New social studies curriculum approved

The school board approved a new districtwide social studies curriculum Monday. The changes will be effective for the 2000/2001 school year.

The changes complement the existing social studies curriculum rather than replace it, the board said. The estimated cost of the changes is about $65,000, though some cost mistakes were noted during the meeting.

The high school curriculum currently requires only three years of social studies. A curriculum committee proposed that it become a four-year requirement, but that creates conflicts until a seventh period is added or the school changes to block scheduling:

Township updates property records

Dexter Township Assessor Larry Merte was granted funds to complete updating assessment records.

Equalizer assessing software, installed on the township board's computer system in the last year, provides the opportunity to store multiple photos of property in a digital format. Both the assessing department and the township zoning department use the photos.

The project requires visits to improved properties, photographing them and then downloading the images. The board approved hiring two part-time, college-age employees for the summer to photograph properties, beginning this week.

Also approved was the purchase of a second digital camera. Initial funding was approved at $3,750.

Township OKs license change

The Dexter Township Board approved at its Jule 20 meeting the addition of Cheryl Luallen and Kelly Lauridsen to the liquor license for Inverness Inn.

Luallen and Lauridsen join Paul Ledwidge as members listed on the 2000 Class C license, which includes a dance-entertainment permit.

Planners approve plans for CVS

Cellular tower plans grind to halt.

By Jim Silver Staff Writer

It was déjà vu all over again at the June 20 planning commission meeting, as members considered plans for a drugstore on the northeast corner of Main Street and Old US-12.

Following a discussion that mirrored some of the arguments over a Rite-Aid drugstore proposed on the same site in 1999, commissioners approved a preliminary site plan for a CVS pharmacy.

But they also asked the developer to alter plans for parking and consider a more individualized facade in a final site plan.

Discussion of the proposal dominated the evening, with Commissioner Rick Haugen reiterating, at some length, concerns with the plan raised at the May 16 commission meeting by Ann Valle.

Haugen concentrated especially on plans by the Zaremba Group, developer of the project, to install underground water-detention tanks, which would gradually drain into nearby Pierce Park.

ark. Tom Hamuza, a representative for Zaremba, said the tanks would prevent flooding at the park.

But Haugen and commission Chairwoman Kathy Carter said such underground storage plans were characteristic of urban planning, and wondered what such plans meant for the future of Chelsea.

"Maybe we need to revise our ordinance, so we don't have every developer coming in here proposing to use these,"

Carter said.

Hamuza said the expense of such tanks would put them out of the range of most area developers. He told the commission he had only included them in his plans to increase the amount of usable land.

In addition, Village Council Trustee Frank Hammer said the tanks had been included at the initial suggestion of the village.

"So I don't think it would be appropriate to tell CVS now that they can't use these tanks," Hammer said.

Haugen also questioned the orientation of the store, which would face into the intersection. He asked Hamuza to consider moving the store to the middle of the lot, to make it more pedestrian Staffan-Mitchell Funeral Home to be rebuilt north of town.

After nearly three years of negotiations and planning, the Staffan-Mitchell Funeral Home will be relocating from its Park Street home of more than 100 years to a brand-new 8,000 square-foot facility.

The new site is on the northern edge of town on a parcel that recently was annexed into the village from Sylvan

"We plan to have village President Richard Steele, members of the planning commission and DDA, and (descendants) of the Staffan family as well as our new neighbors at the ceremony," said Gloria Mitchell, owner of the funeral home along with her husband, John.

Bank cancels fireworks

Event victim of its own popularity.

Chelsea area residents — and about 20,000 other visitors — won't be enjoying fireworks at the village fairgrounds this year.

The annual Independence Day display, which has attracted big crowds every year, has been canceled, the victim of its own popularity.

According to Scott Tanner, executive vice president of Chelsea State Bank, sponsor of the event for the last seven years, ever-growing crowds, traffic problems and safety issues all contributed to the decision to abandon the program.

"The success of the fireworks was its own worst enemy." Tanner said.

He said the volunteer group that has helped stage the event in recent years had developed a plan to accommodate the flow of traffic at the busy intersection on the day of the fireworks.

"We incorporated a traffic plan that used parking lots and driveways, and only allowed people to turn right (onto M-52)," Tanner said.

"Most of our volunteers were Chelsea Athletic Boosters and it worked real well. But, as development has increased, with more parking lots along the (Old US-12 and M-52) corridor and more people, it became more of a futile situation."

Tanner mentioned the new Farmer Jack's and other stores along M-52, as well as reports that circulated last year about eventgoers "stopping on 94 because they couldn't get here and find a place to park."

Last year's crowd was estimated at between 20,000 and 40,000 people.

"Our entire viewing area is 3,200 people, with two main crossroads," Tanner said. "It's not feasible to expect (the logistics) to accommodate (the event)."

Chelsea Fire Chief Dan Ellenwood concurred.

"There are some safety issues," he said. "When people are trying to leave, the town is in gridlock for a half-hour to 45 minutes. If an emergency occurred and we couldn't get to it (right away), then there is a liability for the bank."

Ellenwood said the fire department has supplied trucks for fire and medical emergencies for at least 25 of the 30 years he has been with the fire department.

"We are only blocks away," he said, "but if there were an explosion, an accident, or some other emergency and it took us 20 to 30 minutes to get to the scene, then that is a liability factor to the bank.

"We came to the conclusion that this was not a viable place (for the fireworks). It just can't be safely handled here."

Chelsea State Bank started its sponsorship of the fireworks, according to Tanner, when it was about to fizzle out for lack of funding.

Former Chelsea student stars in 'Faust' musical

By Elizabeth Wagenschutz Staff Writer

It may not be Broadway, but The Riverside Arts Center in Apsilanti is still a pretty good place to perform a musical.

The musical draws from many different sources to tell the story of Faust, a man who summons the devil and sells his soul for omnipotent power and knowledge.

Most of the characters in the musical are well developed and perform the humorous parts well. Particularly interesting to watch are Jeffrey Steiger as Wagner and Aral Basil Gribble III as Jasper. Both embody their personas and provide important support the storyline could otherwise lack.

The character of Mephistopheles, the devil (Rob Sulewski), is humorous, arrogant and quite funny, but it is his four demons who steal every scene they have.

Board hires four teachers

By Elizabeth Wagenschutz

School may be on summer break, but the school board is still working, as are the new teachers recently hired.

At its meeting Monday, the school board approved the hiring of four new teachers for Pierce Lake Elementary, Beach Middle School, the high school and the alternative high school.

Michelle Schertzing of Chelsea was hired as a part-time Pierce Lake Elementary kindergarten teacher. Twelve teachers applied for the position, six were invited for interviews and three were asked to perform a teaching sample.

Schertzing has a bachelor of science degree in language arts and group science from Eastern Michigan University. She is planning to pursue a master's degree in early childhood education while teaching.

Schertzing has a great deal of experience in education. She has been a substitute teacher and a student teacher in the Chelsea school district, as well at Adams Elementary School in Ypsilanti and Cheney Elementary in Willow Run. Schertzing also has worked as an Americorps tutor, helping at-risk children with reading and writing.

Paul Mundo of Shelbyville was hired for the full-time middle school band conductor position. Mundo has bachelor and master of music performance degrees from Western Michigan Approximately 60 applica-University.

He also has done graduate work at the Manhattan School of Music and has a doctor of musical arts degree from the University of North Texas.

Mundo has a great deal of experience in both group and private instruction and has been an instructor at Blue Lake Fine Arts Camp.

He also has received numerous awards and recognition for his musical abilities. He has been an Air Force Airmen of Note finalist, placed second in the Frank Rosolino International Jazz Trombone Competition and was named outstanding soloist in both the Montreux/ Detroit and Notre Dame Collegiate jazz festivals.

Mundo has performed with the Mel Torme Big Band, the "Hello Dolly" Broadway Tour starring Carol Channing, The Temptations and the Manhattan School of Music Lab Band, among others. He is on four CDs, with the North Texas Wind Symphony and the Western Michigan University Jazz Orchestra, one of which received a Grammy nomination.

Heather Conklin of Ann Arbor was hired for the new full-time English position in the high sehool. The post was created because of the retirement of Charles Waller and the reassignment of Chris Kochan and Marcy Ott. Conklin will be teaching two sections of CP English 12 and three sections of English 11.

tions were received for the position. Twelve applicants were asked back for interviews and three were asked to perform teaching samples.

Conklin has a bachelor of arts degree in English language and literature and social science, and a master of arts degree in English education, both from the University of Michigan.

She was a student teacher at Huron High School in Ann Arbor and supervised student teachers at the University of Michigan. She taught English at Ludington High School for five years and also worked as the cheerleading coach for Ludington.

The fourth teacher hired is Denise Cain for the science and math position at the Chelsea Alternative Education Program. Nine applications were received, five applicants were invited for interviews and two were asked back for a teaching sample and second interview.

Cain, from Ypsilanti, is a teacher consultant for the Manchester School District. She has a bachelor of science degree in biology, chemistry and math from Northern Michigan University. She also has special education endorsements from Eastern Michigan University, Nazareth College and Oakland University.

Cain has previously worked in the Grass Lake Community schools, the Battle Creek public schools, Ann Arbor schools and Boysville of Michigan.

'We were happy to sponsor the event the last several years, but it was never our intent to be the permanent sponsor," he said.

"And, it was always a very cooperative effort with the police department. They have a long as it did. The police department and lot of people gave up their Fourth of July to put this on. They are to be commended."

Economics did not play a significant part in the decision to cancel the event. The fireworks cost the bank about $15,000 a year.

That amount included the contract with the fireworks company as well as donations to the police department auxillary, the fire department auxiliary and the Chelsea Athletic Boosters.

In previous years, the parking lots of Pamida and Polly's and virtually any available space in between and on the periphery became a haven for spectators. Hundreds of viewers would stake out spots in which they would set up a kind of day camp to assure having a good seat for the evening's fireworks. Some people even brought portable grills and refreshments to help pass the time until sunset. "Several hours before the

CATS looking to expand

By Elizabeth Wagenschutz Staff Writer

The Chelsea Area Transportation System held its monthly board meeting Tuesday, and the most important issue CATS is facing is the need to expand yet the lack of financial ability to easily do CATS is a nonprofit organization that serves Chelsea's seniors and differently abled residents.

The CATS' mission is to continue providing affordable transportation for all who need it.

According to administrator Michaelene Pawlak, this year has been one of growth for CATS. Ride requests have increased, and while service has tried to expand to meet increased needs. CATS has met with many problems.

CATS advertises that it travels six miles out of the actuality it can travel out only four miles. The sysem has only one van and serves many riders, and it cannot do long-distance country runs.

Pawlak spoke at the CATS board meeting to members, explaining the current situation and why expansion is necessary.

She said the benefits of ex-pansion include more service to residents not served now. more rides, the possibility of taking resident trips to Ann Arbor and, if they work with the Ann Arbor Transportation Authority, the possibility of making door-to-door schedule

> Thank you for all the cards & gifts we received on our 60th Wedding Anniversary.

Harvey & Katheriné Lixey

Pawlak said that a successful transportation system promotes a healthy community through timely medical access, transportation to work and social enrichment opportunities. For CATS to achieve that, she said, it needs to expand its boundaries and find financial backing.

She also said that if expansion is halted, CATS will revert to previous operational capacities and not be able to serve all who need it.

"We are at capacity right now," Pawlak said.

She said that this fall CATS should be getting a second van and, hopefully, the resources to refurbish the van it currently uses. These changes should help in meeting more city needs, but many will still exist, she added.

Pawlak also said that CATS is working with other transit center of the village, but in authorities in the area as much as possible. She said that CATS has been included in a RideSource proposal to obtain a van that it would operate for Michigan WorksFirst

She also said CATS is look. ing at working with the Ann Arbor Transportation Authority and possibly combining the Dexter-Chelsea fixed-bus loop. But even with these changes, financial needs still Pawlak said that financial challenges include raising the funds for drivers' salaries, vehicle maintenance, insurance and gasoline.

Where does CATS obtain financial support for these expenses?" Pawlak asked.

Some township representatives offered comments. Lyndon Township Supervisor Maryann Noah explained the township's view.

"We're seeing rural communities in transition," she said, "and many are facing their own problems with public safety services."

Noah also said that townships can only tax a certain amount and most are running on extremely tight budgets themselves.

"There is a huge need here and no method of funding," she said.

Pawlak told the board that CATS also is looking to local organizations and businesses for support and financial backing.

"Your donation offers more than monetary support," she said. "Mobility offers dignity, quality of life for area-residents and a prosperous, healthy community."

Summer signals strawberry season

June brings the beginning of strawberry time in Michigan, and Michigan Department of Agriculture Director Dan Wyant is encouraging state residents to "Select Michigan" strawberries for their family outings and other summer traditions.

Wyant said Select Michigan is a brand-identification program aimed at helping consumers more easily identify Michigan grown, processed, or manufactured food products, including strawberries.

"Michigan grows some of he sweetest, freshest strawberries in the nation," Wyant said. "In addition, they are easy to find since Michigan strawberries are grown in every county of the state.

"Depending on the summer month and location in the state, chances are motorists

Fresh strawberries are available in southern Michigan beginning in early June, with the harvest season ending in the state's Upper Peninsula in late July. Michigan's strawberry crop was valued at more than $7 million in 1998. Michigan strawberries are a healthy food choice as they are high in iron and vitamin C and contain less than 60 calories a cup. In fact, just eight strawberries provide 14 percent of the recommended daily allowance of vitamin C for children.

Traffic shift set over holiday

The Michigan Department of Transportation will temporarily switch all traffic on US-27 to new service roads this week, prior to the Fourth of July holiday.

The new service roads will reroute the heavy weekend and holiday traffic around the interchange construction, reducing backups and slowdowns.

"This is an innovative approach that will allow us to keep all lanes open on both US-27 and M-57 during construction," state Transportation Director James DeSana said. "US-27 is a major north/south route, especially during the busy summer months, and it is important to keep traffic flowing."

Construction of the new interchange will eliminate the need for the traffic signal currently in place at the intersection, resulting in smoother and quicker travel for motorists. When the interchange is completed, M-57 traffic will be carried over US-27.

"Our goal was to build the project as quickly as possible without disrupting traffic," said Terry Stepanski, manager of the Mount Pleasant Transportation Service Center. "Work on the interchange is on a highly expedited schedule to get it open as quickly as possible."

Study shows heart-disease ris

In the first study of its kind in families, researchers have shown that elevated triglycerides - a blood fat - sharply increase a person's risk of dying from a heart attack, even if a person's blood cholesterol is

Melissa Austin, Ph.D., of the department of epidemiology at the University of Washington School of Public Health and Community Medicine in Seattle, reported the study in this week's of Circulation: Journal of the American Heart Associa-

"The findings offer more evidence of the need to measure levels of both cholesterol and triglycerides when patients undergo lipid profile testing," Austin said.

Triglycerides are a common type of blood fat in the human body and have long been associated with heart disease. However, the latest study is the first to provide strong evidence that elevated blood triglyceride levels in families. independent of cholesterol levels, can predict heart attack deaths years in advance.

"Because there is an increased risk for individuals who have a family history of high lipids compared to their spouses, there is a need to collect data on close relatives of patients diagnosed with hyperlipidemia and cardiovascular disease," Austin said.

Hyperlipidemia is a condition in which a person's blood cholesterol and/or triglyceride levels are elevated.

"Our primary reason for doing the study was to shed light on ways to treat and prevent a potentially deadly condition that affects many families," she said. "Lowering triglyceride levels with medications may also lower the risk inthese families, but that still has to be determined by further research."

The landmark 20-year study used medical history data collected in the early 1970s from 101 families in which cardiovascular disease was prevalent and levels of triglycerides were high. Researchers then traced the health status and cause of death for 685 family members over the next two decades.

It was the first study of its kind in several respects, according to Austin.

"It is the first to follow families without high cholesterol levels and only high triglycerides," she said. "Some of our families did have high cholesterol, some had only high triglycerides and others had both."

She said another unique aspect of the study was that most of the family members were relatives of individuals who had a heart attack and also had elevated triglycerides.

The study compared the risk of heart disease death between siblings and offspring vs. spouses of individuals with one or two common lipid disorders - familial combined hyperlipidemia or familial hypertrigleridemia. FCHL refers to high triglyceride levels in combination with elevated levels cholesterol in families: FHTG only is elevated triglyceride levels in families.

The two disorders examined in the study represent the most common forms of a condition called "familial hyperlipidemia." The total number of American families affected by these apparently genetic disorders is currently unknown, but they probably ac-wide, Austin said. The risk of death from cardiovascular disease among siblings and offspring of families with FCHL was 70 percent higher compared to spouses. In families with FHTG, increased triglycerides predicted a two- to three-fold increased risk of cardiovascular death. The risk in FHTG was not changed significantly when researchers took into account the person's cholesterol levels. Austin also called for more study aimed at pinpointing and understanding the underlying genetic mechanisms that count for a large number of cause high triglyceride levels

"Only then will we be able to say which treatments and preventive steps are most effective and what can be done to reduce the risk," Austin said.

Triglycerides can be obtained from food and are also secreted by the liver. Excess levels of triglycerides can increase concentrations of two types of fat particles, chylomicrons and very-low-density lipoproteins. These fat particles may contribute to the fatty deposits that obstruct blood flow, increasing the risk for a heart attack.

Local industries feeling pinch of rising gas prices

By Marsha Johnson Chartrand owner Karen Fosdick said her Heritage Newspapers

The phenomenon has touched everyone in some form or another — mostly as they reach deeper into the pocket or purse when pumping a tank of gas.

consumer that might not be so immediately apparent, but could in fact have a long-range effect on the prices that consumers pay for a variety of goods.

Chelsea Milling Co.'s Tom Halsey said motor carriers are adding fuel surcharges to their billings. "Of course, that cuts into your profitability," he said. "It raises your cost, and we definitely feel the effect.

"Right now, it hasn't affected the cost of our product. But down the road, it will cause an increase just like the rising costs of labor or raw materials would.

"We don't intend to do anything (about pricing) at this time, but it will have to be considered down the road if the high prices continue."

Because their product has a low price structure to begin with. Halsey said, any percentage of price increase will have a bigger impact.

When a business provides delivery service, the ultimate price of its product becomes a bit higher, too.

"Our drivers drive their own vehicles," Fosdick said. "We do own a company car but no one drives it. (The drivers) make more money in their own cars, but they have to pay for the gas, not me.

"We compensate as much as we can on our end, and, hopefully, it's only temporary."

Halsey is not so sure the problem is temporary.

"Overall, I think we've gotten spoiled as Americans with low-cost fuel," he said. "Whether or not we like to think about it, we'll probably have prices stabilize at the area we have them now or maybe a little higher.

"When that happens, the carriers will take an automatic increase in rates, rather than adding the fuel surcharges. Eventually it becomes part of the scheme of things. Everyone goes about their business and the only one who's really hurt is the consumer."

The Department of Public Works in Manchester may not have felt the pinch as much as other communities, but rising prices have had an impact. there, too.

"When you've got costs that have gone up that much, it obviously affects our budget," Village Manager Jeff Wallace said. "We saw the same thing with our construction costs on the recent road project.

"The rising oil prices created an increase in the price of asphalt. There was an overall cost increase of 8 percent even before the recent price increases. contractors attributed the cost overruns to this problem.

"Now we've seen an almost 50 percent increase in the price of gas. No matter what, we still need to run a street sweeper, trucks, chippers, jetrodder (sewer clean out machine), lawn mowers and tractors," he said.

"Jobs that have been contracted out, those costs are locked in. But while the companies are absorbing this cost now, it will be reflected in future price increases."

Wallace noted that the village got many contracts locked in before gas prices went up, but it still affects dayto-day operations.

"Fortunately, we stay within 1.8 square miles," he said. "We don't have far to go."

Ken Nixon of the Washtenaw County Road Commission said he has not seen a substantial increase in expenses recently. "Most of our work is done with diesel fuel," he said. "That price has not increased as dramatically, so regular gas prices really haven't affected us.

"Our road maintenance vehicles are all diesel, as well."

Asked whether the cost of asphalt has affected road work this summer. Nixon said. "As a matter of fact, we just opened bids for our asphalt overlay program and they're lower than they were last year."

He said the quantity of work contracted by the county may make a difference, compared to the street work for the village of Manchester, but "it depends upon how hungry the contractors are, too."

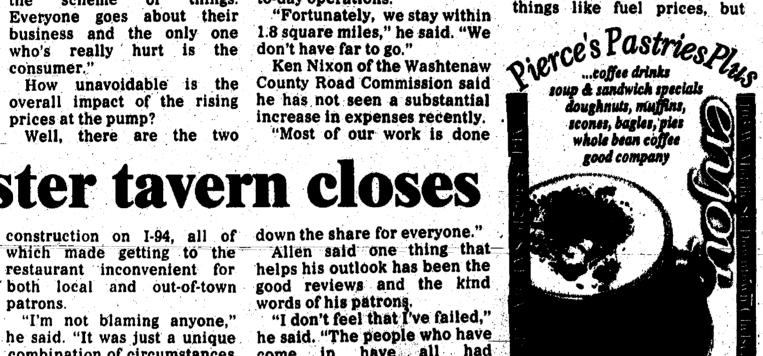

When the Black Sheep Tavern closed its doors last week, owner Bruce Allen said he believed the huge increase in gas prices contributed to the restaurant's demise.

"People don't just go out for a drive," he said. "They think twice before they hop in the car and drive an hour or so, just to go antiquing or out to dinner.

"That's OK for the antique dealers. When prices go back down, their antiques will just be older. But in the restaurant business, it can be deadly."

Chelsea Milling's Halsey said he is not so sure that people are focused on the right problem.

"I think that people focus on ignore things coming down the pike that will be costing more than the fuel," he said.

One of those things, he said, is the Department of Transportation's proposed change in hours of service rules for truckers.

"They plan to decrease hours to a point where it will probably reduce productivity for 25 to 28 percent," he said. "That will mean more trucks on the road instead of fewer. It will really have an impact, because the especially industry is already about 80.000 drivers short.

"The latest figures show they need another 100,000 drivers to meet the demands. These changes will affect businesses price-wise and Just-in-time service-wise.

service will disappear."

The Michigan Farm Bureau says the recent gasoline price is increases are not tied to ethanol use. Ethanol-blended reformulated gasoline costs 30 to 40 cents more in Chicago and Milwaukee than in St. Louis, Mo., said the farm bureau.

Late last week, local gas prices dipped to below $2 per gallon, breaking what might have been a psychological barrier to travel.

It may also, perhaps temporarily, ease other prices that were raised during that period. However, many of the changes that were created during the time of elevated prices will not go away as quickly.

Harris says fall good time to plant trees

GARDENS & NATURE

Are you considering planting a tree or two this year?

It's not too late. Fall is my favorite time to plant woody plants and trees.

The reason is simple: Springplanted trees have to expend a lot of energy to survive and they no longer receive the daily tender loving care of the nursery.

When trees are dug to be balled and wrapped in burlap, a substantial part of their roots is cut off. So they must expend energy to grow new roots, produce leaves to photosynthesize and flower to produce seed.

And that's a tough order for any plant that has had a good deal of its roots cut off.

Trees planted in fall are beginning a period of rest, at least aboveground. Fall and winter are the time when woody plants focus on root production. And even when the air temperatures are cold. when the ground itself is not frozen, root growth continues, although slower.

Trees planted in September have several months to put on new root growth before beginning their top growth cycle in early spring.

Container grown trees are usually smaller. There are several advantages to planting smaller trees that will adjust and grow in place, not to mention they are much easier to haul home and to plant.

I've had a couple of occatainer-grown trees against larger balled and burlapped

In 1988 I lost three Serbian spruce (Picea omorika "Pendula") to the drought. They were 5 to 6 feet tall and were balled and burlapped.

Two years later, I replaced the three with container grown Serbian spruce that were less than 2 feet tall.

The five trees were planted as a grouping. They received the same care at planting and were mulched and watered regularly.

The larger trees frequently wilted from water stress whilethey regrew their roots for the first couple years after planting. The smaller spruce did not wilt.

Granted, for the first couple years the planting looked unbalanced.

The larger remaining two trees sat each spring without putting on much new growth. The smaller container grown trees added 6 to 8 inches of new growth the first spring after planting and began growing more than 1 foot in subsequent years.

Within four years, the smaller trees were almost 5 feet tall while the larger trees had barely gained a foot in height.

Today, 12 years later, there is a notable difference in the size of the trees. The replacement smaller trees are now a foot or 2 taller than the original larger trees.

I selected the Serbian spruce for their form. They are tall and narrower than most spruce and graceful in appearance. Their pendulant branches sweep up at the ends so that the silver underside of the needle is displayed against the dark green foliage of the tree.

The Serbian spruce is a great tree for places where a narrow punctuation is needed. If you are looking for a good shade tree, here's some I've grown and would recommend: •Tulip tree: For speed, nothing can beat the tulip tree or yellow poplar (Lirodendron tulipifera). The tulip tree has sions to test the health and bright yellowish leaves in growth rate of smaller con- early spring and its fall color is a bright golden yellow.

Native to the Eastern United States, it prefers well-drained to moist soils and can reach 500 to 600 years old. In 1983, a tulip tree in Cass County was reported to be 200 feet tall with a canopy spread of 136 could shade a small city yard. More commonly, tulip trees are 70 to 90 feet tail with a crown spread of 35 to 50 feet. In ideal conditions, they can reach 40 to 50 feet tall in 10 to 12 years.

•Sweetgum: The American sweetgum (Liquidambar styraciflua) is known for its brilliant yellow, orange to red and burgundy to purple fall color. The fall color can vary greatly, beginning with yellow and ending with purple, or more than one color on the same tree at the same time.

There are several named varieties with specific fall colors and variegated leaves, and some have corky bark to add to their winter interest. The tree is named for the thick sweet sap it produces. The sap was chewed as gum and is reported to have been used as a skin balm by early settlers. Fossil records indicate the tree has been around since preglacial times.

The sweetgum's star-shaped leaves are very distinct. The tree produces spiky seedballs, which can be a deterrent in some situations. However, I have used them as decorative additions to centerpieces and coated them with sparkles as Christmas tree ornaments.

Ideal growing conditions are rich, well-drained to moist soils. The average height is 60 to 75 feet with a crown spread about two-thirds the height.

• Katsura: The Katsura tree (Cercidiphyllum japonicum) was introduced from Japan, thus feet. At this size, one tree the name japonicum. It has adapted well to our Midwest climatic conditions and grows 1 to 2 feet per year.

Smaller in stature than either of the previous mentioned trees, the Katsura reaches 40 to 60 feet and has a spread of 20 to 30 feet for the single trunk specimens. Additionally, the tree is available as a multistemmed or weeping form.

The weeping form offers an alternative to several of the overplanted weeping forms of cherry and crabapple, both of which frequently become disfigured by disease or require regular spraying.

Whichever form you chose, the heart-shaped leaves afford an array of color throughout the year. In spring, the new leaves have a burgundy overtone, which changes to a soft blue-green leaf in summer and ends in fall with yellow, gold and orange leaves.

The tree appreciates moist to average soils. Additional moisture when young helps the tree establish, and it is thought that slightly acid soil improves the fall color.

When selecting trees and larger woody shrubs for my garden, I'm very fussy and patient. Part of the pleasure of having a garden is to watch things grow.

An added benefit in buying smaller, younger trees is that they are easier to care for and easier to shape and prune.

An older more experienced gardener once helped me ap-

A 17-year-old township boy was arrested for possession of marijuana, contributing to the delinquency of minors and possession of drug paraphernalia. He was parked in the Walnut Ridge subdivision with four teen-age passengers when a deputy approached. The officer reported smelling an odor of marijuana and investigated.

Suspected marijuana, three marijuana water bongs, an ashtray containing suspected marijuana residue, a marijuana pipe and rolling papers were confiscated.

Assault and Battery Assault and battery was reported in the 4200 block of Eyrie Drive in the Eagle Point apartments. A 12-year-old girl told police a 12-year-old boy

BEING RETIRED IS OKAY, I GUESS, BUT I MISS CALLING IN SICK."

Helmets should be safety alternative, not mandatory

How many times have we all seen a dad pedaling his bicycle down the street with his youngster buckled in behind him. going for a ride?

That quality time together could have been spoiled by a police car, lights flashing and sirens blaring, pulling over the pair if they lived in nearby city.

Earlier this year, the local lawmakers considered an ordinance requiring children under 16 years old to wear safety helmets if they were riding bicycles or skateboards or if they were in-line skating.

Police were instructed to stop any non-helmet bound felons, I mean, children, and issue them a ticket. First offense, a written warning. Second offense, a $10 fine.

After that, a $15 fine each time.

ALLEY

HOMEFRONT

One city councilman, who thought the ordinance (which, by the way, failed to pass) was as silly as I did, said it the best.

If a 17-year-old brother was giving a ride on his bike to his 3year-old sister, she would get a ticket if she wasn't helmeted.

He would walk (or, ride) away free, but she, probably just learning to talk and having no idea what the fuss was all about, died in bicycle-related crashes.

read, understand or probably

And does a small town really need its officers tied down to enforcing laws that would best be handled at home by the child's parents.

It's hard to dispute that helmets are a good thing to wear. Even though, I have to admit, the first time I saw someone wearing one, I was a little surprised.

Growing up, I just don't remember anyone talking about them. But lately, you see more and more people wearing them. I'm definitely not against them. If someone wants to wear one, that's great. Safety experts say that in 1995, more than 250 children ages 14 and younger

But, the key point to me is if One of its big pushes is "wear-should they be made to.

Not only does the local government and police already have enough to do, I always wince a little when they start chipping away at things best left

Arrest the drunken drivers, stop the burglars and put an end to child abuse, but don't patrol the streets with a ticket book in hand waiting for a child to stroll

And don't pass an ordinance requiring children to wear the helmets without offering to hand them out for free. There is a great program in Trenton called "Playin' it Safe" that focuses on ways for children to be safe during the sum-

She'd get handed a piece of they, or their parents, want chil-ing your helmets and other safepaper that she couldn't even dren to wear helmets, only then ty equipment when in-line skating, skateboarding or riding your bike, just to name a few."

That's what we need: Education programs for children and parents to let them know how to be safe.

They even sell helmets that are fully certified to meet all safety standards at a substantially reduced price of $7.50 inside City Hall.

What we don't need are overzealous people adopting ordinances that unfairly target a certain age group and that would cost people money just to follow

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Other issues deserving of council's attention

In response to the front page article in last week's newspaper, "Council Split Over Myers' Contract," I would like to share several facts and a few opinions.

Richard Steele and Jack Myers, over the course of their service to the village of Chelsea, have consistently looked out for the best interests of the village of Chelsea and its resi-

As another article on the front page of last week's paper indicated, the taxes paid by the residents of the village actually decreased by 3 mills this tax year, benefiting the residents of the village. The water tower has been replaced, the streetscape is completed, and I could go on and on listing other accomplishments of the past nine years. Chelsea looks great and things are running well. At times, Richard and Jack have found themselves at odds with the township supervisors over issues that would benefit the townships and the Chelsea area, but not serve the best interests of the residents of the village. These conflicts have not resulted in personal ani-mosity between Richard, Jack and the township supervisors, but are professional differences of opinion. They have not affected the working relationship between the village president, the village manager and the townships surrounding

Chelsea. According to literature published by the Michigan Municipal League, council trustees should act to set policy for the village, which is, in turn, carried out by the administration of the village, headed by the village manager. Council trustees are not charged with the responsibility of managing the day-to-day functions of the village; that is the responsibility of the village manager.

Council is to set policy, and ensure their actions reflect what is in the best interests of the residents of the village, who have voted for them. The Michigan Municipal League's Web site, www.mmi.org, contains a multitude of useful information for citizens as well as elected officials. Perhaps a reminder that the trustees serve on the Village Council, not a Chelsea area council, would be in order.

Regarding the employment contract between Jack Myers, as village manager, and the village of Chelsea, perhaps it would help to know the contract is the exact same contract the village used to hire Robert Stalker, the previous village manager. The only change to that contract, when it was offered to Jack by the Village Council in 1991, was initiated by Jack, and changed the severance pay portion. At Jack's request, the severance pay paragraph in the employment contract was altered to pay the six months severance pay over a six-month period, and stop when he obtained other employment. Mr. Stalker was given a lump sum representing six months salary and went immediately to another job.

As far as the monetary compensation Jack is receiving as Chelsea village manager, information available from the Michigan Municipal League indicates his salary is in the mid- to upper range among managers of communities the size of the village of Chelsea. All salary increases and the compensatory time policy in the personnel manual have been approved by the Chelsea Village Council.

Regarding the job description and duties of the village manager, Village Council approved money in 1991 to pay the Michigan Municipal League to study and write job descriptions for several positions in the village, including the manager and the department heads. The MML did this, and that is the job description Jack has been working from since 1991.

The MML reviewed the job descriptions in 1996, and Jack's job description was determined to be adequate for a village the size and structure of Chelsea. This is the job description Jack provided to council some months ago.

Another fact that may be helpful to know as this issue over the employment of the village manager unfolds is that the last time Village Council gave Jack a written evaluation of his job performance was in 1992. Now it appears to be an issue with Trustee Richard Rigg that Jack needs to be formally evaluated, his job description rewritten, and his contract renegotiatedi

The 90-day period prior to the expiration of Jack's current contract, when council has the right, by the terms of the contract, to notify Jack that they want to renegotiate the terms of his employment ended March 10. Trustee Rigg was not elected to serve on council until March 13. Council trustees were provided with this information in their council packets prior to March 10.

Trustee Rigg also appears poised to monitor the use of compensatory time by the manager and some other village officials. This action is certainly contradictory to Trustee Rigg's campaign promise of no micromanagement, and contrary to the Michigan Municipal League's guidelines for the duties of elected council trustees.

The "Common Sense" campaign rhetoric Trustee Rigg used to garner votes has disappeared. I must confess I fail to see where the issue of Jack's contract and use of compensatory time best serve the interests of the residents of the village of Chelsea at this time.

Moving memorial wall visits nearby Jackson

By Rusty Blackwell Special Writer

This weekend dozens of events are planned to help celebrate Independence Day 2000.

will touch the hearts of many area residents is the display at Ella Sharp Park in Jackson of the 240-foot portable replica of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Wall.

Both the original wall in Washington, D.C., and the moving wall show the names of the more than 58,000 Americans, including 2.649 Michigan residents, who were killed in the 1960s and '70s in Southeast Asia during the Vietnam War.

The wall, which is threequarter scale, will be on display around the clock from tomorrow through Sunday at the park, Forth and Horton on Jackson's south side.

Memorabilia of the Vietnam War also will be available for viewing at the park's museum throughout the weekend. All events are free.

Several events are planned for "The Vietnam Wall-Experience," as the display is officially known.

The opening ceremony, at 7 But one of the events that p.m. tomorrow, will include a roll call of the 55 Jackson County casualties and an A-10 fly over. A dedication ceremony is scheduled for 11 a.m. Saturday, and a candlelight service is planned for 10 that night.

Proud Veterans The Motorcycle Club of Jackson will sponsor a motorcycle run to the wall called "Rolling Thunder" — at noon Sunday from Jackson City Hall.

The club encourages all bikers and clubs to participate and will provide handicapped veterans with an antique fire truck to ride on.

The closing ceremony, at 4 p.m. Sunday, will include a remembrance service for those who are listed as prisoners of war or who remain missing in action.

Volunteers from several area groups, including United Auto Workers' locals and Lions clubs, are setting up the wall this morning. It is estimated that it will take 30 to 50 volunteers to complete the two-day assembly.

The volunteers also will be present 24 hours a day while the wall is on display.

The display will be taken down at 8 a.m. Monday. Volunteers still are needed. Information on the display is available by calling Patience-Montgomery Funeral Home at (517) 768-0805.

Several portable Vietnam walls travel the country.

County The Jackson Veterans Council, Chas. J. Burden & Son Funeral Home. Patience-Montgomery Funeral Home and Roseland Memorial Gardens sponsor this wall. which is the only not-for-profit traveling wall.

"There are many people who can't get to the wall in Washington, D.C., for whatever reasons, so we try to bring it to communities," said their Higgins, Patience-Montgomery's area manager and the area project coordinator for the portable wall.

"This helps with both the individuals' and communities' healing processes."

The wall was built in 1990 by Patience-Montgomery's parent company, Service Corporation International. It was in Muskegon last weekend and also has been in Rochester, Flint and Bay City.

Higgins is proud of his involvement in the display.

"There are Vietnam vets who have not yet been able to bring themselves to D.C. to see the wall, including myself," he said. "And they can feel a little more comfortable in their own hometown.

"From my personal experience as a Vietnam vet, it's very important to honor the Vietnam vets who gave their lives for our freedom. For me, that is a powerful thing to be able to bring something like this to our community and its families."

Higgins also believes that the wall's appearance locally provides a great opportunity for many people.

"For the families and friends of those who are on that wall, it gives the individual a chance to get a rubbing of that name as a keepsake," he said. "It's also a place of reverence a place of healing, and it's a place to memorialize their lives.

"I think the value to the American people, is that, No. 1, there is a cost to freedom, and No. 2, we never want to forget those that gave their lives for freedom. That's the memorialization of the wall."

Local you mehing time clock to earn extra cash

By Elizabeth Wagenschutz Staff Writer

Summer break. No more school: no more tea-

No more deadlines and rules and homework and textbooks. Just three months of free time and rest. Well, maybe for a lucky few.

For most students, though, summer break only means summer jobs. With school on break for almost three months, students jump at the chance to make some money to pay for cars, college, movies, food, clothes and more.

And with unemployment low. the job market is ready to provide enough jobs for all teens who want to work.

Many Chelsea students work in Ann Arbor, where jobs are available in the Briarwood Mall and its many restaurants. And for those students who want to remain in Chelsea, job opportunities also are available here.

Many of the bigger businesses have a number of teen agers agreed.
working during the summer. "(Teens are) Many teens work in the food business simply because there are a lot of food places in the Chelsea area. McDonald's employs 25 teen-agers and the Farmer Jack supermarket employs 30. Wendy's employs about 30. as well.

Leigh Mitchell, a senior at Chelsea High-School, works at Wendy's, a place where workers share responsibilities. Mitchell works in many different areas, including making sandwiches, cleaning dishes and working the register and the drive-though

"I like it because I can work with my friends and it's easy," she said. "You can get good at what you do and then it's fun."

Kim Hoag is the assistant manager at Wendy's. She said that many teen workers are like Mitchell and willing to work hard and get the job done. She said there are very few differences she's noticed between teen and adult workers.

"Working with friends can be a problem for teens, and on nicer days we get more call-ins from teens," she said.

But, she stressed, problems in training and reliability are more related to an individual's personality, not his or her age.

Co-manager Cindy Hoard "(Teens are) good workers, but a little crazy," she said. Big Boy restaurant is another Chelsea business that employs a large number of teens. One worker is Mary Paul, a Chelsea High School senior. She is a waitress, and her responsibilities include serving people, cleaning tables and making certain foods.

Paul hopes to make $1,000 from her summer job and is trying to save all of it for college. She said she really likes her job, even though it's not related to

Many-local youths work summer jobs to earn spending money or save for a car and college. Wendy's in Chelsea employs 30 teen-agers from across the area. Among those shown with assistant manager Kim Hoag are Wendy Killinger, Becky Killinger, Jenna Haas, Leigh Mitchell, Sean Makin and co-manager Cindy Hoard.

Alicia Rey teaches second grade at North Creek Elementary School. She is a hit with her pupils, who praise her teaching abilities. Rey stands in her classroom in front of a quilt her class made last year. Each child designed a square and contributed fabric for a second piece.

modern."

Nineteen second-graders can't be wrong!

Especially the 19 youngsters who make up Alicia Rey's class at North Creek Elementary School. They think she's the greatest second-grade teacher they have ever had and one of the best in the Chelsea system. An unscientific poll of several pupils shows blanket agree-

"I think she is funny and she's very nice," says Ricky Douglas, who likes to read and says the reading station is one of his favorite activities.

Brian Bazydlo is enjoying the current in-class reading of "James and the Giant Peach."

"I like the way she reads the story," he says. "She is funny and she is nice, too,"

David Martin agrees with the attributes, of "nice" and "funny," and he also likes working with flash cards as part of the second-grade curriculum. No doubt about it, Rey, though only in her third year of teaching, is a singular sensation with this 8-year-old set.

Rey is a first generation Cuban-American. Her parents and grandparents were born in Cuba and came to the United States several years ago.

Rey was raised and went to school in Ann Arbor and is a graduate of Huron High School. She graduated from Eastern Michigan University with a bachelor's degree reflecting both her Spanish major and elementary education. This fail, she is planning to begin work at . EMU on a master's degree in reading.

"I eventually would like to teach at the college level," she says. "I would like to teach teachers and help prepare them for work in schools and with children."

Rey always felt drawn to teaching in one form or another. As a child she often cast herself sions, and tells her students that today," Rey says.

her old chalkboard is still in storage at her grandmother's and one day she just might bring it to class for them to see.

At first she was unsure of exactly what career path to follow. Rey took a variety of classes and one day while working at a summer office job, she had an epiphany: She suddenly knew she could not be part of the 9-to-5 office mass. She had to do something with and for children and that, naturally, led to education and teaching.

Following graduation, Rey's mirst position was as a long-term substitute teacher in Ann Arbor. The experience was good for her because she realized how much she wanted a class of her own; one that she was with for the full year.

substitute difficult because just when she had built some consistency into a class and knew everyone's strengths and weaknesses, the permanent teacher would return and she was without "her kids."

Fortune smiled upon Rey, and she found herself a full-time, second-grade teacher at North Creek when the school opened in the fall of 1998.

"If it wasn't for the generosity and assistance from Helen Prohaska (the teacher she as "the teacher" during play ses- replaced), I wouldn't be here

> Others who have given her invaluable support and friendship and acted as mentors are Marsha Hansen and D'Ann Gietzen, also North Creek second-grade teachers. Rey describes her teaching style as a "mix of traditional and "I really don't have rules in the classroom," she says, "but I do have expectations, and I tell my kids not to worry because if they worry too much, their brains will turn to mush. I want them to feel safe, respected and think highly of themselves. If has several fond memories those three things are in place. then everything else comes together."

The children notice and respond to her use of humor in the classroom.

"Yes, I do use humor in class a She found being a permanent lot," she says, "and my kids get it. They learn my style pretty quickly and pick it up. Then they use it among themselves.

"I have never had a child be disrespectful to me or class mates. It's nothing magical. I make sure my kids know I won't tolerate disrespect and that want them to be a friend to one another."

Rey adds. life lessons to her academic curriculum.

"I try to teach the basics of life," she says. "We work hard on self-esteem. That can be even more important than academics. Once a child has good sell esteem, the learning falls into place. When they believe in themselves, I see results in classroom work."

Rey has noticed two big differences between the Ann Arbor and Chelsea school systems. One is class size.

In Chelsea she has 19 stu dents, while in Ann Arbor there were at least 28. She also says there is stronger parental involvement in Chelsea.

"The parents have been extremely supportive to me." she says. "They've worked with me as a team with only the children's interests in mind."

Even though her teaching career is still in its infancy, Rev Perhaps the favorite is meeting former students in the hallways:

"I see that they have grown! but then they remember things we did from last year, and that special," she says. "I also like to hear when they have reached individual goals, I know I didn't make it happen. I just provided

after college. "I really do like it because I like to help people and the money isn't too bad either," she rsaid. "I'm hoping to go into the art field, but I think that this is a good skill so I can waitress through college." Dong Huynh, the manager of Big Boy, said he appreciates the local teens and their work ethic.

"Teens don't like to work, but most of the Chelsea and Manchester kids are pretty hardworking and loyal to employers," he said. "Once in a blue moon we see a lazy worker."

Huynh said that hiring teens is attractive because Big Boy likes to support the community and provide teens with good experiences on what is usually their first job.

Huynh also said most adults enjoy working with teens.

"(They) are very, very intelligent, educated kids," he said. "They're very interesting."

Dairy Queen also hires many teen-agers from both Chelsea and Dexter. Dairy Queen is unusual in that all of its staff, except for managers, consists of teen-agers. Chelsea High School junior Heather Tanner works there.

Tanner waits on customers cleans, makes food and fills machines. She works between , 10 and 15 hours a week and "hopes to make around $1,000 for the summer. She uses her money to pay for her car, as well as for going out with friends.

"I love my job! It's so much fun," she said. "The people I work with are really nice. I get along with all of them.

"I also really like making the stuff. It's good to eat!"

Megan Hoelzer is a Dexter freshman who works with Tanner. Hoelzer also waits on customers, cleans and makes food as part of her job. She usually works about 10 hours a week and just hopes to make some spending money for going out, Hoelzer said this is her first job and she really likes the experience she's getting.

"I enjoy it because it's a lot of iun waiting on customers and making ice cream," she said. Sarah Metzler, the manager of Dairy Queen, also worked there as a teen-ager. She said that since all of the workers are teen-agers, it is a very fun, social working environment.

"They are glad to be here," she said. "They like working."

The one problem that arises from having all teen employees is scheduling conflicts around the holidays, managers say. Most teens don't want to work during the big holidays, and though Dairy Queen is flexible, there still are some difficulties.

Metzler noted that this is the first job most of the workers have had, but they are pretty reliable and responsible.

"I think they're a pretty good group," she said. "They get along fairly well and work pretty hard."

The Common Grill also employs teen-age workers, including Amanda Martin and Amy Sporer.

Martin is a senior at Chelsea High School. She works at the Common Grill in the carryout section, where she makes bread and takes carryout orders.

She usually works about 15 hours a week and is using most of the money she earns to pay for a vacation. Money left over is saved for college.

"I like my job because it gives me a sense of responsibility," Martin said. "I like working with people I wouldn't meet otherwise. It's fun."

Sporer is a 2000 Chelsea graduate who works 20 hours a week and is saving all of her money for college.

Her job bussing tables requires a lot of strength and endurance.

"I love my job because I'm always moving," she said. "It's hard work and I feel I earn the money. It can be stressful, but it's good fun."

Matt Hanson is the dining room manager and appreciates the teens who work at the Common Grill. Sometimes conflicts arise during the school "For students, school (and school activities are) priority," he said.

The Common Grill respects, that and allows its workers to be involved as much as possible.

In fact, Hanson said, the restaurant often tries to hire students who are involved in sports because they usually know how to handle many responsibilities at once, are willing to work hard and understand the importance of teamwork and cooperation. He said he always has been impressed with the teens who come from Chelsea.

"They're hardworking, pleasant and outgoing," he said, noting that all these traits are essential to the restaurant busi-

Teen-agers also work at some of the many golf courses and parks in the area. Reddeman Farms Golf Course, Inverness Golf Course, the Waterloo Golf Course, Hudson Mills Metropark and Pierce Lake Golf Course all provide many teens with summer jobs. Jenna Hall, a 1999 Chelsea graduate, works at Pierce Lake Golf Course. She is a student at Miami University in Ohio. She is working full time and hopes to make enough money to cover her living expenses for the college year.

Hall works inside and takes care of tee times, food, restocking and keeping people moving on the golf course. She said she especially enjoys the job because of the people she gets to meet.

She said that the New York Islanders professional hockey team golfed once, as well as the Korean ambassador to the United States.

"I really like working here." she said. "I get to meet a lot of people from all over." Steve Southard, the course general manager, said employing teens is beneficial for the business. "It's good to have a mixture of older and younger employees," he said. "We wouldn't want all of one or the other."

The only problem he finds with teen workers is the age limitations. To operate maintenance equipment, a worker must be at least 18 years old.

Southard said hiring teens works very well for the golf course's schedule, however.

"We're busier in the summer and on the weekends," he said. "Their schedules are the exact same as the golf course's busy times."

While many teens try to find a job, others choose to remain self-employed. Many spend their summers mowing grass, taking care of lawns or baby-sitting to earn spending money.

Emily Morgan, a Chelsea High School junior, usually baby-sits at least once a week for a number of different families. She makes $30 to $35 each time she baby-sits and puts at least half other half she uses for spending

Morgan said she really enjoys baby-sitting, even though she doesn't plan to enter education or work with children as a career.

"I like it because I get to hang, either.

out with little kids," she said. Tim Clairmont is another selfemployed teen-ager; but rather than lawn work or baby-sitting, he teaches guitar lessons. Clairmont has been playing guitar for four years and decided that he was qualified enough to teach others. "I try to help people learn guitar in a fun way," he said. Clairmont charges $10 for a 40-minute lesson.

"I'm basically doing this for some spending money," he said. In addition to earning spending money, teaching guitar lessons gives Clairmont excellent experience for what he would like to do in the future, as well as being fun. "I would love to be a professional musician, but it's extremely difficult to make it as one," he said. "I do have other career interests. Guitar lessons are a way to make some cash. "But I enjoy teaching people about the guitar because I've found it extremely rewarding."

Self-employed teens are more easily able to schedule around their personal lives, but businesses hiring teens usually have trouble doing that.

Most businesses don't hire teens under the age of 16. Those who do find many limitations from the state.

Fourteen- and 15-year-olds are not allowed to work past 9 p.m. during the summer, 16- and 17-year-olds past 10:30 p.m. Fourteen- and 15-year-olds also must have a break every three to four hours, something that can be very problematic for busy restaurants.

Other limitations present themselves in conflicting schedules.

When students choose to work while going to school, it often limits extracurricular activities. The summer working schedule can conflict with summer sports teams. Another big problem can be parents and family conflicts.

But despite scheduling conflicts, most employers find teen workers to be as reliable, hardworking, responsible, intelligent and pleasant as their adult workers.

Teen-agers, for the most part, enjoy working during their sumin her savings account. The mer breaks. They are able to develop responsibility and gain valuable experience to use after they leave school. Teenagers say they find that in working they obtain skills, independence, respect and maturity.

The Japan Business Society of Detroit and its foundation awarded Boshoven the scholarship at an association luncheon Friday in Southfield. Boshoven is the daughter of John and Margy Boshoven of

This is the third year the society and its foundation have issued scholarships. The students travel to and participate in learning opportunities about Japan through Youth for Understanding and the Japan Center for Michigan Universi-

"These scholarships provide a meaningful experience and serve to expand their opportunity to learn important lessons in and outside the classroom," said Toru Urata, president of the JBSD foundation. Boshoven is the only Washtenaw County award winner. Two Oakland County high school students were also honored, and four college students were granted learning opportunities for the summer season.

Boshoven will attend a national orientation at Stanford University before traveling to Japan and living with a family in Hiroshima for five weeks. She will return to Chelsea Aug. 4.

The Japan Business Society was founded in 1973 and has 236 businesses and 1,460 individual members throughout southeastern Michigan. Japan is the largest foreign investor in Michigan, and the JBSD represents the largest group of Japan-based companies in the the opportunity for that to happen."

Rey resides in Ann Arbor and when she is not teaching or working on projects for the classroom, she likes to relax by reading and walking. She also recently started a new exercise program and likes to socialize with friends and family.

"I have a very strong family unit," she says with pride. "I. give them a lot of the credit for making me the teacher I am today. I had very strong role models and I try to be that type of role model for my kids. My grandmother is 90 and she is very precious to me."

· Rey also credits her family for providing a solid, stable family

"My parents came from another country, but we never wanted for anything," she says.

"They taught me to have a very strong work ethic, and I talk to the class about my parents and grandparents all the time."

Since saying "goodbye" to her students has always been extremely difficult for Rey, her new assignment for next year fits her to a T. As part of the looping program, she will be moving up to third grade, where she will have essentially the same pupils she has this year, but with a slight increase.

"I am looking forward to that," she says, smiling. "I will be able to see how these kids really develop. I got them right after first grade. They were young and needed help.

this year toward independence, and by the end of next year, they will be ready for anything. And I will be ready to let them go."

Rey also is excited about the possibilities of creating a mentoring atmosphere between her third-graders and one of the first-grade classes.

And what do the children think?

Aaron Bear, a future scientist who likes lunch and spelling, in that order, says: "Ms. Rey is very nice. I am going to have her two years in a row." Megan Hardcastle expects that the class next year will be very much like this year's. "She tries really hard to get everyone an equal part, like in the play we just did," the girl says. "I like that." Greg Hughes perhaps sums things up best.

"Ms. Rey is very nice and funny," he says. "I really like the "They have come a long way way she teaches, especially reading stations. We just read 'The Pile in Pete's Room.' It was fun and we have good activities. I can't wait for third grade."

Scio group says state decision irresponsible

Recent action by the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality raising the groundwater standard for 1, 4dioxane from 77 parts per billion to 85 ppb has been called "irresponsible" by a citizens' environmental group.

The new standard is another indication of "the systematic dismantling of environmental protections in Michigan over the past decade."

according to Roger Rayle, a leader of Scio Residents for Safe Water.

The citizens' group has been active in pressing for a safe and responsible cleanup of underground 1,4-dioxane contamination by Pall-Geiman Sciences Inc. of Scio Town-

"For the Pall-Geiman contamination site, the new 85 ppb standard will mean that even less cleanup will be done." Rayle said.

"Even more 1,4-dioxane will be left in the aquifers, where it will be allowed to spread unchecked to area residential wells and municipal water intakes at up to 85 ppb."

The recent ground-water standard change stemmed from a "factor change" of 10 percent in a U.S. Environmental Protection Agency formula for the presumed carcompounds like 1,4-dioxane.

However, prior to 1995, the state of Michigan had a groundwater contamination standard for 1,4-dioxane of 3 ppb.

"Had the state kept the pre-1995 limit, the 10 percent change would have rounded out to 3 to 4 ppb, which is a lot more protective than 85 ppb,"

Rayle said. "The most proteccinogenic effects on humans of tive level should be required since 1,4-dioxane is a very persistent industrial solvent that, once allowed to get into ground water, tends to stay there forever and move wherever the ground water moves."

> "DEQ's new 85 ppb limit presents a cancer risk of 1 in 100,000 over a 30-year lifetime exposure," Rayle said. "But the calculation of this probability does not include the cumulative effects of exposure to other pollutants, other possible health effects, and the higher risks for children.

"It's irresponsible for the DEQ to gamble our children's long-term health on a 'cancer lottery' by allowing them to drink such high levels of 1,4dioxane."

Japanese beetle threat to greenery

Midsummer is the time when flower gardeners and others who put a lot of sweat and inspiration into their backyard flora really start to enjoy the fruits of their spring and early summer labor.

In some areas of Michigan this enjoyment has been all but ruined the past couple of summers by an iridescent green beetle that will eat almost anything green, including many flowers, petals and all.

"Japanese beetle adults have insatiable appetites, will eat a wide variety of plants common to yard landscapes and travel in large swarms while on the wing," says Tom Ellis, extension entomologist at Michigan State University.

Japanese beetle adults emerge from mid-June to early foliage — fruit trees, roses, basswood and wild grape are favorites — until late July or early August. At that time, they move to grassy areas and lay eggs.

In mid-August, tiny grubs hatch and feed throughout autumn, reaching a length of one-half to 1 inch. In areas that are heavily infested, feeding grubs cause root-pruning damage to turf.

In October, when soil temperatures begin to drop, the Cshaped larvae move deeper in the soil over winter.

"Do not spray until you see the green of their elytra (wing overs)," Ellis advises.

In other words, spraying before you see Japanese beetles to prevent them from damaging your plants is not July. They feed on a variety of logical, and spraying after they have fed and left (revenge spraying) does no good, either.

Doing either will likely cause more problems than it cures by killing beneficial predators and parasites that may be controlling other would-be pests.

Adult Japanese beetles will move in, feed until they get their fill and move-on. To catch them in the act of munching your plants, you need to monitor your backyard plants daily, if possible.

If the beetles show up.

spray them with an insecticide registered for that use.

Keep monitoring, Ellis urges, because another group might move into your yard tomorrow. Repeat spraying as beetles appear. This might be as frequent as every couple of days.

Read and heed all instructions regarding application and safety on the insecticide label if you do the application yourself. Phytotoxicity (toxicity to plants) is a rare event. but possible.

He was born June 8, 1926, at the Schenk homestead in Freedom Township, which has been in the family since 1849. He was the son of Herbert and Esther (Eschelbach) Schenk. Albert was the fifth generation of Schenks to farm in Freedom Township. He was baptized, confirmed and a lifelong member of Zion Lutheran Church.

following graduation he began farming with his father, using horses. The family farm was a traditional farm in the respect that they raised almost everything they needed. At one time the farm had dairy cows, beef cows, hogs, horses, sheep and chickens. They grew corn, barley, oats, wheat and grapes for winemaking. Albert loved the out-of-doors and in his younger years was an avid hunter and fisherman.

Students study in Africa

College finals don't usually include coffee plantations and African palaces, but for local student Robert Meske and 13 Albion College classmates one "final" was a 16-day immersion into Africa culture.

The journey to the nation of Cameroon was the conclusion of the course "Africa: Myth and Reality," a first-year seminar at Albion College.

Cameroon native Emmanuel Yewah, associate professor of foreign languages, led the group. He describes the country as "a microcosm of the African continent," which includes rain forests and deserts, mountains and sprawling plains, cosmopolitan centers and rural villages.

Once a divided nation under French and British control, Cameroon is home to many peoples of the continent, including descendants of the original Zulu tribe.

The seminar's itinerary included trips to Limbe, the agricultural heartland of Cameroon, where coffee, tea, bananas and rubber trees are harvested.

Students stayed in Bafoussam and the village of Batchingon, where Yewah was raised, and visited the tribal chief's palace there.

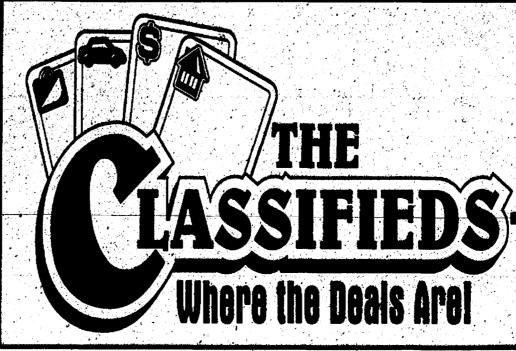

The students also spent time in Yaounde', Cameroon's capital city, where they participated in Cameroon's national holiday, Unitree Day, May 20.

Stays on Mount Cameroon, an active volcano and the highest point in Africa, and an Atlantic seaside resort in Duoala capped the trip.

Meske is a junior at Albion College. He is the son of Robert and Karen Meske of Whitmore Lake and a graduate of Dexter High School.

Albion College specializes in interdisciplinary programs in the liberal arts tradition. It is in southern Michigan.
