

School District Seeks Names For Three Elementary Schools

Want to play a part in Chelsea history the easy way?

Chelsea School District is looking for suggestions about what to name the three elementary schools. The plan is to name the new elementary as well as change the names of North and South Schools. This is not a contest. No prizes will be awarded. However, it's likely that any person whose suggestions are selected will be acknowledged publicly somehow.

The criteria for the names are as follows:

- None of the buildings will be named after a person.
- The three names should all be compatible and give a sense of equality for all three schools. Each school is scheduled to be configured for grades K-5.

The names should be easy to say and spell and should appeal to elementary-age children and "evoke feelings of pride and excitement in each school."

Some of the names that have been suggested so far include Pierce Lake, Foxfire, South Meadows, and Mill Creek. The committee charged with this task has considered names of trees, animals, rocks, and even planets.

"We're trying to think of words that have to do with learning and education," says School Board President Jane Diesing.

"For example, there's a district that has used Challenger, Explorer, and Odyssey. The hard part is going to be getting three words that are compatible."

The district might also like to devise a logo that would be appropriate for all three schools.

Suggestions should be sent by Feb. 2 to Art Dils, 18272 Cavanaugh Lake Rd., Chelsea, 48118.

Dils is joined on the committee by past board members Ann Feeney, Anne Comeau, Dick McCalla, Ron Satterthwaite, Barb Cherem, Craig Wales, Lloyd Grau, and Dale Schumann.

U.S. CONGRESSMAN Dick Chrysler came to town last Thursday to give his version of Washington politics.

Dick Chrysler Stumps For Republicans

By Scott Bishop
Staff Writer

According to U.S. Congressman Dick Chrysler, the reforms Congress made in the past year are historic but far from finished, and he plans to play an active role in completing them.

Chrysler, a Republican from Brighton elected in Nov. 1994 to represent Michigan's Eighth District in the U.S. House of Representatives, made it clear that changing the way government works is his focus, and that of the first Republican majority in Congress since 1954. He met with the editorial staff of The Chelsea Standard last Thursday morning.

"We're not for protecting the status quo. We're out there trying some new ideas. We're saying let's try some things. If they work, great. If they don't work, let's try something else. The real bad ideas, let's get rid of them," Chrysler said.

The Republican majority, Chrysler emphasized, has shifted the course of the federal government, using as an example the current budget stalemate between Congress and President Clinton.

"We managed to really change the debate, what we're talking about back in Washington. A year and a half ago, we'd have been talking about a balanced budget as if it was something that would be nice when we get it, it would be wonderful if we had it, but we don't. We changed it from that to 'We're going to do it' and not only are we going to do it but we have won this debate that has gone for these last 50 days. We're saying we're going to do it over seven years, we're going to do it with honest numbers," Chrysler stated.

He puts the blame for the budget impasse, two resultant shutdowns of federal government services and the forced furlough of thousands of federal employees squarely on President Clinton, saying the President would not negotiate in good faith.

Chrysler said that government shutdowns could have been avoided if President Clinton had presented an acceptable budget plan on Dec. 15, but that the White House didn't actually do so until Jan. 6. The budget the White House did send to Congress on Dec. 15, he said, did not balance over seven years and was unacceptable.

"The President did not do his job. The President did not keep his word. And in fact, the President broke the law he signed on Nov. 20 (agreeing to bring a budget balancing plan to Congress by Dec. 15). That stuff never gets told to the people out here in America," Chrysler said. "The bottom line is that it's not about government shutdown, it's not about federal employees, it's really (about) balancing the budget. That's what really the issue is."

Continuing to express frustration with what he called the President's failure to keep his word, Chrysler predicted that, irrespective of Presidential approval, a budget plan directed by Republican goals would pass soon.

"We're going to balance it, and if that means we have to override a Presidential veto and make some compromise with (conservative Democrats) in the House that want a balanced budget, then we'll do that," he said.

Chrysler defended GOP insistence on tax cuts that require larger reduction in social spending programs like Medicare in the Republican balanced budget proposal. He said tax cuts would benefit the middle class by creating a stronger economy which would ultimately reward workers with increased earnings.

Whatever the amount of tax cuts that end up in a budget compromise, the congressman argued, the benefits would be felt significantly by the middle class.

"Seventy-seven percent of the tax cuts—the $245 billion or $180 billion of it—go to families that are earning under $75,000. So the majority of it goes to middle-class families," he said.

Chrysler contended fear of Medicare cuts is overblown and that at least $177 billion in tax cuts was necessary to stimulate the economy enough to balance the federal budget in seven years.

According to Chrysler, the budget battle follows a year of historic, Republican-directed reform in Congress, particularly in the House of Representatives. Listing proposals passed in the House like the balanced budget plan, the Presidential line item veto, welfare reform, tax cuts and medical savings accounts, he emphasized the scope of the House's agenda.

"One of those things by themselves would have been a major accomplishment in Washington D.C. for a Congress to pass. To get all of them done in one year is just historic," he said.

The House voted nearly four times the number of votes in the previous two years combined, Chrysler recounted, and he made his mark as a freshman Congressman by proposing the first bill, which cut congressional staffs and spending. Its passage defined his intentions as Congressman.

"That kind of set me up, I guess, as the guy that was coming to Washington to, what I like to think of as 'right-size' the government, make it manageable so we can afford it," he said.

By cutting its own resources first, Chrysler argued, Congress put itself in position to pursue cuts in other areas of government and even elimination of entire departments.

Chrysler himself has been working on dismantling the Cabinet-level Department of Commerce. A measure to do so that Chrysler termed "unprecedented" passed in the House last fall. The congressman voiced satisfaction gained from leading the effort as a new member of the House.

Beach Parents Discuss Drugs

Beach Parent Organization will meet tonight (Jan. 18), at 7 in the media center, with SADD students of Chelsea High, a representative from the police department, Chelsea Schools Social Worker Margaret Spaly, and administrators, to discuss drugs and alcohol use in Chelsea schools and the Community. Staying informed and aware of these issues will hopefully keep parents involved in the activities of their children. The intent of the program is to provide insight from many angles so that a proper perspective can be attained.

Starting Jan. 27, the "Free tutoring" program that was introduced last fall will begin. The program will be at Beach Middle School, from 9 a.m. until noon. It will continue every Saturday until May 18. Eastern Michigan University teaching students and adult tutors are expected to be on hand to help students in any area for as long as needed in the time allotted. There will be no "Free Tutoring Saturdays" on school holiday weekends, such as Presidents weekend, Easter break.

February's meeting will introduce parents to the personality profile, "True Colors." Students in "Prime Time" participated in this program and learned interesting and fun ways to recognize fellow students' personalities and how to understand why people think and behave in the manner they do. Plans are being made to also invite community members to become involved in this presentation. A representative from the Washtenaw Intermediate School District will be there to present the program. This meeting is on Feb. 22.

Beach Middle School is a busy place and parent participation is always encouraged. The intentions of the Beach Parent Organization meetings are to share information with parents and present an open forum to air any concerns. The meetings are generally held on the third Thursday of the month at 7 p.m. in the media center.

Merkel Fines Not Unusual

A Jan. 4 article in The Chelsea Standard listed the fines assessed to Chelsea resident Martin Merkel, ticketed for three misdemeanor violations by a Department of Environmental Quality officer.

Letters to the editor questioned the appropriateness of those fines. A caller noted that while Merkel was assessed a $95 dollar fine for possession of an untaged deer, the penalty for illegal taking or possession of deer could be up to $1,000 and include a jail sentence, hunting license revocation and required restitution of at least $1,000 per animal, as listed in the 1995-96 Michigan Hunting and Trapping Guide printed by the DEQ.

Arresting DEQ officer Mike Bailey explained that Merkel's actions did not constitute illegal taking/possession, so the penalty listed in the Hunting and Trapping Guide was not applicable.

He said Merkel was not charged with illegal taking because, while he was without a license, the incident did not take place out of season or at night.

Bailey added that while the DEQ provides penalty guidelines, local courts set the actual standard fines for cases like Merkel's.

Calls to the 14th District Court in Chelsea confirmed that Merkel paid the maximum standard fine for each of his three tickets.

BURNING OF 'DISGRACELAND': Chelsea Fire Department and others turned out for a training session last Sunday afternoon on Old US-12 near the Chelsea School District bus garage. In the end, they let this old farmhouse be consumed by flames. The fire temporarily got a little out of hand as the tree in the front yard caught fire. The school district has purchased the property from the Lesser family. The building was jokingly dubbed "Disgraceland" by its previous occupants, members of The Holy Cows rock band.

Annexation For Mobile Homes Delayed For Two More Months

By Scott Bishop
Staff Writer

At the Tuesday, Jan. 9 Chelsea Village Council meeting, council trustees heard more discussion about mobile homes which might be developed off Cavanaugh Lake Road and agreed to table the annexation issue while waiting for clarification of the parcel's ownership.

The village considered a proposal to annex 20 acres adjacent to property owned by the development group Dunbar and Martel. The developers hope to combine the two parcels for use as a 166-site mobile home park.

However, the property being considered for annexation is in dispute, awaiting a Circuit Court decision. Depending on the verdict, Dunbar and Martel may have an option to purchase the 20 acres. Additionally, to be used as a mobile home park the parcel would need to be rezoned by the village council to match the 16.92 acres

Dunbar and Martel own within village limits.

Following a presentation by Don Westal, designer for the proposed development and partner with Dunbar and Martel, emphasizing the attractiveness of the plans and his long experience with mobile home projects, residents, council trustees and the developers discussed the specifications and implications of the potential development.

Residents voiced concerns about the price of housing and how it might affect property values, overcrowding schools, traffic congestion, the possibility a mobile home park might be forced on Chelsea through legal action and future expansion of the mobile home park, while trustee Richard Rigg questioned Chelsea's need for lower cost housing.

Westal addressed questions about the number of new residents and school children the development would likely bring into Chelsea, citing numbers from his previous experience with mobile home parks.

"The residents per unit is about 2.1, and that accounts for the fact that we have a lot of single adults and couples involved on the upper end, and on the lower end we have people starting new families. The rule of thumb is .25 school-age children per house in a land lease community," Westal explained. So the village schools could expect roughly 41 students to come from a 166-unit development, he added.

Martel said the developers aimed to construct "safe, quality, affordable housing" for people earning $30,000 to $35,000 per year. He stressed that the park was not designed to be low-income or subsidized housing and would serve the community by augmenting its diversity and providing an option for people frozen out of an expensive home market.

Martel also said that concerns about the Dunbar and Martel project becoming a mobile home (Continued on page two)

A "PLAYATHON" was held at Beach Middle School from 5 p.m. Friday to 7 a.m. Saturday to raise money for Chelsea schools orchestra program. Students in grades 6-12 participated. Misinformation

In response to your ill-informed Letter To The Editor January 11, Mr. Reich, please allow me to provide you with accurate information. First, I was ticketed on November 21, 1995... 6 days after gun season opened, not December 1, after the season closed as you chose to state.

Secondly, I owned 15 block permits issued from the Department of Natural Resources for which I paid $3.50 each. They were all given to hunters and filled on my farm. Fifteen more deer were killed here with regular deer hunting license and there are still too many. As you may not be aware, these block permits are typically issued in years when the deer population has become enormous, resulting in severe crop damage for the residents of this area as a hazard to motorists. Mr. Reich, if you ever visit our community, I am certain that you will not have any problem observing deer. Unfortunately, many times you may see them dead on the side of the road, the result of a motor vehicle collision.

Finally, to correct the additional erroneous information which you cited in your letter, please understand the following FACTS:

I was hunting on my farm, which is 420 acres, located next to the Four Mile Lake game area. I WAS NOT POACHING.

I was ticketed for not having my gun in a case in my pick up, NOT on a highway.

The deer was NOT found in my pick up, but in the field.

The gun was NOT a 30.06, but an older, smaller caliber with a range of a 50-caliber muzzle loader.

Hopefully, these facts will set the record straight as to the incident which occurred. If you have any additional questions, feel free to call the Department of Natural Resources... or maybe you should have done that before concocting your recent letter. Mr. Reich, I am not sure where you come from, but I am a life-long resident of Chelsea that has dedicated a great deal of my life to the preservation of our natural resources. I suggest you get your facts straight before you attempt to publish any further slanderous letters.

I will respond to your friend, Marvin Carlson, "The Crusader Against Affordable Homes" next week.

EPA Analysis Misleading

The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) recently released its 1994 National Water Quality Inventory. The inventory is a summary of state reports more commonly known as the 305b reports. These reports are required by section 305b of the Clean Water Act.

At least one prominent newspaper, the Washington Post, portrayed the EPA's National Water Quality Inventory as painting a very bleak picture of water quality. However, the American Farm Bureau Federation (AFBF) has taken a close look at the inventory and the following may be useful in helping you understand the "rest of the story."

AFBF's analysis shows that what the EPA doesn't tell, and/or glosses over, within their report is more revealing than the perception EPA tries to leave with the casual observer. EPA's own numbers show that agriculture is impairing only 3.8 percent of the nation's 3,500,000 total river miles; only 8.2 percent of the 40.8 million lake acres and 9.9 percent of the nation's 34,898 square miles of estuaries.

Despite these facts, the unorthodox manner in which EPA's bar graphs were presented left the perception that agriculture impairs water quality in 60 percent of the stream miles, 50 percent of the lake acres, and 35 percent of the estuaries. It appears that it was EPA's and Vice President Gore's goal to impress upon Congress, the media (as the Washington Post did in its article) and other casual observers that an environmentally threatening water quality problem exists.

In fact, there is a big difference between total stream miles, assessed miles, total impaired miles and miles impaired by agriculture. EPA reported that only 615,806 miles of streams were "assessed," only 224,236 miles of the assessed miles were "impaired" by all sources of pollutants, and only 143,541 of the "impaired" miles were impaired by agriculture.

Dividing a small number (134,541 miles impaired by agriculture) by a slightly bigger number (224,236 miles impaired by all sources including agriculture) makes it look like the small number (agriculture) is a huge percentage (60 percent) of the problem.

Here's the myth/math: 134,541 miles of streams impaired by agriculture divided by 3,500,000 total stream miles equals 3.8 percent of total stream miles impaired by agriculture. Then, 134,541 divided by 615,806 assessed stream miles equals 21.8 percent of assessed miles impaired by agriculture. And, 134,541 divided by 224,236 total impaired miles equals 60 percent of "impaired" stream miles are impaired by agriculture.

In fact, EPA's report is largely absent of scientifically defensible data. One must judge the quality of EPA's data with a full understanding of the following documented problems:

1. There is no scientifically drawn random sample used to pick which river miles will be assessed.
2. States tend to assess waterbodies with suspected problems.
3. Scientific monitoring accounts for less than 40 percent of the reported data.
4. Evaluative assessment (someone's "wind-shield" guess) accounts for more than 42 percent of the reported data. Many times there is no monitoring data from which to make an assessment.
5. Often data that is used is several years old.
6. No assessment is made of stream morphology which would account for stream bank and stream bottom erosion.

Agriculture has made tremendous strides in the last 10 years in controlling erosion. The good news is that this may be reflected in the trends which the 305b reports show. In 1990, 6.6 percent of the total stream miles were reported as impaired by agriculture. That percentage declined to 4.6 percent in 1992 and now to 3.8 percent in the 1994 report.

Kevin Kirk

Opening Remarks

By Brian Hamilton

It's always entertaining when a relatively big-name politician wants to come out to woo the local newspaper folks. Last week, our Congressman Dick Chrysler, who's as Republican as they get, came to get acquainted with our editorial staff, which really means he came out to tell us why President Bill Clinton is all to blame for the budget stalemate in Washington.

If you've ever been to our office, you know that it's just about impossible for more than two people to hold a conference of any kind. If one of our sales people backs more than a foot away from her desk, I can't get out of the suite unless I turn around and go the other way. So, we made a last-minute decision to go across the street to our barren, still-being-renovated and soon-to-be-new headquarters. There, at least, we have a conference table and chairs. But he may have wondered why we were taking him somewhere named The Dawg Pound.

The Congressman and his press aide helped us pull the table and chairs out of a corner. Mr. Chrysler even wiped the dust off the chairs, then hung up his coat on the broken-down upright vacuum-cleaner in the corner. If I'd thought about it, I might have installed hot, directional flood lights aimed directly at his eyes so we could have performed a proper interrogation. ("Yes, Yes, I admit it, Republicans DO want to get rid of Medicare and bankrupt the old folks! Enough!")

Mr. Chrysler was very cordial about all this, especially after he warmed up (the heat had been turned down to 58 degrees), which is probably what happens when you have a very important message to deliver.

As expected, Mr. Chrysler came armed to the teeth with political statistics. For example, did you know it's 692 steps from his Washington office to the House floor? This was one of the most interesting to me, mostly because I wondered why he took the time to figure it out. Some days, he said, he makes that trip a dozen or more times to vote.

The Congressman did have plenty to say about the budget, the debt, and so forth. Trying to balance the budget, he said, is like "eating the elephant one bite at a time." It's very appropriate then that he wants a "consumption" tax to take the place of the income tax.

Naturally, he was full of praise for his famous freshman Congressional class, and full of criticism for the President. You can read the gist of what Mr. Chrysler had to say about those and other subjects in Scott Bishop's comprehensive story this issue. There were also many subjects we didn't have time to address. In light of his proposal for mandatory execution of drug smugglers, it could have quite a long and entertaining afternoon.

If you want to meet Mr. Chrysler in person, he promised he'll be back for this year's Chelsea Fair Parade.

Uncle Apollo

In keeping with the traditions of the new year, and The Chelsea Standard, and in response to all the e-mail requests for more information on my personal life, here are some important events that happened in the Apollo family last year.

January--Apollo household is devastated when PBS rejects local businessman's proposal to air a new public information show entitled, "The Wooden Cow Doctor."

February--The family slept.

March--Little Artie has a close brush with death when he mischievously steals my tractor for some fun on the ice at Cavanaugh Lake. A local celebrity hang-gliding past snags him out of the icy water just in time.

April--Distant family relative leaves the country under cover of darkness after being accused of being a lawyer in the O.J. trial.

May--Little Artemia is heartbroken when the Bulldog girls track team takes off and forgets to pick her up for the Southeastern Conference meet. She is inconsolable when they win.

June--$45 million bucks? I can't even pay off my credit cards.

July--After a long and hard-fought campaign, Auntie, Arty, and Little Artemia watch in horror as we barely miss the Family of the Year Award from the Knights of Columbus, which is presented instead to the Joe Yekulis family. We vow to start early for the next year and begin planning our strategy immediately.

August--My early announcement of possible candidacy for Chelsea Village President is lost in all the hoopla over the Chelsea Community Fair and the Chelsea Chamber of Commerce House Party. I realize I have a lot to learn about politics.

September--Auntie is accused unfairly of dumping eye shadow into the sink at the village offices. She is successful in defending her honor by pointing out that there is no way the little brush can go down a sink, and that it couldn't be her's anyway because the stuff they found wasn't her color. They charge her a heavy fine and tell her if she wants off easier next time she should just embezzle some money.

October--We make a killing in the market by buying sugar early in the month and selling the day before Halloween.

November--Our lawn is TP'd 47 times during the month by kids still high on their Halloween sugar buzz.

December--We hole up for the holidays and get ready to start all over.

Council Delays Annexation Request

megapark through further property acquisition failed to recognize the village's power to check expansion.

"The control over whether this gets to be larger or not is completely in the hands of the village, because they're dealing with annexation (issues)," Martel explained, noting that the developers had already agreed to a deed restriction limiting the number of units to 166, and that acquiring more property would require village approval. "The village will always have control over annexations and rezonings," he said.

Martel urged the council to put the annexation process in "suspended animation," holding its approval until the legal implications of property ownership were clearer, but not requiring Dunbar and Martel to begin their work anew in the event they did ultimately attain ownership.

"We don't want to start all over again. (With) the planning commission and the whole (process)."

What would make us very happy this evening is if this petition remained tabled for an unknown number of meetings until we clear up the title issue," Martel said. He hoped when the situation was clarified the village could then pick up the process of annexation at its present point.

Trustee Robert Clark made a motion to deny the petition, saying that if Dunbar and Martel did eventually control the property they could then apply for annexation. Trustee Brian Cashman contended denial would be a mistake because it would send an unintended negative message to the developers. Clark's motion was defeated 4-2.

After further discussion Clark made a second motion to table annexation for 60 days in hopes of clarification from the Circuit Court. The motion to table passed 6-0.

Chrysler Blasts President

year. Probably not the most senior member Congress could have put a piece of legislation, certainly (not a Republican congressman, could have put a piece of legislation like that through in the last forty years. To be able to do it as a freshman is unbelievable," he said.

Chrysler cited satisfaction with another of his proposals, a measure to make college tuition tax deductible up to $5,000.

"That is a real win-win (situation). It's good for parents, they can afford to send their kids to school now. It's really for middle class people. It's good for kids, they need a college education. It's good for America, we end up with a more educated populace. It's good for government, because on average a kid that goes to (college) will earn $14,000 a year more than somebody who doesn't go to college. And they will pay (taxes on) $14,000 a year more, so it's more revenue for the government," Chrysler said.

The college tuition deduction, along with other Republican proposals, remains in limbo due to the continuing budget debate.

Underscoring his contention that Republican proposed Medicare cuts are not "draconian" and would not undermine service to senior citizens, Chrysler said using voluntary managed care programs would save $270 billion or even more while still giving seniors health care choices.

The congressman said the Republican plan would benefit his constituents. "Senior citizens in the Eighth District are finally going to have the same options in health care that (others) have choices," Chrysler said.

He also supported GOP intentions to send states block grants for providing social services. Saying that federal administration of welfare incurred overhead costs of up to 66 percent while private organizations like the United Way, Red Cross and Salvation Army needed only 12 percent of their funds for overhead, Chrysler argued that states could use block grants and private organizations to provide similar services at substantially less costs.

"The current (welfare) system is bankrupting the country," he said.

Chrysler was vehement that the U.S. needed to do more to combat drug use and traffic without overly burdening average citizens.

"We will say to people that disable themselves through the irresponsible use of drugs and alcohol (that) the American taxpayer should not have to pay for your irresponsibility," Chrysler said.

His ideas to remedy the drug problem include a media ad campaign to make drug use socially unacceptable, a 1-800 hot-line for those with drug or alcohol problems (Chrysler said response to calls would happen within 24 hours; it is unclear whether government or private organizations would implement this program), tougher sentences for drug crimes with more mandatory penalties, and a somewhat startling proposal designed to cut the flow of drugs into the U.S.

"Anybody that decided that they would import or bring drugs into this country, the minute they crossed our borders they would sign their death warrant. They should be put to death," Chrysler said. No written legislation presently includes these provisions.

Dissatisfaction with the tax structure drives legislation Chrysler is working on with other congressmen for presentation later this spring. The legislation, if passed, would drastically overhaul the current system.

"It will eliminate the estate tax, the inheritance tax. It will eliminate the capital gains tax, not cut it in half, eliminate it. It will eliminate the withheld tax from your paycheck, so your gross pay will become your take-home pay. It will eliminate the IRS," Chrysler said.

With the negation of the IRS, its funding and 114,000 employees, and with it income and other taxes, the government would raise revenue through a national sales tax.

Chrysler's press secretary Doug McGinn indicated that the issue of how large a consumption tax would be is being studied by congressmen and other organizations like the Cato Institute, a conservative think-tank in Washington D.C.

"If you make a lot of money (and) buy a lot of things, you're going to pay a lot of taxes. If you don't make a lot of money or if you save a lot of money, you'll pay very little in taxes," Chrysler said.

He indicated that states would collect the sales tax, keep what they needed for programs like Medicaid and Welfare, and send the remainder to the federal government.

Saying that 48 percent of U.S. citizens pay just 5 percent of all taxes while 52 percent of the population pays 95 percent of the taxes, Chrysler contended a consumption tax system would be more fair as well as efficient. "Redistribution of wealth has never worked and it never will work," he said.

Plans for eliminating the IRS and its tax-collection duties would include repealing the 16th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, according to Chrysler. The 16th amendment gives the government the authority to collect income taxes, and the congressman said its repeal was needed to pull the current tax structure "up by the roots."

Despite 1996 being an election year, Chrysler reported that he would remain active in his district and accessible to constituents. "Nothing really is going to change in my schedule," he said.

He expects to maintain a similar pace as in 1995, when the congressman participated in 26 town meetings within his district. Last Saturday, Jan. 13 Chrysler spoke to a meeting of the Western Washtenaw County Republicans in Chelsea.

Chrysler expressed confidence that the Republican agenda would get the approval of his constituents and voters across the nation.

"When the American people understand what's really going on, when they understand the truth... we'll be fine," he said.

ORCHESTRA STUDENTS raised money for their program in an unusual way last Friday night as they held a "Playathon" at Beach Middle School. Students from sixth grade up played from 5 p.m. Friday to 7 a.m. Saturday. They secured pledges from area businesses and individuals. Above, sixth grader Ashley Hoage plays her viola, while below, sixth grade instructor Lynn Culver shows her enthusiasm for the project. Jed Fritzmeier is the orchestra director.

Dexter Community Players Present 'Nunsense II'

If you're one of the few who missed the original Dexter Community Player's production of "Nunsense", count your blessings. "Nunsense II: The Second Coming" has arrived.

"Nunsense," Dan Goggin's musical comedy about five nuns who stage a benefit variety show, played to sold out crowds in 1994. Now the Dexter Community Player's present the hilarious sequel. With Conrad Mason directing, the swinging sisters are back on stage, and the saga continues.

"The Second Coming" takes place at Mount St. Helen's school gymnasium six weeks after the benefit performance. You need not have seen the first production to enjoy "II." The show opens with a recap of the important events and introduces the characters. There's Sister Robert Anne (Vikki Fox) a tough street girl turned nun; sister Mary Leo (Ann Vandemark), the first nun ballerina; and Sister Mary Amnesia (Sharon Sussman), a former country western singer who won the Publisher's Clearing House Sweepstakes at the end of "Nunsense." Sister Mary Hubert (Barbara Danner) is second in command to Sister Mary Cardelias' Mother Superior (Susie Berneis).

The show is a dazzling revue of songs, dance and lots of comedy. Having tasted the thrill of the stage, the sisters thirst for stardom with a frenzy that peaks with a rumor that a "Star Search" talent scout is in the audience. Meanwhile, trouble looms large as the convent is threatened by a health inspector and a visiting order of Franciscan nuns come to claim Mary Amnesia and her sweepstakes millions.

Highlights include Fox doing impressions known as "Habit Humor" and Sussman with puppet Sister Mary Ahnette. The one liners and comic bits come at a frantic pace. One of the funniest routines is a home shopping take-off called "The Catholic Guide to Gift giving," featuring such dubious wares as the Pasta Madonna ("she's so al dente"), a home exorcism kit and the Last Supper picture in solid chocolate. But it's the sisters that make "Nunsense II" fly.

Performances are scheduled for Friday and Saturday nights on Feb. 2, 3, 9, and 10, and a Sunday matinee on Feb. 4. All shows will be held at the newly renovated Copeland auditorium, so the audience can see all the improvements from the recent bond issue first hand.

Students Invited To Explore Future

By Michelle Rogers
Associate Editor

Students in the Dexter and Chelsea school districts will get a glimpse of life after high school next month if they attend the South and West Washtenaw Consortium's annual Trek to the Future Family Career Day.

Jim Roth, a teacher in Saline Schools, calls Trek to the Future a grand open house. The event will be held at Saline High School, and is designed to encourage students to look at future careers. It will be held Sunday, Feb. 11 from 1-3 p.m.

South and West Washtenaw Consortium provides career technical education classes for students in the participating school districts of Dexter, Chelsea, Manchester, Saline and Milan. A majority of the classes are held in Saline with the visual imaging technology course held at Dexter High and agricultural science held at Manchester High.

According to Diane Skinner, director of career technical education for the consortium, this year's enrollment includes 73 Dexter students, 52 Chelsea students, 83 Manchester students, 56 Milan students and 216 Saline students. Those numbers have been on the increase over the past few years.

"We have started to see an increase. I think parents and students are starting to realize the jobs of the future are going to be technical jobs, rather than jobs requiring four-year college degrees," Skinner said.

Melissa Pauley, a senior at Dexter High, is among the local students attending technical classes. She is enrolled in the auto mechanics class held on Saline's campus. Pauley expects her early introduction to the field will help her as a student at Northwestern University next year. "My whole purpose right now is to graduate and go to college and hopefully get placed in the field. Then I'll save up enough money to open my own shop," she said.

Sarah Heller, a senior at Chelsea High, attended Trek to the Future five years ago. She is now enrolled in nursing assistant classes through the South and West Washtenaw Consortium. "I took the class and decided I really liked it. I like helping people. I like to make them feel better," she said. Heller hopes to gain employment with Chelsea Community Hospital or the Chelsea Retirement Community after graduation.

The consortium has targeted families with elementary through middle school-age children, particularly students in grade eight, to specially invite to Trek to the Future.

"It's basically a good family outing to see what's going on in the school system and what careers are out there," Roth said.

Over 900 people attended last year, and Roth expects to see just as many or more. He says families should attend so they're aware of what career opportunities are available.

"So many students prepare themselves only for college and when they get their degree they're competing for a particular job, while if they prepare themselves with skills to explore different opportunities, they would gain a competitive edge," he said.

"Just having a college degree isn't going to ensure them of getting a job. They need skills and perhaps some practical work experience."

Trek to the Future will include demonstrations and representatives from the 14 courses offered, including cosmetology, culinary arts, child care, marketing, welding and fabricating, engineering technology, electronics, automotive, visual imaging technology and construction. College and industry will also be represented. Last year, spokespeople for Eastern Michigan University, Washtenaw Community College, Cleary College, Sarns 3M and The Ann Arbor News attended.

Dexter and Chelsea High School students already participating in South and West Washtenaw Consortium classes will guide younger students and their families through demonstrations and explanations of the courses offered.

"The Dexter students are very much involved, especially those in the Graph-X program," Roth said.

Graph-X is the visual imaging technology class that incorporates printing, photography and video and is taught by Dexter High School teacher Dennis Stockwell. Those students have produced T-shirts and memo pads to distribute during Trek to the Future.

Besides offering career technical education classes, the South and West Washtenaw Consortium participates in a Cooperative Education Program with local industry. Roth estimates 95 percent of the consortium's seniors partake in the program, which allows students to take specialized classes and work in the field to gain hands-on experience.

Roth said three students in the machine tool class are serving internships with Ann Arbor Machine. Students learning the printing industry are also placed at local printing plants, including Thomson-Shore. A majority of those students, Roth says, are offered full-time employment by those companies after graduation.

January Observed Officially As School Board Recognition Month

January is School Board Recognition Month in Michigan. And for the first time ever, School Board Recognition Month is now a national observance.

In a special proclamation, Gov. John Engler declared January the month to publicly acknowledge "the value of local school governance in the American democratic process."

This year's theme, "Uniting Communities through Public Education," stresses the role public schools play in bringing together people from all walks of life to prepare for productive roles in society.

In 560 communities across Michigan, citizens will honor the 4,200 men and women who are all locally elected to represent them in the task of instructing 1.7 million Michigan school children. Each school board member contributes hundreds of hours a year in school-related meetings to set priorities for school budgets and speak out for the best interest of all children.

As Gov. Engler notes in his proclamation, "the competitiveness of Michigan's economy depends to a great extent on the quality of instruction offered in Michigan's public schools."

Through the efforts of the Michigan Association of School Boards (MASB), School Board Member Recognition Month helps citizens better understand the role of the local board of education. Nationally, the January observance is sponsored by the National School Boards Association (NSBA).

Girl Scout Winter Camp Postponed as Vandalized Buildings, Grounds Repaired

Officials of Huron Valley Girl Scout Council are calling on the community to help police and firefighters identify the vandals who caused more than $10,000 in damage to Camp Hilltop in Northwest Ann Arbor between Dec. 28 and Jan. 2.

The camp has been closed for clean-up and repair. Seven troops (119 people) have had to postpone their winter camping weekends while the windows, lights, doors, toilets, and the stove at Hilltop Lodge are repaired. Officials expect Camp Hilltop to be closed at least three weeks.

"We want those responsible for this terrible act of vandalism to know that they have not only severely damaged our property, but that they have stolen from our 14,000 Girl Scouts the chance to enjoy the natural environment and have robbed us of our sense of security at our own local camp," said Janet Treer, Council president.

Treer pointed out that Camp Hilltop is not only used as a day camp site during the summers but is also heavily used as a troop and group camp site throughout the year. The latest incident of vandalism is the second break-in at Camp Hilltop in six weeks.

Gail Scott, Huron Valley's chief executive officer, said the Council will install additional security measures to guarantee a safe, secure camping experience at Camp Hilltop. A security guard will be engaged to patrol the camp until a security system can be installed.

Costs of added security at Camp Hilltop are expected to top $5,000. Anyone interested in helping the Huron Valley Girl Scout Council defray the costs of the break-in is invited to call Karen Micklacher, Fund Development director, at 971-8800, extension 224.

A member of the camp staff discovered the damage on Jan. 2. Grates on the windows were cut, steel doors damaged and lights smashed. A break in the water main caused flooding of the floor of the lodge. A mallet and hammer were taken from the furnace room.

AREA FIRE FIGHTERS gathered in Chelsea Sunday to burn down a farmhouse on Old US-12 and learn a little about how to battle such blazes in the process. Several fires were set in different parts of the house, forcing the firefighters to use different tactics and equipment. Above, Andy Box, a Chelsea High School graduate and now a member of the Ann Arbor Fire Department, talks about the process that will be used during the next exercise. Girl Scouts To Work With U-M Architecture Students

Approximately 200 Girl Scouts will hold a brainstorming session with students from the University of Michigan's School of Architecture at Camp Linden on Saturday, Jan. 27, to plan for the first of four proposed sanitation stations (bathrooms) at Huron Valley Girl Scout Council's resident camp in Northern Livingston County.

Also on hand will be members of the HVGSC "Construction Collaboration," representatives of education, the construction industry, public utilities and organized labor. Their task is to translate the development plan for Camp Linden into reality.

First, campers will hear about plans for the sanitation stations from Kathy Treiber, the Council's properties director, and Melissa Harris, U-M assistant professor of architecture. Then Professor Harris' students will show their models of building designs to small groups of Brownie, Junior, Cadette, Senior and Adult Girl Scouts. The architecture students and campers will build models with mini-blocks and will sketch design ideas.

At the end of the brainstorming sessions, the U-M architecture students will go back to their drawing boards with fresh ideas from Girl Scouts who have stayed at Camp Linden and from others who may camp in the future. (Currently, campers at Linden use latrines.)

"This workshop is a first step in a process to make connections between Girl Scouts and professionals in architecture, design and construction," said Tom Gable, chair of the Construction Advisory Committee, to the HVGSC Board of Directors.

"Our plan is to have the architecture students, volunteers, and Girl Scouts do the actual building, with the supervisory help of builders from the Southeastern Michigan Chapter of the National Association of Women in Construction. We hope to give the girls hands-on experience in design and construction to spark their interest in those careers."

Council officials expect that the Construction Collaboration will branch out, to include a "Hard Hat" session at resident camp, a "Construction" badge or interest patch, and an "Architecture" badge or interest patch, and new career options for Girl Scouts who participate. Attention to environmentally sound building practices will help Girl Scouts and the Huron Valley Girl Scout Council to follow the Girl Scout Law "to use resources wisely, to protect and improve the world around me."

A prototype sanitation station will be built at the Meadows, in the northeast corner of Camp Linden, with three others to follow. Future plans for the 430-acre camp include road and parking lot improvements, construction of cabin clusters, and expansion of the dining hall.

The man, a caretaker at the residence, said a smoke alarm alerted him to the fire. He tried to extinguish it, but it kept restarting. The house sustained $7,000 in damages, including smoke damage to the interior and fire damage to the east and north walls. The windows were also shattered in the home, which is owned by the caretaker's mother who lives in a nursing home.

The snowmobiles are valued at $11,000. The identification numbers were entered into the Law Enforcement Information Network.

Warrant Arrest

Christopher Childs, 24, of Ann Arbor was arrested on Joy Road near Mast Road, Jan. 4. He was stopped by a Washtenaw County Sheriff's deputy for speeding in his 1976 Jeep. A computer check, however, revealed he was wanted on a bench warrant for violating a noise ordinance in Ann Arbor. He was lodged in a holding cell at the Ann Arbor Police Department pending bond posting. His 21-year-old roommate was allowed to drive his 1976 Jeep home.

Lima Township

Warrant Arrest

Richard A. Chambers, Jr., 35, of South Lyon was arrested by a Washtenaw County Sheriff's deputy on Jackson Road near Parker Road, Jan. 12. Chambers was stopped for speeding. A computer check revealed Chambers was wanted in Livingston County on a bench warrant. He was transferred into the custody of Livingston County Sheriff's Department at Eight Mile and US-23.

Breaking and Entering

Breaking and entering was reported in the 10800 block of Liberty Road, Jan. 4. A 20-year-old Ypsilanti woman told a Washtenaw County Sheriff's deputy her parents' home was broken into between 3 p.m. and 4:30 p.m. Jan. 3. She said $2,500 worth of coins were stolen from the living room. It is believed the thief entered through an unlocked sliding glass door.

Chelsea Village

Breaking and Entering

Breaking and entering was reported at the Secretary of State's office, 1113 S. Main St., Jan. 10. The owner of a neighboring business discovered the break-in after checking the hallway to the mall and finding a locking mechanism lying on the floor. Upon further investigation, the man found someone kicked out an adjacent wall in the men's bathroom leading to the state office. Entry was gained and it appeared every room in the suite was entered. Storage cabinets were pried open and an attempt was made to open the safe in the manager's office. Nothing appeared missing, however. Chelsea Police have a description of a suspicious vehicle seen in the area prior to the break-in.

Larceny

Larceny was reported at Pamida Discount Store, 1040 S. Main St., Jan. 13. A Dexter woman shopping at the store told Chelsea Police she left her purse in a cart unattended and it was stolen. The woman said she was helping her daughter try on clothing when the purse was stolen. Among the items in her purse were credit cards, identification and $100 cash.

Warrant Arrest

John E. Wilson, 30, of Chelsea was arrested on a warrant for assault and battery. Chelsea Police took him into custody at his home in the 100 block of Orchard Street, Jan. 5.

Attempted Vehicle Theft

Someone attempted to steal a

1990 Ford Tempo from the parking lot of Palmer Used Cars, 1477 Old Manchester Road, Jan. 13. According to Chelsea Police, it's believed the thief used a screw driver to break the steering column and start the car. The front, passenger side window was broken to gain entry. Damage is estimated at $400.

Vehicle Theft

A 1996 Chevy Blazer was reported stolen from Faist-Morrow Buick Oldsmobile, 1500 S. Main St., Jan. 13. The vehicle, valued at $29,000, was left in the garage with the keys in the ignition over night. The thief entered the garage by kicking in a garage door panel. A file cabinet was also forced open and $80 was stolen.

Recovered Vehicle Theft

A 1994 Plymouth vehicle reported stolen out of Adrian was recovered in the parking lot of Pamida Discount Store, 1040 Main St., Jan. 13. Chelsea Police ran the vehicle's license plate number through the Law Enforcement Information Network and discovered it was stolen.

Mail Tampering

Mail tampering was reported in the 100 block of Madison Street, Jan. 13. Chelsea Police were called when a resident received a piece of mail opened. Stolen were two compact discs valued at $30.

(All information compiled by associate editor Michelle Rogers and obtained through reports filed with the Washtenaw County Sheriff Department.)

Unattended Cars Often Get Stolen

Sheriff Ronald J. Schebl of the Washtenaw County Sheriff's Department says that the number of vehicle thefts is on the rise in Washtenaw County, largely due to motorists starting their cars and leaving them unattended.

With the recent cold weather, it is easy to understand why car owners like to warm and defrost their vehicles before driving. Yet, in less time than it takes for a vehicle to be heated, a car thief can seize the opportunity and seize an unattended vehicle.

One solution is to plan ahead. Give yourself a little extra time before you travel, to start the car and remain with it while it is running. Also, scraping your windows instead of relying solely upon the heater to defrost them will ensure that your visibility isn't hampered, while still getting you off on your journey in a matter of minutes.

Leaving the keys in the car while it is running and locking the doors isn't advised either. Not only might you misplace your spare key, but a car thief can still break into your vehicle while you are away. Car thieves are quick and resourceful, and can easily make you much later for work or that appointment than if you had taken a few extra moments to remain with your vehicle while it's warmed.

If a vehicle is stolen, dial 911 and report it immediately. The sooner it is reported, the sooner the vehicle description and license plate number can be entered into the Law Enforcement Information Network (LEIN) system, which is accessible to all law enforcement agencies.

Save Now! Your Retirement Clock Is Ticking

Most individuals know they need to save for retirement, but often they aren't sure where to begin. "How much do I need to save each year? Can I maintain my current standard of living? When can I afford to retire?"

To begin developing a plan, you need to answer the following questions:

- ① At what age do you plan to retire?
- ② How many years will you spend "in retirement?" When estimating, you should plan to live to age 90 or 95.
- ③ How much do you expect to receive from Social Security? Your local Social Security office should have an "Earnings and Benefits Estimate" form for you to complete and submit. You'll receive a report that estimates your personal Social Security payments at ages 62, 65 and 70.
- ④ What other sources of income do you expect? Does your employer provide a company-sponsored pension plan? If so, check with plan administrators to see if they can estimate your monthly benefit or lump sum.
- ⑤ How much do you currently have set aside as retirement savings? Include IRAs, savings accounts, company retirement plans (like 401ks, profit sharing or money purchase pension).
- ⑥ How much income will you need in retirement? This is always a difficult question to answer. Most individuals assume that their expenses will go down upon retirement. That may be true—you may no longer have a mortgage (Continued on page 2)

Happy with your current CD rates? Before you roll over your CD, be sure to check with your local Edward Jones representative. Edward Jones offers competitive FDIC-insured CDs as well as a range of investments that could mean a substantial increase in your income.

Tax Relief Is Here!

If taxes are taking a big bite out of your income, consider investments that pay you tax-free interest income. Tax-free investments like municipal bonds, unit investment trusts and tax-free mutual funds actually pay interest that is free from federal taxes, so you keep more of the income you earn. That means more money in your pocket to reinvest, pay bills or meet other expenses. Because of the tax advantages they offer, tax-free investments often provide significantly more after-tax income than comparable taxable investments paying higher interest rates.

If you're tired of losing your hard-earned money to taxes, contact your local Edward Jones Investment Representative for information on tax-free investments.

Sometimes, Less Is More

An investor in the 28% tax bracket would have to earn 7.64% on taxable investment to get the same amount of after-tax income paid by a 5.5% tax-free bond.

Tax-Free Yield	Marginal Tax Rates

Business Owners: Reduce Your Tax Liability SEPs and SARSEPs

At the printing of this article, sweeping changes to SEPs & SARSEPs are pending.

This is the time of year when many business owners begin thinking about taxes, and more importantly, how to reduce them. If you're a business owner, you can reduce your tax liability by establishing and funding a qualified retirement plan. There are many different types of qualified retirement plans, ranging from the simple to the complex.

SEP

If you are interested in simplicity, look no further than a Simplified Employee Pension plan or SEP. A SEP is the easiest and least expensive business retirement plan to establish and maintain.

Super IRA

A SEP plan is often referred to as a "super IRA" because many features are identical to the IRA. The main difference between a SEP and an IRA is the amount that can be contributed each year. The maximum amount that can be contributed to an IRA is $2,000 annually.

However, you can make a SEP contribution of 15 percent of compensation or $22,500* for 1996, whichever is less. All contributions to a SEP plan are tax-deductible.

*Based on a $150,000 compensation cap.

Employee Eligibility

Once you have established a plan, you must make contributions for all eligible employees based on their compensation. You may be wondering, what makes employees eligible to receive a SEP contribution? (Continued on page 2)

Reduce Your Tax Liability

The maximum eligibility requirements for a SEP include:

- employment in three of the last five years;
- attainment of age 21;
- compensation of $400 (1996) adjusted annually.

You can reduce these maximum limits if needed. For example, if you have not been in business for at least three years, you can reduce your years of service requirement so you do not exclude yourself from receiving a SEP contribution.

The deadline for establishing and funding a SEP plan is the business tax-filing deadline, including extensions.

SARSEP

If you want to fund a retirement plan as a benefit to reward good employees but are concerned about cash flow, you may consider a Salary Reduction Simplified Employee Pension plan or SARSEP.

Mini 401K

A SARSEP follows all the rules for a SEP, but the funding responsibility is shared between the employees and the company. A SARSEP is often referred to as a "mini" 401K, without the costly annual administration.

SARSEP Features

- An employee can contribute, through pre-tax salary reduction, 15 percent of compensation or up to $9,500 (for 1996), whichever is less.
- Any business with 25 or fewer eligible employees can have a SARSEP.
- At least 50 percent of the eligible employees must agree to participate by deferring a portion of their salary.

Whether you prefer a company contribution or employee salary deferrals, establishing a plan provides added incentives to employees and the opportunity to meet your own retirement objectives. Stop by your local Edward Jones office today for more information on SEP and SARSEP plans.

Taxes and Capital Gains

Last year was a remarkable one for stock investors. The Dow Jones Industrial Average began 1995 at 3864 and went on to achieve more than 70 new highs, topping the 5000 mark in November.

Now many investors are faced with a desirable problem: capital gains. You may have already realized your opportunity to cash in on these gains and take some profits. However, taking profits means paying taxes, and taxes on capital gains can be burdensome. If you own mutual funds, you don't even have to redeem shares to have a capital gain. When a fund distributes a capital gain, you are required to pay taxes on that gain even if it is reinvested in additional shares.

So, how can you make the most of capital gains while minimizing the impact of taxes? Following are a few suggestions that could not only improve your outlook on capital gains, but also better position your portfolio.

Minimizing Your Taxes

The best and most common way to reduce capital gains is with capital losses. Capital gains can be offset with capital losses realized in the same tax year or carried forward from prior years. Capital losses can be carried forward for an unlimited number of years until exhausted, and can be applied to ordinary income up to an annual limit of $3,000.

Gains and losses on sales of capital assets like stocks, bonds, property, etc. are classified as either short- or long-term. Short-term capital gains and losses are those that occur after being held for one year or less and are less desirable because they are taxed as ordinary income as high as 39.6 percent.

Long-term capital gains, which occur on assets held longer than one year, are taxed at a maximum of 28 percent. This more favorable tax treatment for long-term gains is just one of many reasons to stick with a buy-and-hold strategy.

Another way to lower your tax bill is to use long-term appreciated property, such as a stock, when making a charitable contribution. You can use the fair market value of the asset on the date of the gift as a reduction against income. Not only can you deduct the gift when contributing to a qualified charity, but you will also avoid paying capital gains tax on the property.

Should You Sell a Stock

We know from many market studies that time in the market is more important than timing the market. In other words, a buy-and-hold strategy has proven better than a strategy of getting in and out of the market in attempts to buy low and sell high. However, there are times when selling a stock or investment may be appropriate.

Remember, you must first consider the proper investment reasons for selling a stock or any investment; only then should you consider the tax implications.

We have identified three principal investment reasons that may make it appropriate to sell a stock:

- 1 When the stock appears grossly overvalued;
- 2 When the fundamentals of the company have changed (e.g. earnings, financial stability, competition, etc.);
- 3 When it's necessary to change or improve the diversification of your portfolio. Your Edward Jones Investment Representative can perform a free portfolio analysis that will show how well-diversified your investments are.

Knowing your cost basis is an important consideration once you've decided to sell shares of stock. Say you had purchased shares of a company on more than one occasion; the key is to identify the specific shares you wish to sell. It's to your advantage to sell the shares with the highest cost basis to minimize the gain. It is better to use the higher cost shares today and pay less taxes now, so the money you save can continue to grow in your portfolio. Edward Jones can provide stock-split and share price information to help you determine your cost basis.

Are Annuities Right for You?

Annuities have become increasingly popular in the past several years largely because more taxpayers are seeking options to increase their retirement savings and control when they pay taxes. But while the benefits may be significant, annuities are not for everyone. Whether you are looking to purchase a fixed or variable annuity, there are several factors you should consider to determine if it will meet your objectives.

Fixed annuities are designed to provide a steady stream of savings for or retirement income. If you are looking to supplement the income from employer-sponsored plans, or are looking for a way to fund for retirement, a fixed annuity may be the right choice for you. With the ability to make withdrawals, a fixed annuity can provide a steady stream of income.

Time Horizon

The time horizon for an annuity should be long term. With fixed annuities, maturity dates can be as short as one year or as long as 10 to 15 years or more.

With variable annuities, surrender charges are imposed if the contract is liquidated within a period of time, usually the first seven years. In addition, because of the higher expenses found in variable annuities versus other investments, it is generally best to hold a variable annuity contract at least 10 years.

Age

Since annuities are designed as retirement savings vehicles, and withdrawals may be subject to a 10 percent penalty tax if withdrawn prior to age 59 1/2, purchasers should identify their retirement needs and goals before purchasing an annuity.

Potential annuity purchasers should also consider the maximum commencement age in the contract when considering whether an annuity is appropriate. The maximum commencement age is the age at which the insurance company will automatically begin distributing the policy proceeds. To maintain maximum flexibility, annuity buyers should plan so that the contract surrender charges expire before the automatic distribution of proceeds begins (even if the insurance company is not currently enforcing distributions).

Edward Jones Can Help

There are just a few factors that you should consider when deciding whether or not to purchase an annuity. Your local Edward Jones Investment Representative can help you determine if an annuity is right for you.

Smart Ways to Take Your Lump Sums

If you are going to receive a lump sum distribution from your retirement plan, you have a number of options to consider.

Where do you begin?

Your first decision is whether you want to keep the lump sum payment or roll it into another tax-advantaged investment. Which choice is best? If financial hardship is a concern, taking the money now and paying the applicable taxes might be your only choice. If this is the case, you have one of two options:

- 1 Pay ordinary income taxes, plus a 10 percent penalty if you are under 55 at the time you separate service. In addition, 20 percent will automatically be withheld for federal income tax purposes.
- 2 If you are eligible, you could choose a special tax treatment called income averaging. Income averaging allows you to pay taxes on your lump sum as if you had received it over five or 10 years (depending on the method you choose). However, you are still required to pay the tax in one payment. You must have been born before 1/1/36 and been a participant in your employer's plan for five or more years to be eligible.

However, before you make the decision to take your lump sum and pay the taxes, ask yourself these questions:

- How long do you have before retirement?
- If you are retiring, do you have enough saved to meet your retirement needs?
- What are your other sources of income?
- Do you know what to expect from Social Security?
- Do you want to maintain your current standard of living? If so, do you have the resources to meet those goals?
- Are you planning to return to work?
- Do you really need that money now?

The answers to these questions will provide a blueprint for your savings needs.

If you find that you do not need those dollars now, you can maintain the tax-deferred status of your distribution by rolling the dollars into another tax-deferred vehicle, such as an IRA.

Rolling your distribution means you don't pay taxes on those dollars until you withdraw them. The longer you wait to pay taxes, the more your savings can grow. The chart above illustrates what a difference tax deferral can make.

At retirement, many people find themselves in a lower tax bracket. As a result, when distributions do begin, your after-tax return will be even greater.

IRAs come in many forms, and each offers unique benefits to suit your needs for growth and safety. Your Edward Jones Investment Representative can show you all your options, including our Self-Directed Account.

Estate Planning Checklist

Estate planning is one of the most important things you can do to secure the future of those you love. With proper planning, you can be sure that your estate is handled the way YOU want it to be handled.

At Edward Jones, we suggest a team approach to estate planning. Your estate planning attorney, tax advisor and your Edward Jones representative can give you coordinated financial recommendations to help you reach your long-term goals.

It's important that you take time to understand the advantages, disadvantages and costs of any estate planning choice fully before making your final decision. Here is a checklist of considerations to get you started.

Estate Planning Checklist:

- ☐ Find an estate planning attorney with whom you are comfortable and who is willing to work with the other professionals upon whom you depend (tax advisor, investment representative, etc.).
- ☐ If you already have a will, has it been reviewed the last five years, or have you experienced a major life change (marriage, divorce, birth of a child, etc.)?
- ☐ Review the registration of property you own. Will these assets go through probate? Is that what you want? Discover your options.
- ☐ Consider "Beneficiary Contracts" such as Edward Jones' TOD (Transfer On Death) service if your net estate is under $600,000 and relatively uncomplicated.
- ☐ Consider a living trust if you: want extra protection against the problems of incapacity, would like to save on probate's delays and expense, have special family considerations, or want to make full use of available tax credits.
- ☐ If you already have a trust, when was the last time it was reviewed? Does it still meet your needs? Are your successor trustees still valid choices?
- ☐ Review insurance needs from an estate planning perspective.

Choosing Between Fixed or Variable

Deferred annuities come in two basic types: fixed and variable. With a fixed annuity, you invest your money at a guaranteed rate, for a guaranteed period of time. You generally have a wide variety of maturities from which to choose.

Variable annuities, on the other hand, offer you the growth potential of the stock and bond markets, while providing the benefits of tax deferral. A variable annuity's return is determined by the market performance of the funds you select.

Variable annuities also offer a unique death benefit feature. Upon your death, your heirs will receive at least the amount invested in the annuity, less withdrawals taken, regardless of the market value at that time.

Tax Reform:

You can hardly open a financial magazine or newspaper these days without reading about the efforts of various members of Congress to reform the current graduated income tax system by substituting a flat tax or consumption tax. If these reforms are enacted in their current format, they will change the way most Americans pay taxes and invest. The following chart outlines the major proposals and the possible impact on the stock and bond markets.

Because it's impossible to predict which, if any, of these proposals will be adopted, what can you, as an investor, do to prepare?

The best thing to do is to take steps to ensure that your investment portfolio can weather any tax environment: stick to high quality securities, diversify and invest for the long term.

See Rules of the Road... below, for more tips on "all-weather" investing.

	Details	Advantages	Disadvantages
Flat Tax	Flat tax rate on earned income; mortgage and charitable deductions eliminated	All investment income becomes tax-free; no taxes on capital gains. Possible rise in taxable bond prices. Probably positive for the stock market over the long term. Greatly simplifies tax return.	Municipal bonds lose their unique tax-free status and muni bond prices may drop. Puts a relatively larger tax burden on the lower and middle classes.
Unlimited Savings Allowance Tax	Graduated income tax rates remain, but an unlimited deduction is allowed for savings and investment. Interest is not taxed until it is spent. Retains mortgage and charitable deductions.	Investment income is tax-free until it is spent; muni bond income remains tax-free even when spent. Possible rise in taxable bond prices; probably positive for the stock market over the long term. This is the least damaging proposal to the municipal bond and real estate markets.	Filing taxes remains complicated. Wealthy have more money to invest, so they receive a bigger tax break. Muni bond prices may drop slightly.
Consumption Tax	Replaces the income tax with a consumption-based tax, either national sales tax or value-added tax. Eliminates deductions and abolishes the IRS.	All investment income becomes tax-free; no taxes on capital gains. Possible rise in taxable bond prices; probably positive for the stock market over the long term. Eliminates filing a federal tax return.	Municipals lose their unique tax-free status and muni bond prices may drop. May hurt retail stocks if consumption slows down. Larger impact on the lower and middle classes, who spend a higher percentage of income on food, gas, clothing, etc.

Rules of the Road For Individual Investors

During our 125 years in this business, we've met many investors looking for the secret to overnight success in the stock market. Although we hate to disappoint anyone, the truth is, if there is such a secret, it has been very well kept. Most individual investors make their money over time, not overnight.

While individual strategies may differ according to personal needs, successful investors seem to follow the same set of guidelines. We call them the Rules of the Road.

As is often true in life, the rules are simple, but not always easy to follow. We hope they will be helpful to you as you consider your own investment decisions.

1 Have a plan.

Getting there may be half the fun for travelers, but unless you know where you're headed, you'll waste a lot of time and money along the way. The same is true of investing.

Successful investing requires a plan that defines your long-term goals and your needs for safety and return. Use it to help you stay focused on the long term, so it's easier to say no to speculative investment fads that may be temporarily popular.

2 Stick to quality.

The soundness of your overall investment strategy is determined by the quality of the individual investments you own. Avoid gimmicks. Look for well-managed companies with long track records of growth and performance. Growth is shared with stockholders in the form of increasing dividends. Many high-quality companies can boast of 10, 20 or even 30 years of consecutive dividend increases.

3 Don't be blinded by taxes.

No one wants to pay more than his fair share at tax time, but investment decisions based solely on tax considerations are all too often not good decisions.

Tax laws change frequently, and tax advantages can disappear from one year to the next. Ask yourself whether the quality of the investment you're considering is consistent with that of the rest of your investments. If it is not, a tax-advantaged investment may one day put you at a disadvantage.

Building long-term financial security is far more important than the short-term benefit of a tax deduction.

4 Price only matters when you are selling.

The ups and downs of the stock market are a fact of life for equity owners, but from time to time, they test the courage of even long-term investors. Don't let short-term price considerations scare you away from a long-term value.

The ultimate value of your investments is determined by the long-term performance and growth of the companies whose stocks you hold. Long-term owners of high-quality, well-managed companies have historically done very well, despite temporary fluctuations in the prices of the stocks they own.

5 Diversify.

No single investment performs well under all market and economic conditions. Diversifying your portfolio helps smooth out the ups and downs.

Unless you can predict the future, your best protection against market fluctuation is a diversified strategy that spreads your money over a variety of high-quality investments.

6 Buy to keep.

Despite tall tales of Wall Street fortunes made overnight, the key to accumulating wealth is to buy high-quality equity investments and hold them over the long term. Remember, it's time in the market, not timing the market, that counts.

7 Your first loss is the best one.

If an investment isn't living up to your expectations, think about why you bought it in the first place. If there has been a fundamental change in the company's approach to business or in its management, then your investment has changed. You can minimize losses by quickly acknowledging a basic shift in quality.

8 Take your time.

Your investment decisions are among the most important you'll ever make. Don't be rushed, by yourself or anyone else. If you have questions, ask them. You have a right to a complete explanation of any investment you might be considering.

9 Once you decide, act.

Trying to time the highs and the lows of the market is very difficult, even for professional money managers. When it comes to owning high-quality investments, remember this rule: the sooner, the better. Time is an investor's greatest ally.

10 Review your plan.

Investments aren't one-size-fits-all. Your investment plan should be tailored to meet your personal objectives. As those objectives change, your strategy should too. Review your plan regularly. For most of us, once a year is about right. If your plan still fits your needs and your objectives are within reach, stick with it.

Interim CHS Principal Had Long Academic Career

By Scott Bishop
Staff Writer

Beginning Monday, Jan. 22, Bob Carr takes the wheel of Chelsea High School as interim principal for the second semester. He will rely on more than 30 years experience in education and administration to steer the school into June.

After a long career as a teacher, counselor, principal and educational consultant, primarily in the Ann Arbor school system, Carr most recently served as executive director of The Chelsea Foundation and director of development at Chelsea Community Hospital, focusing on fundraising and public relations.

Anticipating the end of his terms with the Chelsea organizations, Carr said, he began to circulate resumes, wanting to continue working as he received retirement pay from his years in Ann Arbor.

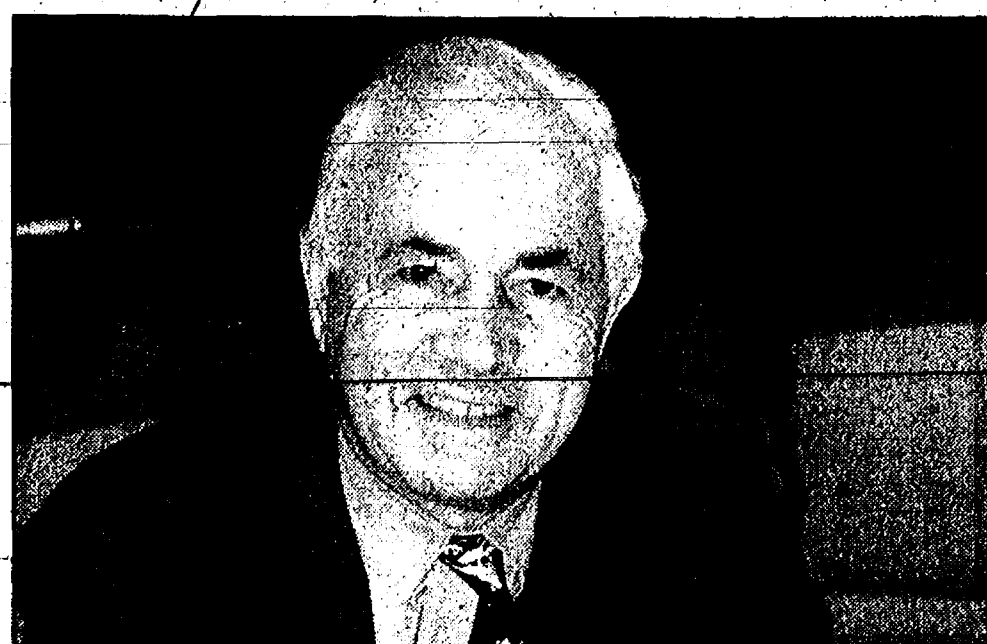

Dexter Schools Superintendent Dr. John Hansen, who knew of Carr from his work at the hospital as well as Chelsea's need for an interim administrator, urged Carr to contact Chelsea Superintendent Ed Richardson.

Following an interview with Richardson, High School Principal Ron Mead and Assistant Principal Robin Raymond, Carr was hired to lead the high school as principal for the second semester. He will be paid $255 per day for up to 100 days, a bargain for the school district since Carr could not receive more and maintain retirement pay.

"The timing was perfect because I concluded my work with the Chelsea Foundation and the hospital at the end of (1995). But also I've always wanted to (work) in a high school this size. It's not real large, it's not real small, in many ways it's an ideal size for curriculum offerings and management and so forth," Carr said.

Current principal Ron Mead will work on special assignment during the second semester, shepherding organization and planning for new school construction.

Carr said his duties would relieve Mead of some tasks but not BOB CARR will become interim principal at Chelsea High School on Monday, Jan. 22. He will serve as acting principal throughout the second semester of the 1995-96 school year.

replace him entirely. "My role here is a little bit limited, in that Ron Mead will continue to do planning, execution and development for next year. I won't be involved in that," he said.

"Basically my role is managing the school for the second semester, the day-to-day operation of the school. I'll have very little, except in a tangential way, to do with planning for next year because that will be Ron's (responsibility). In addition to all the other stuff, I'll be evaluating the staff; I'll be working with the guidance people to develop plans for individual kids as needed; I'll be managing the budget in the second semester," Carr explained.

Additionally, Carr will supervise after-school activities and daily lunch and bus service and be available to hear the concerns of parents and students.

"There are some things I will be working with Mr. Mead on because they have long-range potential, precedent setting or they are going to involve next year or whatever," Carr added.

One of his biggest challenges, Carr noted, will be becoming familiar with the staff and students at CHS, something he thinks is a sign of a quality school.

"I'm very impressed with the degree to which the administrative staff knows the kids. That's a very positive sign. I'm also very impressed with the manner which the kids here behave themselves. I've been to enough schools both as a principal and an evaluator (Carr spent three years visiting and analyzing high schools for accreditation purposes through the University of Michigan) and teacher to get a sense of the tone of the school. This school has a very fine overall tone to it. The kids are involved, they act independently but resourcefully and responsibly," Carr explained.

Asked about his goals as interim principal, Carr outlined how he hopes to evaluate his tenure when he leaves CHS.

"I want to be sure that I've evaluated the staff due for evaluation. I'd like to look back and say I provided leadership and support. If I could look back and walk away from here in June and say 'I've been a support person for all the good activities that go on here,' I'd be driving home feeling good. And I intend to do that," Carr said.

A Saline resident, married with two grown daughters, an eight-month old granddaughter and three stepchildren in the 20s, Carr began working at CHS last week in preparation for taking the helm this coming Monday.

'Beast On The Moon' Opens At Purple Rose Theater

Following the success of Escanaba in da' Moonlight throughout an extended run in 1995, the Purple Rose Theater is hoping for big things from Beast on the Moon to begin 1996.

The play impressed Artistic Director Guy Sanville at the 1995 Humana Festival, and after consultation with Executive Director Jeff Daniels, he arranged to bring Beast on the Moon to Chelsea. The play has been nominated by the American Theater Critics Association as last year's Best New Play.

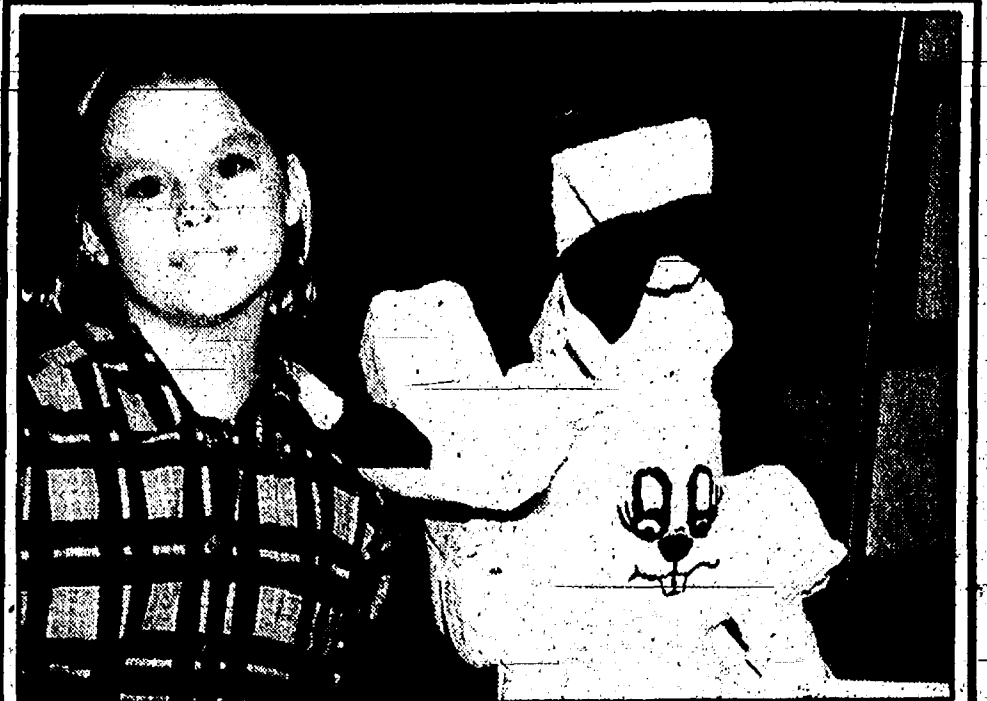

Debuting Director Suzi Regan, a veteran actor of three Purple Rose productions, expects the audience to connect with the on-stage drama.

"It's about the aftermath of a war, which not everybody has been involved with, but everybody can identify with the struggle of one-on-one relationships, carrying grief around and not being able to love or recognize when you are loved," Regan said.

Beast on the Moon features an Armenian couple, escaped from a ravaged homeland and brought together by mail-order, trying to adjust to each other, put past tragedy behind them and envision a future in the brand unfamiliar culture of 1920s Milwaukee.

The play makes its Michigan premiere tonight at 8 p.m. and will continue into March. Information about dates and ticket prices is accessible by calling Purple Rose box office at 475-7902.

THE WINTER Beach Middle School Art Show was held Monday evening. Students had their works on display on walls throughout the art classes and halls and gave their parents a chance to see what they've been up to. Above, Katie Horazdovsky shows off the papier mache sculpture "Babs," which she created with Allison Horn, Rebecca Crimmins, Kim Layher, Jessica Smith, and Sarah Schwartz. Education Foundation Plans To 'Ski The West'

In 1995 the Chelsea Education Foundation (CEF) sponsored a fund-raising dinner and silent auction at the Common Grill. Virtually every penny (after expenses) was returned to the community through grants, WRAP camp, science programs, scholarships and community forums.

This year the foundation will again sponsor a fund raising dinner. The theme is "Ski the West"—imagine skiers enjoying excellent food and good friends after a day skiing the Rockies. The mood will transcend boundaries on Jan. 29, at 6:30 p.m. in the Common Grill. In the tradition of past Education Foundation theme dinners, the mood will be set with quality art provided by South School fifth graders. Ideas developed by Pattie Rogers and her budding artists fill the restaurant and show the multiple talents of local children. The pieces will be judged by Common Grill staff. Top artists will be treated to lunch at the Grill with Rogers and Lucy Stieber, South School principal.

The Rocky Mountain menu does not resemble usual fare at the Common Grill. Less traditional chili, wild game and special desserts highlight the menu. Watch for duck confit (cone-fee, it's French). Most members of the CEF board don't know what duck confit is, but are sure it is tasty. House wines and beer are included in the price of each ticket.

A silent auction begins at 6:30. There are many items, too numerous to list. Some favorites return, and include a Lloyd Bridges Traveland trip in one of their motor homes; a garden consultant; tennis clinic; a two-month Westside Gym membership; tools from Chelsea Lumber; stained glass; tickets to area events; and gift certificates. There are also romantic ideas and self-improvement assistance, electronics and fun. How about a bag of Llamanure (llama droppings are great fertilizer for the organic garden). The auction will be full of great buys.

Whether you will get to the mountains to ski this winter or not, an evening of after ski fun supporting important educational programs is available this winter. Tickets are $60 per person ($110 per couple). They can be purchased through Jill Taylor (475-2172) or Pattie Feeney (475-2658) until all seats are sold. No tickets will be sold after Jan. 26.

SPORTS

Lets Go Bulldogs!

MATT TUTTLE has the upper hand in his match against the Lincoln Railsplitters last Thursday. However, he lost a very tough match in overtime. The Bulldogs won the meet easily.

Wrestlers Take Second At Athens Invitational

Nine of 10 Chelsea wrestlers placed last Saturday at the 16-team Athens Invitational, propelling the Bulldogs to a second-place finish at the highly competitive tournament.

The Bulldogs, with 192 points, finished only behind Jackson Northwest with 221 points. The finish was even more remarkable by the fact that Chelsea didn't even wrestle in four weight classes.

"We're seeing steady improvement, especially this week," said Chelsea coach Kerry Kargel.

"The younger kids are starting to kick in."

Chelsea had four champions--Ray Hatch at 125 pounds, Koby Foytik at 130, Brent Young at 140, and Jordan Dyer at 189. Dyer has yet to lose this season.

Other placers included Brian Hall, second at 160. Third place went to Todd Pearsall at 103, Mike Thayer at 171, and Andy Kargel at 215. Kevin Bollinger placed fifth at 119. Kevin Bloomensaat finished 1-2 at 145.

Hatch, the top seed, won an 11-4 decision over Miles Ferrall of Harper Creek in the finals to finish 3-0 on the day with one pin.

Foytik, also a top seed, defeated Curt Sayers of Northwest, 6-0 in the finals. He had two pins on the day and a 3-0 record.

Young, with three pins and a 4-0 mark, topped Billy McCormick of Albion in the finals with a pin in 5:56.

Dyer beat Ben Syvesma of Union City in the finals, 11-1, to go along with two pins on the day.

Hall, unseeded, was pinned in the finals by Jess Modert of Coldwater in 3:06. He was 3-1 for the day.

Pearsall, the fourth seed, stopped Paul Sessions of Bronson in the consolation finals with a pin in 1:00. He was 2-1 on the day.

Thayer, also a fourth seed, won a 9-4 decision over Josh Reinhardt of Edwardsburg in the consolation finals. He was 1-1 for the day.

Kargel, giving up more than 30 pounds in the weight class, stopped Jess Jaylett of Bronson in the consolation finals, 12-2. He was 2-1 on the day.

Bollinger, in his final match, stopped Jon Janen of Coldwater with a pin in 2:21. He wrestled more than any other Bulldog and went 4-1.

In a Southeastern Conference match last Thursday at home against the Lincoln Railsplitters, Chelsea won handily, 51-15.

Pearsall at 103 and Hatch at 125 won by forfeit. The other results are as follows.

112: Bollinger (C) pinned Justin Andre in 1:25.

119: Aaron Smith (C) was pinned by Mike Debeur in 3:58.

130: Foytik (C) pinned Ken Baumgartner in 4:31.35.

135: Matt Tuttle (C) lost in overtime to Dan Justyi after a 6-6 tie in regulation.

140: Young (C) won by injury default.

145: Jamie Holzhausen (C) won a 6-2 decision over Eric Smith.

152: Hall (C) pinned Chuck Marion in 1:46.

160: Mike Alber (C) won an 8-2 decision over Darren Schaller.

171: Thayer (C) beat Mike Gatny, 2-0.

189: Dyer (C) pinned John Stowe in 1:21.

215: Kargel (C) pinned Richard Paylor in 5:35.

Heavyweight: Mike Kalmbach (C) was pinned by Ben Blackburn in 4:3.

The Bulldogs are 2-0 in the Southeastern Conference. They were scheduled to travel to Saline tonight for a make-up match against the Hornets.

JAMIE HOLZHAUSEN of Chelsea works on a 6-2 decision over Lincoln's Eric Smith last Thursday.

Chelsea JVs Have Mixed Results In Week

In the "Friendship Game" last Tuesday, Dexter JVs were anything but friendly to the Bulldogs, handing them a 59-44 defeat at Dexter, but Chelsea bounced back to defeat Tecumseh 58-55 in overtime on Friday at Chelsea.

The Bulldogs trailed throughout the game versus Dexter. "We had a poor shooting night. We missed a lot of shots we normally make. They played real good half-court defense," said Chelsea Coach Mark Scheese.

Brian Groesser scored 16 points and Scott Basar 11 to lead the Bulldog offense.

Chelsea played the hero in high drama Friday against Tecumseh. First the Indians hit a three-pointer to tie the score at 49 in the final minute, and two Bulldog free-throws missed the mark with four seconds to play, sending the game to overtime.

In a hard-fought extra period, Chelsea took the lead with 18 seconds to go and Basar nailed two free-throws with five seconds remaining for the final margin.

Groesser again scored 16, Chris Herter added 13, Adam Erskine nine and Matt Adams eight points along with nine rebounds and three blocked shots.

The Bulldog's record now stands at 3-5 overall and 2-3 in the SEC.

Bulldogs Stuff Indians, Lose To Dexter Cagers

After a 52-45 loss to Dexter last Tuesday, Dec. 9, the Chelsea boy's basketball team improved to play its best on Friday, Dec. 12 and down Tecumseh 66-55.

Despite a strong second quarter showing and a 29-19 third quarter lead, the Bulldogs couldn't hold off Dexter once the Dreadnaughts got their outside offense untracked. Dexter shot just 33 percent from the floor and made four fewer field goals but converted 22-32 free-throws to Chelsea's 8-13, and sank eight in a row late in the game to keep Chelsea at bay.

Nick Brink was the only Bulldog who scored in double figures with 23 points. Kevin Holmes, Scott Colvin and Kevin Cross combined for 15 more.

Chelsea Coach Robin Raymond was positive despite the loss; the Bulldogs play on the defensive end especially pleased him. "I thought we played extremely hard. It was our best defensive game of the year to that point," he said.

That strong defense carried over to Friday's Tecumseh game, and in conjunction with an improved offense, kept Chelsea in control throughout the game.

Jumping out to an imposing 17-1 lead, the Bulldogs maintained a comfortable margin to the final buzzer; Tecumseh never came within nine points after the opening quarter blitz.

Chelsea out-rebounded the Indians, forced 25 turnovers while committing only 13 of their own, and shared the ball well enough to compile 15 assists. The good passing and team play resulted in Chelsea shooting a season high 52 percent from the floor.

"I thought we ran the offense the best we had all year," Raymond said. He also praised the Bulldog's defensive intensity, which never allowed the Indians to get close.

Brink again scored 23, but this time Colvin added 17 and Kevin Holmes 11 to a more diversified Bulldog attack.

Chelsea's record stands at 3-5 overall and 2-3 heading into next week's only game, at Pinckney tomorrow night.

Varsity Volleyball Team Splits Matches In Week

By Donna Gundie-Krieg
Special Writer

Chelsea varsity women's volleyball team won their match against Tecumseh Monday night and lost to Lincoln on Thursday, bringing their Southeastern Conference record to 1-1 and their overall record for the year to 6-3.

"I still feel confident that we will have an excellent year," said coach Dan Montgomery.

"For the first time in a while, the level of play of all the teams is so equal this year that anyone could win the title."

Monday night, Chelsea won 15-12 and 15-11 at Tecumseh. Junior Erin Montgomery had nine kills and two aces; senior Sara Petty had three kills and three aces; senior Heidi Kemnitz had four kills; senior Heidi Wehrwein had two kills and five aces and junior Melissa Carty had three kills. Senior Carrie Buss assisted significantly.

Thursday night was not as easy. Chelsea was matched against Lincoln at Lincoln's brand new high school gymnasium, and lost 12-15 and 11-15.

"Their new gym was very large and comparable to playing outdoors," said Montgomery.

"Both teams made significant errors throughout both games because there were no walls for distance judging, and the very high ceilings were painted white."

He noted that the timing was off for both teams, and even the most stable players were passing terribly and misjudging the balls.

"The scores seesawed back and forth because whichever team served usually got the point," said Montgomery.

"There were no long rallies." He noted that 15 out of 30 of Lincoln's total points and 11 out of 23 of Chelsea's total points were scored on aces.

The scoring for Thursday's games reflected the type of game that was played. Senior Liz Holdsworth had three aces; Montgomery had four kills and one ace; Petty had two kills and three aces; Carty had four kills and two aces; Kemnitz and Buss had one kill each and Wehrwein had one ace.

CURT STREET works hard for the Chelsea Bulldogs on his leg of the freestyle relay last Thursday against Tecumseh.

Chelsea Swimmers Whip Tecumseh In SEC Meet

The Chelsea Bulldogs boys swimming team moved its record to 2-2 and 1-0 in the Southeastern Conference last week.

The Bulldogs lost a tough meet to Okemos on Tuesday night 101-84. Chelsea swam well, having 16 season-best times but at crucial times had mental breakdowns which allowed the Chieftans of Okemos to out-touch the Chelsea swimmers, according to coach Dave Jolly.

Quality performances were turned in by Aaron Heaven 1:58.24, Steve Thiel 2:06.14, and Matt Kolodica 2:15.28 in the 200-yard freestyle. All were season-best times.

Josh Hack out-powered the field in the 200 individual medley at 2:06.01. His time was well under the state qualification standard for class B.

Rob Frayer and Peter Straub both swam well in the event, going 2:18.35 and 2:18.78 respectively.

Curt Street continued to improve in the 50-yard freestyle dropping his time to :25.18. Nick Harms also impressed the coaching staff with a :26.57. Matt Johns rounded out the field at :28.62, another season-best performance for the Bulldogs.

Chris Frayer almost broke the one minute barrier in the 100 butterfly, stopping the clock at 1:00. Brian Fischer had a season-and career-best time in the event at 1:11.97.

The 100 freestyle saw Heaven, Street and Patrick Kenney all have season best performance at :54.47, :55.27, and 1:17.60 respectively.

Hack swam a fine 500 freestyle at 5:01.45, another state cut-off for the outstanding freshman. Thiel and Mike Randolph rounded out the field at 5:48.12 and 6:01 respectively.

The last big performance of the evening was turned in by Matt Kolodica in the 100 breaststroke. Peter Strait won the event at 1:06.17.

The Bulldogs came back on Thursday night to begin the SEC season against the Tecumseh Indians. Chelsea was the victor, 117-69.

Rob Frayer, Hack, Curt Street and Chris Frayer got the meet off to a good start, winning the 200 medley relay at 1:49.34.

Heaven came right back into the 200 freestyle with a win at 1:58.84. Hack won the 200 individual medley at 2:06.17. Rob Frayer was 3rd with a season-best of 2:17.76.

Chris Frayer won the 50 freestyle at :24.13. Mike Montange showed marked improvement in diving as did Brandon Renton, placing third and fourth, respectively.

Chris Frayer and Fischer combined for a 2-3 finish in the 100 butterfly. Heaven continued to improve in the 100 freestyle stopping the clock at :53.88. Street dropped to :54.51.

Heaven, Straub, Chris Frayer and Thiel won the 200 freestyle relay at 1:39.00. Hack won yet another event and lowered his state-best performance in the 100 breaststroke to 1:03.71. Straub also qualified in the event at 1:05.43.

Rob Frayer, Heaven, Street and Hack capped off the win, placing first in the 400 freestyle relay.

Not Necessarily The Sports News

By Scott Bishop

Here in The Chelsea Standard sports department we're focused on researching beyond the headlines, between the lines, inside the numbers, to get at the truly elemental core of sports issues. We don't want to know just what the score was. We want to understand why Pinckney calls themselves the Pirates when they don't carry swords, wear black eye-patches or sail the seas looking for plump, easy victims like the Detroit Lions.

Why is a field goal worth two points in basketball and three in football? If you're like us and also ponder over these questions, you have way too much free time.

But since we've had our thinking caps on, we'll try to provide some answers.

Q: When the Bulldog basketball team takes the floor against Tecumseh, how do they keep from being scalped?

A: Chelsea was just named as an exceptional school district by Money magazine, so the Dogs know their history. Chelsea has learned from General Custer's mistake in 1876, when he took on Indians who outnumbered his troops about 1,000 to five. Chelsea refuses to let the Indians employ more than five players at a time, and combined with some snarling Dog defense, that should ensure a good outing.

Q: What is the difference between a Chelsea wrestling match with, say, Saline, and a wrestling match between the President and Congress in Washington D.C?

A: When a Bulldog hits the mat against a Hornet, you know the match will end in a reasonable amount of time, with a clear winner. As the government's recent shutdowns prove, political wrestling not only takes forever, but everybody comes out a loser.

Q: Is there anything in sports that takes as long as the O.J. Simpson trial?

A: If the rules of volleyball were changed so the winning team needed to win 10,128 out of 20,255 games instead of three-of-five, maybe.

Q: Will anyone get soaked this winter more than SEC swimming teams?

A: Only people who bet on the Lions to win the Super Bowl.

 EXCELLENCE IN ACTION

Sell A Dream!

Have you ever tried to sell a dream? That's what most buyers are looking for when they begin searching for a home. They're looking for peace, security, clean surroundings, safety, warmth, and a place to entertain their friends—their dream home.

Buyers are rarely looking to purchase nails, boards, shingles, or paint. Nor do they want grass, garage doors, or shutters. What they really want is a home, that very special place where dreams really do come true.

If you're planning to sell soon, ask yourself "Is my home a dream come true?" If the answer is questionable, you may have work to do before marketing your home. The key to selling a dream home is creating the dream before the first buyer ever sees it.

Begin by asking a real estate agent for an assessment of your home's condition. It's called a "walk-through." The agent plays the part of a buyer, and will give you suggestions that range from needed major repairs to minor cosmetic touch-ups.

Take notes, then heed this advice. Be certain all repairs and improvements have been completed before the first prospect sees your home. Remember, you're selling a dream, not possibilities. Prospective buyers must be able to see, hear, touch, and smell their dream when they walk through the front door. What if they don't?

When a home fails to meet the expectations of prospective buyers, they often scratch it from their list of favored properties. Once that happens, it's nearly impossible to win them back.

Even if an offer is made, disappointment is likely to occur. Buyers tend to offer approximately $2,000 less for each $1,000 in needed repairs. By putting off $1,500 in repairs, sellers could be inviting an offer $3,000 lower than their anticipated price.

Offer your home in mint condition when it's time to sell. Buyers may reward you with an early, full price sale.

Please attend the free Home Buyers Seminar at 3215 Central, Dexter on Saturday, January 27th from 10:00 a.m. to 12:00 Noon. Limited seating, call for reservations at 426-2517 or Homepage: <http://www.mich.com/> - realtor/

Money Management

Prepared by the Michigan Association of Certified Public Accountants

By Michael Kelly

For better, for worse . . . but would you please sign here first?

These days, more and more folks taking that big trip down the aisle are opting for prenuptial agreements. In fact, statistics show that about five percent of people getting married for the first time, and 20 percent of those marrying for the second time, have prenuptial agreements. It may not sound romantic, but these legal documents can provide important individual protections that could preserve your assets if your marriage comes to an end.

It's not just the rich and famous who sign prenuptial agreements these days. Experts say money is the number one cause of divorce nationwide, so apparently, it's an issue no matter what your socioeconomic status! In general, most first timers don't need to worry about prenups, as they're called, but if you have children (heirs), think again. Ditto for the couple in which one partner has significantly larger assets than the other.

Prenuptial agreements are often employed in the eight "community property" states (Michigan is not one of them), where everything brought to the marriage, regardless of origin, is considered jointly owned when determining a divorce settlement.

If you're thinking about a prenuptial agreement, here are a few things to consider. First, start discussing it early with your mate-to-be, and do it at a time when you're not too emotional. Certainly, the day before the wedding is not a good time! Insist on full disclosure of assets and debts. Trading tax returns is a good idea. Hire your own lawyer, someone with family law experience. When you get ready to start detailing terms and amounts of a divorce settlement, think percentages, not specific dollar amounts. Don't forget to update your prenuptial agreement as conditions warrant.

How does one actually negotiate a prenuptial agreement? Aside from the aforementioned tips, it's vital that the agreement doesn't tip the scales too far in one direction. Be fair, or it may come back to haunt you. Don't forget, about 50 percent of prenups are disputed in court, and judges can take steps to make settlements more equitable. Finally, negotiations might be eased if a "sunset provision" is included, allowing you to jointly rip up the agreement if the marriage is solid.

It's still ready to sign a prenup? Not vital to discuss financial matters as you venture into wedded bliss. Full disclosure of debts and assets is the best place to start. From there, take time to learn about your partner's spending habits, and determine how much debt you both are comfortable with. Figure out who's better equipped to balance the checkbook or handle your investments. Take a look at your tax filing status (married filing jointly or married filing single) and consider which accountant to use. A little advance planning will help to get your new union off to a good start, and with any luck, you won't regret having skipped the prenup.

LETTERS FROM AFRICA

Dear Friends,

Over the past year or so, I've cultured some fears. It's probably not what you'd expect. In fact, they're kind of funny, almost embarrassing. Let me share some of them with you.

I'm not scared of snakes or scorpions. I have never seen a live snake since I arrived in Benin, and I know how to avoid them. Scorpions are also easy to avoid—don't pick up any rocks, wear shoes—and though their sting is painful, it isn't deadly. I'm not scared of these things.

I'm not scared of being hurt by anyone. Unfortunately, in the United States we hear a lot about tribal conflict and war in the few regions of Africa where these problems exist. The Bariba, the ethnic group I live with, are a very peaceful people and have no reason to hurt each other or the other ethnic groups in the area. There's enough land and food, and there is no great mistrust or tradition of war. The few fights I've seen were about infidelity, and since I'm not sleeping with anyone's wife, it's unlikely I'll be in any such fight. I'm not afraid of violence here.

I am scared of dropping my sandal into the latrine. My outhouse is really just a small cubical built over a cement slab with a hole that you squat over. I usually take one leg out of my pants to get them out of the way, which requires the removal of a sandal. Many times, this free sandal has almost fallen into the outhouse hole to its stinky death. This isn't a rational fear—new sandals are only a dollar at the market, and worse things have fallen into the latrine (spare change out of my pocket, a baby goat). Yet I just blush at the thought of walking back to my house with only one sandal on my foot and hearing the inevitable question from the family I live with: "where's your other sandal?" This is one of my fears.

Another fear has to do with my return home. I've picked up some strange manners that I once found distasteful, yet now find myself doing without thinking. The worst is picking my nose. The dusty Harmattan winds fill my nose with boogers so fast that a handkerchief is used up by noon. And with all the villagers around me picking away, it doesn't seem strange any more to fish out a booger and wipe it on the grass or the side of a mud hut. And in the village, I always pick with the left hand since the right hand is used for eating. When I really think about this, though, it frightens me.

Some of my eating habits have changed as well, and this scares me somewhat. Village etiquette includes wishing out your mouth with water and spitting it onto the ground; shoveling food into your mouth by hand; gracelessly chewing up and/or spitting out all sorts of animal bones; burping and slurping; and picking out your teeth after the meal. When sitting around outside and eating camping-style with my African family, this doesn't seem so bad; back home sitting down to a "power lunch" with a prospective employer, I would probably be shown to the zoo.

I picked up the habit of asking people to give me their things—this makes me fearful. It's part of the Bariba sense of humor, a way to say that you really like what they bought, that you think they have good taste. But it's also a way to give them a chance to show their appreciation to you for something you've done for them or might do for them in the future. For example, if I see a friend returning from his field with ten huge yams strapped to the carrier on his bike, I could shout out, "hey, give me some yams!" Most likely, he will stop and give me a yam or two then continue on his way. This is his way of thanking me for helping him in his field last week or for the help I will give him when he starts a small tree nursery in February. The idea is, after months and months of giving and receiving, you are indebted to many others and just as many are indebted to you. With such a complex web of obligations, a real sense of community develops. And just imagine: these debts and obligations reach back for generations!

Whereas this habit is acceptable in the village, it can be disastrous in other situations. The other night, I was invited to eat at a friend's house. Right across the table from me sat my friend's boss, and in a lull in the conversation, I commented on the nice shirt he was wearing. Then I heard myself say, "You have to give me that!" He looked at me like I was insane and I turned bright red, not knowing what I should say next. Luckily, he had a sense of humor and when my friend explained I lived in a Bariba village, we had a good laugh about it. I can just imagine what will happen when I come back to Michigan—I'll probably ask someone to give me his necktie during a job interview! I really am scared of this.

So these are a few of my fears.

But I have to admit: when people said that living in West Africa would change me, this isn't what I expected!

CONSTRUCTION of the new Huron Valley Ambulance station on the grounds of Chelsea Community Hospital is underway.

HVA Serves Area From New Location

On Sunday, Jan. 14, Huron Valley Ambulance began responding to medical emergencies in the Chelsea area from a new location at Chelsea Community Hospital. Previously, HVA served the area with an ambulance based at the Chrysler Proving Grounds between Chelsea and Manchester. While paramedics are temporarily housed at the hospital, HVA is finishing a new station on land donated by Chelsea Community Hospital. The station, which will be completed next month, is located off Old U.S. 12, behind St. Paul's Church, on the hospital grounds. This spring, HVA hopes to add a second, back up ambulance there.

About two years ago, in collaboration with the Washtenaw County Emergency Medical Services Commission, HVA began researching ways to improve response times in the western part of the county. "We're always looking for better ways to serve our communities. One improvement was stationing an ambulance in Manchester with the cooperation of the Manchester Fire Department," said Dale Berry, HVA president and CEO.

"Then, last March, we were asked to provide paramedic ambulance service in Tecumseh, which did even more to strengthen our responses in southwest Washtenaw County. Now, with an ambulance in Chelsea, these changes will produce shorter emergency response times for the entire west side of the County."

Serving the community since 1981, HVA is a nationally accredited, non-profit community ambulance service.
