Council rescinds East Street fine

By Eric Bowen
Staff Writer

With a timeline agreed to July 20 for construction to begin on the East Street railroad crossing, Chelsea Village Council rescinded its $15,000 fine imposed against the Michigan Department of Transportation.

The vote lets MDOT and Norfolk Southern Railroad Co. off the hook for missing a June 30 deadline to resurface several roads and widen the intersection of McKinley and Railroad streets to accommodate trucks. The deal was agreed to earlier that day at a meeting with the council and representatives from the transportation companies.

"We had a very good meeting," said Village President Richard Steele before the fine was repealed. "We got a lot of things worked out."

The estimated $327,000 price tag for the improvements is substantially more than MDOT had originally expected. The transportation agency had estimated the entire slate of work could be done for approximately $200,000.

However, in May the village revised up the estimated cost to over $400,000, based on the cost of reconstructing the roads.

The increased estimate became a sticking point for MDOT, which said it had not agreed to reconstructing the roads, only resurfacing.

In the final deal, MDOT will pay for the reconstruction of Hayes Street and resurfacing of Railroad Street. The village also will receive new curbs where the East Street crossing used to be, and widening of the McKinley Street crossing and intersection, among other items.

MDOT also agreed to start preliminary work on the construction immediately, with August deadlines for plans and advertising bids, and an October approval of the contract. Work will likely begin this year and finish next spring when the weather is more

Bypass concerns residents

By Michael Rybka
Staff Writer

Some Sylvan Township residents feel that proponents of the proposed M-52 reroute are acting in secret and are oblivious to landowners' concerns.

A handful of township residents expressed their concerns at the Chelsea Area Traffic Committee meeting July 30. This is the first time residents have attended the monthly meeting, which was held at the Washington Street Educational Center.

Many, such as Mark Weinberg, who lives on Old US-12, questioned whether the reroute was necessary.

After residents saw a presentation, and committee Chairman Joe Yekulis explained the history of the project and answered questions, residents offered apologies for their suspicions. However, they remained unconvinced that the bypass was necessary.

Joanne Weber, who lives on Ivey Road, suggested that if truck traffic was the problem, a designated route could be fashioned from existing roadways.

Weinberg doubted congestion was as bad as some made it out to be, citing previously reported studies showing a six-minute average for a vehicle to go from one end of town to another.

Weinberg and others remained unconvinced even after Stephanie Aldighieri of the engineering firm HNTB said traffic from Sibley Road to Old US-12 is expected to reach 35,300 vehicles a day. In particular, she said there will be ugly consequences for signalized intersections.

Aldighieri also went over current statistics that she touched upon at the June meeting. From a weeklong traffic study conducted by HNTB, it was learned morning peak hours are between 7:30 a.m. and 8:30 a.m., while evening peak hours are between 4 p.m. and 5 p.m.

During the morning, 26 percent of through traffic (deriving south of Old US-12 and continuing north of Sibley Road) is northbound. The opposite direction accounts for 36 percent of the through traffic. In the evening, 42 percent of

Council approves subdivision despite trustee's objections

By Eric Bowen
Staff Writer

Developers of the Chelsea Fairways subdivision on Freer Road and Old US-12 got some opposition to their plans last Tuesday, despite unanimously favorable votes in all previous appearances before the council.

One council member voted against each of the five motions involving the subdivision, saying he would like to have seen more originality in the design of the development.

"I think the development is just some more sprawl in Chelsea," Trustee Robert MacLeod said Friday. "We need to learn how to weave developments into the village."

MacLeod objected primarily to the lack of pedestrian-friendly amenities in the development. He said the design had no easy access to Pierce Lake Elementary across the street, and its layout along Old US-12 and Freer required residents to drive anywhere they needed to go.

To improve the pedestrian access, MacLeod recommended using ideas of what he called "New Urbanism," a concept that tries to re-create the more compact and complete neighborhoods characteristic of older cities.

For instance, MacLeod said he would have liked to have seen commercial development near the 124 homes going into the subdivision. This way, he said, people could have walked to get a gallon of milk, instead of having to get in their cars and drive to the supermarket.

MacLeod also had a problem with the development's winding streets, which he said were dangerous. He said he would

Library Board sets October millage election wording

By Eric Bowen
Staff Writer

The Chelsea District Library Board voted July 21 to accept the final ballot wording for its Oct. 5 special election. The board will ask voters to approve a 1.75 mill tax to support the library's operations, and to accept a $6.3 million bond proposal to pay for the library's expansion.

The two ballot measures will be separate issues for voters to consider, but both are inextricably tied to each other, according to library board President Lynn Fox. The operating millage is based on having an expanded building, and an expanded building needs more money to operate.

Fox said the current plans call for a two-story structure built as an addition to the McKune House, the Main Street structure where the library now resides. Fox said the board would not know the final cost until plans are drawn up.

"We won't do anything on that until the millage passes," Fox said. "It would be foolish to hire an architect and put out for bids because if it doesn't pass, we can't renovate. As soon as the millage passes, we will be putting out bids for architectural designs."

The lack of a firm price makes it difficult to determine how much district residents would have to pay in taxes for the bond, Fox said. She said the likely figure would be under 1 mill, which pay off the bond over 20 years.

The plans are also contingent upon the village's and the Downtown Development Authority's negotiations to buy the Staffan-Mitchell Funeral Home, which lies behind the library and would be razed to provide parking for the library and the village. Fox said the deal looks promising, so the library is counting on the site for the expansion.

Though the board is uncertain about the design of the site, Fox did say the board has decided on what types of services will be offered in the new building.

For starters, Fox said the new library will contain seating for up to 85 people, with a lounge, traditional library seating and study carrels. A computer lab and Internet instruction will be provided, and the building will become accessible for disabled users.

The library also will extend its hours to 9 p.m. during the week and will be open on Sundays during the school year. The library will also double the number of books for patrons to check out.

Fox said the services determined the size of the new building and the cost of operation. The taxes were devised over the course of more than a year of public hearings and heavy study from a board task force.

Because of the effort, Fox said she feels comfortable with the figures voters will be asked to approve.

"What we tended to do was to take into account the sizes of other libraries based on the population of their service area and putting all of the things the people had talked about in the phone surveys and focus groups," Fox said. "To expand the collection to what it should be, we tried to figure out exactly what we would need to put in a building. We're looking at that as the basis for where we would need to start from."

the traffic is northbound while 28 percent is southbound.

The greatest volume of traffic, however, is the 244 vehicles traveling southbound in the morning.

A daily count showed 430 through-traffic trucks heading northbound and 595 heading southbound.

For their own sake, as well as that of the residents in attendance, Yekulis decided it was a good time to summarize some preliminary conclusions the committee has reached.

It was agreed that, at present, the preferred route begins north of Chelsea Lumber Co.

By veering northwest and avoiding houses on Gene and Machnik drives, the M-52 reroute would continue east of the Weinberg Dairy building, veering west of the Chelsea Retirement Community.

Somewhere before Cavanaugh Lake Road, the route has to straighten for a considerable stretch to allow for safe access across the railroad tracks and meet state standards.

This idea pleased Andy Hodges from the Michigan Department of Transportation. He sat with the committee for the first time, satisfying the committee's desire to have a M-DOT representative on the committee.

Hodges also laid to rest any idea that a bridge could be built over the tracks, estimating the cost to be $4.5 million.

From Cavanaugh Lake Road, the re-route would head north, avoiding the industrial park, on its way past Sibley Road and connecting with Ivey Road.

Beyond Ivey Road, the committee was undecided on how to proceed. The committee has yet to decide whether to rejoin M-52 north or south of Werkner Road.

south of Werkner Road.

Local businessman Mark Heydlauff was alone in his desire to use Werkner Road as part of the re-route. The committee has reservations about using the road because the re-route would not be access-free. Heydlauff said that at least a trade-off should be considered rather than needlessly creating a completely new roadway.

Hodges said the limited access ideal may be unrealistic as no amount of zoning law was going to keep developers away from the reroute area.

Yekulis cautioned the audience that the committee's conclusions could undergo drastic changes with new information. Yekulis said this was why the committee didn't believe it was proper to notify citizens of potential property infringement when the whole process, at this stage, was largely conceptual.

The committee will meet with focus groups Monday, Aug. 9, from 1:30 p.m. to 3:30 p.m. in the Atrium Room at the White Oaks Center of the Chelsea Community Hospital.

The next regularly scheduled meeting will be Friday, Aug. 27, from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m., in the board room at the Washington Street Education Center.

VACATIONING WITH YOUR PET

Dr. Jeff LaHuis, D.V.M.

Summer vacation! The words that bring joy to many school children. As adults, we also enjoy the relaxations of vacationing and traveling. However, this can lead to a quandary: what to do with the family pet! Following are a few guidelines that will ensure safety and enjoyment for all parties involved.

First, make sure that your destination will accept pets. There are books written on this subject which include parks, campgrounds, and motels that accept animals. In fact, there are some that cater specifically to them!

Second, ensure that your animal's vaccines and physical are up to date and have proof of vaccination with you. Also, ask your vet about any special measures that should be taken for the area you are traveling to. Ticks, fleas, and heartworm disease become more prevalent the further south one travels.

Third, it is a good idea to have a copy of your pet's medical record on hand to present to a local vet in case of emergency. Knowing the medical history will make it easier to treat your animal. Fourth, don't forget to pack plenty of food, toys, food bowls, and other supplies. The last thing to remember is to have ID on your pet and have photos handy to show people if the unthinkable happens.

If you have any questions please call Westarbor Animal Hospital at 734-769-5391.

have liked to have seen straight streets, which he said provide for nicer neighborhoods.

"New Urbanism is an attempt to convince people to design commercial and residential (buildings) for people not cars," MacLeod said. "We should be developing these (subdivisions) for walkability. We're cutting these people off from the rest of the village."

Developer Richard Lewiston dismissed MacLeod's comments at the council meeting, saying that New Urbanism was largely an untested concept. He said he has been developing subdivisions for over 30 years and has not seen a New Urban development in Michigan.

Lewiston said that the village Planning Commission never asked him to provide for a section of commercial use. He said he had made a lot of improvements to the design to make it fit with the village character, and provide for a natural setting for the residents.

"We worked with the planning commission so it would have the feel of the village," Lewiston said at the meeting. "It was never contemplated there would be a need for a small area of commercial in the subdivision."

Despite MacLeod's objections, the council approved the development's preliminary plat, which gives the OK for the developer to begin selling the 124 lots. Village President Richard Steele sided with MacLeod on the vote.

The council also voted to accept a maintenance agreement for the development's storm drains, an easement for the stormwater detention area, and an agreement to pave Freer Road. In addition, the council voted to accept a special assessment district for the subdivision should the development's homeowners fail to maintain the subdivision's detention pond. MacLeod was the lone dissenter on each of the four votes.

In other business last Tuesday, the Village Council voted to accept new rules of order. The rules, which have been in the works for several months, govern the procedures the council will follow in making motions and taking public input.

One major change from the past is that residents who want to speak to a topic on the agenda will be required to ask for time during public input. In the past, the council has let anyone speak when each agenda item came up for discussion. This rule only applies to agenda items.

Individuals or groups can also request five minutes of reserved time to address a specific issue. Requests for the time will have to be made by 3 p.m. the day of the meeting.

The remainder of public input will be open for anyone to speak. Residents will be allowed to address issues not on the agenda during this time.

The remainder of the rules are largely designed to comply with the Michigan Open Meetings Act. They set rules for notifying residents of meetings and special meetings, the order of the agenda, and conduct during, and the reasons for, closed sessions.

Foundation hits million dollar mark

The Chelsea Community Foundation, established in 1994, recently passed the $1 million mark in assets and known pledges.

The foundation, formed through a merger of the Civic Foundation of Chelsea and the Foundation for Community Care, is building a permanently endowed fund to provide an ongoing source of revenue for programs and activities in the Chelsea community.

Since its founding, the Chelsea Community Foundation's assets have grown through gifts, large and small, from individuals, corporations and civic organizations. Because the principal of the Chelsea Community Foundation fund is permanently invested and not spent, earnings from the principal provide a perpetual source of income for current and future use.

"Since making its first grants in December 1995, the Chelsea Community Foundation has awarded more than $56,000 to a variety of Chelsea-area organizations," said Walter F. Hamilton, chairman of the Chelsea Community Foundation Advisory Committee. "As the foundation grows, the size and number of the grants it will make will also increase. We are pleased that the foundation is playing an important role in assuring that Chelsea will continue to be a wonderful place to live and work."

The Chelsea Community Foundation, guided by a local committee of volunteer advisors, is affiliated with the Community Foundation for Southeastern Michigan, one of the 30 largest community foundations in the nation. Through its affiliation with the Community Foundation for Southeastern Michigan, a regional foundation, the Chelsea Community Foundation benefits from administrative, investment, staff and technical support.

The Chelsea Community Foundation is seeking grant proposals from nonprofit organizations that serve the Chelsea area. For more information, call (734) 475-9891 or visit the "How to Get a Grant" section of the Web site of the Community Foundation for Southeastern Michigan at <http://comnet.org/comfound>.

Grant proposals for the Chelsea Community Foundation may be mailed to The Chelsea Community Foundation, Post Office Box 45, Chelsea, MI, 48118.

CHS seniors attend National Guard seminar

Alan M. Bairley and Justin P. Nadolny, 17-year-old seniors at Chelsea High School, attended a weeklong symposium at Phelps Collins Air National Guard Base where the topic was leadership that promotes freedom.

Speakers included Attorney General Jennifer Granholm (D-Mich.), State Senator John Schwarz (R-Mich.), Michigan Supreme Court Justice Betty Weaver, and Larry Johnson, brother of Irving "Magic" Johnson.

Activities included formal presentations, group discussions, organized sports, orientation on military academies, a speech contest and a raft race.

Invitations were limited to less than a 100 high school students who have recently completed their junior year.

Bairley is the son of Paul and Susan Bairley.

Nadolny is the son of Andrew and Joyce Nadolny.

Chicken broil set for Saturday

Friends and members of the North Lake United Methodist Church are busy preparing for the 21st-annual Chicken Barbecue, Saturday, Aug. 7. This dinner involves between 20 and 30 volunteers handling several crews, under the direction of Merritt Honbaum.

During the week, a huge tent is set up on the church property, and several evenings are spent setting up chairs, preparing dinnerware, and preparing some food.

Some 550 chickens will be barbecued over 500 pounds of charcoal in a 35-foot-long pit. Meanwhile another crew husks about 50 dozen ears of fresh sweet corn, ensuring each customers receives at least one ear.

The kitchen crew prepares drinks, cole slaw, rolls and 18 gallons of baked beans.

Tickets for $7.00 are available at the entrance. Phone-in orders are discouraged.

VIEWS ON DENTAL HEALTH

GARY GOCHANOUR, D.D.S.

WHEN MUST WISDOM TEETH GO?

If you have heard that wisdom teeth will always have to be extracted eventually - don't believe it. That's like taking aspirin to prevent a future headache.

If wisdom teeth have fully erupted and there are no problems, they should, of course, be left alone. The question of extraction only arises when they are impacted, that is, in a position where they cannot erupt properly. In a case of partial impaction, which means the tooth is sticking part way through the gums and can go no further, most dentists would agree that extraction is necessary to avoid the unstable situation in which infection and decay in an adjoining tooth could occur.

Common wisdom holds that since a partially erupted tooth will eventually become infected, it's better for the patient to choose the time for extraction rather than having the tooth do the choosing. Once a wisdom tooth on one side of the fact is extracted, the opposing tooth is best removed to prevent super-eruption, which could cause periodontal and bite problems.

Understanding The Law

with Leonard K. Kitchen, J.D. and Thomas L. Stringer, J.D.

TAKING LEAVE

According to federal law, both mothers and fathers are entitled to parental leave benefits. The federal Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA) guarantees that those who work for companies with 50 or more employees can take up to 12 weeks of unpaid leave each year to care for a newborn or newly adopted child. Beyond that, 15 states have laws that apply to employers with fewer than 50 employees, while eight states provide for longer leave periods. Under the provisions of the FMLA, employees may be entitled to use their accrued paid time off (vacation and/or sick leave) while on leave. Working parents who are denied their parental-leave rights should consult with an attorney.

BRIEF NOTE: The federal Family and Medical Leave Act also covers leave for illness, whether it is the worker's own or that of a close family member.

HOW DOES THE BIBLE DESCRIBE... A CHRISTIAN?

There are several terms in the New Testament that describe the followers of Jesus. The reason for different descriptions is so that we would understand the nature of their following and also comprehend what it means to be a follower today. They were called:

- Disciples (at 11:26) - This reference was often made to the 12, but in this case it was to more than the 12 and referred to all those who followed Jesus.
- Christians (1 Pt 4:16) - The name that referred to their allegiance to Christ. [They never called themselves e.g. Catholics, Methodists, Baptists or any other denominational name, as this would deter them from their focus on Jesus and affiliate them elsewhere.]
- Saints (Rm 1:7) - We are all saints, and it is never written in the Bible that a person must perform miracles in order to fulfill this role.
- Children of God (Gl 3:26) - Claiming that we are heirs of Him.
- Brothers (Ph 4:21) - Attaining to the idea of unity (Koinonia).
- Members (1 Cor 12:27) - We are all part of a community in Christ and therefore are all members equally in accordance with Him.
- Servants (Rom 16:1-2) - The idea that we are in the Church and a part of the body in order to serve and not to be served. Jesus taught that 1st would be last.
- Priests (1 Pt 2:5; 9; Rev 1:6) - This means that we are all priests, called to be Holy. Why then in some denominations do we find people calling themselves Priests, in other words saying they are holy?

A 17-year-old Chelsea boy told police he had parked his car in the Timbertown parking lot at approximately 12:30 a.m. July 24. The boy said a pickup truck entered the parking lot and drove erratically, spewing rocks onto his car. The rocks broke the rear and right rear windows.

Suspicious Incident
A 32-year-old Manchester man told police he turned onto M-52 near Sibley Road at 7:36 p.m. July 25 when a pickup truck came up behind him and began to tailgate. The man slowed down to let another car turn left, and the pickup behind him lightly hit the rear of his car. The man said the pickup then activated emergency lights on the top of the truck, but he drove to the police station, and the truck turned off the street. The truck reappeared when the man drove along Middle Street and he noted the pickup's license plate.

The driver of the pickup, a Romulus man, told police that he was a volunteer firefighter in Romulus and that is why he has emergency lights on the pickup. He said he had been behind the other man, but he had been driving slowly. He said he flashed his headlights, but not the emergency lights to get him to pull over so he could pass the other man.

Local commissioner attends national conference

Washtenaw County Commissioner Joseph Yekulis of Chelsea recently joined 4,000 county delegates at the National Association of Counties (NACO) 64th annual conference in St. Louis to discuss such hot topics as economic growth opportunities for Americans, the collection of sales tax on the Internet, Y2K compliance, smart growth and youth violence.

Yekulis, a member of the NACO Justice and Public Safety Steering Committee, spent a full day working with the committee to assist in developing its final platform, which was approved by the membership during the annual business meeting and election of officers and directors on Tuesday, July 20.

At the Michigan Association of Counties Delegates Breakfast, held to determine how the state would cast its votes, Yekulis was appointed Vice President by MAC President Ralph Liberato for the second consecutive year. Yekulis is a member of the MAC Board of Directors.

In addition to committee assignments and state responsibilities, conference participants developed national policies and heard from a long list of speakers. Speakers included "Future Shock" author Alvin Toffler, Bill Ivey, chairman of the National Endowment for the Arts, Martin Luther King III and husband-and-wife political pundits Mary Matalin and James Carville.

"I believe that technology, society, culture and politics are going to profoundly change the economy," Toffler said during the opening general session. "What we are seeing is a completely new way of life; who will connect whom to whom."

The issue of collecting sales tax on the Internet became a topic of much debate among delegates, as about 80 members of NACO's Taxation and Finance Steering Committee unanimously passed a resolution calling on Congress to enact legislation that would treat all sales equally, "whether the sale takes place over the counter, by phone, mail order or by Internet."

Since sales taxes equal 36 percent of state and local revenues, or $237 billion, NACO President C. Vernon Gray said, "The loss of revenue will have a major impact on county services."

Delegates spent most of their time in continuing education-type workshops. Dozens of key experts conducted about 50 workshops on electronic commerce, technology, sustainability, Y2K compliance, rural revitalization, juvenile justice, and a wealth of other issues.

Workshops focused on such topics as work-force training, telecommunications in rural counties, getting your airport off the ground, investing in depressed communities and crisis management. Sheriff John Stone of Jefferson County, Colorado, held the attention of a standing-room-only crowd as he discussed the shootings at Columbine High School. He also discussed how county officials can meet the demands of the media while managing a crisis.

Delegates concluded their marathon of meetings and workshops with NACO's annual business meeting and election of officers. NACO is the only national organization that represents counties in the United States.

Current facility makes sense for library growth

LIBRARY NOTES

A recent letter to the editor in this paper expressed concerns for the ultimate location of the library and the use of the McKune House as a home for the library. On behalf of the Chelsea District Library Board, I think some clarifications are in order.

Although it is true that the "gateway" property mentioned would be a great location for a public library, it would undoubtedly increase the cost of the library package by 25 percent, if not more. Given the great location of the current facility, it would be hard to justify this additional expense.

This savings is allowing the library board to put as much effort as possible into creating an almost new facility, by expanding and enlarging McKune House onto a larger lot and, above all, making this facility fully accessible to all — plenty of parking, no steps, no barriers to anyone.

Catherine McKune, as part of the disposition of her estate, donated the current building and property to the village, to be used for public library purposes.

The DDA is in the process of purchasing the old gas station lot next door to the library and property behind the library for use as a municipal parking lot. Clearly, any move from this location would involve the additional expense of property acquisition for a facility and a parking lot.

The library board conducted a statistically sound telephone survey last year that was designed to measure the opinions of registered voters throughout the region served by the library. Two very important aspects of that survey were the issue of location and accessibility of the library to the entire district. Responses reflected village and non-village resident voters.

On the part of both village and township residents, the placement of the library in a central, downtown location was paramount. A total of 81 percent of village residents and 71 percent of township residents affirmed that the library should remain downtown. A total of 76 percent of library patrons and 72 percent of non-patrons agreed that the library should remain downtown. Parking was considered either very important or somewhat important to 84 percent of all respondents.

The Chelsea District Library Planning Task Force examined the results of the telephone survey and conducted focus groups and a community forum to get direct input of individual residents.

Then a list of 50 potential sites was winnowed down to 13 for examination, with four sites, including the option of staying in its current location, voted on. Once all the factors were weighed, the task force made its final recommendation to the library board that the current location, with parking available, was the very best location for the library.

LETTERS

JFK Jr.'s death can help people take care

The recent death of John F. Kennedy Jr. affected many of us. We watched as he saluted bravely when his father's casket passed. We watched him grow into a fine man. He was the kind of man we wanted our sons to be. The man we wanted our daughters to marry. The kind of person we would all like to be.

With his death, many of us came face-to-face with our own mortality. He was our age and represented the hopes and dreams of our generation. He took with him all his dreams, all his hopes, all that he ever was, all he could have been, and all that we hoped he would be.

Isn't that the way death is? Especially when young people and children lose their lives?

When a young person or child dies, their dreams die, their hopes die, and their families die in part. As a community, we are responsible for working together to prevent the shadow of such a loss from darkening our streets and doorways.

As I watch the children in my neighborhood play, I worry that they might not have the chance to grow into fine young men and women. I worry for my own children as well.

You see, there are some of us who drive down our village streets carelessly, disregarding speed limits, the lives of our neighbors, and the lives of our children.

There are others in our community who take it upon themselves to remind others to slow down, to use greater care.

I do this myself on occasion. It is a difficult thing for us to do, but important for our community. We won't win any popularity contests by challenging people this way, but we may help to ensure that these beautiful children grow up. That they have a chance to realize their dreams, to have their hopes, and to live long, healthy lives. That these precious lives, these beautiful dreams, and their priceless tomorrows are preserved.

Many of us have known the terrible, sickening pain and fear of losing or nearly losing a child. No one should have to face that pain. No one should have to face that fear. Not now! Not ever.

Please, let each of us do our part in protecting and caring for our children, our families and our neighbors. Let us all pay attention to what we do, how we drive, and how we act. If we are asked to show greater care, let us do so with courtesy.

We have a wonderful community here. Together, we can keep it that way.

People need to get involved

I was compelled to write this letter after viewing the coverage of Woodstock 1999 on MTV this past weekend. I, like many other members of my generation, was eager to see all of the bands play and to find out if the magic of the original Woodstock festival could again be created in the 1990s. Sadly, I don't think it can be.

I listen to my mother and father tell stories of the 1960s and of the original Woodstock. They say that it was then that music had a purpose and people shared a common bond and goal of peace between them. Thousands of youth not only came together to hear great music, but they gathered together for a greater cause as well. Their cause was peace and harmony and the music they listened to united them.

However, in 1999, I don't think there is a cause all of our youth is united behind. When thousands of teens and twenty-somethings gathered for this year's Woodstock, most just went to hear the music. And instead of sharing food and housing like at the original concert, fights broke out, fires were lit, and a myriad of debris was thrown on stage and off. Instead of one group of people uniting to enjoy music and freedom, subcultures like the "mud people" or "beer people" erupted and concertgoers were forced to align with either side. Later, fights broke out between the two groups. The only common cause between people seemed to be violence.

When I watch this on television, it makes me extremely sad because this one concert seems to represent the actions and attitudes of my generation as a whole. I am a 19-year-old college student and I often feel frustrated when I walk down the street. Everyday I witness an act of racism, sexism, homophobia, etc. We live in a world of extreme social injustice. Yet, my generation, the people who I feel should be responsible for making a difference, are doing nothing. Instead of protesting what we feel is unfair, instead of voting, instead of making our voices heard, we choose frat parties, beer and violence.

I think one of the root causes of this apathy is our inability to see all of the injustice in the world. We are constantly told that this is the post-civil rights era or the post-feminist era. These buzz words make it seem as though our work is done. But our fight for freedom for all is far from over.

I think my generation is also always told that we have it the best anyone every has. We're all told that the United States is the best country in the world and we enjoy way more wealth and freedom than our parents did. When people harbor these types of attitudes, its no wonder that young adults my age don't see the problems that face this nation today.

Another problem I see with my generation is all of the movements we do have are incredibly fragmented. When I first entered college, I joined an animal rights activist group. However, the group never really got anything done because the members could never agree on tactics to get their message across. Some felt the group was too radical and some felt it was too conservative. Instead of having meetings about the issue at hand, their meetings turned into nothing but fights about which members supported the cause more.

Although there are a lot of barriers out there to becoming active and doing something, there is a lot my generation can do. Voting is the first thing. People fought long and hard to give us the right to vote, so we must use it. It's one of the best ways we can get our voices heard. Also, we should join activist groups. We can all select a cause that we truly believe in and will fight for. We must unite with other groups to fight for one larger cause: trying to make the world a better place for everyone.

Lastly, we must take the initiative and do something, even if its on our own. Two years ago, I started volunteering in urban high schools in Brooklyn, N.Y. There, I taught speech and debate and how to become more active in the political process. At first it was weird and somewhat scary, but after two years of seeing nothing but progress, I feel so rewarded. Not only have the students benefited greatly, but I have too by knowing that I helped someone.

While it is hard to get involved and to get started, it's too important not to. Every little bit counts and we all can make a difference.

Gas station, car wash still in works

By Michael Rybka
Staff Writer

A conclusion was not drawn at the July 27 Dexter Township Planning Commission meeting on whether the Salamy brothers' new preliminary site plan resembled more a summer rerun or a summer replacement series.

The preliminary site plan was under review to see if it met the requirements of a special use permit. No decision was made that night and a vote is tentatively scheduled for Aug. 24.

As with previous plans, the Salamys are proposing a gas station/car wash/convenience store on the southwest corner of North Territorial and Dexter-Pinckney roads.

The last time the Salamys faced the commission and the public was on March 23.

At that time, the commission voted 6-1 against a preliminary site plan submitted three months prior to the meeting. One of the main points of contention at the time was that it showed usage on the development site for only five of its 12 acres.

The Salamys submitted a modified site plan the day before, incorporating the total 12 acres, but it was not acted upon.

The commission's March vote prohibited the Salamys from submitting another site plan for a year unless it could be established that significantly new construction was planned.

According to Dexter Township Supervisor Robert Tetens, the Salamys took their modified site plan to the ZBA and then to the planning commission for confirmation that the new site plan constituted new evidence.

Under advice from the township attorney, the commission agreed that it did, making the ZBA's subsequent concurrence a moot point.

Whether the commission was reviewing the same plan the ZBA looked at was a source of confusion to the commission.

An attorney for the Salamys said it was practically the same plan with the exception that the septic tank was moved father south.

"I haven't a clue as to why the ZBA sent it back," Milam said. "I hate to hear things like 'almost,' 'pert near,' 'dang close' and 'except for.'"

Tetens said the township's attorney advised that the commission accept the testimony of changes.

An engineering report from Bruce Pindzia and a planning report from Mark Idelson followed.

Pindzia and Idelson were in agreement that the Salamys' third try was a distinct improvement over the previous plans, particularly in regards to traffic flow.

Pindzia expressed concern over the retention pond, while Idelson called for better landscaping. Both said problems may remain with lighting affecting neighboring properties.

Idelson added that the proposed development conforms to the zoning requirements.

The public comment that followed repeated concerns stated at previous meetings over the car wash's effect on water quantity, the gas station's effect on water quality, and the complex as a general source of litter and rural blight.

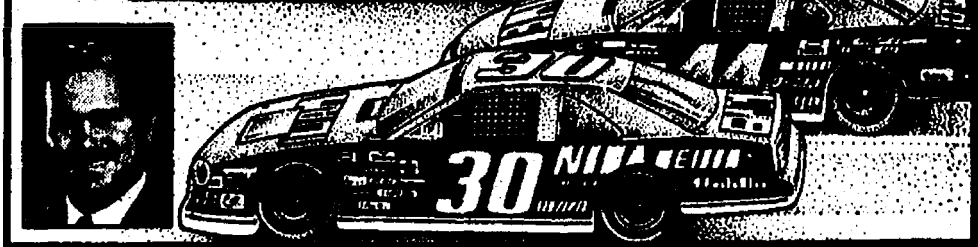

In addition, a few residents expressed exasperation over the Salamys' dogged pursuit of what, according to them, was something that public opinion has already rejected.

Sheridan Springer, whose resignation from the planning commission was accepted by the board June 18, spoke of the plan for the first time as a "civilian," saying that the driveway on Dexter-Pinckney Road was too far north.

Springer said that unless it was moved down, "stacked" vehicles at the stop light would impede vehicles from exiting the auto and truck complex.

Craig chooses career in education over art

By Michelle Rogers
Associate Editor

Art has been a lifelong passion of Sue Craig's. She studied it in college and enjoys painting and drawing in her spare time. But, oddly enough, when it came time to pick a career, Craig chose education over art.

This fall, Craig will mark her 28th year with Chelsea schools. She teaches English and geography at Beach Middle School.

A 1967 Chelsea High School graduate, Craig returned to her alma mater to teach after earning a bachelor's degree from Eastern Michigan University in 1971. She majored in art and minored in English. A few years later, Craig added a master's degree in curriculum.

Craig began her career teaching art and English at Chelsea High School. But after a maternity leave, she ended up at Beach Middle School, where she taught English to eighth-graders for 25 years. For the past couple of years, Craig has taught seventh-grade block.

"At first I really wanted to stay at the high school, but I realized middle school students are much more open," Craig says. "They say what's exactly on their minds."

"It has actually been much more exciting. They are more willing to participate in class."

Craig decided on her career in college while she was studying art. Craig says she knew a career as an artist would be a financial struggle, so she chose teaching.

"I liked being in school and I enjoyed working with children," she says are among the reasons she chose teaching.

Craig had explored the role in her teen years as a Sunday school teacher at St. John's Rogers Corners Church.

In addition, several teachers were influential in her life. Rose Anderson, who was Craig's teacher in kindergarten through third grades, was a role model. Anderson taught at Rogers Corners School on Waters Road in Freedom Township.

"I guess she was one of my mentors," Anderson says. "She made her classroom feel like home."

Over the years, Craig has maintained contact with Anderson, who has since retired, and attended the graduation parties of her former teacher's grandchildren.

Many changes have occurred in education since Craig was a student of Anderson's at Rogers Corners School. Among them are computers and the Internet, which Craig has found to be an invaluable research tool for her students. Among other things, they use it to look up information on countries for reports in Craig's geography class.

As part of a Middle East Bazaar put on every spring, students research a country and its culture, sharing the information, as well as cultural artifacts and ethnic cuisine, with the community. Craig and other teachers spend about six weeks organizing it. She says it's a highlight every year. About 30 countries are showcased.

Another highlight for Craig over the years was helping to organize the eighth-graders' annual trip to Washington, D.C. As a Chelsea High School senior, Craig recalls visiting the Capitol, and has enjoyed sharing in that same thrill with Beach students.

TEACHER FEATURE

The only hard rules in Craig's class center on respect. She expects students to respect themselves and achieve academically; she expects them to treat other people how they would like to be treated; and she expects them to treat property with respect.

Typically, Craig says, there are no problems. She usually goes over the rules at the beginning of the year and occasionally has to remind students.

"Pretty much, they are all good kids," Craig says. "I feel lucky to be teaching here."

As a teacher, Craig hopes students see her as someone who cares about them and is willing to listen.

What she finds unusual about Chelsea schools is the level of support from the community.

"We have an active parent population. They seem to really care about the kids," she says. "And the kids are cooperative and seem to want to do a good job."

Craig has had many memoorable moments in her career, from seeing former students return to teach, to watching a colleague take over as principal. But the most rewarding thing, she says, is when students come to class smiling and looking like they are happy to be in school.

What Craig looks forward to in her career is seeing more of her former students. Since she lives in Chelsea, Craig runs into them while in town. She sees others at parent conferences because she now teaches their children.

When she is not in the classroom, Craig can be found at her husband's restaurant, Rod's Diner in Ann Arbor. She spends her evenings, weekends and summers helping out. It was their lifelong dream to own a restaurant because they met at Stiver's, where Sue worked as a waitress and Rod worked as a cook.

Any other extra time is spent on her art. Craig enjoys creating watercolor paintings of people's homes. She is commissioned by people in the area, as well as out of state.

Craig and her husband live on part of her family's homestead in Freedom Township. They have two children, Michelle, a 22-year-old student studying marketing at Western Michigan University, and 27-year-old Chris, who is attending seminary school in Illinois.

Sue Craig teaches English and geography at Beach Middle School. She is trained in art but has elected to teach the core subjects instead. Craig has worked the past 28 years in Chelsea, where she graduated from high school in 1967. She and her husband own Rod's Diner in Ann Arbor.

Friends to become opponents in college

By Frank Dimich
Special Writer

It's not your typical double-play combination, but Margaret Schick and McKenna Houle have been getting their opponents out since second grade.

As a unit, they've played for different softball teams but with the exception of one summer, they've always played on the same team whether it was in the Chelsea recreation leagues or their most recent accomplishment of leading Chelsea to the Division II state finals.

"She's one of those friends that'll last forever," Houle says of her friendship that began when they started kindergarten.

Now, Houle, who was named first team all state as a pitcher and Schick, who was given honorable mention at shortstop, will be facing each other for the first time.

Houle will attend Bowling Green and Schick Michigan State in the fall. The teams are scheduled to play each other in the fall preseason. Obviously, this is a total change for two who have played together for so long — sharing the leadership role as captains for Chelsea this year.

"She was great to be captains with, it was fun," Houle says. "It was very easy because there was no competition between me and Margaret."

In fact, somewhere in the back of their minds, they hoped to continue to play together at the collegiate level. But they knew it would be difficult to find a school that needed both a pitcher and a shortstop.

"We've talked about it, we knew that was kind of far-fetched," Houle says.

However, there's always a little fun competition between friends.

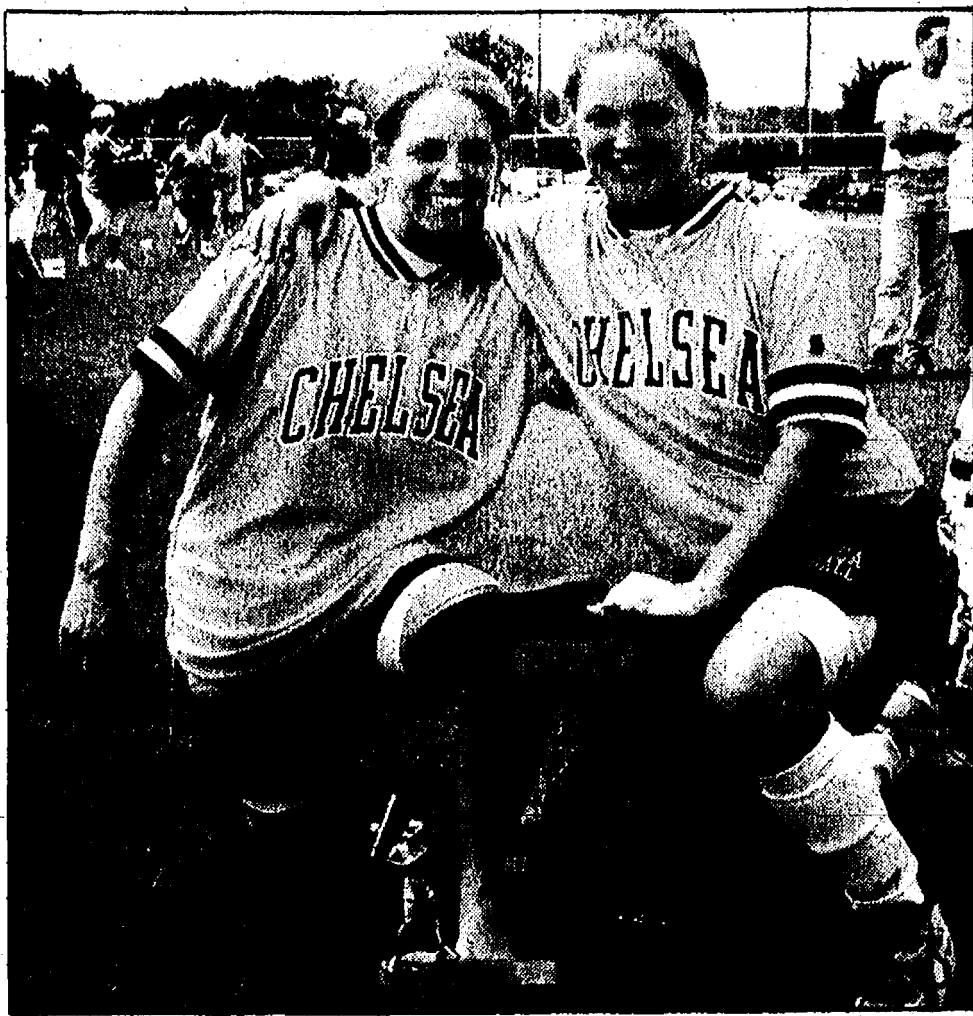

"I've always been fast but when we were little I would never race McKenna because she would beat me," Schick says. "Then I grew up and got a little faster."

Yes, just a little faster-fast enough to steal more than 60 bases for Chelsea this season.

Her running and hitting and Houle's pitching have also helped the team they played for this summer, the Mt. Pleasant Drillers, to the Amateur Softball Association state championship.

This enabled them to advance to the regionals July 24, but much of the team couldn't attend, including Schick and Houle, because of the high school all-star game on the same date.

That is testament to how much talent the Drillers have and testament to the talent of Schick's and Houle's, whom coach Al Roberts says are the leaders of the team. On a team with several pitchers, Houle gets 80 percent of the work.

Margaret Schick (left) and McKenna Houle were cornerstones of the Chelsea High School softball team's drive to the state finals this spring. The two have been playing softball together since second grade, but will face off against each other when their college teams play in the preseason.

"She is so strong and seasoned in terms of pitching, we opted to not go with another (exclusive) pitcher," he says.

It wasn't always that way but in the summer before her freshmen year, her father John noticed that she might have some potential.

"He thought I was good, so we got a pitching coach," Houle says.

That coach is Amy Polljan, who pitched for Indiana University and was the pitcher on Chelsea's 1985 state championship team.

But she is especially grateful to her father. "If it wasn't for him, there's no way I'd be where I was today," she says. "He's had a big influence on my work ethic."

Her stamina has improved, and she now has a variety of pitches — fastball, changeup, riser, sinker, screwball and curve to get hitters out with.

"I actually started using the curveball in the summer (1999)," Houle says. "It's working very well, one of my best pitches."

Pitching is clearly her bread and butter, but her improvement at the plate has made her a well-rounded player. She batted over .400 for Chelsea this season.

"My hitting has come a long way," Houle says. "Freshmen through junior year, I struggled with it. I was very inconsistent. This year, I was more confident at the plate."

Schick too has gained more confidence on the bases.

"I think a lot of it is confidence and how good of a jump you get," she says of stealing. If you go in kind of hesitant, you're more likely to get caught. Every time I stole a base this year, I never second-guessed myself."

But Schick understands that stealing won't be as easy at the collegiate level. She's already experienced a taste of that in the summer when she's playing against catchers who can get rid of the ball quickly.

"In the summertime, it's a lot tougher," she says. "I do still have enough confi-

Performers Return to Chelsea

Music group SumOfUs debuts in its home town of Chelsea Aug. 6 to premiere new tunes in its singular Pop style. The sibling trio composed of former Chelsea residents Courtney Roberts, Casey Gorton and Trevor Gorton will perform at 6 p.m. Friday at Pierce Park with local bands Natural Habitat and U. Me & Him. dence...If I do steal, I'll gain more confidence hopefully."

Both Schick and Houle have gained confidence through playing and working year round. Houle has played softball exclusively. "Since I wasn't in any other sport, it gave me time to do what I needed to do," she says.

Schick has concentrated on softball most of the time, even when she's played basketball in the fall. She's always working on hitting and lifting weights to improve her agility.

Despite their days of playing together coming to an end this summer, Houle and Schick will always have their friendship and memories of playing together, especially their run to the high school state final.

"It was fun to be there," Schick says. "I don't think we realized how far we made it. I don't think you see how many other good teams there were."

"I think it's something that I'll talk about forever," Houle says.

Why is a Chelsea District Library expansion so important?

(1) Currently, access to the library is very difficult for our neighbors with canes and arthritic knees, mothers with strollers and heavy packages, people with restricted breathing, and our neighbors who use wheelchairs.

(2) Our library services, facility, and budget are geared only to Village of Chelsea residents, who constitute only 35% of our community. The library—made to serve a population of 4,000—currently serves over 12,000 residents.

What makes this election so significant?

District Library Law and the Chelsea District Library Agreement require that the voters authorize and approve a millage support for the District Library by November 15, 2000.

Local woman selected for newspaper internship

Hillary R. Smith, a 1996 graduate of Chelsea High School and a senior at Michigan State University, was selected as an internship-winner by the Association for Women in Sports Media (AWSM) and The Plain Dealer in Cleveland, Ohio's largest newspaper.

One facet of the program has her working as a reporter for the sports department at The Plain Dealer. The internship began May 17 and will end Aug. 15.

AWSM also paid for Smith's attendance at its annual July conference in St. Louis, where she participated in seminars and meetings. The members of the convention were given tickets to Busch Stadium and attended a St. Louis Cardinals game where Mark McGwire hit home runs 30 and 31.

Smith, the daughter of Gerald and Kristin Smith of Lima Township, was also introduced at the breakfast meeting of the convention, along with eight other recipients of awards.

AWSM awards scholarships and internships yearly to college women interested in sports journalism. The interns are sent to Sports Illustrated, ESPN, The St. Petersburg Times, Nike and the USOC, while Gannett selects a copy-editing and writing intern. This is the first year that The Plain Dealer has participated in the AWSM internship program.

As a reporter in Cleveland, Smith has covered major and minor league sports and has interviewed athletes from the Indians, Cavaliers, Rockers and Browns. She has also regularly covered minor league baseball in Akron.

While covering the CART

she interviewed in June, races interviewed Aaron Ward of the Red Wings, who was watching Jimmy Vasser drive. At The Plain Dealer, she has had the opportunity to be advised by and work with several award-winning journalists and has been treated as a regular working reporter.

While a student at Chelsea High School, Smith participated in the mentorship program run by Jim Winters and was mentored by Amy Whitesall, a sports reporter with The Ann Arbor News. Whitesall introduced Smith to the working world of reporting and taught her many of the skills that helped her to be selected by AWSM. Smith also covered sports for The Blue Print at Chelsea High School.

During her first three years at MSU, Smith has worked as a stringer at The Lansing State Journal, covering preps, taking scores and writing feature articles.

She will graduate in 2000 from Michigan State with a degree in political theory and constitutional democracy from James Madison College and a degree in journalism. She plans to work as a sports reporter after graduation.

Thanks, Dexter and Chelsea!

Dear Friends and Neighbors,

With the help of our summer assistant, Michael Sheppard, we were able to visit almost 500 houses the last two weeks of July. We were able to speak to someone in about 2/3 of these, sometimes on a repeat visit if there was no one home the first time.

In all these visits, no one got violent; no one was rude; no one literally slammed the door in our faces. Some families felt a little inconvenienced to have us show up at the particular time we did (though many were relieved we were from a Lutheran Church, and not from some other religious group); but virtually all of you were quite friendly, and some of you thanked us profusely for stopping by.

We truly appreciate the reception you gave us, and we wish you the Lord's blessings for the rest of the summer. If you have the opportunity, please come and worship with us. As always, our Sunday services are at 10:00 a.m., and we continue our

Wednesday evening services at 7:30 p.m. through September 1.

Our Sunday School for adults, and children ages 4 through grade 8, resumes September 12 at 9:00 a.m. If you are considering bringing your children, please give me a call so we can order the right amount of material.

Our fall program will also begin with Women's Bible Study on Wednesday evenings, Men's Club once a month, Confirmation Classes, Youth activities, and more.

If we didn't make it to your house this summer, maybe we will in the future. But you don't have to wait for us to contact you; please give me a call if you'd like a visit! We'd really like to get to know you, and more importantly, we'd like to be able to share eternity with you through faith in Jesus Christ!

The meeting was called to order at 7:42 p.m. by President Steele.

J. Myles said that all of the townships and the Village would share in the costs. R. Harock asked if someone would explain what the Fire Authority was. President Steele said that there would be two elections to fund the Fire Authority. One would be for a 1 mil. general operating budget and the Authority was working on a program for an additional millage.

R. Harock of 200 E. North Street, questioned the extension of the East Street railroad crossing closing. She said she was opposed to giving them an extension.

She said she was extremely upset that they had not bothered to attend this meeting and felt that the crossing should be reopened until they were ready to start construction.

Trustee Cashman said he wanted the East Street crossing to be opened permanently.

Motion by Trustee Ortring, seconded by Trustee MacLeod, that because the representatives had not attended this meeting with the requested construction schedule that they be fined $15,000.00, which represents 10% of the estimated cost of opening the East Street railroad crossing.
