Novak tells board debt is on track

The Chelsea School District is on track to lower costs on 1995 bond payments, and will only need a short-term loan one semester next year.

That's what district Business and Operations Director Jim Novak told the school board on Monday.

The district will need a $69,000 loan in May 2001 to make 1998 and 1995 bond payments. But a second payment will be covered by money in the budget.

Loans have been required in the past to cover payments when the district has been waiting for the release of state school funding.

Novak said next year will represent a watershed for the district, when payments on the $38 million bonds will start to be covered by the budget and will not require biannual loans.

Board members also heard a plan to reapportion millage allocations for debt payments. All properties in the district pay a 7-mill tax for debt retirement, which in the past has been evenly split to pay off each bond.

The proposal before the board would allocate about 2.7 mills to pay off debt from 1995, and 4.3 mills to a 1998 debt. Board members will vote on the proposal July 24.

County institutes a 24-hour dumping line

The Washtenaw County Drain Commission recently instituted a 24-hour complaint line for public reports of illegal dumping and sewage draining.

Dick Fleece, the county director of environmental health, said the county hopes to expand its efforts to end illegal dumping with the line. The hotline can be reached at (734) 971-3669.

Reroute group looks for input

■ Amick plans to ask for corridor move.

By Jim Silver
Staff Writer

Chelsea Area Traffic Committee members approved a measure June 30 that could well work against them.

In a 4-3 vote, the committee allowed JJR, the committee's consultant on a proposed reroute of M-52, to work with the Chelsea Retirement Community on staking out a proposed corridor for the reroute.

The move will allow the retirement community to work on a request that the committee move the proposed corridor. Meanwhile, the committee and JJR wait for impact findings for the corridor they already have

Sylvan trustees face sewer issue

■ Cavanaugh Lake Association asks board to re-petition property owners.

By Elizabeth Wagenschutz
Staff Writer

The Sylvan Township Board found itself facing the issue of sewer installment at Cavanaugh Lake during the July 5 meeting, a matter the board also dealt with a couple of years ago.

Scott Cooper spoke on behalf of the Cavanaugh Lake Association, asking the board to re-petition the property owners on the lake to assess the interest in installing a sewer system.

Property owners on the lake now have drains and septic fields. The discharge from the septic tanks can seep into the ground as the tanks age and break down, he said.

Many problems can arise from the outflow, including weed

Board stays with Broshar, others

■ Trustees OK two new hires at organizational meeting.

Voters in June re-elected school board President Scott Broshar, and on Monday night, his fellow trustees followed suit.

In electing officers for the 2000-01 school year, the board opted to keep Broshar as president, Sandra Merkel as vice president, Jane Diesing as treasurer and Dayle Wright as secretary.

The trustees also voted to keep the same committee structure as last year until the board retreat on July 25, replacing former Trustee Jill Taylor with newcomer Susan Moore.

Zoning official says new Lima hall needed

■ Schaver has concerns about unsecure records, fire saftey, parking.

By Elizabeth Wagenschutz
Staff Writer

Some local townships recently have built new town halls, including Sylvan and Webster townships, and now Lima Township is considering the same.

The need for a new township hall was brought up at the July 3 Lima Township Board meeting by zoning inspector Charles Schauer.

Schauer wrote a letter to the board expressing his concerns about the current building and offices. He also spoke at the meeting, citing his letter and elaborating on some of the issues.

Schauer said one concern is that there is only one usable entrance into the basement offices. The other entrance is being used for storage. Schauer said this is an especially dangerous situation should something happen in the other entrance area.

Schauer also talked about office space and the many problems associated with it. The supervisor, assessor and clerk share the same office space, which is crowded and allows no privacy. Nor is there a specified desk for the clerk. There is no space for a filing cabinet for the clerk's records, which are now kept in the clerk's home.

Schauer said filing cabinets are full, and the zoning inspector and assessor have documents stored in cardboard boxes, which are neither secured nor fireproof. The zoning inspector's office itself is accessible to anyone in the building, including people renting the facility for personal events. That creates problems in storage of private files, he said.

Schauer also said the building is unhealthy for its workers. He noted that a doctor said the mold present in a worker's office is not a healthy situation.

"This mold is there because the office area is in the basement of an old, damp building," Schauer wrote. "What effect working in this unhealthy situation will have on our health down the road no one knows."

Schauer said the entire building is in disrepair. He said the outside ramp has started to rot; the window panes are cracked, rotted and missing glass; and winter winds blow through windows and underneath doors, increasing fuel costs.

"The acoustics in the meeting hall are dreadful, and even people with good hearing have trouble understanding what is going on at a meeting," he wrote.

Schauer also said the parking situation is dangerous. Not only is there not enough parking for people, but they park on Jackson Road and must cross the road when it is dark outside.

"We know (drivers) are not going 55 miles an hour," he said.

After explaining the reasons for a new town-

Lima Township Zoning Administrator Charles Schauer told township board members at a July 3 meeting that the township needs a new home. Schauer said space is so cramped that residents with zoning concerns must wait for him in the basement, next to the furnace.

approved.

The 200-foot-wide corridor will establish boundaries within which a road could fall, but does not represent the exact placement of a constructed road.

Rather, it is submitted to a number of state agencies, which review the corridor's projected environmental impact, as well as its adherence to state Department of Transportation standards.

Richard Steele, a committee member and Chelsea village president, said he voted to allow JJR's cooperation because he saw no reason not to allow it.

"As long as they realize that everything is very preliminary, I didn't see any problem," Steele said. "They want to have markers on the corridor, to see what's happening, and that's fine, as long as they know everything's still iffy."

Opposition to the measure, however, centered on similar reasons, with committee members saying it was still too early in the process to allow JJR to start working with other local institutions.

Connie Amick, executive director of the retirement community, said she understands that the corridor is in its preliminary stages and that is just where she wants it.

"Other decisions are already being made based on that measurement," she said. "Sylvan Township is moving ahead on a planned-unit development. Where the road goes will be the first thing decided, and we want to see it before it's final."

Amick said she needs to see the proposed corridor because the administrators of the retirement community are convinced it will run too close to their grounds.

"We would like to see that corridor moved west," she said. "Right now, I think it will destroy the wetlands and wildlife the residents enjoy."

To that end, she said she will be contacting JJR in the near future.

"We want to see where the road would be from the people who designed it," Amick said.

At the same meeting, Steele reported to other committee members on the activities of a subcommittee examining Chelsea streets.

Set up to look for other solutions to traffic congestion in the village, the subcomitteee could propose new north-south streets or traffic-management methods to ease the flow of cars through the village.

Steele told the committee he had met with the Washtenaw County Road Commission to discuss possibilities for the village and was planning another such meeting.

"We are continuing to look at the options available and get all the municipalities in the area involved," he said. "This is a regionwide concept. Everyone would be affected, so we're trying to make sure everyone's involved."

While the subcommittee is looking at its options on village streets, Steele said it also will analyze costs on a T-intersection at the southern end of a reroute. That cost analysis is scheduled for the July committee meeting.

Those decisions came during the annual organizational meeting, when the board votes on a number of issues to keep the administration and district running through the next school year.

Following the organizational meeting, board trustees moved on to a relatively brief regular meeting. In that short time, however, they made decisions on an elementary school handbook and two new hires.

The organizational meeting centered on a pro forma approval of a raft of items, including the district's choices for student insurance, bank, law firm and membership in state and national school board associations.

Trustees reaffirmed longstanding relationships with Chelsea State Bank; the law firm of Thrun, Maatsch and Nordberg and other institutions; and OK'd district membership in the Michigan Association of School Boards, the National School Board Association and the Michigan High School Athletics Association.

On the heels of the organizational meeting, the board approved the district's elementary school handbook.

While the athletic code and the high school handbook provoked some community complaints, the elementary school handbook was approved with little discussion and no public comment.

Trustees also quickly approved the hiring of Loren Thorburn as a middle school science and math teacher, and Bil Arons to consult on special education.

Thorburn, whose wife, Tara, runs the learning center at South Meadows Elementary School, comes back to Chelsea, where he was a student teacher, after a year in Williamston schools.

Thorburn, who has a bachelor's degree in hydrogeology, worked on environmental project assessments for three years before turning to education.

Arons, a 1987 University of Michigan graduate, comes back to Michigan after several years in Oregon, where he taught and did graduate work.

Hatch hosts blood drive

Hatch Stamping, 635 E. Industrial Drive, will host a Red Cross blood drive from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tuesday. The drive is open to the public. For more information, contact Stephen Shiner at the American Red Cross, (734) 971-5300.

The Red Cross is the nation's largest supplier of blood and blood products.

Every 22 seconds, someone in Washtenaw County needs blood, according to the agency. Last year, more than 19,000 local residents provided 97 percent of all blood and blood products to county hospitals.

Lima board tables cable hearing, OKs annexation

By Elizabeth Wagenschutz
Staff Writer

A public hearing on a cable connection to the high school that was set for the July 3 Lima Township Board meeting was tabled until August.

The public hearing, concerning McLeod USA Corp., was tabled because representatives from McLeod were unable to attend the meeting.

McLeod is seeking a variance to install cable to connect the Washtenaw County Intermediate School District to Chelsea High School. The Lima Township ordinance requires that all telecommunications be underground.

McLeod asked that the issue be tabled so that it could be present and better explain its plans.

Supervisor Gary Adams said state law has provisions that townships must treat all groups fairly and without bias, so there would be some risk if the township grants the variance.

The public hearing was rescheduled for the regular August meeting.

Also discussed at the meeting were problems the township could face over coverage by the Washtenaw County Sheriff's Department when a new county ordinance is effective in 2002.

Adams said he and other township representatives met with Chelsea and the Michigan State Police recently to discuss possible solutions.

He said the state police will not be hiring more officers to cover townships without county contracts. Instead, the state will redirect officers to patrol in those townships rather than in townships with county coverage.

"We need to investigate all options," Adams said.

Also discussed was the Merkel farm property and its annexation to the Village of Chelsea. The annexation was requested so that houses being built on the property can be provided with village utilities and services.

Adams said it made sense to keep development in already urban areas.

"We (should) go ahead with the annexation of this," he said.

But, he said, the board must develop a plan before annexing any more property.

The board and other Lima residents also spoke briefly about their concerns regarding the quickly increasing land prices that, as one resident said, "drive Chelsea families to Jackson because they can no longer afford to live here."

The board also discussed having a Lima representative to work with the county in cleaning up brownfield areas.

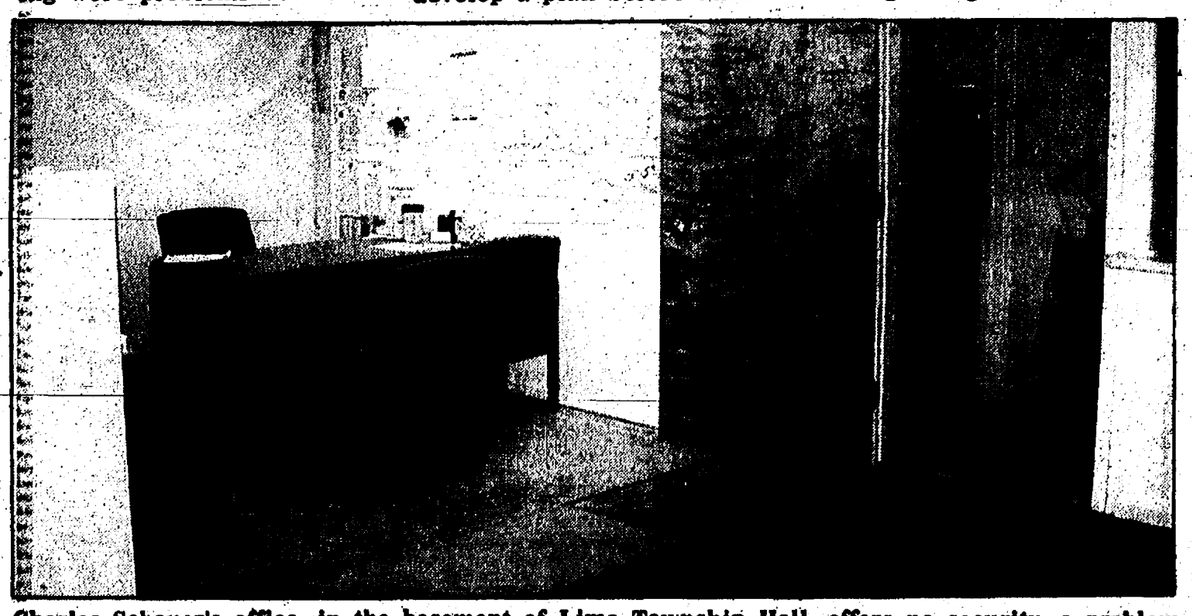
Brownfields are previously polluted or contaminated sites that are cleaned up. The county is taking steps to apply for state grants to clean up area brownfields.

Clerk Arlene Bareis said working with the county on the project is important.

"I think that we need to have a representative because we have several areas in the township that could be cleaned up," she said.

The board authorized Bareis to act as the township's representative in coordinating with the county.

The Lima Township Board meets at 8 p.m. the first Monday of every month. The next meeting is Aug. 7.



Charles Schauer's office, in the basement of Lima Township Hall, offers no security, a problem Schauer says can be an obstacle in his work as the township zoning administrator.

Tootsie Roll Drive

The Chelsea chapter of the Knights of Columbus raised money for St. Louis School and Chelsea School District special education programs with its 2000 Tootsie Roll Drive. Ken Arbogast-Wilson, Tom Turek and Bob Guyski of the Knights presented the money to representatives of the programs. Participating are Arbogast-Wilson (left), Cindy Lesser of St. Louis School, Turek, Steve Moss of Chelsea High School special education and Guyski.

ship hall. Schauer asked the board to look into different ways of building one.

"It is my understanding that someone has talked about donating a parcel of land for building a new building," he said.

"I urge the board to take some action."

Schauer requested that a five- to seven-member committee study the possibility of building a new hall and how to fund it.

The board and others at the meeting agreed with Schauer, his concerns and the need for a new building.

"I do agree," Supervisor Gary Adams said. "There is a need for a town hall and there's going to be a need for a fire station. I certainly think it's a very good suggestion."

Clerk Arlene Bareis said there is a problem, and Adams said he was worried about fireproofing.

Adams asked the board to talk to people willing to serve on a committee and come back next month with recommendations and suggestions.

"It's something we've known all along we had to do," he said. "Now it's on the agenda."

Anyone interested in the committee is asked to telephone Lima Township offices at (734) 475-2246.

DEXTER TOWNSHIP UPDATES PROPERTY RECORDS

Dexter Township Assessor Larry Merte was granted funds to complete updating assessment records.

Equalizer assessing software, installed on the township's computer system in the last year, provides the opportunity to store multiple photos of property in a digital format. Both the assessing department and the township zoning department use the photos.

The project requires visits to improved properties, photographing them and then downloading the images. The board approved hiring two part-time, college-age employees for the summer to photograph properties, beginning this week.

Clerk,
Dexter Township

Mission Marketplace offers socially conscious shopping

By Jim Silver
Staff Writer

Socially conscious shoppers often are limited to what they won't buy: products made in sweatshops, or countries ruled by depots.

But the Mission Marketplace offers area residents an opportunity to do some good with their dollars.

The shop, in Chelsea First United Methodist Church, offers Third World and Appalachian clothing, ornaments and household decorations, and has its roots in a 1998 consignment sale the church held.

"Some members of the congregation wanted to expose youth in the community to a more global perspective, so we looked for crafts from around the world," said Kevin Frahm, one of the organizers of the shop.

While opening up new vistas for Chelsea residents, the sale served a more important purpose. Frahm said every $1,000 in sales means a family of five in another country can afford to feed, educate and clothe themselves for a year.

By that ruler, since the shop opened in September, it has helped 10 families stave off starvation and poverty for another year.

Knowing such goals were in sight, the congregation wanted to make its consignment sale more than a once-a-year event.

Members faced a pitfall in focusing on Third World crafts, however. The workers who make the items may live in poverty and might not see any profit from their work.

Frahm said the church solved that problem by using several distributors, including SERRV, Ten Thousand Villages and Red Bird Mission Crafts. In addition, the shop is an outlet for goods from the United Nations Children's Fund.

The four organizations are nonprofit members of the International Federation of Alternative Trade, which guarantees a fair wage and working conditions, and guards against child labor abuses.

Offering items from Peru, India, Haiti and Nigeria among others, the federation also uses money from sales to fund a grant program.

Frahm said a typical federation grant might allow a group of artisans in Nepal to buy a kiln to increase output. In addition, the federation will buy the finished pots, offering a means of sustainable growth and subsistence.

What that means to local consumers, though, is affordable goods. Frahm noted that most of the items for sale at the Mission Marketplace cost $30 or less.

The shop did brisk business around Christmas, selling creches, ornaments and affordable but exotic presents. Sales got another bump at the end of the school year when students working on country reports came in looking for material.

And soon, shoppers might find sounds from around the world at the Marketplace as well. Frahm said he is setting up an alliance with world music label Putumayo.

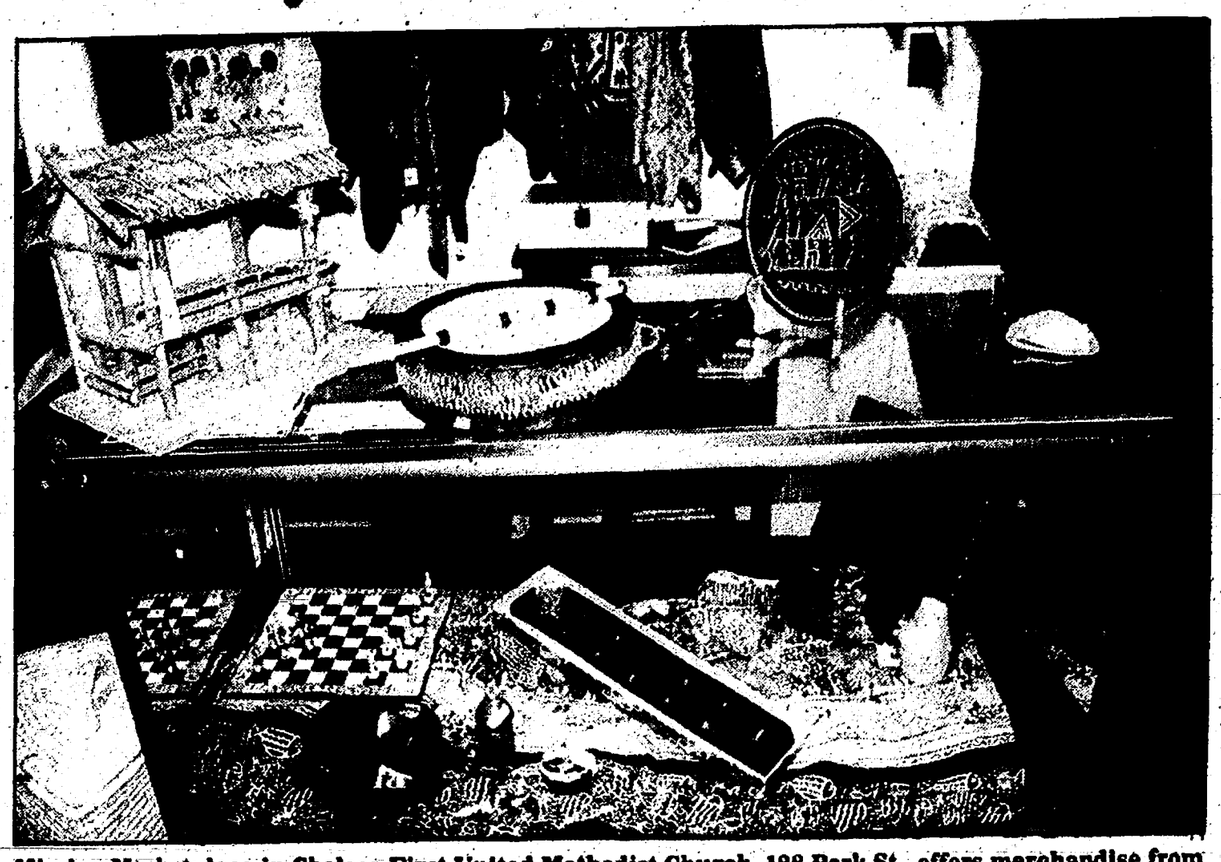
While the big sales come during the holiday season, Frahm said the shop will open for the Chelsea Summer Fest in a push to increase visibility.

In addition, a whole new inventory will come in soon, meaning even veteran shoppers can find something new.

The seed for a permanent shop was planted by former associate pastor Becky Foote. Frahm said the shop came to fruition after Foote left, with help from two ministers, Richard Dake and Peggy Garrigues-Cortelyou, who recently left.

"We're looking forward to working with Jennifer Williams, the new assistant pastor," he said.

The Mission Marketplace is open from 9:30 a.m. to 11 a.m. Sundays, and 5 to 7 p.m. the second Thursday of every month on the lower level of Chelsea First United Methodist Church, 128 Park St.



Mission Marketplace in Chelsea First United Methodist Church, 128 Park St., offers merchandise from Third World countries, but guarantees that the artisans have not been exploited.

Interior Designers

Beach Middle School students Kirby Kedroske, Danielle Houle, Rachel Gentz and Samantha Patrick recently placed in an interior decorating contest. Their bedroom-in-a-box creations are on display at Merkel Furniture in Chelsea. Kedroske and Houle tied for first, Getz placed second and Patrick grabbed third place. They are students in teacher Linda Turok's life-management class.

Hands-On Museum has new exhibit

Math can become interactive and fun for families when they get their hands on the Ann Arbor Hands-On Museum's newest exhibition, "Fun, 2, 3, 4: All About A Number of Things!"

Whether it is measuring, graphing or estimating, "Fun, 2, 3, 4" will help visitors apply math to everyday activities. Learn how to double your allowance, count like the Aztecs or team up with a partner and take a time challenge.

"The exhibits are designed to be both fun and challenging," said Becky Hattner, museum educator. "The goal is to have family members work together to discover math is more than just numbers."

And learning doesn't have to end when you leave the Ann Arbor Hand-On Museum. Educational and family take-home materials will be available at the front desk. Together, families can participate in activities that incorporate the math principles behind the program.

"Fun, 2, 3, 4: All About A Number of Things!" was developed by the Sciencenter in Ithaca, N.Y., as part of a collaborative effort among several museums.

Continuing at the Ann Arbor Hands-On Museum through Oct. 17, it can be viewed during regular museum hours and is free with museum admission.

Also, the Ann Arbor Host Lions Club has donated magnetic blocks that have both printed letters and Braille letters for the magnetic wall. Visitors can write poetry or leave their names on the wall that covers more than 60 square feet.

The Hands-On Museum provides hundreds of opportunities to explore and discover the world of science and technology. The museum, founded in 1982 and expanded in 1999, covers more than 44,000 square feet. Call (734) 995-5439 for more information.

growth and pollution, Cooper said. Cavanaugh Lake does not yet have a pollution problem but it does have a fairly bad weed problem, he said.

Cooper and the lake association want to install a sewer system in place of the septics. Cooper said a lake of Cavanaugh's size and population, as well as the design of the septics installed on the houses, needs a sewer system.

"(There is a) need to expand the services that people in the city enjoy," he said.

Cooper also stressed the importance of preventing problems in the future.

"(A sewer system is beneficial) as a proactive means of preventing any damage to the natural ecosystem," he said.

When the lake association and the Sylvan Township Board looked into installing a sewer system in 1998, there was not enough support. The board required both a majority of the homeowners and at least 51 percent of acreage on the lake to be in favor of the change.

Cooper said the first survey was approved by a majority of the homeowners but just missed the acreage percentage.

He said that certain circumstances and misunderstandings contributed to missing the acreage requirement, and since the last survey many people who previously said no or abstained have changed their minds.

The lake association has been approached by a number of people who previously said no but are now expressing interest in changing to a sewer system for three reasons, he said.

One reason for many changes of heart is the restrictions on septic field owners on a lake. Many of the owners have only 20 to 30 feet between the house and the lake. According to Cooper, the township will not allow remodeling on properties with that amount of yardage unless the house has a sewer.

Another very important reason for renewed interest is a law from the Washtenaw County Health Department that went into effect Jan. 1. The law requires that any property sold in the county have septic and drain fields checked to determine their functional level. Many people living on lakes have found that they are not passing the tests and must spend a lot of money to bring them up to date.

"It's extremely difficult to sell these homes," Cooper said.

Rather than having each homeowner fix individual sewers, he believes they should work together.

"Why not do the proactive thing and fix them all?" he said.

The final, and most important reason, Cooper said, is a better understanding of the importance of protecting the lake.

He said some previous dissenters said no because they saw no problem with the lake. They are realizing that though the lake is in good condition now, if a sewer is not installed the lake could quickly become polluted.

Cooper told the board that the association's desire is to petition members of the community again in hopes of getting the percentage required to install the sewer.

Supervisor Gerald Dresselhouse stressed the cost, both of installing the sewer and surveying the community. Dresselhouse said he would contact the township engineer to find out the costs of updating the previous sewer plan and then contact Cooper.

The board agreed that it had spent enough money surveying the lake the first time, and if the association wants another survey, members could cover the postage and other costs.

Temporary dwelling permits, brought up in Dresselhouse's report last month, were again discussed during this meeting.

Dresselhouse said he spoke to Lima and Lyndon townships about their permits. He said both have similar permits, but they have not encountered problems as Sylvan has.

"My recommendation is still that we do away with them," Dresselhouse said.

Clerk LuAnn Koch agreed. She said that insurance will take care of homeowners in the case of a fire or other similar emergency, and if the owner feels he or she must remain on the property, then a temporary dwelling permit can be obtained from the zoning board of appeals.

Trustees Earl Heller and Reuben Lesser both voiced concerns about getting rid of the permits. Both Heller and Lesser said that many Sylvan residents would need to stay on their grounds to ensure the safety of their property, particularly animal owners.

Heller also said that some kind of board was needed to give instant approval because it takes too long to get a permit from the ZBA.

Koch said that the previous temporary dwelling permits granted have caused only problems for the township.

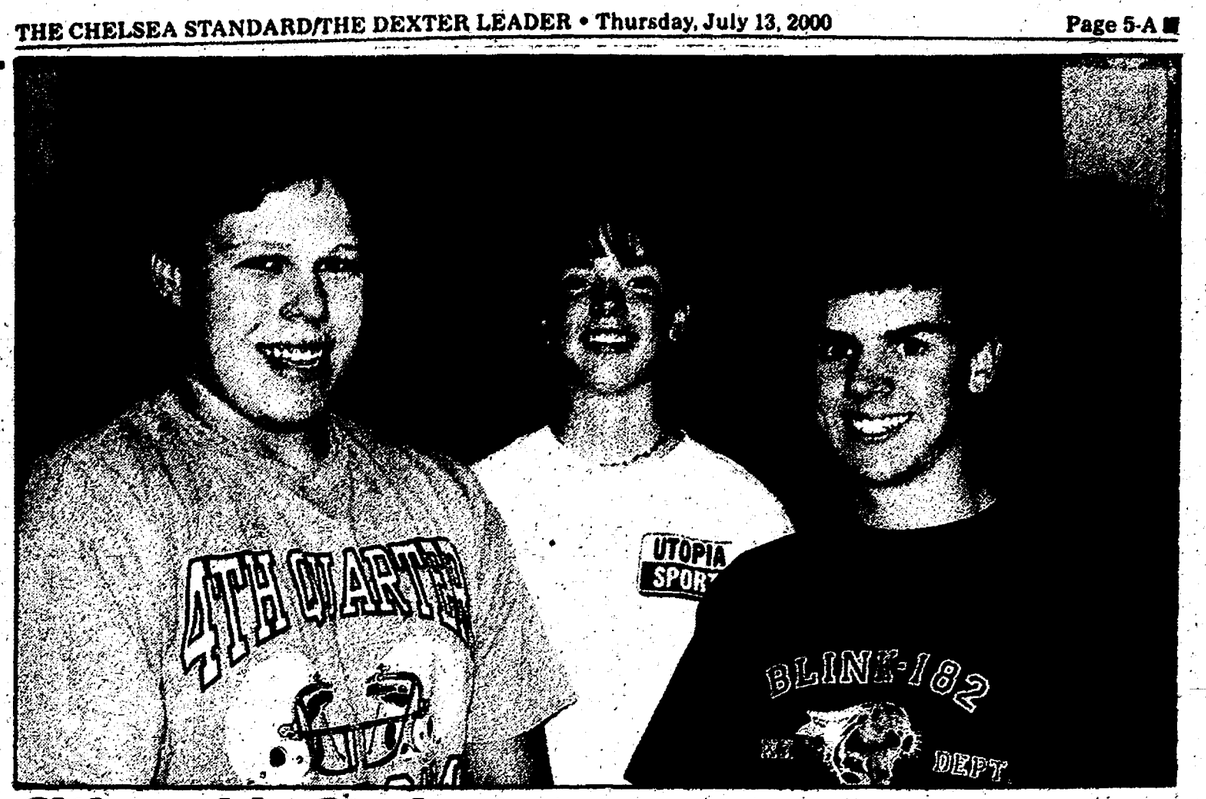
"Why spend more taxpayer's money on people who won't abide by the rules?" she asked.

Dresselhouse said it is possible to rewrite the ordinance so that no temporary dwelling permits are granted except in the case of a natural disaster or fire, but problems could arise in determining what constitutes a natural disaster.

Heller said he was fine with doing away with the permits as long as provisions were made for emergency situations. Other board members agreed.

Dresselhouse said he would write something to be discussed for the next meeting.

Sylvan Township Board meets at 7 p.m. the first Tuesday of every month. The next meeting is Aug. 8.



Citizenship Students

High school juniors and seniors from all over Michigan traveled to Alma for a Young People's Citizenship Seminar June 19 through 23. Almost 180 students attended the Farm Bureau-sponsored program, which included speakers and activities to stimulate interest in the political process. Area students attending included Jared Powers (above, left), Stephanie Huehl and Robert Huehl.

Symphony sets summer concerts

The 2000 Summer Symphony, featuring 45 to 50 amateur musicians ages 12 to 80, will present its second pair of concerts.

The first is at 7:30 p.m. today at the Huron High School auditorium in Ann Arbor. The second concert is at 3 p.m. Sunday at Eastern Michigan University's Pease Auditorium in Ypsilanti.

The program features Beethoven's "Coriolan Overture," Brahms' "Variations on a Theme by Haydn" and Mendelssohn's Symphony No. 3, "Scotch."

Both concerts are free and open to the public.

Many people from Ann Arbor and its surrounding areas participate in the Summer Symphony, including Dexter resident Lori Sprague.

Sprague, the mother of children 2 and 7 years old, plays the cello. She has been playing since she was a child and says she really enjoys appearing with the Summer Symphony.

"I think it's been really great," she said.

"It brings together musicians of all ages, and that's really a neat kind of environment. I hope a lot of people come to it."

The fossilized skeleton of a dinosaur is among the items on display at Little Professor/Nature's Expressions.

Little Professor also features dinosaur bones, rare stones

Rare artifacts, fossils and exotic preserved bugs are making their way into homes and businesses across the state, thanks to the opening of Nature's Expressions, a family owned store in Chelsea.

The store's concept is a result of the lifelong passion of its co-owners, Stan and Priscilla Woollams, and their son, Larry. Some of the artifacts for sale are from the family's private collection dating back some 25 years.

The collection began with a variety of seashells and minerals and later expanded into fossils. The interest and collection of fossils grew when Larry Woollams befriended fossil diggers in Wyoming and began to recover several pieces from his own diggings.

"We had collected so many items as a hobby for so long, we finally decided to share with the public some of these natural treasures that have been a passion of our family for years," Priscilla Woollams says.

"Originally, we started selling pieces out of our home to a select market. Our interests and our market expanded as we discovered the world of mounted insects and butterflies and imported wood carvings.

"When the collection outgrew our home, we knew it was time to open a store."

There are a variety of artifacts and collectibles available at Nature's Expressions, including fossils dating back over 500 million years.

A large selection of minerals both large and small, including amethyst, tourmaline, pyrite and selenite are for sale as well.

Prehistoric skeletal remains and rare fish fossils from the Badlands, Brazil, Morocco and beyond are available for purchase as a gift or as decor for the office or home.

Nature's Expressions also carries a wide array of exotic bugs and tropical butterflies mounted and framed in glass cases. Walking sticks measuring over 6 feet, mammoth beetles from the jungles of Africa and butterflies from Brazil all are displayed in their natural forms.

Other items include carved wood sculptures and figures from Indonesia, petrified wood from Arizona and aquatic finds such as chambered nautilus shells.

"The beauty of this store is that you can purchase an item of great historical and educational value that can also be used as a decorative element in your home or office," Stan Woollams said. "We have something for all age groups and in all price ranges. These truly are treasures from the ground up."

Nature's Expressions shares space with the Chelsea Little Professor Book Center. The book center offers thousands of books and magazines in stock or by special order and features a large children's selection in its Dinosaurland.

The store, 250 Main St., hosts weekly events, story time readings, contests, special author appearances and book signings, and reading programs.

For more information, call (734) 433-BOOK.

The store is open from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Mondays through Saturdays and from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sundays.

Cancer relay raises $41,000 in 24 hours

The rainstorms didn't stop the community from its dedication to the 24-hour Western Washtenaw Area Relay for Life in Chelsea.

Twenty teams, 30 survivors and more than 30 area businesses participated in this year's relay June 24 and 25.

At the end of the event, the community had raised more than $41,000 to support the American Cancer Society's programs of research, education, patient services, prevention/detection and advocacy.

Although the 2000 relay is over, donations are still being accepted. Turn contributions in at Chelsea State Bank, 1010 S. Main, or send them to the American Cancer Society, Washtenaw Area Service Center, 2385 S. Huron Parkway, Suite 102, Ann Arbor, MI 48104.

For more information on how to get involved with the 2001 Western Washtenaw Area Relay for Life in Chelsea or on the American Cancer Society and its programs, call (734)971-4300.

Chicken Broil & Countryfest

After 46 years, what new can be said about the Manchester Chicken Broil?

Each year the Manchester community hosts one huge party and this tiny village swells to accommodate seven times its normal population. On the third Thursday in July, 14,000 people will flock to Manchester to partake of this tradition.

A slow-roasted, butter-basted chicken half, a secret recipe of coleslaw, accompanied by chips, radishes, dinner roll and beverage will be served to each guest. The recipe for success has not changed since 1954. Yet few can resist the temptation - once they've been to one Chicken Broil, they will return again and again.

The proceeds from this huge fund-raiser have contributed to various community projects over the past 46 years. From athletic field equipment to library shelves to senior citizen lifelines, the Broil's outcome has touched everyone in the Manchester community. This year's profits are pledged to further improvements in Chi-Bro and Carr Parks, the village's two largest parks.

And it is volunteer labor that keeps the chickens flipping at the Chicken Broil. Over 500 volunteers, mostly male, will donate their time to serve the residents and guests who come to be served. Some young men are now fourth-generation Chicken Broil workers and some, of another generation, have worked at every Broil since 1954. Each one makes a huge contribution to the growing success of the Chicken Broil.

What keeps people coming back each year? Perhaps it's tradition and perhaps it's just plain good food. Whatever the reasons, the numbers continue to grow right along with the community.

The past 46 years have brought Manchester much more than its proverbial 15 minutes of fame. The Chicken Broil has been publicized widely throughout the southeastern Michigan area as well as around the nation, and in some far corners of the world. Visitors come from near and far to attend the Chicken Broil

It has been said to provide Manchester with its "bread and butter," through the dozens of community-oriented projects it has supported through the years. And what the broil has provided to the population of Manchester is far more than chicken scratch. Over $300,000 in cash contributions has been spent out of Chicken Broil profits since 1954, and the total continues to add up.

It may have begun as a bread-and-butter effort, when a new fence was needed at the athletic field 46 years ago. Instead, it has turned into icing on the cake. The many projects that the Chicken Broil has supported may not have been envisioned by its organizers 46 years ago, but they would be proud of the legacy they have brought to this community.

There may be little new to say about the Manchester Chicken Broil, but what has been said before is worth saying again:

Come to Manchester on Thursday, July 20, and experience the Chicken Broil. It's an opportunity to be a part of the history and the future of Manchester, Michigan, all on the same day.

Swimming can make you sick

JOHN C. WOLF, D.O.
ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR OF FAMILY MEDICINE OHIO UNIVERSITY COLLEGE OF OSTEOPATHIC MEDICINE

FAMILY MEDICINE

Question: Last summer I got diarrhea after swimming in the lake, but no one else in my family did. I think it may have been due to something in the water, although there were no warnings about contamination. We have reserved our cabin on the lake again for this summer's vacation. I didn't want a repeat of that diarrhea attack. What are the chances that my illness was actually due to swimming in the lake?

Answer: Hurray!! Summer has arrived, and millions of us head off to the beach for a break from our routines. Swimming is usually part of that pleasurable change of pace. Although I can't tell you the cause of your illness on last year's vacation, I can assure you that swimming is generally safe. However, there are some health concerns you should be aware of.

Water can be contaminated with organisms that can cause human illness. Most of these infections produce illnesses with either diarrhea or a rash as their major symptoms. And some of these harmful viruses or bacteria can survive in fresh or salt water and also in treated water of pools and spas.

Think of swimming as an act of communal bathing without the benefit of soap to help kill harmful bacteria. This is important because we all have some normal intestinal bacteria on the skin around our rectums. An individual with diarrhea caused by an infection has some of their disease-causing "germs" present on his or her skin, too. Swimming will disperse some of these disease-causing germs — what we physicians call pathogens — into the water.

Pools are also contaminated when an infected individual has a "fecal accident" in the water. This is a problem more common with infants and children than it is with adult swimmers. Getting these pathogens on your lips or swallowing a mouthful of contaminated water will give you a diarrhea illness. Perhaps this is what happened to you last summer.

The water of lakes, ponds, or the ocean has the risk of being contaminated by fish, shore animals, improperly functioning sewer systems, and industrial or agricultural run-off. Specific contaminates from all of these sources can cause human illness. Therefore, swimming in these waters has some increased risk as compared to swimming pools.

Swimming in pools, water parks and hot tubs is not without risk, however. Chlorine

The Church and the Ten Commandments

Dear Friends and Neighbors,

When I attended first grade in Sunday School, my teacher had us memorize the Ten Commandments. Lutheran children still memorize them as a valuable part of their Christian education.

The Ten Commandments are a convenient summary of God's will for our lives. They tell us what God wants us to do and not to do. They tell us how to show love to God and to our fellow human beings.

But, the most important thing we teach about the Ten Commandments is that it's impossible to keep them. Because of our sinful condition the most important thing the Commandments can do is function as a mirror. If a person takes an honest look at himself in the light of God's Commandments, he sees that he hasn't measured up. And as soon as you do straighten up one area of your life, you realize there are other areas that fall short.

So even though we teach the Ten Commandments, this is not our central teaching. The true Christian Church is not primarily a teacher of morals. Our central teaching is that, through faith in Jesus Christ, we have eternal life in heaven as a free gift. When it comes to eternal life, the Commandments aren't very useful at all.

What the Ten Commandments are unable to do, our God did by sending His Son Jesus Christ. Jesus filled the Ten Commandments in our place, and Jesus suffered and died to pay the price of our not keeping them.

Please join us this coming Sunday, as we focus on the Book of Galatians, which reinforces the teaching that eternal life and our relationship with God is based entirely on faith in Jesus Christ.

New Officers

John Baukema, Peter Kumble and Kim Clugston were elected to officer positions on the Dexter Village Planning Commission last Thursday. Baukema was named chairman, succeeding Terry Walters, who declined the nomination. Kumble is secretary and Clugston, vice chairwoman. The planning commission meets at 7:30 p.m. the first Monday of the month on the second floor of National City Bank. There is one opening on the board. Applications are available at the village hall.

Cookbook raises money for Children's Hospital

By Paula Evans Neuman
Heritage Newspapers

When it's finished, the cookbook will be an award-winning collage of superb recipes, vignettes of Detroit area history and elegant photographs of vintage American automobiles.

That's the vision.

But for now, the hard work by the volunteers of Festival of Trees has just begun.

They have the vision, the theme and the name for their cookbook: "Cruisin', A Journey of Recipes and Reminiscences through the Motor City."

But they need a lot more than that.

The volunteers hope to end up with a cookbook that will sell and sell and sell, be reprinted, and sell and sell and sell some more.

They hope it will be a continuing source of revenue for Festival of Trees, a benefit of Children's Hospital of Michigan's Evergreen Endowment Fund. The fund supports research into the causes and cures of childhood diseases.

"It's for a very worthy cause," said Sue Iverson of Grosse Ile, one of the cookbook's organizers.

To make the ongoing fundraiser a reality, they need sponsors for the cookbook — people and businesses willing to help fund the venture.

They need wonderful recipes worthy of standing the test of time.

"We're anxious to have your award-winning recipes," said Barbara Mans of Grosse Ile, also an organizers of the cookbook.

And the volunteers need old cars for Downriver photographer Jeff Corns to capture on film.

Historic photos to be reproduced also would be welcome.

Everyone who contributes something will get a mention in the cookbook.

Recipes can be mailed to Festival Cookbook, in care of Paula Evans Neuman, Heritage Newspapers, One Heritage Place, Suite 100, Southgate, MI 48195.

Readers who wish to donate, who are willing to have their old cars photographed or who have historic photos to lend can call Heritage Newspapers at 1-734-246-0865 or the Festival of Trees at 1-313-745-0178. Or call if you have any questions.

The book will be hardbacked and probably 9 by 10 inches in size.

Overseeing the writing and accuracy of the historical sidebars will be Cathy Latendresse of Grosse Ile, who is a research librarian at Greenfield Village.

Topics of the historical vignettes could include the stories behind local gems such as the Ford Rotunda, Pewabic Pottery, Boblo Island, Joey's Stables and the salt mines.

They may include scrutiny of the people who contributed to the area's history, such as Henry Ford, Jimmy Hoffa, Walter Reuther, Harry Houdini, Soupy Sales, Aretha Franklin and Ted Nugent.

And maybe the recipes will tie in with the histories, in some cases. For instance, the original Maurice salad recipe might be teamed with the history of J.L. Hudson's Department Stores, where the dish was first concocted.

The cookbook organizers, including Deborah Kill and Judy Mittino, both of Grosse Ile, also will have to test each and every one of hundreds of recipes.

Perhaps they'll slate parties to serve up the dishes and get more opinions of the fare — and raise some money, too.

Even when the book is put together and published, the work still isn't done. Then there's the whole aspect of selling the cookbook, which is expected to cost about $25.

"We'll need a huge marketing committee, but we're not there yet," Iverson said.

She expects the whole ambitious endeavor to take up to a year or more just to get the raw material to the publisher.

"But I'd rather have a good cookbook than a fast cookbook," she said. "This book is going to be in the Library of Congress, I want you to know."

And, like prestigious Junior League cookbooks, it will probably end up in many collections, as well.

Nonprofit cookbooks are highly coveted by collectors, who value them as records of culture and history.

"Cruisin', A Journey of Recipes and Reminiscences through the Motor City" is sure to contain just the right ingredients.

SICK

kills a number of pathogens, but it doesn't kill all of them. Chlorine is also volatile, so it must be consistently renewed to stay at the effective level within the swimming water. This is a particularly difficult task for pool operators when the water is warm or there are lots of people in the pool.

There are a few simple guidelines to help reduce the risk of infections to swimmers and hot tub users.

Never go in the water if you have a diarrhea illness. A few of the "germs" causing your illness will get in the water and potentially spread to others. Also, any time you have a bowel movement be sure to wash your hands — and bottom, when practical — with soap and water before going into the pool. You should also take children for frequent bathroom breaks. Don't wait until they say, "I gotta go," because it is often too late by then.

You shouldn't be afraid to go swimming, but you should be smart about it.

Book devoted to bugs

Insects and related critters probably aren't at the top of too many people's lists of favorite things. But love 'em or hate 'em, they're part of our lives.

"Fortunately, there are only a relative few 'bad bugs,'" says Tom Ellis, Extension entomologist at Michigan State University, "those that actually damage our homes, lawns, gardens and landscape plants, or pester us and our pets.

"Then there are the 'good bugs' such as honeybees and ladybird beetles. The majority of insects play their ecological roles and, unless we encounter them by accident, we don't even know they're there."

To some people, however, any encounter with any insect is undesirable, and the first impulse is to swat, stomp or spray the hapless creature out of existence.

Ellis suggests another approach: Find out first what it is and whether it's doing any harm.

Then, you can decide whether you should do anything about it and, if so, what.

"I understand that my chances of changing someone's behavior in relation to insects are no better than 50-50," Ellis says. "But I hope to increase people's understanding of insects so they pause to ponder before they automatically reach for a can of bug spray."

To bring about this change of heart, Ellis and Joy Neumann Landis have put together "What's Bugging You?" The book is a collection of stories about common insects that may concern, confront and confound us from time to time.

The 74-page book is divided into seasons — spring, summer, autumn — and includes a section headed "anytime" for critters such as cockroaches and pantry pests and topics such as pesticide safety.

Non-pesticide management approaches are a prominent feature of "What's Bugging You?" It even suggests ways to make your garden more inviting to the predators and parasitoids that can help control pesky pests and reduce or eliminate the need for pesticides.

"This is not just another bug book," Ellis says. "It contains plenty of good, useful information on an approach we call integrated pest management, often delivered by way of humorous stories about human-insect conflicts that we can all relate to."

What to do when Muffy gets fleas, Tom's trip to the emergency room with a spider bite, the death of the old varsity sweater, a fall home maintenance checkup to close the bug doors and backyard UFOs (picnic beetles) are just a few of the stories in "What's Bugging You?"

It was published by Michigan State University Extension and is available from county Extension offices and the MSU Bulletin Office, 10B Agriculture Hall, MSU, East Lansing, MI 48824-1039. The cost is $7.95.

Potpourri makings readily available

M.S.U. EXTENSION SERVICE

GARDEN CORNER

Have you ever thought about making potpourri? Most of the makings may already be available in your kitchen and garden and nearby fields.

Potpourris are aromatic mixtures of dried plant materials, essential oils and a fixative, which combines with the essential oils to preserve their fragrance, says Mary McLellan, master gardener program coordinator at Michigan State University.

They're easy to make at home and, except for the essential oils and the fixative, most of the ingredients are free for the picking.

"The key step in making potpourris is to make sure that all the plant materials you use are thoroughly dried," she advises. "Anything that's less than absolutely dry may cause the mixture to mold."

What can you use in potpourris? About any plant material that you like for its scent, color or shape.

Commonly used are rose petals, marigold flowers and foliage, chrysanthemum flowers, scented geraniums, lavender, mints, fragrant herbs of all kinds and evergreen needles.

Air dry or dry between layers of paper towels in a microwave, then combine them with other aromatic ingredients, such as stick cinnamon or cloves, bits of cedar bark or dried citrus peel. Dry nuts, seedpods and cones can be added for texture, color and shape.

To this mixture of ingredients, add a few drops of a compatible essential oil. Although the oil could be left out, it gives a stronger, more long-lasting scent than the dried plant materials alone, McLellan notes.

The best known fixative is orris root, which should be available wherever you purchase your essential oils. Fresh orris root smells faintly like violets. Chunks of root tend to be effective longer than the powdered form and don't sift out of sachets and pillows, McLellan adds.

Materials for potpourri can be collected through the year.

Needles from the Christmas tree, cones and seedpods from landscape ornamentals and roadside weeds, the petals from a Valentine's Day or Mother's Day rose bouquet, violets, marigolds and mums from the garden, Queen Anne's lace from the roadside — collect a variety of materials and dry them as you go.

After gathering them, store them in tightly sealed glass containers — plastic or metal may interact with the essential oils that contain the scent — and protect them from heat and sunlight. You can put the essential oils and fixative in the storage jars so that scents can mingle or wait until you compose the final mixture.

To do this, follow a recipe or create your own mix, McLellan suggests, and be sure to write down the proportions of ingredients in case you want to re-create it later.

Blend ingredients in a glass or ceramic bowl or a sturdy plastic bag. Stir with a wooden spoon or shake gently to mix. Then place it in jars — glass canning jars work well — along with fixative and essential oil, close tightly, shake well, label and store in a cool, dry place, shaking daily.

Potpourri needs to age for at least a month before it's used, McLellan says, and longer won't hurt. If a sniff test indicates that the aroma is weaker than you want, you can always add another drop or two of essential oil, shake and age some more.

Finished potpourri can be placed in cloth bags to be hung in closets, sewn into sachets to keep in drawers or placed in decorative glass jars with lids so the scent can be released into the room as desired. The scent will last longer in a covered container than in an open dish.

Ann Arbor Art Fairs set

Final preparations are being made by the Ann Arbor Transportation Authority to operate Ann Arbor Art Fairs Shuttle and Trolley service during the 2000 Ann Arbor Art Fairs, which run from Wednesday through July 22 in downtown Ann Arbor.

Fairgoers are encouraged to park free at either Briarwood Mall or Pioneer High School. Highway signs will be posted to direct visitors to these parking sights.

The authority will operate two shuttles leaving from the sites. The Main Street shuttle travels to Main and William streets to the Summer Art Fair, and the South University shuttle travels to State Street and South University to the Ann Arbor Street Art Fair and the State Street Art Fair.

Both shuttles will depart about every 15 minutes from each boarding site.

The shuttle fare is $2 round trip. Children 7 and younger ride free. Tickets are sold at each shuttle site.

AATA also will operate a trolley service among the three fairs. The trolley bus is free to shuttle riders and 50 cents for others.

The shuttle and trolley will be open 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. Wednesday through Friday and 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday.

The Art Fair hours are 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. on Wednesday to Friday and 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday.

Fairgoers are encouraged to be kind to their pets and leave them home. The days of the fairs can be hot and crowded. The AATA will only allow service animals on board the shuttle buses.

Strollers are allowed on buses, but should be folded up for passenger convenience.

If you purchase a large piece of art, don't worry – the shuttles can handle large purchases.

Art fair maps and information will be available in tents at each boarding site and at information booths throughout the fairs.

For information on the shuttle or how to use local bus routes to the fairs, call (734) 973-6500 or visit the Web site www.theride.org.

Summer Fun

Emily Koch, 9, of Dexter recently took advantage of a summer recreation program at Dexter Community Pool sponsored by the Dexter Kiwanis Club. The program is for children in kindergarten through eighth grades.

Local company's sales top $5 million in 1999

Marathon/Prestige Lines of Dexter, a supplier of promotional products, was listed in the Advertising Specialty Institute 2000 Supplier Multi-Million Dollar Roundtable.

The ASI Supplier Multi-Million Dollar Roundtable recognizes the industry suppliers whose annual promotional products sales exceeded $5 million in 1999. Out of more than 3,800 suppliers, Marathon/Prestige Lines is one of 152 firms that won recognition this year.

The ASI Supplier Multi-Million Dollar Roundtable began seven years ago and carries a great deal of prestige within the promotional products industry.

"The Multi-Million Dollar Roundtable designees represent the biggest, most successful suppliers in the United States," says Marvin Spike, ASI vice chairman.

"They have achieved this distinction by consistently generating the industry's most imaginative ideas and by offering superior client service."

ASI is the business information center for the promotional products industry and provides syndicated catalogs, directories, newsletters and magazines in print, electronic format and via the Internet to industry professionals across the country.

Classic car restoration program slated at WCC

The Mosaic Foundation of R. & P. Heydon, based in Ann Arbor, has endorsed Washtenaw Community College's new classic and special interest car restoration program with $5,000 in seed money to support its development.

Foundation executive Peter Heydon hopes that support will inspire others to contribute as well.

The program began in January with a combination of workshops and credit courses. This fall it continues with three classes.

Instructor Peter Pleitner says restoring classic cars has been a passion for him since 1970, when he took a job for an automotive restoration shop to finance his college education.

Antique cars are models produced before 1928. Classic cars are automobiles in production between 1928 and World War II. Special interest cars usually have some technical, aesthetic, or other collectible value and were produced after WWII up to the early 1970s. That category includes hot rods and race cars.

Marijuana Possession

A Chelsea police officer stopped a 22-year-old man Saturday for a seat belt violation, and noticed that the man had a bottle of beer on the floor of the car.

The driver said the officer could search the vehicle, and the officer found an open bottle of wine on the floor of the car, and a cigarette in the ashtray suspected to contain marijuana.

The man's 19-year-old girlfriend said the wine was hers. The man was cited for the seat belt violation and open intoxicants, and the woman was ticketed for being a minor in possession of alcohol. The suspected marijuana was seized and held as evidence.

Dexter Township

Marijuana Possession

A deputy conducting a traffic stop on July 2 found what he believed was marijuana on a 39-year-old Detroit man.

After stopping the man and his 30-year-old girlfriend on North Territorial Road near Dexter Townhall Road, the deputy searched the man, and found the drug in a bag, along with rolling papers and a pipe.

The man and his girlfriend said they had smoked marijuana earlier in the day while camping.

The deputy released the man pending confirmation by a police lab that the substance was marijuana.

Lima Township

Domestic Assault

Sheriff's deputies intervened in a family fight Saturday.

The officers were dispatched on a report of domestic assault. They spoke with a 43-year-old woman, who said her 40-year-old brother had grabbed her and shaken her by her wrist and waist while she was helping prepare for a horse show.

She said her brother, who was upset about pictures she had taken of his son, stopped the assault when her friends called police.

The man would not talk to police. He was arrested and taken to jail without incident.

Scio Township

Domestic Assault

A sheriff's deputy arrested a 34-year-old woman for domestic assault on July 5 at Scio Farms Estates.

The arrest came after the woman's cousin, a 19-year-old woman, said her older cousin had assaulted her following a fight over housing.

The suspect said she had had no part in any assault. She said that her younger cousin had hit her but she did not want to file a complaint.

The suspect was arrested without incident.

Missing Person

The family of a 76-year-old woman reported her missing on June 23. A deputy dispatched to their home spoke with the woman's 75-year-old husband and 50-year-old son.

They told the deputy the woman had driven off the day before with $100, and they had not heard from her since.

In addition, they said the woman, who is diagnosed as schizophrenic and manic-depressive, required daily medication. They were worried about what would happen if she missed a dose. They also said that when delusional, the woman could be hostile.

The deputy notified other law enforcement agencies about the woman.

The woman was last seen wearing a blue skirt and a white blouse. She was driving a 1996 white Subaru Legacy.

Larceny

On July 9, a 33-year-old woman reported a camera and lens missing from her car, parked in the 8100 block of Pratt Road. The woman said she had forgotten to lock the car doors the night before. The missing property was valued at $700.

Property Damage

A 25-year-old man called the sheriff's department on July 5 to report an incident at his home in the 700 block of Apricot Street, in Scio Farms Estates. He said that someone had thrown a boulder through his storm door while he was sleeping. The man had no suspects. Damage to the storm door and inside deadbolt was estimated at $200.

On June 23, a 31-year-old Lansing man came to the sheriff's department to report damage to his car. The man said he had been driving on Interstate 94 when a passenger in another car began throwing full beer cans at his car. Damage was estimated at $1,000.

A 19-year-old Ypsilanti woman called the sheriff's department on July 3 to report damage to a business in the 5100 block of Jackson Road. The woman said when she came to work that morning she found a window broken. Damage was estimated at $100.

Sharon Township

Marijuana Possession

On June 30, a sheriff's deputy found an 18-year-old Ypsilanti woman in her car, pulled off to the side of M-52 near Pleasant Lake Road.

The deputy stopped to offer assistance, but when approaching the car noticed a smell believed to be marijuana. The woman and her passenger, a 16-year-old Ypsilanti girl, gave the deputy permission to search the vehicle.

The deputy found suspected marijuana in the woman's purse. She said she had found it while clearing tables at work, but had never smoked it. A field test indicated that substance was marijuana, and it was sent to a police lab for further tests.

The woman was arrested and released pending lab results.

Manchester Township

House Fire

A sheriff's deputy was dispatched on July 2 to investigate a fire that destroyed a home in the 7300 block of Mahrle Road.

The deputy spoke with a 40-year-old man who lived nearby. He said that earlier in the day, he had seen a man walking near the home, but did not see the man do anything suspicious.

One of the homeowners, a 44-year-old woman, said everything was fine at the home when she and her family left. They found out about the fire when they returned home.

The entire house and everything inside was destroyed, and the value was still not known. Investigation of the fire was turned over to the Manchester fire marshal.

Break-in

A 39-year-old man called the sheriff's department on July 4 to report a burglary at his home in the 5600 block of Sharon Hollow Road.

A deputy investigating the call found that the burglar had gotten in the house, possibly by removing a window screen, and went to an upstairs bedroom.

The man said many items were missing from the bedroom, including seven shotguns and rifles in a gun safe, knives, antique coins and jewelry.

He told the deputy that the theft had occurred sometime between June 30 and July 4. The man's 18-year-old son had held a party during that time, but the man said he had no idea who had been at the party.

Total value of stolen property was estimated at more than $3,000.

Village president forgets to make appointments

By Michelle Rogers
Associate Editor

An oversight by the Village Council could have stymied the planning commission last week, but luck was on its side.

Village President John Coy forgot to reappoint three commissioners whose terms expired June 30.

Commission Chairman Terry Walters said it was fortunate that no vote was needed during the July 6 meeting.

The commission operated as usual despite the expired terms of Walters, Peter Kumble and Mary Carter.

Those three terms, as well as Commissioner Jennifer Colby's seat, had expired. Colby asked that she not be reappointed. During the commission's June 5 meeting, the others agreed to stay on for three years.

The commission voted in June to recommend that the three commissioners be reappointed. A vote on the item, however, never made the council's agenda.

Coy said Friday that it was an oversight.

The commissioners were reappointed by Coy and confirmed Monday by the Village Council.

PURELY ACCIDENTAL

If you are involved in an automobile accident and have not been injured to the extent that your injuries have rendered you unconscious or incapacitated, protect your legal rights by keeping your thoughts to yourself. Never admit to wrongdoing and never state that you acted improperly at the scene of the accident. And do not apologize, as doing so may well compromise your legal standing. Instead, simply exchange all relevant information with the other driver(s), and file an accident report with the police. Remember that, in the time immediately following an accident, you may not be able to appreciate all the various factors that contributed to it. It is up to an attorney to assemble the facts of the case.

In addition, don't assume that simply because you are able to walk away from the accident that you are uninjured. Many injuries resulting from the impact of an automobile accident take weeks or even months to make themselves felt. If you have already signed an agreement with an insurance company, it's doubtful that you will receive any further compensation to cover necessary medical costs. If you have been in an accident, call the LAW OFFICES OF KITCHEN & STRINGER, located in Dexter, at 3249 Broad Street, at 426-4695 to schedule a consultation, free of charge.

HINT: At the scene of an accident, try to assemble a list of witnesses for future testimony.

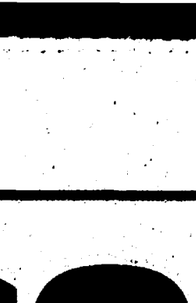
Incident should make people see red, not black



JACKIE MARTIN
HERITAGE NEWSPAPERS

HOMEFRONT

If the June 22 strangulation death of Frederick Finley in the parking lot of Lord & Taylor must be made a color issue, let's make it red.

Red for the color everyone should see at the thought of a security guard, no matter what his race, taking the law into his own hands and squeezing the life out of another human being.

Red as the symbol to stop the vicious rumors about the Finley family, whose members say they were simply in the store to shop, not shoplift.

It's been more than two weeks since the incident, and so far no evidence has been provided to support the allegation that this family was part of any "shoplifting ring."

With no evidence to suggest otherwise, why is it so difficult for people to believe the Finleys are a family that was out on a shopping spree, not a crime spree, when Mr. Finley's 11-year-old stepdaughter unintentionally walked out of the store with a $4 bracelet still on her wrist?

The bracelet had not been paid for, but the more than $200 in merchandise had been.

How about focusing on the color red for the fiery, yet peaceful, demonstration Wednesday in the Fairlane parking lot. Sparks flew as protesters made this promise to Lord & Taylor and the Dearborn Police Department — no justice, no peace or profit.

That doesn't mean if there is no justice there will be riots or violence. It means if there is not satisfactory justice, Lord & Taylor will indeed take a hit — in the cash register. So, this could be a "green thing" because the hit will come with the absence of many African-American dollars in the store.

No peace means telephones will ring off the hook at the Dearborn Police Department from protesters firing questions at the powers that be and demanding answers.

Ironically, the one thing missing from the protest was "color." For the most part, there were African-American protesters and there were white police officers surrounding them on the ground and atop buildings.

This isn't a "black thing" it's a "wrong thing." It shouldn't just be wrong to African Americans because Frederick Finley was black. It should be wrong to everyone because Frederick Finley was an American citizen with rights.

You don't have to "cross enemy lines" to support that theory.

Although police reports vary, the Finley family says Frederick Finley was only trying to protect his daughter after he saw plain-clothes security guards, some of them black, grabbing her.

If yellow is the color of a coward, then let's make this a "yellow thing" — for the cowardly way Lord & Taylor has addressed, or should I say refused to address, this issue and the family's grief.

How about yellow to represent the fear that consumed the Dearborn Police Department that we (African Americans) could not protest in peace. We weren't there to bring the Lord & Taylor building down. We were there to shut it down.

If there was anything frightening about being among the chanting and singing protesters, it was seeing the swarming number of law enforcement officers — whether they were there for our protection or for those around us.

Most of the speakers, which included activists Dick Gregory and the Rev. Al Sharpton, the Rev. Horace Sheffield of Detroit, high-profile attorney Geoffrey Fieger, WJLB morning show host John Mason, NAACP representative Arthur Johnson and U.S. Rep. John Conyers Jr. (D-14th District), focused on peace and community action.

The estimated crowd of 5,000-plus protesters was warned by the speakers not to give the police a reason to swing into action.

So, Dearborn gets another black eye for yet another negative incident involving an African American. It's too bad, because at least the mall management has tried to make strides to improve the racist image some in the city appeared to willingly hold on to for many years.

The fact that Dearborn has a well-documented history of racial unrest at the mall and within the city did not go without mention at the rally. The NAACP has protested in Dearborn before with a complaint of "racial profiling."

Don't be foolish to think Dearborn doesn't still have racial issues to deal with, and be wise enough to know Dearborn isn't the only suburb that has to deal with them.

My husband has been pulled over by Detroit and suburban police officers, black and white, numerous times, because, as he was told, he fits the description of a drug dealer.

My husband is a college graduate, teaches in the Detroit Public School District and is a supervisor for the Detroit Parks and Recreation Department.

My nephews, while walking down the sidewalk in an affluent white neighborhood, were pushed to the ground and handcuffed by white police officers who said the boys fit the description of suspected burglars.

In no way did they resemble anyone suspected of burglary in the area. And, by the way, my nephews actually do live in that affluent neighborhood.

Until you or your family has actually experienced racial profiling, you couldn't possibly understand it or Dearborn's problem shaking it.

Let's face it, had this incident been handled better by the security guards, Frederick Finley would still be alive, overtime for all of those police officers wouldn't be astronomical and Lord & Taylor's image wouldn't be black and blue from the beating it's taking in the press.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Girl deserves applause for stand on racial issues

I write to applaud and encourage the young lady, Amanda Simmons, who wrote a few weeks ago regarding the sad departure of her neighbors and friends due to racial discrimination.

I believe that it's up to each and every one of us, as Amanda wrote, "to try to make a difference and try to make everyone feel equal." I can't think of a nobler ambition for any human being.

I believe this is especially true for most of us who live in Chelsea. We enjoy so many privileges in our lives here. There are so many comforts, so many benefits to the families of this community. And yet, somehow a message has been delivered that all people are not welcome to share or belong in this community.

Racism is a complex social problem, but I think that Amanda has hit the nail on the head when she places responsibility at the feet of each citizen of Chelsea. It is about loving one's neighbor as oneself. Let's encourage Amanda and all of our youngsters and one another, too, to make acceptance and affirmation synonymous with what it means to be in community.

And thank you again, Amanda, for sharing your story.

New drugstore is good for traffic, scenery

I am writing in response to Mr. Maveal's letter to the editor in the July 6 edition of The Chelsea Standard. I will show what a narrow minded and negative effort he displays in his letter.

I can only assume that his motives are selfish and of a me-first mentality. I will present my information in the same order in which his letter follows.

First, he suggests that there were a 1,000 area residents who sent a message to Rite-Aid that the corner proposed for a new store was not appropriate.

I believe that the petition in question argued that Chelsea did not need another drugstore. This may have been true and I think that the signers were led to believe that this was what they were signing for.

And also, let's be honest folks — excuse me Mr. Maveal refers to you as folks — how many of you signed just to get the petition solicitor off your porch? One thousand signatures sounds like a lot of people when you consider that Chelsea has a population of about 4,000.

The fact is they went out of the village limits for signers and the demographics for the Chelsea area is a population of over 10,000. I will deal with his attempt to give a negative attitude about the location for a drugstore as my letter continues.

Next, he says that CVS is proposing a site plan every bit as dense as what Rite-Aid proposed. What exactly does that mean and what's the problem? If you want density, what about the other three corners of that intersection.

He's got me wondering, what about you? If you want density what about the other three corners on that intersection.

The developer is working with the planning commission on trees, shrubbery and the appearance of the total corner. Never let it be said that the commission is easy. The developer also plans to use parking lot lighting, which patterns itself with the village street lights.

Also, I must say that the planning commission has not quickly ever done anything; they have a tendency to agonize over every detail.

Mr. Maveal mentions traffic; however, his point is misleading and an attempt toward the negative. How can it cause cars to scurry in and out when they are already coming and going to one of the other drugstores across the corner or just up the street? If you currently shop at CVS do you like the parking situation over there?

Let's take a look at reality. It will replace an eyesore, add sidewalks, reduce the number of driveway entries and control the traffic better. I fail to appreciate what the Pierce Park users have to do with anything, and, oh yes, there are no sidewalks on the corner now. Are the pedestrians and bike riders any better off the way it is?

The rest of his letter is a bit of rambling about how Rite-Aid and others are overbuilding and messing up the landscape. Hello. If there isn't a need I'm sure they wouldn't be spending big money on these corners.

It appears to me that he is a bit self-centered in his opinion about what should be on that corner.

He appears insensitive to the elderly and the number or whoever might have a sick child or person in the car. What am I getting at? You guessed it, a pharmacy with a drive through. Are the bikers and pedestrians more important than the sick and elderly?

Also, as I have said before, with sidewalks and fewer curb cuts the vehicle drivers will know where to watch for you dear folks, which might take a stand against such similar nonsense. Thank you for listening to another opinion. In case you might wonder, my wife is a property owner in Chelsea.

Gas station owners aren't the bad guys

To the Editor:

Mike Sullivan's letter in the June 22 issue brought out the frustration and discontent so many of us feel with the current gas prices. The biggest problem, however, is that his anger is directed at the retailers and not the suppliers. It is easier to complain to the person standing behind the counter, but they have very little to do with the price that you see on the sign.

I am a Marathon dealer on the west side of Ann Arbor. We lease the facilities from the oil company and we, (like most other dealers) are supplied by a terminal, designated by the company. Each night, we are notified, via an electronic message across our credit card machine, what the price for fuel will be as of midnight. For years, we, the dealers, have been screaming for "open supply," that is, the ability to go out into the jobber market and shop for the best price.

If the dealer could shop among the jobbers (terminals) for the best price, they could in turn make more money and pass a savings along to the consumer. Jobbers, willing to compete, would thrive. The only ones to feel a trickle down from this would be the oil companies.

The other game the oil companies play is called "pad pricing." It would be against the law to sell fuel to a dealer for one price, and then to another dealer at a higher price, if they were in the same area. To skirt around this, a city or area will be broken into 'pads,' with each pad having a different price, and some dealers paying more for the same product.

These practices have been allowed to go on for years because big oil throws a lot of money into the political (mainly Republican) arenas. Not wanting to lose their stronghold in the market, the oil companies dictate the price.

Consider next the big outcry from big oil about the demands now placed upon them to meet the federal clean air requirements. They will tell you that they must now deal with the demands to blend a cleaner fuel, but what they don't bother to tell you is that they are being federally subsidized to add alcohol to our fuel.

Comparing the Speedway in Chelsea with the one in Dexter is like comparing a mom and pop grocery store to Kroger's. Stations of this type in Dexter with a higher fuel volume, truck traffic, C-store and fast food, as well as a direct highway location, will almost always run a lower price then the smaller volume, in-village type of facilities.

If you don't want to give your money to a corporate-owned store, find a station where the owner is working behind the counter and support his or her business.

While you're supporting that business, let's talk profits. At today's prices, most dealers are lucky to be pulling a 6- to 10-cent margin (average profit margin for all combined fuels) per gallon. If you buy an 11,000-gallon load of fuel on Monday, and on Tuesday the price to you drops by 8 cents, and you have to adjust your price down to match the street price, you have effectively lost $880 profit on that one load of fuel.

If your facility is lucky enough to be able to pump 100,000 gallons at a 10 cent margin, (the oil company says that you only need 3 cents to survive) you've collected $10,000 profit on your fuel sales for the month. Take from that your rent (usually in excess of $7,000 for a facility pumping over 100,000 gallons), electric, water, gas, insurance, maintenance and employee wages and you've nothing left.

When the pipeline broke, we had purchased fuel prior to the price jumps and held steadfast on a price that was 10 cents cheaper than our competition, resisting the urge to jump up our price until we were forced to when our next load of higher priced fuel came in.

Some dealers were also placed on allotments during that time and were told by their oil companies that if they needed to slow down their sales, they should just up the price. Buy a gallon of gas at $2 per gallon and pay for it with your credit card, which charges the dealer 2.75-percent to 3.5-percent to process it, and you've just taken 5.5 to 7 cents profit off of his sale.

For many dealers, the pop, chips, car washes and candy represents the difference in the profits that actually allow them to keep the doors open and the employees paid.

Three Shell dealers in Ann Arbor with between 13 to 20 years of experience in their businesses have had to close their doors in the past six months, being pushed out by the oil company, which has raised their rents to such extremes that they could not be met.

So what happens to these abandoned stations? The oil company opens them back up, with a new dealer who basically rents out the repair bays while the oil company controls the sales and the profits of the gasoline. These private businesses are lost to the needs and greeds of big oil, and the neighborhood suffers.

The attorneys general of several states have started inquiries into the practice of pad pricing. Further pressure is needed to make changes. Keep in mind that the tax on gas also goes up with the price.

The state of Michigan is also seeing higher dollars coming in throughout this fiasco. Tell your representative that you want the taxes on gasoline rolled back to last summer's pricing levels.

Finally, keep in mind what we do pay for things. Back when gas was $.30 per gallon, no one complained and life was good. If we were to adjust for inflation and the current cost of living, that price today should be $1.75 per gallon.

Give the retailer a break, don't kill the messenger, and be happy that they're still there to serve you. These people don't deserve the hassles and headaches. They deserve your thanks.

Historical truck show set at Yesterday's

New, antique and historical vehicles will be on display from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. July 22 at Yesterday's Collection, 5899 Jackson Road, Scio Township, during the Southeast Michigan Chapter of the American Truck Historical Society's truck show

Trucks 25 years old or older can participate in the show, and they can be restored, unrestored, or modified. All models are welcome, according to Marcia McCrary, vice president of the Semi Chapter of the society.

There will be no judging or competition, just interesting vehicles to look at, McCrary said. Among those on display will be favorites such as Mack and Ford with an occasional Gotfredson thrown in for spice, she said.

A variety of aficionados will be on hand to discuss the finer details of truck restoration, McCrary said. New truck dealers also will offer special displays, she said.

No preregistration is required for those bringing a vehicle. Just check in at the registration tent to get a windshield card identifying the truck, McCrary said.

She said those participating must have a fire extinguisher and wheel chucks.

There is no charge for participants or visitors. Refreshments will be available for purchase.

For additional information, contact McCrary at (734) 483-2799 or by e-mail at Marciamccr@aol.com), or call Bob Ludwig at (734) 429-0619.

Chelsea students participate in Boys State program

Four Chelsea High School students were among 600 Michigan youths participating in the Boys State program this summer at Michigan State University. Leaving for a week in Lansing are David Poupard, Ben Vogel, George Fairley and Ben Gunderson.

By Jim Silver
Staff Writer

When the train pulled out on June 18, it carried four Chelsea High School students to serve in public office.

The train may only have been a bus taking David Poupard, Ben Vogel, George Fairley and Ben Gunderson to Boys State, but the experience left a lasting mark, they say.

Sponsored by the American Legion, Boys State takes high school seniors from around the state and gives them a weeklong opportunity to see what goes into running a state, from top to bottom.

The program, on the Michigan State University campus, divides its almost 600 participants into cities of 36 people. The boys also are assigned to either the Federalist or Nationalist political parties.

From that base, the students are expected to run their cities and the state as a whole. They hold political conventions, nominating candidates for governor and lieutenant governor, state Senate and House, and Supreme Court seats.

As in the real world, nominees from each party vie for the offices overall, in an election midway through the week.

Poupard says the convention and election at Boys State gave him some insight into backroom dealings in real politics.

"I got to see how people lie and cheat to get votes," he says. "At the conventions, people were making deals to get votes, and one person would be swapping votes with another to get things done."

But in addition to higher office, the students must find someone to fill all levels of government. So Poupard found himself running for and winning a council seat in Polk City, and also serving on the city's boards of education, transportation, health and sanitation.

Gunderson did not run for any elected office, but still served as the appointed fire chief of Pierce City.

As the city clerk of Monroe City, Fairley worked with council members to solve environmental and development problems.

"Other cities needed products from the city industries, so we set up some development plans, and we also created tree planting and park programs, which were pretty expensive."

Once the government structures were in place, the students had to solve problems assigned by Boys State staff, along with creating a comprehensive city book, with maps, drawings and demographic data.

Gunderson, in addition to contributing to Pierce City's book, also had to come up with solutions for such crises as an oil tanker spill and a car fire, write a report on each incident and present his report to his city council.

Poupard dealt with other problems, as Polk City faced racial tension, high crime and dropout rates, a rash of teen pregnancies and empty coffers.

"We asked other cities for 2 percent of all tax revenues, which brought $200 million to the city," he said. "We used that to start classes for health and pregnancy prevention."

That sort of solution was necessary because "we couldn't just make up a lottery winner who donated $2 million to the city."

The city also faced waste problems, which Poupard and other Board of Sanitation members had to solve by swapping other cities' toxic waste for trash disposal.

In addition to solving municipal emergencies, Boys-Staters had issue forums throughout the week, when lobbying groups and others presented facts to the assembled participants. There also were school sessions and intramural sports teams.

Gunderson says the boys were busy all day long.

"We were up at 6 a.m. for a flag raising ceremony, then went to breakfast," he says.

From there, they had a non-stop day of activity, usually getting to bed at 10:30 or 11 p.m.

The schedule was demanding, but Poupard says they were warned that would be the case at the beginning of the week.

"They told us on the first day, 'You'll only get out of this what you put in,'" he said. "We did have to work together, but we all bonded because of it."

Both Gunderson and Poupard say they met people from all over the state, people they might never have met otherwise.

"There was a really good mix of people — track stars, football players, student council members," Gunderson says. "But there were no egos. Everybody worked together."

Poupard says he already has been in touch with friends he made during the week. But he did not come away with a desire for political glory.

"I wouldn't run for office," he said. "But after watching the campaigns there, I would like to help out in a Senate or presidential campaign."

Fairley says he enjoyed the issue forums. But even more, he liked the emphasis on problem solving and compromise that was required of all participants.

Soloman forsakes law for teaching

Leonard Soloman's parents had great expectations for his future. They wanted him to be an attorney.

But life took him in another direction.

"Needless to say, those law school finals didn't turn out as well as I had hoped," Solomon says, 39 years later.

Soloman received a bachelor's degree in 1961 from the University of Michigan and that same year became certified to teach.

From the start, Soloman says he thought teaching would make for an interesting career, but he was persuaded by his parents to apply to law school. Soloman was accepted into Wayne State University's law program and attended classes a year before dropping out.

"I grew up with Perry Mason and, of course, you are given this image of this attorney fighting for the downtrodden," he says.

But Soloman found reality to be much different. In particular, he was amazed to find that many decisions are based on precedents set in the 19th century.

Since Soloman already had obtained a teaching certificate as an undergraduate, he took advantage of his credentials and began working as a substitute teacher. He was hired in Chelsea as a long-term substitute and came on board full time the following fall.

Ironically, it was Soloman's father who suggested that he get certified to teach after completing his undergraduate studies.

"He said that maybe it would be helpful to get a teaching certificate," Soloman recalls. "So, I followed his advice. And as it turns out, it may be the best advice I have ever followed."

A native of Detroit, Soloman was familiar with the Chelsea area after having attended summer camp here during his youth. But he never thought he would Leonard Soloman gave up law school nearly 40 years ago to pursue a career in education. He was hired in Chelsea and today teaches math to seventh- and eighth-graders at Beach Middle School. Soloman moved from Detroit 27 years ago and calls Crooked Lake in Sylvan Township home.

Youth mentoring program under way

By Marsha Johnson Chartrand
Heritage Newspapers

Attorney General Jennifer Granholm, first lady Michelle Engler and former Piston Isiah Thomas, together with Washtenaw County Prosecutor Brian Mackie, kicked off a major recruitment drive for adult mentors in Washtenaw County last week.

The program, called 2000 for 2000: Michigan's Mentoring Initiative, will partner local leaders in four Michigan counties, to recruit, screen, train, match and monitor 2000 mentors with youths ages 7 to 17. The pilot project will focus on mentoring first-time, non-violent offenders as a way of preventing juvenile crime.

Charles List, the program coordinator for 2000 for 2000, says the plan is to target 2,000 mentors for youth in the year 2000.

"Our basic focus in 2000 is recruitment," he said. "There are a number of mentoring agencies that already exist, and we're not interested in reinventing the wheel. Instead, we will be helping with the most difficult portion of the equation, which is recruiting mentors."

List was hired on a three-year commitment with hopes to expand the program during this period so that mentoring becomes a part of the juvenile justice process.

"We're hoping that there are ways of diverting them from being charged," List. Said. "Most of the children are truants, incorrigible at home, or have committed a non-violent first offense, such as petty theft or shoplifting.

"Some of the offenses the child would only be charged because of their age, such as truancy. The whole idea is to try to divert them at an earlier age so they don't move into heavier and worse behaviors."

When prospective mentors volunteer, they will need recommendations for this position, and a criminal history check will be done. The volunteer mentor will receive an orientation and training, followed by an interview with the mentor and a matching between mentor and a child who has been referred by the prosecutor.

"This is done in the prosecutor's office, basically through their diversion program," List said. "It's kind of a challenge for the child. If they behave and meet with their mentors for two hours a week for 52 weeks, the likelihood of prosecution is dropped."

List added that Granholm is herself mentoring a young girl with a history of truancy.

"Since her matching in March, the girl hasn't missed one day of school," he said.

Prosecutor Brian Mackie also has volunteered to be a mentor.

"He's our leadership person in Washtenaw County," List said. "Brian has served as the president of the Prosecuting Attorney's Association and has spearheaded this effort. Having the first lady and Isiah Thomas as partners is a wonderful plus for the program."

The program is in a pilot process right now in four counties, Washtenaw, Wayne, Bay and Kalamazoo.

"(We're hoping) to expand statewide," List said. "In fact, in August we're going into the I-75 corridor — Oakland, Genesee, Macomb, and Saginaw. In the future we expect to expand into other areas as well, depends on funding."

No state or federal money goes into this program.

"It's all private funding," List said.

The Isiah Thomas Foundation, the Skillman Foundation and the Hudson Webber Foundation are the primary partners in financing the program.

The commitment made by mentors is two hours per week for a year.

"Obviously, there is a certain amount of flexibility," List said. "It's a commitment, but in everything the studies have shown us, it takes more than just a few months to establish a true relationship with a child. That's just the beginning."

The long-term benefits of the program, however, convince List and the other program sponsors that the commitment is worth it.

"If a child has committed a beginning offense, their recidivism rate is about 40 percent," he said. "If the child has a mentor it's 7 percent. That's a very significant difference, and this is documented.

"People keep asking what can I do — what can parents, schools, or churches do — here is something you can do.

"This brings results. I'm happy to be involved for that reason."

List said that organizations such as the Big Brothers/Big Sisters have been in the mentoring business for close to 100 years. Studies over the years have shown similar statistics to those he quoted earlier.

"A group that is our partner in Wayne County started as a group in Royal Oak in the mid-1960s by a judge," he said. "Over 10 years, he personally recruited 500 mentors, and they were able to reduce their recidivism rate from 70 percent to 7 percent.

"Their model is just a marvelous example — that's the same one we're using in other counties as well."

Granholm commented about her mentoring partner at a recent press conference, saying she was getting more out of her experience than the child was.

"It's a sense of being able to impart something of value," List said. "If there's someone out there who has connected with them, they're connected to society. Being able to connect with a child is very fulfilling. I've heard that from many others who have mentored, too."

Of course, List said, there are children who need more than just a mentor.

"They may need other services, and having a mentor could help those other programs and services become available," he said.

"One thing that is important to remember (is that) they are spending time, not money. It's a matter of making them feel more connected."

To locate mentors, the program has contacted Wayne State University to grant credits to students in education, criminal justice and social work for those students who provide mentoring to young people.

"We are hoping to duplicate this in Washtenaw County with Eastern Michigan University, the University of Michigan and Washtenaw Community College," he said. "It's one more way we can generate the needed people."

As of June 30, more than 800

Merkel Furniture opens new gallery

Merkel Furniture and Carpet One, a third-generation family owned and operated furniture store in Chelsea since 1924, recently celebrated the grand opening of a 2,500-square-foot Pennsylvania House gallery.

Last year marked the 75th anniversary of Merkel's 24,000-square-foot home furnishings store, which has become somewhat of a local landmark on Main Street in downtown Chelsea.

The Pennsylvania House grand-opening event was kicked off with a private gallery showing for preferred customers, who were treated to wine, hors d'oeuvres, special discounts and a chance to win a Pennsylvania House solid cherry Goddard Chest.

The Merkel Furniture and Carpet One management team joined Pennsylvania House representatives at the event, during which guests received a Pennsylvania House Life Collector's Book and a first glimpse at the store's featured Pennsylvania House furniture lines.

Pennsylvania House, a LADD Furniture Inc. company, which is a member of the La-Z-Boy family of companies, manufactures and markets solid wood furniture and custom-made upholstery under one of the best-known consumer brand names in the industry.

Pennsylvania House specializes in traditional solid cherry designs and also produces collections in oak, pine and maple.

Situated in central Pennsylvania, the company was established in the late 1800s as the Lewisburg Chair Co. and renamed Pennsylvania House in 1933.

SOLOMAN

work and live in the area.

"I was from the big city and Chelsea was a small town," he says. "Never in a million years did I dream I'd end up here."

For the past 27 years, Soloman has made his home on Crooked Lake in Sylvan Township.

For the last eight years, Soloman has taught math to seventh- and eighth-graders at Beach Middle School. He taught sixth grade for a year, and two decades previous had team-taught the school's American history program, which was nixed in the early 1990s.

"I've been literally teaching all math ever since then," he says.

Soloman says he chose to teach both subjects for different reasons. He is intrigued with history and he believes math is essential. Besides, both subjects require memory development, which he considers very important.

"What I think people don't realize, the process of education is the development of the brain," he says. "We don't pay equal attention to all areas, like memorization and retention, and that can cause problems."

To help students build their memories, Soloman does not allow his seventh-grade math students to use calculators until April.

"Directive" is the word this veteran educator uses to describe his teaching style.

"I require my children to behave themselves, although that gets tougher and tougher each year," he says.

"I provide examples for children to work with and I provide extra stimulation."

Although he has taught middle school his entire career, Soloman says he originally was interested in high school.

"But my first job was here in the middle school, and I realized very quickly that this is the last time we have the kids when they're really open, responsive and have not formed a variety of opinions that are influenced by either social conditions, economics, parents or friends," he says.

"If you talk to some people, they say that middle school is the worst tour of duty. I don't know why. I consider it one of the best. It's difficult because you have children entering and going through puberty and becoming socially minded, which can be difficult, but I don't see it as the toughest kind of assignment.

"In my point of view, I think the kids at the high school may not be as open as the kids in the middle school. What I like most about the kids at the middle school is their willingness to be honest and accept — and learn."

The only hard rules in Soloman's classroom are that students must behave and turn in all of their homework. Soloman says his students have homework every night and weekly tests.

"I think it prepares my seventh-graders for eighth grade, and my eighth-graders for what they can expect in high school," he says.

In the end, Soloman believes his students see him as a taskmaster but fair.

"I am probably perceived as a rather strict disciplinarian," he says. "At least my own children see me that way and say the children do in school, too.

"They might not like what they have to do, but they know in the long run that it's structured for their development."

Soloman suspects his high school civics teacher, Gordon Minton, influenced his approach with students. Soloman says Minton taught him the importance of obeying the rules.

Now, Soloman says, "I tend to be very directive and somewhat controlling, but I think it's necessary in a classroom to accomplish anything."

The highlight of Soloman's career came when he was team teaching the American history program, which he says was cut because the administration thought it was too difficult for students.

"We were producing kids who were averaging 12th grade and higher, as far as social studies went," he says. "So, on that basis, our program certainly proved its worth.

"I miss the program. We set it up because, I think, it did good things for the kids. It met the kids' needs."

With 38 years invested in Chelsea schools, Soloman still is not sure how far off retirement is for him. He says it could be a year away, or eight years.

"As long as my health is there and as long as I can empathize with the kids and work with them (I'll stay)," he says.

"There are a lot of other things I could be doing, but I enjoy teaching. That's why I am here."

When he is not in the classroom, Soloman is running his own contract painting company, as well as a bookkeeping and accounting business.

Soloman and his wife, Anna, have two children, Heather, a senior at Chelsea High School, and Jean-Claude, a seventh-grader at Beach Middle School.

In his spare time, Soloman enjoys running his businesses, spending time on the lake in his speedboat and collecting stamps, a hobby he rekindled 12 years ago.

FARM BUREAU FUN FACTS

It might take a year or two, but you can expect to see lighter-colored whole wheat breads on the grocery shelf. Wheat breeders are coming up with new varieties of white wheat that can be used for both pasta production and for white bread. The new variety will be milled without removing the bran and nutrients that make whole wheat more nutritious than white bread. The bread will be a creamy or buttery yellow color and will be milder tasting than today's whole wheat varieties.

Although thousands of ants may live in an ant nest, a new colony starts slowly. One pregnant ant — the queen — builds a tiny nest in the soil. She lays her eggs and cares for her young until they transform into worker ants. The male workers mate with the queen and then die. Females do daily chores for the colony. The queen, because she's the boss, makes babies and decides the workers' jobs. Workers raise the young, protect the nest, collect food and, as the colony expands, other worker ants enlarge the nest by digging a maze of tunnels with their mouths.

Housework can be more than a headache...
FACT: Our greatest exposure to toxic substances is right in our own homes.
AN EPA REPORT STATES THAT INDOOR AIR POLLUTION IS ONE OF THE NATION'S MOST IMPORTANT ENVIRONMENTAL HEALTH PROBLEMS.
What you don't know CAN hurt you!
STUDY SHOWS: Women who work at home have a 55% higher risk of dying from cancer than do women who work outside the home. Most homes today contain more toxic chemicals than were found in an average chemistry lab at the turn of the century!
WHAT ARE THESE?...Store bought, advertised cleaning and personal care products that are actually referred to as PESTICIDES...common effects from their use produce symptoms such as: headaches, nausea, irritability, fatigue, asthma, skin irritations, ADD, cancer.
Learn what you can do!
To protect you, your family, your pets and the environment from the toxins of everyday products, you are invited to attend one of two FREE workshops being held for the public:
Saturday, July 15th at 8:45 am - 12 noon
Chelsea Adult Community Education Center and
1:30 - 3:30 pm at the Michigan League central campus area in Ann Arbor.
Melaleuca's Executive Director Linda Cook will share her knowledge regarding the all too common short and long term toxic effects from household cleaners, personal and yard care products and will discuss what you can do to clean up your hom'e toxic "waste site."
RSVP to 734-475-0104 for both workshops by 7-13-00 is appreciated to secure setting and for directions.

'The Great Lakes Cottage' book offers dramatic photography

LISA ALLMENDINGER

BOOK REVIEW

The Chelsea Standard has decided to try something new and offer its readers reviews of some of the "don't miss titles" of this prolific reading season.

The books I'll choose will include local favorites as well as national best sellers. I'll be reviewing adult as well as children's books, and the topics will cover a wide range of topics in both fiction and non-fiction.

From how-to, self-help and mysteries to literary, romance and coffee table titles, you'll find highly recommended books.

Because there are so many great titles out there, and I could not possibly review them all in a timely fashion, I'll include a "book mark" section that will give you a glimmer of other suggested titles. This section also will keep you abreast of the news of note from the publishing world.

Summer is here and the reading is easy. And if you're not lucky enough to have a cottage up north, "The Great Lakes Cottage Book" is a hot-off-your-local-Sleeping-Bear-Press title that will help you live the cottage life vicariously.

If you're one of the fortunate few who can escape to lakeside cabin living, this is a book you'll want resting on one of your rustic, wooden, flea-market-found tables.

The 221-page book of photographs by Ed Wargin and essays by Kathy-Jo Wargin was delivered to the Main Street publisher June 30. It is an exquisite pictorial journey with a clever layout that takes readers through the serene landscape of a place where everything slows down a bit and being one with nature takes center stage.

I found myself scrunching my toes in the carpet and feeling the soft warm sand between them. I could hear frogs croaking and the lake's rhythmic lapping while sitting in a stark white rocking chair on one of the front porches that gorgeously decorate the book's pages.

I closed my eyes and pictured the mist rising, feeling its cool wet dew on my skin.

From the dramatic photography to the beautifully crafted prose, "The Great Lakes Cottage Book," whisks you on a magnificent journey to a place where architecture truly blends with nature.

The Great Lakes' aura and its sometimes rustic, sometimes modern cottage dwellings, are not only the backdrop but also the leading characters in a world that's filled with a restful and serene ambiance that's like none other.

BOOKMARK: The Harry Potter mania began Saturday as the fourth in the mega-best seller, children's series, "Harry Potter and the Goblet of Fire," hit bookstores. Because of its popularity, the title has an initial press run of 3.6 million, which is unheard of these days.

Locally, Little Professor owner Doug Smith says the store has placed orders for 300 copies and is keeping a written list of those who want copies.

Half of the order, 150, had been spoken for before Saturday arrived. All booksellers had to sign a form saying they would not sell the title until 12:01 a.m. July 8. Twice the size of the previous novels, "Harry Potter and the Goblet of Fire" has a suggested retail price of $25.95, but Smith said that he will sell the popular book at a 20 percent discount. Little Professor sells many of the New York Times best sellers it has in stock at 20 percent off.

Chaos Rules

Dexter's Chaos captured first place in the Southeast Michigan Soccer Association league. In the back row are team members Matt Becker (left), Craig Baldus, Stephen Cavanaugh, Matt Glahn, Ryan Bruder, Tim Romelhardt, Matt Bastion and Seth Porinsky. In the front row are Andrew Vincke (left), Dave Metz, Eric Kumbier, Josh Cebula, Alex Migda, Joe Sambataro and Bill Burgett.

'Cheap publicity' available on line

Since the cost of having a publicity agent is very pricey, an Arizona firm has an effective alternative.

A new Web site, www.CheapPublicity.com, has just been launched by Five Star Publications Inc.

"Talk show hosts are always looking for exciting guests, organizations need top-notch speakers and lawyers often require expert witnesses," said Linda Radke, president of Phoenix-based Five Star Publications.

"On CheapPublicity.com, visitors can search by category or name to find the person they want. Then with one click they will be connected with that person's Web site, where they can make the necessary arrangements."

CheapPublicity.com is being aggressively marketed to media professionals, organizations and others throughout the country.

Radke, a 15-year veteran of the publishing and marketing business, has succeeded in getting publicity for her clients on "60 minutes," "The Howard Stern Show" and Fox-TV News and in dozens of national magazines.

For a limited time, authors, speakers and experts can be listed on the Web site for two months at no charge.

PROGRAM

individuals had volunteered to become mentors. Not all will end up mentoring, once screening and orientation is complete, but the program is well on its way to achieving its goal of positively intervening in the lives of children at risk.

Community leaders, service clubs, business organizations and faith communities are among the biggest supporters of the program.

"Faith communities account for over 50 percent of those who volunteer," List said. "We would welcome the opportunity to talk to congregations, and will do presentations on Sundays or during the week.

Organizations or individuals who are interested in volunteering for the mentoring program can call 1-877-KID-TRAC (543-8722) for more information and an application.

Summer Break

Olivia Aberegg enjoys her summer vacation on the playground in Loch Alpine subdivision. Dexter students have been off since June 9 and will return to school in September.

Academy accepts Chelsea dancer

Lisa Locker, daughter of Dianne Jonas Locker and Donald Locker, has been accepted into the BalletMet Dance Academy's annual Summer Workshop 2000.

A student of the Dance Arts of Chelsea, Locker will join approximately 140 young dancers from around the world to participate in this six-week intensive dance program.

Participants in the Summer Workshop 2000, which began June 26 and runs through Aug. 4, are 12 to 18 years old. Hailing from 21 states and four foreign countries, they were selected during a 16-city tour.

Summer Workshop 2000 provides dancers with the opportunity to be trained by internationally recognized professional dancers, including BalletMet's artistic director David Nixon and internationally acclaimed ballerina and director of professional training Yoko Ichino.

"BalletMet is truly unique in that we integrate injury-prevention methods into our ballet technique," Ichino said. "We implement medically correct movement and a healthy, holistic approach toward inner awareness.

"Every participant of our summer workshop leaves a significantly stronger dancer."

Visiting faculty members include international jazz performers Keith Cross and Stella Kane, international flamenco sensation Carmen "Chiqui" Linares and modern dance specialist Jeff Moen, who currently teaches at the Merce Cunningham Dance Studio in New York.

BalletMet faculty members who will teach include April Berry, former principal dancer with the Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater; and Susan Dromisky, Raymond Smith and Catherine Yoshimura, former international principal dancers.

Five levels of dance instruction will be provided during the workshop. Some of the participants will join the Finishing Program, a special program designed for those dancers who are currently on the threshold of a performing career.

BalletMet ranks among the 15 largest dance companies in the nation and among the five largest professional dance training centers in the country.

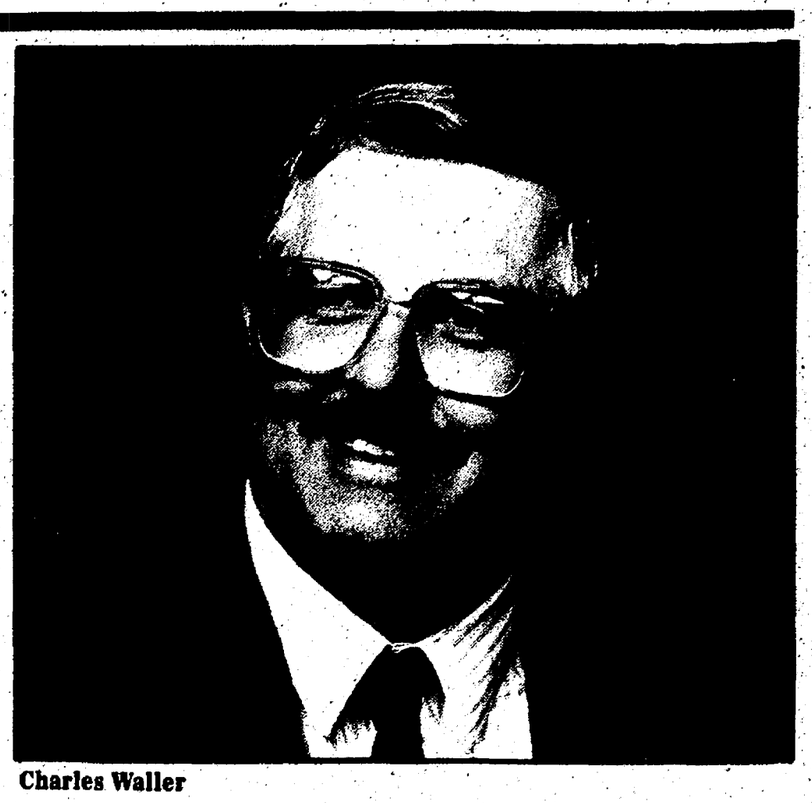
OBITUARIES

Charles Waller

History, English teacher was championship coach



Charles Waller

Charles L. Waller, a longtime teacher and coach in Chelsea schools, died Monday, July 3, 2000, at Chelsea Community Hospital. He was 57.

Born in Detroit the son of Charles and Betty Waller, Mr. Waller served in the Army Security Agency from 1962 to 1965 before heading to the University of Michigan. After graduation, he came to Chelsea schools, where he taught for the rest of his life.

In 1975, Mr. Waller started coaching school sports in Chelsea, starting out as a junior varsity softball coach.

Bill Wescott, now Beach Middle School principal, was the varsity coach from 1975 to 1980, and when he took a year off in 1980, Waller stepped up to varsity coaching.

"I came back in 1982, this time as JV coach under Charlie," Wescott said. "We coached kids together, and shared a lot of special times.

"Charlie had a passion for excellence, and he always put a team on the field that Chelsea could be proud of.

"He fielded 10 (Southeastern Conference) championship teams. That's an achievement I don't think will ever be matched."

Mr. Waller continued coaching softball from 1980 to 1988 and coached the high school varsity basketball team from 1992 to last year. He was named Area Coach of the Year by the Ann Arbor News many times, most recently in 1999.

In 1982 and 1985, Mr. Waller took softball teams to state championships, winning them in 1982, and was named Region 4 National Softball Coach of Year as well.

Beth Unterbrink, now Beth Starkey, was on both of those teams, along with her sisters. She said Mr. Waller guided her into sports.

"I've known him since I moved to Chelsea, and he introduced us to softball," she said. "The day we won the (1982) championship was one of the best days of my life, just behind the birth of my kids."

Starkey said lessons she learned on Mr. Waller's championship teams, lessons of teamwork and hard work, were lessons she passed on to her own children.

Wayne Welton, athletic director for Chelsea schools, coached baseball and basketball with Mr. Waller. He said the lessons Mr. Waller taught were just part of his skill as a coach.

"He knew how to put kids in a position to win, to recognize skills and abilities and put them in the right spot for them and the team," Welton said.

He said that ability translated to the classroom.

"He spent a lot of time making sure the room was exactly what he wanted it to be," Welton said. "He worked harder than most people recognized."

Ron Mead, Chelsea High School principal, agreed, pointing out Mr. Waller's work over the years on curriculum reviews.

In addition, Mead said, Mr. Waller was a mainstay of the English and history departments who could be counted on to fill out each semester's schedule.

"He was the go-to person in the English department," Mead said. "He was also really good in staff meetings, trying to bring consensus and always keeping an eye on the bigger picture."

Chelsea school Superintendent Ed Richardson said Mr. Waller's brand of quiet hard work in looking for consensus earned him praise during last year's teacher contract negotiations.

"We called him the voice of reason," Richardson said. "When issues became difficult, he was that rare person who could look at both sides of an issue and bring it to resolution."

Richardson, Mead, Wescott and Welton all said Mr. Waller would be missed, as a colleague and as a friend. Starkey echoed those sentiments, but said she would first have to get used to the idea that he was gone.

Mr. Waller is survived by his wife of 35 years, the former Joanne Wojciehowski, and two sons, Charles Francis Waller of Chelsea and Edward Lee Waller of Ann Arbor.

A memorial service was held July 10 at the Chelsea High School auditorium, with the Rev. Jerrold Beaumont officiating. A private burial service was conducted at Oak Grove Cemetery. Funeral arrangements were handled by Staffan-Mitchell Funeral Home.

Memorial contributions are suggested to the Chelsea Women's Athletic Fund.

Window etching can prevent auto theft

AAA Michigan, in partnership with the Michigan Auto Theft Prevention Authority, is fighting auto theft by offering free vehicle window etching at the Auto Club's Ann Arbor-Ypsilanti Branch, 2650 Carpenter Road, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday.

"Etching a vehicle's glass is a simple, effective way to help continue to cut auto theft in Michigan," said Jerry Hinton, manager of AAA Michigan's claims investigations unit.

"This is one of the most worthwhile community relations and theft-prevention programs we know. Last year nearly 6,000 cars were etched statewide during the program."

In 1998, the last full year for which figures are available, auto thefts in Michigan fell 4 percent, from 59,826 in 1997 to 57,228. Between 1986 and 1998, Michigan thefts dropped 21 percent. At the same time, thefts nationally increased 1 percent.

"While the rate fell slightly, an average 157 auto owners in Michigan each day were impacted by the crime of car theft," Hinton said. "Our etching program aims to lower that rate."

Etching is a simple process. A miniature copy of each vehicle's identification number is acid-stenciled into the windshield, side windows and rear windows. The process does not harm the window or detract from the vehicle's appearance.

Stickers also are placed on each front side window, identifying the vehicle to would-be thieves that it has been protected.

"Etching is designed to make it hard for chop-shop operators to sell the glass for use in other vehicles, and it means they must replace the identified glass before any etched vehicle can be resold illegally," Hinton said.

Vehicle etching is offered only in dry weather and at temperatures above 50 degrees. Owners interested in the free service must bring their vehicle registration, which lists the VIN number.

Along with etching, other steps motorists can take to prevent theft include:

- Lock your car and take the key every time, even at your home. Park in well-lighted areas. Place packages out of sight. Leaving portable CD players, cellular phones and other expensive items in view is inviting theft.
- Keep driver's license, vehicle registration and any other identification with your address in your wallet or purse, never in your car. Thieves use this information to find your home. Never keep your title in your vehicle.
- Install an improved anti-theft device, such as an alarm or kill-switch, which may qualify for a discount on the comprehensive portion of your auto insurance.
- Auto theft tipsters can earn rewards. Call HEAT — Help Eliminate Auto Theft — at (800) 242-HEAT. Since October 1985, the hotline has received nearly 6,200 calls, resulting in the arrest and prosecution of 2,320 car thieves and the recovery of 2,825 stolen vehicles valued at $32 million. The program has paid nearly $2.2 million to more than 1,400 tipsters.

Michigan's auto theft rate ranked eighth nationally in 1998, down from first place in 1994.

The top five counties for vehicle theft, based on 1998 figures, are: Wayne, 36,109; Genesee, 3,503; Oakland, 3,696; Macomb, 3,472; and Kent, 1,915. The record total for vehicle theft in Michigan was 78,006 in 1984.

The top 10 most stolen cars in Michigan in 1999, according to AAA Michigan records, are Oldsmobile Cutlass Ciera, Chevrolet Caprice, Ford Mustang, Buick Regal, Ford Escort, Chevrolet Monte Carlo, Ford Taurus, Pontiac Grand Am, Oldsmobile Cutlass Supreme and Cadillac Deville.
