WORK HAS STARTED AGAIN on Chelsea's downtown streetscape project. Flat Rock Construction Co. plans to finish brick work on Main St. before moving on to heavier work on the side streets. The entire project is scheduled to be completed in June.

School District To Seek Additional 1.95 Mills, List of Cuts Approved

Chelsea Board of Education Monday night approved district-wide cuts that will go into effect if voters do not approve a one-year, 1.95 mill increase in the June 8 elections.

The cuts, totaling $634,021, would affect virtually every program in the schools and would include lay-offs.

"It was a very difficult process," said superintendent Joe Piasecki.

"There was not a great deal of excitement about it. We had to look at the total program and make some difficult decisions. We had to determine what we certainly needed to offer and what we might not be able to offer."

The shortfall is due to three factors, Piasecki said—tax base sharing, which may be declared illegal, the state-wide freeze in SEV, and a 20 percent decrease in re-imbursement for special education.

"Without the freeze, we would be getting a 4.2 percent increase, along with a 2 percent increase for new construction," Piasecki said.

The final cuts, or final new millage, will depend on whether the Washtenaw Intermediate School District's proposed 1.45 mill increase passes. If both millages pass, Chelsea's would be reduced about one-half mill to a 1.45 mill increase. If Chelsea's fails and WISD's passes, cuts could be reduced by about $150,000. If both fail, all cuts would go into effect.

One item that was not addressed by the board included the effect of ongoing negotiations of a new teacher contract. Chelsea Education Association President Joe Beard said Tuesday morning that he doesn't expect the financial aspects of the contract to be as difficult to solve as the basic language of the contract itself.

"My fear is that people will associate the millage with the negotiations," Beard said.

"Right now, money is the least of (the union's) problems."

Beard said "given the economic conditions, it's pretty tough to justify an increase of anything even close to 7 percent," a figure that has been discussed in other area districts.

Some of the major cuts include elimination of the full-time substance abuse counselor ($48,221), one art, one music, and one physical education position in the elementary schools ($105,000), the Enrichment Triad Program ($35,000), 7-9 grade athletics ($35,000), administrative staff ($50,000), a full-time counselor splitting time between the high school and Beach school ($35,000), textbooks and teaching supplies ($33,000), two new buses and all field trips ($90,000), custodial and maintenance equipment and supplies ($20,000), capital outlay ($55,000), two media aides ($24,000), high school secretarial services ($16,000) and substitute teachers ($15,000).

Although less costly, many popular extra-curricular programs would also get the ax, including the annual high school musical ($3,500), high school newspaper ($1,300), middle school newspaper and yearbook ($2,200), middle school academic games ($900), middle school camp director ($900), summer band and orchestra ($2,500).

With the cuts, athletic director Wayne Welton and curriculum director Laurie Bissell would become half-time administrators and half-time teachers.

Jean Mann Purdy's counseling position at Beach Middle school would not be refilled and a counselor at the high school would work half-time at Beach.

Piasecki said retirements have already been figured into the potential lay-offs. However, it won't be known until later this month which teachers may be laid off due to possible juggling of assignments. Notices, by law, have to be sent to those teachers by the end of the month.

Piasecki, sensitive to the possibility that some voters will see the announced cuts as a threat, said it's always been the policy of the district to "let voters know up front what the choices are."

He also acknowledged that voters might be faced with even tougher decisions later this year depending on what the state might decide with school financing.

"These cuts only address what we know now and are based on the best information available now," Piasecki said.

"We can't look into a crystal ball and determine what the state will do."

In addition to the millage increase, the district will ask for a one-year renewal of 26.0261 mills for operational purposes, of which 8692 mills will be dedicated for maintenance.

Piasecki said the district's millage proposals are for one year due to the uncertainty at the state level.

Chelsea Milling Plans Major Warehouse Project

Chelsea Milling Co. is planning to build a 125,000-square-foot shipping and warehouse complex on North St. adjoining their current shipping facility. It would be one of the largest construction projects in the village in the last decade.

The project, which should start later this year, would use most of the space from their current building all the way to Hayes St. Two houses and several small out-buildings would be demolished. The company owns all the land it needs for the project.

Site plans are scheduled to be considered by the village planning commission at their April meeting.

According to Dudley Holmes, Jr., company vice-president, Chelsea Milling stores up to 500,000 cases of finished Jiffy Mix products at the former Hatch Stamping Co. building and another 100,000 cases at Dana Corp. He said the company considered purchasing the Hatch property but decided a new facility was a better option. With the new building, all product can be stored on company property, Holmes said.

All truck loading from the new building will take place off Hayes St. The building will stop about 130 feet from Hayes St. so trucks will be able to park on Milling Co. property and eliminate traffic problems.

Holmes said the company wanted to build the facility last fall. However, the company has been awaiting approval from the Department of Natural Resources. The vacant land, which used to contain an above-ground bulk storage plant for fuel oil and gasoline, apparently has contamination problems. Holmes said the company will haul polluted soil to an approved landfill, but admitted the process of dealing with the DNR has been time-consuming. Ironically, the site is directly across the street from the village's electric and water building, which also has contaminated soil from leaky underground gasoline storage tanks. The problems, Holmes said, are not related.

The company, Holmes said, would ask for a tax abatement for the project. He said the company would probably add some jobs as a result of the project.

Last year Chelsea Milling Co. set a sales record, Holmes said. He said sales have leveled off this year due to the recession.

Chelsea Shell To Be Replaced By Larger Facility

Chelsea Shell station on M-52 near I-94 is scheduled to be torn down later this year and replaced with a larger building and new gasoline pump configuration.

Chelsea Village Planning Commission is scheduled to consider site plans for the new building, owned by Auto City Service, a Grand Blanc company that owns two dozen gasoline stations in the state.

The current round building will be replaced by a rectangular, 5,018-square-foot service center with about 25 parking spaces. Existing canopies will be removed. Three gasoline islands will be installed, as well as a diesel island for trucks. No information was available as to what kind of services would be provided in the building.

The company will also seek sign variances. Village sign ordinance allows two signs up to 30-square-foot each, no more than 25 feet off the ground. The company wants one 96-square-foot, 80-foot-tall sign, and another 127-square-foot sign, 27 feet tall.

On several occasions in recent years, sign variance requests have been the source of controversy.

Three Candidates Seek Board Seats

Chelsea Board of Education incumbents John W. Eisenbeiser and Joe M. Redding will be challenged by Domingo Hermosillo in the June 8 elections.

Eisenbeiser and Redding have the distinction of being the only two board members who voted against the district's bond issue proposal last year.

Eisenbeiser, 7750 Werkner Rd., is the board's secretary. He has served one term. He is also self-employed.

Redding, 48 Chestnut, has served two terms. He and Hermosillo, 3191 Jeannette Dr., work in the automotive industry.

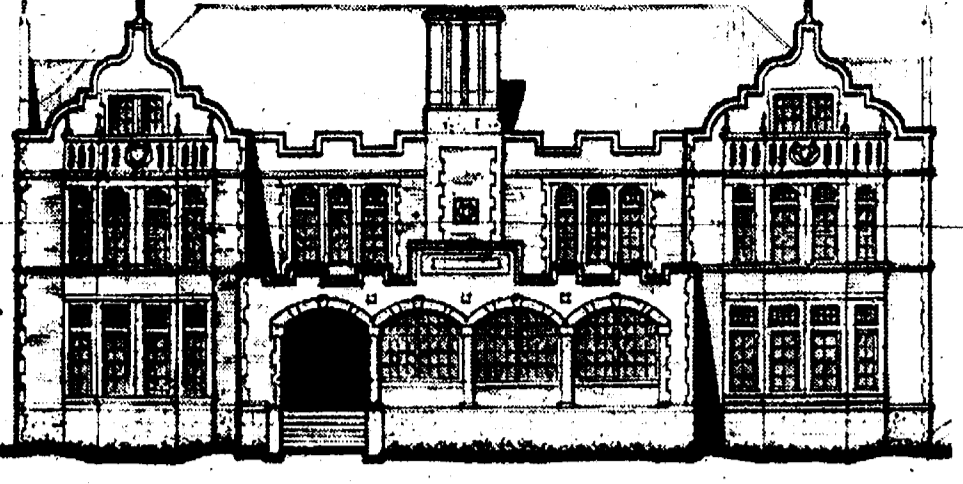

Monday was the deadline for nominating petitions.

A NEW SHIPPING WAREHOUSE for Chelsea Milling Co. will be built on this site just west of their current facility on North St. The new building will be about 125,000 square feet, one of the largest projects in the village in recent years.

Lobbyists' Campaign Contributions Questioned

Common Cause in Michigan has suggested that registered lobbyists may have been reimbursed by their employers or clients for more than $194,000 in contributions they made to legislators' campaigns between 1988 and 1990. The group asked state election officials to clarify campaign finance law regarding such contributions.

Twelve lobbyists contributed over $5,000 during the period reviewed by Common Cause. Some lobbyists may have received additional salary for making campaign contributions, the organization asserted.

"These contributions appear as personal contributions on campaign finance reports, which they may or not be," said Karen Holcomb-Merrill, executive director. "Our concern is that lobbyists should not be acting as conduits for special interest money."

Senate Government Operations chair Phil Arthurhultz (R-Whitehall) said attempts to direct dollars to particular campaigns by employers and clients issuing orders when they provide reimbursements is clearly prohibited by the courts. But providing a large enough salary to make contributions and giving the individual the discretion to make them and decide to whom they should go may be protected by the constitution, he said. "I believe some changes are necessary to lessen the role of Lansing-based dollars," Arthurhultz said. "But you get into freedom of speech and individuals' ability to influence elections by way of their dollars."

At $17,812, William Hieshetter, representing Grand Rapids Public Schools, topped the list of lobbyists who contributed more than $5,000.

Other major contributors represented Detroit Board of Education, Michigan State University, Michigan Boating Industry Association, Michigan Association for Improved School Legislation, Association of Independent Colleges and Universities, Wayne State University, Wm. Beaumont Hospital and Western Michigan University. Three were multi-client lobbyists.

Arthurhultz said singling out individual lobbyists' contributions may be misleading because other school districts or institutions may contribute the same funds through political action committees. "A lot of the recommended reform is only a change in the bookkeeping method or some minor alteration of the current practice," Arthurhultz said. "If someone's serious about reform, you have to figure out what the courts have permitted and fashion legislation that imposes some hard, fast and strict limitations."

Common Cause has requested an Interpretive Statement from the Secretary of State addressing whether it is a violation of the Campaign Finance Act when a trade association, corporation or school reimburses an employee for campaign contributions made by the employee.

The organization has also raised questions over the legality of providing additional salary for making campaign contributions or having a lobbyist charge clients for campaign contributions made by the lobbyist. Election officials have 60 business days to respond to the organization's request.

"Clearly any of these scenarios would evade the spirit of the Campaign Finance Act by misrepresenting the source of campaign contributions," Holcomb-Merrill said.

To avoid the appearance of impropriety, Michigan Association of Counties decided in 1991 its lobbyists would no longer participate in fundraising events on behalf of MAC, Holcomb-Merrill said, adding several colleges and universities have established PACs recently to allow their lobbyists to attend fund-raisers without using state money.

Higher education institutions have also gotten around campaign finance law by raising funds for campaigns through alumni contributions to avoid using tax dollars. Public institutions have been forbidden from using public funds to influence legislation, Arthurhultz said. "You can't use tax dollars to lobby for more tax dollars," he added.

tion keeping the demonstrators on the lawn without the committee's permission.

Lansing ACLU Chapter president Dorean Koenig, representing the homeless activists, said she will ask the court in writing to allow the group to remain on the lawn until another hearing is scheduled.

Under court order, the group must leave and remove its tents and other belongings from the lawn within three days of the committee's action on the rules—unless the injunction is extended.

Koenig said despite her objection that the revised rules will have a chilling effect on the exercise of First Amendment rights on public property, she will urge her clients to obey the court order if she cannot obtain an extension.

The group also raised several objections regarding alleged unequal treatment toward protesters, for example, advising the building manager of the scheduled date and time when literature would be distributed, but not requiring similar notices from other potential litter producers such as picnickers.

Another major concern by the group is the requirement that scheduled events or exhibits on the Capitol grounds be restricted to between the hours of 8 a.m. and 11 p.m. daily.

Koenig said that rule, which provides exceptions for late-night legislative sessions, closes the grounds at night without adequate public notice, leaving unsuspecting sidewalk travelers subject to penalties for trespassing.

Other concerns are rules which restrict demonstrations to the rear of the Capitol away from contact with most visitors and banning free-standing objects on the lawn if they carry a message.

Koenig said the rules are not unconstitutional as originally proposed but would still require individuals and organizations who want to use the special public forum to "register" by recommending that requests be made at least one month in advance with detailed information regarding the planned event or exhibit.

"We're trying to make the rules as content-neutral, as fair, as respectful of the First Amendment rights as much as possible," said Sen. John Schwarz (R-Battle Creek), who chairs the committee. "I don't think we can do a better job. Now we have to go back to court with the rules and I hope the judge accepts them and I hope the temporary restraining order will be lifted."

Schwarz said the group's continued opposition to the rules, which he said are now so lenient they are virtually no rules at all, illustrates its goal to remain on the Capitol lawn without any rules governing where they stay or their behavior.

Abdul Alkalamat, one of the group's demonstrators, said the tent has illustrated the problems of poverty and government mismanagement. "Being here is a great political statement," Alkalamat said.

Uncle Lew from Lima Says:

DEAR MISTER EDITOR:

The fellows were in a light hearted mood during the session at the country store Saturday night. Bug Hookum set the tone for the agender when he took note that all days through all the state primaries have been like they caught the April Fool Day virus from computers that count the votes.

Early on, Bug said, the candidates tried to build themselves up by tearing all the rest down. Then the Democrats got past draft dodging and skirt chasing to find they didn't have much else to talk about that didn't tar all of Congress with the same brush. Then we found out Buchanan was just playing straw man so Bush could pretend to be running against someone.

Bug said the whole exercise called to mind how Adlai Stevenson fought fire with fire in the 1956 primaries for President. He got tired of hearing all the other candidates talk about being wounded in the war, coming home to pick up the pieces and dedicate their lives to public service. So he announced that if being partly disabled was a political plus he wanted everybody to know he was the 4-F'est, flatfootedest and rupturedest poor devil running for any office anywhere in the country.

Politicians are like people, Bug went on, when they get under strain they lose sight of their goal and double their effort. He said he had thought this House bank overdraft business up one side and down the other, and he was full convinced that it would of been the biggest non-issue to come down the pike if members of the House hadn't started crying about how they hadn't done anything wrong and they wouldn't ever do it again.

The fellows were full agreed that politicians have some human traits. For another, Zeke Grubb said, they can't talk straight. Zeke recalled when he was a boy and the biscuit plate got to him he'd ask his Ma if there were more hot biscuits. Her answer would be that she had store bought rolls, dumplings left over from Sunday and she had run out of ciabber.

Today, Zeke allowed, when you hear a candidate say he never pays attention to polls you know he's behind in them. And when he stands on a strong plank of "restoring family values" you might check to see if his lady friend dumped him because he wouldn't get a divorce. When he complains that the other candidate has been bought by "special interests" there's no doubt that the other fellow has raised more money.

General speaking, Clem Webster said, politics is like real life in that everything that goes around comes around. He had read where the United States was hiring 1,500 out of work Soviet scientists for no better reason than to keep Iran, Iraq, Libya or some other bad guy from getting them. Clem said what sticks in his mind is how right Yogi Berra was about dayshavoo all over again. It ain't been that long, Clem went on, since we were competing with the Soviets for German scientists, and we know the road that took us down.

Everybody's hindsight being perfect, Clem said, we wonder which come first, the hired gun scientists or the balance of power standoff that come within a heartbeat of blowing up the planet. Under rules of the new game, he went on, we are choosing sides and drawing lines, and we know we won't be using all the best Soviet minds we can buy to do research in field crops and the TB revival.

Yours truly,
 Uncle Lew.

Discussion Slated On Overcoming Learning Disabilities

Many intelligent people have learning disabilities. Young or old, they may experience difficulty concentrating, reading, spelling, speaking, listening or solving math problems. They may be remarkably quick in certain tasks, while awfully slow at others.

This paradox can be confusing and frustrating. But there is help and there are ways to succeed. In fact, many famous, brilliant people have been learning disabled. Proper diagnoses and knowledgeable teaching help individuals with learning disabilities understand the ways they learn, recognize their strengths and discover ways to compensate for their weaknesses.

For its next Health Night Out, the University of Michigan Medical Center will present "Learning about Learning Disabilities." Leading the discussion will be Carrie Fosselman, M.A., director of the Educational Evaluation and Consultation Service; Richard Jabiel, M.Ed., a U-M medical student with learning disabilities; and T. Anthony Denton, M.H.A., J.D., employment and salary administration manager at the U-M Medical Center.

During the discussion you'll find out what constitutes learning disabilities and how diagnoses are made; how having learning disabilities affects the person, the family, friends and co-workers; and how legal protections guarantee people with learning disabilities equal opportunity in school and on the job.

In addition, you will receive a free information packet that includes an informative pamphlet on learning disabilities and a simple test entitled "Should I be tested to see if I am learning disabled?"

Plan to join the group from 7:30 to 9 p.m. on April 14 at the Kellogg Eye Center auditorium for the next Health Night Out program. Explore how learning disabilities can be overcome.

Mormon Church Focusing on Needy Newborn Infant Project

April is "The Month of the Young Child," an annual celebration sponsored by the National Association for the Education of Young Children (NAEYC).

In conjunction with this designation, the women's organization of the local Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, organized on March 17, 1842, the oldest existing organization structured entirely for women, numbering in the millions today with members world-wide, has initiated the "Needy Newborn Project."

Recognizing that, for many different reasons, newborn infants and the programs that serve them are facing increasingly complex problems threatening the well being of infants and their chances for a good start in life, this project was started.

"Never before have the needs of babies and their families been more pressing. Many of these needs stem directly from the dramatic changes that have occurred in patterns of family employment as well as family composition.

The old traditional definition of family—an employed father working at one job only, a mother at home who does not work at any type of income-generating employment until the children have graduated from high school, and children, make up less than 10 percent of all households today.

Increasing numbers of infants are facing borderline poverty conditions with limited or no access to basic health care and cutbacks in supplemental services that affect the infant's well-being."

It was felt by the women within the local church membership that we, as citizens of a community, of a state, of a nation, needed to focus on the needs of infants and their families and to support a program/service that met those needs... to meet that responsibility, the "Needy Newborn Project" was formulated.

Donated basic layette items are put together in a baby bath or diaper bag and given to the Social Work Department at St. Joseph Mercy Hospital for the social worker to distribute according to her discretion. A great need has been expressed and any donation of new or nearly new items by the public would be greatly appreciated by the mothers and the little ones who need these things the most. Among needed items are the following.

Meredith Johnson Prepares Independent Project at Wooster

Meredith Lynn Johnson of Chelsea has prepared a major Independent Study project at The College of Wooster, Wooster, O.

Johnson, an economics major, has completed a thorough evaluation of why business firms merge and how this enhances profitability. She has also analyzed the post-merger performance and how it is affected by size, growth rate of sales, percentage change in employees, and the productivity of the firm's assets.

Wooster is one of only a few institutions in the country that has Independent Study as a graduation requirement. Instituted more than 40 years ago, Wooster's nationally regarded Independent Study program encourages students to become actively involved in their own learning, with the result that a high proportion of Wooster graduates go on to earn doctoral degrees.

Working one-to-one with a faculty adviser, every senior does an intensive investigation of a topic of personal interest. The student must also present an oral defense and the project is then evaluated by two faculty members. While Independent Study often takes the form of a thesis, some students produce original plays, fiction, musical compositions and works of art.

While at Wooster, Johnson has been a member of Pi Kappa, a social women's organization, the Student Alumni Association, the Wooster Dance Company and Alpha Delta Omicron, the economics honor society. She has volunteered at the Wooster Childcare Center and as a tutor in the economics department. Johnson has been named to the Dean's List seven times.

Johnson is the daughter of Willard H. and Gale Johnson of 770 Book St., Chelsea.

Ambulance Service Wants To Build New Chelsea Station

Huron Valley Ambulance wants to add a station along M-52 south of I-94 in Sylvan township.

HVA serves the Chelsea and Manchester area from a makeshift station located at the impact-testing building inside the Chrysler Proving Grounds about a quarter mile from M-52. Meal and bunk quarters are about 100 yards from the center. HVA believes it can cut its response time by several minutes with a new site.

The Chelsea-Manchester area averages about 80 calls per month, with about 65 coming from the Chelsea area.

HVA, a non-profit corporation, is looking for a one-acre site for a 30-by-40-foot building, which would contain room for an ambulance, a classroom, and meal and bunk quarters. The site would also need a septic field. Ideally they'd like someone to donate the land.

According to reports, HVA has earmarked $150,000 for the project.

If a new station is built, a crew would remain at the proving grounds.

CHS Music Dept. Preparing 'Grease'

Spring is here, despite the cool temperatures, and one sure sign is the upcoming Chelsea High School Music Department's annual spring musical that will run April 23, 24 and 25.

This year's offering is "Grease," the popular Broadway show set in a fictitious Rydell High school in the 1950's. It's a rock 'n roll version of the classic "boy meets girl" with lots of songs and wonderful high energy dance numbers.

The "boy," Danny Zuko, will be played by Jeremy Sterling and the "girl," Sandy Dumbrowski, is portrayed by Corey Schoenberg. Rounding out the cast in male leads are Rob Jaques as "Kenicke," Rob Coelius as "Sonny," Jeremy Scott Guenther as "Roger," and Scott Leeman as "Doody."

Female leads are Becky Pryor as "Rizzo," Amy Mitchell as "Jan," Jessica Cauffiel as "Frenchie" and Courtney Gorton as "Marty." They will be joined on stage by a large and talented supporting cast and chorus.

Steven Hinz, Chelsea school's vocal music director, will be back this year as music director and producer while his talented wife, Lisa Hinz-Johnson serves as artistic director. The choreography, a crucial part of this play's success is being directed by Kathy Marrero. Jeri Cole is in charge of the demanding job of costuming the cast and Scott Marsh is the technical and design director. Peter Rosheger, Chelsea school's orchestra director, will be directing the musical ensemble referred to as "the pit orchestra."

"Grease" is, more than anything, just a lot of adolescent fun. But those of you familiar with the movie version may be concerned about some of the issues it raises and whether it is suitable for young children. Rest assured that the play has undergone a re-writing by Steven Hinz and has received school board approval. Moreover, the directors feel so strongly about presenting positive life choices for our children that there will be a short post-production presentation immediately following the performances.

Tickets are available at Chelsea Pharmacy. Show dates are April 23, 24 and 25 at 8 p.m. in the George Prizing Auditorium at Chelsea High school.

CIVIL WAR RECOLLECTIONS of Gen. George A. Custer will be presented Thursday, April 9 at Stockbridge Town Hall. Steven Alexander of Jackson, historian and lecturer, recognized as the official portrayer of Custer, will make the presentation at 7 p.m.

Historical Society Offers Gen. Custer Portrayal

Stockbridge Town Hall will be the setting for the Waterloo Area Historical Society's education meeting for April. Steven Alexander, a historian and lecturer from Jackson, will present "Memoirs of the Beau Sabreur—The Civil War Recollections of George A. Custer" on Thursday evening, April 9 from 7 to 9 p.m.

Custer was born in New Rumley, O., on Dec. 5, 1839. He was educated at the United States Military Academy at West Point. At the time of his graduation, the Civil War was underway and he arrived during the first Battle of Bull Run as a second lieutenant in the Union Army. In 1863, he was brigadier general in command of a cavalry brigade who fought at Gettysburg and under General Sheridan in the Shenandoah Valley. By 1864-65, Custer was major general of volunteers and was involved in most of the actions of the last campaign of General Grant.

In 1873, Custer was ordered to Dakota Territory to protect railway surveyors and gold miners who were crossing land owned by the Sioux. The area had been ceded to the Sioux in 1868, but the momentum of the western movement was beyond honoring allegiance to the treaty.

In 1876, Custer's regiment was ordered to scout in advance of the main force of General Terry. They found an encampment of Sioux, attacked on June 25, and were overwhelmed. A horse named "Comanche" was the only survivor.

Alexander, and the re-enactors who accompany him, is recognized as the official portrayer of Custer for Monroe, where the Custer family had a farm, and for New Rumley. He has been a serious student of the life and times of George A. Custer for most of his own, studying the postures and mannerisms of the famed cavalry officer. He travels extensively and will once again portray George Armstrong Custer at the historical reenactment of the Battle of Little Bighorn in Hardin, Mont., this June.

Living history is rarely as accessible as it will be on April 9. Come and be a part of the experience. Admission is $1.50 for adults, 75¢ for students.

Local Residents Honored at U-M Convocation

Many local residents were among the nearly 3,000 University of Michigan students recognized at the Ann Arbor campus' annual Honors Convocation on Sunday, March 22.

Students were recognized with Class Honors if they achieved an undergraduate academic record equal to at least half A's and half B's for two terms (or one term for new students) during 1991.

Also, 846 students were named James B. Angell Scholars. They have maintained an all-A record for two or more consecutive terms as undergraduates.

In addition, 234 members of the freshman class received the William J. Branstrom Prize for ranking in the top five percent of their class. The prize is a book of the student's choice and a bookmark.

Chelsea residents who were recognized at the convocation included: James A. Alford, Mark J. Chasteen, Patrick Gustine, Cindy L. Kvarnberg, Laurie P. McGovern, J. Scott Mullison, Jennifer L. Rossi, Lance V. Satterthwaite, Dena A. Stevens, Jeffrey A. Waldyke and Wendy E. Welch. Each of these students were recognized with Class Honors. Additionally, Kvarnberg, Mullison and Welch were named Angell Scholars.

From Dexter, Class Honors were awarded to Daniel W. Berman, Todd C. Clark, David C. Hochrein, Matthew A. Perry, Joseph F. Scheuring and Carol J. Wilson. Perry and Scheuring were also recognized as Angell Scholars.

Manchester residents James A. Hall and Brendan M. Lenski were recognized for achieving Class Honors at the convocation.

Diana D. Apostolou and David J. Jansma are Grass Lake residents who were recognized at the convocation for earning Class Honors. Additionally, Apostolou was named an Angell Scholar.

From Pinckney, Marta B. Alml, Derek A. Gagnon, Jonathan M. Glaser, Kenneth M. Gondek, Sherry J. Keener, Eric R. Lofstrom, David F. Merchant, Sheila M. Richards and Demian D. Rose achieved Class Honors and were recognized at the convocation.

Dangers of Government Tinkering

As the economic recovery continues to lag, the debate in Washington this election year centers on what more the government should do about it. But as some critics suggest, politicians should be discussing how much less the government should do.

been spending more over the last two years, and the recovery is still in slow motion. Apparently, then, spending does not automatically guarantee economic growth.

One reason for that can be found by turning to the government's revenue side. In order for Uncle Sam to increase spending, he must do one of three things. He must increase the revenue he takes in—in other words, more taxes. Or he must borrow more money—meaning a bigger deficit. Or he can print more money.

According to most economists, none of these three options have beneficial effects. The first two—increased taxation and increased borrowing—take money from private sector and redistribute it through the public sector, a sort of "rob Peter to pay Paul" method. The third option—artificially increasing the money supply—is a sure source of inflation. In other words, too much money chasing too few goods.

As Washington correspondent Chris Warden says, the Bush Administration and the current Congress have been pursuing all three options. The 1990 Budget Agreement raised taxes by about $170 billion. And taxes now represent more than 20% of the GNP.

the level they had attained by 1980. Not so coincidentally, recession gripped the country from 1981 to early 1983.

But as Warden points out, despite these tax increases, the deficit itself also has increased, meaning more borrowing from the private sector. And at close to $200 billion just plain interest on that borrowing, interest is now the third largest single category of federal spending, behind only the Defense Department and Social Security.

At the same time, Warden says, "President Bush has consistently called on the Federal Reserve to increase the money supply. The President has never called it that, preferring instead to describe it as a need for lower interest rates. But interest rates are just the cost of money, and under the law of supply and demand, the only way to decrease those rates is to increase the supply of money."

Concludes Warden: "If spending is not the answer to economic growth, and financing that spending creates problems, then it seems clear that the government should be doing less, not more, of both."

Schools To Decide About Channel One

Chelsea schools will probably decide later this month whether to subscribe to the service known commonly as Channel One.

Whittle Communications has installed the system in thousands of schools nation-wide.

With the program, the company installs televisions in every room and hooks them via coaxial cable into a central system of two videocassette recorders. It also would install a satellite dish on each school.

The basic Channel One program is a daily 12-minute mix of news, public service announcements, and no more than two minutes of commercials.

However, the technology offered in the system would give the district communications possibilities it does not now have. It could be hooked by satellite to other schools, it would allow other commercial-free news and educational programs to be played to one or more rooms at the same time at any time of the day, and would even allow the televisions to be used as computer monitors. It would also allow the schools to be hooked to the local cable television system.

Superintendent Joe Piasecki said he wants teachers at Beach Middle school and Chelsea High school to decide whether the system would be useful.

Personally, he said, "I've done a real flip-flop on this one." He said he was initially against the system because of the advertising but has since seen the possibilities the system has to offer.

The system and equipment are provided, installed, and maintained free of charge. The company makes its money through advertising. A sample tape played Monday for the school board contained advertisements for a candy bar and soft drink.

Local Men Make Winter Dean's List At Michigan Tech

Six local men have been named to the winter quarter dean's list at Michigan Technological University by earning a grade point average of 3.5 or higher.

A total of 1,191 students achieved placement on the dean's list for the winter quarter.

Additionally, reported Dr. Martha Janners, dean of students, 281 students earned straight A averages with a 4.0 gpa for the quarter, including two students from this area.

Dexter resident Laurent J. Chatigny of Dexter earned a spot on the dean's list. Chatigny is a sophomore studying civil engineering technology.

From Manchester, Lyle N. Portice, Eric J. Hawman, Michael G. Kotajarvi and Keith E. Liederman all achieved placement on the winter quarter's dean's list. Also, Liederman was recognized for earning a 4.0, all-A average during this past quarter.

Portice is a junior studying electrical engineering and Kotajarvi is a senior in the electrical engineering curriculum. Hawman is a sophomore in physics and Liederman is a junior majoring in mechanical engineering.

Robert E. Nemeth of Pinckney was also named to the dean's list for the winter quarter. Nemeth, a senior in civil engineering, achieved a perfect 4.0 grade point average for the term.

If you think you're spending too much for food, think again. Recent figures estimate that Americans spend only 12 percent of the average after-tax family income for food. That's down 2 percent from 1980 and far from the 17.6 percent of 1960. In other words, income spent on food in the U.S. is one-third less than it was 30 years ago.

Emergency, Government Officials Give 911 System Full Endorsement

A group of emergency officials and government leaders agreed last Thursday that there is no good reason for anyone in Washtenaw county to avoid using the new 911 system in the event of an emergency.

Washtenaw Central Dispatch Authority board held a special meeting in Sylvan Town Hall, specifically to address concerns raised in both a story and a letter to the editor in recent editions of The Chelsea Standard. The letter, from Chelsea firefighter Tom Osborne, urged residents in the Chelsea fire district outside the village to use the department's direct line due to delays experienced by the department.

Washtenaw County Sheriff's Department Sgt. Joe Yekulis, director of the dispatch authority, investigated six specific incidents in which the Chelsea Fire Department claimed it was notified of an emergency later than it should have been. Delays ranged from about 10 seconds up to about 20 minutes. Most involved medical emergencies. In every case, however, emergency personnel from some agency arrived on the scene.

Virtually all the delays involved some sort of human error in the dispatching process, Yekulis found. In no case was a delay due to malfunctioning equipment or software or a basic flaw in the system.

In one case, the wrong fire department was dispatched, in another case Huron Valley Ambulance was dispatched first rather than Chelsea fire, and in another Chelsea fire was dispatched late.

"Even the best-trained people can't always remember the right number or dial it properly," said authority chair Jim Drolett of Dexter township.

Drolett and Yekulis both defended the system by noting there are thousands of calls each month placed to the system and over-all few errors are made.

Several comments were made that 911 is the best system primarily because it is the easiest system to use. One board member said that if a person can't remember a fire department's seven-digit number he will often dial "0" for operator, which can result in very long delays because an operator might be located in Detroit and might have no idea what emergency agency to notify.

Washtenaw County Sheriff Ron Schebl urged all who believe they need a police or fire response, or an ambulance, to use 911, and not try to decide whether they have an emergency on their hands.

"We want all those calls," Schebl said.

"We can decide whether it's an emergency or not."

There were, however, a couple of concerns voiced about the system, and a couple of suggested changes, none of which would change the use of the system by the average resident.

The system is set up so that any 911 call (computer screen information) can be transferred from one agency to another at the push of a button. For instance, central dispatch can transfer a call to Huron Valley Ambulance, who can transfer it to Chelsea fire. However, if the caller hangs up once central dispatch answers, the information cannot be transferred automatically to another computer screen and the agency has to make a separate call. Once an initial call is answered, the 911 system automatically stores all pertinent information, such as which fire department should be dispatched and what address the call was placed from. The authority agreed to see whether a software change could be made, even though the average delay would be less than 10 seconds.

In addition, when a call is transferred, the computer screen information does not indicate which agency transferred the call. In one of the specific Chelsea cases, a dispatcher incorrectly made an assumption about the origin of a call and failed to notify Chelsea Fire Department, believing Chelsea had already been notified. The lack of transfer information has caused Huron Valley Ambulance, in some cases, to inform a fire department that has already been dispatched.

There were other concerns as well. Callers from cellular telephones may not have their calls go to the right agency. 911 calls from cellular telephones do not go to the 911 system, but are instead directed to a dedicated line into central dispatch. However, depending on where a 911 call is placed, it may end up in another county because the call goes to the wrong cellular tower.

Chelsea fire chief Bud Hankerd, who described the system as "the best that's ever come down the pike," again expressed his opinion that all fire calls in the Chelsea district should first come to Chelsea rather than central dispatch. That, however, means all 911 calls from the district would be directed to Chelsea, about 80 percent of which would be police calls, which would have to be transferred to central dispatch, Schebl said. That could dramatically increase the workload for Chelsea dispatchers.

"How many of your calls are emergency calls?" Hankerd asked, with the implication that the vast majority of calls to a fire department are emergency calls. The decision to have all local calls routed to Chelsea initially would have to be made locally, Schebl said.

It was also noted that the new plastic telephone book covers do not mention 911 as the local emergency number and gives the Chelsea department's direct line.

The fastest growing job category from now until the year 2,000 is expected to be that of legal assistant.

SPORTS

Bulldogs!

Two Standout Seniors, Many Juniors Dominate Bulldog Softball Team

Chelsea Bulldogs, a team dominated by juniors, believe they can challenge for the Southeastern Conference softball title, and possibly more.

Interim coach Joe Beard (coach Amy Poljan is on a pregnancy leave) took the team to South Carolina over the spring break and said, "I'm extremely impressed at how hard the girls worked." He says the team may rely less on the bunt than usual because he believes the girls will be capable swingers.

"We're a fairly young team with not a lot of experience as starters," Beard says.

Captain Kelly Cross and Jennifer Petty are the lone returning seniors. They are also the Bulldogs' top two pitchers. Cross was all-state as an infielder last season and should be one of the team's best hitters and the likely clean-up batter. When she isn't pitching she'll play first base. Junior Erin Knott is being groomed as the third pitcher, and junior Missy Schumann is number four.

Petty is a fine all-around athlete. She'll pitch the first game of each double-header and will be the team's lead-off hitter due to her speed, baserunning, and her ability to bunt or hit away.

"I think if she gets on we should be able to get her to third any time," Beard says.

Beard is optimistic about the strength of his defense. He has juniors Liz Sager and Theresa Hurst who will split time at catcher and third base. Sager is the primary catcher and Hurst the top third baseman.

Junior Gretchen Knutsen will play shortstop and junior Heather McConeghy should start at second.

Petty will play centerfield when she isn't pitching. Senior Angie Riley, junior Michelle Beeman and sophomore Nikki Piasceki and Jamie Collinsworth will also be in the outfield.

Sophomore Jacki Crawford is also an outfielder but sprained her ankle and has not been able to practice much.

Junior Tina Hassett can play second base, outfield, and may see time on the mound in tournament play.

Beard has speed at the beginning of the lineup in Petty and Collinsworth, and at the end in Beeman and McConeghy. All those girls can hit and some can hit with power.

In the middle of the starting line-up he has Knutsen hitting third ("a solid hitter") Cross at clean-up, Sager fifth ("an energetic contact hitter") Hurst sixth ("moves the ball well"), and Riley or Knott seventh.

Beard says he is concentrating on developing his team's hitting and defense, partly because he knows next year there will be few experienced pitchers returning.

Beard, a high school baseball player who has played fast-pitch softball for more than 20 years, is being assisted by his brother, Bill, volunteer Ty Anderson, and the ever-present Charlie Waller, who Beard said is "really the soul of the team."

"We know it's tough for Amy to sit out and we really miss her," Beard says.

BASEBALL PLAYERS and others did one of the little things on Monday in preparation for the Chelsea season as they erected the outfield fence. "Doing The Little Things" became the slogan of last year's state champion baseball squad.

Dirk Colbry Named CHS Swimming MVP

Chelsea senior Dirk Colbry was named MVP of the Bulldogs swimming and diving team at the team's annual awards banquet recently.

Most Improved Award was given to Steve Colbry and the Coach's Award went to David Brock.

"It's nice to have this time to thank them for all their hard work and commitment," said coach Dave Jolly.

"This year's squad made great strides to becoming a fabulous team in the years to come."

THE GARDEN CORNER

★ Reduce Disease Problems in Home Garden

For plant diseases to occur in the garden or landscape, three things are necessary: a pathogen (a disease-causing organism, such as a fungus, a virus or a bacterium), a susceptible host and a conducive environment.

The gardener who wants to minimize plant disease problems needs to find a way to prevent that combination from occurring.

The easiest way, says Mary Hausbeck, a plant pathologist specializing in diseases of vegetables and ornamentals at Michigan State University, is to select plants that are resistant to or tolerant of disease.

"When you're choosing vegetable varieties, check the catalog or the seed packet for information on disease resistance," she advises. "This is crucial: it gives you an edge you can not get any other way. It eliminates the susceptible host as part of the disease triangle."

A conducive environment may include conditions that are favorable to the pathogen, unfavorable to the host, or both.

Selecting a proper site for planting is one way to control the environmental part of the triangle. For warm-weather, sun-loving crops, for instance, a proper site would be sunny with good soil and air drainage. Soggy soil or insufficient light will slow plant growth and reduce vigor, making plants more susceptible to diseases, particularly root rot.

"Air drainage is important because many foliage diseases can get established only when foliage is wet," Hausbeck explains. "Air movement around plants dries foliage off quickly and reduces the relative humidity, so disease organisms have less chance to get a foothold."

Gardeners can influence air movement around plants by adjusting row spacing and density within the row, suggests, or by avoiding the placement of plants in a dead air space created by a hedgerow or other wind-break. They can also avoid working in the garden when plants are wet, time irrigation to allow plants time to dry before evening, and control weeds.

"Working among wet plants is a good way to spread disease organisms at a time when plants are most susceptible—when foliage is wet," Hausbeck notes. "Watering early in the day, or using trickle irrigation to apply water only to the roots rather than the tops of plants, reduces the amount of time that water is available on plant foliage and so reduces the chance that disease organisms will get established."

Controlling weeds is not just a matter of aesthetics. Weeds can harbor disease organisms, she points out. And weeds that crowd garden plants can reduce air movement around plants.

Two closely related activities that can help get a handle on plant disease in the garden and landscape are scouting and keeping records, Hausbeck says.

"Scouting is simply looking closely at your plants to see if any problems are present," she explains. "Logging what occurs, when and under what conditions can reveal patterns. If, for instance, tomatoes, peppers and potatoes planted in the northwest corner of the garden do poorly there, often losing their leaves prematurely because of leaf spotting, you could surmise that there's a plant disease-causing organism in that part of the garden that is building up over time. You'd then make a note to yourself to plant other crops there. Making a map of the garden each year and keeping it with your notes on how the garden performed can go a long way toward minimizing problems in future years."

Keeping plants growing vigorously is a good defense against diseases and other problems, Hausbeck notes. Watering as needed, fertilizing and protecting plants from injury by insects, wildlife and cultivation, for instance, keeps plants growing well and better able to resist disease.

Sometimes disease prevention is closely related to insect control. Bacterial wilt of cucumbers and related crops, for instance, is carried by the cucumber beetle. The only way to prevent the disease is to protect plants against the beetles.

When plants do become diseased, sometimes the only treatment is to remove the infected plants and so prevent the spread of the disease.

Hausbeck also recommends removing all diseased plant leaves and other plant tissue at the end of the season to reduce the carryover of certain diseases. This is especially important with crabapple trees, roses and tomatoes, she says. The organisms that cause a number of devastating diseases, such as scab on crabapple, black spot on roses and leaf spotting on tomato, overwinter on fallen foliage or other plant parts.

Survey of High School Grads Will Be Made

Graduates of the class of 1991 will soon receive a phone call as the local school districts conduct the annual survey of their graduates.

The survey is very brief but provides important information to the school district regarding what the graduates are doing.

With the previous class (1990), the survey informed the local schools that 74% of the graduates continued their education; 54% of those who continued education also worked (an average of 25 hours per week); one in three who continued education did so at Washtenaw Community College; 61% of the graduates worked part- or full-time.

That and other information helps the local schools to understand what their graduates are doing, and to a certain extent, how well they are doing. Graduates also have the opportunity to comment on the classes and services their school provided.

The survey is a telephone survey and conducted for Chelsea, Dexter, Manchester, Milan and Saline schools by the South & West Washtenaw Consortium. 1991 graduates or their parents will receive calls during April.

For information on the survey or for previous data, you may contact the survey co-ordinator, Bob Miller at 428-8327.

Blacks, now 13 percent of the total U.S. workforce, will account for 7.2 million entrants between 1990 and 2005, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics. This will be fewer than the number of Hispanic entrants projected (8.7 million).

County To Close Nearby Park Sharon

Park Sharon in Sharon township is scheduled to close within two weeks to allow the county road commission to begin using an old gravel pit.

The park, off M-52 between Chelsea and Manchester, is the only county park in the southwestern area of the county. It is not owned by the Washtenaw County Parks Commission but is leased from the road commission. The park is reportedly closing because of the proximity of the gravel pit to the park's small entrance. The county has safety and liability concerns with the heavy machinery that will be in the area.

The park has been the subject of complaints from area residents. There have been reports of illegal activities, and use of the facility after dark. The park is not fenced and there's no gate.

Before excavation of gravel can begin, the road commission has to apply for a conditional use permit and request a public hearing on the gravel excavation in Sharon township.

Farm Bureau Still Hopes for Auto Insurance Reform

The state's largest farm organization approves of Gov. Engler's veto of SB 691 and is calling for the legislature to enact "genuine reform" of Michigan's automobile insurance system.

"Farmers are concerned about the rising cost of automobile insurance, but Senate Bill 691 was a phony reform," said Jack Laurie, Tuscola county dairy and crop producer and president of the Michigan Farm Bureau. "The legislation contained provisions which subsidized the auto insurance costs of urban drivers and unfairly increased costs for rural and suburban drivers."

Laurie said another major problem with Senate Bill 691 was that it set a bad precedent of government involvement in private business operations by inappropriately dictating what private industry can charge for its products.

"We continue to support reforms which will reduce the cost of automobile insurance, and we stand firmly opposed to rate subsidies and premium rollbacks," said Laurie. "Farm Bureau members believe insurance consumers will benefit most from a free and open market place where insurer competition controls prices. Premium rollbacks are an ineffective, temporary band-aid approach to the problem."

Scrap Tire Bill Permits Storage for Agriculture Use

Michigan Farm Bureau is supporting HB 5315, a measure that would exempt "feed storage locations" from the Scrap Tire Regulatory Act.

"Feed storage location means a location on one or more pieces of adjacent real property containing a commercially operated farming operation where not more than 3,000 scrap tires are used for the purpose of securing stored feed," said Vicki Pontz, legislative counsel for Michigan Farm Bureau.

The Scrap Tire Regulatory Act of 1990 requires a person who accumulates scrap tires at a collection site to register with the Department of Natural Resources for $200 annually, and to establish a program for mosquito control, according to Pontz. A person accumulating tires is also required to maintain a bond from a surety company, a certificate of deposit, a cash bond, or an irrevocable letter of credit sufficient to cover the cost of removing the tires from the tire storage area.

HB 5315 passed the Senate on March 31 and will now go to the Governor for signature.

Schoenberg, Harris Won't Seek Re-Election to Sylvan Twp. Jobs

Long-time Sylvan Township Supervisor Don Schoenberg and Clerk Mary Harris say they won't seek re-election this fall.

Schoenberg has served as supervisor since 1976, with one four-year break when George Sweeny took the reins. It was originally a part-time position for the former University of Michigan employee, but he has since seen it turn into a full-time job. He doubles as the township's assessor, which is an appointed position. He said he decided not to seek re-election once his wife retired.

"The regulations and paperwork required are much more than they used to be," Schoenberg said of the biggest changes in the job.

"There are also a lot more people in the area and there is a lot more going on. The demand of the people is much greater than it was and they are generally more aware of local government and property assessments. When I first became supervisor I think most people would have said Sylvan township was an agricultural township. Now I think it's more of a rural township, and it should stay that way."

Schoenberg has served during a period of unprecedented expansion in the township. In 1975, SEV was $55,644,000 and there were 2,509 parcels of land. This year SEV is $163,670,800 and there are 3,097 parcels.

Schoenberg said he believes the township has done a good job of keeping its roads in shape. He also said the township has stayed on top of its zoning regulations and adapting them to trends in the township.

"It's something we need to continue to work on."

Schoenberg said he hopes negotiations with the village over future landfill expenses will be completed before he leaves office. He has served as the liaison between the group of townships (Sylvan, Lima, Lyndon, and Dexter) and the village.

Former township planning commission member Jerry Dresselhouse has apparently decided to run for supervisor.

Like Schoenberg, Harris has also seen her job expand tremendously since she became clerk in 1980, after serving four years as deputy clerk.

"Initially I took minutes at board meetings and that was the bulk of the job," Harris said.

"Now elections and voter registrations and cancellations are a big part of it. I deal with the zoning board and planning commission. We've put the accounting on computer, which has taken a lot of time. I also manage Maple Grove Cemetery and sell lots."

She said the amount of time she spends on the job from week to week can vary tremendously.

"Around election time, I've had people in the living room, at the front door, back door and on the telephone all at the same time," she said.

Luann Koch has filed a petition for clerk, Harris said.

Petitions for any township position, all of which are up for election this year (a state-required format Schoenberg calls "asinine" because the entire township board could change in one year), are available from Harris. They must be signed by a minimum of eight and maximum of 20 registered township voters and are due back by May 12.

Other positions available are treasurer and two trustee seats. Fred Pearsall plans to run again for treasurer. Earl Heller and Reuben Lesser have also picked up petitions to run again for trustee.

SYLVAN TOWNSHIP SUPERVISOR Don Schoenberg says he won't seek re-election this fall. He has served for a total of 12 years, including the last eight.

MARY HARRIS, clerk of Sylvan township for 12 years, says she won't run again this fall.
