

Community Forum Looks At Chelsea's Future

By Scott Bishop
Staff Writer

Architect Howard Deardorff led nearly 100 Chelsea area residents, including several village and township officials, in a forward-looking analysis of the village's future last Tuesday, Jan. 30.

The forum at the Chelsea Depot was sponsored by the Downtown Development Authority. The DDA previously contracted Deardorff as the planner who headed the streetscape project in downtown Chelsea beginning in 1990.

Deardorff defined the forum's purpose in his opening remarks.

"We're here to encourage and receive community input to define improvement priorities in the community. That's the goal. That's why we're doing this. We want the focus here tonight to be very proactive. This is not a session of coming together to complain; it's a session of putting things in a positive way," Deardorff said.

Noting that the successful downtown renovation began in the same place with a similar format in 1990, Deardorff urged the attendees to apply the concepts that guided the Streetscape project to the wider community, picturing what Chelsea might look like in 20 years. "We want as much participation as we can get and we want to focus on the positive," he added.

Following a slide presentation focusing on the success of the downtown renovations and offering other communities as examples for what Chelsea might pursue, Deardorff took input regarding key issues the village would face in the future.

The architect listed what he termed "opportunities" generated by the attendees.

Those included: integrating historic neighborhoods into downtown Chelsea and preserving the historicity of the village; coordination of village and township development plans and goals, making a priority of a distinction between village urban development and township rural development; pursuing pedestrian linkages, particularly between north and south areas of Chelsea; emphasizing continuity in zoning and opportunities for parks and green space; balancing commercial and residential development; locating the Chelsea municipal building in the spot most beneficial to the village; and addressing concerns about traffic through downtown on M-52 and new congestion problems that might be caused by new school construction.

The larger group then split into several smaller ones, to which Deardorff assigned specific topics to discuss and tasks to complete.

He asked that the groups of seven to 18 people — each focused on one of the above "opportunities" — to do four things: define the physical scope of their specific topic, determine what agencies and/or citizens would be needed to address it, identify obstacles to improving it, and assess what funding would be needed and where it might be found.

Following time for small-group discussion, each unit reported to the entirety on its answers and ideas.

The respective focus groups analyzed expanding pedestrian linkages, preserving Chelsea's historicity, locating the municipal building, assessing traffic problems, coordinating village and township cooperation and planning improvement of the M-52 corridor through Chelsea.

The pedestrian pathways

ONE OF THE SIGNS installed during the downtown restoration project a few years ago. DDA is working to address more major issues facing the downtown area.

group stressed the need to link new schools being constructed with the village, as well as connecting south end businesses to downtown and considering a safe crossover of Sibley Road.

Area residents focusing on preserving Chelsea's historical uniqueness suggested reviewing an often overlooked village historic district ordinance and reviewing a study done by Eastern Michigan University to formulate preservation strategy. The group also raised the possibility of renovating the existing municipal building rather than constructing a new one.

Chelsea Village President Richard Steele, a member of the municipal building group, emphasized the need for public participation in selecting a site for any new building, and noted a theme in his group's discussion.

"It seemed the further that you got away from M-52 (for a proposed building site), the worse (residents) thought it would be. It wouldn't be a workable solution if it were that far away from Main Street," Steele observed. Additionally, he said the group questioned what might happen to the current building if the village government moved out.

Washtenaw County Commissioner Joe Yekulis spoke for the traffic issues group, which included Allison Simon of the firm Beckett & Raeder, which is doing a traffic study in and around Chelsea, commissioned by a coalition of village, county, state and federal organizations.

According to Yekulis, some of the study's preliminary findings indicate that congestion problems are primarily due to traffic going north and south through town on M-52 rather than local traffic. His group advocated waiting to see the study's conclusions before acting.

"Everybody is pretty much in agreement, I think, that we need to let this commissioned study run its course, let the consultants finish their jobs over the next four months and present their findings to the community," Yekulis explained.

A public hearing on the early results of the study is scheduled for early March.

A group aiming at village/township cooperation, which included several village and township planning commissioners, recommended that a non-political group set up an initial meeting of local municipalities. Following the meeting, Ann Feeney, president of the DDA, said her organization would sponsor such a meeting, possibly enlisting business consultant Barbara Rose to mediate.

Pioneer Juvenile Skull Found

By Donna Gundie-Krieg
Special Writer

The skull of a pioneer juvenile was found on state land next to Cavanaugh Lakeview Farm on Jan. 18.

A person passing by Waterloo Recreation Area at McClure and Bush Roads reportedly discovered a human skull in a ditch and called police. The skull was turned over to the University of Michigan.

"I determined the skull to be from a juvenile pioneer burial," said Russell Nelson, physical anthropologist for the University of Michigan Museum of Anthropology.

"The person was probably between the ages of 10 - 14 and of European descent. I was not able to determine the sex."

Nelson said that there was also a book about witchcraft and a nun doll found in the area that was possibly connected with the skull.

"In a random surface such as this, there is no way to tell if the skull was buried in the area," he noted.

School Safety Expert to Speak

An expert in how to build schools safely from an environmental standpoint will speak today, Thursday, Feb. 8 at Beach Middle School from 4:30 to 6 p.m. in the LGI room.

Professor Robert J. Kobet of Slippery Rock University in Pennsylvania has been hired by the school district to advise on ways to ensure that the district's extensive remodeling and building projects do not create "sick buildings" that could cause children and staff to get sick.

The talk is entitled, "Common Sense Approaches to Environmental Safety."

Steele Faces Ritter Challenge

Petitions for the March 11 village elections were due Monday at 4 p.m. The positions of Chelsea Village Council President, three village council trustee seats, and two McKune Memorial Library Board seats. All incumbents filed for re-election. The only non-incumbent to file was Charles Ritter, running for village president, a seat he held in the early 1980s. He has run for village office unsuccessfully several times since then.

Incumbents who filed petitions are: Richard Steele (president), Frank Hammer (trustee), Richard Rigg (trustee), Joe Merkel (trustee), David Prohaska (library board) and Yvonne Herron (library board).

CHELSEA UNITED WAY recently honored organizations and individuals who have given both money and time to the local campaign. Above, from left, are Participation Award winners: Linda Pearsall, representing Chelsea State Bank in the Commercial Division; Delores Fouty, representing Chelsea Milling Co. in the Industrial Division; Jim Miltner, representing Chelsea Hospital Accounting in the Health Division; Dr. Irving Feller of the Professional Division; and Keith Kindred, representing Beach Middle School in the Academic Division. Not pictured are David and Cathy Tassinari and Tom Ryan in the Individual Division. Others honored below included, from left, Mark Heydlauff, representing Heydlauff's; Jack Merkel, representing Merkel's Home Furnishings; Ruby Strieter, representing the estate of Nelle Tingley; and Kay Heller, representing Heller Electric Co. Also honored but not pictured are Dr. Jerry Waldyke and Sheridan Springer of Springer Agency.

United Way Reaches Goal

The 1995 Chelsea United Way campaign goal of $106,688 was officially reached.

An awards ceremony Thursday, Feb. 1 honored several people and organizations, including: Chelsea Milling Company, Dr. and Mrs. Irving Feller, Chelsea State Bank, Chelsea Hospital Accounting, Beach Middle School, David and Cathy Tassinari and Tom Ryan.

Also honored with awards of special recognition were: Heydlauff's; Heller Electric; Merkel's Furniture; Springer Insurance Agency; the estate of Nelle Tingley and Jerry Waldyke, M.D.

The awards ceremony was held at the Chelsea Hospital dining room. Chelsea Hospital not only contributes generously to the United Way campaign financially, but also donates the facilities and food for the kick-off breakfast and awards luncheon.

The 1995 campaign proceeds will be distributed to the many member agencies in and around the Chelsea area that provide much needed services.

Mural Competition Announced

The Chelsea Center For The Development Of The Arts is sponsoring a competition to create a mural on the wall of the Chelsea Industries building, adjacent to the railroad tracks and the former Chelsea Standard building. The wall measures 12 feet high and 130 feet long.

The theme for the mural will be to celebrate the arts in Chelsea. Proposals must be submitted by 2 p.m. Thursday, March 14 at Dangerous Architects at 104 S. Main St. in Chelsea.

A jury of artists and village officials will meet after the submission date and announce winners in March. First prize will be worth $500 and the opportunity to paint the full-size mural. Second prize will pay $200 and third prize $100. An additional $500 will be awarded the first prize winner as a paint/supplies allowance for completing the project.

Board of Education Begins Defining Community Center

By Scott Bishop
Staff Writer

Monday, Feb. 5 the Chelsea School Board set out to brainstorm and analyze some preliminary ideas for the use of the current high school buildings when the new high school is constructed in the fall of 1998. It has already been labeled a Community Center, but the details of what it will offer are still to be decided.

Chelsea Schools Superintendent Ed Richardson said the future availability of the current high school offered Chelsea a unique possibility.

"We have a very broad community education opportunity in Chelsea that many school districts our size do not. We set a separate planning commission, or a separate planning group, spearheaded by our Community Education Director Jeff Rohrer. Jeff is ready to start meeting with our community and ask questions about the most appropriate use of the site," Richardson explained.

Rohrer will lead a 13-member committee comprised of school staff, village government, business and other community representatives which will study options for use and report its conclusions to the school board.

Rohrer sought some initial direction from the board on three key related questions. Would the school district need the space in the future if school populations continued to grow, would long-term or only short term leases be offered to potential renters, and finally, which would take precedence, revenue-producing activities or school district needs?

"I want to have an idea where the board thinks we should go with this," Rohrer said.

The board addressed the questions cautiously. "I cannot emphasize enough that this is brainstorming," said Board President Jane Diesing. The question of whether the community center should produce revenue or be primarily for school district or educational functions was the primary focus of discussion.

Board members Sandra Merkel and John Eisenbeiser underlined the need to keep the facility available for school district use.

Merkel noted the possibility of continued school growth and questioned the wisdom of trying to raise funds in the future for new construction when the former high school could be used.

Eisenbeiser urged the board make educational use the priority in the community center and suggested pursuing technological education opportunities featuring the involvement of the business and industrial communities.

Diesing and Janet Roberts both observed that the board made a commitment to area voters, concurrent with the $45 million bond issue for school construction and renovation.

Dangerous Country Roads

It seems that our back country roads are becoming more dangerous. This was evidenced by the recent death of Marybeth Boyer. In the last 3 weeks, I have been passed twice in no-passing zones, when I was going at least the speed limit. Others have related to me similar horror stories. This dangerous trend could be due to several factors.

1. More commuter traffic to the big cities.
2. More homes developing along these 2-lane roads.
3. Sporadic policing of the highway.
4. The nature of the roads: 2 lanes, small shoulders, curves, hills, potholes, trees, gravel, icy.
5. The "me first" attitude of some drivers.

We as local residents would rather not have these scenic roads widened, and we can't ask the outsiders to drive slower, nor influence the police force. What can we do? We can set an example. I have challenged people in our North Lake UM Church to sign the following pledge, and now through your newspaper I would like to challenge the whole community. It has several optional parts, because few of us see ourselves as experts in all areas. Of course for us out here, we emphasize the roads below, yet I'm sure similar problems exist in areas South, West and East of Chelsea. Let's urge each other to sign this pledge. Make some copies, send 1 back to me, at 14130 Wagon Wheel Ct., Chelsea to register your pledge, post a copy in your car, and give some to your neighbors. (It is not legally binding.)

On all roads leading to Chelsea, Stockbridge, Dexter and Pinckney, U.S. 23 and M52, especially on N. Territorial, Island Lake, Werkner-Stofer, Hadley, Waterloo and Harkerd:

1. I promise to try to NOT drive over the speed limits on the white road signs, and seriously consider the limits on the yellow road signs.

(Name) _____
2. I promise to try to NOT tailgate, or to pass a car in a no passing zone.

(Name) _____
3. I promise to be alert to changes in road conditions, buses, children and animals.

(Name) _____
4. I promise to pull over when sleepy or refrain from driving while intoxicated.

(Name) _____
5. I promise to refrain from doing several things while driving: drinking, eating, phoning, changing tapes, disciplining kids, etc.

(Name) _____
6. I promise to allow more time to get to my appointments and commitments, so I'm not in a rush.

(Name) _____
7. I promise NOT to use my powerful vehicle as a vehicle of power. I will not be a road bully!

Community Center Options

that the community center would be financially self-supporting, and not subsidized by the district's general fund.

"We did make a commitment to justify our building project, that this facility would be self-sufficient," Roberts said.

Richardson outlined the choice before the school district. "If the board says the goal is in fact to have enough revenue to operate this site, then that will be something (the committee) will address differently than if it is, in fact, our educational programs that we are operating," he explained.

Richardson mentioned several potential uses for the site which would generate revenue through educational offerings, such as vocational education programs, intermediate school district services, social service organizations, and an alternative school. He also cited more commercial examples, like renting to a doctor's office, as revenue-producing options.

"The problem is, or the opportunity is, we probably can't do all of these. So as we begin to study and bring back some ideas, this board will have to say what is our niche? What should Chelsea be involved in?" Richardson said.

Short of giving an absolute direction for Rohrer to take to his committee, Richardson summed up which direction the board leaned toward.

"How to get revenue can be done through either leasing to other organizations or through providing educational experiences that become self-supporting. I sense us leaning toward providing educational experiences at this site that are also self-supporting," he concluded.

Opening Remarks

By Brian Hamilton

Chelsea village elections are almost here again and the question of the day is, does anyone really care?

I ask that question not so much out of cynicism as from experience. Last year if you recall, exactly 188 voters, about seven percent of the electorate, showed up at the polls.

All kinds of questions come to mind. Does anyone pay attention to any of the issues? Is the only genuine political discussion in town at the Village Bakery? How many residents can name even one village trustee? The village manager? Last year, I believe, more people signed the petition against the proposed medical waste incinerator than voted in the election. In fact, Charlie Ritter has run for office more times than that.

Actually, I shouldn't kid about Ritter, the former village president, too much because Chelsea needs more people like him. While I am in no way endorsing his ideas about village government—I'm not sure I could tell you what they are right now—I am applauding his willingness to put himself on the line time and time again for his beliefs. How many of us could take so much rejection and come back for more? And, let's face it, if Ritter weren't running for village president, there wouldn't be a real election. Everyone would be running unopposed, which would result in the ultimate snoozer for election workers and more complacency for the electorate.

If Ritter wins, it will certainly be good for the news business because village council meetings and village government will never be quite the same, and could, in fact, be very entertaining, given his penchant for questioning and challenging council actions. Every time he runs, it sends little tremors through village government. Officials begin to imagine what Life With Charlie could be like and it makes them a little antsy.

I urge village residents to give a darn this year. You do have a distinct choice in the presidential race. How do you feel about the district library question? Mobile homes? Downtown traffic and parking? The village becoming a city? A new village office complex? Development? Area-wide fire department? Street improvements? These and many other issues will eventually be addressed by village council and they will all have more direct impact on village residents' day-to-day lives than 99.9 percent of the decisions in Washington.

Please vote. Even though most candidates are unopposed, at least you'll tell village officials with your vote that you're watching what they're doing.

Uncle Apollo

Dear Readers,

Well, it's that time of year. Petitions are flying right and left and my loyal fans have convinced me to run for Village President. I want everyone to get out to the polls this year and vote. The issues decided by your village government have more direct influence on your lives than any other election, so take an interest, especially since you're going to vote for me.

This village needs a change. The incumbent is running again, but with your help, I can Steele the position. Have no Daut, I can Hammer down a seat without Rigging the Election. I will take campaign contributions, but no Cash, man. My platform may be murky, but never Merkel. I might leave you in the dark, but I'll never leave you with Clark.

Vote for me! We need someone with the wisdom of Apollo! I promise a wooden cow over every sidewalk, a new auditorium in every high school, and fat-free plays at the Purple Rose. I'll write a village ordinance against taxes on village residents. I'll turn Main Street into a walking mall and declare the entire village a hysterical district. I'll ban poodles and puddles, declare that EPA can't tell us what to put in our water and charge a surtax for visitors from Ann Arbor. In fact, I've already been working on behalf of the village by contacting a number of my good pals who were more interested in fame and fortune than I am.

As one example of the benefits I am bringing to Chelsea, some time ago when the mobile home issue was heating up and the Tigers still didn't know where they were going to put their new stadium, a local planning official wrote to see if it would make sense to put the stadium on the northeast part of town. Being an Uncle of action, I wrote to my pal Mike Ilitch, suggesting the location. He wrote me back and turned down the offer. Well I didn't give up, and after a flurry of letters back and forth and some telephone calls with the managers, the Tigers made an offer. For every adult ticket we buy, they'll give us a free kid's ticket for one game this spring. This is really true! In fact, The Chelsea Standard has agreed to assist in organizing this event. There will be more information about this later. Of course, I'm not buying your vote by arranging this tremendous offer, but when you see the thrill in your kid's eyes as he sees just how big Cecil Fielder really is, remember who got you those free tickets.

Uncle

Forum Considers Future

Also discussed were the possibility of area planning commissions "pooling" resources to hire a professional to assist them, and township desires that Chelsea village define its boundaries and not pursue annexations beyond them.

Chelsea Planning commissioner Doug Dennison's group looked at future development along the M-52 corridor. The group urged balancing of commercial and residential development, particularly in Chelsea's north end, and emphasized that pedestrian linkage from the north end to downtown was critical.

Deardorff said his firm would sum up the prodigious amount of information and opinion the forum generated.

"What we will do is we are contracted to write up a summary of this. We will distribute that to the various planning commissions, so that people understand what transpired here," Deardorff explained.

The summary he would compile, Deardorff continued, would be presented to the Chelsea Village Council at its Feb. 27 meeting.

Chelsea Planning Commission Chairman Tim Eder observed that many suggestions made during the forum were incorporated into the commission's North Area Plan, and invited the public to review the document, by either picking up a copy at the village offices after Feb. 8 or attending the planning commission meeting Feb. 20.

A VIEW OF THE LAKESIDE HOMES that will be affected by the development.

Cavanaugh Lakeview Farms Development in the Works

By Donna Gundie-Krieg
Special Writer

Cavanaugh Lakeview Farm owners Irving and Cynthia Feller and their architects, Hobbs and Black of Ann Arbor, have been meeting with local officials and residents to outline preliminary plans to divide their 80-acre property and sell approximately 30 lots to individuals for single family residences.

Fellers' plans include petitioning the county to move Lowery Road beginning at the Glazier intersection at Cavanaugh Lake so that it runs through the farm behind the new lakefront homes to be built. The most current plans have the new road connecting to Lowery Road on the other side of the farm.

"The County has wanted us to move this road for many years, and it makes sense to do it now, while we are developing the property," said Feller. He noted that currently, Lowery cuts in between the rental homes and the lake, which is dangerous and increases pollution of Cavanaugh Lake.

"The new road will be a paved, modern road and will benefit the area residents," he said.

At a recent neighborhood meeting, residents on Lowery and Ridge roads expressed concern that the new road will not allow them safe and easy access to their homes.

"The road commission is taking everyone's interests into consideration and trying to design the best situation for the area," said Feller.

"The main reason we invited neighbors to a meeting was to explain what we are doing and get everyone's input."

Fellers' plans include tearing down approximately nine rental homes on Cavanaugh Lake and selling seven one-acre lots on the lake. He will also sell two one-acre lots on Crooked Lake.

Real estate market comparisons suggest these lakefront lots would sell in the $200,000 range.

In addition, Fellers plan on selling approximately 21 two-acre lots located between the two lakes. Feller stressed that the new landowners who do not own lakefront property would not be able to access either lake for privileges.

In response to concerns about the extent of the development, Feller stated that "this is small compared to the developments of 100-1000 houses which are going on all around us in Washtenaw County."

Several neighbors at the meeting asked how the integrity of the lake water would be affected by the development.

"Thirty new homes with wells and septic fields can not be good for the lake," said one resident.

Feller replied that the development will actually improve the septic and well situations on the property.

"The new homeowners will probably dig new wells and septic fields with more stringent standards on top of the hill, and several of the old ones will be abandoned," he said.

Fellers plan on retaining several acres and preserving the series of barns, with the possible exception of the production barn that was used in their business. They will remodel their own home, and maintain a nursery area, where Feller will grow trees for landscaping.

"I plan on landscaping the lakefront areas and also some of the lots," he said. "It is my intent to improve the entire area. I'll be living here myself and I want the finished product to be nice."

Feller noted that he will be pursuing his development plans through the township's Site Condominium Act, since this is the quickest method. He stressed that there are no plans for condominiums on the property, but officials have told him that the Site Condominium Act also applies to single family residences.

Sylvan Township Supervisor Gerald Dresselhouse said that the Fellers have not yet initiated any paperwork for official approvals of their development plans.

"They are at the point where they are asking government officials about the various ordinances and how their plans might fit in," said Dresselhouse.

"Sylvan's ordinances encourage people to come into the township and find out what may be workable before spending a lot of money on extensive plans."

According to Dresselhouse, the Fellers also need to obtain approval from the Washtenaw County Road Commission for the new road. In addition, the Department of Natural Resources and the Environmental Protection Agency will be involved in the project.

Dresselhouse stated that most of the Feller property is zoned agricultural (AG), which requires one house per two-acre lot. The property, which borders Crooked and Cavanaugh Lakes, is zoned low density residential (LR), which requires one-acre lots and 150 feet of lake frontage per home.

"In order to divide the lake lots as planned, Fellers may be required to petition for some rezoning," explained Dresselhouse. A rezoning request would probably involve changing the back portion of each lake lot from AG to LR so that all of the lake lots would have a one acre requirement rather than the two acres required by the AG designation.

"If any rezoning is requested, public hearings will be held and residents will be notified," said Dresselhouse.

Board approval of the rezoning request will depend on the scope of the project when detailed plans are submitted.

"The property is owned by the Fellers. If their plans are reasonable, the township can not legally stop development from occurring," said Dresselhouse.

He noted that the only way for townships to ensure that rural areas remain undeveloped is for the government to raise taxes and buy development rights from each farm owner.

This was recently done in the Leelanau Peninsula after a special millage election was held. In the long term, residents will save on tax increases if development is significantly slowed because the costs of government services and schools should be much more stable.

'Art From The Heart' Exhibit at St. Joseph's

"Art from the Heart," a traveling exhibit of artwork created by children who have participated in Arbor Hospice's Care-ousel art therapy sessions, will be on display at St. Joseph Hospital through Feb. 29. The display coincides with American Heart month and will visit other area hospitals.

Care-ousel, the Arbor Hospice Children's program, offers grief support for children who are seriously ill, or who have a loved one who is terminally ill as well as children who are struggling with the loss of someone close to them. The program is for children age 5-18 and divides them into age specific groups for appropriate counseling. Last year alone, Care-ousel worked with over 800 children, their classmates, family and friends.

Art therapy, one of the services provided, teaches children to use art to identify and express feelings about the disease/dying process while developing coping skills. Through the creation of art, grieving children gain a sense of empowerment in what often feels like a powerless situation. Creating imagery and the use of metaphor are safe, non-threatening ways for the child to ask questions, explore fears and worries, share secret hopes and wishes, express rage and guilt, strengthen strengths and seek comfort. The art can be a way in which children and adults together, can share in and communicate about their pain and courage when some-

BLEACHING DISCOLORED TEETH

Discolored teeth can be restored to their original color. The discoloration may be caused by the death of the nerve, the use of certain antibiotics (tetracycline discoloration) or over fluoridated water. For whatever reason your tooth or teeth may be discolored, there is absolutely no reason to go through life hiding your smile. Such discolorations can be corrected by a simple process known as bleaching.

Bleaching agents are applied within the tooth to remove the stains that are in the dentin. Techniques employing concentrated oxidizing agents have been successful in most cases. This process is used for internal tooth discoloration and not for the removal of surface stains that may be polished off the enamel.

The bleaching process is usually successful but sometimes the discoloration may reappear after a few years and then another bleaching will be required. The process is quite harmless.

Of course, a more permanent cure for a discolored, or deformed tooth is an artificial crown or jacket (sometimes known as a cap).

Everybody's Science

By Doris Stanley

During the winter, nurseries are gearing up next spring's new varieties for home gardeners. That includes three new strawberry varieties, each bearing large, firm, tasty fruit.

Northeast, Delmarvel and Mohawk are early maturing varieties that produce strawberries in June. A gardener or commercial grower can select which of the varieties does well in various regions of the East.

Developed by U.S. Department of Agriculture plant geneticists and researchers from Ohio State University, Rutgers University and the Canadian Ministry of Agriculture and Food, the three new berries were released to plant nurseries in 1994.

"These new berries help fulfill our mission which is to combine disease resistance with high quality strawberries, diminishing our reliance on chemicals to control disease and pests," he says.

Northeast has performed well in Maryland, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Kentucky. Galletta recommends it as a fresh market or frozen berry for growers with clay or silt loam soils.

Resistant to multiple fungus diseases, Delmarvel produces well on either light or heavy soils, in matted rows or in hills in the Mid-Atlantic region. Its fragrant aroma makes the fruit excellent for "out-of-hand" eating and its firmness allows for good handling, Galletta says.

Mohawk can fight off powdery mildew that plagues strawberry plants and produces fruit good for fresh shipping or local markets. Galletta suggests this new berry for northeastern states and south-eastern Canada. (Agricultural Research Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture)

Art Contest For Kids Set

Aspiring young artists could see their talents take wing and achieve worldwide recognition from entering an international aviation art contest. The Michigan Department of Transportation (MDOT) Bureau of Aeronautics is encouraging local students, ages 6 through 17, to enter the contest by the Feb. 16 deadline.

Entries will be judged in three age groups: 6-9, 10-13 and 14-17. Judges will select first, second and third place finishers at the state level, with each first-place winner advancing to the national competition in Washington, D.C. National winners will compete with entries from around the globe in late spring.

This year's theme is "Airfield." Artists may submit their depiction of the theme in any of the following media: color crayons, watercolor, acrylic, oil, indelible marker pens, felt-tip pens, soft ball-point pens and indelible ink.

Michigan has produced three national winners in its four years with the contest. One of them, Jeff Grocky of Muskegon, placed first internationally in 1992.

The annual contest is aimed at motivating and encouraging youths to become more familiar with and participate in aeronautics, engineering and sciences.

For an official entry form write to: Michigan Bureau of Aeronautics, Aviation Art Contest, 2700 E. Airport Service Dr., Lansing 48906; or phone (517) 355-9977.

CALL FOR ENTRIES Village Mural Design Competition

The Chelsea Center For The Development Of The Arts invites area artists to submit design entries for a wall mural design to be painted in the village of Chelsea. The wall to be painted is the Chelsea Industries building adjacent to the former Chelsea Standard Building. The wall is approximately 12 ft high, and 130 ft long. It is immediately adjacent to the railroad tracks.

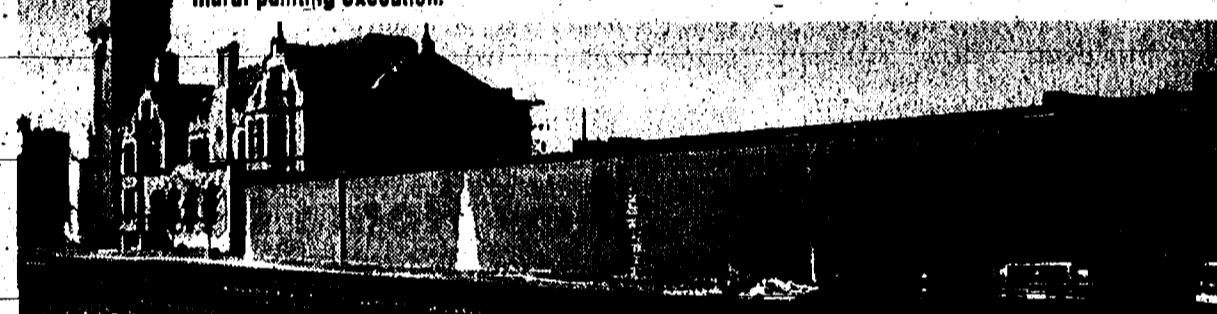

The Theme for this mural design will be to celebrate the arts in Chelsea. One of the primary audiences for the mural will be the train passengers traveling on the nearby tracks. Because of the close proximity of the speeding trains to the proposed mural wall it is suggested that the mural designs be proportionately elongated to enable passengers to be able to appreciate the design. The passenger trains do not stop in Chelsea, but cruise by at speeds of 50-70 mph. The proposed mural design must therefore be quite strong graphically in order to significantly illustrate the above theme to train passengers rushing past.

Submissions for the mural design must include one frontal elevation in full color at 1/4"=1'-0" scale on 12"x36" paper. A brief written narrative stating how the design addresses the above theme should appear on the same sheet. Submissions are due by 2:00 p.m. Thursday, 14 March 1996 at Dangerous architects, 104 South Main Street, Chelsea, MI 48118. Late submissions will not be accepted. All submissions must include an application fee of $15.00. Make checks payable to Village Mural Competition. Include your name and address inside a sealed envelope taped to the back of your submission.

The jury for this competition will consist of prominent local artists, and village officials. The jury will meet following the submission due date, announcing winners in March. Prizes for the competition include:

$500.00 first prize - $200.00 second prize - $100.00 third prize

The first place winner will paint the mural at full scale on the village wall this summer, to be completed by July 1st, 1996. Area art students may aid the design competition winner in painting the full size mural if the winner desires. A $500.00 paint/supplies allowance will be awarded to the winner for the mural painting execution.

U-M Study Shows Most Michigan Doctors Support Euthanasia

Most Michigan physicians would legalize physician-assisted suicide rather than ban it, according to a year-long University of Michigan study published in the Feb. 1 issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

The report was based on responses of 1,119 physicians and 998 members of the general public, surveyed in 1994 and 1995 by U-M research scientist Jerald G. Bachman and colleagues. The surveys asked whether the Michigan Legislature, which has been confronting the issue for several years, should ban all physician-assisted suicide or legalize it under various conditions.

Multiple versions of questionnaires were used in order to explore various options for legalization, and to check for possible effects of different questions wordings. However, results were highly similar across questionnaires, so they were combined for these analyses. For both the physician and public samples, the margin of error is 3 percent.

When asked to choose between closely regulated physician-assisted suicide and a complete ban, 56 percent of physicians and 66 percent of the general public chose legalization, 37 percent of physicians and 26 percent of the public thought it should be banned, and small proportions were uncertain.

Physicians were given a wider range of choices later in their questionnaires. In response, 40 percent favored a law permitting physician-assisted suicide, 17 percent favored a law banning it, and 37 percent favored having no law, leaving it either to the doctor-patient relationship (22 percent) or to medical professional regulations or guidelines (15 percent).

When asked whether they themselves would be willing to participate in physician-assisted suicide, or in voluntary euthanasia (in which the physician rather than the patient "takes the final action") 52 percent of physicians said they would not participate in either,

13 percent said they might participate in only assisted suicide, and 22 percent said they might participate in both. (Ten percent were uncertain, and 2 percent preferred not to answer.)

Among those physicians who would not participate themselves, 43 percent said they would be willing to refer patients to another physician, while 38 percent would not (and 19 percent were uncertain).

Their surveys gave people several chances to express their preferences for different plans or different types of controls and safeguards. "Physicians, as well as the general public, were most supportive of plans which included careful consultations with other physicians and extensive additional safeguards," Bachman pointed out.

The authors noted that their results have several policy implications. "On the one hand, given the overall stability of our findings during a year when assisted suicide was widely debated in Michigan, it appears unlikely that any new plan for legalization could win over large numbers of heretofore reluctant physicians, voters or legislators."

"On the other hand, physicians who support carefully safeguarded legalization of physician-assisted suicide clearly outnumber those who support a total ban, and the same is true for Michigan adults in general. Moreover, many would also support voluntary euthanasia, especially for patients unable to act for themselves.

"These complex issues should not be decided by opinion polls," the authors concluded, "but neither should political decision makers simply ignore the strongly held views of those who will be most affected by legislative decisions on this question — physicians and their potential patients."

Bachman and co-investigators Kirsten H. Alceser, David J. Doukas, Richard L. Lichtenstein and Amy D. Corning are all affiliated with the U-M Institute for Social Research. Doukas is also at the U-M Medical School Department of Family Practice, and Lichtenstein is also at the U-M School of Public Health. Co-investigator Howard Brody is a professor of family practice at Michigan State University, and also was the chairman of the Michigan Commission on Death and Dying.

The research was funded by a grant from the Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Michigan Foundation.

GOLF TIP OF THE WEEK
Many golfers take a winter or spring golf trip. You will be playing for the first time after a long layoff. You will be facing unfamiliar courses and conditions. Don't take your scores too seriously, and don't worry too much about your swing. Making drastic changes during this "vacation" could set you back when the "real" golf season begins back home.

Local Vet Offers New Hope for Pets

New technology will give pet owners a better chance to avoid the heartbreak of losing a dog or cat, without even needing to call on a Pet Detective like Ace Ventura.

Chelsea Veterinarian Dr. W.C. Lane explained that a new procedure, nearly painless for the animal receiving it, allows veterinarians to implant a small microchip between the pet's shoulder blades.

The harmless chip, roughly the size of a grain of rice, adheres to its spot within the animal's body, though the pet cannot feel its presence.

A ten-digit identification number is encoded on the chip, and can be detected by passing a hand-held scanner (similar to scanners used in grocery stores) over the pet's spine.

Lane Animal Hospital in Chelsea acquired a scanner several months ago and last week donated a newly purchased one to the Chelsea Police Department. Veterinarian offices and police stations are two places lost pets are often taken by those who find and cannot identify them.

Humane Societies and animal-control facilities are also places that typically receive lost animals. More and more of these agencies are using the pet scanners. Three different companies produce these scanners: Humane Societies typically have all three versions, so taking a lost pet there would likely assure that a "chipped" animal could be identified.

When a lost pet is brought to a location with a scanner, the identification code is retrieved and forwarded to a national data-base compiled by the American Kennel Club. The data-base is accessible through a 1-800 number 24 hours per day, 365 days per year.

The AKC matches the pet's identification code to the name and address of the owner, and contacts the owner to tell them the location of the lost animal.

Lane explained the benefit of getting a pet "chipped."

"It would mean that, let's say for example they took their dog up to Houghton Lake and he got away from them up there and the animal control people at Houghton Lake found the dog.

CHELSEA VETERINARIAN Dr. W.C. Lane presented a pet scanner to Police Chief Lenard McDougall. Dr. Lane donated the scanner, which can identify lost animals if owners use a new procedure inserting a microchip in between a pet's shoulder blades.

"Hopefully they would have one of these scanners, or a veterinarian in the locality or the police department would have it, and they could scan the dog and when that (identification) number was readable, they could call the (1-800) number and find the dog's (home) immediately," Lane said.

A pet owner pays roughly $40 to have the chip installed by a veterinarian, and a nominal one-time fee to have lifetime pet identification information listed in the AKC data-base.

A tag listing both the identification code and the 1-800 phone number is supplied as well. While a lost pet can slip its collar and lose the informational tag, the microchip is permanent.

How Teenage Pregnancy Changed the Lives of Three Local Teens

(Editor's Note: This article is intended to localize a national problem and compel youth to consider the consequences of teen sex.)

By Michelle Rogers
Associate Editor

Kate Steele of Chelsea feels very strongly that parents shouldn't assume their teenage children aren't having sex. Statistically, the odds are against that.

According to a Teen Behavior and Attitude Survey administered at Dexter High School last year, 60 percent of the seniors admitted they were having sex. Of that number, 46 percent said they have had sex four or more times.

"I think (parents) should realize things aren't the same as when they were in high school," Kate said. She estimates 70 to 80 percent of the teenage population is having sex. Kate thinks parents should talk to their children about sex early on and let them know where they stand on the issue and the consequences involved.

Kate Steele and Roseanna, (who requested her last name not be used), both 1995 Chelsea High School graduates, and Jessica Oliverio, a 1993 Dexter High graduate, are living with those consequences. All three are teenage mothers.

"I think people pass a lot of judgment and that was really hard to deal with," admits Kate, now a freshman at Eastern Michigan University.

Kate said she found students and parents she knew to be more supportive than strangers. "I didn't like the rumors or the people that didn't know me passing judgment," she said.

For Roseanna, the struggle was with her mother more so than with classmates, teachers or parents.

"I was scared she would kick me out or something or make the house so cold and hostile I wouldn't want to live there anymore."

Roseanna left her mother's home and stayed with another family for the first three months of her pregnancy. She said it was her mother's doubt that her teenage daughter could raise a child that strained their relationship.

"My mother feared I would live up to the irresponsible-teenage-mother stereotype, and the full burden of financial and emotional responsibility associated with raising the child would fall on her. She feared that Alexandria's best interests would not be met because she wouldn't benefit from either parents' influence in her life," Roseanna said.

Jessica's situation was a little different than Kate and Roseanna's. She had graduated from Dexter High six months prior to finding out she was pregnant. As a result, she avoided some of the school-yard rumors. "I am sure people talked. Some would say 'I heard you were pregnant.' What made it easier was that I was already out of school," she said.

Roseanna discovered she was pregnant Dec. 14, 1994. She had been dating a local boy, but they broke up a few weeks before she discovered the news. Roseanna said they were having unprotected sex and both knew there was a chance she could be pregnant.

Kate and her boyfriend, a 1992 Chelsea High graduate, on the other hand, sought information at Planned Parenthood before having sex. Kate was taking birth control pills when she got pregnant. But she was unaware that antibiotics lessen the effect of the pill.

The news of her pregnancy proved to be devastating. "I was just in disbelief. I suspected anyway, that's why I was taking (a home pregnancy test) but I thought it's not happening. I was very scared. After disbelief it was just fear," she said.

Kate followed up the results of three positive home pregnancy tests with a physician-administered test at Planned Parenthood. Kate said she chose to go to a clinic rather than her own family doctor because she feared confidentiality may be compromised in her small town. She attributes this fear to living in such a close-knit community, where she says rumors travel fast.

Like Kate, when Roseanna confirmed results from a home pregnancy test, she couldn't believe it. "It was disbelief. This can't be happening to me and 'Oh my God, I'll lose my mom.' I figured she would be so mad."

Roseanna waited one week before telling her parents, who are divorced. Kate, however, told her mother immediately. She said her boyfriend told his parents right away too.

"Fear was definitely his reaction too," Kate said, explaining their relationship was uneasy by that point. "The first thing he wanted to do was tell his parents, and we would go from there."

Kate's mother, Sarah, said she feared for her daughter and the teen's future. "I was so scared for Kate. She was so young and had so much to look forward to," Sarah said. "I asked myself could she handle the responsibility, the lifetime commitment to this child, the long-term relationship to the baby's father? Would she resent her decision to have the baby, could she handle the small town gossip, and could we?"

Sarah said she was sur-

TEENAGE MOTHERS Roseanna and Kate, both 1995 Chelsea High School graduates, are facing the consequences of teen sex. Both became pregnant during their last year in high school and are struggling as young mothers. Pictured with Roseanna on the left is her daughter Alexandria and on the right with Kate is her daughter Olivia.

prised at her initial reaction when Kate broke the news. "When Kate told me of her suspicions of being pregnant it tested all of my beliefs about what I thought I would do if this situation ever happened. I told all my children I did not want them to ever have to face making a decision in regards to abortion as I never wanted that to be something they would have to live with and I did not believe in that as a choice of birth control. Never did I want a grandchild of mine to be aborted. Well, what popped into my mind immediately? Abortion."

Sarah says it was fear that drove her initial reaction. She managed to overcome that feeling and stand by Kate's side, whatever her decision.

Like the Chelsea teens, Jessica's test results were shocking. She and her boyfriend had been engaging in unprotected sex when she decided to talk to her doctor about getting on the pill. It was during that office visit that she discovered she was already pregnant.

"When I found out I was pregnant, I cried and cried. I couldn't believe it," she said.

Her parents were upset, too, but accepted her decision to have the baby. "I told them and my mom cried. They said they wanted a better life for me, but they said they would support me," Jessica said. "I had big plans for myself, but now in order to accomplish my goals, it's going to take a little longer."

Jessica and her boyfriend were living together at the time, but like the other teens, they were having problems within their relationship. "He was just shocked; but he said we'd deal with it," she said. But Jessica moved out and back home a short time after.

Both Kate and Roseanna said they had very different expectations about what they thought they would do if they were pregnant compared to what they actually chose to do.

Roseanna said she was sure she would have an abortion if she felt she wasn't mature enough to care for a child. "It was different all of a sudden when it happened," she conceded.

Roseanna said she felt strongly that it was irresponsible to get pregnant and she was not going to follow up the situation with what she viewed for herself as an even more irresponsible act.

The baby's father was out of her life and Roseanna said she knew she was on her own. "I didn't know how I would raise the child. I just knew I had to," she said.

Kate said she thought if she ever became pregnant she would give the baby up for adoption. "We didn't actually sit down and say 'what would happen if,'" she said. "When I sat there and thought about it, the only reason I would give her up for adoption was financially."

Kate said it was the tremendous support her and her boyfriend's family gave that helped her make the decision to keep the baby. "A lot of people offered to help. They had things their children had they could pass down and I knew I had the family support," she said.

Jessica said she never considered anything but going through with the pregnancy and keeping the child. "Having an abortion was not a choice I felt I could live with, nor adoption," she said.

Kate and Roseanna admit it was hard to attend high school while being pregnant, from the gamut of emotions they felt to the physical changes to the stares and whispers. Kate said she was so sleepy during classes she had to shorten her schedule to half a day.

"I felt alone, so that was hard," she said. "Teachers and students were supportive, but I could still tell when I walked in the room, I could tell when they were talking about me," Kate said. "I found out who my true friends were."

From was especially hard for the popular basketball player and honor roll student. Kate was eight months pregnant at the time, and dateless. She went with a group of friends, but found herself feeling very alone. No one asked her to dance, which she said she could understand, but it still made her feel bad. The feelings were intensified by her emotional state. "I would cry over the dumbest things—over commercials and things like that," she said.

Roseanna, a Chelsea student attending technical classes through the South and West Washtenaw Consortium, said she avoided some of the whispers because she was taking classes at another school most of the day. She was also under a lot of stress and says she probably didn't even notice. She did not escape the judgmental eye of some of her friends' parents, however. The parents of a few male friends questioned their sons if the baby was their child.

Roseanna said morning sickness was one of the tougher battles. Unlike Kate, who said the feeling would go away when she ate crackers, Roseanna suffered intense morning sickness. Her automotive teacher was understanding, she said, by allowing her to leave class when the fumes made her feel worse.

Kate's day of reckoning came earlier than Roseanna's the summer after graduation. Olivia was born July 2, several weeks after both teens walked through commencement ceremonies side by side. Labor was easier than Kate expected. "I think I was very lucky," she said.

Kate remembers the day very clearly. She and her boyfriend were bowling at Chelsea Lanes when she went into labor at 9:30 p.m. A mere three hours later, Olivia was born at St. Joseph Mercy Hospital in Ann Arbor. But because it was so fast, Kate said it was also scary. There was no time to think, and no time for pain medication. By Kate's side was both her parents and her boyfriend.

Roseanna's daughter, Alexandria, was born during the Chelsea Fair, Aug. 23. Labor began at 11:45 p.m. and Alexandria was born nearly 16 hours later at the University of Michigan Hospital. Roseanna admits she felt uncomfortable and was in great pain. But her mother was there. They had reconciled six months earlier and Roseanna was living back at home.

Jessica gave birth to daughter Kayla after 12 hours of labor at the University of Michigan Hospital. "I was scared because I didn't know what to expect," she admits.

Jessica's parents and her boyfriend were there to help her through the birthing process. A frightening moment occurred when the doctor decided to give the young mother morphine to ease her pain and the baby was born just 45 minutes later. "It was scary. I knew everything wasn't OK," she said, despite her mother's assurance. The baby was born with the affects of morphine. Doctors gave the infant a shot to reverse the effects and kept her in intensive care over night. Everything turned out all right, Jessica says. Kayla is perfectly normal.

With pregnancy behind them, all three girls have embraced teenage parenthood on their own. Kate continues to have the emotional support of her daughter's father, but she lives on her own. Student loans help pay for her education, rent and bills. The young mother relies on both sets of grandparents, her boyfriend's grandmother and his sister to provide child care while she attends classes at EMU.

Roseanna lives at home with her mother. She is a pre-engineering student at Washtenaw Community College and also works. Her education, which she would like to continue at the University of Michigan, is being supported through scholarships and grants.

Jessica, now 21, lives at home with her parents and is neither working nor going to college because she feels it's important to spend time with Kayla through the first years. "I want to be there to teach her how to read, talk and walk," she said. Jessica hopes to re-enroll in beauty school next fall. Her relationship with the baby's father is iffy. "We're still having a difficult time," she said.

All three young women say they wouldn't be able to raise their children without all the support extended to them. Roseanna says Deborah Vaughn-Walker at Washtenaw Community College's Adult Resource Center helped her tremendously when it came to school. Because Alexandria was born just five days before classes started, Roseanna said she didn't have the energy to get books and other supplies needed to attend school. "She did everything, so all I needed to do was get to class," Roseanna said.

Kate sought help from Corner Health Center, a teen health facility in Ypsilanti that welcomes girls ages 12 to 21. The center serves as a full health clinic for teenage mothers and their children. Debbie Goodman, social work and infant support services coordinator, says the center is funded through state and federal money, Medicare, grants and donations. It has been around for nearly 15 years and

The Way It Was

In this studio posed photograph, E. E. Shaver captured for posterity three of the nearly 50 young ladies and men who participated in Chelsea's "Merchants and Ladies Carnival" in December 1889.

The costumes look very elaborate, and certainly could have been an activity to beat the winter doldrums. Pictured, left to right, are Miss Ida Speer, Miss Nellie Maroney and Miss Eva Conk. Ida represents the barber—note the shaving mug strung around her waist and the razor hanging around her neck, and perhaps the pole at her feet is for a ring toss game ("Eder" was a local barber at that time). Nellie, who was known as Ida's very best friend, shows off the Poultry business (I won't guess where she gathered the feathers from), and Eva has borrowed E. E. Shaver's local family portraits of the time and fastened them to her dress. Some of the other merchants represented were: Bank, Dryer, Drugs, Cigars, Dry Goods, Hardware, Butcher, Millinery, Coopers, Grocer, Chelsea House, Insurance, Post Office, Standard and Herald. The names of each person with their merchant assignment were carefully recorded by Ida and attached to her keepsake photograph.

JORDAN DYER of Chelsea recorded three consecutive pins last Saturday at the Chelsea quad. Here he works on an opponent from an earlier meet.

Chelsea Wrestlers Continue Excelling

Chelsea wrestlers continued their fine season last week with an easy 56-21 victory over the Tecumseh Indians on Thursday and wins over Jackson, Lumen, Christi, Belleville, and Manchester on Saturday at the annual Chelsea Quad.

Chelsea was scheduled to host the Pinckney Pirates last night in their final Southeastern Conference match. The league meet is Saturday in Tecumseh. With a win last night, Chelsea would be in second place at 5-1 heading into the meet. They need to finish ahead of undefeated Saline to tie for the championship.

Chelsea coach Kerry Kargel said he is trying to figure out how to configure his lineup for Saturday's meet. He could gamble and move some kids out of their usual weight classes if he believes it would result in more points for his team.

"I really think it's going to come down to how many of our kids place third and fourth," Kargel said.

In the league meet, each wrestler is seeded according to his record in the league. Chelsea has about five wrestlers who haven't lost.

Results of the Tecumseh match follow. Chelsea won by forfeit at 103, 125, and 215. They lost by forfeit at 135.

112: Dan Blough (C) pinned Steve Stoddard in 5:34.

119: Kevin Bollinger (C) pinned Tom Hawkins in 4:28.

130: Ray Hatch (C) won a technical fall, 15-0, over Zac Van Sickle.

140: Brent Young (C) decided Tyan Miller, 3-1.

145: Jamie Holzhausen (C) lost 6-1 to Matt Bolter.

152: Jason Shurmur (C) was pinned by Matt Malloy in 2:51.

160: Mike Alber (C) pinned P.J. Hunt in 2:17.

171: Mike Thayer (C) pinned Mario Bedeschi in 1:13.

189: Jordan Dyer (C) pinned Dan DeClerco in :37.

275: Joe Barkman (C) was pinned by Jason Mensing in :40.

Last Saturday, Kargel gave several junior varsity wrestlers the chance to move up and the Bulldogs still beat each opponent handily. Scores were Chelsea 51, Lumen Christi 24, Chelsea 43, Belleville 26, and Chelsea 59, Manchester 9.

Todd Pearsall and Dan Graff split time at 103 pounds, with Pearsall winning twice and Graff once.

Blough was 2-1 on the day at 112 pounds, including a pin over Manchester's Mike Hest. Bollinger was 3-0 at 119 pounds, with a major decision and two pins.

Aaron Smith of Chelsea was 2-1 at 125 pounds, including two forfeits.

At 130, Hatch was 3-0, including two pins.

Koby Foytik was 2-0 with two pins at 135.

Young was 2-1 at 140 with a pin and a major decision.

Holzhausen was 2-1 at 145 pounds with one pin.

Jamie Bauer and Kevin Bloomsaat each wrestled at 152 pounds and neither boy won.

At 160, Dan Dault and Mike Alber wrestled and lost.

Thayer was 2-1 at 171 pounds, including a pin. His loss was in overtime.

Dyer continued his dominance at 189 pounds with three pins. He has lost only one match all season.

Andy Kargel was 2-0 with a pin at 215 pounds. Isaac Robinson got his first varsity start at the same weight and was 0-1.

Matt Kalmbach was 2-0 at 275 pounds, and Barkman was 0-1.

The team district tournament is in Chelsea next Thursday and is one of the most difficult in the state with Jackson Northwest, Dexter, and Pinckney. The winner moves on to the regionals.

COACH KERRY KARGEL discusses strategy with Brent Young, one of his fine young wrestlers. Kargel is working on his strategy for this weekend's Southeastern Conference meet, as the Bulldogs must place ahead of Saline to at least share in the league title.

Beach Wrestlers Pin Milan, Lose To Pirates

On Tuesday, Jan. 30, Beach Middle School wrestlers traveled to Pinckney. Pinckney won the home match, winning 14 of the 20 matches. Chelsea won six matches, all on pins.

Winning for Chelsea were Joel Kapp at 100 pounds, Mike Vargo at 115 pounds, Mark Polzin at 145 pounds, Shawn Dyer at 155 pounds, and Alan Lowe at 185 pounds.

On Thursday, Feb. 1, Beach wrestlers hosted Milan.

Chelsea won this final home meet of the season, winning 13 of the 21 matches held. Seventh graders who won matches were Ben Vogel at 120 pounds, John Marshall at 120 pounds, Tony Scheffer at 130 pounds, and Rob Molina at 137 pounds. Several eighth graders won matches; those winning eighth graders were Ben Hicks at 90 pounds, Jon Baird at 90 pounds, Joel Kapp at 100 pounds, Jeremy Price at 110 pounds, Justin Nadolny at 110 pounds, Frank Morrone at 125 pounds, Andrew McGuire wrestling up at 185 pounds, Steve Lafferty wrestling up at 185 pounds, and Alan Lowe at Heavyweight.

The last dual meet of the middle school season was on Tuesday, Feb. 6, at Tecumseh.

This Saturday, Feb. 10, the middle school wrestlers travel to Jackson Northwest for the Northwest Tournament. It holds two divisions of wrestling, allowing each team to bring two wrestlers per weight-class to the competition. For the Chelsea team with 32 members this is the best chance for the majority of the team members to be able to wrestle in the same event. Chelsea traditionally does well at this tournament and is looking forward to end the season on a winning note.

Varsity Basketball Splits Two

Chelsea Bulldogs varsity basketball team dunked Fowlerville 73-45 on Tuesday, Jan. 30 but Milan edged Chelsea 52-48 Friday, Feb. 2.

Hosting Fowlerville, Chelsea controlled the game from start to finish. After taking a 12-10 advantage after one quarter, "We steadily increased the lead throughout the game," said Chelsea coach Robin Raymond.

A balanced effort keyed the win as all 12 Chelsea players scored and shared the offensive load.

"We had real balanced scoring. Most of the points came within the offense. We had 14 assists out of 27 field goals. The assists really were distributed, seven kids had assists. I think that we were looking for the open pass, making the extra pass to get the better shot opportunity. And I thought we did that," Raymond explained.

On the defensive end of the floor, the Bulldogs held Fowlerville to 27 percent shooting while they shot 48 percent themselves.

Nick Brink led the offense with 17 points, Kevin Cross scored 16, Kevin Holmes compiled 10 points, five steals and four assists, and Scott Colvin provided nine points and 11 rebounds.

Friday at Milan, Raymond said both teams looked a step slow, and squandered opportunities resulted in a 52-48 Milan victory.

"We had some spurts but not enough spurts to take control of the game. And the game certainly was there to take control of," Raymond observed.

Trailing 42-34 entering the final period, the Bulldogs went on an 8-1 run to slice the Big Red lead to just one 43-42, with 4:20 left to play. But the comeback stalled there.

"We had several opportunities to take the lead but we would commit a turnover or the shot wouldn't go in the basket. We had a season-high in turnovers with 25," Raymond said.

Brink scored 14 points, Cross 10 and Holmes nine in the loss, which dropped Chelsea's record to 5-8 overall and 3-5 in the SEC.

The Bulldogs hosted Lincoln Tuesday and travel to Stockbridge tomorrow night.

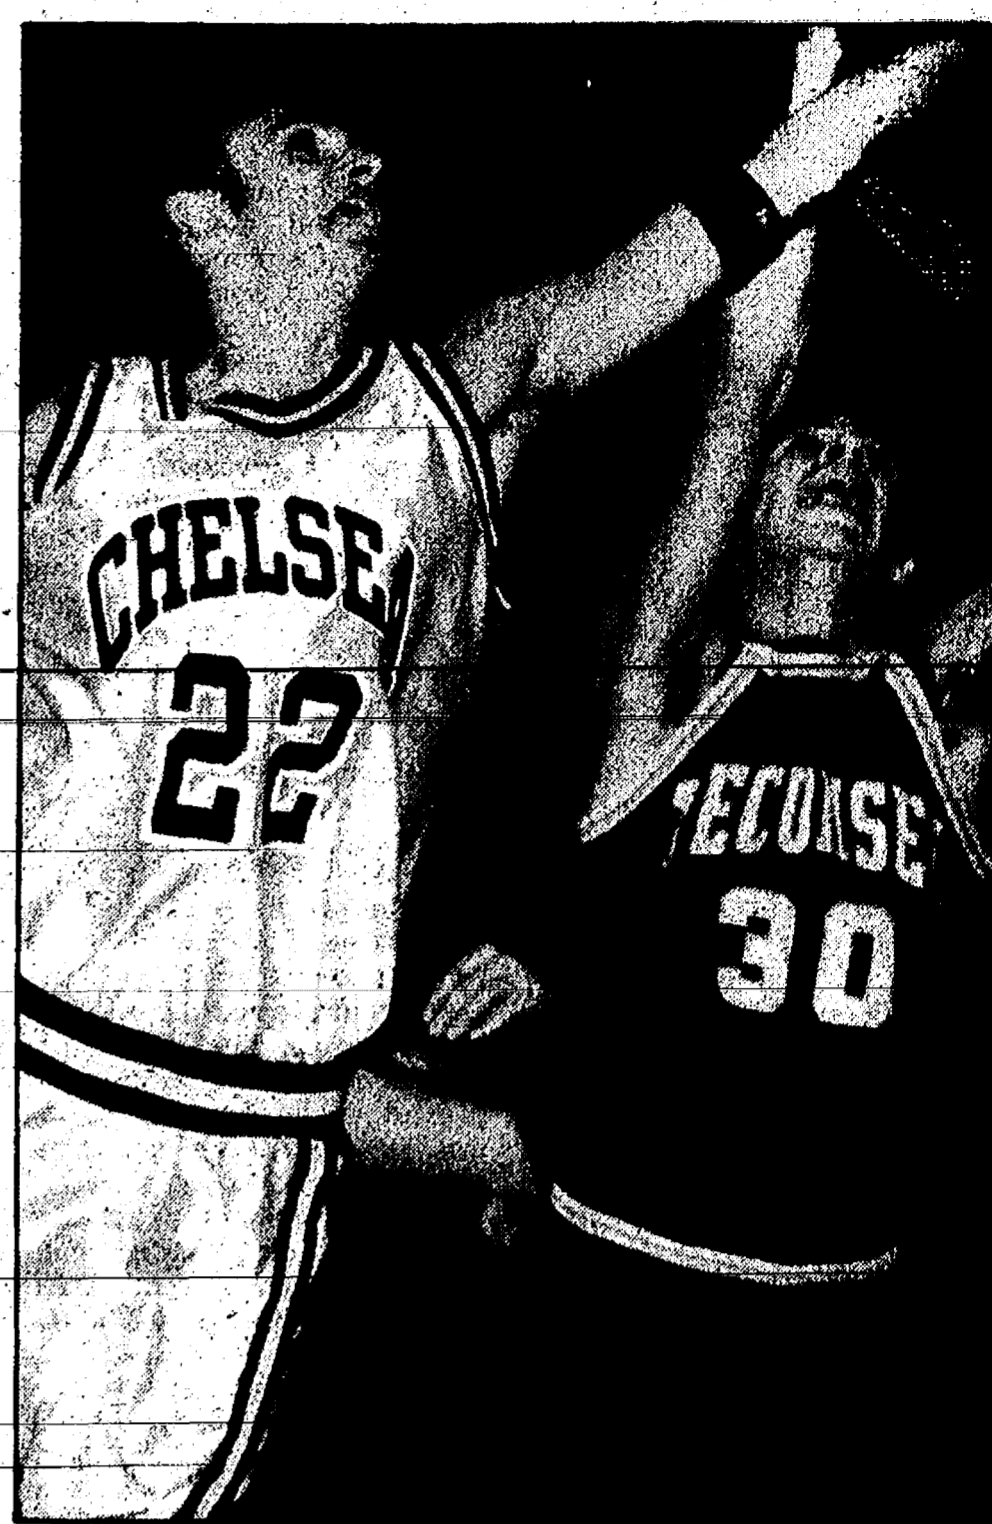

To defeat Stockbridge, Raymond explained, "We need to control the backboards, control the ball and get good shots when we have the ball. We can't be committing 25 turnovers again. We need 15 or less. And we need to (shoot) 45 percent or 50 percent. Normally, when those two things happen, we play pretty well."

Freshmen Fall To Fowlerville

The Bulldogs fell by 9 points at Saline on Monday, Jan. 29 and lost a heartbreaker to Fowlerville at home the next night.

On Tuesday, Jan. 30 Fowlerville broke a 48-48 deadlock in the final moments, but, trailing by two, the Bulldogs had the ball out of bounds at half-court with 0:03 left and a chance for the last shot. A turnover thwarted that chance and Fowlerville escaped with a 50-48 victory.

Chelsea coach Kyle Plank said Chelsea, whose record stands a 5-8, needs greater consistency to regain its winning ways.

CHELSEA'S NICK BRINK drives hard toward the basket.

Second Half Troubles Plague JV Basketball

Second-half troubles didn't stop Chelsea from defeating Fowlerville last week, but Milan took advantage of defensive lapses in the second-half to outscore the Bulldogs.

Tuesday, Jan. 30 Chelsea started fast, blitzing visiting Fowlerville with a 25-point second quarter and taking a 34-20 lead at half-time. "We fastbroke well in the second quarter (and) had real balanced scoring," said Chelsea coach Mark Scheese, noting that eight different Bulldogs scored in the quarter.

Despite being outscored after the intermission, Chelsea held on for a 54-51 win.

Adam Erskine scored 12 points and grabbed 14 rebounds, Sean Stickney, Chris Herter and Brian Groesser combined for 23 points and Matt Adams snatched 10 rebounds to go with five points.

Friday at Milan a 30-22 half-time lead wasn't enough to hold off the Big Reds, who scored 49 points in the third and fourth quarters on their way to a 71-64 win.

Scheese observed that 64 points should be enough to win. "We did not play defense in the second half. We didn't move our feet and do what we needed to do on defense," he said.

Groesser and Erskine scored 17 points apiece, Sam Compton added 10 and Adams seven.

The Bulldogs record stands a 5-8 overall, 2-6 in the Southeastern Conference.

By Donna Gundie-Krieg
Special Writer

— Just as their coach Dan Montgomery predicted, the Chelsea women's varsity volleyball team won both league matches at home this week against Saline and Tecumseh. They also placed fifth out of 10 teams at the Northville High School Invitational Tournament on Saturday.

at home versus Tecumseh. Again, Chelsea won in three games: 15-12, 5-15 and 15-9.

Petty led the team with 16 digs and two aces. Holdsworth had 15 digs, Montgomery had 14 kills. Wehrwein had three kills and served 21/21 with one ace, Kemnitz had four kills and senior Carrie Buss had two aces.

"Everything is still very 12-15.

"Our team has talent, but we need consistency," said Montgomery. "Our performance is up and down, which is common in volleyball."

Tournament leaders for serving were Buss with 28/30 good serves, Montgomery with 43/46 good serves and eight aces, Petty with eight aces and junior Alice Vogel with 19/20 good serves.

Montgomery led the offense with 82/93 successful attacks and 34 kills for the day. Kemnitz had 20 kills, Wehrwein had 18 kills, junior Jennifer Space had 16 kills and Buss had nine kills.

The following team members scored digs: Buss-47, Petty-33, Holdsworth-42, Wehrwein-34 and Kemnitz-33.

Montgomery noted that tonight, the Bulldogs host Pinckney and will hold "Parents' Night."

"This is an evening designed to honor the parents of the team members," he said. "They have given us tremendous support and sacrifices throughout the year."

close in the Southeastern Conference," said Montgomery. "Our next few games will be crucial."

On Saturday, the Bulldogs placed fifth out of 10 teams participating in the Northville High School Invitational Tournament.

In pool play, Chelsea split with Farmington Harrison, 15-11 and 6-15; beat Southfield 15-8 and 15-6; lost to North Farmington 11-15 and 4-15 and beat Northville 15-10 and 15-1.

"I was very surprised about our performance against Northville, who is an excellent team," said Montgomery. "Both teams played very well, but somehow we ended up with all the points."

The luck ran out in the championship playoff quarter-finals, where Redford Union beat Chelsea, 15-12, 6-15 and

Volleyball

of Four

Chelsea freshman girls volleyball team played Milan on Jan. 22, winning 15-1 and 15-1. The first game of the match Celeste Bycraft served 12 straight points and Shontay Young served three to ice the game. In the second game, Megan Marshall had seven serves. Milan had a very hard time returning Chelsea's serves.

On Jan. 25 Chelsea traveled to Dexter and lost in two games, 15-6, 15-13. Dexter had a very strong team. Chelsea had trouble getting pumped up in the first game and didn't serve as well as usual. In the second game, Chelsea started playing well. Ingrid Biedron sent over short serves followed by one long one, to give Chelsea nine points. Angie White had a great game at the net with eight spikes. Miranda Harris had 14 sets.

On Jan. 29, Chelsea hosted Saline, defeating them 15-3, 3-15 and then 15-3.

In the first game, Karessa Johnson, Mirand Harris, and Shontay Young all had strong serves.

In the second game, Chelsea could not get passes to the setter plus serving was off.

In the third game, Amy McCalla, the middle hitter, had her best game of the year and played well at the net. Karla Dettling, another middle hitter, blocked serves and spiked well.

On Feb. 2, the freshman girls beat Tecumseh in two games, 15-4 and 15-13. The first game came easy for the Bulldogs as serving was consistent and so was the passing.

Meghan Holefska played a good passing game and showed an all-around fine game. Tina Wiese had some strong hitting. In the second game, Chelsea started out slow but came back with the win. Heather Kemnitz and Jenna Sparaco played hard at the net. Allison Knight did a good job as blocker.

Beach Middle School seventh grade volleyball team had two successful matches last week. They met Pinckney on the home court on Jan. 30. The first game's score was 11-5. The second game, Pinckney came from behind to win 7-11. The other two game's scores were 11-8 and 11-0. Michelle Dettling led serving with seven points. Laura Baird served six points and Josie Wells and Emily Royce each served five points. Feb. 1, the team traveled to Milan and won the match in three games. Each game had a score of 11-5. Dettling served five points. Jesse Cole and Wells each served four points. Caitlin Bledron, Ann Larder, Sally Compton and Tia Schiller each served three points and Caitlin Deis and Jennifer Dissing each served two points.

The Beach Middle School eighth grade volleyball team had a good week with victories over Pinckney and Milan for a season record of 4-1.

Outstanding serving by Liz

Menge led the team to a four game win over Pinckney with scores of 11-1, 3-11, 11-5 and 11-0. Menge scored 17 points while serving 18 for 18. Lindsey Brink added six points, Missy Smith four and Valerie Schiller and Betty Westcott combined for six more. Brenda Newman and Lindsay Powers led in assists and Shelly Clemons led with four of the team's 16 attacks.

At Milan Thursday, the team came home victorious in three games, with scores of 11-2, 11-4 and 11-7. The team served 89 percent. They were led by Brink with six points, Molly Edman with five, Westcott and Meredith Davis with four each and Jenni Martin and Cassi Palmer with three apiece. Powers led the team with five assists.

Our interview a few weeks ago with Dave "The Wave" Mucino, Chelsea resident and world-class extreme skier, has inspired us here in the Chelsea Standard sports department. "Extreme" athletes like Dave The Wave ski over cliffs, jump off mountains, climb up glaciers and wind-surf among waves roughly the size of Nebraska.

~~Don't misjudge them, though. These people are bold, but they wouldn't do anything certifiably crazy, like wonder if Congress gets paid during government shutdowns.~~

Regardless, this is exciting stuff. What would high school sports look like in the "extreme?"

Displaying our usual dedication to serving you, the faithful reader, we spent about five minutes thinking about it. This is what we came up with.

Swimming: No Water! Is this idea wild or what? Instead of water, pools would be filled with those little plastic packages of ketchup fast-food restaurants give out to mask the taste of their burgers.

Not only would this be extreme to the max, it would save money. Fast-food workers compete to see how many extra ketchup they can give out anyway, so President Clinton could just save them whenever he goes to McDonalds and donate the packages to swimming pools.

Wrestling: Get this! Instead of grappling against each other, each wrestler would take on an a standard opponent. Wouldn't that be more fair?

For instance, each school could have its own Newt Gingrich, and wrestlers would compete to see who could squeeze a compliment for Hillary Clinton out of him in the shortest amount of time.

Volleyball: Shouldn't volleyball be more like disco? Instead of spiking over the net, volleyballers could aim their missiles at a mirror ball suspended above the two teams.

Each direct hit on the mirror ball would unleash a recorded song by Donna Summer, the Bee Gees or K.C. and the Sunshine Band. One point would be awarded for the team which knew the dance move associated with the song. Teams could score an extra bonus point by naming a scene in "Saturday Night Fever" that featured the song.

Basketball: This sport has major "extreme" potential. For example, placing trampolines in front of each hoop and awarding extra points for the number of flips a player does before sinking a basket.

But our favorite idea would make the sport far more challenging.

Before "cashing in" a three-pointer, players would have to fight off a swarm of IRS agents, who think that if any extra points are awarded for shooting from long range, the government should get a cut.

Pretty bold stuff, huh? We hope that somewhere out there, hurtling down some radical ski slope, Dave the Wave is proud of us.

Chelsea Aquatic Club Beaten

Chelsea Aquatic Club Swim Team made a good showing Wednesday, Jan. 31, but were outdistanced by a strong Dexter Aquatic Club. The meet, held at the Dexter pool ended with a final score of 493-298.

Coach John Crispin reported, "We swam very well with some good times. I especially liked the way the entire 9-10 age group performed. The final score shows what happens when a middle-sized team (75 members) swims against a large team (140 members), but we don't control that. I'd like to make a special mention of Ashley Augustine for an outstanding 50-yard breaststroke, and the entire 9-10 girls team."

Following are swim times and places by events for the Chelsea swimmers:

Teen Pregnancy Experiences

is the oldest and largest facility of its kind in the state.

Shirley Bitters, who teaches Human Development at Dexter High, says the center is a great resource for teenage mothers.

Kate and her daughter are participating in the "A Star Is Born" program. Both are videotaped by Corner Health Center staff as a means of teaching child development. Goodman says it's a way to show the young mothers how their babies are changing month to month and explain why.

The case load at Corner Health Center has been climbing dramatically over the years. Goodman reports 35 teen mothers had appointments with an obstetrician at the center last week. Of that number, 10 cases are new. The center also carries a case load of 120 teen mothers participating in the Infant Support Services parenting program.

Bitters reports there are two pregnant teens at Dexter High this year. There were three at Chelsea High last year and two in 1994. "We really encourage them strongly to continue (school)," Bitters said.

Kate says she turned to the Corner Health Center because she didn't feel in control of her life. "They have so much help that they can give you that I felt I had the support," she said. And not only does the center provide health care for mother and child, Kate says if she needs anything, such as a highchair for Olivia, the center can arrange for it.

But despite all the help and support, the young mothers wouldn't recommend their experience to any teenager. It's better suited for adults in a caring and committed relationship, they say.

"I kind of feel caught between two worlds, the mother/parent role and still the teenager," Kate admits. She tries to keep a balance by attending college, going out with her friends once in a while and joining a co-ed fraternity. She admits she still misses out on a lot, however.

The struggles and rewards are many. "It's definitely hard to manage studying," she said. When Olivia is awake, Kate says it's hard to concentrate. She also spends a lot of time juggling her schedule with feedings, making child care arrangements and going to school.

"I don't get a night's sleep hardly ever. She wakes up in the night," Kate said.

The reward of being a mother for Kate is when Olivia smiles. "I look at her and she smiles three-fourths of the time. Seeing her so happy, seeing her learn and seeing her make others so happy is a really big reward."

Kate's mother feels her daughter made the right decision after discovering she was pregnant. "Not always do our children do what we as parents would like them to do," she said. "But I feel we made the best out of what began as a difficult time and ended in the birth of a beautiful little girl who has two wonderful parents and a wealth of family members to love her."

For Roseanna, motherhood

has been partially about proving the nay-sayers wrong and beating the odds. Roseanna was proud she managed to graduate in the top percentage of her class and go on to college despite her circumstances. She has felt even prouder proving to her mother that she can care for her own child. "I wanted to be the most special person to my child," she said.

And because she is, her family has come around, including her mother and 20-year-old sister. "Now she loves her niece, but in the beginning I think she had some of the same concerns that everyone else had that my mother would be taking care of the baby instead of me," Roseanna said.

Alexandria has given Roseanna direction and focus. "I set my priorities straight (after the birth)," she said.

Jessica admits the birth of Kayla has limited her in some ways. "I can't just pick up and go whenever I need some space. I have Kayla and her life to consider," she said. Jessica's parents help her out, however, whenever she needs them.

"I wouldn't recommend it," she says of teenage motherhood. "Before I got pregnant, I thought it wouldn't be hard. I thought (a baby) was like a little doll. It's not as easy as I thought it would be," Jessica said. "She needs my full attention all the time. Your life just isn't your own anymore," Jessica said. "You need to do for her before you do for yourself."

But there are also rewards raising Kayla, Jessica says. "She makes me laugh. I get great pleasure out of teaching her. You can teach her so much. But I feel the greatest reward is when she calls me 'ma' and runs over to give me a hug or a kiss with a big smile on her face," Jessica said.

Like Kate, Roseanna has managed to maintain somewhat of a social life. But she admits to often feeling guilty when she leaves Alexandria in another person's care. Like Jessica, she acknowledges raising a child is more difficult than she thought. Roseanna says she turns to her child care provider, mother and the family of friends for advice.

It has been a financial struggle, she says, because Alexandria's father has never provided money to care for his daughter. "I don't even call him a dad," she said.

Roseanna is understandably irritated at her former boyfriend and what she views as his stereotypical behavior as an uninvolved father. The work of child-rearing is left to her as a mother, she says, while he continues with the carefree lifestyle of a teenager uninterrupted by the responsibility of fatherhood.

The three women have learned a life's lesson and have some words of wisdom for their former schoolmates. "The best piece of advice I've heard around is, is it worth dying for to have unprotected sex," Roseanna said.

Jessica says her parents have been supportive, but warns not all are. "If you're not ready for the life-time responsibility, you should use protection when you're having sex because once you have a baby, your carefree lifestyle is gone," she cautions.

Kate says she thinks it's vital teens are aware of the consequences of teen sex, from pregnancy to disease. "I guess that's one thing I would ask myself, is it really worth it," she said.

All three agree a teen's life isn't over if she discovers she is pregnant. But it is much more difficult.

PINKNEY CAR DEALER JOHN COLONE presents the keys to a purple 1996 Dodge Grand Caravan to Purple Rose Theatre Executive Director Jeff Daniels and Development Director Judy Gallagher. Colone donated the new vehicle to the non-profit theater.

Theater Gets New Purple Van

The classic rock band The Who had the Magic Bus, and now the Purple Rose Theater in Chelsea has the Purple Van.

John Colone, owner of a Chrysler, Plymouth, Dodge, Jeep and Eagle car and truck dealership in Pinkney, donated the purple 1996 Dodge Grand Caravan, adorned with white lettering to signify the theater's ownership, to the Purple Rose last Wednesday, Jan. 31.

Executive Director Jeff Daniels and Development Director Judy Gallagher accepted the gift from Colone. The Purple Rose Theater, a non-profit company, relies on donations and fund-raisers for 50 percent of its budget, with the other half supported by ticket sales.

Krista Noye Attends National Young Leaders Conference

Krista Noye of Chelsea was selected to attend The National Young Leaders Conference from Jan. 30 - Feb. 4, in Washington, D.C. The National Young Leaders Conference is a unique leadership development program for high school students who have demonstrated leadership potential and scholastic merit. Krista, a junior at Chelsea High School, was among 350 outstanding National Scholars attending the conference from across America.

The theme of the national Young Leaders Conference was The Leaders of Tomorrow Meeting the Leaders of Today. Throughout the six-day conference, Krista interacted with key leaders and newsmakers from the three branches of government, the media and the diplomatic corps.

Highlights of the program included welcoming remarks from the Floor of the United States House of Representatives and a panel discussion with prominent journalists at the national Press Club. Scholars visited foreign embassies and received policy briefings from senior government officials. Krista also met with her senators and representatives or an appointment member of their staff to discuss important issues facing Chelsea and the nation.

To complement these special meetings and briefings, Krista participated in a number of leadership skill building activities. In one activity, "If I were President," students role-played the President, members of the Cabinet and representatives from Capitol Hill who must respond to an international crisis involving North and South Korea. Culminating the national Young Leaders Conference was the "Mock Congress," in which Scholars assumed the roles of United States Representatives by debating, amending and voting on proposed legislation on welfare reform.

The National Young Leaders Conference is sponsored by the Congressional Youth Leadership Council, a non-profit, nonpartisan educational organization. Founded in 1985, the Council is committed to "fostering and inspiring young people to achieve their full leadership potential." Over 375 Members of the United States Congress join this commitment as members of the Council's Honorary Congressional Board of Advisors. Each year, only 7,000 outstanding youth nationwide may participate in the 20 sessions of the National Young Leaders Conference.

Farm Bureau Calls For Land Preservation

The president of the state's largest farm organization identified farmland preservation as a challenge of major importance to the social and economic future of the state.

Tuscola County dairy farmer Jack Laurie, president of the Michigan Farm Bureau, said during his annual address at MFB's 76th annual meeting in Traverse City, that communities need to look at land use issues and consider how agriculture is affected by sprawl and unplanned development. "Because of our unique position as a leading industrial and tourism state, and the importance and wide diversity of our farming industry, farmers and non-farmers are having an increasing number of conflicts over land use," he said. "Few agricultural areas anywhere in the nation face the kinds of development pressures that we have in Michigan. I fear that these conflicts, if not resolved, can threaten the land resources on which the agricultural industry's prosperity is based."

Laurie described a variety of legislative initiatives that are underway to help preserve farmland and open space, but said that farmers can contribute the most to the cause of farmland preservation by getting involved in local planning and zoning decisions. "Many decisions are made at local and township planning boards that don't have agricultural representation, especially in areas where we have seen substantial increases in non-farm residents. We must be willing to get involved in our local communities to ensure that the importance of agriculture is recognized and that agriculture is protected," said Laurie.

Also worthy of protection are private property rights, Laurie said. He noted MFB's support of property rights protection measures being considered in the state Legislature. "Organizations that are opposed to strengthening private property rights may spread some misinformation about Farm Bureau's efforts," he said. "But remember the facts: protecting private property rights will not affect environmental law. Private property owners will never have the right to pollute. Legislation under consideration will not extend or change the definition of a taking or change the law as to when compensation is required. It will not affect eminent domain, interfere with normal zoning, or affect forfeiture or seizure of private property by law enforcement agencies."

On the federal level, MFB is also supporting passage of Senate Bill 605, the Omnibus Property Rights Act, according to Laurie. The act would require compensation for regulatory takings of property rights under the Endangered Species Act or Section 404 of the Clean Water Act. "For too long, farmers have been losing, without just compensation, their right to use their property. This bill corrects that problem. The federal government must refocus its environmental protection laws, indeed it must refocus the thrust of all its regulatory efforts. A key component of that refocus should be equal distribution of costs across society, not just on landowners," he said.

Money Management

Prepared by the Michigan Association of Certified Public Accountants

All the boxes have been opened, new toys examined and played with. With your child's birthday celebration waning, there's one more present to open. It's a nice check Aunt Fanny and Junior's already thinking about the new computer game he can buy. Kids certainly have lots of ideas when it comes to spending money, but how about something that doesn't involve a trip to Toys R Us? If I were 10 years old, I'd say "NOT," but there is a way to make investing money into an exciting and educational adventure for kids. It's as simple as buying your child a few shares of stock.

In fact, some folks are giving shares of stock to kids as presents these days. I recently read about a man who bought a single share of Disney stock for his new granddaughter; the framed certificate graces the wall of her nursery. "I wanted to give her something visible, to instill in her that she owns something, that people do invest," the man said. In order to get the most out of this experience, experts say it's important to do what this man did — select a stock that children can relate to.

There are, of course, dozens of companies that kids will recognize — McDonald's, PepsiCo, Mattel or Nike are just a few obvious possibilities. Have your child take part in the selection process, examining the price per share and researching how the stock has performed. If your child is a computer whiz, have him go on-line for the most up to date information. If more than one child is participating, let each choose his own stock. Then, make a game out of monitoring the stocks to see which does best. Try to figure out what caused the stock's value to increase or decrease. Finally, don't forget to make some plans for those dividend checks, when and if they come.

There are a few important details to be aware of here. A minor cannot legally own stock, but you can purchase it in a child's name by setting up a custodial account under the Uniform Gifts to Minors Act. The first $650 of income in the child's name is tax-free through the age of 14, and the next $650 in income is taxed at the child's rate of about 15 percent. Over that, income is taxed at the parent's rate, again until the child reaches 14.

Finally, let's look at some resources to help you set things up. Take Junior to the library to look for the Value Line Investment Survey, a common source of stock data and analysis. Look up phone numbers for the companies you're interested in, and ask for a copy of its annual report and its 10-K reports (required filings with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission). Look at the business section in the newspaper or pick up a financial magazine for more information. To keep expenses down, seek out one of those no-fee brokers, or ask your own broker how best to purchase the shares.

CHS Novice Debaters Shine

For the first time since Chelsea High School began sponsoring a competitive debate team in 1967, a team of first-year debaters made the quarterfinal round at the state finals.

A 7-5 record in the preliminary round put the team of Ana Morrel-Samuels and Sara Mead into the quarterfinals among the best eight Class B teams in the state.

Morrel-Samuels was voted first place speaker in the preliminary round by four judges, while Mead was named top debater by two judges.

Following the preliminary round, Chelsea fell to Brother Rice in the quarterfinals and ended placing seventh in the state.

MIKE WEISS AND TONY ROBARDS of Sugarloaf Lake were the winners of the People's Choice Award with their "Sugarloaf Chili" and took home an engraved ladle for their efforts.

Stop Those Annoying Calls

By Debbie Barrow,
Extension Home Economist

You've just put dinner on the table and the phone rings. A voice asks to speak to you, asks how you're doing and begins a sales pitch. Sound familiar?

Once we've figured out that the call is a sales call, most of us say, "Not interested, thanks!" and hang up. But according to an FCC ruling, it may be to your advantage not to hang up right away. Beginning in December 1993, the FCC ruled that each company must keep its own list of people who, when called, specifically ask not to receive future calls. The company and any of its affiliates must then refrain from calling you again.

So instead of hanging up, take the time to find out who's calling and get your name on their "don't call" list. Keep a copy of the company's name. If you do get another call from that company, you can sue the marketer for up to $500 or any monetary damages. Otherwise, you can complain to the FCC.

What the ruling doesn't make clear is how you are supposed to prove you made the verbal request. Also, several groups, including non-profit fund raisers and pollsters, are exempted from the rule. Another feature of the new law is that it prohibits sales calls between 9 p.m. and 8 a.m., restricts calls made by artificial or pre-recorded voices and bans junk fax ads.

In addition, marketers must keep their autodialers from calling emergency lines, health-care facilities, and cellular phones or beepers.

Another way you can try to get national telemarketers to leave you alone is to send your name, address, and phone number to: Telephone Preference Service, Direct Marketing Association, P.O. Box 9014, Farmingdale, NY 11735. About 3,000 companies participate in the DMA. The service won't end calls from telemarketers who don't participate in the service or from any local ones.

Candice Miller Visits Local State Office

Michigan Secretary of State Candice Miller visited the Chelsea branch office of the Secretary of State Thursday, Feb. 1.

Branch manager James McClure said Miller introduced herself to the office staff and about 10 residents and also assessed the adequacy of staffing and equipment in her half hour in Chelsea.

Plans to interview and photograph Secretary Miller were stymied because she arrived at the Chelsea branch about 45 minutes earlier than expected. She was gone before The Chelsea Standard staff arrived at the originally scheduled time.

Beware of Fraudulent Pitches On Telephone for New Services

If someone called you on the telephone one evening and offered you the chance to participate in an exciting new industry from the ground floor, what would you think?

If the person said it was an opportunity that could amount to hundreds of thousands of dollars in profit, what would you do?

According to the FCC, many people were interested enough last year to invest thousands of dollars in propositions such as these. And what did these people get for their money? Nothing.

According to the FCC, telecommunications investment seems to come out of the woodwork whenever the FCC announces a licensing opportunity for one of its wireless services. Because licenses for Wireless Cable, Personal Communications Service (PCS), Specialized Mobile Radio (SMR), and Interactive Video Data Service (IVDS) are being auctioned in the coming months, the FCC, along with the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Federal Trade Commission, are embarking on an aggressive campaign to alert consumers to fraudulent investment schemes.

Fraudulent investment companies often make initial contact with potential investors through cold calls, radio or TV advertisements or television infomercials.

The caller or the ads encourage interested investors to respond by calling a toll-free telephone number where they are then subjected to a high pressure sales pitch offering high rewards at little or no risk. The sales pitch is generally accompanied by slick promotional packets, lending an air of legitimacy to the investment scheme.

Fraudulent investment companies often target senior citizens and those least able to properly evaluate investment options.

"The people taken in by fraudulent investment schemes are led to believe that any FCC license is a guarantee of the high profits promised by the salesperson," said FCC Anti-Fraud Task Force Co-Chair Gordon Coffman.

"This is not true! The Commission does not approve any individual investment proposal, and an authorization from the FCC is not a guarantee of success in the marketplace."

The scam artist is careful not to have an ownership interest in the bidding company to avoid FCC jurisdiction. The salesperson is also careful not to emphasize that most of the money invested — sometimes up to 80 percent — goes to sales commissions and "administrative costs," leaving as little as 20 percent left to bid in the auction.

Because of their lack of capital, many of these partnerships may not be able to operate profitably for many years, if at all, and will most likely require additional capital contributions to construct and operate pursuant to any authorization they may win in an auction.

In addition, the FCC receives complaints that the perpetrators often receive the investor's money (usually from $5,000 to $20,000 per unit) and then disappear.

The FCC urges consumers to investigate all such proposals carefully, and, if they have questions about upcoming auctions, to call the FCC's auction hot line at (202) 418-1400. Inquiries or complaints about specific deceptive telemarketing investment schemes should be directed to your local state Commission on Corporations or to the National Fraud Information Center at 1-800-878-7060.

On the way to Chelsea, we made some pretty exciting discoveries.

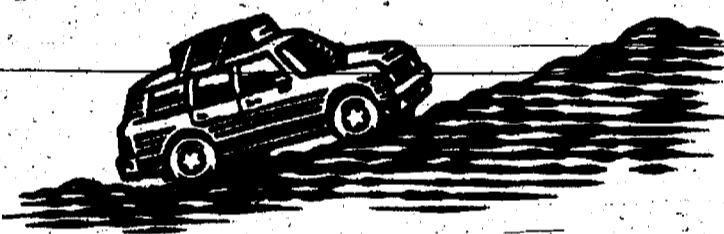

Deep inside the Venezuelan jungle, a genetic disease has plagued the inhabitants of a small village for generations. Moved by their plight, we went there to better understand the disease. Not only did we accomplish our mission, but our research led to the discovery of the gene that causes Huntington's disease. Proof again that knowledge heals.

Driven by a passion for improving health care, we've traveled to the far corners of the Earth. To places like the countryside of Japan and a small shipping town in Costa Rica. Even to outer space to conduct research.

Everything we've learned we've brought back to you, through the physicians and medical staff of the University of Michigan Medical Center.

Now we are pleased to announce that our next destination is a little closer to home. In fact, it's right in your neighborhood. Because now the U-M Medical Center has physicians and health centers near you. So you'll not only have access to the U-M Medical Center and its world-renowned facilities and programs like C.S. Mott Children's Hospital and the Comprehensive Cancer Center, you'll also have a conveniently located primary care physician for your routine care. To locate a physician near you, call 1-800-211-8181.

At the U-M Medical Center, knowledge heals. Now, we're bringing that knowledge right to your community.
