Softball Coach

For more than a decade, the name Unterbrink has been synonymous with Chelsea softball. With the exception of last year, an Unterbrink girl has been a player in the program since 1978.

The Unterbrink absence, however, is going to be brief. Amy, the eldest of the four Unterbrink sisters, who now has the last name of Poljan, has been named the new Bulldog head coach. She's been hired for a part-time teaching position in the science department at Chelsea High school. She recently had her first child, a son, and said she doesn't want anything more than a part-time job at this point.

"I am extremely pleased Amy is coming to Chelsea," said Chelsea athletic director Wayne Welton.

"Not only is she a good coach, but she will be an excellent role model for our girls."

Former coach Pat Clarke said Poljan was his first choice to take his place.

In a school famous for turning out excellent pitchers, Amy is by far the most accomplished. She not only led the Bulldogs to their first state championship in 1982, but went on to become an All-American at Indiana University. In her senior year at Indiana, she was named Female Athlete of the Year. She was known as an overpowering pitcher. Charlie Waller was her coach throughout her Chelsea career.

Poljan has been a teacher and the head softball coach at Milan High school for the last two years. Before that she coached at South Lyon.

"Chelsea was the first place I looked at coming right out of college because I knew Mr. Waller was leaving," Poljan said.

"I'm glad now that I didn't get the job because I wasn't ready for it."

Poljan is coming into an excellent situation for a new coach. All but two players are returning from last year's varsity squad, including all-stater Colleen Scharphorn. It won't be a rebuilding season.

"I don't think we'll do as much bunting next year as this year," Poljan said.

"We have some pretty strong hitters coming back."

Poljan says she tries to model her style of relating to players after Waller, someone she highly respects.

Chelsea Varsity Football Staff Gets Lincoln's Cox

Chelsea Bulldog varsity football staff should get some needed stability this fall with the appointment of Lincoln head coach Roger Cox as a varsity assistant.

Chelsea Board of Education Monday night approved the appointment of Cox, head coach for the Railsplitters for the past seven years, as a sixth grade block teacher at Beach Middle school. He will also become head coach Gene LaFave's right-hand man rather than his vocal adversary on the opposite side of the field.

Cox, a 1965 graduate of Lincoln High school, where he also was a three-sport athlete, and a Willis-area resident, admitted it was a difficult decision to leave his alma mater.

"I greatly admire the Chelsea community and I'm flattered the district has made a commitment (to hire me)," Cox said.

Cox, who has also been Lincoln's athletic director the last four years, is coming from a district that may eliminate all sports below the varsity level for the coming year due to financial problems. In addition, the athletic director's job is in jeopardy. In August the district is asking voters to override the Headlee Amendment so the cuts don't have to take effect.

Cox will essentially handle the football job vacated by Wayne Welton when Welton became athletic director. He'll work primarily with the defense, but also have a hand in the offense.

"I think (LaFave) will give me a chance on offense, too," Cox said.

"Hopefully I'll have a little influence there, although the offensive philosophy is tremendously sound in Chelsea."

Cox was educated at Central Michigan University, where he was certified to teach both elementary and secondary levels. He has taught for 17 of his 21 years in education, with most of his experience in Dearborn.

Cox and his wife have three children age 8, 6, and 4 and they want them to attend Chelsea schools.

"We'd like to jump in with both feet," Cox said.

"We've started looking at homes, and we're going through culture shock as far as the prices are concerned."

SPORTS NOTES

BY BRIAN HAMILTON

Until Monday night it had been a quiet summer on the Chelsea sports scene.

Then boom, the Chelsea Board of Education hired two, well really three, people to teach who are probably more well known for their athletic/coaching ability than anything they've ever done in the classroom.

That's not to say they're not good teachers. Until somebody tells me differently, I assume they're top rate in the classroom.

Anyway, that's getting away from the topic at hand.

Amy Poljan, formerly Amy Unterbrink, was hired for a part-time high school teaching position. On the side, she'll be the new varsity softball coach. (I know some coaches are laughing when I write "on the side" simply because they know how much work is involved.)

Poljan, as athletic director Wayne Welton said, should be an excellent role model as a coach. She may be Chelsea's most accomplished athlete ever as she went on to become an All-American pitcher at Indiana University. She still gets out and runs with her players, pitches, plays infield, and apparently hasn't lost much. Due to the recent birth of her son, this is the first summer in 18 years that she hasn't played softball.

I liked what she said about it, too.

"When you're pregnant, you can't really wind up." I guess I'll have to take her word for it.

She also reported that she and husband, Rick, are already trying to get the youngster to say "Cecil Fielder," and/or "Bo Jackson." A young-power hitter in the making.

Poljan is an accomplished young woman who will be an asset to the program. She knows the tradition, having been an instrumental part of it, she knows the game, and I believe she'll get the respect of her players.

As far as the role model stuff goes, she says, "I don't think about it, I just do it."

The second hire was Roger Cox, for the past seven years head football coach for the Lincoln Railsplitters. He'll be teaching sixth grade at Beach Middle school. On the side, he'll be coach Gene LaFave's number one assistant.

I don't know much about Cox directly, although he seems like a personable guy on the telephone.

However, I recall writing a couple of years ago that LaFave and Cox were the two loudest screamers in the Southeastern Conference at game time. (LaFave may be back to full steam, scream-wise, this year. Last season his assistants were loud enough for three teams and I think LaFave felt somewhat compelled to try to calm things down a bit.) Having LaFave and Cox on the sidelines together could be fun.

The other thing I recall from my conversations with LaFave is that when he mentioned coaches in the SEC he admired, Cox was always one of those coaches.

Cox was athletic director and football coach at Lincoln, combination the Chelsea district won't allow.

Cox is also a Lincoln alumnus, and it had to be an extremely tough decision to leave no matter what the circumstances.

It should be interesting to see what happens when Chelsea plays at Lincoln this fall.

The third hire, or actually recall, was girls-basketball coach Rahn Rosentreter. He's taking a 4/7 social studies position. As you know, Rosentreter has been on forced sabbatical studying, well, house remodeling and other subjects.

So it looks as though the CHS coaching staff is shaping up for Welton this year when it could have been a disasterous summer. LaFave could have quit, with another makeshift staff on the way, Poljan could have been unavailable, and Rosentreter could have been just another off-staff coach.

In recalling her high school softball career, Poljan had all kinds of kind words for former coaches Charlie Waller and Bill Wescott, the two guys who influenced her game the most.

She also called Wescott a "maniac during practice." Wescott, in turn, said, "see that scar on my lip, she's responsible for that."

Poljan said that during one practice, Wescott was catching without a mask and Poljan bounced a fast ball off the front of the plate. Wescott left immediately to get stitches, and, as I understand, returned before practice was over. Beneath that mild-mannered principal an animal lurks. Watch out, North Schoolers.

Summer Baseball Team Loses To Good Cliff Keen Team

Chelsea's summer baseball team was on the losing end of a 10-4 game in their only action last week.

A good Cliff Keen team kept Chelsea winless in the summer as they scored early, saw Chelsea pull to within three runs, then shut the door with a late surge.

Cliff Keen took a 7-0 lead after three innings.

Chelsea scored twice in the fourth on a single by Jeff Gietzen, a walk to Adam Taylor, and a two-run double by Rick Clouse down the right field line.

Chelsea scored twice again in the sixth inning as Taylor homered over the left field fence and Steve Grau rapped a run-scoring double. A Bulldog runner was cut down at the plate to stop the rally.

Cliff Keen scored three runs in the bottom of the sixth.

Jake Rindle pitched for Chelsea and couldn't overcome the first couple innings of shaky defense by his teammates. For the game Rindle allowed eight hits and three walks, and struck out seven.

Chelsea collected seven hits in the contest, two by Clouse, a double by Grau, singles by Adam Tillman, Rin-die, and Gietzen, and Taylor's homer. With the loss, Chelsea drops to 0-5 on the season. Their next game is tomorrow, Thursday, July 19 at 8:30 p.m. at Vet's Park in Ann Arbor.

Nature from Your Backdoor

By Glenn R. Dudderar

If you have a yard with grass and bushes, even a small backyard in an urban area, you may have noticed that there seem to be more cottontail rabbits in it this year than in recent years. That's certainly my observation in my yard, and the calls I'm getting from other homeowners certainly suggest that rabbit numbers are higher than usual.

One of the questions I get, of course, is why—we are seeing so many more rabbits this year? I have to answer "I don't know," but I can suggest some possibilities.

One, last winter was not particularly hard on rabbits. But we have had a string of several mild winters without a rabbit surplus, so the mild winter was probably not the sole factor in the rabbit population increase.

Another contributing factor could be the spring weather that followed the winter. It was generally not a wet spring with lots of heavy rains to drown baby rabbits in their nests. It was a cool spring, however, and that may have slowed down the development of the insect parasites that plague rabbits and so reduced their effect on general health and reproduction.

In addition to weather and parasites, diseases, available food supplies, predators, and genetics and behavior of a species all interact to influence animal populations—either favorably, so that numbers increase, or unfavorably, so that the population declines.

In other words, we don't know just why there are more rabbits around than usual. But it's certain that more rabbits means more frequent opportunities for people to observe them.

One thing I've been asked about is the number of little rabbits being seen in July. Isn't that unusual, people want to know.

Actually, it isn't. A rabbit may have three or more litters in a year. Young rabbits of the second or third litter are born in June and so are out where you may spot them in July. Litter size ranges from four to seven with the average being five.

Multiple litters and that many bunnies per litter don't explain the rabbit surplus this year, however, because they occur every year. What is unusual is that so many of the rabbits that survived the winter seem to be doing so well at reproducing.

Because there are so many rabbits and they are so visible, lots of people are noticing rabbit behavior and looking for information about it. For instance, they want to know why the rabbits in their yard are running and chasing after each other. It could be young rabbits frolicking. It could be part of courtship. It could be territorial defense by a male rabbit.

People are also encountering rabbit nests. It's not unusual to find one in tall, unmowed grass along a fence, perhaps. But this year I've received more calls than usual about rabbits making their nests and trying to raise young out in the middle of mowed lawns. Children, adults mowing lawns and family pets are finding nests and young, and these encounters generally lead to questions and discoveries about what rabbits do and don't do.

Some people are surprised to find that a rabbit nest is simply a cup-shaped depression dug by the female and lined with grass and fur. (The burrows and warrens in Watership Down are characteristic of European rabbits but not our eastern cottontail.) The babies are born and cared for in this cereal bowl-sized hollow.

Homeowners often become concerned about the babies when they don't see the mother rabbit around the nest during the day. This doesn't mean the nest is abandoned. Further observation will usually catch the mother rabbit in the late evening or early morning.

Invariably, some of these nests are disturbed by mowing or being stepped in or being raided by the family pet. The question then is, will the mother rabbit come back to a disturbed nest? There's no way to predict. Sometimes the least disturbance will cause a female to abandon nest and young, while another doe might tolerate a tremendous amount of disturbance, up to and including having the young handled and replaced in the nest.

When people who have "rescued" baby bunnies call me asking what to do with them, I ask them in turn how big the bunnies are. If they're no longer than your index finger and not fully furred and their eyes aren't open or are just barely open, they are still dependent on their mother and the chances of raising them successfully are slim. If they're more than four inches long and fully furred and their eyes are wide open, they have already left the nest. Though they're small and still look like babies, they're weaned and ready to live on their own.

A good many rabbits are making their living in people's vegetable and flower gardens this year, if the calls I'm getting are any indication. Rabbit damage typically consists of plants snipped cleanly and at an angle, almost as if they were cut with scissors. Unlike woodchucks, which will go right down a row of snap beans, for instance, and reduce them to stubs, rabbits feed erratically, nipping off some plants, leaving others untouched, eating some parts of some plants, and occasionally snipping off and dropping parts of others on the ground.

Rabbit control methods range from repellents to netting to electric and upright fencing, and the results achieved with these methods range from effective to less than adequate.

One method that is sure not to work this year is trapping and removing rabbits. Except in an urban area where the rabbit population is severely limited, it would be difficult to prevent enough rabbits fast enough to trap damage in the garden. And where rabbits are plentiful, deporting rabbits isn't likely to reduce the local population much.

Through frequent encounters with rabbits, people are discovering that rabbits are not silent animals as they once thought. Many people are surprised to find out that a rabbit in distress emits a loud and pathetic squeal. A few people have even heard the grunts and soft growls that rabbits make while interacting on the lawn.

Seeing more rabbits "up close and personal" is giving lots of homeowners a new and more realistic view of the rabbit as a biological entity and in its interactions with humans. Such opportunities are one of the many bonuses of observing nature from your backdoor.

Head Injury Alliance Seeks To Organize Local Chelsea Chapter

An effort is being made to organize a local chapter of the Michigan Head Injury Alliance and National Head Injury Foundation in Chelsea.

The National Head Injury Foundation (NHIF) was founded in 1980 as a national organization to prevent head injuries and improve the quality of life for people with head injuries and their families. The NHIF, with over 17,000 members, has become a nationally recognized educational and support resource for individuals and families affected by a head injury.

A meeting is scheduled for Thursday, July 26, at 7 p.m. at the Chelsea Community Hospital's traumatic brain injury program house on the hospital campus in Chelsea. Gaylord T. Walker, the new executive director of the Michigan Head Injury Alliance, will be the featured speaker.

If you would like further information or wish to attend the meeting, please contact either Beth Bertelsen at Chelsea Community Hospital (313/475-1311-ext. 3219) or Randy Musbach at his office (313/475-8618).

Junior Class Plans Car Wash This Saturday

Chelsea High school junior class is sponsoring a car wash this Saturday, July 21 at the Great Lakes Bancorp office from 12:30 p.m. to 4 p.m.

The last class of 1991 car wash netted $266.

According to Mike Bohlender, the junior class adviser, proceeds from the washes will go toward costs for the junior class float in the Chelsea Fair Parade, as well as costs for the prom next spring.

The class wants to keep the prom at the high school, which turns out to be considerably more expensive than renting a hall in Jackson or Ann Arbor, where no decorations are allowed. The decorations in the gym, which usually incorporate a theme and elaborate set, are what runs the costs up.

The class also wants to keep the prom here so students don't have to drive so far late at night.

CHELSEA RESIDENT Deborah Hinderer Rusinsky is scheduled to open Sunday's Concert-in-the-Park in Pierce Park.

Manchester Chicken Broil Had Modest Start in 1954

If you were born in the 1950's, you won't remember the first Manchester Chicken Broil, but you probably grew up thinking it was one of those things that has always been—like Christmas.

Now we all have a pretty good idea about just when and where Christmas got started, but what about this famous Chicken Broil? Why did it begin? Who started it? Just who is responsible anyway? Why is all this planning done year after year? Is it just so people can get out and enjoy a delicious meal? Well, that's one reason, but here's the way it got started.

It seems the Manchester Optimist (Exchange) Club used to sell tickets at Manchester High School football games. This proved somewhat difficult because there was no fence around the athletic field and people could wander in anywhere. As a result, the Optimist Club volunteered to provide money to build a fence. Great! No objections there, but where would they get the money?

Members of the Optimist Club had for sometime been having cookouts in various members' backyards—nothing too large, you understand, just small groups of 50-70 people. They would broil steaks, chicken, or anything else that they had a taste for. Someone had the bright idea to hold one of these cookouts and sell tickets. The money earned would be used to buy the fence for the athletic field. Thus, in 1954 the Manchester Chicken Broil was born.

But besides the tradition of fun and good food that has continued over the years, the tradition of donations for various community improvements has continued as well.

Manchester Chicken Broil profits have totaled over $170,000 over the last 36 years. Most of these profits have gone back into the community.

Besides the fence around the old athletic field, the Chicken Broil profits provided the field scoreboard; the lights and poles; bleachers; the announcer's booth; the mobile bleachers; the buildings on the athletic field, including the concession stand, storage buildings, and the ticket booth; a new fence; new lights and rewiring; and a press box.

Profits also paid for the purchase and development of the new athletic field behind the Methodist church. The track field and the girls softball diamond, as well as the press box and fence there, come from Chicken Broil funds.

Approximately $7,000 has been invested in Carr Park (rest rooms, playground equipment), $10,000 in Kirk Park, and $17,000 into Char-Broil Park.

The Historical Society received money from the Chicken Broil profits to purchase the Blacksmith Shop and the public library has benefited as well.

Another important donation has been to Chelsea Hospital Life Line. This provides a service to elderly individuals in Manchester who live alone. They are provided with a beeper that connects them with the hospital if they fall or need some type of assistance and cannot reach a phone.

Maybe the Manchester Chicken Broil hasn't always been around, but then neither has Christmas. Both of them, however, provide a time for families to get together, have fun, and enjoy good food. And, just like Christmas, the Chicken Broil provides good things that last all year round.

This year's annual Chicken Broil will be held Thursday, July 19.

Each candidate will be scored in scholastic record, achievement and service to school and community, personal development of talents and skills, general awareness written test, personality projection in formal wear, and a judge's interview.

Pageant finals will be held at the Dow Center on the Hope College Campus on Saturday, July 21 at 8:15 p.m.

★ For Malnourished Children, Fresh-Squeezed Alfalfa?

By Jim De Quattro
Alfalfa juice is boosting the diets of more than 100 malnourished children in four villages in northern Mexico. "Anecdotal evidence points to impressive improvements in the health and development of the children, many of whom showed signs of malnutrition before the start," says agricultural engineer Richard G. Koegel at the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

It's an unexpected spinoff from research that led to a new technique for making a high-protein feed supplement for cows, Koegel says.

In a church-funded pilot project near Saltillo, Mexico, village residents including mothers and children, cut alfalfa by hand and feed it into machines that "beat it up and squeeze out the juice," he says.

Then, after the juice is heated to about 175 degrees F, its protein coagulates—"like when you poach an egg"—and can be separated from the liquid, he adds. Families in Saltillo's Leaf Nutrient Program use the protein concentrate in a variety of foods such as beans, pasta and lemonade.

"Mothers in one locale even held a contest to see who could come up with the best recipes," says Koegel with USDA's Agricultural Research Service.

At the U.S. Dairy Forage Research Center operated by ARS in Madison, Wis., Koegel led a team of ARS and University of Wisconsin scientists in the juice-extracting research.

Their aim has been to develop a more efficient extracting technique that would widen the potential use of alfalfa and open a new market for U.S. farmers who grow the feed crop.

"Alfalfa produces more protein per acre than any other crop," he says. Koegel says spinoffs like the Mexico project could have "tremendous potential" in other countries where people have protein deficiencies.

An armful of alfalfa, he notes, supplies about a tablespoon of the juice concentrate. "That seems to be enough to raise the children's protein to satisfactory levels, although no scientific nutritional studies have been made."

The Leaf Nutrient Program was the brainchild of Bill Marsh, former principal of Madison Central High School, and H. D. Bruhn, professor emeritus at the University of Wisconsin. "We're gratified they were able to turn our technology to such direct benefit to people," says Koegel.

The equipment, which runs on electricity, was purchased for about $700 from private donations routed through First United Methodist church of Harlingen, Tex. The program is operated by faculty at the Antonio Narro Agricultural University in Saltillo. Plans call for expanding the Saltillo project to 15 villages. (Agricultural Research Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture)

Special Session.

June 25, 1990

The meeting was called to order by President Steele at 7:15 p.m.
Present: President Steele, Village Manager Stalker.
Trustees Present: Hammer, Hall, Kanten, Merkel, Dorer and Myer.
Trustees Absent: None.
Others Present: David Holland, Gene E. Haab, Sharon Catton, J. G. O'Neill, Art Haab, Monica M. Spaulding, Elenor and Carl Klink and Marvin Schiller.

President Steele explained that the special meeting was convened to discuss the six week stay of action which was granted by the Village Council from enforcement action against Gene Haab (Royalty Limousine), for operation of a limousine rental service at 747 Flanders Street. A notice of violation was delivered to the premises at 747 Flanders Street on June 13, 1990 and the Village Council granted the stay of action for six (6) weeks at the regular Council meeting of June 19, 1990.

Discussion was held regarding the village attorney's opinion that the stay of action was in effect not consistent with provisions of the zoning ordinance and therefore did not grant relief. It was explained by Council members to representatives of the limousine company that the filing of an appeal for a variance from the zoning ordinance would place a stay upon further enforcement proceedings until a hearing was scheduled and held and a determination made upon the appeal application.

Motion by Merkel, supported by Kanten, to rescind the motion made and carried at the June 19, 1990 regular council meeting to "grant a six (6) week extension from the red tag issued by the Zoning Inspector to Gene Haab (Royalty Limousine) to allow them to continue their business operations." A roll call vote was taken as follows: Ayes: Myers, Dorer, Merkel, Hammer, Hall, Kanten and Steele. Nays: None. Motion carried unanimously.

Motion made by Kanten, supported by Dorer, to set a public hearing for August 7, 1990 at 7:30 p.m. to consider the application of Gene Haab for an interpretation of No. 15.708 Section 5.9 of the Village of Chelsea Zoning Ordinance. Motion carried unanimously.

Motion by Kanten, supported by Hammer, to adjourn the special meeting. Motion carried unanimously.

Respectfully Submitted,
Robert F. Stalker II
Acting Village Clerk.

Student Exchange Program Needs Host Families

For many Michigan residents, summer represents a time of sun and vacation. However, for those people working in the field of student exchange, summertime represents the 11th hour in the quest for families to host international students arriving in August.

According to Guy Pacurar, president of Pacific Intercultural Exchange (PIE), while many families who host international students make their decision during the summer months, the search actually begins early in the spring.

"We have student files for the coming academic year available to our representatives as early as January," said Pacurar.

"For many families, though, September is just too far away to think about hosting."

The program urgently needs to locate families for their students as early as possible to allow both sides in the exchange a chance to correspond. "The natural parents of the students coming to the United States feel much better about allowing their child to spend 10 months away from home once they have received a letter from their new 'families,'" stated Pacurar.

"My wife and I will be hosting a boy from Yugoslavia this year. The letter we received from his parents, in response to one we sent earlier, told us how relieved they were once they read our correspondence and saw our pictures."

PIE has students coming to the greater Chelsea/Dexter area this August. The students, between 15 and 18 years old, will be arriving from Yugoslavia, France, Spain, Japan, Brazil, Germany, Mexico, Argentina and Colombia. During their exchanges, they will be spending six to 10 months living with area families and studying at the local high school. The students bring their own spending money and have full medical and accident insurance. Host families are asked only to provide the room and board.

Positive experiences have not been limited to traditional two-parent families with teens. Retired couples, single parents and couples with only young children have all hosted successfully. While the program works with each family to achieve the best match possible, those involved with P.I.E. will have the support of a local representative to help make the program a success. For more information about the program, or for the number of the representative in your area, please call P.I.E., toll-free, at 1-800-245-8232.

Two Chelsea Sailors Place In Regional Sunfish Meet

Bob Findlay, of Glencoe, Ill., dominated the 17-boat fleet at the 1990 Wolf Lake Open Sunfish Regional Championship held at the Wolf Lake Yacht Club in Jackson on Saturday and Sunday, July 14-15. Findlay's mother-in-law, Jean Bergman, of Northbrook, Ill., was second, and Kirk Beadle, of Lakeland, finished third.

The Regional Championship was held to select a representative from the Midwest for the 1991 Sunfish World's Championship scheduled to be held in Curacao, Netherlands Antilles in August, 1991. Findlay had already qualified by winning the 1990 Midwinter Championship in Mississippi. Bergman had also already qualified by placing in the top 10 in the 1990 Sunfish World Championship's held in Orlando, Fla., in February. Kirk Beadle earned the berth from this championship.

Saturday featured conditions ranging from drizzle to fog, temperatures in the low 60's, and winds of 4-8 mph for the first race and 0-5 mph for the second race. Sunday's conditions were fog, 65°, and 2-6 mph for the fourth race, and mostly sunny, 70°, and winds of 8-14 mph for the fifth race. The widely varying conditions provided a very good test of the sailor's skills.

In addition to the races, the sailors enjoyed fine luncheons both days and a cook-it-yourself steak dinner Saturday night. After the steak dinner many participants went go-kart racing in Brooklyn. Even on four wheels, Findlay could not be beat—he swept two heats on the track!

All participants received a T-shirt as a participant gift. Finishers from

Shows Like Ag Expo Becoming Important

Farm shows such as Ag Expo, July 17-19 at Michigan State University, are more than just places to kick the tires of shiny new farm equipment.

Bill Bickert, MSU extension agricultural engineer and the director of Ag Expo, says several factors contribute to the usefulness of farm shows.

Among them is the probability that equipment dealers will eventually have fewer, if any, implements on inventory. The reason is that a large inventory can be a liability.

Typically, tractors, combines and other equipment stays in a dealer's inventory for six months or longer. During that time, a machine gets rained on, snowed on, climbed on, bumped into, moved and maybe scratched, dented or even stolen. Eventually a farmer buys it. In the meantime, someone has been paying the financing charges and other overhead costs.

Bickert and his counterparts of the Ohio State University says that by the 21st century, farmers will order equipment they need after reviewing literature, computer programs, interactive videodisks, satellite TV broadcasts, videotapes or a combination of these, and/or visiting regional shows and demonstrations.

"Shows like Ag Expo, then, will become an important part of farmers' decision making because they will be able to see what they want to buy and, to an extent, see how it performs in the field," Bickert says. "A show like Ag Expo also gives farmers the advantage of seeing a whole array of comparable equipment and talking with university experts, which helps them with their decision making."

"Ag Expo is the only place in Michigan where farmers can inspect a wide range of equipment spread over 35 acres, and chances are that's more than most farmers could see traveling from dealership to dealership for a month, maybe longer," he says.

The flip side of that is that dealers have the potential for making contact with more than 50,000 farmers in three days, and that may be a lot more than they'd see in a year.

Bickert believes that Ag Expo and similar shows are becoming an important part of a farmer's long-range planning and goal setting.

"To reduce the chances of mistakes, more and more farmers are going through a sometimes long educational process before making a major capital expenditure," Bickert says. "Ag Expo, in my opinion, has become an integral part of that educational and decision-making process."

Bickert says that it is not unusual for him to get calls from people who attended a previous Ag Expo and want the name and address of an exhibitor who had a particular item they saw and need now.

"It illustrates that a good part of what happens at Ag Expo is part of a farmer's information-gathering process," he says. "The show becomes an opportunity to see the potential of a plan to develop a more sustainable system of farming."

Bickert believes that as farmers develop more detailed plans for expansion and as dealers find they can operate effectively with reduced inventories, Ag Expo will play an even more important part in Michigan agriculture.

"Ag Expo is very much a joint venture between the university, the agricultural manufacturing industry and business, and the farmer," Bickert says. "It is our hope that, over time, the event will evolve into an even more synergistic relationship."

More than 300 manufacturers from 11 states and Canada will participate in Ag Expo. Daily field demonstrations on 80 acres will focus on harvesting, handling and storing hay, alfalfa stand establishment and pasture renovation.

The show opens at 9 a.m. each day.

Koelz Left Behind $1.6 Million Estate

The estate of retired University of Michigan Professor of Ecology Walter Koelz will be auctioned off at the Frank H. Boos Gallery in Bloomfield Hills Sept. 21-23.

Koelz, a long-time Waterloo resident, died last September at age 94 and left behind an estate valued at $1.6 million. The estate, willed entirely to The Nature Conservancy, a non-profit group that buys and manages nature preserves, consists mostly of items he collected in his travels to all parts of the world. It is the largest gift the group has ever received.

Koelz, known for his unusual lifestyle some called eccentric, collected glass, silver, porcelain, fabric, jewelry, and coins, mostly from the 18th century. Much of it he kept in his run-down Waterloo home, where he reportedly never slept in a bed, never wore shoes, and never owned a car. Some of Koelz's collection included antique furniture, pottery, Oriental and Persian rugs, silver, china, Persian coins from 300 B.C., and 5,000-year-old Roman glass.

A 18th century Persian fabric that Koelz obtained in Iran in the 1930's was auctioned off in New York for $440,000 in April.

Koelz was a naturalist and explorer and collected exotic flora and fauna for the university, including thousands of bird and plant specimens.

The first federal regulation of pension plans resulted from the passage of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act in 1974, according to "Labor Firsts in America," a U.S. Labor Department publication.

Chiropractic Health Care

Athletics and Chiropractic Care

Dr. J. Nicholas Koffeman

This weeks column serves as an introduction for a series on Chiropractic care and sports injuries. Also chiropractic care for the prevention of sports injuries.

Whether you're a weekend athlete, a member of a high school team or at the collegiate or professional level, you can greatly benefit from chiropractic adjustments.

There is an increased mobility, enhanced muscle function and refined coordination that quality chiropractic care can provide. These things in turn will decrease the healing time of sports injuries. They will enhance performance, giving that extra competitive edge. And perhaps most importantly, the improved function that chiropractic care can provide will actually prevent injuries.

Over the next few weeks I will be discussing all this and more. This will lead to an understanding of why professional and world class athletes are turning to chiropractic care.

Please address all questions and comments to Dr. J. Nicholas Koffeman, 138 E. Middle St., Chelsea, MI 48118. (313) 475-2088.

Manager Wants To Purchase Sewer Machine

Village of Chelsea is considering the purchase of a used truck-mounted sewer jetting machine for cleaning the village's sewer lines.

Village manager Robert Stalker proposed the purchase of the truck mounted jet for $21,000, with the idea the purchase would save the village money in the long run. He said contractors charge $150 per hour.

Council did not dismiss the idea, but asked Stalker to look into a lease/purchase arrangement, partially because the machine was not included in the village's budget this year. A two-thirds vote of council is required to spend money on an unbudgeted item.

Stalker said the village is anticipating a major clean-up project throughout the village soon, as well as major work associated with the Downtown Development Authority's project next year.

The first federal legislation paying workers in private industry a pension was the Railroad Retirement Act passed in 1935, according to "Labor Firsts in America," a U.S. Labor Department publication.

Sharon Mills Winery Wins Product Award

Sharon Mills Winery of Manchester was one of 10 winners of the 1990 New Products Awards given by the Michigan Manufacturer's Association.

The winery won in the small agricultural/edible category for its Sharon Mills Winery Champagne Sparkling Wine.

Other foods included eggless muffins by the Motor City Muffin Co. and flavored cheese sticks by the Williams Cheese Co.

Other categories included large industrial, medium industrial, small industrial, large consumer, medium consumer, and small consumer.

The annual competition is sponsored by the Michigan Manufacturers Association, Michigan State Chamber of Commerce, Michigan Society of Professional Engineers, Greater Michigan Foundation, Michigan Association of Agriculture, Michigan Bell Telephone Co., and the Michigan Department of Commerce.

This year companies entered 62 products, which were judged on their ingenuity of concept, functionality, safety, and over-all contribution to the economic development of the state.

By a vote of 37-0, the Senate recently passed a bill recognizing that removal of asbestos is not the preferred option in public and non-public schools where an approved operations and maintenance plan is in effect, Senator John J. H. Schwarz, M.D. (R-Battle Creek), the bill's sponsor, announced.

Recent scientific studies have shown that common asbestos-containing-building-materials (ACBM) are not dangerous at the minuscule levels found in most school buildings. Unnecessarily disturbing this material "can lead to increases in airborne concentrations of fibers in buildings" above current levels.

Senate Bill 908 stops the unnecessary removal of asbestos and would only allow asbestos removal in schools in those circumstances where it is required by the federal Asbestos Hazard Emergency Response Act (AHERA).

"While the bill mandates that school buildings comply with federal and state laws, it also clearly states that those schools in compliance don't have to go through the expense of removing asbestos," Schwarz said. "If air quality tests meet federal and state standards, school officials may not remove asbestos unless a qualified inspector identifies exposed or friable asbestos as described in the AHERA Act or Federal Clean Air Act."

Under the state legislation, an effective in-place management program is proposed which mirrors the Environmental Protection Agency regulatory policies for schools under AHERA. The EPA has stated that

Senate Passes School Asbestos Removal Bill

"removal is often not a building owner's best course of action to reduce asbestos exposure. In fact, an improper removal can create a dangerous situation where none previously existed."

Rick Simonson, assistant superintendent of the Oakland County Intermediate School District, said: "A study was conducted in Oakland county that indicated the cost of responding to state and federal mandates applying to asbestos would approach $100 million in 28 local school districts in Michigan's second largest county."

Doug Delaney of the Michigan Catholic Conference said: "The cost of removing all of the asbestos in our schools would be in excess of $75 million. The financial resources to meet these tremendous costs are simply not available."

Senator Schwarz said, "those removal costs, in Michigan alone, come close to $1 billion. This money would have to come from local school millages and would be better used to supplement school operating budgets and teacher salaries."

Billie Kops Wimmer, executive director of the Michigan Association of Non-Public Schools, said "We support this bill which would prohibit the arbitrary removal of asbestos in schools. Abatement is costly and cuts into the programs of public as well as non-public schools. We are grateful Senate Bill 908 has passed the Senate."

Consumer Power Offers Energy Tips

With the dog days of summer approaching, Consumers Power Company is offering suggestions to customers to help them keep cool while conserving their energy dollars.

"Hot, humid weather can cause your appliances, especially cooling equipment such as air-conditioners and refrigerators, to run longer than they need to," says Vincent D. Edwards, southeast area manager for the utility. He offered tips to minimize the effects of heat and humidity:

- Run major appliances such as dishwashers and clothes dryers at night or early in the morning when temperatures are cooler to take advantage of natural ventilation.
- Keep direct sunlight out by closing drapes, drawing blinds or using awnings. This will keep inside temperatures lower.
- Lower the temperature setting on an electric hot water heater to reduce the consumption of one of the biggest household electricity users.
- If you have a window-mounted air-conditioner, close off furnace registers to prevent cool air from escaping into the basement.
- Close off rooms not in use during the day, such as bedrooms. Open them an hour or two before bedtime to allow cooling to circulate.
- Consider installing an attic fan and running it at night to draw hot air from the house, thereby creating a breeze effect while you sleep.
- By following these suggestions, you can stay comfortable, enjoy the convenience of your appliances and still-keep your energy bills down.
