

And They're Off
Chelsea-area children had their chance to pick up their fill of candy-filled plastic Easter eggs last Saturday morning at the Chelsea Retirement Community. Some children, like two-year-old Megan Sweetland, right, managed to find a whole basket's worth. For the older kids, it was more like the Charge of the Light Brigade. More than 4,500 plastic eggs were filled by residents of the retirement community to prepare for the annual event, sponsored by the Kiwanis Club of Chelsea.

Christmas In April Scheduled

On April 27 the volunteers for Christmas in April • Washtenaw will once again host a one-day blitz to repair and rehabilitate the homes of the elderly, handicapped and/or low income families in Washtenaw County.

The Chelsea area chapter is in its fifth year of offering assistance to home owners in the Chelsea school district. Over the last four years it has worked on 28 homes using more than 400 volunteers at an approximate cost of $20,000.

The repairs made ranged from major electrical, plumbing, carpentry repairs to painting, glazing and weather stripping, and handicap ramps. Last year another dimension was added to the program, the "rake and runs", in which volunteers perform general spring clean-ups for area senior citizens regardless of financial status.

To qualify for this program the persons/person must live in the Chelsea school district; be elderly, handicapped and/or low income; be purchasing or own the home they live in (no rentals); be unable to do work themselves (able bodied members living in the home must help).

All work is done at no expense to the home owner and all work is done by volunteers. Each year a fund raising drive and a volunteer drive is held in the community.

Fund raising; all monies raised here remain here and approximately 95 percent of all funds raised goes toward the local program. The remainder is used for insurance and fees for the Christmas in April Washtenaw Chapter.

Volunteer drive: Any and all volunteers are welcome, skilled and unskilled. If a person is under the age of 18, a parental consent form must be signed. It is the policy of Christmas in April to not accept volunteers under the age of 14. However in Chelsea we do allow children under 14 to participate on certain projects if accompanied by a parent who will supervise the child/children. Day care will be available this year at St. Paul's UCC Church.

Anyone wishing to make a contribution to Christmas in April should make a check payable to: Christmas in April Washtenaw - Chelsea Chapter, 20160 Brown Dr., Chelsea 48118. Please do not sent cash.

Volunteers forms are available at Faith in Action or by contacting Dick Shaneyfelt at 475-8193 after 5 p.m. or Nadine Shaneyfelt at 475-3305 (Faith in Action) during the day.

Four Candidates File Petitions For Chelsea School Election

Monday, April 8 was the final day for prospective Chelsea School Board candidates to file petitions for the June 10 election.

Two four-year seats are to be contested. Incumbents Joseph Redding and John Eisenbeiser are not seeking reelection.

The list of candidates was not necessarily final as of Tuesday afternoon. Administration staff person Charlotte Bentley had not completed verification of the petition signatures, and candidates could withdraw voluntarily up until today, Thursday, April 11.

Candidates filing petitions are: Robert J. Turner, 14318 Forest Ct.; Scott R. Broshar, 13663 Waterloo Rd.; Jill A. Taylor, 7560 Lakeshore; Anne Williams, 13354 Oak Ridge Lane.

Only Williams has run for the school board previously. Broshar, 41, is president of Absolute Title Co. in Ann Arbor.

Taylor, 41, is a former preschool teacher and teaches in the Chelsea Community Education department. She was active in promoting last year's school bond issue proposal.

Williams, 37, owns Divine Productions of Chelsea and works for Chrysler Corp. as an engineering supervisor.

Turner could not be reached as of press time.

Beach Accredited

The North Central Association of Colleges and Schools has announced that Beach Middle School has received full accreditation. The school was admitted to membership on March 27 at NCA's Annual Meeting in Chicago.

The NCA State Director, Dr. William J. Bushaw of Ann Arbor, extended congratulations to the school and its principal, Darco Stielstra, noting that "Beach Middle School has now joined the growing league of schools whose purpose is the continuing quest for higher levels of quality education."

Standards form the foundation of the North Central Association's accreditation. Through their membership in NCA, schools voluntarily ascribe to meeting standards established by the organization. Accreditation is renewed each year. In addition, Beach Middle School must engage in a demanding continuous improvement process that directly affects the quality of education for every Beach Middle School student.

Township Supervisor Stepping Down

By Scott Bishop
Staff Writer

John Francis, Lyndon Township supervisor since 1986, will not pursue reelection this fall. The demands of the job have become too constrictive of his time, Francis said.

"It's just time. Bottom line. It's almost becoming a full-time job. If I didn't have the Board that I'm working with right now, then I wouldn't be able to continue even at the present time," Francis explained.

He continued to cite several examples of time consuming issues.

"The taxing has become much more complicated. I had to quit doing the assessing a year ago (because of the time crunch). Now, the assessor has to do not one tax roll, he has to do three," Francis said.

He listed some other heightened responsibilities since becoming township supervisor while he was a law student in 1986.

Ongoing work with the Western Washtenaw Recycling Authority, need to continually address issues regarding the landfill within the township, greater development requiring more time, effort and paperwork, a township sewer project and a more complex relationship with the state (Lyndon Township encompasses large tracts of state-owned land) have all demanded more and more time from the township supervisor, Francis explained.

Surveying Francis' varied background, his need for more time than supervising Lyndon Township allows is clear.

"I think probably my most fulfilling job right now is I'm an elementary school teacher. I've gone from high school into the military, from the military I was a police officer, from a police officer I went through college, came back and was a police officer again, quit to go to law school, became township supervisor while I was in law school, and also taught at Washtenaw Community College while I was practicing law.

"Then I started teaching. I was actually teaching, was the

Opening Remarks

By Brian Hamilton

Never has a column generated so many thank yous as the one I wrote several weeks ago about people shaking down the business community to fund any enterprise that comes to mind.

However, what has happened since then has been, well, almost entertaining. That column seems to have opened the floodgates. The day after it appeared, no fewer than three people walked through the door with financial appeals. And it seems like there's been about one every day since then. It's getting to be a close race between local solicitations and long-distance telephone offers.

I've decided to keep a list of these requests, just to see what it looks like after a year. Maybe I'll publish it.

We've also received several mail solicitations recently, mostly to fund trips abroad.

We received one letter from a student who wants to go to Europe to engage in a particular activity. He went to the trouble of tracking down the Chamber of Commerce mailing list, then wrote a form letter. And with a phrase worthy of a famous Twain character as he tried to get kids to whitewash the fence, he offered us Chamber members the first "opportunity" to fund his trip, as though we might get a plaque or something. Now there's a guy who's destined for politics.

When I was this guy's age, I too went to Europe and it was very educational. A friend of mine and I backpacked around, bought and sold mopeds, got kicked out of a French train station for eating lunch on the front lawn, got our first taste of Rhine Wine and "real" Heineken, stared at German border guards through binoculars, toured Dachau and a Mercedes Benz plant, slept in group housing (youth hostels) and had several guys try to sell us nuggets of something called "hash," which was very popular in Europe back then and probably still is today.

It was an extremely expensive trip but it never once occurred to me to hit up the owner of the local hardware store to help fund my summer "education." What I should have done is written a letter saying I had been selected by the "Students Traveling For The Betterment of Mankind" to learn about new cultures, mailed that to every business in the area, and watched the funds roll in.

This has all gotten me to thinking about guidelines for funding these things. What's worthy, what's not? It's not that easy to decide, but I lean heavily toward projects that will benefit the truly needy or will benefit many people—the classic current cases, being Christmas in April and Timber Town (it is officially two words, I have discovered). At the other end of the spectrum, I am not thrilled about funding "travel" ball teams, which to me is akin to asking for funds for a trip to Cedar Point.

I'm real skeptical about some of these "worthwhile" experiences that people seem to think businesses should fund. It appears that often the real "lesson" is how to beg for money, when the true lesson may be simply that not everyone can afford to do everything they want.

Letters to the Editor

Farmer's Market Needs Help

Spring is here and planting time is to begin. In spring also comes the time to organize for another year for the Chelsea Farmers' Market.

It is a concern of mine that there is no interest in the market continuing in Chelsea. Without a backing of vendors willing to participate both in selling and the operation of the market, the market will cease. For the past six years (four in the municipal parking lot) the market has had a lot of good times and some slow times. But, always adding a country family atmosphere to the community.

As a participant and co-manager of the market it is time to renew interest in the market if it is to continue and grow. I have sent approximately 30 letters to past market vendors and only received one reply for full-time; five others will continue as their schedules permit. There has even been interest in changing the location of the market.

As of April 11, the likelihood of a market in Chelsea is bleak. If ANYONE is at all interested in running or participating in this community venture please notify Ann Feeney at the Chamber of Commerce or Sue Rodgers.

Uncle Apollo

I told you I was planning to tell you about planning, and a good place to start is to solve this traffic problem once and for all.

Recently, a group of consultants who apparently used to be school teachers gave the roads in Chelsea letter grades and downtown flunked. The problem is, you can't just hold it back for a year because then things will get even worse. But you don't want to reward it for poor performance, either, so it takes some very serious planning.

Planning officials seem to think that since the problem is in the heart of the village the solution has to be a bypass, but the downtown merchants won't go for that. Besides, a bypass would cost millions.

It's the classic problem. Everyone wants to have the best medical care, but they don't want to pay for it.

Seems to me that all we need is a little plastic surgery. For instance, since we have all of this overwhelming support to expand the library underground, we could just make it a little longer and create an underpass. Or maybe some smart entrepreneurial type will seize the opportunity and start up an air shuttle and car rental service.

All these people who want to live on lakes north of town could just drive to an airport set up on the old landfill, take a commuter flight to the car rental lot down by the old Stuckey's off Jackson Road and drive a new Cadillac to work.

Or maybe, since the main problem is only right down town, the village could go out and buy a smaller version of the Zilwaukee bridge so cars could drive OVER town.

Even better, we could mount the old water tower and the clocktower on wheels. In the morning when everyone is driving south, we'd move the old water tower over to the Jiffy Mix parking lot across from the clock tower, hook up a huge rubber band between the two towers, and slingshot cars right through the downtown bottleneck.

It would be a little trickier getting them back in the afternoon because there's no real good site for the clocktower, but maybe we could get a longer rubber band and set the clocktower at the Post-Office parking lot. The only problem is, that would angle them to the northeast and if we slipped up somebody could smash right into the wooden cow we've been fighting so hard to preserve.

Another possibility is that we could have some of those clever set designers at the Purple Rose work on designing folding store fronts. During rush hour, they would fold back and there would be this six-lane highway instead. Maybe instead of changing colors, the downtown lights would flash "Act 1", "Intermission," and "Act 2".

I have forwarded a copy of this article to Tim Eder at the Village Planning Commission to get them started thinking about some of these ideas. Hopefully, they'll see the wisdom in trying to work with these ideas instead of making everybody mad.

P.S. To Mr. Eder, I heard there's a position open on the planning commission. Is that true? Could I help? You can let me know through the Chelsea Standard.

supervisor and was also doing attorney work at the same time for a while.

"So now I'm cutting it back down so I'm only doing some attorney work, mostly in the summer, and teaching elementary school, which has become the most demanding job I've ever had," Francis said.

He teaches fifth grade students at Mitchell Elementary School in Ann Arbor.

Francis noted that his involvement with WVRA and keeping agricultural land assessments at a fair level were highlights of his 10 years as supervisor.

Conflict regarding the area landfill and the constant battle to stay on top of assessments while the tax-base increased dramatically were low points during his tenure, he said.

Francis expects to stay involved in Lyndon Township politics in some capacity, and voiced frustration about the lack of cooperation between Chelsea Village and its surrounding townships on issues like an area-wide fire department and a district library. Those issues are key in the township's immediate future, Francis contended.

A successor as Lyndon supervisor, he emphasized, should recognize the demands of the job.

"The main reason I'm going to give this up is the time commitment. I would like to see someone come in and be committed and understand that it's no longer a job that you can put as little time into as you want or as much time. It's going to be a significant amount of time," Francis concluded.

Dexter Community Schools, in association with Professional Builders Institute, will offer a seminar open to all adults that will provide intensive training on remodeling your home.

The course provides information on kitchens and bathrooms. You will learn how to replace windows, floorings, counters and countertops. The instructor will also discuss common plumbing, heating and electrical problems.

The class will be held on April 22, 24, 29 and May 1, at 7:00 p.m. and will run for three hours each night. The fee for the class is $95.00, which includes the manual. An optional remodeling book is available for $30.00. To register or obtain more information, please contact Dexter Community Schools at (313) 428-4008, during school office hours.

Village To Share Maintenance Costs For Timber Town, Assume Liability

Relying on the work of up to 3,000 volunteers, construction of the Timber Town playground in Dana Park is scheduled to be complete by June 17.

Then, Chelsea Village will assume full liability in case of injuries, while the village and the Timber Town project will share the maintenance costs.

Village Manager Jack Myers expects Chelsea outlays for insurance to increase as a result.

"As far as liability, after initial construction of the playground, there will be, of course, the liability, which will go on the village insurance policy just like Pierce Park playground. I have no idea how much that would up the premium at this point. But I'm sure there will be an increase in the premium. It will ultimately be a village park, once it's all said and done," Myers explained.

According to Timber Town representative Julie Rutherford, liability for the week-long construction project is covered as an "event" under village insurance.

Timber Town coordinator Gloria Mitchell said the organization had raised its fundraising goals from $100,000 to $120,000 in order to help the village cover maintenance costs. Currently, Timber Town has raised over $80,000, she added.

Chelsea Village will be responsible for basic upkeep of the site, weeding, mowing, etc.

Timber Town contributions will purchase maintenance materials.

For example, the structure's wooden posts will require water-sealing every two years. While Timber Town purchases the sealant, the village will be responsible for applying it.

Chelsea Student Studies Politics Through 4-H Capitol Experience

Jill Wesolowski has experienced plenty in eight years of 4-H, including a recent week in the state capital through the 4-H Capitol Experience.

Through the 4-H program, 111 teens and adults spent March 17-20 in Lansing, meeting with state legislators, lobbyists and representatives of community and state agencies to discuss how government deals with key social issues.

Wesolowski was selected to participate for her leadership skills and interest in political issues.

"I've been in 4-H for eight years, and in my club I'm one of the older members, so I've done several demonstrations in front of my club. And I'm interested in going into politics when I get older, like being a lawyer or a judge or something that has to do with politics and law and government. That was why I wanted to go, and I thought it would be fun," she explained.

Wesolowski will report back on her experience to her local 4-H peers.

The Chelsea High School sophomore will have lots to relate. During the week she visited a charter school, met with the superintendent of Lansing Public Schools and learned about state legislation regarding schools of choice.

She was also part of a judicial mentorship program, sitting in on a criminal trial and questioning the judge afterward.

Most valuable, Wesolowski said, was time with her local state legislators, Rep. Mary Schroer and Sen. Alma Wheeler Smith.

She interviewed the legislators, visited their offices, sat in on meetings, watched the State House in action, and discussed legislation and its progress through the labyrinth of state government.

"I didn't know much about government, even though I was interested in it, and I learned a lot while I was there, about government, about the way politics run," Wesolowski said.

Women's Club Studies Jewelry

The Woman's Club of Chelsea gathered at McKune Library, Tuesday evening, March 26 to hear Chelsea native George Winans talk about "Choosing Good Jewelry."

There were 15 members present. Winans began his program with a brief history of Winans Jewelry. His grandfather founded the business in 1895 in what is now the Johnson How-To-Store. In 1898 they moved to their present location.

In 1911 George's father, Elmer Winans, entered the business and in 1928 grandfather retired. George joined the business in 1946 after returning from serving in World War II. His father (Elmer) retired in 1980 at the age of 88 yrs.

Rob Winans, George's son and fourth generation, joined the business in 1973. George resigned in 1993. Today the business is in the hands of Rob.

Following the "History Lesson" Winans moved on to explain the different sizes and shapes of diamonds. One interesting note was that in 1891 a one-carat diamond sold for between $140 and $300. Today it would sell for around $15,000.

Winans also went on to explain the difference in gold from 24K all the way down to 10K.

The 24K is quite soft while 10K is much harder and used in lower line merchandise.

He also discussed the various kinds of gems or stones telling of their various properties. For example, emeralds and opals are brittle and easily cracked or broken while rubies or diamonds are much harder and not easily damaged.

He brought several items of jewelry with him which members were allowed to examine and do a little "wishful thinking."

In conclusion, Winans cautioned against jewelry bargains and discounts such as gemstones for $4, 25 cent diamonds (which in reality is a 1/400 carot about the size of a grain of salt), 14K "layered" gold and above all mail-order bargains.

Buying good jewelry requires the services of a professional jeweler whom you know and can trust. Otherwise your purchases may be very disappointing and a real "rip-off."

Following the Winans program, President Shirley Smith presided over a short business meeting after which refresh-

Michigan Fly Fishing Club To Help Plant Trout

A 23-year tradition to plant trout at Proud Lake Recreation Area will continue this year thanks to the efforts of the Michigan Fly Fishing Club.

Each year, nearly 3,000 surplus adult brown and rainbow broodstock trout have been planted in the Huron River at the Proud Lake recreation Area, Milford. This year, state fish hatcheries had only brown trout available for the program. The Michigan Fly fishing club, which originated the program in 1973, came to the rescue and offered to purchase 800-900 rainbows, at a cost of nearly $1500. The DNR will supply 1800-1900 brown trout for the planting.

"Our club spearheaded the project," Dale Ross, Michigan Fly Fishing Club Board Member said. "It has become a great training ground for people interested in fishing for trout in a stream."

"A study in 1987 showed that each fish was caught an average of 3.8 times," Gary Towns, District Fisheries Biologist said. "Most of the trout in this river are then harvested in May, during regular trout season. This program has provided an excellent trout fishery. We are grateful that the Michigan Fly Fishing Club came to the rescue to continue the program this year."

Two miles of Huron river, from posted signs below Moss Lake outlet to posted signs 100 yards below Wikom Road, are available for fly fishing, catch and release only, during this special trout season April 1 through April 26. Thereafter, regular state-wide trout rules apply. DNR Conservation Officers are on the alert for poaching and will prosecute.

The fishing club raises money for this and other projects by sponsoring the Midwest Fly Fishing Exposition, the largest and oldest fly-fishing show in North America. This year, it is held March 16 and 17 at the Southfield Civic Center. For more information on the Michigan Fly Fishing Club and its events, call 313-420-2233.

Farm Bureau Opposes Bill

Michigan Farm Bureau opposes the transportation reform package introduced by Sen. Phillip Hoffman (R-Horton). The package proposes allowing countywide local gas taxes, eliminating the State Transportation Commission, repealing the current distribution formula for state transportation funds and permitting county commissioners to dissolve county road commissions.

"Allowing the levy of local gas taxes would create inequities in transportation funding across the state, and would create an administrative nightmare in trying to determine gas taxes in, potentially, 83 different counties across the state," said Tim Goodrich, associate legislative council for MFB.

Goodrich said the real issue that should be addressed is the need for an increase in the state gasoline tax.

Infants, Toddlers Needed For Study

Early On is seeking infants and toddlers from birth to 36 months with developmental delay or conditions that could lead to such delay.

If you have a concern about your baby, call 1-800-EARLY ON (1-800-327-5966).

Early On is a collaborative system of the Michigan Departments of Education, Mental Health, Public Health and Social Services. Early On assists parents who have concerns by evaluating their infants, developing a plan to address their concerns and coordinating the services in the plan.

There is no charge to families for evaluation, plan development and coordination of services. Cost for other medical services may be free but is determined individually. Early On is available regardless of income.

Last year, more than 6,000 Michigan families received Early On services. The Michigan Department of Public Health estimates that each year between 3,000 and 7,000 young children in Michigan will either be born with or will develop a disability.

Dr. William Weil, Professor Emeritus, Michigan State University Department of Pediatrics and Human Development, said the key to early and appropriate referral, is public awareness of the program and awareness by the physicians who care for children. "Such intervention has been well established as an effective means to prevent or reduce problems for the child at a later age."

For parents or professionals who want more information about Early On system, please call 1-800-EARLY ON (1-800-327-5966).

Narrow The Search!

Have you ever walked into a mega-store and found you had so many choices that a purchase decision was virtually impossible? Buying a home can present the same diversity, unless you narrow the search before you begin.

Consider the choices. Prices may range from $30,000 to $3,000,000. Home sizes can vary from 800 square feet to 8,000 square feet. Styles may include colonial, georgian, ranch, french provincial, cape cod, tudor, contemporary, townhome or condo.

Locations might be urban, suburban, rural or ranch estate. Amenities could range from a large fenced yard, double garage, or indoor workshop to a country club setting, hot tub, and servants quarters. The list goes on and on.

Once you decide to make a purchase, gather the family members who will be living in the home. Ask them to list their priorities in order of their importance. The resulting lists may be quite diverse, yet certain common interests will become evident. For example, most family members may prefer a suburban location in a family-oriented neighborhood, yet indicate flexibility as to home style.

From the initial lists, eliminate low priority items. Strive to identify key elements of the home most desired by all, arriving at a common list. Prioritize the final list to determine the absolute "must have" items, as well as those which may be compromised in the final decision.

Share your list with the real estate agent you have chosen. Ask the agent to match the list against homes currently available for purchase. The result should be a "short list" of near perfect homes from which to make your selection. Make your home search an exciting adventure.

U-M Presents Results From Emissions Study

New EPA tailpipe emissions standards based on real-world data and high-quality emissions control system technology in new cars could cut the amount of smog-generating chemicals spewed into the atmosphere from automobile exhaust by as much as two-thirds, according to a University of Michigan report.

"Automotive emissions of carbon monoxide (CO), hydrocarbons (HC) and nitrogen oxides (NOx) are major factors in urban air pollution," said Marc Ross, U-M professor of physics who led the five-person research team. "Progress has been made to reduce these emissions over the past 25 years, but vehicle travel continues to increase. Unless we make additional reductions in gram-per-mile emissions, much of this progress will disappear."

Results from the U-M emissions study were presented Feb. 26 at the SAE International Congress & Exposition by Robert Goodwin, U-M graduate student in physics, and Tom Wenzel from Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory. Additional members of the research team were Rick Watkins from U-M and Michael Q. Wang of Argonne National Laboratory.

The researchers analyzed 1993 model car emissions data from several sources — including automotive manufacturers, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and the California Air Resources Board to determine the source and quantity of auto emissions produced during different driving situations. They then projected the 1993 grams-per-mile emissions to estimate emissions for model years 2000 and 2010.

"There is a big difference between emission levels generated when cars were driven under real-world conditions and the official data produced during the controlled Federal Test Procedure (FTP) mandated by the EPA," Goodwin said. "Actual emissions of carbon monoxide and hydrocarbons from 1993 cars on the road today are about five times higher than the FTP tailpipe standard and actual NOx emissions are about twice the standard."

"Two factors — off-cycle driving and malfunctioning emissions control system — were responsible for most of the additional pollutants," Ross added.

Driving "off-cycle" means driving at higher engine power levels than those specified in the testing procedure manufacturers use to certify that new cars are in compliance with federal emissions standards, according to Ross. During this procedure, new cars with laboratory-aged catalysts run on a dynamometer, while the exhaust is collected in bags for analysis. The test requires a precise speed-time sequence. Cars never accelerate more than 3.3 mph and never reach speeds above 57 mph.

Today's drivers routinely accelerate faster and use higher power levels than those in the federal test procedure, which has not changed since the 1970s. To allow drivers to travel 65-plus miles per hour while pulling a trailer with the air-conditioner set on maximum, automotive manufacturers build in something called command enrichment.

"Extra fuel is introduced to cool the engine and catalyst during high-powered driving," Goodwin explained. "To do this, you have to override the emissions control system. Every time this happens, the rate of carbon monoxide emissions jumps by 1,000 times or more."

"Even though most people only drive from 1 percent to 5 percent of the time under command enrichment, it accounts for nearly half of all carbon monoxide emissions and 10 percent of all hydrocarbons," Ross said.

Because command enrichment is responsible for such a large portion of total auto emissions, the U-M report recommends the EPA adopt its proposed new regulations, which could require auto manufacturers to delay the onset of command enrichment slightly and cut back on the amount of extra fuel used.

The largest single pollutant source identified in the U-M report was malfunctioning emissions control systems (ECS), often caused by damaged catalytic converters or failure of the oxygen sensor which controls the fuel-air ratio.

"Vehicles with malfunctioning ECS were responsible for almost half of the total emissions we analyzed," Wenzel said. "We found no evidence to support the common belief that these malfunctions are caused by owner or mechanic abuse. The incidence of ECS malfunctions in five-year-old cars varied from virtually zero to almost 30 percent depending on the make and model of the vehicle. This supports our view that the problem originates with the manufacturer, not the owner or mechanic."

New remote sensing and on-board diagnostics technology will soon make it possible to identify ECS malfunctions as soon as they occur, according to Wenzel. "If these new technologies are used to identify malfunction-prone models and if manufacturers are encouraged to produce cars with consistently high-quality ECS, then substantial emissions reductions can be achieved by 2010."

The report was funded by the U-M, the Energy Foundation, Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory and Oak Ridge National Laboratory.

A high fiber diet is associated with a reduced risk of coronary heart disease, the American Medical Association recently reported. Seeds, berries, fruit skins and bran contain large amounts of plant fiber. Some fiber rich foods include oat, wheat and rice bran; potatoes, carrots, navy and kidney beans, broccoli, peas, cauliflower and apples.

Many students who earn their sheepskins in agriculture-related fields will find that there are more jobs than graduates, at least until the year 2000. That's the prediction of a report jointly prepared by the U.S. Department of Agriculture and Purdue, which predicts a 4.5 percent surplus of jobs for graduates in agriculture, environmental studies, veterinary medicine and nonmedical areas of life science research. Despite the promising news, there might not be jobs for everyone. The authors of the report predict that the job market will be the most competitive in the 20 years that this report has been issued.

Despite what coffee-lovers might like to believe, coffee has a lot more caffeine than tea or cola. A 6-ounce cup of coffee from a drip coffee maker contains 220-300 milligrams of caffeine. That's compared with 18-36 mg in a 6-ounce cup of tea brewed for one minute, or 40-92 mg in tea brewed for three minutes. A 12-ounce can of cola contains 36-46 mg of caffeine.

Trimming the external fat makes beef equal to skinless chicken as a source of low-fat, high-quality protein, vitamins and minerals. Today, most consumer cuts of beef now are sold with less than one-eighth inch of fat. More than one-third of retail beef cuts have had all external fat removed.

A new, highly accurate DNA test is enabling cattle breeders to verify a cow's lineage with the accuracy of human paternity or forensic testing. Breeders keep accurate ancestral records to track the inheritance of such traits as high milk production, carcass size, protein content of milk, and ease of birthing.

We need plenty of water every day. Luckily, water is in a lot of foods. Milk is about 87 percent water. Most fruits and vegetables check in at 85 percent to 95 percent. Even bread averages 36 percent water. However, even though coffee contains a lot of water, it also contains a lot of caffeine, which is a diuretic.

Ratites are flightless birds with no breastbones, and include ostriches, emus and rheas. Ostrich production in particular has grown significantly in the past three to five years. The driving factors behind the interest are that the birds produce a high-quality meat, they can be grown in a variety of environments, and they still have the good feed efficiency of poultry-type birds. In addition, their other byproducts like feathers and hides are in high demand.

Grass Fire Safety Advised

By Scott Bishop
Staff Writer

The Chelsea Fire Department fought four grass fires in March and six in the first four days of April, according to Fire Chief Dan Ellenwood.

"It's been dry, there's been no rain or any moisture. And this time of year, no (vegetation) has turned green yet. It's always a bad time of year," Ellenwood explained.

Not-yet-green vegetation dries quickly in the wind or sun, making spring weather opportune for grass fire danger.

"Normally it's just open land, tall weeds, brush, trees. Usually it starts by somebody with a trash-burner burning trash, there's no cover on it, wind is blowing, blows stuff out of there. Once it gets started it'll travel fast," Ellenwood warned. He urged local residents to inform the fire department before beginning any burning.

State law forbids burning of any kind within Chelsea village limits or within 1,400 feet of village limits. There is a state-wide ban on all burning, irrespective of location, during prime grass fire season May 1 to May 15.

The fire department owns four four-wheel-drive rigs used to combat grass fires, three jeeps and one pick-up truck.

"You need maneuverability. You don't want really too heavy a truck out, especially this time of year, because the ground's soft and you have to run off the road to get to (grass fires)."

"You don't need a lot of water to put out grass fires, so the pumps are not that large. You need to be able to get to where the fire is, and that's why you need the four-wheel drive, lighter vehicles."

Many of the grass fire runs would have been needless, Ellenwood said, had residents informed the fire department dispatcher of their plans and received an oral "burning permit."

"Normally anybody that's going to burn needs to call the fire department (beforehand). The main reason is, because if somebody sees someone burning something, and calls it in, and we don't have any idea that they're burning, (the fire department will respond and) it's going to cost them. And it could cost them a lot of money. That's the big thing, that they have to call in if they're going to do any burning," Ellenwood explained.

The fire department bills the surrounding townships for each run it makes, and the townships will seek remuneration from residents, at an average cost of $400 to $500, according to the fire chief.

Only natural materials can be burned. The fire dispatcher can be reached by calling 475-1338 or 475-1339.

Why I Am Proud To Be Part of My Community
By Jessica Hendricks

Over the past 13 years of my life, I have lived in about five cities, and have attended four or five schools. Although I have only lived in Chelsea a year, there are many reasons I am proud to be a part of this community.

First of all, there are so many towns that are literally dying. The citizens no longer take pride in their communities or they do not have the financial support to do anything about the deterioration of their neighborhood. One thing that you usually notice about these deteriorating cities is that all major businesses begin to withdraw from the area. Another noticeable thing is that the people also seem to be dying. They may be so fixed in their ways that they won't take the step to change their community or have given up hope of restoring the area.

Beach Students Named Essay Winners

Three students from Beach Middle School in Chelsea have been named local winners in the 27th annual America & Me Essay Contest, sponsored by Farm Bureau Insurance.

The three students, who earned the first, second and third place awards for their school, are Jessica Hendricks, first; Carolyn Wineland, second; and Alan Bairley, third. All three received award certificates for their achievement.

As the school's first place winner, Jessica Hendricks' name will also be engraved on a plaque for permanent display in the school.

Beach Middle School's participation in the America & Me Essay Contest was sponsored by Farm Bureau Insurance agent Dave Rowe of Chelsea. Jessica's first-place essay now advances to the state level competition, from which the top 10 essays in Michigan will be selected. The top ten statewide winners, who will be announced in May, will receive plaques and U.S. savings bonds valued from $500 to $1,000. In addition, the top ten essayists will be honored at a banquet in Lansing, meet with Michigan's top governmental leaders and be the featured guests at a Lansing Lugnuts minor league baseball game dedicated in their honor.

A team of finalist judges that includes top governmental leaders will determine the top statewide winners.

Several thousand eighth grader students from almost 400 Michigan schools participated in the contest, which was conducted with the help of Farm Bureau Insurance agents across the state. The topic of the 1995-96 contest was "Why I Am Proud to Be a Part of My Community."

through the bars on your windows. Being able to dialysis most bumps in the night is a far greater feeling than being scared to turn off your light at night.

Chelsea also has a wonderful school system. Already Chelsea has a great learning environment with teachers that make learning fun. I think that it is fantastic that the school board already has plans for renovations in the schools. This is very important to me because I feel that education is very important since it helps decide your future. With new renovations, it will make learning better for me now and my children in the future.

There's no feeling like being home. To me, Chelsea is a perfect home. The most important things about being home are that you feel welcome, know that you're safe no matter where you might venture, and knowing that there are people to depend on. This is what makes me proud to be a part of Chelsea.

Performance To Kick Off 'Love Your Library Week'

Michael Deren will present his popular "The Past in Person" shows at 7 p.m. Monday, April 15 at the Chelsea Depot.

The performance kicks off the "Love Your Library Week" celebration and is sponsored by Friends of the McKune Memorial Library. All events during "Love Your Library Week" are free and open to the public.

Taking on the persona of a transcontinental railroad engineer, Deren will share stories and songs of the common people whose labor supported the western migration and expansion of America in the 1800s.

"I've designed my 'The Past in Person' performances to both teach and entertain. My goal is to help adults and chil-Deren learn about the people from America's past," says Deren.

Food Safety At Issue In Homes

Debbie Barrow
Extension Home Economist

When choosing a nursing home for a parent or elderly relative, there are many things to consider. One of them is how safe the food is.

One way to protect against foodborne illness is to visit the kitchen at the facility and watch how the food handlers prepare the meals. Look to see if the kitchen is clean and the people look healthy. Ask if the facility has a registered dietitian on staff. If it does not, ask what kind of training the person in charge of food preparation has that qualifies him or her for the job.

Also look for the following:

- A knowledgeable food service supervisor.
- Food handlers who frequently wash their hands.
- Use of pasteurized or powdered eggs instead of fresh ones.
- Hot foods that are kept hot and cold foods that are kept cold.

Grants Ready For Farmers

Farmers interested in doing on-farm research or exploring niche marketing for a more sustainable agriculture can apply for grants from the Sustainable Agriculture Research and Education (SARE) program.

SARE is funded by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Approximately $200,000 will be available for this year's program in the 12 states in the North Central Region. Program funding was increased by $50,000 this year to help fund more grants that address marketing issues.

Individual producers can apply for up to $5,000, and groups of producers can apply for one-year grants up to $10,000.

Applications for the SARE program are available now and must be filed by May 1. Interested persons should write the North Central Region SARE Program, 13A Activities Bldg., University of Nebraska-Lincoln, NE 68583-0840 or call 402-472-0809. Funding decisions will be made in late July and funds will be made available in mid-fall for the 1997 crop production season.

In the past four years, 127 grants have been awarded. The demonstration and on-farm research projects funded have included rotational grazing, crop production, farmer networks, alternative crops, weed control, soil conservation and biological pest control.

"I am amazed at the amount of innovation and entrepreneurial spirit among our producers and delight in seeing that there are producers willing to become part of nontraditional research," says Tom Guthrie of Delton, chairperson of the SARE administrative council for the North Central Region.

More information about the SARE can be obtained by calling Guthrie at 616-623-2261 or by calling Susan Smalley, MSU Extension agriculture and natural resources programs, at 517-355-0117.

People To People Program Selects Two Chelsea Teens

By Michelle Rogers
Associate Editor

Two students from Chelsea High School have been selected as student ambassadors to serve in the People to People program.

Students Leigha Young and Nate Benjamin will travel to South Africa this summer provided they can raise $4,000 each. They're counting on financial support from their families and the community to offset the cost.

During the past 30 years, more than 75,000 teens from across the U.S. have toured 25 different countries around the world as part of the program.

Founded by former President Dwight D. Eisenhower in 1956, People to People was organized based on the belief individual Americans extending friendship to citizens in other countries could contribute significantly to world peace.

"I think it will prepare me for international affairs and I'll understand what they're going through more. I also think it will help create a better environment," said Young, a junior at CHS.

"I am looking forward to this because I am African-American," said Benjamin, 18. "I want to see where my ancestors came from."

The 20-day trip this summer will be the first time People to People student ambassadors have gone to South Africa. Most recent trips have been to Australia and China.

"I want a better understanding of the world," is the reason Young says she wants to travel to South Africa as a student ambassador. "I realize how lucky we're to have a country like we have. We have a lot of things other countries don't have."

Program administrators say in the past two years South Africa has seen a positive change to a democracy that fully represents its citizens. They believe it is one of the world's most ethnically diverse nations, and will be an enriching experience for student ambassadors.

A total of 40 high school students representing southeastern Michigan will make the trek. The two teens are the only local students, others hail from Pinckney, Milan, Ypsilanti and Ann Arbor.

Their itinerary includes stops in Johannesburg, Cape Town, Port Elizabeth and other major cities in South Africa. Young is looking forward to a stop at Kruger National Park, located in the northeast region of the country. Student ambassadors will go on a safari where they will encounter elephants, zebras, giraffes, lions and cheetahs in the wild.

"I am looking forward to seeing elephants and the diverse species. I've seen some of those animals, but I've never seen them in their natural habitat," said Young, 17.

The teens are also looking forward to homestays with South African families, a cable-car ride to the heights of Cape Town's Table Mountain and a day-long visit to a school in the Graaf-Reinet or Bloemfontein regions.

"I am excited about going," Young said. "When most people think of Africa they think about huts and villages, but they have really big cities too."

"It seems really cool because Africa is one of the biggest continents," Benjamin added.

"(The U.S.) is almost like a different planet. I think it's closed off. I'd like to experience other places," he said.

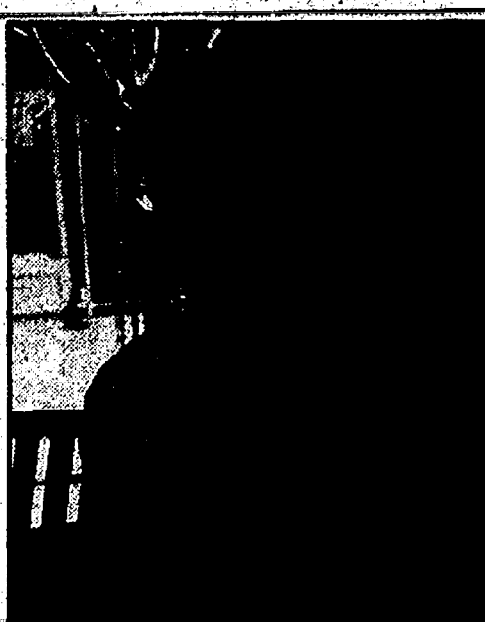

"I think it will be a good experience. It will be something I will remember forever. It's an opportunity to see the world. A lot of people don't get that opportunity. I really appreciate the chance to do this," Benjamin said.

The teens have attended regular meetings in Ann Arbor designed to familiarize ambassadors with the country. Delegates have been briefed about the country's history, geography and local customs.

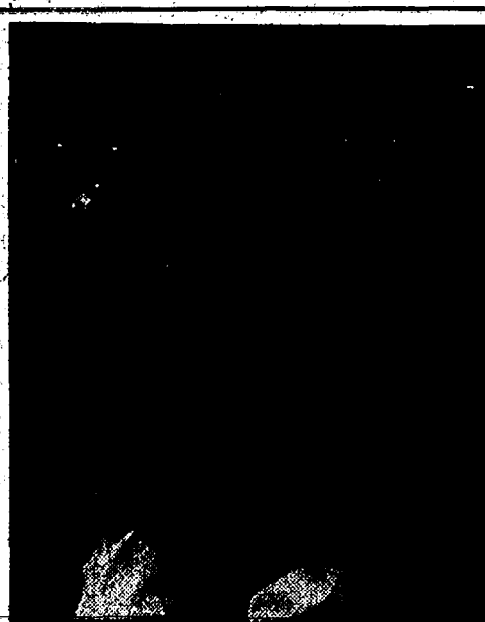

Neither is sure why they were selected. Their best guess is that People to People administrators looked at their academic records or they were recommended for the program by somebody. After they were invited to apply, the teens were required to submit three letters of recommendation and undergo a personal interview if they were interested.

"I am really good with people and I get along with people really well," Young said may be a reason why she was chosen. She is also a member of the National Honor Society, track and cross country teams, Spanish Club, Key Club and student council.

Benjamin has a 3.4 grade point average and plays soccer year round. He will also travel to Belgium later this summer to play soccer. He hopes to attend Indiana Institute of Technology in the fall.

Leigha Young

When she returns, Young plans to show her appreciation to the community by sharing journals and memorabilia collected during the journey. Young has sent out letters to area service clubs soliciting contributions. She hasn't heard from any of them yet, but is hopeful.

Benjamin is primarily counting on financial support from his parents and an after-school job he has at Subway on Fletcher Road.

Dangerous Attractions

With the advent of spring and its warm weather almost here, we at Lane Animal Hospital would like to take the opportunity to warn children about picking up wild animals. Baby birds, squirrels, rabbits and other small animals may appear sweet and harmless, but they may be harboring disease. Do not touch them.

All warm blooded mammals are capable of contracting rabies and subsequently passing it on to humans through contact with the infected animal's saliva or blood. Stray wild cats may transmit "cat scratch fever." Some animals serve as hosts for parasites: ticks, lice and mites which may further infect people.

Questions concerning the welfare of injured wild animals should be directed to a veterinarian or local health officials. They will have information about rescue and animal control organizations.

Lane Animal Hospital has extended spring hours. Our veterinarians and courteous staff are available to assist you with questions and can help you make appointments. Let us know how we can help you!

Gardening Seminar Set

Just in time for spring gardening. Whether starting from scratch or renovating an existing landscape this presentation is full of inspiration and ideas. Where to start is always a question.

A free slide-lecture by Charlene Harris, garden designer and horticultural instructor for Washtenaw Community College, will be offered on Monday, April 15, at 7:30 p.m. at Beach Middle School in Chelsea. Her slide-lecture will illustrate basic landscape and garden principles, plant combinations (color, form and texture), and help determine where to begin.

Harris' one-day seminar on Flower Gardening will be offered Saturday, April 27, in Saline, and she will teach a Fall Gardening Course in Chelsea. These classes are offered through the Adult Enrichment Program by Washtenaw Community College.

Gardening is a combination of artistic expression, therapy and exercise, limited only by our imagination and the strength of our backs," Harris said.

"It is the fastest growing hobby in the U.S. fueled by a growing interest of the Baby Boomer Generation."

Harris, a resident of Washtenaw County for over 20 years, has traveled throughout the U.S. and Britain, visiting and photographing gardens. In addition to garden lectures, classes and design consultation, Harris currently arranges meetings and tours for the American Conifer Society as their executive secretary, and is editor of their quarterly publication.

Charlene and husband Wade Harris, a Computer Consultant, have recently moved to the Chelsea area.

—The Way It Was—

The First Automobile in Chelsea

By Kathy Clark
Special Writer

Relatives and local history enthusiasts have suggested Frank P. Glazier (1862-1922), a prominent and historical figure in Chelsea and the State at the turn of the century brought the first automobile here. He and his family owned homes on South Street, Cavanaugh Lake and apartments in Detroit called "Bloodgits Terrace."

A few years ago Frank's granddaughters, Kathryn Glazier and Geraldine Kraft shared many family photos with the Chelsea Historical Society. They showed that the Glazier family enjoyed travels near Detroit, touring and fishing around the Great Lakes.

Frank and his wife, Henrietta, are riding in the back seat; Harold, their son is about 14 years old and is driving. A family friend, Mrs. S. G. Bush is in the front seat. The family is enjoying a tour of Belle Isle, Detroit in 1903.

With the need to find out more about the name and type of Glazier's and Chelsea's first automobile, I showed the photo to George Palmer of Palmer Ford-

Mercury to see if it was an early Ford. It was not. Palmer pointed out it would have been impossible to drive this car on roads in that era from Chelsea to Detroit which were then mere horse trails. He thought John Mitchell, who coordinates the Antique Car Parade in Chelsea each summer, could identify the car.

Memories were that Frank Glazier's cars were "delivered by rail" and a model in about 1915 was a "Chandler." With this background I talked to Mitchell. He immediately knew it was not a Ford, and thought it feasible to have been shipped back and forth by train from Chelsea to Belle Isle, agreeing with Palmer that the roads would have been undeveloped and hazardous in 1903.

Mitchell noted many revealing features. It is chain driven, with a two-cylinder engine in the back which is water-cooled by the log-like radiator setting between two protruding "springs" (where a bumper is in modern cars). The steering wheel is on the right and head lamps are likely lit with kerosene or

"camphorene."

Because of the high quality of workmanship and a curved dash design (no doors on this open model), Mitchell at first thought it was an early Cadillac. Then he noticed a small curved emblem on the dash, which looked like an "REO" emblem - Ransom E. Oldsmobile. "Sometimes the insignia would be on the hub-caps."

Four of the earliest manufacturers of touring cars were Oldsmobile, Ford, Cadillac and Packard.

In 1903 Glazier was at the height of his business and political career. An early car of this type may have cost between $2,000 and $3,000. At their first appearance, only the very well-to-do could afford them.

We will probably never see the likes of this automobile again in Chelsea, but an old tune our grandparents listened to, and is now a rare find for collectors goes something like this, "Come Along With Me Lucille, In My Merry Oldsmobile... traveling far and wide... bubbling clear up to the sky," comes to mind.

Music Man Coming

The Wells Fargo Wagon will soon be heard coming down the street, led by 76 Trombones, as Chelsea High School's Music Department presents Meredith Willson's The Music Man April 17, 18, 19, and 20, at Chelsea High School's George Prinzing Auditorium.

One of the most beloved musicals of all time, The Music Man promises to provide an entertaining evening of favorite showtunes, rollicking choreography, and spectacular costumes and sets. As the clock ticks down to show time, students are anxiously awaiting opening night and getting in the spirit of this festive musical, set in rural Iowa.

The cast includes students from the age of 9 through 18, as this show has some significant children's roles as well as adult roles, played here by the talented high school cast.

In the role of Harold Hill, the swindler who comes to River City in order to make a fast buck, Dan Black is cast. The female lead, Marian Paroo, is double cast with Bekah Knight performing Thursday and Saturday, and Tracy Dufek performing the Wednesday matinee and Friday evening performance.

The role of Winthrop is also double cast, with Taft Richardson in the spotlight Thursday and Saturday, and Leon Walters performing the Wednesday matinee and Friday show.

The role of Zaneeta is another part that has been double cast with Melody Smith and Sally Walters alternating; Walters performing Thursday and Saturday, and Smith jumping in for the Wednesday matinee and Friday's show.

There is a huge cast in this show, nearly 60 students involved with several substantial roles and a large chorus. This production features some of the finest local young talent and double casting select roles allows more students to become involved in the performances and gives added protection in case of an actor's illness.

The production is directed by Steven P. Hinz, who serves as musical director and artistic director, as well as producer of the show.

Jed Fritzemeier, orchestra conductor, rounds out the large group of professionals, together with the creative efforts of Eric Bassey, technical director; Kathy Marrero, choreographer; and Colleen Ryan-Peters, costumer. All have extensive experience in prior shows in the Chelsea/Ann Arbor area, and have enthusiastically collaborated in this ambitious production.

The Wednesday performance is a matinee, which will begin at 1 p.m. This performance is offered at a special discount price to senior citizens, although everybody is welcome to attend. The Thursday, Friday, and Saturday shows begin at 8 and tickets are on sale at the Chelsea Pharmacy. As always, tickets are limited and tend to sell out quickly.

Tracy Dufek and Melissa Clairmont

Voice Competitors Win

Two Chelsea High School students recently earned the distinction of being named winners in the prestigious Brian Callaghan competition for Voice, held in Southfield, Michigan, March 26.

Tracy Dufek, daughter of Frank and Linda Dufek, and Melissa Clairmont, daughter of Tim and Ellen Clairmont, came away with top awards after the final round of competition held at the Southfield Presbyterian Church. Dufek was named Grand Champion and recipient of a $1,000 scholarship and Clairmont was named Runner-up with a scholarship award of $400.

The first round of the competition began with a taped audition, submitted by the contestants earlier this winter. Out of the many entries, the judges were forced to narrow the field down to 10 finalists who performed live and in concert on March 26. Adjudicators from several University Music Schools and Music Departments were on hand to make the final selection of the top five winners.

For the preliminary taped audition, applicants were expected to audition with one selection from a required list of songs with an additional piece of their own choosing. For the final live audition, the singers were asked to sing a new selection, plus a piece of their own choosing.

Dufek, a senior at CHS, performed the operatic aria "Non So Più Cosa Son," from Le Nozze Di Figaro, by Wolfgang A. Mozart, and "Sure On This Shining Night," by American composer Samuel Barber.

Clairmont, a sophomore at CHS, performed "Why Do They Shut Me Out of Heaven?" by American composer Aaron Copland, and "O Cessate Di Piagarmi," by Alessandro Scarlatti.

Both young women are active members of the CHS Concert Choir and are private students of Lisa Hinz-Johnson, mezzo-soprano, and voice teacher with the Chelsea Center for the Development of the Arts. Hinz-Johnson speaks highly of her students and their recent achievements.

"I'm thrilled that Tracy and Melissa have been recognized in such a meaningful way. Needless to say, the scholarship money will be a tremendous help in their future education, and it's wonderful to see such good things happen to such fantastic young women."

"The community can be truly proud of the example they've set. They honored us all by performing so beautifully, and especially by representing Chelsea with their generous and warm attitudes towards fellow singers in the competition."

Hinz-Johnson was notably impressed with the level of performance of the other singers as well. "It was an extraordinary evening, and there is obviously some wonderful vocal training happening with each and every one of these singers who made it to the fi-

Beach Students Headed For Japan

As reported several months ago, 10 seventh graders of Beach Middle School will be leaving for Shimizu, Japan on June 18. They are part of a student exchange program that started last year here in Chelsea. Along with an interview, essays were submitted by each student as part of the selection process.

This program is somewhat new to Chelsea, but as the years pass the numbers of students participating will grow. After this year's trip, 20 student residents of Chelsea will have visited Japan. The plan is that by the end of this year Chelsea will be a chartered Sister City to Shimizu, (She me soo), Japan.

In just four more years the numbers will have grown to 60 young travelers. The hope is that Chelsea will embrace our students and the city of Shimizu and make it count for all of us.

The town of Shimizu is much the same size as Chelsea. It seems hard to believe but the city of Shimizu puts on a "town picnic" just for Chelsea's 10 students and their chaperones. In addition, the students' medical care (if needed) is paid in full from funds provided by the community of Shimizu.

Students from Shimizu will also visit Chelsea every year in October.

Chelsea students began fundraising in February, selling carnations for Valentine's Day. March 3 they attempted a Penny Drive. It was bitter cold and the students were glad to find warmth when it was over. Other fund-raisers are also planned.

Save the Environment t-shirt sale runs through April 17. Also April 17, beginning at 5 p.m., Cleary's Pub and the parents of the students are sponsoring "A Night at Cleary's." Proceeds from stir-fry dinners will go toward the students' trip. Live music will also be playing.

"Rising Suns" are being sold for $1 at area restaurants. A car wash on May 11 is planned. National Drag Racing Winner and Chelsea resident Scott Kalitta, will be in attendance (weather permitting).

Also the weekend of May 25, a book fair is planned in cooperation with Waldenbooks

Scouting For Food Planned

Local scouting leaders from the Chelsea area have begun planning for this year's community service, Scouting For Food. This activity will utilize the efforts of local club scouts, boy scouts, and explorers, as well as the added assistance of local Girl Scout units.

On Saturday, April 13, scouts will be going door to door distributing food bags to our friends and neighbors. The following Saturday, April 20, the scouts will go back to collect the food items that you wish to donate. Items may be left in the bag on your doorstep or porch.

Once the food items are collected, they will then be taken to the Faith in Action building, which serves as the area's local food bank, where they will be sorted and shelved to assist those in need.

For those who live outside the village area, collection boxes will be placed at local stores where items may be purchased and donated.

Items in need are canned goods, soups, tuna, meat products, baby foods, cereal, pastas, powdered milk, jiffy mixes, flour, sugar, peanut butter, jelly, soaps, toilet tissue, shampoo, toothpaste, baby formula, wipes, disposable diapers, fruit snacks, rice, instant potatoes, etc.

Those with questions may feel free to contact Jack Long at 475-3517 or Steve Wright at 475-1563.

to be held at Beach Middle School.

Soon, it's possible a sign reading "Sister City of Shimizu, Japan" will appear in Chelsea.

—Visit With The Bunny—

Young Audrey Clever-Bartholomew, 18 months, had the chance to greet the Easter Bunny in person last Sunday at the Chelsea Retirement Community. Her dad, David, is the minister at the Congregational Church.

SPORTS

Lets Go Bulldogs!

Expectations High For Chelsea Softball Team

On paper, you might figure the Chelsea Bulldogs varsity softball team will simply be an average team in a pretty good Southeastern Conference. There's only one senior with any significant experience, and coach Joe Beard has to replace his entire infield.

But Beard is extremely optimistic about his team's chances, not only for an SEC title, but some fireworks in the post-season.

"I don't remember having this many athletes on one team," Beard says.

"We are very, very quick and we're really excited about that. It's a new dimension for us. We have more depth than we've ever had. We'll go through a growing period at first and it will take some time to put it all together, but by the end of the season, we should be very solid."

Beard says this year's squad reminds him of the Bulldogs of two years ago that reached the state quarter-finals. That year the team started off with less experience and finished strong.

Beard says he'll try to take advantage of the Bulldogs' speed and use a tremendous amount of bunting and aggressive base running.

"That, other than pitching, will probably be the key to our season," Beard says.

"We have to be able to get the ball down consistently, especially since we'll be facing some of the top pitchers around. That's why we've worked real hard on our bunting this spring. We have six girls who can really run the bases. This should be a real exciting team."

The speed in the line-up includes freshmen Margaret Schick and McKenna Houle, along with senior co-captains Tina Richardson, and Lisa Beard, senior Sara Petty, and junior Katie Ruhlig. They will put plenty of pressure on opposing defenses.

All-American Beard, who will play at the University of Michigan next year, is the team's top returning player. She'll be the team's top pitcher (13-2 last season), and probably its top offensive star. She amassed almost unbelievable stats last year. She's also a right fielder. It'll be her first year as the number one pitcher, having followed Carey Schiller for a couple of years. Schiller's playing for Georgia Tech.

"I think Lisa's really ready to have her best season yet," Beard says.

Outfielder Richardson is the other co-captain. She's projected to play right field and bat lead off.

Beard has high hopes for his pitching staff beyond his daughter, although it doesn't have much varsity experience.

Junior Melissa Bycraft is the projected number two pitcher, although sophomore Jessica Ritter, a lefty, and Houle should both see plenty of action, especially in week-end tournaments. Houle may be the hardest thrower on the team.

The brand new infield includes senior Chrissy Vargo at first, freshman Schick at second, senior Danielle Longe at shortstop, senior Kyle Kentala at third, and Ruhlig behind the plate.

Vargo was a surprise, Beard says, because she's smaller than a typical first baseman.

Schick moves well and has a quick release, and Longe is very sure-handed at short, with a good arm (she's a converted pitcher). Kentala has shown skill at third.

"Danielle reminds me of (former player) Gretchen Knutsen in that she has a strong arm and is very accurate," Beard says.

Ruhlig, he says, has the strongest arm since Liz Sager a few years ago.

Petty and senior Suzy Steele are projected outfielders, although Steele will also play first.

Other members of the team include Hilarie Saerzgiel, a back-up catcher, Laura Hurst, a back-up at second, Shannon Longe, Carrie Williams, Jenny Paddock, and utility player Sarah Pruess, all of whom can make significant contributions.

"We have a bench that has a lot of speed and can hit," Beard says.

"They just need some time to mature in the field.

Tecumseh may be the team to beat in the SEC this year,

Beard says, primarily because of its pitching staff.

Bulldogs Take To Track

A very youthful and inexperienced Chelsea Bulldogs boys track team will have its work cut out for it in the highly competitive Southeastern Conference this spring.

Among 47 boys on the team, coach Pat Clarke has just eight seniors and eight juniors. It's a rebuilding year.

"The league is really loaded," Clarke says.

"Pinckney, last year's champs, has everyone returning except one pole vaulter. They have 86 boys on the team and 25 seniors. Saline should challenge for second with a strong distance group. And the Lincoln coach said they were really struggling, but they were second at the Huron Relays, which had 55 teams, and first at the Spartan Relays, which had 65 teams."

The Bulldogs have lost 16 seniors and several all-state performers, who helped the team finish in the top 10 in the state each of the last three years. Even in those years, class B Chelsea couldn't beat class A Pinckney and Saline.

Among the seniors are returning shot putters Eric McCalla and Josh Bernhard, sprinters Jim and Tom Irwin, long jumper and sprinter Mark Hand, distance runner Mike Smith, pole vaulter David Tracy, and middle distance runner Tim Wesner.

The Irwins and Hand were three of the four members of last year's league champion 800 relay team.

Tracy has broken 13 feet in the pole vault.

Other who Clarke figures will make an impact include hurdlers Chris Dronen, a junior, and sophomore Matt Kennedy; junior distance runner Jake Hurst; sophomore pole vaulters Rob Frayer and Brent Young; freshman distance runner Aaron Ruhlig; and freshman runners Mike Holloway, Dan Dault, Brian Groesser, and Sam Compton.

For everyone else, Clarke says, it's a little too early to tell what will happen or even predict what their best events might be.

Runners in Marathon

A half-dozen area athletes have qualified to take on the runner's ultimate challenge and will participate in the April 15 Boston Marathon.

This year marks the 100th running of the traditional race, to include roughly 39,000 runners striving to finish the 26.2 mile course.

Roger Katakowski and Brian Zangara of Chelsea, Rick Harrington of Dexter, Eric Swager of Grass Lake, Neal Billetteaux of Manchester and Alonzo Taylor of Stockbridge will travel east to run in the world's most famous marathon.

Taylor, 49, is officially runner #20,251. Because of the ultra-crowded field, he expects it will take 25 minutes just to get to the starting line, and he likely won't be able to run freely until passing the one mile mark.

That delay won't bother him, though. Taylor wants to savor the moments running in the famous race. "I want to go out there and wave to the crowd and enjoy myself. I'm thinking of carrying a camera and taking pictures of the crowd while I'm running along," he said.

Taylor has run in seven previous marathons. The training regimen to prepare for even a "relaxed" marathon is exhausting just to think about.

"I didn't put the kind of mileage in I did for the qualifying. (Qualifiers needed to complete an earlier marathon in less than a threshold time, according to age group.) I was doing 75 miles a week then, and now I think my longest was a 57-mile week with a 20 mile training run at the end of it.

"For the most part, I'm averaging over the last eight weeks about 50 miles a week, including a lot of five, six and seven mile runs and an occasional 10 mile, and then a longer one each weekend until I get a couple of 20 milers in toward the end of training," Taylor explained.

Running 26.2 miles sounds torturous, if not impossible to many people, but Taylor said the feeling of crossing the finish line is enough to keep him going.

"It's just a feeling of satisfaction and accomplishment that makes me do it," Taylor concluded.

—Trying To Stay Warm—
Members of the Chelsea track team had to jog just to stay warm during the first few days of practice after the spring break this week. Chelsea figures to have another solid team this season.

Bulldogs Set To Defend SEC Conference Title

Chelsea girls track team, coached by Bill Bainton and assistant Bert Kruse, will build around a nucleus of 24 letter winners from last year's 10-0 team as they prepare to contend for the Southeastern Conference title that they shared with Saline and Pinckney last year.

Leading the Bulldogs are six seniors. Heidi Wehrwein was second in the SEC shot put last year and the team's third leading scorer. Wehrwein is also an outstanding discus thrower.

Katie Spink was third in the 400 last year and is a solid long jumper. She has been a key relay runner since her freshman year and can run anything from the 200 to the 800.

Melissa Hand struggled with injuries last year but was the SEC 800 champ as a sophomore and holds the school record in the 800. She is also an excellent 400 runner and has the speed to run in the 200 if needed.

Jill McKinnon and Heidi Kemnitz are experienced in both hurdle events, but may each focus on one this year. Kemnitz also figures to run relays.

Senior Angie Bell runs the 400 and has shown solid leadership skills in the sprint group this spring.

Sophomore Jeanne Spink was the team's leading scorer and the SEC 1600 and 3200 champion last spring. She will be counted on heavily again, but has solid support in the distances from sophomores Meghann Ziegler and Karen Pieper who were also league placers.

Junior Jennifer Space, a conference placer for two years, is another middle distance runner who will run anything from the sprints to the 800.

Junior Erin Hack placed in the long jump and has done well in early workouts. Hack probably will run in a sprint relay as well.

Junior Kim Herrst placed in the shotput in the SEC meet last year, and hopes to pick up where she left off.

Also back are sophomores Krystal Baird and Rachelle Skelly and junior Leigha Young, 3/4 of the 400 relay which placed in the SEC.

Other key returnees are Cindy Richard, a sophomore hurdler and thrower, juniors Kim Niehaus, who is being counted on to help in the 200 and 400, and Sarah Metzler in the 800, sophomores Megan Smith in the middle distances, and Sarah Jedele in the distances, and sophomore Becca Burby, who with Wehrwein and Herrst, gives the Bulldogs the best group of throwers in the league.

Others include sophomores Katie Wells and Julie Williams and junior Tracy Kramer in the sprints, and sophomore Emily Wineland, a hurdler and the Bulldogs only experienced high jumper.

Newcomers who should play major roles early are sophomore sprinter Angie Carpenter, freshman high jumper Karla Dettling, and freshman Katie Henry, a hurdler and long jumper who will also run on relays.

Rounding out the team are sophomores Jocelyn Anderson and freshmen Jennifer Buss, Jessica Gillespie, Louisa Hubbard, Sarah Martin, Katie Parker, Becca Williams, and Lisa Zimmerman in the distances; freshmen Lauren Turok and Aubrey Lambert in the sprints; freshman thrower Amy McCalla; and freshman high jumpers Liz DeShano and Malia Montange.

The Bulldogs, who are 51-3 overall since 1990 and have won the SEC four of the last five years, may be hard-pressed to keep their string alive, Bainton said. Co-champs Saline and Pinckney return most of their key performers from last year.

The Hornets had a lot of sophomores last year and came into their own late in the year. The only area they might be weak is in the throws. Pinckney has the largest squad in the league and the numbers give them a great deal of depth, as well as quality, particularly in the distances.

One of the big questions in the SEC this year is whether the size advantage of the two big schools will start to show on the track.

Lincoln has one of the state's best class B track athletes in Justina Phillips, and good sprint depth. They gave Chelsea a scare in the opening meet last year. Tecumseh graduated their best athlete, but still have several individual standouts, but don't appear to have much depth. Dexter has a balanced, but young team. They should get better as the season progresses and move up from last year's fifth place finish. Milan has some good distance runners, but may struggle to make the top four in the conference.

Hunter Safety Classes Set

The Chelsea Rod & Gun Club will soon be holding its first Hunter Safety Education classes of 1996.

The club, which offers the classes free of charge, will be holding two classes this spring: the first on April 13-14, and the second on May 18-19. Two more classes will be offered in the fall.

The classes run from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. both days, and they include instruction in hunting laws and ethics, basic outdoor skills, and the safe transportation and use of bow-and-arrow and of firearms. Anyone who wishes to participate may sign up for any of these classes through Chelsea Community Education, 313-475-9830.

Since 1988 Michigan law has required successful completion of a Hunter Safety course for anyone born after Jan. 1, 1960 before he or she may purchase a hunting license. The state's new computerized licensing system adds teeth to this requirement, as it now can match Hunter Safety records with license records and to track those who illegally obtain a hunting license.

Additionally, some states such as Colorado and Pennsylvania, and all of Canada, require completion of a Hunter Safety course before they will issue a non-resident license.

The Michigan Hunter Safety program has been overwhelmingly successful. Since 1971, when Hunter Safety education first became mandatory for hunters aged 12-16, the number of hunting accidents has steadily decreased from as many as 288 per year to around 50 per year now, despite many more hunters being in the field. There are now very few fatal hunting accidents in Michigan (less than five in an average year) making hunting one of the safest outdoor sports.

The Chelsea Rod & Gun Club has one of the largest and most active hunter safety programs in the state. They currently have a staff of 12 volunteer instructors, all of whom have taken classes and are certified by the Michigan Department of Natural Resources, and most of whom are also certified by the National Rifle Association.

The class follows a curriculum prescribed by the DNR, and is taught by an experienced team of instructors. Each instructor teaches topics within his own area of expertise. Over 200 students participate each year, all without charge. Parents are also invited to sit in on the class; hunting is best enjoyed as a family activity.

The club held three Hunter Safety classes this past fall on the weekends of Sept. 9-10, Sept. 24-25 and Oct. 8-9. The fall 1995 classes graduated a combined total of 108 students. The students, who ranged in age from 11 to 48, received instruction in Michigan hunting laws, firearms safety, outdoor survival and other topics related to safe hunting.

The students in the class held Sept. 9 and 10 were, in alphabetical order: Brian Badenhop, Brandon Balcom, Chad Bennett, Juanita Blanchard, Robert Collin, Nathaniel Dawson, Bradley Delph Jr., Chad Delph, Gordon Delph, Gregory Delph, Todd Gingras, Dennis Gould.

The students in the class held Sept. 24 and 25 were, in alphabetical order: David Arnold, Dan Behnke, Justin Carr, John Cauffiel, Max Cherem, Kylar Damon, Penny Davis, Jeff Doering, Mary Kay Doering, Justin Ehels, Adam Green, Daniel Grimes, Amanda Jessee, Heather Jessee, Mitchell Julian, Stephen Kakoczki, Dan Kanitz, Stephen D. More Teams Will Be Recognized Next Week

Tamara Evans, Suzi Regan, Randall Godwin, Terry Heck, and Janet Maylie appear in The Purple Rose Spring Comedy Festival, a collection of nine short plays centered on the theme "Life: Liberty and The Pursuit of Lust!"

Comedy Festival Irreverent

By Steven W. Daut
Special Writer

The Purple Rose Spring Comedy Festival has some great comedy, some mediocre comedy, some things that aren't comedy at all, and a fair amount of sex and profanity. If you're offended by the "F" word, prepare to be offended half a dozen times or so.

The Comedy Festival starts irreverently, even before the plays begin, with 98-pound weakling Randall Godwin. When he walks onto the stage in his scraggly jeans and baseball cap to do the Actors Equity Association Announcement and introduces himself as Jeff Daniels, it's like a little play before the other little plays. This toothpick-sized Daniels may be the guy who gets cheated out of the Academy Awards every year because he doesn't live in Hollywood, but he's also the guy that sets the stage for the next eight plays of the evening.

In the first play, Pedro's Pasta, by (the real) Jeff Daniels, we meet a couple of people who get together regularly for Diablo Chianti and lust at an ethnically confused pasta place. They've been meeting ever since they fell in love while he was under the table one night. But they aren't really cheating, they insist; it's only lust.

Next, in Righting the Constitution, by Anthony Caselli, the Guardians of the Bill of Rights discover a typographical error that threatens to shake the foundations of our country. This one is an exercise in discovering how far you can stretch a corny idea, and, frankly, it gets stretched a bit too far. The result is just dumb, which may be the point. This one is followed by Foul Play by Jeffery Herman, a wild and confusing who-dun-it that defies description. The byplay with the sound effects adds a lot of fun to this play. The first time Guido Calamari, played by Joseph Albright, opened his mouth, I was convinced that he was the killer. You'll have to see the play to find out if I was right.

The last offering before the intermission is A Couple of New Women Sittin' Around Talkin' by Jeff Daniels. Basically, it's about an encounter group whose purpose at first seems to be to bash stereotypical American maleness, one of Daniels' favorite themes. These women have found a way to put all this man-silliness behind them. It wasn't until I was writing this up that I began to understand the title, and one thing I understood clearly was that the title is incorrect. None of the women was sitting around.

The star play of the evening comes just after the intermission, in the form of Four Extremely Attractive Women Sitting Around Fantasizing About Rich Orloff, by Rich Orloff. Unlike the Daniels play, these women were sitting, and lounging, and slinking, and all manner of things. The title itself had me laughing, and the play is even funnier than its title as these women share their fantasies about the towering sex-God Orloff.

Randall Godwin as Orloff is hilarious to watch as he pretends to be writing while these women slink around him. Three of the Extremely Attractive Women are played by Tamara Evans, Janet Maylie, and Suzi Regan, and they all add to the sultry air. But my favorite is Livia, played by Terry Heck. She is a virgin so sought after that she's lost her virginity hundreds of times, and now all she wants is Orloff. Kinda made me wish I was Orloff, actually.

After this play, things turn serious. In The Date, Dennis North gives us a sad and insightful look at the sexual games we play. John Seibert and Albright work well off of each other, and Evans is tragic as the desperately-seeking-stripper.

The next play, Rosemary and Julian, by Daniels, was mostly actor/director in-jokes, and didn't hold together. It was disappointing to see Wayne David Parker, who has been hands-down awesome in past roles, wandering around trying to find his "root" in the play and only managing to look confused. With a field of 40 initial plays to pick from, I can't help but wonder why they included this dog in the final cut.

The last play is 2 Cats in the Yard by Suzi Regan, and it stars Regan as a folk singer in a lonely bar, with Albright as her only audience. He has mistaken her for a radio, and she's struggling with her self-image, caught between art and life. She also gives us a too-brief glimpse of yet another of her many talents: a strong singing voice and style reminiscent of Alánis Morissette.

Overall, there is some fun here, and some insight. Director Guy Sanville and crew have done a decent job of hitting some high points, but the Summer Comedy Festival has its share of lows as well.

The festival continues through May 19. The box office number is (313) 475-7902.

Callahan To Lead Children's Organization

Dennis P. Callahan, president and CEO of Crowley, Milner & Co., has been elected President of Spaulding for Children's Board of Directors. Spaulding, based in Southfield, is a special needs permanency planning center for children who languish in the child welfare system.

Callahan, who engineered the turnaround of Detroit's 88-year-old, 10 store chain, Crowley's, has more than 20 years experience in the retail industry. He is a graduate of Northern Michigan University, and is a resident of Grosse Pointe City.

Other newly elected board officers include: Joe Ellen Skutt, Manager of Mercy Hospital of Detroit's Deaconess Family Practice and a Detroit resident, to Vice President; Don Gregg, President of Retirement Funding in Bingham Farms and a Bloomfield Hills resident, to Treasurer; and Barbara Jean Patton, from Detroit, to Secretary.

Spaulding for Children was founded in 1968 by Chelsea farmer Warren Spaulding to help children who languish in foster care. The Agency was the first to focus on the adoption of children that other agencies could not place and who were the least well served. Spaulding is best known for its pioneering work in the field of special needs adoption and, nationally, for training through its federally designated National Resource Center for Special Needs Adoption (NRC).

The Agency's Permanency Planning Center provides adoption, specialized foster care, reunification, foster parent adoption, and home-based services annually to support to more than 200 Detroit area children and 400 families who are at risk of disruption and dissolution. Through the NRC, Spaulding trains more than 4,000 child welfare professionals each year, a total of 40,000 people have been trained since 1985.

Retailers Acquire Web Site

The Michigan Retailers Association has announced the opening of MRA's member-oriented site on the Internet's World Wide Web.

RetailNet, short for Michigan Retailers Network, is a virtual private network providing retailers with specialized information, communications tools and access to the rest of the Internet. Address: <http://www.retailers.com>.

"MRA is in the first wave of trade associations establishing sites on the web," said Larry Meyer, MRA Vice Chairman and CEO.

RetailNet provides members with electronic access to a variety of MRA resources, including the Capitol Fax digest of weekly legislative action, news releases, the Michigan Retailer monthly newspaper and the Michigan Retail Index database on monthly retail activity across the state. It also provides e-mail, electronic discussion sessions, direct links to the home pages of related government, business, education and service organizations, and the ability to "surf" the entire Internet.

House Afford Men Independence

By Scott Bishop
Staff Writer

Bob Hamilton and Steve Murphy faced far more than their fair shares of tragedy when they were very young. Both were victims of severe head injuries, Hamilton at age 18, Murphy at 10. The trauma changed their lives instantly and drastically, but thanks to the Dwelling Place, it hasn't eclipsed their self-reliance.

Since November of 1993, Hamilton, now 48, and Murphy, 29, have lived at the Dwelling Place, adjacent to Chelsea Community Hospital at 777 S. Main Street.

With some financial assistance from their families and a few hours of care assistance each day, the two men are reveling in the independence their injuries might have taken away.

Hamilton loves to grill burgers so much he can be seen outside in freezing winter weather, grilling away. He's nicknamed himself "Grillmaster."

Murphy displays his culinary talents not on the grill outside, but in baking prolific amounts of bread in the kitchen.

Hamilton's a bowler and displays a wicked table-tennis serve, while Murphy is the house Nintendo champion.

Dispute rages, however, between the two men as to who reigns as air-hockey king.

Murphy's sister Donna, a recreational therapist at the hospital and co-founder of The Dwelling Place, Inc., hopes that two more similar residents can be found to share the home.

That way, she said, The Dwelling Place, Inc., a non-profit corporation supported by the Hamilton and Murphy families, could cede even more agency to Murphy, Hamilton and their prospective housemates.

"We are not trying to have it be a group home or a program. We're trying to get it situated financially, which means we're looking for other people to live there, so that between the four of them they can meet the cost of the mortgage, pay for the staffing, for the people that help them out with meals and make sure they get where they need to go, and that for the most part (the house) operates as its own business," Donna Murphy explained.

She continued to illustrate where the Dwelling Place idea came from and what motivated her and co-founder Cindy Harrison.

"(Hamilton and Murphy) are individuals, but when you get lumped into some program or some service, you're not that, you're on someone's caseload. (It began) so that they had freedom and independence. So that they have the same opportunities anyone else does, in that they get to dictate (their) living arrangement, in a sense," Donna Murphy said.

Two additional residents, along with Hamilton and Murphy, could make the home largely self-sufficient, through combining their disability funds, according to Murphy's sister. The families would still need to contribute funding, but not nearly as much.

Finding additional housemates is a priority, according to Donna Murphy, so the successful project can continue.

"It's working. It's definitely working. You just can't keep doing something without a source of money," she clarified.

Donna Murphy explained that the two men have become close, and that friendship has been valuable.

"They get more independent over time because they've got each other figured out. Together they do really well," she said.

The Dwelling Place, Inc. provided staff for 24-hour living assistance at its beginning in 1993, but Hamilton and Murphy have progressed to need just 50-60 hours help per week, which their families pay for privately.

While Hamilton and Murphy handle much of the everyday cleanup and house-keeping of residential life, the staff assistance is helpful in providing organization and initiation.

"What we figure is that an employee who works for them is sort of a guest in their home, but is (also) sort of guiding them through the day," Donna Murphy explained.

"Another key issue is we're trying to find them employment in Chelsea," she continued.

The past two years, Hamilton and Murphy have boarded buses to Ann Arbor, bound for the Work Skills Corporation, a subsidized training program.

The two men are capable of part-time work, Donna Murphy said, and it would add a productive element to their lives and might provide them a small amount of "pocket change."

Both Hamilton and Murphy are very social and personable, she added, and could do good work as greeters in a store or other tasks.

"In either case, if an employer took them on board, there would be some supervision that would be needed for either one of them, but they're very proud men and I think they're an addition to any setting because of their courage, what they deal with every day," Donna Murphy explained.

Community support has been invaluable to the Dwelling Place, she acknowledged. The hospital community has been helpful, but it hasn't been the only help.

After renting the house for a year, the non-profit organization was given the opportunity to buy it. However, the resources for a down-payment weren't there.

"We really didn't know what to do, and (then) John Mann from Chelsea State Bank basically gave us a mortgage for the house with no collateral and no money down. So we mortgaged what was about a $130,000 house with him saying 'Here's a mortgage.' Now, since that time, which has been over a year, we've been paying mortgage payments through the family money," Donna Murphy illustrated.

Steve Murphy and Bob Hamilton pose in their kitchen. The two men are overcoming severe head injuries and preserving their independence by living semi-independently at the Dwelling Place in Chelsea.

She hoped that additional residents for the Dwelling Place could be found before the end of the year, to defray family costs and help the men take greater financial control of the property.

"Once it's financially sound and operates on its own accord, I'll just be involved because I'm Steve's sister," Donna Murphy said.

Irrespective of the financial burdens, the independence experiment has been a success for Hamilton and Murphy, she explained.

"I think it exceeds our expectations in a lot of ways. What I've seen for both of them is that they've accomplished more because we've upped the ante," Donna Murphy concluded.

The non-profit, Dwelling Place, Inc. plans two fundraisers in the coming months.

A golf scramble event will happen in May and a dinner/dance is scheduled for the fall.

Voice Competition

nals. I heard some exceptional young voices with incredible potential for future growth. And, of course, it's especially exciting to see our own Chelsea kids do so well in such a large metropolitan pool of talent."

The event was sponsored by the Madrigal Chorale of Southfield, an established choir which performs and tours throughout the United States, Europe, and the Greater Detroit area. The Chorale, directed by Robert A. Martin, will be releasing a new CD soon and this is the second year that the group has sponsored this scholarship competition for young singers.

The competition is open to any student between the ages of 14-18, who resides in Macomb, Washtenaw, Livingston, or Wayne/County, and is in good academic standing. Named in memory of a former member of the organization, the Brian Callaghan scholarship is awarded to outstanding young singers in order to recognize their classical vocal achievements and help further their musical education.

The scholarship monies may be applied to private voice lessons, summer music camps, private voice lessons and coaching, or to College and University tuition.

Stock Market Winners

Thirty fifth grade students at North Elementary School took part in a Stock Market Club recently. Each student started with $100,000 in make believe money and picked their own investments. They met at lunch over 10 weeks to watch their investments grow. The students stuck with blue chips such as Chrysler and Disney. The students graphed their stocks, with the help of their broker, Deb Bauer. The students who earned the most money were Mike Groesser and David Hardcastle, pictured above. Their reward was a lunch with Bauer.

Grief Support Series Slated

Grief is a universal experience, and a painful one. When we lose a loved one through death, struggle through a divorce, lose a job, or our health, or a friend, we grieve. New Beginnings is a grief support program for people who have lost something that is important to them. Participants can talk about their memories, how they are dealing with grief, and what has helped them.

This spring New Beginnings starts with a five week introductory speaker series sponsored by Chelsea Community Hospital and the Chelsea Retirement Community. The series will be held on Wednesday evenings, beginning April 17, from 7-8:30 p.m. at the Chelsea

—Community Day Celebration—

Preschoolers through first grade celebrated Community Day on Sunday, March 24 at St. Mary's Parish Center. Easter was the theme of the celebration and the children made a bunny decoration along with the prayer service and decorated paper cross. As a special guest, the Easter Bunny dropped in and met, among others, Mitchell and Lindsay Cook, above.

Congressional Cutbacks Spoil Earth Day Celebration

By Diane MacEachern

This year's anniversary of Earth Day may be marked by an unusual level of activity from an unlikely troupe of "environmentalists"—anti-environmental members of Congress who have spent the last year systematically knocking the teeth out of the laws and policies that protect our air and water and safeguard our natural resources, and who now face re-election by an electorate that is decidedly pro-environment.

These Senators and Representatives have left almost no law or regulation unturned in their effort to undo the 26 years of progress made since the first Earth Day was observed on April 22, 1970. Almost any ordinance that favors people over pollution seems to have found itself in the sights of the anti-environment congressional majority. But several regulations, most notably those that protect endangered species, conserve our public lands, and safeguard human health and safety, have been particularly singled out for "streamlining," the Capitol Hill euphemism for undercutting the fundamental, and successful, the way in which our country prevents pollution and conserves our natural resources treasure chest for future generations.

Among the most egregious anti-environmental actions taken by the 104th Congress are laws that eviscerate the Endangered Species Act, expedite the clear cutting of our ancient forests, and cut funding for the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

According to EPA Administrator Carol Browner, who testified at recent hearings on Capitol Hill, enforcement of environmental standards, cleanup of toxic waste sites and leaking oil tanks, and water quality control have all suffered as a result of Congressional imposed budget cutbacks that have reduced funds for environmental enforcement by 25 percent and denied communities across the United States $712 million in funding to safeguard drinking water and keep raw sewage out of rivers. "We cannot ensure the American people their air is clean, their drinking water is safe, the health of their children is protected," Browner noted.

U.S. Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt expressed similar concern over the efforts of anti-environment legislators to dismantle the National Park Service and undermine the Endangered Species Act. "I have yet to meet an American who says we have too many national parks," Babbitt testified as he voiced misgivings over the forced closing of 368 parks and visitor areas during the recent budget impasses.

The hue and cry generated by both government officials charged with protecting our environment and by a public that strongly favors strengthening, not weakening, our environmental laws have begun to worry anti-environmental members of Congress who are planning re-election campaigns and know they'll have to defend their pro-pollution votes at town hall meetings, chicken dinners, and candidate debates.

Particularly alarming to this "brown crowd" is the recent election of Representative Ron Wyden to fill the vacated U.S. Senate seat of Oregon Senator Bob Packwood. Wyden, who ran on a strong pro-environment platform, successfully made an issue of his opponent's record as a polluter. Diane MacEachern is the president of Vanguard Communications, a Washington-based firm that specializes in environmental issues. For more information, contact Brenda K. Foster at (202) 331-4323.
