

Village Council sets property tax

Chelsea Village Council voted June 9 to set the property tax rate at a total of 16.6144 mills for the next taxing year. Taxes for a house with $200,000 market value would be $1,661.44.

The tax includes about 10.23 mills for the general operating funds. The remainder will be divided between the library, bond retirement, streets and solid waste.

The council was required to hold a public hearing on the tax rate because of the Truth in Taxation Act. Village Manager Jack Myers said the council has to make a motion to set the rate above what is determined by the act.

The council can raise the taxes up to the level of what is allowed by the Headlee Amendment. which is the normal tax rate. The hearing is an annual event to determine taxes in the village.

During a public hearing on the tax rate, Myers said that the council's action was not a rate increase because taxes are always set by the council's action every year. He said the rate will actually be lower than last year.

Grocery shows plans to village council

Representatives from Farmer Jack and Chuck Beck Realty showed Chelsea Village Council the plans for their development on the south part of town. Council members apparently liked what they saw, and were almost unanimous in their praise for the development.

Farmer Jack was scheduled to bring plans back to the planning commission. Tuesday to go over changes and approach site plan approval. Farmer Jack is in preliminary site plan approval and expects to continue negotiations with the village over possible changes to the develop-

"Times are changing and developers are more responsive to municipalities," Trustee Carol Rauschenberger said. "The dialogue is there, and this looks like a first-class development to be proud

Village revises watershed resolution

The village council sent back for revision a resolution to join the Huron River Watershed's attempts to lower phosphates in the Huron River. Phosphates can damage wildlife in the river, and the state of Michigan wants to reduce the amounts coming from wastewater treatment plants that feed into the watershed.

The council objected to wording in the agreement that admitted "a substantial source of phosphorus comes from the discharges from the wastewater treatment plant that services this community." The council considered that statement inaccurate, because they said Ann Arbor is the largest producer of phosphates.

The village is entering into the agreement to stave off attempts by the state to regulate wastewater treatment plants. The plan would be in place for five years, Wastewater Superintendent Brad Roberts said, during which time the state would not mandate that plants reduce phosphorus coming from the plants. Roberts told the council that he supported the agreement as a way to try to reduce the phosphorus without state intervention.

Council votes for moratorium on development

By Eric Bowen Staff Writer

In a move that surprised some developers. Chelsea Village Council imposed a moratorium on development June 9, voting 4-1 to stop all projects in the village. Single homes and projects that had submitted site plans to the planning commission or paid fees to be put on the agenda will be excepted.

The ordinance took effect immediately after it was approved. It will hold development for six months, at which point it could be extended with an amendment to the ordi-

Village Manager Jack Myers said that the moratorium was brought on by a lack of water to cover new development in the. village. He said to his knowledge the village has never taken this step before.

The ordinance states that with all of the commercial development and housing projects, the equivalent of 1,020 houses are moving into the village. The development will use an additional 68 percent of what is currently in use, which will more than max out the available water.

The ordinance also mentioned the impact on wastewater. It stated that the new development would raise usage of the sewage plant up to 78 the village closer to having to expand the plant at consider-

"What we need to do is to put in a building moratorium while we look for a well and look at financing a wastewater treatment plant," said Trustee Frank Hammer, who brought the ordinance in front of the council.

Developer Rene Papo argued with the council about the ordihance at the meeting, saying it would have a significant impact on his development in Commerce Park in the southern part of town. Papo asked the council to reconsider the mora-Papo said Friday that Kentucky Fried Chicken will be especially hurt by the moratorium. He said the restaurant had planned to submit site plans this week, but will now be put on hold for six months.

Papo said he was in the final stages of closing on the property for another business. He expects that sale will be on hold as well.

"There are still a few businesses who haven't submitted plans, so they're on hold," Papo said. "I would have liked the planning commission to have continued to take plans."

Papo also said he would have liked more warning about the ban. He said it would have given developers more time to submit plans and come to the council to voice their opposi-

"It was a bit sudden," Papo said. "I heard about it about an hour before the meeting.

"I had the opportunity to come to the meeting, but there are other people in the village that must be affected besides me."

Myers said the village is making a concerted effort to find a new well site. The village needs a flow of approximately. 1.000 gallons per minute to make a well worthwhile, Myers said, and about half an acre of land to build the well.

The village recently drilled a test hole on property owned by Chelsea Retirement Community but found only enough water to supply a single home. Myers said the village has a few pieces of property in mind for other tests including a percent of its capacity, leaving plot near Timber Town and Pierce Park.

> To facilitate further drillings, the council also voted to allocate money for new tests. In an open-ended motion the council authorized the administrators to spend a reasonable amount to find a well site.

Papo said he would help out the village if he could. He said if he could find property that would provide enough water he would donate it to the village to get the moratorium lifted.

Papo said he had a local driller looking at his property to come up with good candidates for drilling. He said his stance was similar to when he donated land for the village's water tower.

"It is in our interests to make sure the infrastructure in the village can support the development we're doing," Papo said. "If that means donating some land for a well, I'll do it."

Opening Remarks

By Brian Hamilton

Last year about this time, I had a chance to tour the new Pierce Lake Elementary School as the first significant portion of the Chelsea School District's bond issue was nearing completion.

I remember how impressed I was (and still am) by the new facility, partly because it seemed like such a giant step up from the elementaries I was used to. North and South schools were so crowded and there were so many structural problems.

Even though from the outside Pierce Lake still looks more like a prison than an elementary to me, inside it is a remarkable facility.

Several people have commented recently that the new Chelsea High School doesn't look like a $26 million structure. Outside it's a step up from Pierce Lake, but that's not saying much. Some people were apparently expecting more flash from their tax money - something more along the line of Dexter's Mill Creek Middle School, which is quite an imposing structure when viewed from Dexter-Ann Arbor Road.

To all those people, I say hold your judgment. Our new high school is going to make you proud once you get inside. In fact, you might even feel a little guilty because the school is almost too nice, especially when you compare it to what we've had these last 10 years or so since the high school began deteriorating.

I took a tour last week (you can see photos on page 19 in this edition) of the new CHS, courtesy of Community Education Director Jeff Rohrer. There is still plenty of finishwork to be completed — so much, in fact, that it's hard to imagine the building will be done on time. However, a foreman there assured us it would be ready. I remember wondering the same thing last year about Pierce Lake.

Anyway, our new high school will be such an improvement from our current open-campus setup that it's hard to imagine many people. questioning whether we got our money's worth. In fact, anyone who's had any significant home renovation project lately will probably come away thinking we got the deal of a lifetime.

The parts of this building that are most impressive have the least to do with traditional education in the three Rs.

The auditorium is perhaps the most outstanding, although when I saw it there was scaffolding all over the place and there was no way to get a decent photo. The auditorium is so expansive with plenty of seating Behind the stage, look up about three stories and you'll see a catwalk at the ceiling. You'll have the feeling you're in a professional theater.

The auditorium also has a series of support areas, including a prop room with a loading area, dressing rooms, and a large rehearsal area.

The gym is another marvel, with a track circling overhead. Running perpendicular to the main floor is room for several basketball courts. All the extra space is likely to allow the district to begin an intramural program, something this district has needed for a long

The foreman told us about the new gym floor, and how high-tech its materials are. He talked about compression and shock absorption, all designed to be easy on the knees and feet-of competitors.

There's a large wrestling room upstairs and a weight room. There are expanded -coaches' areas and locker ar-

Teams won't be falling all over each other for practice space and times. They'll be able to practice at reasonable hours.

The common area/cafeteria is another interesting space. The offices of Principal Ron Mead and Assistant Principal Robin Raymond are upstairs with overlooking windows, which might prompt some to start calling them "warden" and "assistant warden." This, of all the areas I saw, had the most "institutional" feel to it.

The classrooms, which are the closest to being finished, are light and comfortable and contain more noise-abating Death Carpet (Has anyone reported any health problems from carpeting at Pierce Lake?). There's plenty of storage and teachers finally get decent offices. I suspect that science teachers are going to be the happiest as they will finally have decent lab facilities. I remember seeing science teachers run an extension cord from one classroom to another through outside windows because their classrooms didn't have enough electrical outlets.

Of course, one of the best features of our new high school — all the new technology — will be largely invisible.

I could go on and on about Chelsea's biggest public project ever. But before you believe any of the naysayers and skeptics, take a tour of the building. Better yet, take a tour of the current CHS, then walk across Freer Road. You will be impressed.

Uncle Apollo

What with all the graduation parties going on, people have been asking me about the origins of the graduation ritual. And of course, the first thing I tell them is that the rumors are false. Sure, Acme Robe Company went through some hard times when they banned the Black Sabbath in Europe, but the company absolutely did not invent graduation to get rid of their excess inventory.

It actually began long before that. Millions of years, in fact. Used to be, before they invented Jiffy Mix, everybody had to gather their own blueberries and cranberries if they wanted to make tasty muffins. So they went out into the forest to gather these things, sometimes taking months just to find a handful of edible

It took a lot of experimentation, and it's a sad fact of our history that many prehistoric people lost their lives trying to figure out what you could eat and what you couldn't. For example, someone might die eating a poisonous mushroom, but no one was there to record the incident and take some photographs so the next person wouldn't make the same mistake. And if they made a sign that said, "Don't eat these," no one could read it because they didn't have language.

Well, they all talked it over and decided that they ought to invent language so people would quit dying, so they did. Of course, they were still experimenting, and that has cost the human race many problems over the years. One elassic example is when one of the early speakers labeled asparagus edible, a mistake which still haunts us.

In order to make sure that kids learned the new language so they didn't eat the wrong stuff, they invented schools. But since by this time people were farming the land in order to make flour because it tasted better than mud in their biscuits, they needed the kids to provide a free source of labor. Arlotta tells me they tried to use her ancestors first, but it took a specialist to train a cow to drive a tractor and that got very expensive, so they used kids instead. Anyway, they shut down the schools in the summer to make the kids do their work for them while they went on vacation.

Once they had_enough food to eat, they started looking around for places to stay. At the time, they didn't have chain saws so they couldn't cut down trees. So as you might expect, they came up with the idea of using caves, It took awhile for them to chase out the bears and clean the places up so they were livable, but eventually, they were able to move in. In their new homes, the thought they had finally found a place for the peace and quiet they always craved.

But by this time, their kids had become teenagers and stereo had been invented. And it drove the parents crazy, so they invented the ritual of graduation to get the kids to move out and leave them in peace. And the kids went back out to the forest to start another round of evolution. This is the origin of the song, "School's out, school's out, teacher let the monkeys out." It also proves that Darwin was right.

Hospice helps father, daughter cope

Holidays are more difficult for Dexter resident Rick Griffith since his wife, Susan, died suddenly and unexpectedly last year. He and his 10-yearold daughter, Erika, don't have any solid plans for Father's Day. But the Saturday before, Griffith will attend a dinner put on by the women in the grief recovery group he joined last vear

"It gives me a social event to go to where it's safe," says Griffith. "There are other people there who understand if you have to go off into the corner by yourself, and that's

As Griffith tried to work through his loss, his daughter was facing her own grief. She. too, joined a grief recovery group,

"You're trying to deal with your own grief, and then trying to deal with hers and help her through hers, too," says Griffith. "I didn't know how to grieve, I've lost family in the past, but never anybody this close. How do you deal with grief yourself, and then your child's?"

Griffith met his wife in college his freshman year and they married young. They were together for nearly 20 years when she died of complications from rheumatic heart disease.

"I know I-needed-somebody to help me because it's too important of a time in Erika's life," says Griffith. "I'm a scared dad. We have a lot of fear, and the child has a lot of fear. The support groups help us work our way through that fear and things aren't quite as scary."

When two friends both introduced him to the grief sup-, port groups offered by Arbor Hospice, he decided to try them out. Now, over a year later, he and Erika still attend the weekly meetings.

"It's a safe place to go from the sharing point of view," says Griffith. "You're meeting with others who are in the same situation-as you are. As I'm finding out after a little more than a year, in some cases, people who haven't walked in your shoes sometimes don't get it.

Griffith attends "Starting Over;" a grief recovery group geared toward people his age who have lost a spouse or a partner. Many of them are facing the challenge of raising children alone, so he also attends the Parent Loss Group.

"As a parent, these groups are outstanding because they help give us perspective on what the kids are going through," says Griffith. "I knew what it meant to lose a wife, but my daughter had lost her mother and I don't know what that means. I haven't lost mine. As parents, it gives us a good perspective on what to expect on what she needs from me. Then there's the general parenting. When you get a group of parents together they can't help but share experiences. That's a real important part of the group. Each of our children'are so unique, and the death effects each of them so differently. The different coping strategies have been really significant."

The groups vary to meet the needs of the individuals in them. There are groups for older adults, who have been married for 50 or more years. There are groups for people suffering other losses. And there are groups for adults Griffith's age.

"The group I'm in is for adults 45 and under," says Griffith. "You have a lot of issues with parenting, with being a younger adult who may very well wind up remarrying or in another relationship some day. It helps us figure out how do you get from where you are, to there, It takes you from this stage of grief and shows you how to move on and settle into your new life."

On alternating weeks they have the adult support group and the parent support group.

"We rotate between dealing with parenting issues and personal issues," says Griffith "You need to separate the two. I think it's a great thing."

Griffith and his daughter are close, and take long walks in the park and talk. But there are many challenges to raising a child alone, and Griffith is glad of the help he has received through his groups and Erika's. She is in her own recovery process, which began with an art therapy class last summer. "She's an artsy kind of kid, and it was the first thing she had been exposed to from Arbor Hospice and it really hit home for her. It had been about five months since Sue's death. She needed to express herself and it gave her a way to do that."

Erika's group also offer her the peer support children her age crave.

"From my daughter's point of view, it has been a place where there are other kids who are like her," says Griffith. "There have been comments from kids at school that you don't have a family any more because you don't have a mom. It was real important when there was somebody like her who had lost a mom. She's finding the camaraderie, that here's another kid who's like me and we can talk about it."

Griffith says Erika likes to go to group, that she thinks it's important.

Griffith says he will stay in group for awhile yet. There is no limit on when you have to leave. People grieve in their own way and in their own time.

"We were married just a few weeks short of 20 years," says Griffith. "It's hard to go from having somebody close to you for that time to nothing. You lose that intimacy and that normal give-and-take that you have. In a group you have some give-and-take, and you feel needed and wanted. When you go home at night and there's no one there, there's something of you from group you can give and get back.

"To sit around and look at and talk to people who are a year, two years or three years after the death and what they've come through kind of gives you a feeling that you can get through this too — that there is something after this. The pain stops, not totally, but it gets less than it is. There's a sense that you can deal with it, you can cope with it, so you're not alone."

My Dearest Mother Wanda Fay Thomas (Fletcher)

Mother: These past few months I have realized that I will never truly understand the reason for your leaving my life. I'm sure my loneliness and the emptiness I feel will never go away. I know it will get easier, but never be better. You were my mother, my father, and my friend. I will always remember your strong pride and your warm smiles that I was privileged to have with you. Remembering your efforts has helped me to get through these times. I thank you, Mother, and would not change any part of you or what you have given me. My only regret is that you didn't stick your finger in the air and swear at the backslider and One-Eyed Jack. Happy Birthday. I love you and miss you.

dition in older (over 10 years old) cats. In cats with Chronic Renal (Kidney) failure. or CRF, a portion of the remaining healthy idney cells has been lost, leading to a decline in kidney function. -CRF can be hereditary (genetic), or acquired. The acquired form is most common, and can-result from any number of conditions which affect the kidneys, including toxin exposure, infections, cancers, and metabolic diseases. Family Medicine

By John C. Wolf, D.O. Associate Professor of Family Medicine Ohio University College of Osteopathic Medicine.

Can the blood pressure medicines that my husband takes, Hytrin, Hyzaar and Corgard, be causing him to have muscle problems the way I "statin" cholesterolknow lowering drugs can?

We take medicine to get better and usually experiencethat desired result. Occasionally, however, we suffer an undesirable consequence of ingesting the "wonder drug" our doctor has prescribed. Sometimes this unwanted result is a true allergic response, but more frequently it's a known reaction that only occurs in a small number would like to give you some background on the adverse reactions you astutely observed can come from certain cholesterol-lowering drugs. I'll then compare these reactions with what your husband might be experiencing.

The problems caused by high cholesterol are well known. Those unfortunate individuals who can't bring their values into the normal range by diet alone often are given one or more medications, frequently one of the "statin" family in some people; these cholesterol lowering can cause muscle damage, and in certain cases this can be severe The severe form called rhabdomyolysis — is often further complicated by kidney failure. Fortunately, these life-threatening complications are quite infrequent, but rarity doesn't make much difference

The medications your husband is taking — Hytrin, Hyzaar and Corgard - are used to treat high blood pressure in addition to heart and prostate disorders. These drugs work differently to achieve their desired effect and work together in a complementary fashion. As is true for all drugs, they can each occasionally produce an undesirable response. Specifically, each of these drugs has rarely - in 1 percent or less of patients - caused muscle pain and weakness. One or more of your husband's medicines, therefore, may be the cause of his muscles problems. Fortunately, the muscle problems caused by Hytrin, Hyzaar and Corgard are not rhabdomyolysis, that severe condition, caused by the "statin" drugs. Instead, they produce a much milder disorder that heals after the medicine is no longer used. The important message from this is to be sure to report to your doctor any new symptom that is mentioned in the drug information sheet you received with your prescription.

Fortunately, there are usually treatment alternatives that avoid, or at least lessen, any undesirable side effect you may be experiencing.

Ready to downsize your residence? Contemplating a transfer to an area with a lower cost of living? Think you might prefer renting?

If the fear of a huge capital gains tax bill has deterred your family from "trading down," now might be the time to put up the "For Sale" sign on your home. According to the Michigan Association of CPAs (MACPA), provisions in the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 now make it possible for you to avoid paying tax on your principal residence.

ceeds into the purchase of a new residence of equal or great value within two years before or after the sale.

Under the new law, taxpayers may exclude from federal income tax the capital gains from the sale of their residence — up to $500,000 for married couples filing jointly, and up to $250,000 for a single filer. You do not have to buy a replacement home to take advantage of this tax break. The new rules, which generally affect home sales after May 6, gains realized from the sale of 1997, eliminate the pressure to roll over your sales proceeds New act revises exclusion into a more expensive residence. least two of the five years prior to the sale. If you're married and file a joint return, either you or your spouse may satisfy the ownership requirement, but both of you must meet the occupancy requirement. What's more, unlike the one-time $125,000 exclusion, taxpayers can use the new break over and over each time they sell a personal residence (but not more than once every two years). You qualify for the exclusion even if you already used the $125,000 exclusion under the prior law.

If you fail to meet the twoyear requirement because of a change in the location of your job, health reasons or other unforeseen circumstances... you're not entirely out of luck. The tax law allows you to exclude the fraction of the $250,000 or $500,000 equal to the fraction of the two years that the requirements are met. the new law does not change the tax treatment of losses on sales of personal residences. If you sell your home at a loss, that loss is not deductible.

Recordkeeping

For most homeowners, the new-exclusion rules should ease record-keeping requirements, since it's no longer necessary to document home improvements that add to the home's basis, However, CPAs point out that for those homeowners who anticipate realizing gains in excess of the exclusion amount, record-keeping takes on increased significance, since they will no longer be able to indefinitely defer gains by buying more expensive homes.

Your Money Matters

Vacation. An eight-letter word we long for every summer, when millions of us are eager to get away from school and work. We take to the road in cars, live on boats, relax on beaches and pitch tents at campsites. Regardless of what we do or where we go, vacations are meant to be carefree and relaxing.

But how do you plan a vacation that is safe, gentle on the wallet and still fun? Well, with proper planning, this year's summer get-away can be safe, affordable and exciting for the whole family.

Before You Leave for Your

In order to reduce your vulnerability to crime while traveling, the Santa Monica Police Department Crime Prevention Unit recommends the following:

Inform your neighbors of when you will be leaving and your expected date of return. If you will be hiring a house sitter, be sure to tell your neighbors who to expect.

Have a friend or neighbor pick up mail, newspapers, deliveries and advertisements left on your doorstep. Inform only people you know of your vacation plans. If you must call to stop newspaper or other delivery services, indicate that you're canceling, not vacationing.

Make arrangements to have the lawn mowed and leaves picked up. Ask a neighbor to set out at least one trash can at your curbside on the normal pick-up day.

Simulate a "lived-in" appearance by using timers to turn lights or a radio on and off during expected hours. Set the timers to turn lights on at dusk and off at a normal bedtime.

Make out an itinerary along with telephone numbers of where you can be reached in case of an emergency.

Minimizing Transportation

One of the most significant cost factors of any vacation is transportation expense. By planning ahead, you can often save as much as 50 percent over last-minute purchases. The following money-saving tips can help you save hundreds of dollars when planning your next vacation. -

Keep your schedule flexible when it comes to airline departure and arrival times and days. Often, traveling offpeak times can add to substantial savings.

You can lower the price of a round-trip air fare by as much as two-thirds by making certain your trip includes a Saturday evening stay over.

Purchase plane tickets well in advance, by at least 21 days. To make certain you have an inexpensive fare, even if you use a travel agent, call all the airlines that fly where you want to go and ask for the lowest fare to your destination,

Check with your insurance agent and credit card company in advance to avoid duplicating any coverage you may already have when renting a car.

Don't limit yourself to renting a car. Public transportation is an excellent way to see the sights and save big.

Lodging Costs

Luxury is in the eye of the beholder. When planning your lodging, decide what ameni-you're not using them. ties you need and which ones you can live without. Here are some additional tips to help you save money on lodging.

Travel off-season or on weekdays. The money you save from passing cars or mopeds. can be put toward other areas of your vacation.

Take entertainment coupon books or club memberships. Typically, these coupons discount national hotel chains up to 50 percent.

Call the hotel directly to speak with the reservation department about additional packages and savings avail- your room. able. The hotel chain's tollfree number may not offer as much detail.

Consider using a hotel that offers a free continental breakfast. This may seem small, but it's one extra that is typically well worth it. Meals can be either a bumpy one or rapidly "eat-up" spending money:

Traveling Safety

Your vacation should be trouble-free and relaxing. In order to reduce your vulnerability to crime while traveling, travelers should observe the following tips.

address on luggage tags. Your work address and phone number are sufficient.

Bring an ample supply of traveler's checks in order to minimize the need for cash. Record their serial numbers and the proper phone number to call in case they're lost or Ask hotel management or the local police department if there are any areas in town you should avoid. Stick to well-lighted main streets and public areas.

Do not advertise that you are a tourist. Keep maps and travel brochures in your car's glove compartment when

Foreign countries often have narrow sidewalks that force pedestrians to walk near vehicle traffic. Beware of purse snatchers that strike

Identify anyone requesting entry into your room. Open the door only if you are certain the person has a legitimate reason to enter. Call the front desk if you have any doubts.

Always keep suitcases locked, even when empty, to avoid allowing a thief to use them to remove property from

Food Precautions

No matter where we go or what we do on our vacations, there is a common denominator that runs through all of our summer travels and relaxation food. The road to food safety smooth one depending on what precautions are taken. The U.S. Department of Agriculture offers the following advice to make the difference between a vacation to remember and one to regret.

If you are traveling longer than 30 minutes with perish-Make hotel reservations at able food, place it in a cooler reputable, well-established with ice or freezer packs. locations. and use disposable towlettes to clean hands. When planning meals, think about buying and using shelf-stable food to ensure food safety.

Remember to keep the cooler in a shady spot. Keep it covered with a blanket, preferably one that is light in color: to reflect heat.

When Boating . . .

Don't let perishable food sit out while swimming or fishing. Food sitting out for more than two hours is not safe and the time frame is reduced to just one hour if the outside temperature is above 90 F.

The catch-of-the-day fish should be scaled, gutted and cleaned as soon as the fish is caught. Wrap both whole and cleaned fish in water-tight plastic and store on ice, keeping 3-4 inches of ice on the bottom of the cooler and alternating lavers of fish and ice. Cook the fish within 1-2 days, or freeze and use within six months. After cooking, eat within 3-4 days.

Crabs, lobsters and other shellfish must be kept alive until cooked. Store them in a bushel or laundry basket under wet burlap. Crabs and lobsters are best eaten the day they are caught. Live oysters can keep 7.10 days and mussels and clams, 4-5 days.

Be aware of the potential dangers of eating raw shellfish, especially for people with liver disorders or weakened immune systems.

When at the Beach . . .

Plan ahead, taking along only the amount of food that can be eaten to avoid having leftovers. If grilling, make sure local ordinances allow it.

Bring a cooler and partially bury it in the sand, cover with a blanket and shade with a beach umbrella.

If dining along the boardwalk, make sure the food stands frequented look clean and that hot foods are served hot and cold foods cold. Don't eat anything that has been sitting out in the hot sun.

When in the Vacation Home or RV Vehicle...

If the home or vehicle hasn't been used for a while, check leftover canned food from last year. The Meat and Poultry Hotline recommends that canned food, which may have been exposed to freezing and thawing temperatures over the winter, be discarded.

If the refrigerator was unplugged last year, thoroughly clean it before using. Make sure all food preparation areas in the vehicle are thoroughly cleaned.

. The time you devote to your vacation before it begins is well worth it.

NEW CHS Takes Shape

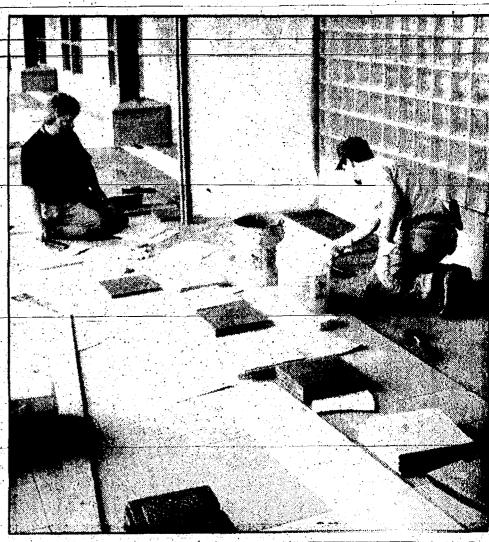

Work crews hustling to get high school ready by fall

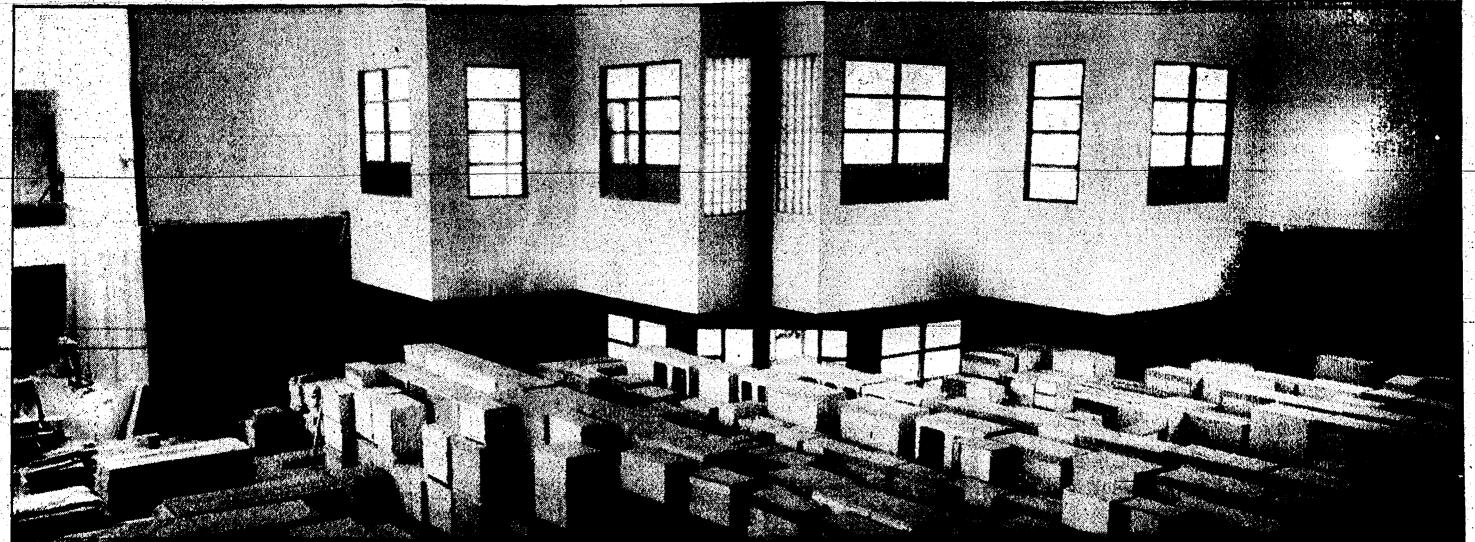

The new Chelsea High School is a completely different facility than what we're used to here. Above, the expansive new gym has a track circling around the top. Top right, the new spacious art rooms will give students plenty of room and a peaceful setting in which to work. Right, workmen lay tile in preparation for an Aug. 30 open house. Left, the media center has a high, spacious ceiling. Below, the common area, now cluttered by cabinets, is where students will have their lunch under the watchful eyes of the administrators, who have their offices overlooking the main floor. It's a long way from the open campus setting CHS students have had

New sports editor joins staff

A crazed sports fan has taken over as sports editor of the Heritage Newspapers Western Region.

Dennis Mansfield, 30, began the process of taking over sports departments of Chelsea Standard and Dexter Leader on June 5, succeeding Scott Held.

Mansfield will also serve as the sports editor for the sister publications, The Saline Reporter and Milan News-Leader.

Held will return to his duties as a sports writer at Heritage Newspapers in Southgate, after filling in here since April.

"It's very exciting to be moving back to Michigan after a year in southwestern Illinois," said Mansfield, a native of Grayling. "More importantly, I'm getting back to what I really love doing - covering high school sports."

Mansfield, a 1991 graduate of Michigan State University, tis a veteran of the newspaper business, beginning his career covering sports for The Shiawassee County Journal in Perry in 1988. His last post was as the education reporter for the Edwardsville Intelligencer, a daily publication in Edwardsville, Ill.

In between, Mansfield served as a writer and photographer at several weekly and daily publications, as well as the editor of The Crawford County Avalanche in Grayling. The Ogemaw County Herald in

Dennis Mansfield

West Branch and The Cheboygan Daily Tribune. "I've done just about everything, from writing stories to putting mailing labels on papers and taking them to the Post Office," he said. "I've done the hard news and covered about every kind of governmental board, from school board to the state legislature, possible.

"But I've always loved sports, so this is a natural position for me. I already feel very comfortable here."

Mansfield is currently living in Ann Arbor, which will be the new home for him and his fiancee, Stephanie Schenk, formerly of Luzerne.

The couple is planning an Oct. 10 wedding in Grayling.

About the Outdoors

by Jerry D. Posey

Michigan is under attack by a bumper crop of mosquitoes this year. Not only are there many more than usual, the ones in my area seem to be bigger and hungrier than any I have had to fend off in the past.

The county health officials say the blame for this year's increase of these summertime nuisances can be placed, just as every other non-ordinary happening of the past six months has, on good ol' El Niño.

The more-than-usual precipitation and the warmerthan-usual weather we experienced this past winter have caused ideal conditions for the increase in numbers of this regular summertime pest.

The experts say we not only can expect larger numbers of the critters, but that they will start showing up sooner, (and they did) and that they will hang around longer in the late summer and early fall if the weather, performs as it is expected to.

We all know that what the mosquito lacks in size he makes up for in audacity and sheer numbers, and this fact was one reason that Michigan was still a sparsely populated territory as late as 1831, whose interior had few settlers while Indiana and Illinois were settled and became states as early as 1816 and 1818. (Michigan became a state in 1837).

The early explorers and surveyors brought back reports that the land in the Michigan Territory was almost uninhabitable because of the large amounts of standing water and the swarms of vicious, skin stabbing, blood sucking insects that pestered anyone who ventured into the area.

Later, after our brave and hardy ancestors had established their homesteads and started clearing the trees and draining the swamplands, they found that the mosquito was capable of doing more than just pestering them as they Many of them succumbed to the diseases that the mosquito carried as it passed from one toes. of them to another.

Whole families were felled by the malaria that was at the time called "the pioneers' disease" and few of them realized they had gotten the deadly fever from the lowly mosquito.

In all honesty, the conditions we look forward to this summer will not compare to those suffered by Michigan's early settlers, but they will be more uncomfortable than most of us are used to.

Fortunately, there are a few things a person can do to minimize the problems these pests can cause. No one wants to spend the entire summer cooped up indoors and there is really no reason to do so.

Step No. 1 should be to eliminate any known puddles or open containers of water in the area before they can become breeding grounds for the mosquitoes. Old tires, tin cans, and shallow ditches make perfect spots for the adult mosquito to lay their eggs and rear their young. Any of these that can be eliminated will help to reduce the number of these vampirelike insects before they get a chance to attack you and your family.

Clogged up rayn gutters are another ideal situation that gives the pest a place to set up a nursery. Many people do not realize that seldom-used birdbaths, that hold stagnate water, are another good place to raise a batch of mosquitoes. Dumping the birdbath and refilling it each day will give our feathered friends a place to do their tubbing and still assure that the mosquito larva will not get a chance to develop.

Careful pruning of shrubrefused to give in to the pest, bery around the house and vard will also help to eliminate spots that harbor mosqui-

> Many counties no longer spray for mosquitoes. The officials say it is too expensive and is an old-fashioned technique. That kind of leaves it up to each of us as individuals to handle our mosquito problems on our own.

some extent. Some seem to work better than others.

The pests can often be kept at bay during the evening hours with one of the spray or rub-on products such as Cutter repellent or Off. I've found that the ones containing the product known as Deet seem to work the best. The higher the content of Deet, the better it seems to repel the monsters.

One word of caution: Deet in the higher strengths should not be applied directly to the skin, only sprayed on your clothing, and some doctors recommend that these higher strength products not be used on youngsters.

In this political satire, Warren Beatty plays Sen. Jay Bulworth, who has a nervous breakdown while on the campaign trail for re-election.

Joining Bulworth on this wild campaign ride are his hair-pulling campaign manager (Oliver Platt), adviser (Jack Warden) and new female friend (Halle Berry).

Not only does Beatty direct and star, he wrote the story and co-wrote the screenplay.

He could have used some more input. The premise of "Bulworth" is admirable. In fact, the movie starts out on the right foot. However, things deteriorate too quickly.

Bulworth has his breakdown in the form of another personality that supposedly develops a new understanding of black inner-city issues and communicates them by rapping his political truths in some makeshift song format.

This off-key and off-beat singing is a problem. The lyrics do not speak any real truths or sound bold or brave. They are just embarrassing. The audience has a hard time looking at Bulworth during his rants, which spoils any of his message.

The idea of a politician telling the truth is intriguing, but Beatty takes it way over the top and taints everything else. he was trying to say.

"Bulworth" could have been a welcome political satire, but that is not the case. It certainly was not served by the overdose of liberal politics and theories. A moderate view would have worked better. Save this for home video.

"The Horse Whisperer"

Movie Review

By C.J. Nodus Heritage Newspapers

Despite the panorama of the scenery and the grace and beauty of horses, "The Horse... Whisperer" is too long and too slow to be anything more than a quintessential "chick flick."

The problem lies with the fact the producer is also the director as well as the star otherwise known as the "Kevin Costner complex."

In this case, the culprit is Robert Redford There are simply too many long lingering snots of Redford, despite his importance to the story.

It is also painfully obvious that he still thinks he has the same boyish charm he did in the days of "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid." This is not to say he is not charming and charismatic, but his days of being a young romantic leading man are behind him.

Unfortunately for director. Redford, the story itself is limiting. To fill a full-length feature film, he was almost forced to use broad and sweeping camera pans of actor Redford. In the original book, the focus was much more directed toward the story of 14-year-old Grace MacLean and how she overcame the emotional and physical scars after a riding accident.

Much to her credit, newcomer Scarlett Johansson as MacLean is wonderful and certainly worth watching. It is unfortunate Redford's scene chewing dwarfed her first feature role. In the same vein, Kristen Scott Thomas as Annie Mac-Lean was well-cast. She attempts to hold her own, but for all of her experience and credentials, she is also overshadowed by her director/co-

Rounding out the cast are Sam-Neill and Dianne Wiest, both excellent but almost incidental to the overall prod-

In true Hollywood fashion, the end of the film differs considerably from the close of the book. Had they kept with the original ending, despite the fact Tom Booker (Redford) dies, it would have given the film more punch.

There certainly is an audience for this type of film, but for the most part, there are far better romantic dramas than "The Horse Whisperer" and far better Redford films as well. Grade: C-

Heydlauff's Appliances marks 70th anniversary of business

Heydlauff's Appliance & Electronics of Chelsea is marking its 70th year of business with a store-wide anniversary celebration.

Located downtown at 113 N. Main Street, Heydlauff's has been providing appliances, electronics and repair services since 1928, when Lloyd Heydlauff started selling appliances out of the trunk of his car. The business has expanded toady to include such major brands as GE, Maytag, Amana, RCA, Jenn Air, and Hoover among others.

To commemorate the event, Heydlauff's is having a storewide celebration and sale featuring door prizes, discounts on most merchandise, and special financing options. On Thursday, June 25, WJR radio's "Appliance Doctor," Joe Gagnon, will make a special appearance at the store from 1-7 p.m.

dlauff's will give away door prizes (no purchase necessary) that include an Amana Microwave, an RCA 27" television, a side-by-side GE refrigerator and a Maytag washing machine. "My grandfather based his entire business around personal service and quality products, which included going door-to-door and meeting his customers face-to-face. Heydlauff's will be open during normal hours during the celebration and will offer 12 months same-as-cash financing and special "markeddown-to-go" pricing on select closeout items. Anyone who visits the store during the sale can enter to win one of many door prizes. "We have seen a lot of changes in over the years in the appliance and TV business," says George Heydlauff, longtime owner of the store.

"My father passed on a great tradition to myself and now, on to my sons. We've survived a fire that totally destroyed our building in 1970 and rebuilt from the ground up. Today, as our business grows, we are continuing to concentrate on what our customers want by providing that hometown personal approach that can't be found with the superstores."

In 1944, Lloyd Heydlauff purchased the Glazier Building and began his appliance business on Main Street as Frigid Products. The name changed to Heydlauff's after fire destroyed the former building. A new structure was built at the same location and completed in 1971. Heydlauff's has won several national service award and citations.

Local dentist taking sabbatical in Texas to learn about surgery

By Eric Bowen Staff Writer

Patients of dentist Mark Burye have a new face looking at their teeth this year. Burye left for a sabbatical to Parkland Memorial Hospital in Texas June 15 to pursue study in oral surgery.

Burye said the internship will give him new skills and give him a taste of what oral surgery entails. He said his ultimate goal is to get a residency in oral surgery, which could take another six years to complete.

"It's something I've always had an interest in," Burye said. "The way to learn more about it is to become an oral surgeon."

Burye's replacement for the year will be Tom Williams, graduate of the University of Michigan Dental School. Williams, who is moving with his wife from Mount Pleasant, recently completed an intensive internship at the Veterans Affairs Hospital in Detroit, where Burye also interned more than 15 years ago.

Williams and Burye met at the hospital as Burye was looking for someone to take over his practice. Williams was highly recommended by the staff at the hospital and came for an interview shortly after meeting Burye.

Burye interviewed several candidates for the position. having each spend a day at his practice interacting with staff and patients. The process was unusual, Burye said, because much of the decision was given to the staff who would have to work with the new dentist.

"I want someone who is going to do a good job in dentistry, but also with the people in the office and patients,"

More than one candidate was turned down after Burye got feedback from staff members. But Williams made the

"I'm anxious to do a service for this town," Williams said.

Burye said that going back to do a residency after practicing for several years was not uncommon. But he said he would likely be competing with dentists just out of school

Burye said that his time in Texas will help determine the future of his practice in Chelsea. He said that if he does pursue an oral surgery residency, Williams will take over the practice permanently. If he returns, the two will form a partnership in Chelsea and he will use the skills he learned in Texas to his advantage in his current practice.

Burye said that regardless of his future, he wants to retain his connection to Chelsea. He said Chelsea is a great place to live and work and he wants to return to set up a practice here.

CROSS ROADS

By Bob Briner

The Amy Foundation Can you imagine Jesus

boycotting sinners? In your wildest imagination can you hear him say to his disciples, "Let's tell all our followers to stay away from Jericho. That place is full of sinners?" Or, can you imagine the apostle Paul organizing a boycott against the Ephesians? Ephesus was among the most godless cities of the ancient world, but Paul never said, "I'm certainly not going to add to the Ephesian economy by making my tents in that wicked city, and I'm going to get Barnabus, Silas, Timothy and Dr. Luke to organize a boycott against unbelievers."

No, Jesus and Paul were far too busy interacting with sinners, reaching out to sinners, loving sinners and presenting the Gospel of grace to them to ever dream of anything as contrary to the spirit of the Kingdom as a boycott. Christian boycott is an oxymoron.

It is only as we see that our mandate is "to fish in the pond, not to clean up the pond" that we will begin to be effective and really obedient to the Great Commission of the Lord Jesus. It is only as we see Disney, Hollywood, Madison Avenue, Washington, television, and mainstream journalism not as enemy territories but as mission fields to enter in the power of the Holy Spirit in exactly the same way as the great missionary pioneers went into China, India, and Africa (all of which, by the way, were far more godless and more daunting than any of the areas of our society in which we need to be with the Gospel) that we will begin to see the changes we long to realize that all the evils of society, which so perplex and distress Christians, are not really subject to change by political, economic, legislative, or judicial pressure. All the evils that concern us arise from the hearts of those perpetrating them, and only Jesus changes hearts. To think and act otherwise is counter-productive. Our only real weapon against evil is Jesus and his saving, heartchanging, heart-cleansing Gospel. To waste our time and God's resources on boycotts, petitions, and protests, which do nothing to present the beauty and excellence of the Savior, is a debacle.

More and more we need to

Boycotts and protests may make us feel righteous and macho, but they will never bring the real joy of real obedience. Real obedience requires a much tougher discipline. It calls for us to give ourselves away in acts of kindness and, in the words of Paul, "teach everyone we can all that we know about him. so that if possible we may present everyone at his full maturity in Christ. This is what I am working at all the time with the strength God gives me" (Colossians 1:28-29 Philips).

Does this sound anything like a boycott? How does this Scripture match up with putting 25 bucks on your Master-Card in support of a boycott? As Chuck Swindoll would say, "Give me a break."

We must get back to what Os Guiness calls "the first things of the Gospel." When we do, we will see that our marching orders are very straightforward, not at all arcane or open to debate. We are to be "salt," which is to demonstrate the power of the Gospel in all walks of life. We are to preach the Gospel. We are to make disciples, teaching them to obey all that Jesus commanded. These "first things" should form a filter through which all our activities should pass. Just ask the questions: Does this activity tell people more about who Jesus is and why he came? Does this activity draw people to our Savior or repel them? Boycotts fail both tests.

Christian boycott is an oxymoron.

Ever Meet Anybody Who's Been Hit By A Train?

Didn't think so:

Red Wing Jerseys

But last year alone, over 6,000 people were hit. Some were in their ears or trucks. Others were on foot. But most of them had ignored warning signs or trespassed on train property. And, as you can probably guess, the results weren't pretty-over 3,500 of those people were killed or maimed for life.

Now avoiding a train is entirely up to you. And it's actually not hard to do. If you slow down at every highway-rail crossing, you'll be able to see or hear an approaching train. And if there's any sign of a train, all you have to do is stop. Never trespass on train property or walk on the tracks. Don't try to beat the train. And never make the deadly mistake of ignoring the flashing rec lights or crossing gates because you're sure they're broken. A lot of people die thinking just that.

Not you, of course, You always expect a train. You know exactly what to do when you approach the tracks. And now you

VILLAGE OF CHELSEA NOTICE TO VILLAGE RESIDENTS Smoke Testing & Sewer Survey

Inspection crews will be conducting a physical survey of the Chelsea Sanitary Sewer System. This work is scheduled to begin approximately June 23 and 24 in an area bounded by W. Middle Street, Main Street, Old US-12 and Grant Street. This study will involve the opening and entering of manholes in the streets and easements. An important task of the survey will be 'SMOKE TESTING" of sewer lines to locate breaks and defects in the sewer system. The smoke that you see coming from the vent stakes on houses or holes in the ground is NON-TOXIC, HARMLESS, HAS NO ODOR, AND CREATES NO FIRE HAZARD. The smoke should not enter your home unless you have defective plumbing or dried up drain traps. For some kids, vacation is chance to study harder

By Eric Bowen Staff Writer

With school out for the summer, many students are looking for ways to spend the free time they have acquired. Some will get jobs, some will take a vacation, but for two Chelsea students summer means extra study at local colleges to expand their knowledge.

Chelsea High School junfors Katie Henry and John Carter, along with Rachel Mead, were nominated by teachers for the intensive programs and chosen from about 12 applicants. The students had to write an essay about why they wanted to pursue extra study and what their interests were in the program.

Students were then submitted the state Department of Education.

"It's definitely a privilege," Henry said: "They had pretty specific stuff they were looking for."

Henry will spend a week studying molecular genetics and genetic engineering at Madonna University. Henry said she chose the Madonna program because of an inter- had cancer. est in chemistry:

"I was looking for something about the environment or computers," Henry said. "I liked the chemistry better."

Henry became interested in genetics because she had taken chemistry classes as CHS and enjoyed the experiments and scientific bent. She said she didn't know too much about chemistry before taking classes at school, but they peaked her interest, and she plans to continue studying chemistry or biology at the high school next fall.

"Good science classes got me interested," she said. "I like lots of hands on labs."

Carter is also focusing on scientific pursuits, heading to Alma College in the medical sciences program. Carter will assist doctors with research on elderly muscular structure.

"I'm looking forward to it,". Carter said. "It's what I want to go into and it will give me a chance to see what it is like to work in the field."

Carter said he got his interest in medicine because he spent a lot of time in the hospital with his grandfather who taken biology, He has chemistry and physics in high school and said he will continue to prepare for college. He plans to go to the University of Michigan to study both biology and political science with the intention of becoming an orthopedic surgeon.

"This gives me the opportunity to really impact people's lives," Carter said. "Few other jobs are going to give me a chance to make a difference."

Carter said he sent a letter to the doctor he will work with and received an enthusiastic response. The doctor said that he was excited to be part of the program and described the extensive work Carter will be a part of.

"He seemed like a great guy," Carter said. "He said he was really looking forward to the opportunity. He made me feel more confident about the program."

Agricultural Research Service scientists are closing in on new corn lines whose kernels fend off harmful fungi with potent natural-defenses. Commercial development of such resistant corn, possible within a few years, could help reduce ailatoxin contamination in corn. Aflatoxin is so potent that no crop with more than 20 parts per billion can be sold for livestock feed. Researchers believe the answer rests in the thick, waxy coat of the kernel, as well as a protein called a trypsin inhibitor that keeps aflatoxin at bay.
