

Fire Department May Go Area-Wide

By Scott Bishop
Staff Writer

Should the Chelsea Fire Department go area-wide? That's a burning question that the village and surrounding townships want to answer very soon. On Monday, Dec. 11 the Chelsea Village Council will meet with local township supervisors to discuss the issue, and the following night the council will address the area-wide question at its regular meeting.

Chelsea Fire Chief Dan Ellenwood said at the Nov. 28 council meeting that defining the area-wide uncertainty between the townships and the village was important for both groups. "This is something that needs to be resolved so we can move on and move forward from where we are right now. These are issues that the townships have had on their minds for a number of years. But now they want some type of agreement or something reached that they know where they're going in the future," Ellenwood said.

Trustee Richard Rigg, who along with Ellenwood has represented the village in discussions about an area-wide fire department, told the council that township officials were anxious about relying on the village for service in the future and expressed frustration with their concern.

"We have discussed area-wide with the township supervisors," Rigg said. "I've listened to this for six months. We have offered to extend the length of the contract, which was one of their first points. I don't think there's any desire on any township or the village's part to cut anybody away from this agreement." He proposed a motion stating that the village would not be interested in pursuing an area-wide fire department, which drew opposition from trustees Frank Hammer, Brian Cashman and Steve Daut. They argued that such a move would undermine the council's meeting with township supervisors, already scheduled for Dec. 11, and the motion was defeated.

Chelsea village owns the fire department and Sharon, Freedom, Lima, Lyndon, Sylvan, Dexter and Waterloo Townships contract with the village for fire service. Lima Township Supervisor Bill Van Riper estimated that typically the seven townships ultimately fund roughly 70-75 percent of the fire department's budget. Ellenwood confirmed that percentage as generally accurate.

Following the meeting, Ellenwood said the township officials were uneasy about their reliance on the village. "Basically the townships are saying that if the village ever stopped contracting, that the townships would have absolutely nothing. They would have to start from scratch," he said.

Lyndon Township Supervisor John Francis agreed, noting that the townships were making significant capital investments in equipment with no guarantee of future service. Francis explained that a "more mutual connection" between the village and townships would ease some township concerns. "It just makes better sense for the future," Francis said, to have all entities relying on the fire service share in its ownership.

According to Van Riper, the current tension over fire service highlights strained relations between the townships and the village. "I think we can't do a dog-gone thing until the townships and the village are comfortable with each other. I think the supervisors of the townships have a lot to complain about," he said. Van Riper mirrored Francis in saying relations between the village and townships should be more mutual. "We need each other and we've got to start working together," he concluded.

Ellenwood said issues of ownership and control were central to area-wide discussions, adding that the townships needed to prove the advantages of such service to the village. Giving up sole ownership and moving to an area-wide fire department, Ellenwood continued, could potentially hurt the village in the future, just as maintaining the current system could harm the townships.

"One of the disadvantages is, the village would lose control of this fire department. (The fire department) would no longer be (under the) control of the village. The big contention with the townships is that you've got to have trust, and yes you do, you have to have trust. But it still comes to the point there may be things, maybe not today but on into the future, that the village would need, and it would be very expensive, and the townships, being that they would have more votes than the village, could overrule the village. So the village would have to, if they wanted to do it, they would have to pay for it all themselves," Ellenwood said. "It's not that the department couldn't run either way. It could," he explained. The issue is ownership, Ellenwood said, and that can only be decided by the village council.

All-Day Kindergarten Trial Program Proposed Here

At the Monday, Dec. 4 Chelsea School Board meeting, Superintendent Ed Richardson announced plans to propose a voluntary program of all-day kindergarten that would be available to some students in the fall of 1996.

Richardson said North and South Elementary Principals Bill Wescott and Lucy Stieber are studying the plan. It has not been decided if all-day kindergartners would attend on alternate days or for 2 1/2 straight days; it is certain that kindergarten students would continue to spend 50 percent less time in school than the higher grade levels.

Richardson emphasized that the program, if proposed to and accepted by the school board, would be a voluntary offering. He stressed that only students whose parents wanted them to attend all-day kindergarten would be involved in the pilot program, and took pains to head off any controversy.

"One of the ways to address (all-day kindergarten) without having it be a controversial issue is

Oil Spill Investigation Continuing

The gasoline spill emanating from a tank behind Davidson Sales and Maintenance on Sept. 7 is still under investigation, according to Brett Wisely of the Department of Environmental Quality, formerly known as the Department of Natural Resources.

Wisely said the investigation would be completed in the near future, but declined to name any specific deadline. He expects that charges will ultimately be filed by the DEQ, either in criminal or civil court, where burdens of proof to assign damages are lighter.

McKune Library Going On-line

When McKune Memorial Library opens its doors to the public on Monday, Dec. 18 at 10 a.m., the collection will be automated. Every item is being inventoried and linked to computer records in a shared database maintained by The Library Network in Wayne. Work began on Dec. 4 and is expected to be completed within the two-week period. In order to accomplish the automation process, the library will be closed from Dec. 4-17. Library material, including videotapes, may be returned to the library in the dropbox beside the front door.

After Dec. 18, library patrons will be able to search by author, title and subject on the online computer catalog. Library staff will be available for assistance and the adult card catalog will remain available to the public. Sessions on electronic catalog searching are planned and will be conducted by library staff.

"We would like to take this opportunity to thank our patrons for their patience while we work to bring them better service," said a library spokesman.

SANTA VISITED THE VILLAGE PLAZA last Friday, Dec. 1 during the Festival of Lights to hear some Christmas wish lists. He'll make another appearance this Friday, as well as the next two Saturday afternoons downtown.

Southern Merchants Hosting Own Holiday Festival Friday

Chelsea's southern business community is sponsoring a holiday festival of its own this Friday, Dec. 8 from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Called "An Evening of Christmas Festivities", it's their first attempt at such a event, but there will be plenty to do.

From 7 to 8:30 p.m. there will be a scavenger hunt for children ages 1-14. Children will have to enter participating stores to find a clue, which will be used to figure out word puzzle. Businesses in the hunt include Chelsea Pharmacy, where the hunt will begin, ACO Hardware, Chelsea Beach Club, Chelsea Big Boy, Chelsea Pets and Plants, Chelsea Subway, Cottage Inn Pizza, Fantastic Sam's, Gina's Cafe, McDonald's, Pamida, Polly's Market, Thompson's Pizzeria, Village Mobil, Wolverine Food & Spirits, Chart Hits, Chelsea Bike & Sport, and Chelsea Lanes. Three prizes will be awarded.

Also from 7 to 8:30 p.m., horse-drawn wagon rides will be given at the Chelsea Fairgrounds (weather permitting). Ken Marsh will be the driver, and Chelsea State Bank is the sponsor.

Washington Street Show

Choir will sing Christmas carols from the back of a traveling wagon until 8:30. The wagon will travel from the Chelsea Retirement Community through downtown to Village Plaza, and various businesses on the southern end of the village. From 8:30 to 9, the choir will lead a community in front of Chelsea State Bank. Complimentary hot chocolate will be available.

Free photos with Santa Claus, sponsored by Huron Camera, will be available at Chelsea Shopping Center from 6 to 9 p.m.

Village Cautious In Move To Annex Mobile Home Land

By Scott Bishop
Staff Writer

Highway speed limits may be accelerating very soon, but the Chelsea Village Council is proceeding with caution as it considers annexing 24.5 acres slated for a potential manufactured-home project. At its Nov. 28 meeting the council resolved to develop a petition requesting annexation from the county. A final vote on whether or not to pursue annexation was delayed until the Dec. 12 or possibly the Dec. 26 meeting.

The development group Dunbar and Martel is urging annexation of the parcel northwest of the village, for the purpose of combining it with 16.92 adjacent acres, already within village limits, owned by the group. They plan to develop a 166 unit manufactured-home park on the site. Zoning of the not-yet-annexed 24.5 acres would need to be changed to match the 16.92 acres, which is already zoned for manufactured homes. The planning commission recommended that the council go forward with annexation and reserve rezoning to coincide roughly with approval of a final project site plan.

The sole issue before the council last week, stressed trustee Frank Hammer, was annexation. Ownership of the property, currently complicated by a circuit court suit, or objections to rezoning plans, he explained, were separate issues which did not coincide with the annexation process.

Trustee Richard Rigg, however, noted that annexation and rezoning could not easily be separated, and objected to proceeding with annexation alone. He said he was concerned that a large development would only contribute to traffic congestion problems.

Ultimately the council passed a resolution to draft an annexation petition, with no firm commitment to formally propose it to the county. A final decision was put off until the next council meeting, or, as Hammer explained following the meeting, possibly toward the end of December.

"This issue is politically a hot potato," Hammer said, because some residents are opposed to any mention of a manufactured housing project. He added that only a portion of the council had the time to assess the planning commission report and other information about the issue prior to the Nov. 28 meeting. So he planned to advise pushing back a final decision about annexation to Dec. 26, when all council members could attend and have time to study the issue. Hammer said business obligations will keep him from the council's next meeting Dec. 12.

Rigg argued against annexation at the council meeting and advised limiting any manufactured-housing development to the 16.92 acres Dunbar and Martel presently own. The group contends that, because the property contains several acres of wetlands which restrict development, the project is not viable without adding property through annexation.

Afterward Rigg voiced concern that the project would worsen village congestion problems. "We're stacking up with apartments and traffic on one end of town... to me it's going to overburden an already busy street. What it does to our streets, the more traffic we have

Village, School District Negotiating Bond Shortfall

By Scott Bishop
Staff Writer

Village of Chelsea trustees learned from their financial advisers last week that they could expect approximately $12,000 in added expense in paying off a 1994 bond issue debt. But by Monday it appeared the deficit might be covered by the Chelsea School District and the village spared any extra financial burden.

It was expected that prepayment by the district of bond issue debt would force the village to expend extra funds to cover interest payments which the district, its principal paid off in full, was no longer responsible for.

Last Tuesday, Nov. 28, Mike Gormley, vice president of First of Michigan Corporation's Finance Department, explained to council trustee's the strategy for investing the pre-paid money and how the anticipated shortfall would occur.

"What we came up with right now, given the purchasing of the securities, treasury notes, the prices of those notes in today's market, along with any cost of issuance there under the uses of the funds, is about a $17,000 deficit. And that I think is probably on the high side," Gormley said.

Bond attorney Don Keim's estimate of the shortfall included a prior payment by the district of nearly $7,000 which Gormley was not aware of. With the updated figures, Keim fixed the ceiling price of any shortfall at approximately $12,000. With the information supplied by Keim, Gormley reduced his own estimate of the deficit to roughly $13,000.

Then Monday, Dec. 4, Chelsea Superintendent Ed Richardson said he had received a fax from Village Manager Jack Myers indicating that the most recent estimate of the actual interest shortfall was $8,000. Anticipated village expenses incurred in reinvesting the money originally paid by the district would push the total shortfall to roughly $14,900.

Richardson said he expected the school board would contribute all or some of that cost. "As soon as I get a chance to hear the finalizing totals, then I'll take it to the board, and I anticipate we'll be doing that at the next board meeting, which is December 18. I do plan to bring to the board a proposal to pay either all or a share of that cost," he explained.

At the Dec. 4 meeting Richardson informed the board of the latest estimates and proposed a meeting of the finance committee to assess the district's position. He emphasized that, if the school board paid off the entire $14,900 shortfall and left the village with no extra cost,

A Special Area

The natural-area sections of the Huron-Clinton Metropolitan Authority parks are the areas that I enjoy. People need these kinds of places to keep their connection with the natural world, of which we must remember we are all part.

Recently I have learned of the possibility of a golf course being made at the Lower Huron Metropark which would damage or destroy a rather pristine bottomland habitat along the Huron River. This is a special area biologically and geologically, where one can learn about the past as well as the present activity of the river. There are rare and threatened plants living there. It has never been logged, so there is a good variety of species and a good variety of ages of trees, including some that are so large that they may be state records.

People, today and future generations, need places like this within easy reach of where they live-places to simply enjoy nature, and to learn about plants and animals and their environment. It is important to that we save space for wild plants and animals that allow them enough land in which to live and raise their future generations. This requires a variety of habitat, and a large enough area.

There is golf course at Willow Metropark and I understand some private ones nearby. Is there really a need for one at Lower Huron Metropark? I urge that the land proposed for a golf course at Lower Huron Metropark be dedicated, instead, to being kept natural-a sanctuary for wildlife, and for people who wish to enjoy it on nature's terms!

Sincerely,
Dorothy Blanchard

Farmland Preservation

Land use in Southeast Michigan is a very personal issue and an important public policy issue in the 1990s. People who own land make grand plans, have wonderful ideas and may feel that their home and land are their "castle."

The cost of services and infrastructure to townships, schools and other units of government means that land development is a very real matter than can influence the zoning, taxes, planning and ultimate well being of all the residents in the community.

To help people better understand and manage the complex land use issues today, four Monroe County organizations are co-sponsoring a P.A. 116 and Farmland Preservation public meeting. The Monroe Chapter of the Michigan Township Association, the Monroe County Planning Commission, the Monroe County Farm Bureau and the Monroe County MSU Cooperative Extension Service are all working together to bring in excellent speakers to discuss these two important and related issues at this educational and informational meeting.

This meeting will be held Thursday, Dec. 7 at 7 p.m. at the Monroe Township Hall, 4925 West Dunbar Rd.

Ron Nelson of the Michigan Farm Bureau and Paul Marks of the Monroe County Extension Service will discuss Public Act 116, Michigan's Farmland and Open Space Preservation Act. This law is one way people can voluntarily enroll land to be protected from other types of land use or development. Proposal A has changed a major incentive people had to use this program, which means some other changes in P.A. 116 have been proposed in the Michigan Legislature.

Thank You Timber Town

"We, the second grade teachers at North School, would like to thank the Timbertown planning committee for allowing our students to take an active part on Design Day, Nov. 8th. Hearing and seeing their playground ideas immediately incorporated into the planning was a thrill for all of us."

Thank You Post Office

On Saturday, Nov. 25 when I removed the mail from my mailbox, I discovered a Christmas card which I had put in the postbox at the end of our street on Thanksgiving Day. The envelope contained NO postage and NO return address.

What it did contain was a Post-It Note with our return address on it. That card was very important to us as it was going to some very good friends in another part of the country.

THANK YOU Chelsea USPS for your thoughtfulness and consideration!

simply to offer it as a volunteer program. We'd be very interested in finding out if there are parents who would like to have their children come in all day. We will plan to bring (the board) a proposal for voluntary all-day kindergarten," Richardson said.

Board member Joseph Redding advised that, if the program were offered, early notification would give parents maximum time to prepare and result in the best measure of interest in the voluntary plan.

Uncle Apollo

Dear Uncle Apollo

For over a year now, my husband and I have been curious about the sculpted ghost-people who are all now laying prone north of the Baker Road exit. We've noticed they are carefully moved and weed-whacked around but never just set back upright.

Recently, after months of mulling it over, we pulled over and my husband attempted to push the ghost people up but they are heavier than they appear.

As newcomers to the area, we were wondering if there is an interesting story behind the ghost people and if you know it.

Curious from Chelsea

Dear CFC,

Actually, the way things are going around here, if you've lived here a year, you aren't a newcomer anymore but a long-term resident. But that's not the point, is it? You want to drag up the old ghost people story just to embarrass us. Well,

OK, but this is the last time.

No one knows why this new family decided to drop out of the sky over Chelsea when they were trying to get to the balloon factory on Baker Road, just south of where they now lay. It was terribly unfortunate that they picked a time when the Jiffy mix factory was experimenting with a new concrete muffin mix. These pioneering strangers were so full of courage that they still tried to walk all the way to their destination. They almost made it. Unfortunately, the sun came out and froze them solid where you see them now. The concrete muffin mix was pulled from the shelves and has been discontinued, but the incident lives on in our memories.

As to their prone position, since vandals kept knocking them over anyway, it was considered best just to let them lie. Every once in a while, though, some newcomer stops to try and stand them up and we all get a good chuckle out of it.

Uncle Apollo

Opening Remarks

By Brian Hamilton

We came under some criticism last week for the front-page headline describing the Festival of Lights. The headline read, "Festival Will Light Up Downtown Friday Night."

So, what's to criticize, you might wonder? It was factual and fairly innocuous as headlines go.

Some people were upset that the headline singled out downtown and didn't indicate that the festival is a community-wide event. More specifically, some business people in the southern end of the village, what are now called, I've been told, the Chelsea Gateway Merchants, felt excluded.

A few weeks ago, a brainstorming session with the metaphor of the Civil War attempted to bring together the Northern (downtown merchants) and Southern (everything south of Old US-12) business communities. The Southern businesses have often felt like afterthoughts in the marketing of Chelsea as a place to shop, partly because the quaintness of downtown Chelsea is so easily and often promoted. They see the headline as just another example of being considered an also-ran, as well as another subtle wedge driven between the communities.

The Festival of Lights began eight years ago, before Chelsea Shopping Center and Village Plaza—which make up much of the Southern business district—were even constructed. It has never been primarily a sales event, but an opportunity to sing carols at the Depot, talk to Santa Claus, take wagon rides, and see a Living Creche, all of which take place downtown.

True, there were some activities outside of the downtown area, and the story mentioned those. Nevertheless, it was primarily a downtown happening, just as it always has been.

What bothers me most about the criticism, however, is the Southern merchants are hosting their own party this Friday. If the two business communities are so hot to be united, which in the long run seems just adds to the problem," he said. Rigg added that village water and sewer service was running at 80 percent capacity, and that adding another development in addition to commitments already made to organizations such as Chelsea Community Hospital for its Silver Maples project, could result in overload.

Developer Bob Martel predicted that the Dunbar and Martel development's planned density of four units per acre would not create undue congestion. "We don't see that our project is going to place a significantly greater load on Chelsea's ability to handle traffic than others that might be pursued on that side of town. Our density is not that great. Our project is not going to be significantly more dense than anything else that would go in there," Martel said.

Tighter Job Market Seen for Local Area

Modest employment gains are projected for the Ann Arbor area this winter, based on Manpower Inc.'s just released survey of businesses' workforce requirements heading into 1996.

The Ann Arbor Employment Outlook Survey for January, February and March shows that 2 percent of employers contacted about their labor force plans will add people this winter, while 17 percent foresee fewer workers. Another 62 percent reveal staffing will remain constant.

"A year ago the outlook was stronger," said Gail Reamer of Manpower, "when 30 percent said they would hire but 13 percent anticipated cutbacks. The survey three months ago reported 29 percent were intending to increase staff and 10 percent thought workforce reductions were indicated." Reamer added that, in general, employment tends toward sluggishness in the winter months.

For the coming quarter job opportunities are foreseen in durable goods manufacturing and services. Cutbacks are planned in transportation/public utilities, wholesale/retail trade, education and public administration.

Nationally, seasonal conditions will predominate as the job market struggles with economic uncertainty. Of the companies surveyed, 20 percent will increase their staffs, 12 percent will reduce employment rolls, 64 percent expect to stay at current levels and 4 percent are undecided.

EXPLORATION WORKSHOPS have been held for first and second graders at North and South Elementary Schools this year. The workshops are designed to give children experiences they wouldn't ordinarily have in the classroom as part of the curriculum. Each student is offered the chance to sign up for one workshop that interests them. Here, Judi Geschel of Chelsea Pets and Plants shows Margaux Forsch, Courtney Sullens, Jamie Franks, and Mark Long a Rainbow Lory. Other workshops have included "Fish Found in Michigan" by Paul Seelbach and "Paleoanthropology" by Rachel Wolpoff. Others will include life abroad and bicycle maintenance. Anyone in the community interested in sharing their experiences is urged to call Chelsea Community Education.

Scientists Analyze Lead Tracking

In research guaranteed to chill the hearts of polluters everywhere, University of Michigan scientists have tested a new method of tracking the original source of trace metal pollution—like lead, arsenic and mercury—that often travels hundreds or even thousands of miles away from its point of origin.

By analyzing the relative ratios of lead isotopes in precipitation falling at collection sites around Lake Michigan and back-tracking daily meteorological records, U-M researchers Joseph R. Graney and Gerald J. Keeler were able to identify the original point source of the lead emissions.

"Emissions from every smelter, power plant, refinery and urban area have a unique mix of isotopes," said Graney, U-M postdoctoral scholar in public health. "Using sensitive mass spectrometers and analysis techniques, we can pick out individual chemical 'fingerprints' and determine where the pollutants are coming from."

Graney presented the results of his study—the first to test the viability of the U-M pollutant tracking technique with lead isotopes in precipitation—at the Geological Society of America meeting held here Nov. 6-9.

Graney stressed that the amount of lead falling in precipitation over Lake Michigan is too small to create any public health danger. "It is only a few parts per billion—well below Environmental Protection Agency regulation standards for drinking water," he said. But success at detecting minute amounts of lead indicates that the technique could be used to identify sources for many other types of pollutants.

At the GSA Meeting, Graney presented his analysis of lead isotopes in precipitation that fell during the summer of 1994 at five collection sites near Lake Michigan in the Midwest and one near Lake Champlain in New England.

If current proposals in Washington to cut EPA funding become law, the U-M technique could potentially provide an inexpensive, reliable way to monitor future pollution trends and identify those violating compliance standards, according to Graney. Currently, U-M researchers are testing the isotope analysis technique's ability to track pollution point sources within a single metropolitan area. They also hope to use the technique to trace groundwater pollution from leaking landfills or toxic waste sites.

Research on the U-M's trace metal tracking technique is funded by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. Graney's research with lead isotopes was published in 1995 as part of his dissertation for a U-M Ph.D. degree in geological sciences.

Security Savings To Change Name

First Security Savings Bank has made application to the Office of Thrift Supervision to change its name to FlagStar Bank, and will be changing its name to FlagStar Bank sometime in the first quarter of 1996, according to bank President Alessandro DiNello.

"The name Security Savings has served the Bank well since 1938," stated DiNello.

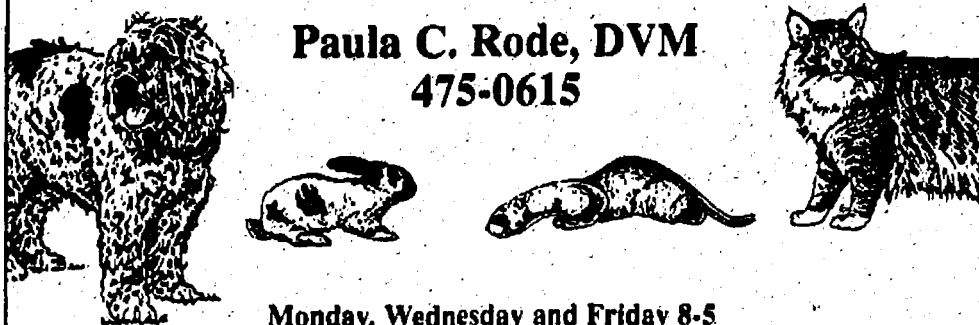

"However, as the bank has expanded its market area into areas previously served by First Security Savings Bank's loan offices, some confusion has been generated. Additionally, we believe that the organization will be better able to take advantage of cross-selling opportunities if a common name was used," continued DiNello.

DiNello also reported that the name change would result in no changes to customers. "The high quality service, competitive products and extended hours our customers have enjoyed from Security Savings will be continued as we enter the 21st century as FlagStar Bank," said DiNello.

Educated shoppers know when it comes to value, convenience and overall economics, it makes good sense to shop locally. In fact every dollar spent with your hometown merchants helps build better roads and schools and improves services in your community. But that's not all. Your local merchants pay lower overhead costs than their big city counterparts, so you often pay lower prices for the very same merchandise. When you consider the gas, time and energy saved at home, it just doesn't pay to shop around!

Merry Christmas

Kidney Association Soliciting Funds

A valuable, year-end tax deduction could very well be sitting in your driveway. The National Kidney Foundation of Michigan's Kidney Cars Program can help you get that tax deduction, while benefitting a non-profit organization!

It's easy to donate a used car, truck or motorcycle through the Kidney Cars Program. Simply call the toll-free number 1-800-488-CARS (2277). The National Kidney Foundation of Michigan will send you the information packet and make arrangements to pick up your vehicle for free. You will get a tax deduction (based on value of vehicle), and you'll help thousands of Michigan residents who suffer from kidney disease.

Act now, before the end of the year is gone — along with your chance for an easy tax deduction! Vehicles must have titles and be in running condition. For more information, just call 1-800-488-CARS.

The National Kidney Foundation of Michigan benefits from the donation of each vehicle. In Michigan alone, there are more than 6,000 patients on dialysis and more than 1,200 awaiting life-saving kidney transplants. Through programs in research, patient services, organ donation, professional education and public information, the Foundation brings help and hope to thousands of Michigan residents. The National Kidney Foundation of Michigan is committed to the prevention, detection, treatment and eventual cure of all kidney diseases.

Local Musician Donates Proceeds

Local singer songwriter Jim Akans, who recently released a new collection of original songs on a CD titled, "Ja Makin' Me Crazy", has agreed to donate $5 from each CD sold through Dec. 22 in Dexter to the Dexter High School Marching Band.

The DHS band has the honor of performing at The Outback Bowl parade and football game in Tampa, Fla. on Jan. 1. The band has worked hard and organized several creative fundraisers this year to offset their cost for the trip.

The CD will be available for sale, retail price $10 at the upcoming Dexter band concerts and at The Dexter Mill, 3515 Central St.

VIEWS ON DENTAL HEALTH

GARY GOCHANOUR, D.D.S.
426-8336

IRRIGATING DEVICES

Recently, the water pick or oral irrigating device has become popular. How do they work? The water pick cleans teeth by irrigation with tiny jets of pulsating water which clean around the gums, between the teeth and under bridges where the toothbrush and even floss sometimes cannot reach. The pulsating water jets, flush out food particles from difficult-to-reach spots where food collects.

The dental irrigator is not recommended for small children, but for children over 12 years with orthodontic bands, the device is invaluable in flushing out food particles.

Some dentists have reservations about the use of a water pick depending on the condition of your teeth and gums, so it might be wise to check with your dentist who is familiar with your particular condition before buying one. In any case, remember that water picks do not remove plaque - only food. So it is to be used as a part - not as your whole cleansing process.

Prepared by Custom Column Service as a public service to promote better dental health. From the office of:

Gary Gochanour, D.D.S., 3108 Baker Rd., Dexter

MSU Expo Makes Changes

Ag Expo at Michigan State University will be held June 25-27 next year. That's about a month earlier than it has been held since it started at MSU in 1980.

Coinciding with the change in dates is a change in the directorship. Bill Bickert, show chairperson since its inception at MSU, is stepping aside.

Taking his place will be Tim Harrigan, who has been involved with Ag Expo's field demonstrations and main exhibition site since 1982.

Bickert says it is simply time for a different person to take over managing the show. He will continue to coordinate the animal handling demonstrations and serve Ag Expo in an advisory capacity.

When Ag Expo started at MSU in a beef pasture, it occupied about 14 acres. Today the show grounds on the south side of the MSU campus consist of 35 acres with permanent roads and buildings. And Ag Expo is rated as one of the top 22 farm shows in the United States.

"I think the major credit for the appearance, growth and success of the show has to go to the agribusiness industry that is involved in the exhibitor side of the show," Bickert says.

He says that Ag Expo has grown from little more than a glorified field day to Michigan's major agricultural event where agribusiness, the farm family and the university interact to focus on new ideas for agriculture.

Harrigan says that the switch in Ag Expo show dates has been considered for several years. His discussions with exhibitors this year spurred the decision to make the change.

"There probably is no good week in Michigan agriculture when no one is busy with something, but the end of June seems to be one of those times when farm operations may not be as compelling as they are further into the summer," Harrigan says.

He says that the 1996 field demonstrations will be on the role of machinery and equipment in alleviating soil compaction, which is becoming an increasing concern among growers.

The animal handling demonstrations will focus on livestock feed processing and handling, feeding equipment and improved management practices that can be tailored to individual farms.

Community College Refinancing Saves Money

The Washtenaw Community College has refinanced the college's 1974, 1978, 1979 and 1987 bonds at interest rates that lower the expense to county taxpayers by $1,367,000 over the next eleven years, according to the school.

Earlier this month, the college sold bonds in the amount of $12,310,000 to refinance all or portions of WCC's outstanding bonds. Present value savings on the new bonds compared to the prior issues is approximately $350,000, 16 percent in excess of the savings target set by the college.

This 12-year financing, conducted by the Michigan office of the brokerage firm A.G. Edwards & Sons, Inc. was sold at an average interest rate of 4.87 percent. This rate is below other Michigan bond issues sold at the same time. The bonds are investment grade and rated AAA based on Moody's Investors Service and AAA with Standard & Poor's Corp.

WCC President Gunder Myran said, "We are pleased that we can save the taxpayers of Washtenaw County over $1.3 million through this bond refinancing process. Taxpayers have been very supportive of WCC and we certainly want to take advantage of current market conditions to do something in return."

Anne E. Noble, vice president of A.G. Edwards and the lead investment banker on the financing, relates that "It is always rewarding to assist in refinancing debt to result in lower taxes to the taxpayer. Individual and institutional investors in the bond market were very receptive to the college's bond issue."

Thomas DuRussel Weston Honored by Children's Alliance

At the 1995 annual Michigan Association of Children's Alliances (M.A.C.A.) conference in late October, Boysville co-worker Thomas DuRussel Weston of Ann Arbor was honored for outstanding service to children and families.

Weston, a Clinical Supervisor at Boysville's Monroe-based Moreau Center, received the Hugh Whipple Supervisory Excellence award. Weston was honored during a special recognition dinner at the Holiday Inn Crown Plaza in Ann Arbor.

Dick Werth, Moreau Center Education Manager, nominated Weston for the Supervisory Excellence award. "Tom is truly an outstanding member of the social work profession," said Werth.

"He is unfailingly disciplined, committed to quality, and unservingly faithful to the principles of hard work. I am impressed by the level of dedication he brings to his job."

Moreau Center Regional Director George Birkam added, "Mr. Weston has been a Clinical Supervisor for Boysville for nine years. For much of that time, I have been his supervisor. In reviewing his work with those whom he has supervised, it is perhaps the highest compliment that I have not once heard anything except they have learned from him."

The M.A.C.A. Hugh Whipple awards were named after the late Hugh Whipple, a child care worker who almost single-handedly professionalized the child care worker field in the early 1970's by designing and implementing Michigan's first coordinated training curriculum and programs. The original award recognized only child care workers, but over the years, M.A.C.A. expanded the awards to recognize significant contributions by professionals and volunteers in five specific categories: Child Care Worker Excellence, Direct Service Excellence, Supervisory Excellence, Administrative Excellence, and Volunteer Excellence. The awards are presented each year at the annual M.A.C.A. conference.

The Michigan Association of Children's Alliances (M.A.C.A.) is a membership organization whose mission is to improve services to children and their families and to ensure that all children in Michigan have access to the resources needed to encourage their physical, emotional, and intellectual growth. From its inception in 1957, M.A.C.A.'s membership has included both private and public agencies as well as individual members who work together to fulfill the organization's mission.

Boysville of Michigan, established in 1948, is a not-for-profit child caring and family preservation agency dedicated to helping children and families make positive changes in their lives. Boysville's professional staff work directly with over 700 boys, girls, and their families on a daily basis, teaching them better methods of dealing with their problems.

The Michigan Civil Service Commission has approved a new pay-for-performance system for certain state-employed attorneys. Under the approved amendment to the state Compensation Plan, the pay of approximately 270 supervisory and non-supervisory Assistant Attorneys General will be linked to job performance.

"We're putting merit back in the merit system," said Peter Ellsworth, chairman of the civil service commission, said.

Under the new performance pay program, employment classifications will be streamlined into four broad categories. Base salary and performance incentives will be administered within the new pay ranges. Instead of having automatic salary increases, pay now can be increased or decreased up to 8% based on yearly performance reviews. Incentive payments can be made in the form of base wage increases, lump sum payments or a combination of both. Lump sum incentive payments are one-time increases, and must be re-earned each year.

John Lopez, state personnel director stated: "Merit pay already exists in state government, and this new program is a continuation of this trend to link pay with employee performance."

+ Spiritual Viewpoint

By The Rev. Anna Marie Austin
Dexter United Methodist Church

Have you seen in this paper the picture of Rudolph, the reindeer who saved Santa's Christmas trip in foggy weather? The words ask if your children know who the real savior of Christmas is. That is a question worth asking!

Christmas is a holiday celebrated nearly everywhere. Can you think of any other holiday so widely observed around the world? Giving this a little thought, one realizes that not only is Christmas the most widely celebrated of all holidays around the world, it also consumes more time and energy and resources in the days and weeks of getting ready than on Christmas Day itself. Yet we must love it all or we would not do this year after year.

We love the feelings, authentic and sentimental, that come as we prepare and celebrate. Indeed, a sense of good will is often observed and felt. Many people are more inclined at this time to share with people, agencies, and institutions that help those in need, to be patient and thoughtful with others, and to live with a spirit of cheerfulness. This, we believe, is "common grace," a gift that comes from the true nature of the Christmas season, something everyone can enjoy and appreciate.

There is much more, however, to be discovered and received if we take time to consider what Christmas really is. Christmas is a birthday celebration. Do you know anyone whose birthday is so widely remembered? ... with as much investment of time, energy, and other resources? ... and perhaps with so little thought as to the origins and real meaning?

If the Baby born in Bethlehem had been a nobody, then there would be no Christmas. Jesus was somebody. He and his style of living brought meaning, health, loving relationships, and trust to other lives at a time when constant tensions, distrust, and discord filled the ancient nation of the place we now call the Middle East. Jesus invited others to know him and to learn from him and thereby brought purpose and commitment to those who were restless and at loose ends with life. Remarkably, all who were touched by his life found a great sense of community, of belonging joyfully to one another, and of reaching out to help any in need. These can be gifts we receive, too, as we learn to know Jesus and to live as he lived, to discover that the Baby of Bethlehem grew to become a Master Teacher, Friend of all, who gives life true meaning and purpose.

There is yet more, but that will wait until next spring. May your Christmas be much more than delightful, fanciful Rudolph. The churches of the community invite you to worship with them and to rejoice in the birth of the Savior of Christmas.

CAP Dinner Theater Set

CAP is preparing for their winter dinner theater show, "1940's Radio Hour," directed by Dan Brinkle. It is a musical which allows the audience to watch the recreation of a wartime radio broadcast.

The show starts off with the actors arriving, warming up, then performing the actual broadcast with the audience acting as the studio audience.

Performance dates are set for Feb. 29, March 1, 2, 3, 7, 8 and 9. A full dinner will be served before each evening performance; matinee performances will be dessert only.

Auditions will be held at 2 p.m. on Sunday, Jan. 7, and 7 p.m. on Monday, Jan. 8, at Beach Middle School. Please come with a prepared song; an accompanist will be provided. Also be prepared to do some cold readings from the script.

Anyone who is interested in helping out backstage, or has any questions about the audition process, contact either of the producers: Shelley Beaver (517) 522-8238, or Phoebe Strong (313) 475-8011 for further information. Anyone who would like to read through a script beforehand, contact Clara Smith at (313) 475-9800.

County Residents To See Changes In Jury System

Chief Judge Pro tem Donald E. Shelton, who oversees operation of the county's jury system, has announced significant changes in the jury system for the Washtenaw County Circuit Courts.

Beginning Jan. 1, the 22nd Circuit Court will implement a new jury management system designed to increase the opportunity for citizens to serve on juries while simultaneously making jury service more convenient for those who are called upon to serve.

The most significant change in the new system is that jury service will be a "one trial" term of service. On the summons, a service date will be indicated. The juror is responsible for reporting on that day and any subsequent day during that week as instructed by the court. If the juror is not seated on a trial during the course of the week, his or her service is completed. If the juror is seated on a trial, he or she will serve for the duration of that trial only. Historically, jurors have been summoned for a month-long term of service. In recent years, a one-trial option has been available upon special request. By moving exclusively to the one-trial term of service, the court will make service more convenient for jurors and reduce the convening burden on staff caused by administering multiple service options.

This change comes as a result of a year-long study of the Court's jury management system and a commitment from the judges to have a system that equally serves the needs of the Court and the citizens. Summons will increase from 4,800 to 9,000-10,000. It is also hoped that the shortened commitment will reduce the anxiety associated with being summoned for service.

The Court is taking other steps to make the actual service time less inconvenient. These steps include: providing more frequent updates on the status of that morning's trials, providing beverages and pastries in the assembly room, providing video entertainment (e.g. public service videos) during waiting times, and providing a formal mechanism for feedback by instituting an exit questionnaire. In addition, the juror summons has been redesigned to be more clear and concise, and for the first time it includes a map directing jurors to the courthouse facility and parking location.

Local Woman Reports Sighting Rare Species Of Arctic Bird

Who says housework is boring and uneventful? While doing routine household chores, a Lima Township woman just happened to casually glance out her second-story window and watched a bird fly across her now barren garden.

This bird, Lolly Mindel claims, is a Northern Wheatear.

The Wheatear is a sparrow-sized ground bird. Its summer range is the rocky tundra and barren slopes of Eurasia, Alaska, northwest and northeast Canada and Greenland. The Wheatear winters in Europe, migrating across the Atlantic. It's a very rare, fall migrant in east Canada and the United States.

When asked about her sighting Mindel said, "When I first observed the bird, it was flying low to the ground. It flew perhaps 30 feet with a slight dip in the flight pattern before coming to perch on a small tree branch three feet above the ground. I could see without the aid of binoculars that it definitely had a bluish hue, and a flash of white."

"Now I was curious, because something just didn't seem familiar. As I brought the bird into focus, mentally beginning to check off the list that contains bluish-gray birds, Tufted Titmouse—no too small, and no crest, Blue Jay—no too large, and still no crest. Definitely not a Blue Bird or Nut Hatch."

"What this? A wide black eye bar, thin pencil-like beak, and very smooth bluish-gray head with a white breast. Now with binoculars er, possibly the size of a Tufted Titmouse—amazing a Northern Wheatear."

Mindel says she's been interested in birding for at least 15 years, having made a hobby of both feeding and watching wild birds. This being a "life list" sighting, Mindel decided to phone her sighting into Mike Kielb, Audubon Society contact for Washtenaw County.

Kielb informed her of the process to file her sighting. The society receives literally hundreds of sight reports annually.

Kielb said that this bird if confirmed to be a Northern Wheatear was probably from Europe. It's not a common bird, and its population is extremely small. The bird is seen more frequently along shores and fallow fields.

Mindel's report will be highly scrutinized because it is such a rare bird. Only two other confirmed sightings have been reported in Michigan, and one of those in the Upper Peninsula. Another bird was banded in Alpena this spring.

Lou Scovill says music has always been a part of his life.

Scovill, 85, has played trombone, violin and saxophone since his early years as a student at Ann Arbor High School. He worked his way through school at the University of Michigan by playing at the Michigan and Majestic Theatres in Ann Arbor. During the Depression Era, he played in a traveling band before selling his instruments and taking a job as an accountant with Chrysler Motor Company.

Nowadays, the retiree finds himself mixing it up with his neighbors as a member of Dexter Community Band.

"I enjoy the good musicianship of the band and the good direction we get from (conductor) Dave Angus," says Scovill, a resident of Chelsea Retirement Community.

Organized 12 years ago, the band has grown from a dozen members to 50. Many are from Dexter, while others like Scovill travel from Chelsea and surrounding communities.

Karla Linkner, president of the band and one of eight founding members remaining, calls it an eclectic group. Members range in age from 20 to 85. They are involved in all types of professions, from university professors to homemakers and retirees to auto technicians. A small percentage have degrees in music.

Phyllis Risdon, a homemaker who works part-time as a para-professional for Dexter Schools, says she joined the band 11 years so she could return to a hobby she loves.

"I enjoy music," says the Dexter Township resident. "It's satisfying to take a piece of music, work at it and have it all come together."

Risdon, a trumpet player, is a former member of Chelsea High School's band. She played for two years as a student at Ferris State and has performed occasionally over the years with her church.

A founding member of Dexter Community Band, Risdon finds the local audience to be very supportive. "It used to be just our families and maybe a few others," she said. Over the years, however, the audience has grown.

"Maybe the best support we get is from the audience we have built up over the years," says Milford Wolpoff, a clarinet player who lives in Lyndon Township.

Wolpoff played in college as a member of the University of Illinois band. Two decades passed before the anthropology professor decided to get back into the groove.

"It was a good opportunity for me to start playing again. I hadn't played for a long time. It was really embarrassing for a while," he admits.

Wolpoff and the others are looking forward to the band's annual Holiday Concert slated Friday, Dec. 15. The band will play seasonal music beginning at 7:30 p.m. in the gymnasium at Wyllie Middle School. Tunes such as "Green-sleeves" arranged by Alfred Reed, "Sleigh Ride" by Leroy Anderson and the Dixieland version of "Rudolph The Red-Nosed Reindeer" by J.S. Bach are among the selections to be performed. Special features will be Santa and Mrs. Claus, a Christmas sing-a-long and parade.

"Scovill says the Holiday Concert is always challenging for the band. "One of the things that makes the band good is that the leader chooses challenging music," Scovill said.

"I think that is part of the fun," Linkner added. "It's challenging but not overbearing."

Extension Women Get Gift Ideas

Lima Extension

Santas, angels, trains, games; all of this plus much more was presented to Lima Extension and guests Nov. 15, at Lima Town Hall by Veretta Whitaker and Barbara Ballis from Dayspring Gifts. Lima, Congenial Dex's, Webster, and Free Lo Extension Groups and guests were enthralled by the extensive number of gift ideas and decorations that these Dayspring employees could package up in just a few boxes.

Each FCE Member and guests

Sheet music is often supplied by the high school's band department. Even some of the instruments are provided by the school district. Dexter Community Band practices weekly in the music room. With such close ties to the school community, Linkner would like to see more high school students participate. There is need for a percussionist, two French horn players and clarinet players.

Risdon says she sees herself and the others as role models for younger musicians who come to the local concerts. "I think a lot of kids playing in band think music is for schoolchildren. When they see an older person playing, they see it's something they can do their whole life," she said.

Besides performances during the school year, Dexter Community Band has a summer band and members have formed offshoot bands such as a Dixieland Group, Clarinet Continuum, Saxophone Quartet and Woodwind Quintet.

from the area were honored with a special gift bag from Dayspring plus a couple extra prizes before adjourning to a delicious buffet potluck luncheon on November festive decorated tables. Barb Edict and Shirley Porter hosted, with the help of husbands to carry tables up, down, and around!

Christmas for Lima Extension will be celebrated Dec. 13 at 11:30 a.m. at the home of Janet McCalla. Luncheon will be provided by Janet and Blythe Johnson. Each member brings a $3-$4 gift exchange, plus items for Chelsea's Faith in Action.

Chelsea Adult Education Will Begin Serving Dexter

By Michelle Rogers
Staff Writer

For the first time in Dexter Community Schools' 14-year history of providing adult high school completion courses, the district has decided to close its doors.

Community Education Director Barb Bell cites declining enrollment and dwindling state support as reasons for the move. Enrichment classes and other community education programs will continue. Residents seeking general education or high school diplomas are being referred to the Chelsea School District.

"What we have done is combine our high school completion program with Chelsea's. There weren't enough students to hold the classes," Bell explained.

The decision was made in September. Bell said she needed at least 15 students enrolled in all four night classes to sustain the program.

According to Bell, the state has reduced its financial support by increasing the number of hours students must take to be classified as full-time. Last year, 480 hours a year was considered full-time. The state has nearly doubled that number to 900. As a result, Bell says funding has been cut in half. She said a student enrolled in four classes each semester used to garner full funding. With new requirements, a district would need twice as many students enrolled to get the same amount of funding.

Bell also said it's impossible for a student to only attend night classes and be classified as full-time. Larger school districts with a higher number of students enrolled aren't affected as much.

Chelsea Community Education Director Jeff Rohrer says the state has reduced its funding of adult education by 47 percent in the past three years. "As a result, smaller districts can't afford to operate programs anymore, and that's an example of what happened in Dexter," he said.

Rohrer says the future of Chelsea's adult high school completion program appears stable. "We're going strong, as long as we maintain control of the adult education funds," he said.

Rohrer is concerned about what he is hearing in Lansing, however. "The governor has hinted that he wants to take the adult education money from schools and put it out to bid for job training partnership programs. Taking adult education money away from educators, I don't think, is a proper move."

"As long as (Chelsea) can keep the funding under the control of the school district, we'll be in good shape," Rohrer said.

The picture looks bleaker for Dexter, however. Bell says she won't offer adult high school completion classes next year or in the foreseeable future under the current funding legislation.

There are 55 people enrolled in adult high school completion classes in Chelsea. Of that number, nine are traveling from Dexter.

Chelsea also provides adult education for residents of Manchester per an agreement arranged several years ago and GED preparatory classes for prisoners at Cassidy Lake Boot Camp.

"(Public schools) are the best deliverer of adult education because we have the facilities; we have the skills, we have the experience, we have the staff and we are a long-term entity," Rohrer said.

"What we try to do in adult education is provide people with the basic skills so they can operate effectively in the work place."

Rohrer is helping to write legislation that takes a four-prong approach to adult education. Rohrer said the intent is to keep adult education money under the control of schools; shift the emphasis to job skills training; increase state-wide assessment and responsiveness to local employer needs; and develop school-to-work programs for school districts.

CHELSEA POLICE CHIEF LENARD MCDUGALL

Chief McDougall Got Start in Marine Corp

By Allan and Deanna Malan
Special writers

Chelsea Police Chief Lenard E. McDougall does more than administer the department. He considers himself a working chief and spends 50 percent of his time on the road, patrolling.

Always on the alert for better ways to serve and protect the village, he is constantly looking for ways to make his department more efficient. He attends every available law enforcement seminar to gain data on the latest technology and advancement in equipment.

McDougall, 51, grew up in Ypsilanti. At 17 he enlisted in the U.S. Marine Corps following a family tradition by becoming a third generation Marine. His four-year cruise took him to the Far East-China, Japan and the Philippines. He ended his hitch at the Marine Barracks in Brooklyn, N.Y. The seeds for his law enforcement career were sown in the corps when he was trained for M.P. (Military Police) duty.

His police career began on Jan. 3, 1966 when he became a Washtenaw County Deputy under sheriff Doug Harvey. In 1969 he came to Chelsea and became chief in 1983.

McDougall had not planned a police career. He told us:

"I carried a gun on my hip all the time I was in the Marines and used to say I wasn't going to carry one all my life. When the opening came in the sheriff's department it was an improvement over the job I had so I thought I'd give it a shot."

His law enforcement career has been a busy one. The first day as Chelsea chief was highlighted by a high-speed chase. He pursued and apprehended an escapee from Camp Waterloo who had stolen a car. He's had to deal with two major fires (Heydiauff's in 1971 and the Sylvan Hotel in 1984) and a murder. Only last year the Chelsea police, working in cooperation with county and state law enforcement agencies, were instrumental in breaking up a major auto theft ring.

McDougall believes his primary duties are to run an efficient department, to act as a liaison between the police and Chelsea citizens, and to see that citizen's desires are put into effect. He told us that "police should work closely with the public. They can't exist without them. I like the idea of a small town personal touch."

The Chelsea Police Department has seven full-time officers, five part-time, and fifteen reserves. The reserves get paid $1 per year. They free other officers for other duties and save the village a lot of money.

Chief McDougall's pet projects are the DARE drug abuse prevention programs (Their motto is "Dare to say no.") being implemented in the elementary schools and the recent acquisition of a drug sniffing dog. McDougall believes a crime-prevention program through education is the best strategy. He'd like to extend the DARE program to Beach Middle School. Lack of funding is holding it up.

A drug-sniffing dog was purchased by officer Jeff Stabler. McDougall told us: "Normally a dog like this would have cost the village $6,500 but because officer Stabler bought it, it costs $3500. Quite a saving for the village."

McDougall wants to use the drug detecting dogs in Chelsea High School. However, to date, the school administration has declined the offer. Other nearby communities, including Stockbridge, utilize such dogs.

A neighborhood watch, as a crime prevention measure, has been started near the South School. If it develops, it will be set up in other areas of the village.

"Your best security is your neighbor," McDougall said. "They know who comes and goes in your neighborhood and you can reciprocate watching duties."

Future law enforcement will be enhanced by improved technology. At present Chelsea benefits from LEIN (Law Enforcement Intelligence Network) which gives them data from county and state agencies on criminal suspects. Updated computer systems, improved radio technology (The Dick Tracy radio watch is held up only by an adequate battery.) and E-mail will expedite future data gathering.

McDougall is highly respected and admired by his staff. Last year, to commemorate his 25 years of service to Chelsea, the staff presented him with a U.S. Marine Corps N.C.O. (non-commissioned officer) parade sword and scabbard. He displays it proudly in a glass case on his office wall.

"I always wanted one," McDougall said, "but I could never afford it."

Hunting and fishing are his favorite recreation. He also likes to do woodworking.

"You can never get enough hunting and fishing," he said.

Police need all the help they can get but some things are dangerous. Commenting on the practice of citizen's arrests, McDougall warned that people should know their capacity and realize what they can get into. For example, citizens can make arrests only in felony crimes not misdemeanors. Apprehending someone for a misdemeanor could lead to civil litigation. Also, you could put yourself in physical jeopardy.

McDougall summarized it well: "I'd rather let someone steal something than commit a crime of violence. Property is not worth a human life."

Warrant Arrests

Craig E. O'Daniels, 18, of Ypsilanti was arrested by a Washtenaw County Sheriff's deputy in the 200 block of Jackson Plaza Drive, Nov. 29. O'Daniels was wanted on a misdemeanor warrant for operating a motor vehicle under the influence of liquor in Ann Arbor.

Thomas L. Woodman, 32, of Ypsilanti was arrested by a Washtenaw County Sheriff's deputy on Park Road near W. Stabler Road, Nov. 27. Woodman was wanted on a bench warrant for domestic violence.

Missing Person

A 33-year-old township woman reported her 37-year-old husband as missing from their home on Burton Drive near Jackson Road, Nov. 25. The woman told a Washtenaw County Sheriff's deputy she and her husband have had marital problems. When she mentioned divorce recently, her husband apparently became suicidal. She is concerned because he is being treated for depression. Ann Arbor Police located him later that evening. He was determined not to be a threat to himself or others and was released.

Drunken Driving

A 36-year-old Scio Farms Estates man was arrested for operating a motor vehicle under the influence of liquor on Jackson Road near Metty Drive, Nov. 26. A Washtenaw County Sheriff's deputy stopped the man in his 1993 GMC Sierra pick-up for a traffic violation. The deputy smelled a strong odor of intoxicants and noted the man was unsteady on his feet. A breath test revealed the suspect had a .23 percent blood-alcohol level, which is more than the legal limit.

Freedom Township

Domestic Assault

Domestic assault was reported in the 11200 block of Pleasant Lake Road, Nov. 30. A 21-year-old township woman told a Washtenaw County Sheriff's deputy her 31-year-old live-in boyfriend slapped her face on Nov. 28. The following day, he allegedly grabbed her arms and pushed her against the wall after a verbal argument. A prosecutor will review the case.

Careless Use of Firearm

A 17-year-old township boy told a Washtenaw County Sheriff's deputy someone shot a bullet through his bedroom wall. The incident happened in the 13900 block of Dexter-Chelsea Road. The teen told police he heard a noise about a week prior to finding a bullet hole on Nov. 30. Police believe it's a stray bullet from a hunter or poacher.

Drunken Driving

A 21-year-old Taylor man was arrested for operating a motor vehicle under the influence of liquor on westbound I-94 near Dancer Road, Nov. 27. A Washtenaw County Sheriff's deputy stopped the man shortly after midnight when a cellular telephone user called 911 to report a possible drunk driver. The deputy also noticed the suspect's erratic driving. The man admitted to drinking. A preliminary breath test proved he had a .157 percent blood-alcohol level, which is more than the legal limit. The man, however, refused any further chemical tests. A search warrant was authorized to retrieve a sample of his blood for further confirmation.

A 30-year-old township man told a Washtenaw County Sheriff's deputy he found the window to his stepdaughter's bedroom ajar and several boxes in the basement knocked over. Runaway Juveniles

A 46-year-old township man reported his 15-year-old daughter as a runaway from their family home in the 10000 block of Stinchfield Woods Road, Nov. 29. The man told a Washtenaw County Sheriff's deputy his daughter is a habitual runaway. She had permission to stay with a friend but was told to return by midnight. By 5 a.m., the man said he started looking for her. He has since filed for incorrigibility status with Juvenile Court.

A 45-year-old township woman reported her daughter as a runaway from their family home in the 9900 block of Huron River Drive, Nov. 29. The woman told a Washtenaw County Sheriff's deputy her daughter and a 15-year-old friend left the residence with a pizza delivery boy shortly after midnight. The girl is reportedly a habitual runaway.

Aggravated Assault

Aggravated assault was reported at Chelsea High School, 500 Washington St., Nov. 14. Chelsea Police were dispatched to the emergency room at Chelsea Community Hospital after a 15-year-old girl was intentionally struck by a vehicle driven by another female student. The victim told police she has been called names and harassed by the suspect ever since she kissed the girl's boyfriend. On Nov. 14, the victim was walking from the parking lot to school when the suspect rammed her car into her, causing the girl to fall. She suffered an abrasion on her chin and scratches on her lower leg. Three students witnessed the assault, including the suspect's friend who was a passenger in the car. She said she asked the suspect why she did it and the teen responded by saying she hated the victim. Chelsea Police attempted to interview the suspect, but the girl's family wanted the University of Michigan to evaluate her first. They also want an attorney present when the girl gives her statement.

Value of the property is estimated at $4,000.

Malicious destruction of property was reported at Chelsea High School, 500 Washington St., Nov. 30. The school's principal called Chelsea Police when maintenance staff discovered three windows with B-B holes. Damage is estimated at $322.

Malicious destruction of property was reported in the 500 block of McKinley Street, Nov. 28. A 41-year-old Chelsea woman called Chelsea Police when she found a B-B hole in her kitchen window. She thinks the damage was done during the night because she heard her dog barking.

Lets Go Bulldogs!

Not Necessarily The Sports News

By Scott Bishop

Boys' basketball started this week all across the state. Chelsea's fast-breaking Bulldogs opened the season Tuesday at Williamston and play their first home game tomorrow night versus Saline. So finally we'll find out what we've all been waiting for. What kind of warm-up music will be played before the game?

This is an important issue for both players and fans. Imagine this. Your team is coming onto the floor for the season's biggest game. The stands are packed. The players are pumped. The student section is going nuts. And then the warm-up music comes on, and soon everyone is swaying to the sweet easy sounds of Whitney Houston. Not a pretty scene.

Or maybe you walk into the gym and the music is already going. The crowd is singing merrily along. "Thank God I'm a country boy!" they shout. Frightening, huh?

Warm-up music has been a tradition ever since British troops listened to the Beatles before defeating the French at Waterloo. So even though nobody asked us to, we in the Chelsea Standard sports department offer some musical suggestions, and some tunes to avoid, for tomorrow night's game.

Song: Born to Run by Bruce Springsteen
Comment: Perfect for fast-paced Bulldogs.

Song: Running to Stand Still by U2
Comment: Way too deep. Could depress team, crowd.

Song: Nowhere to Run To by Martha and the Vandellas
Comment: Enough running already!

Song: I Shot the Sheriff by Bob Marley
Comment: Could make referees nervous.

Song: Hit Me With Your Best Shot by Pat Benetar
Comment: Bold challenge to opposing team. We like it.

Song: Any Song by Michael Jackson by Michael Jackson
Comment: Are you kidding?

Song: Eyes Wide Open by the Goo Goo Dolls
Comment: Good advice for free-throw shooting.

Song: Don't Worry About the Government by the Talking Heads
Comment: Yeah, right.

Song: Hey Man, Nice Shot by Filter
Comment: Positive reinforcement.

Song: Try Not to Breathe by REM
Comment: Not a good idea.

Song: Gotta Get Mean by Blues Traveler
Comment: Good for playing physical opponents.

Song: Bring Me Some Water by Melissa Etheridge
Comment: Most appropriate for time-outs.

Song: Backdoor Man by Sara McLachlan
Comment: Coaches favorite, emphasizes fundamentals.

Song: Too Bad You're Such a Loser by Jennifer Trynyn
Comment: Only after the game, if the home team wins.

Song: I Have the Touch by Peter Gabriel
Comment: Theme song for nothing-but-net Bulldogs.

ANNIE TERPSTRA set numerous records at Chelsea High and has earned numerous post-season honors.

Honors Keep Coming For Chelsea's Terpstra

Just in case there's anyone out there who doesn't recognize that Chelsea senior basketball star Annie Terpstra had a great career, let's look back at recent history. She was named first-team All-State by the Associated Press and second-team by the Detroit News for the 1995 season, and likely will be similarly honored by the Detroit Free Press and Coaches Association when those organizations publish their All-state Teams.

Along the way she set Chelsea standards for points in a single game, field goals in a season, field goal percentage in a season, free-throws made, attempted and highest free-throw percentage in a season, as well as rebounds and blocked shots in a season. The blocked shot mark is not only a school but a state record.

For her career Terpstra holds school records in points, field goals, free-throw percentage, rebounds, is third in free-throws attempted and second in blocked shots. Her 213 career blocks are not only second in school history but second in state history as well.

Just for good measure, Terpstra was named the Class B-C-D Area Player of the Year by the Ann Arbor News for the 1995 season.

Any questions?

Bulldog Basketball Starts Home Season Against Saline

Chelsea will host Saline tomorrow night, Friday, Dec. 8, in an early-season showdown between two aspiring Southeastern Conference championship contenders.

"I expect a tough game from Saline. Defensively I think we match up pretty well. Offensively we're still finding ourselves," said Chelsea coach Robin Raymond, noting that the Hornets return two experienced guards from last season and feature a front-line bolstered by a bulky 6'3 transfer.

It will be the Bulldogs second game, after opening the season Tuesday at Williamston. Raymond said seniors Nick Brink, Scott Colvin and Kevin Cross would start and the rest of the line-up would likely fluctuate early in the season as Chelsea experimented with different combinations.

Last week's inter-squad game was a good tune-up, Raymond said. "The seniors dominated the game. For this early in the season, we shot the ball extremely well. It was one of our better Blue and Gold games," he said.

THE BELL ROAD BRIDGE in Dexter Township will be the topic of discussion at a meeting slated today at the County Annex Building in Ann Arbor. Residents Janice Schneider and Kathy VanVorhis are rallying their neighbors to help save the bridge. The Washtenaw County Road Commission is considering four outcomes for the bridge's future. Area residents would like the bridge restored.

Road Commission Considering Fate of Old Bell Road Bridge

By Michelle Rogers
Staff Writer

A battle between historic preservation and what some call progress is heating up in Dexter Township.

The Washtenaw County Road Commission is considering the fate of the Bell Road bridge. In response, neighbors of the 104-year-old wrought iron structure, located near Hudson Mills Metropark, have launched a campaign to preserve it.

"This is an important part of the cultural fabric of the Dexter area," maintains Janice Schneider, a Walsh Road resident.

"Road commissions, I think, are notorious for taking the easy way out by just tearing down bridges. It just seems odd we would tear down something unique to replace it with something that won't last nearly as long."

Schneider and her neighbor, Kathy VanVorhis, have joined several area residents in an effort to save the bridge. A letter-writing campaign is underway and petitions will be circulated in hopes of securing the historic bridge's future. A public meeting slated today, 4:30 p.m., at 110 N. Fourth Ave. in the County Building Annex in Ann Arbor, will be an opportunity for area residents to discuss the issue. Representatives from the road commission have been invited to attend.

Bell Road bridge was closed a few years ago when a drunk driver struck it and damaged an end post. The bridge was repaired, but a short time later part of its foundation collapsed. Now the county road commission is considering its fate. Federal and state funds are available through the Critical Bridge Program, but that money is earmarked for new bridge construction, not rehabilitation.

"I want to emphasize, we're not sure what we're going to do," said George Masinda, project engineer for the road commission. "We're working on various options."

Among the options, Masinda said, are to do nothing; rehabilitate the bridge for vehicular traffic; rehabilitate it exclusively for pedestrian traffic; or abandon it and construct a new bridge at another location.

Each option has its supporters in Dexter Township.

"Ideally, I would like to see the bridge used (for vehicular traffic) because there is something very remarkable about a wrought iron bridge when you go over it," Schneider said. "They are designed to flex and go back to their original design. It's just a delightful and enjoyable experience to cross a wrought iron bridge."

VanVorhis, on the other hand, would like to see the bridge restored to accommodate pedestrians and bicyclists.

"It's a destination where people come and enjoy the river. It's really enjoyed by people from all over," said VanVorhis, a Bell Road resident.

Both women agree for historical and aesthetic reasons that the bridge should not be demolished. They say it's a link to the county's history. VanVorhis said the town of Dover once held claim to the bridge. A church, deer park, post office, flour mill and saw mill no longer exist, but the bridge has been a mainstay for more than a century.

"It's our only physical-historical connection to the earliest settlement in our area," VanVorhis said.

The half-mile stretch of winding gravel road leading to the bridge could also be in jeopardy. Residents are concerned that the road would need to be straightened and widened if a new bridge is built.

"I think that future generations should experience a setting like this in its totality. I don't think it should be destroyed," Schneider said.

Land surrounding the bridge is naturally preserved. It includes Stinchfield Woods, park land along the banks of the Huron River, and a nature preserve owned by the University of Michigan.

VanVorhis says of the original 210 historical bridges in Michigan,

150 have been destroyed. Because she doesn't want to see the Bell Road bridge become another fatality, VanVorhis has investigated ways to save it. The Michigan Department of Transportation has told her the bridge may be a good candidate for a grant offered through the Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act. Grant money may be used for restoration to accommodate vehicle or pedestrian traffic. An official from the department told VanVorhis there is a greater likelihood of funding if the road commission applied for 80 percent funding to restore the bridge exclusively for pedestrian traffic. There is a time limit, however. Funding will only be available for one more year.

It's now the mission of Bell Road bridge supporters to rally area residents and apply pressure to the township board, county board of commissioners and road commission.

"I think we have an opportunity to save a part of history," VanVorhis said.

The Bell Road bridge is among approximately a dozen "Pratt Through Truss" wrought iron bridges still remaining in the state. Across the nation, some states such as North Carolina have just one, while others have none remaining.

Join The Search!

Purchasing a home is the final step in a somewhat complex process which begins with a home "search." You must first locate just the right home, one that stands out from all the others. How is that done?

Begin by making a list that includes preferred locations or subdivisions, desired features and amenities, a price range, financing, and any other items you expect to find. This list should be detailed. Be sure to include number of bedrooms, baths, etc., as well as style and square footage.

Next, prioritize your list, placing the most important items first. Have each member of your family take part in this exercise, then compare notes. Remember, you won't find a home that has everything on your list, so be prepared to compromise.

Next, provide your list to the real estate agent you've chosen. The agent will research the market to identify homes which match the criteria you've provided. Some homes will have already sold, while others may not meet your requirements. This research should yield a number of homes which have potential.

Next, the agent will screen the available homes by previewing them before making appointments. This step will eliminate homes in unsuitable condition. Finally, appointments will be made for those which closely match your requirements.

With the help of computers and other technology, the agent will spend approximately 3-4 hours of research time for each home identified. It quickly becomes obvious that finding the right home is not a matter of luck or chance. There are too many variables present in a home purchase for that to happen.

Once you begin looking at the selected homes, be prepared to provide plenty of feedback to the agent. This information is helpful, and makes it possible to identify even more homes which may have otherwise been eliminated. The more information you provide, the sooner the agent will open the door to your next home.

Boychoir Plans Dec. 16 Show

The Boychoir of Ann Arbor will present, for the general public, its ninth annual Christmas Concert entitled "A Boychoir Christmas". On Saturday, Dec. 16. There will be two performances, at 3 p.m. and 7:30 p.m., in the sanctuary of St. Andrew's Episcopal Church (Division at Catherine) in Ann Arbor.

Traditional Christmas carols will be incorporated in a program which includes David Willcock's arrangement of "Away in a manger" (with solo boy soprano) as well as his arrangement of the traditional "Sussex Carol"; and the well known "Torches" by John Joubert. Another Joubert work, new this year, is "All and some". The program will open with the processional "Once in Royal David's City", and conclude with an energetic performance of John Gardner's "Tomorrow shall be my dancing day". David Willcock's arrangement of "Good King Wenceslas" will be dramatized with solo boy soprano and bass, and the beautiful Welsh carol, "Suo Can" with its simple tender melody will be sung by a solo boy.

The Preparatory choir of thirteen boys, now in its third year, will perform "The Star Carol" (Rutter) and "Welcome, Yule!", as well as join the Performing Choir in some traditional carols. They will be featured at the 3 p.m. performance only.

The boys of the choir will be supported by selected men singers (at the 7:30 p.m. performance), providing the lower choral parts. The choir will be accompanied by the church's 33-rank Reuter pipe organ, as well as flute.

The Boychoir of Ann Arbor, an ensemble of twenty-four boys, was founded in 1986 by Dr. Thomas Strode, its present director. It appeared with the Toledo Symphony.

Tickets may be reserved in advance by calling (313) 663-5377; they will also be available through members of the Boychoir.

Further information about the concert or about auditions for the choir may be had by calling Meg Kennedy Shaw at (313) 663-5377.

Host Families Needed

The American Intercultural Student Exchange, a non-profit educational foundation, is seeking host families for high school foreign exchange students for the 1996-97 school year.

AISE exchange students live in American families and attend local high schools during their ten-month cultural exchange experiences. Students learn about government, history, customs and language, as well as leaving a lasting impression of their cultures in the minds and hearts of their American host families and peers.

AISE seeks to shorten the perceived distance between countries around the world, while at the same time showing foreign teens why the American people cherish their country so. Call AISE at 1-800-SIBLING for more information on hosting a foreign exchange student.

WILL SUSAN, former branch director of Great Lakes Bancorp in Chelsea, is moving north and changing careers to spend more time with his family. He is pictured here with his wife Cheryl and their children, Nathaniel and Kaycie.

Full Service Banker Saying Goodbye to Chelsea Friends

By Scott Bishop
Staff Writer

Will Susan built a reputation for outstanding service among customers of Great Lakes Bancorp, and now he's leaving Chelsea and changing careers to better serve his family, his values and his God.

Chelsea, Susan said, has been a good place for his family, wife Cheryl and their children, Nathaniel, 10, and Kaycie, six, to put down roots. "It's been good. The people I've worked with... I'm leaving the (bank) branch in good hands. Lots of folks, our customers who I've worked with over the last 11 1/2 years, (have been) nice folks to work with. We've got a great group of pastors (at Chelsea Free Methodist Church), lots of friends at church," he explained, adding that his children have many friends in the community. "It's a nice community to walk down the street and be able to say hi, and know a

Chelsea residents will also have fond memories of Susan, and the service he gave them. This benevolent banker once drove into Ann Arbor to take money to a desperate customer depleted of gas and unable to use a malfunctioning ATM card, then came back to Chelsea and opened the drive-through after hours so the grateful client could make a necessary deposit. Susan has been in charge of the Great Lakes Chelsea Branch since 1984.

The Susan family will be moving to the Traverse City area, near a family-owned summer cottage, and Susan himself will change direction. His resignation from Great Lakes, Susan explained, allows not only the move north, but a career change which gives him more time with Cheryl, Nathaniel and Kaycie. He mentioned part-time work or owning a small family farm or business as possibilities.

Susan, who spent some of his childhood in Traverse City, and graduated from Traverse City High School, plans for his new career to be more family-oriented. "Then I don't have to worry about a job that keeps me away from home long hours," he said.

Susan looks forward to family time with less financial dependency on a job away from home, more time for devotions, reading the Bible, and praying, and greater time with his children, particularly assisting with their home schooling, which Cheryl has largely directed thus far.

Generosity Helps Foundation Aid 600 WCC Students

Thanks to the generosity of last year's donor contributions the Washtenaw Community College Foundation was able to help over 600 students in their educational goals. Once again, the foundation is seeking financial support to continue its efforts on behalf of WCC students.

Because 60 percent of WCC students require financial aid to begin or continue their studies, every dollar counts. Most have already gone through the Financial Aid system and have been turned down for federal and state funds. Ninety-five percent of all money raised during the Scholarship Drive provide the Foundation scholarship budget.

Last year contributions provided 120,000 in scholarship awards and $40,000 in grant money. Recipients receiving these funds were able to fulfill educational dreams by easing their financial burden... all make possible by generous individuals.

The Foundation defines a scholarship as an award of money that finances the cost of tuition - 80 percent of the awards represent scholarships. On the other hand, a grant is a smaller sum of money to be used for non-tuition purchases - to buy books or supplies, pay for transportation needs etc. All scholarships and grants are given without the expectation of being paid back.

The Drive has been held for ten consecutive years and each year the Foundation has exceeded its goal. There are several ways a donor can give. Contributors may choose to create a full-year tuition scholarship, in which they design the name and qualifications for the scholarship. This type of giving may be renewed every year for $1,000. For a scholarship endowment of $20,000 or more, the donor is recognized with a commemorative brochure and a portrait by WCC's resident artist Jon Lockard. The portrait then becomes a permanent display in the halls of the college.

Donors may make contributions by cash, check, make payable to Washtenaw Community College, or, for convenience, credit card (Visa or Mastercard) for amounts totaling $50 or more.

This year's Annual Drive Chairs are Jean Campbell, former director of the University of Michigan Center for Continuing Education; David Rutledge, director of Community and Government Relations for EQ; and Attorney Susan Westerman.

For more information, call the WCC Foundation at (313) 973-3360.

Disappearing Cropland Subject of Conference

The state's cropland is disappearing at an average rate of about 10 acres an hour. This is raising questions in some areas about Michigan's land use policy.

State and local land use policies will be discussed by national experts Jan. 9-10 at the Michigan State University Kellogg Center. Registration for the two-day conference is $100.

Kurt Norgaard, MSU agricultural economist, says that participants will hear about land use management practices in other states and will also focus on developing goals to reduce land use management conflict in Michigan.

He says the conversion of cropland to other uses is just one of the issues to be addressed during the conference. Others will include land use and water quality, waste management and waste facility location, and urban sprawl and the subsequent degradation of urban areas.

Other topics will focus on property rights and the balance between private and public interests, and the benefits to the community of integrated and coordinated land use planning.

"One of the problems we have in Michigan is that we have 1,800 units of government making decisions on land use and they are often not uniform," Norgaard says. "One of the first steps that needs to be taken is to find some degree of commonality when making these land management decisions."

Norgaard says problems in land use management in Michigan have not yet become acute, but the trend toward conflict is unmistakable.

"We have an opportunity to get ahead of the curve," Norgaard says. "I think that by hearing from others who have had a lot of experience in land use management elsewhere in the United States, we can better focus on the research and work that needs to be done to create a good land management system for Michigan."

The conference is intended for farmers, agricultural leaders, local government officials, planning and zoning officials, developers, educators and landowners.

Following the conference, evening satellite programs will be broadcast Feb. 8 and 15 to most counties so that discussions on the future of land use in Michigan can be continued at the local level.

More information about the conference and the satellite broadcasts can be obtained from Norgaard by calling 517-353-4618.

You who gave me the divine gift to forgive and forget the wrong that is done to me, and you who are in all instances of my life with me. I, in the short dialogue, want to thank you for everything and confirm once more that I never want to be separated from you no matter how great the material desires may be. I want to be with you and my loved ones in perpetual glory. Amen. Thank you for your love towards me and my loved ones. You must pray this prayer 3 consecutive days without asking your wish. FAMILY ROOM

By Karen Meier

Buying the family Christmas tree is a tradition we all have a say in, although some of us seem to have more of a say in it than others. This family tradition is usually carried out on Dec. 1. We've done it like this for many years now. And so, we'll pile into the van, after supper when it's cold and dark. That's a good time to buy a Christmas tree, after dark, because that's when the bare light bulbs strung over the tree lot are lit and the stars above shine down. And that's good.

Whatever tree we choose, it'll pass several tests before the lot guy and Ron tie it to the top of our van and we head back home.

The first test is the tallness test. The tree just has to be tall - there are no two ways about that. If it fails this test and the tree looks like a bush-as tall as it is fat-everyone laughs. That's not good. And if the tree is too tall, either the bottom gets chopped off, leaving no room underneath to put presents, which is bad, or the top gets lopped off, which means the tree will look like one of those spooky ones you see after the electric company comes through to clear branches away from overhead wires. This also is not good.

The second test: Trunk straightness. It's hard to determine trunk straightness in the tricky lighting. The bare bulbs in the lot swing back and forth in the December wind and cast crooked shadows. Now why exactly the trunk has to be straight, I'm not sure, but according to Ron, it's got something to do with right angles and chain reactions and the presence of children under the age of 4 and/or pets with four legs. I don't get it, but Ron always sounds so convincing; I believe him.

Third test: The needles-must-stay-on-the-branches-no-matter-what-test. A tree gets spotted from the bunch leaning up against the fence and Ron'll pull it out into the open to size it up. Then he gives it a mighty shake. If no needles fall off, we take that tree, no matter what no matter if it looks like a bush or a pretzel, we take it. This third test, the needle test, is the ultimate test; it overrides all other test. If the needles stay on, on top of the van it goes.

It's so unfair, this third test. It's so difficult for trees to pass. Most of them never have a chance and they get unceremoniously thrown back in the heap, looking rejected and sorry and sad.

I have a considerable soft spot in my heart for these Christmas trees; I'm like Charlie Brown that way. It seems to me that with just a little love and a family to gather round, any tree, even a spindly one, could look beautiful. But it doesn't seem that way at all to Ron. He believes in perfection in the evergreen department. Imperfections, blemishes-unacceptable.

He clearly has a Type A personality-Type A for Artificial tree. He has threatened and growled and paged through the Frank's and Sears ads over the years. He seeks perfect girth, perfect height, perfect color, perfectly behaved needles. He wants fake.

"But what about the piney, Christmassy smell of the real tree?" I ask.

He tells me they have stuff you can spray on the fake tree to make it piney smelling.

I say, "What about the birds' nests we sometimes find in the crook of the arms of the tree?"

"Oh, good grief. Just toss a big gob of those shiny aluminum icicle things into the branches. That'll look nesty enough."

Can you believe this?

Men. Anyway, last year as he paged through a Kmart flier, Ron exclaimed, "Look at this. An electronic, musical bird nest with flashing red lights that sings 'Jingle Bells' continuously."

I was standing at the stove stirring a pan of Christmas fudge. The fudge and my Christmas dreams seemed to be going up in smoke all at once. The simple, old-fashioned pleasures of Christmas seemed to have been lost on this man I married. Smetly spray and electronic bird's nests and engineered trunks and aluminum icicles and flashing lights and impeccably mannered needles never, ever to become peccable and if they did, just order the replacement kit for $9.99.

I looked up from my fudge, unable to find words to say to this man. He was looking back at me, smiling. And without wasting a second, he lovingly said, "It's Dec. 1, dear, let's go buy our Christmas tree. Get everyone bundled up, it'll be cold out there in that tree lot."

County Planners Win Award for Project

The Fragile Lands and Groundwater Primer Project of Washtenaw County Metropolitan Planning Commission was one of six winners in the Michigan Society of Planning Officials Annual Honor Awards Program.

In the past three decades, suburbanization of our rural landscape has caused waves of chaos in ecosystems which had not been exposed to human development. The alteration of "fragile lands" has become harmful to the human population. We are now facing the erosion of wetlands and wildlife habitat, diminished water quality, and reduced open space. Washtenaw County designed the Fragile Lands and Groundwater Primer project in an effort to preserve its "unique and sensitive physical elements."

The project locates all of the wetlands, floodplains, groundwater recharge areas, soils, steep slopes, woodlands and surface water so the communities can determine which areas need to remain in a natural state and when development is possible, what protective measures need to be taken to minimize the impact. The Groundwater Primer portion of the project was developed, on CD-ROM, as an educational instrument to explain to all levels of the County population how groundwater becomes polluted and how they can protect it.

The Jury stated "The Fragile Lands study was unique and understandable due to its technique of identifying X and Y factors, and then showing the impacts of their combinations. Helps overcome the tendency towards 'analysis/paralysis.' Established a threshold from which to make safe intuitive leaps to conclusions. A wonderful education tool that gets to the heart of the matter without a lot of filler."

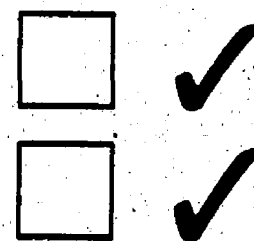

The Honor Awards Program was initiated by the Society 18 Years ago to foster and enhance the art and science of comprehensive community planning. This year's three-person jury was comprised of professional planners from the state of Minnesota.

MSPO is a 4,000-Member non-profit educational organization composed primarily of local planning and zoning officials. Over 425 persons were presented at the 1995 Conference and Awards Banquet held at the Shanty Creek Resort in Bellaire.
