NEWS BRIEFS

Main Street will be resurfaced Sept. 14

Provided Mother Nature cooperates, M-52 will receive a much-needed facelift between Summit Street and Old US-12 over a four-day period beginning Sept. 14.

Should it rain, the work will be rescheduled for the following week, Sept. 21-24.

Chelsea Village Manager Jack Myers said residents should consider alternate routes while the Michigan Department of Transportation resurfaces the pavement.

The state-funded project will be a four-step process.

Village sets public hearing for Sept. 12

Chelsea Village Council has set a public hearing on a special assessment district for improvements on Coliseum Drive and Old Barn Circle 7:30 p.m. Sept. 12 at the Washington Street Education Center Board Room. .

Proposed improvements include grading, paving, curb and gutter work, sidewalk work, tree removal, intersection work, landscaping, roadway signs, water mains, sanitary sewer, storms sewer, cleanup and grading.

Hatch Stamping wants exemption certificate

Chelsea Village Council has set a public hearing for a request by Hatch Stamping Company, 680 E. Industrial Drive. The company wants an exemption certificate for personal property totaling $816,822.

Council approves offer for Palmer lot

Chelsea Village Council approved an offer of $1.5 million to purchase the 2.22-acre Palmer Ford dealership lot on Main Street. The property, which has an assessed value of $1.1 million, may become the future site for a new village hall and police station.

The council has asked its attorney to review an agreement between the village and developer Rene Papo. The agreement would allow Papo to also build a post office building and lease it to the U.S. Postal Service.

The village would retain ownership of the land. After the lease is up, the building would become the property of the village.

Chelsea fair closes with crowning

■ Chelsea High School student Molly Welton wins fair queen title.

The 63rd annual Chelsea Community Fair drew to a close Saturday night and the fair board thanked Mother Nature while members breathed a collective sigh of relief.

By 11 a.m. Sunday, the livestock housing had been taken down and the barn floors washed.

Eager winners stood in line awaiting their ribbons and premium prize money for taking placement honors in the Exhibition Barn.

The rides were quiet. Carnival workers were sleepily milling around while fair board members and volunteers began the task of tearing down and cleaning the site following another successful five-day extravaganza.

Great weather blessed the event. That was, until Saturday night, when heavy rains and a tornado in Jackson, chased people from the outdoor four-wheel and two-wheel drive pulling contest. Some arrived in the Multi-Purpose building prior to the crowning of the fair queen in the Multi-Purpose Arena.

Molly Welton, a 16-year-old Chelsea High School student, was crowned the 2000 Chelsea Community Fair Queen Saturday night. She was also the winner of Monday night's talent competition, performing a Blue Grass fiddle set.

"I'm so honored to represent a community like this. It's awesome," she said, while trying to be heard over the pelting rain that soaked the fairgrounds.

Welton accepted the crown from Sarah Maynard, the 1999 queen, who bid farewell to a packed house after what she called an exciting year in her role.

Winner of the Miss Congeniality was Ann Larder, who was also the runner up in the competition. Larder performed a Latin dance number with her brother, Tony.

Welton was sponsored by Tech Unlimited and Larder was sponsored by the Chelsea High School Student Council.

Also competing for fair queen were Jenelle Vlcek, Cindy Grau and Ana Abreu.

People arrived by the thousands during the fair's run, smiles immediately crossing their faces upon entering the gates.

During the week, area residents were treated to everything

Power plant being planned

■ Texas group proposes 1,000-megawatt facility in Dexter Township.

By Shawn Lawrence
Associate Editor

Texas-based Panda Energy is considering building a $350 million gas-burning power plant in rural Dexter Township.

The plant would be built on a 100-acre parcel at the southeast corner of Madden and Quigley roads, property currently owned by Al Ruhlig and zoned agricultural.

The plant would take up about 20 acres of space on the lot and could power about 500,000 homes in southeastern Michigan.

Dexter Township Supervisor Robert Tetens said he has discussed the proposal with the company, and he is "cautiously optimistic," about the possibility of the plant locating in the township.

"It would generate a large amount of tax revenue and is going to demand very little in the way of infrastructure or additional services," Tetens said. "It's fairly obvious we need more electrical capacity in Michigan, but we haven't been confronted with anything like this before."

A public meeting has been scheduled for 7 p.m. Wednesday at the Mill Creek Middle School cafeteria/auditorium, 7305 Dexter-Ann Arbor Road.

Officials from Dexter Township, Washtenaw County, the state of Michigan, Panda Energy, the Washtenaw Development Council and the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments will be on hand for the presentation and the question-and-answer session.

Tetens said he encourages members of the community to attend the meeting.

Regional plan needs changes

■ Municipalities to adopt document as part of their master plans.

By Lisa Allmendinger
Staff Writer

In a joint meeting of the village of Chelsea, the townships of Dexter, Lima, Lyndon, and Sylvan and the Washtenaw County Metropolitan Planning Commission Monday night, it was decided that more changes were needed before the draft of the Chelsea Area Regional Plan could be presented for approval.

The two major sticking points involved the population figures that subsequently determined the commission's recommended number of manufactured housing units for the region, and how best to get cars on and off the roadways.

The group of community representatives asked Erin Perdue, a senior planner for the Washtenaw County Metropolitan Planning Commission, to give them more up-to-date figures for the projected area population.

She was also asked to provide information from traffic experts that would help them best solve the problem of providing residents safe and efficient movement on the roadway.

This regional concept, which hopes to provide better uses of land for the future, uses projected population growth figures for the area. It has been ongoing since the spring of 1996, when the Chelsea Area Planning Team was formed.

It marks a collaborative effort to "guide future events to achieve a better environment in which to live, work and play," according to the draft.

The pending agreement between the neighboring townships, which provides for a coordinated effort between the municipalities, is a first for Michigan, according to Washtenaw County Commissioner Joseph Yekulis.

The regional plan takes into account both the present and projected land uses in the five participating municipalities and is a working plan that can be used area-wide to plan "the most efficient and logical allocation of land uses," according to the document.

It takes regional development beyond individual political boundaries, the document says.

The goal for the collaborative effort is to retain the rural character of the area and create consistent zoning throughout the neighboring areas. This requires that the individual municipalities adopt this regional plan as a part of their master plans.

Dexter Township planning commission delays proposal

■ Applicants hope to have answer Sept. 26.

By Lisa Allmendinger
Staff Writer

The Dexter Township Planning Commission tabled a proposal for the construction of a gas station and convenience store at North Territorial and Dexter-Pinkney roads for the second time in two months last Tuesday.

In a marathon session that featured a standing-room-only crowd, most opposed to the approval of the application, the seven-member board set a record for its longest meeting in recent memory.

The meeting began at 7:30 p.m. and lasted well past 1 a.m.

Although given an opportunity for public comment prior to the commission's discussion, residents continually interrupted the deliberations as emotions ran high in opposition to the proposal.

At one point, a resident asked for a show of hands of all the people who did not want the gas station to be built at the site. Almost all of the 75 people in the audience raised their hands at the dismay of the applicants.

"We can't understand why they don't want this," said applicant Bill Salamey of State Oil Co. "If they don't want something like this, they should have changed the zoning."

The vote was unanimous to table the conditional-use application of Bill and Fady Salamey pending additional information from an environmental consultant.

The commissioners also asked for a legal review of two motions — one for and one against — of the conditional-use permit.

The application has been in front of them for more than two years.

"We are forwarding the two motions to our attorney for review for legal defensibility," said Planning Chairman John Gillespie.

Although disappointed by the delay, Bill Salamey said he'd be back.

The commission is expected to vote on the request Sept. 26.

The Salameys own a gas station on S. State Street in Ann Arbor. The Dexter Township site is the first they have tried to build from the ground up.

A scaled-back version of the original application calls for a convenience store and gas station on five acres of 12-acre site.

Ladies Day big draw at Chelsea fair

Music, magic, and massage among the many attractions at the Sunrise Circus.

By Sheila Pursglove
Staff Writer

More than 450 women from all over southeast Michigan — and even as far away as Arizona, Texas, Florida, Hawaii and Germany — attended Ladies' Day at the Chelsea Fair Thursday.

A tented canopy, balloons, circus wagons and huge wooden cutouts of lions, elephants, seals and dancing bears, transformed the Multi- Purpose Arena into the Sunrise Circus.

Ringmasters Kathy Powers and Marlene Larder presided over events accompanied by their able assistants: palm reader Carol Cammet; clown Sue Rodgers; peanut vendor Tracie Stoffer; wild lion Anita Spears; lion tamer Susan McCalla; and strongman Jody McVay.

Ginger Bergey kicked off the morning's entertainment with a stirring rendition of "The Lion Sleeps Tonight." Later in the morning, she sang "One Voice." Bergey and her husband, Walt, provided the sound system.

Magician Phil Daws Lazar of Ann Arbor, a self-described teacher, minimalist juggler, singer and dancer, set out to prove, in an entertaining and humorous fashion, which is the superior sex, male or female.

Preschool and pre-teen gymnasts from Gym America in Ann Arbor were given a standing ovation for their dazzling display of cartwheels and back flips.

Answering a challenge from Kathy Powers, committee member Tracie Stoffer's own attempts at a cartwheel were a little less dazzling, but nonetheless received enthusiastic cheers from the crowd.

A total of 75 women sought out Kevin Costello's soothing touch, as the owner of Sanctuary Massage eased muscles weary from spending the morning sitting on bleachers and chairs, or from a hectic week at the fair.

Group wants new sport added to athletic program

■ Hockey team wants to be a part of school program.

By Sheila Pursglove
Staff Writer

For school board trustee, Janet Roberts, Monday night's meeting gave her a sense of déjà vu.

The subject was school sports, specifically whether the hockey league should come under the umbrella of the school athletic program.

"A few years ago, it was soccer under discussion, now a highly successful program," said Roberts, who sees the hockey question as a challenge, but not one that is insurmountable.

"We need to be proactive, to get kids excited about the school system and extra curricular activities, and be creative in going to community for assistance," she said.

The board expressed concerns over equity, supervisory and administrative responsibilities, liability, out-of-pocket expenses for parents, and long term support from the hockey club and ice rink facility.

The board also discussed whether the school district should have a program that has a different relationship with the school than other sports programs.

Safety was another issue. Not only has the number of participants in sports increased, but also the number of activities, leading to a need for more coaches and trainers, which puts a strain on the budget.

"Four percent of the school budget is spent on athletic activities," said Superintendent Ed Richardson.

"Athletes learn a lot about life and learning from participating in sport."

"However, we don't have a clear policy on how to define and deal with new programs. In increasing sports or coaching positions, we have to consider the budget.

"This is a good problem in that we're delighted students are so interested in sports," he said. "However, we run into the problem of students not having the opportunity to participate in a sport, or rosters that are so large that many kids spend more time on the bench."

Richardson pointed out that allowing a hockey program may create problems such as limits or conflicts on fund-raising, and it could impact other sports.

"We already need to look at increasing sports with traditional female participation, such as MHSA competitive cheer as opposed to sideline cheer," he said.

"We also want to consider other sports that have been waiting in the wings to meet student needs, such as middle school cross country and basketball, volleyball, junior tennis, freshman soccer and girls' soccer."

"We're also looking at middle school sports, such as do we add a fifth quarter in football, or have A and B teams," he said.

Treasurer Jane Diesing feels the dam is ready to burst.

"Most people feel participation in extra curricular activity is good. I feel we need to figure out a way to make the budget more fluid so we can respond faster," she said.

The school budget can be amended in October if additional sports are included.

Trustee Conrad Knutsen saw this as an opportunity to look at how all the athletic programs were funded.

"We need to have a policy that covers all sports," he said.

Trustee Sandra Merkel agreed the hockey program was a wonderful opportunity, with a new facility about to be built nearby.

"We need to be very clear on expectations, look at new, creative ways in how to fund sports, and engage the community, asking for different ways in which they might help us," she said.

School board President Scott Broshar wants the schools to provide programs for kids not currently involved in sports.

"We must have whatever it takes to have all the kids involved, not just the two- and three-sport athlete," he says.

Trustee Susan Moore felt that since the community took time to support a rink, it would support a school hockey program.

Athletic Director Wayne Welton said that the hockey league has gone through the required rules and regulations, put conditions in place, and has parental support.

"This group, which is willing to fully fund this program themselves, has conformed to the expectations and rules of both the school and state, and hockey coach Don Wright has met with me bi-weekly," he said.

"The new rink, when built, is willing to give the team first shot at ice time," Welton said.

"Most districts do not fully fund hockey programs. If we are discussing a program that operates differently from other sports, there are precedents in 143 other school districts in Michigan."

Don Wright, who has coached the Chelsea Hockey Club for two years, also spoke at the meeting. He hopes to have a proposal before the board at its next meeting on Sept. 11.

The club is particularly anxious to play in the Michigan High School Athletic tournament, which deadlines in early February. There will be a meeting in September for schools new to ice hockey.

Richardson will prepare a recommendation by the next board meeting.

Developer René Papo of Magellan Properties gave a short presentation on the development being built near Cavanaugh and Sibley roads in Sylvan Township. The project includes both residential and commercial properties.

Magellan, which has a 20-year development plan for the property, is offering the school board 15 acres as a possible site for an elementary school.

While board members said they appreciated the developer's offer, there were reservations as to whether the district's needs another school; whether there would be enough children in the proposed development to support a school; what the traffic impact might be; and whether the acreage would be better utilized as a parkland, soccer fields or a play area.

Richardson recommended an educational assessment by architects.

I other business, substitute teachers, who did not get an increase in the 1999-2000 year, will be receiving an increase in pay from $67 to $72 per day, bringing their pay comparable with other schools in the Washtenaw Intermediate School District.

Adult education and community education pay scales will be set at 2.25 percent above last year's scales.

Another item meeting with total approval was the resolution to lease computers for the development of an innovative wireless computer lab for the alternative high school program.

The board also voted to continue the current policy of not being part of Schools of Choice program, with certain exceptions, such as students who need to finish out their school year, or families who are in the process of moving into the Chelsea School District.

Also, Richardson has received his first request in his seven years as Chelsea Superintendent for students to be involved in a Sunday event. High school band, orchestra and choir members are invited to perform with Bavarian musicians on Oct. 29 as part of the Bavarian-Washtenaw County Cultural Arts Exchange program Oct. 14-29.

While Richardson pointed out the school district is very protective of keeping weekends free for students, this is a one-time opportunity. Students will be allowed to participate, but attendance is not mandatory.

In other business, the sports program will be going high tech, with the donation from Chelsea Athletic Boosters of a video editing system, valued at $10,000. The system will allow coaches and programs to provide highlight tapes, breakdown game films, create instructional tape, and make college promotional film for athletes.

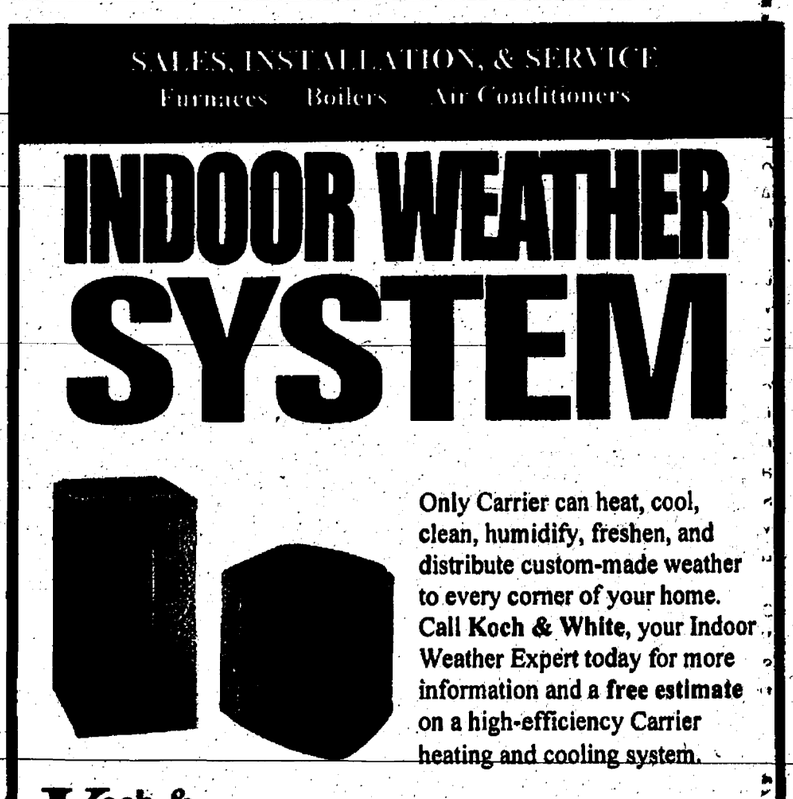

Dave Polly, seventh-grade teacher at Beach Middle School, provided a note of levity when he mentioned a student whose goal is to win the Nobel prize.

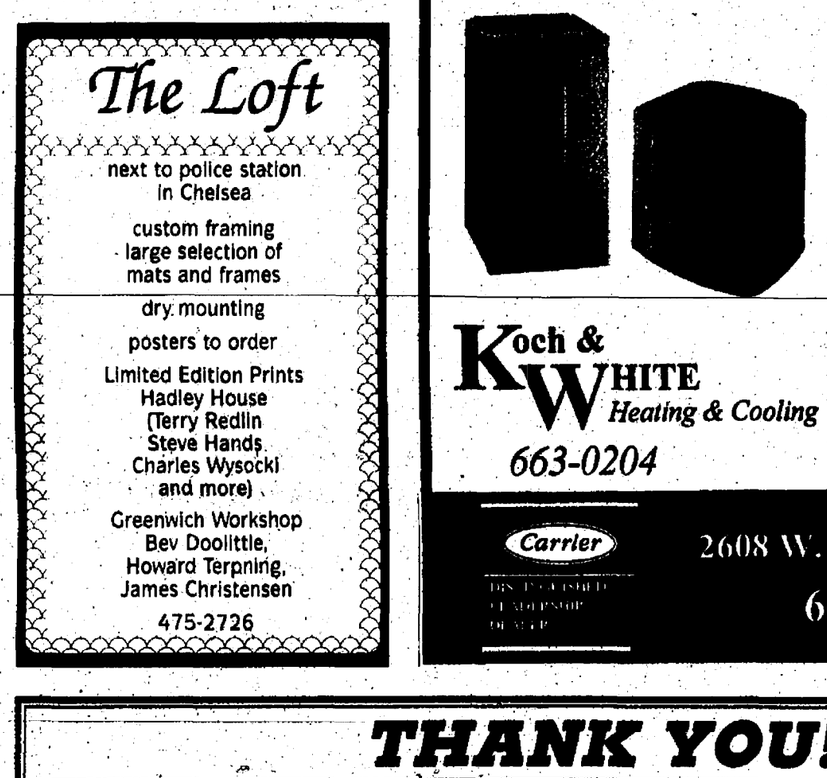

Polly then asked the board to join Ypsilanti, Milan and Saline in opposing Proposal 1, which deals with school vouchers.

FARM FACT

The Food and Drug Administration proposed in mid-November that the amount of trans fats in food be listed in Nutrition Facts panel on food labels. But what are trans fats? They're fatty acids that appear in "partially hydrogenated" fats — often used in baked goods, fried foods and some margarine. Partially hydrogenated fats start out as vegetable oil, or unsturated fats, and are processed to make them more stable and more solid at room temperature. This process actually adds hydrogen to the oil; that's what "hydrogenated" means. And "saturated" means the fatty acid molecule is saturated with as much hydrogen as the molecule can hold. All this makes trans fatty acid act more like saturated fats in the body. Because of this, if the FDA's proposal is adopted, you can expect to see the "saturated fat" amount listed on the food label increase for foods that contain more than a half-gram of trans fat per serving. The trans fats would be added to the actual staurated fat level, and an asterisk would refer label-readers to a notation that the amount of saturated fat listed includes so many grams of trans fat.

Beach Middle School welcomes new assistant principal

■ Andrew Ingall brings technology skills to his position.

By Sheila Pursglove
Staff Writer

Andrew Ingall, the new assistant principal at Beach Middle School, not only brings high tech skills to his new position, but he even used them to find it.

Ingall found the job on an Internet posting of the Michigan Assocation of Secondary School Principals Web site.

Ingall, who will work with Principal Bill Westcott, replaces Julie Deppner, who has filled in since January when Michael Bareis stepped down to teach at South Meadows Elementary School.

Ingall has a bachelor's degree in secondary education from Western Michigan University and a master's degree in educational leadership, which he earned from WMU in June.

His duties in Chelsea will include student management and discipline, lunchroom and hall duties and organizing Sixth Grade Camp at YMCA Storer Camp near Brooklyn.

He also will be supervising after-school and extra curricular activities, such as sports and concerts and overseeing the at-risk students to get them headed back on the right track.

> "It's exciting to be able to have an impact on their lives, find out what interests them and what issues they have."
> —Andrew Ingall
> Beach Assistant Principal

"In many ways, an assistant principal serves in the role of dean of students," he said. "Kids in middle school are at a really exciting time in their lives, with so many changes. I believe it takes a special kind of teacher to help the kids in so many ways: academically, socially and emotionally.

"It's exciting to be able to have an impact on their lives, find out what interests them and what issues they have."

While Ingall originally knew little more about Chelsea than where to find it on the map, he has been enjoying exploring the community and hopes to move here before too long.

For now, the 30-year-old Grand Ledge native is commuting from the south side of Lansing, where he lives with his wife, Beth, and three children, 8-year-old Abby, 3-year-old Joey and 1-year-old Ben.

"I'm really excited about this opportunity to contribute to a terrific school system," he said. "I consider myself very lucky to be starting my administrative career in Chelsea, with its tradition of terrific schools and a great feeling of community and family."

Ingall started in college as a math major at Michigan State University. But with no solid career direction, he considered various avenues, including engineering.

A summer spent as a camp counselor in 1991 pointed him in the direction of his future career.

"I was director of Christian education, working with kids of all ages, and felt this was how I wanted to spend my life, so I went on to pursue a degree in this field," he said.

Ingall was also encouraged by his father, an administrator at Jackson Community College, where Ingall himself spent a couple of years. He was also encouraged by his older sister, Polly. Both told him he had the skill and dedication to be a terrific teacher.

Ingall's interest in school administration came about while serving on the school improvement team in Okeomos, where he taught middle-school math for two years. Before leaving for Chelsea, Ingall taught math for three years at Okemos High School.

"I'm very excited to have Andrew as the assistant principal of Beach Middle School," Wescott said. "I feel he is going to be a strong asset to our already strong school."

Grand Ledge native Andrew Ingall is the new assistant principal of Beach Middle School.

Chelsea educators attend tech academy

Deb Bentley, Bruce Boughner, Genie Knudstrup and Ron Mead recently attended one of four Ameritech Technology Academy workshops held throughout the state.

The Chelsea High School team attended the two-day workshop session in Roscommon.

During their time at the academy, the Chelsea educators learned how to better integrate technology into the classroom and across the curriculum. Lab sessions and team activities were used to provide practical applications.

A hands-on showcase demonstrated the latest technology integration tools, products and services and rounded out the first day.

The second day included information on what makes successful professional development and how to bring about change. Lab sessions and team activities served to make the information practical.

"This team went through some long and rigorous training," said Ric Wiltse, executive director of the Michigan Association for Computer-related technology Users in Learning. "We're proud of them and their willingness to take their personal time to learn more about using technology in their classrooms.

"We're also pleased that they will now be able to help others to use technology more effectively," he said.

Following the summer session, the Chelsea High School team will host an onsite visit by an academy trainer and have access to online mentoring and a clearinghouse of best practices related to integrating technology into the classroom.

"Ameritech is committed to the communities in which we operate," said Renate Debler, Ameritech External Affairs manager. "We're proud to support an initiative that brings together technology and education to enhance the quality of life for children and families throughout the state of Michigan."

The academy program was launched by a two-year, $2 million grant from the Ameritech Foundation to a unique partnership of educational organizations and governmental leaders. Ameritech Foundation is the philanthropic arm of Ameritech and a part of the SBC Foundation.

Student wins speaker award

Joe Zynda, a junior at Chelsea High School this fall, graduated from the Junior Statesmen Foundation Summer School Program at Northwest University on July 21.

He was one of 52 outstanding 11th- and 12th-grade students with particular interest in American government and speech communication, selected from the continental United States and five U.S. territories to attend.

The National High School Institute sponsors the program.

Zynda graduated with a 4.0 grade point average after completing what would be considered two college-level condensed courses in American government and speech in the intense four-week program.

Zynda was chosen to speak at the commencement ceremony by university faculty and peers, and was honored with the "Best Speaker Award" for the Congressional Workshop.

FROM PARTIAL TO FIXED

Suppose you've been wearing a partial denture for several years and find it doesn't fit as well as it once did. This happens in normal use even if you only remove the partial to clean it. You may also prefer to have an appliance in your mouth that would be less trouble and more efficient than a partial denture. If that's your case, you should ask your dentist about the non-removable fixed bridge.

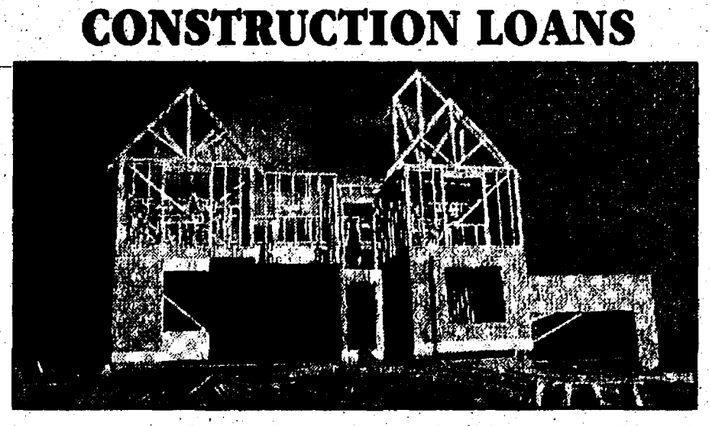

A fixed bridge is permanently cemented into place and helps complement the efficiency of your natural teeth in chewing food. But you must have enough natural teeth left to act as anchor teeth. In a three-unit fixed bridge, for example, the artificial tooth (or pontic) is firmly cemented to the natural teeth on either side by means of crowns. That is how the bridge is secured in place. The anchor teeth serve as abutments, similar to the engineering principle used in the construction of a bridge over a river. Again, sound natural teeth must be there to make the fixed bridge possible. Ask your dentist about the advantages as well as the feasibility of a fixed bridge for you.

Former Chelsea resident wins prize for poetry

International Poet of Merit honored at symposium in D.C.

By Sheila Pursglove
Staff Writer

Drinda West Osborne, a 1965 Chelsea High School graduate, was formally inducted as an International Poet of Merit and an honored member of the International Society of Poets, at the 10th anniversary of the International Society of Poets Convention and Symposium.

She received the honor Aug. 18 at the U.S. Capitol in Washington, D.C.

More than 3,000 people attended the single largest gathering of poets in the world, with representatives from 70 countries.

Osborne, who read her poetry to the audience, received two awards from presenter Montel Williams.

She took home the International Poet of Merit award bronze medallion and a commemorative award plaque.

Born in Ann Arbor, Osborne grew up in Chelsea with her four sisters and three brothers, all Chelsea graduates. She was active in Girl Scouts, at the Chelsea Fair, at St. Mary's Catholic Church, and won a plaque for public speaking while in high school.

Her brother, David, lives in Dexter, and her mother, Vivian West, lives in Chelsea. West attended the ceremony with her daughter.

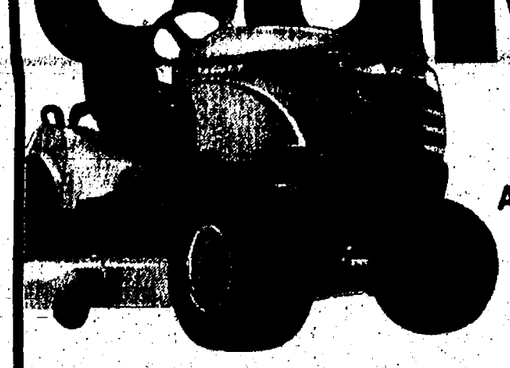

Osborne currently lives in Whitmore Lake, and works as a metal model maker for General Motors.

Her poetry writing came about almost by accident, when she offered to write a poem to honor a GM retiree.

"I felt I always had the ability to write, but never had the motivation. However, I wrote the poem, and it went over so well that I've since been writing them for many people, personalizing them in each instance."

The poem, called Retirement, has since been published in a book, "From the Mountain Top," on an audiocassette entitled "The Sounds of Poetry," and in cyberspace on the International Library of Poets Web site at www.Poetry.com.

portion. We might sell it. We don't know," Bill Salamey said about the remaining land.

Both commissioners and area residents are worried about the environmental impact the establishment might have on the area.

The commission hired an independent consultant, J and L Consulting of Ann Arbor, to review the environmental impact and technology proposed by the applicants.

The commission received the report back the day before the meeting and forwarded a copy to the applicant.

Bill Salamey also hired an environmental consultant, Strata Environmental Services Inc., to conduct third-party review of the potential impact on the area.

Among the concerns of township residents were the possibility of contamination of the ground and surface water, as well as other soil and environmental concerns, including light pollution.

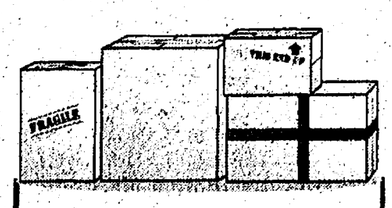

The possibility of increased trash and traffic in the surrounding area and a decrease in property values were included in their comments to the commissioners.

"We have to look at the ordinance and point to something specific," said Commissioner Paul Ledwidge.

Commissioners can add conditions to the application. But if they turn it down and the applicants take the proposal to court and a judge finds that the township is being unreasonable, the judge has the authority to grant the permit outright without any conditions, commissioners said.

"We are in a better position to add conditions," Ledwidge said.

The land, which is currently home to a cornfield, is zoned commercial. The township ordinance allows the 12-acre tract to be used for commercial purposes. The commission has the ability to attach certain conditions.

dates, Ana Abreau, Molly Welton, Cindy Grau, Jenelle Vlcek, and Ann Larder, put on a fashion show with their mothers, parading in a selection of fall outfits provided by Vogel's and Foster's. Laurie Gravelyn was the master of ceremonies.

The girls then performed a dance routine.

Circus wagons groaned under the weight of an array of door prizes, including cash, jewelry, cosmetics, ornaments, birdseed and food items.

Throughout the morning, Powers and Larder, drew the names of lucky winners.

In an emotional moment, Anita Spears, choking back tears, donated a quilt as a door prize, in honor of her late father, Clyde Martin, who started the sale of steer tickets in the 1950s.

"I love the Chelsea Fair, like this quilt it will go on forever. Please pass this quilt onto the next generation," she said.

Mary Williams of Chelsea was the lucky winner.

Larie Lawson of Milan, won the grand prize: four days and three nights at the Bellagio hotel, resort and casino in Las Vegas, and two tickets to the famous Cirque du Soleil.

Cindy Lesser of Chelsea won second prize, which was two Amtrak tickets to Toronto, with accommodation at the Sheraton Center Hotel, and tickets to a performance of "The Lion King."

Melody Bristle and Luann Heller presented the Junior Homemaker award to Cindy Grau and runner up Margaux Forsch.

There were no entries for the adult homemaker award.

"Next year we'd love to see more participation of all ages," said Heller, the superintendent of canning and foods.

Grau entered canning, horticulture, cooking, hobbies and sewing. She sewed the long taffeta skirt and velvet top she then wore in the fair queen contest. In hobbies, she entered a wreath, a floral arrangement and a snowman candle.

Forsch had entries in baking, floral arrangements, hobbies, including pencil drawing, jewelry, mosaic and ceramic tile, and needlework, in which she made a soft monkey doll and a felted pincushion.

In a brief serious interlude, Marlene Larder, swapping her ringmaster persona for that of her regular job as a registered nurse, urged the assembled women to get an annual mammogram and perform monthly breast exams, in an effort to lower the rate of breast cancer.

Larder and Powers have organized six Ladies Day events at the Chelsea Fair.

"We'd like to thank all the ladies who came for the morning, and the contributors and donors, without whose generous support this would not have been possible," Larder said.

Someone to watch over mom

"I told my mom she didn't need to look any further than The Meadows at Silver Maples—I could live here! Some time ago, I got a call from my mom's neighbor, saying an ambulance had taken her to the hospital, when she woke up one day on the floor. That's when my brothers and I decided that mom needed more attention and better nutrition. My first impression of The Meadows was first class. But I told my mom that if it wasn't a match, she didn't need to stay here. Well, it was a match! She's made lots of new friends, and the well-balanced meals and special care helped her health improve. Most of all, she is relieved that her sons know there is someone else to watch over her."

from bucking bulls to swine showmanship and carnival rides to demolition derbies.

Goats, swine, cows, rabbits, chickens and sheep were awarded blue, red, yellow and white ribbons.

Flowers, quilts, vegetables, cakes, photographs, paintings, crafts and sewn garments all competed for premium money and best in show honors.

On Saturday, under sunny skies and near 80-degree temperatures, people staked out their curbside real estate claims with chairs and blankets along Main and Old US-12 an hour before the parade.

The Knights of Columbus did a brisk business selling barbecued chicken plates for $7 a pop.

As the parade time drew near, a human fence appeared along the approximately two-mile parade route.

No one was disappointed. Candy flew through the air from fire truck after fire truck, old car after old car, from float after float. Even Moses was throwing candy from the Mount Hope Bible Church float.

The biggest parade in Washtenaw County began with police officers on motorcycles, red and blue lights flashing and sirens wailing, performing choreographed figure-eight movements.

In between, there were color guards from the VFW and American Legion, and Vietnam veterans marching side by side.

Soccer and football teams, cheerleaders, horseback riders, Cub Scouts and Brownies all waved as the crowd cheered, calling many by name.

High-stepping marching bands, 4-H clubs, service organizations and high school clubs brought on clapping. Even local businesses got into the act, sponsoring floats filled with bags of key chains and candy that liberally flew through the air toward the crowd.

Tractors, ATVs, and several old horses traveled the route, with citizens young and old.

Politicians waved and shook hands surrounded during their parade appearance by colorful red, white and blue signs announcing who they were.

In short, there was something for everyone.

Chelsea Helpline provides counseling

Over the past 10 years, the Chelsea Helpline has provided a year-round crisis phone number to the Chelsea area, 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

The Chelsea Helpline, which is a Chelsea United Way member agency, was started over a decade ago in response to a rash of deaths of young people either from accidents or self-inflicted injuries.

Community leaders came together to try to address the problem and the resulting organization, Chelsea Helpline, was born.

A local phone number was established to give anyone in the community who was experiencing a crisis a place to call to receive help, regardless of who they were, the type of problem they were facing or the time of day.

The Helpline slogan, "No Matter who you are, someone does care," expresses the philosophy behind the Helpline.

Though originally started in response to teen needs, it soon became apparent that all age groups and all segments of the population needed the service.

The new logo designed, by three Chelsea High School art students several years ago, depicts the theme.

Calls to the phone number are forwarded to the SOS Community Crisis Center in Ypsilanti, where trained volunteers answer the phone, listen and provide community resources to the caller.

SOS has been providing this type of service to the Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti area for more than 30 years.

One of the important features of the service is that all calls are totally anonymous. The SOS volunteer doesn't know where the call is coming from, unless the caller tells the SOS volunteer.

Each month, the Helpline phone receives between 30 and 40 calls. The highest number of calls in one month has been 58. The longest call was 101 minutes long.

This information is taken from the phone bill, which records the time of day a call is made and the length of each call. No other information about the call is known.

The Helpline receives annual support from Chelsea United Way, the Chelsea Kiwanis Club, with additional support from the American Legion post in Chelsea.

This year, the Helpline received additional funding from a special fund set up by the Young family.

The Helpline is governed by a board of directors composed of the Chelsea High School principal, police chief, the director of the senior citizens center, a representative from the Chelsea Retirement Community, the pastor of the First Congregational Church, a counselor, a representative of SOS and a retired schoolteacher.

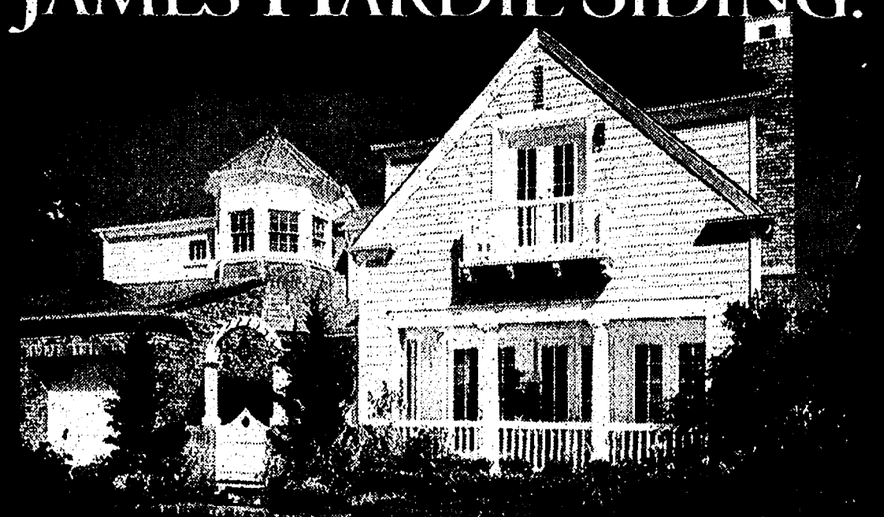

The next time you see the Helpline logo in the newspaper, on posters throughout the community or on public access Channel 22, remember what it stands for. And don't hesitate to call 475-0111 if you need help.

POWER

The process for permitting nd constructing a new power lant can take between two and hree years. Tetens said that nvironmental concerns will e addressed over the first 12 onths, during the permitting rocess.

Air and water emissions are egulated by the county and the tate, and information on the nvironmental impact will be ade available to the public hroughout the permitting rocess if Panda goes ahead ith the plan.

Panda spokeswoman Peggy riegel said that the plant ould burn natural gas to generate the electricity.

Striegel said that most of the power plants in Michigan burn coal to generate electricity. She said burning natural gas creates less pollution than burning coal.

"The Environmental Protection Agency has put very tight restrictions on these plants," she said. "They are the most modern, cleanest and safest way to make electricity today."

Striegel said Panda selected the Dexter Township location for several reasons, including its close proximity to the Detroit Edison substation, the accessibility to a natural gas pipeline, and the availability of the large quantities of water that are needed to operate the plant.

A plant of this size would require 6 to 8 million gallons of water per day, and the water would be piped in from Ann Arbor and then back out again. Striegel said that piping the water would mean very little impact on the water quality or levels in Dexter Township.

The plant would emit some hydrocarbon pollutants. Tetens said that the plant constructs a system to recapture the majority of the emissions and reuse them, reducing the level of pollution generated by the facility.

The noise generated by the plant has been estimated at about 40 decibels at the property line, the equivalent of a household refrigerator. Smokestacks would stand 140-feet high, but would mostly emit only evaporated water.

Panda Energy officials estimated that the plant would bring about $3 million annually to the area in tax revenues, to be shared by the state, the county, the schools and the township.

Tetens said that if the plant is constructed, it would nearly double the taxable value of the township. Currently, the township collects about $165,000 in taxes annually.

About 80 acres of property would be dedicated for preservation.

Striegel said that Panda will strongly consider whether the community is receptive to the plan in its decision to pursue the project. She said that people in other communities have benefited from having a power plant in their community, and she said Panda is committed to being a good neighbor.

But she added, "You don't necessarily go (abandon the project) unless it's really, seriously unanimous," she said. "Much of the (opposition to power plants) is just a lack of comprehension. As soon as you say '1,000 megawatt power plant,' a negative picture comes to people's minds. It's something that takes a little education to overcome and we'll have as many community meetings as it takes."

Tetens said that the township would make a determination on the project if and when the proper plans and documents are submitted. He said that he doubts Panda would sue the township if the plan is submitted and denied because other communities would likely be receptive to having the plant in their boundaries.

Striegel said that Panda Energy became interested in locating a power plant in Michigan after Gov. John Engler released a report stating that energy reserves in Michigan were below the normally recommended reserves.

Engler's report states that state energy reserves are less than 5 percent above normal use. The usual recommended reserve is 15 percent.

Panda Energy is also researching building a power plant in Talmedge Township, near Grand Rapids. But Striegel said that electrical market does not overlap with this area, so that project wouldn't effect whether the Dexter Township project is pursued.

Panda currently operates 11 power plants across the country.

PLAN

Chelsea area has been a concept that's been kicking around since the spring of 1996.

The Chelsea Area Regional Plan, a document prepared by the Washtenaw County Metropolitan Planning Commission with the input of residents and officials from the five communities, has been in the planning stages since January 1999.

It will undergo more changes before it's presented to the planning team for possible approval next month.

The CAPT team will meet at 7 p.m. Sept. 25 in Chelsea at the Washington Street Educational Center.

The history of the regional plan takes into account that the Chelsea area population has increased 94 percent since 1960, and is expected to increase another 23 percent by 2020, according to figures provided by Yekulis.

Household size is decreasing, while the number of households is increasing, according to the same document.

In the 1990s, almost 200 building permits were issued in each of the five Chelsea area communities, the document says.

Armed with these figures, the CAPT group has met monthly since 1996 and explored the issues of growth and development, including new schools.

They've discussed roads and utilities, including the M-52 bypass, financial opportunities in the form of state grants, zoning as it pertains to general development plans and annexations and public service issues.

It all comes down to a balancing act on how best to deal with growth issues in an area that has parkland, wetlands and other environmental areas, as well as agricultural, rural, urban and lake residential, manufactured housing, general, local and light industrial zoning.

"This plan provides the basis upon which local unit master plans can be developed, and in turn, zoning and land use decisions can be made," the plan's introduction says.

The draft and maps were developed between June 1999 and June 2000, and they still need some tweaking, officials said.

The next step is the presentation of a final draft and approval by the CAPT members. Once it has jumped that hurdle, the plan will be presented to the local governments. Pending approval there, it will be implemented in local plans and ordinances next year.

Local 4-H horse riders win awards

Several local youngsters won special honors in the Washtenaw County 4-H Youth Show recently.

Erin Ryder, a 16-year-old member of the Stampeders 4-H club, has been involved in the program for six years. This year, while competing with her new horse, Ellie, she won the 15-19 Saddle Seat Fitting and Showing Championship, the 10-19 Saddle Seat Bareback, and the 16-19 Hunt Seat Pleasure Championship.

Ryder was also named Reserve Champion in the 10-19 Saddle Seat Pleasure.

Ashley Bartlett, a nine-year veteran of 4-H, is a member of the Tens 'N' Teens 4-H Club. Bartlett, 16, and her horse, Winston, earned Reserve Champion in the Dressage Equitation Championship and received Honorable Mentions in the Suitability for Dressage Championship and the 16-19 Hunt Seat Pleasure Championship.

Deanna Hunt, 18, is a member of Leaders of the Pack, and has been involved in 4-H for two years. She and her horse, Samantha, were named Reserve Champion in the 16-19 Hunt Seat Equitation.

Corey Block, a member of the Trillium Trail 4-H Club, was competing at her first fair. Block, 10, and her horse, Bert, won the 10-12 Stock Seat Fitting and Showing Championship.

Anna Mueller, a 4-H member for two years, is a member of the Seneca Spurs 4-H Club. While competing with her horse, Honey, 11-year-old Mueller received an Honorable Mention in the 10-12 Hunt Seat Equitation Championship.

Beach school basketball tryouts slated for girls

Practice and tryouts for all seventh-grade girls who want to play on the Beach Middle School girls' basketball team will begin Tuesday after school.

Practice will be from 3 to 5 p.m. Players should have basketball shoes and practice clothes.

A current athletic physical, given after May, must be on file or brought to practice the first night.

If a student had the school physical given in June for $5, it is on file and the student is set to play middle school sports this year. All others need to make sure they bring a physical with them to the first practice.

The seventh-grade girls' basketball team will play an 11-game schedule competing against the other middle schools in the newly aligned Southeastern Conference.

Games are scheduled for Monday and Wednesday with the seventh-grade team playing at 4 p.m.

The season opens Sept. 18 with a game at Adrian Drager. All home games will be played at the Washington Street Education Center gymnasium.

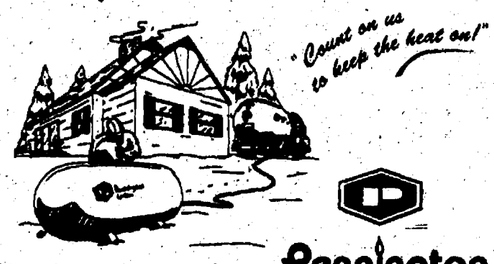

Practice or games will be held each school day until the season concludes Oct. 25, with the final game.

Parents or students with questions or concerns are encouraged to talk to the coach any day after practice. Any parents with questions before the first practice may contact coach Ann Schaffer at 424-0850.

Retirement home to hold grand opening

Chelsea's reputation as a center of senior housing was strengthened this summer with the opening of The Pines, a senior apartment community located at 325 Wilkinson St.

The grand opening of the apartment complex will be held from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. today.

The Pines, nestled in a quiet residential neighborhood, is a three-story building surrounded by mature trees and is within walking distance of downtown Chelsea, banks, and physician's offices.

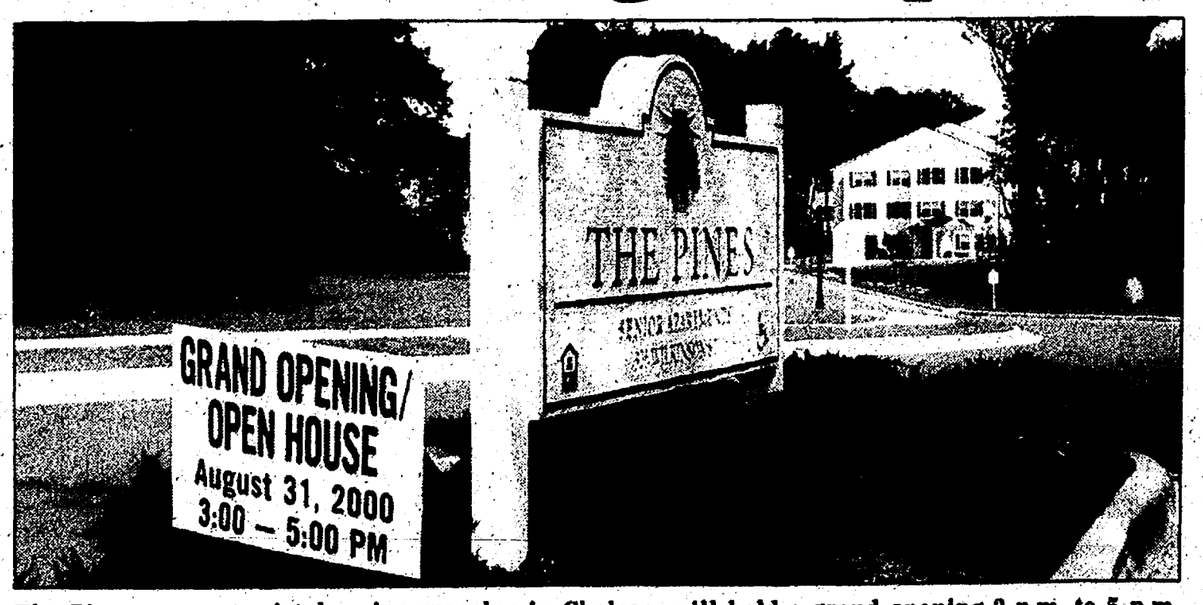

"The public is invited to attend the grand opening and tour the apartments," said Shirley Mitchell, manager of The Pines.

The Pines contains 68 one-bedroom apartments and 30 two-bedroom apartments for adults age 55 and older.

"There is no typical Pines resident," Mitchell said.

She said some are snowbirds from Florida who have returned to Michigan to be closer to their families while others are in their 50s and are still working in the Chelsea area.

Twenty apartments have been rented and rentals are pending on 20 additional apartments.

The Pines, a new senior housing complex in Chelsea, will hold a grand opening 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. today.

The Pines is sponsored by United Methodist Retirement Communities and Smith Equities of Mt. Pleasant.

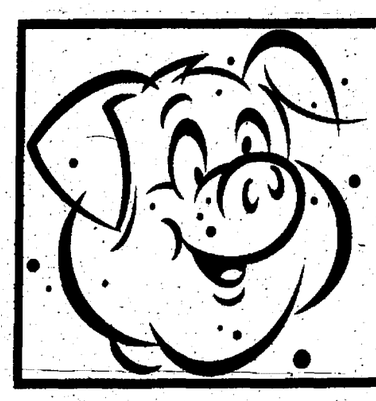

Bill Healy, president and CEO of United Methodist Retirement Communities believes The Pines will offer a new alternative to seniors interested in living in the Chelsea area.

United Methodist Retirement Communities has earned a national reputation as a leader in senior housing and for 95 years has had a presence in Chelsea.

Program encourages environmental stewardship

Michigan Department of Agriculture Director Dan Wyant and LPGA professional golfers Michelle McGann and Donna Andrews recently praised Michigan's program to encourage environmental stewardship and enhance wildlife habitat at the state's many public and private golf courses.

The three were joined by Michigan State University Michigan Agriculture Experiment Station Director Ian Gray, Michigan Department of Environmental Quality Environmental Assistance Division Chief Paul Zugger and Michigan Turfgrass Foundation Board Member Gordon LaFontaine at the LPGA Oldsmobile Classic ProAm Tournament at Walnut Hills Country Club in East Lansing.

The Michigan Turfgrass Environmental Stewardship Program is a voluntary self-assessment program through which golf property managers can evaluate and improve their level of environmental protection.

Golf courses can also partner with state and local initiatives designed to enhance the environment, prevent pollution and protect natural resources.

"MDA is proud to be a partner in this unique, first-in-the-nation effort to help golf course superintendents incorporate sound environmental practices into their golf course maintenance programs," Wyant said. "We are equally proud to have support for the program from golf professionals of such caliber as Michelle McGann and Donna Andrews."

Of the 153 Michigan golf courses participating in the program, 20, including Walnut Hills Country Club, have already earned certification.

Improvements continue as the program grows, including the addition of new golf course construction guidelines, along with recent efforts to educate golfers on the ways environmental stewardship efforts on golf courses benefit them and the environment.

"As a professional golfer who has had the opportunity to play some of the most beautiful courses all over the world, I appreciate Michigan's efforts to preserve the natural habitats, and add to the quality of play at Michigan golf courses," McGann said.

"Experiencing the quiet beauty of the golf courses I play means as much to me as the technical difficulty of each hole."

The program also consolidates several environmental and wildlife initiatives into one model specifically developed for golf courses, and serves as a model for other states.

The program is jointly supported by MDA's Groundwater Stewardship Program, MDEQ, MSU, the Golf Association of Michigan and the Michigan Turfgrass Foundation.

The program partners began working with Michigan's prestigious golf community in 1996 to develop the program and self-assessment modules.

Gray hailed the program as a progressive and cooperative effort among MSU, which is a major turf research institution, the state agencies and a board of public and private golf course operators.

LaFontaine commended the state's golf course industry for its efforts to protect and improve water and other natural resources and enhance the environment.

Michigan leads the nation in the number of public golf courses and ranks third, behind only the warm-weather states of Florida and California, in the total number of golf courses.

Michigan's estimated 1.2 million golfers, combined with tourists from other states and countries, make the state's golf course industry worth $941 million annually.

County commissioner elected to MAC

County Commissioner Joseph J. Yekulis Jr. of Chelsea was elected to the position of first vice president of the Michigan Association of Counties at the MAC Summer Conference in Sault Saint Marie Aug. 22.

Following his election to a second three-year term as an at-large director representing all five regions of the state on Aug. 21, Yekulis was chosen to his leadership post by a vote of his peers on the 15-member MAC Board of Directors.

Wayne County Commission Chairman Ricardo Soloman was elected president of the association, and Director Larry Inman from Grand Traverse County was elected as second vice president.

Traditionally the first vice president moves up to take the president's position in the following year. So, Yekulis should become the president of MAC next August.

Elected to his first term as an at-large director of MAC in August 1997, Yekulis has been actively involved in many statewide issues effecting county government.

Removing the cap from the state's Child Care Fund, developing a fair formula for the state's County Jail Reimbursement Fund, state court reform and centralized collections for the state's Friends of the Court, are all issues that Yekulis has been involved in behind the scenes.

He has served on MAC's Judiciary and Environmental Affairs committees, and has been a member of the National Association of Counties Judiciary and Public Safety Committee for the past five years.

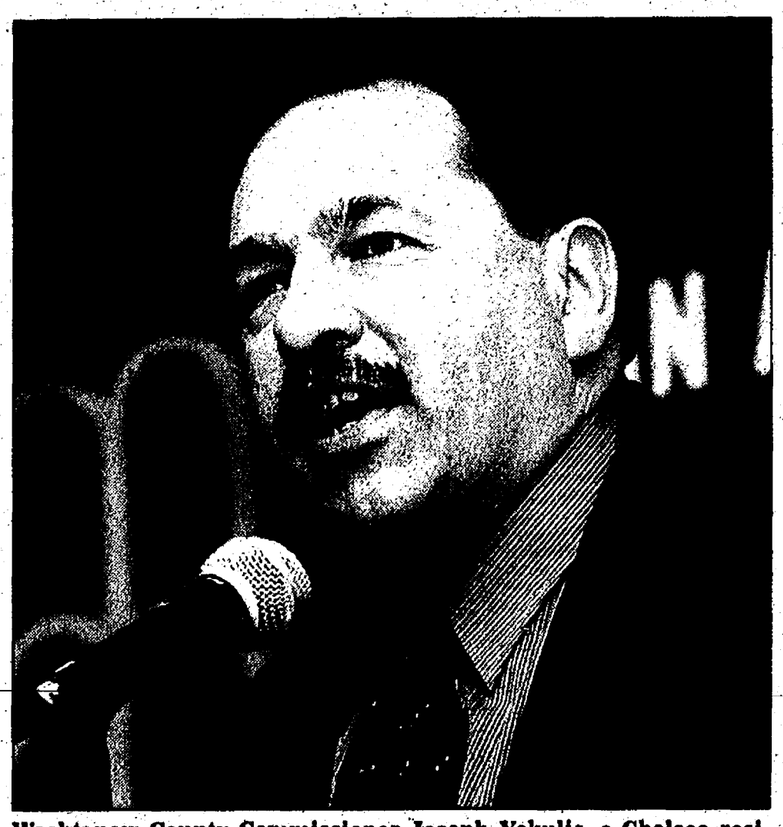

Yekulis was the first commissioner from Washtenaw County ever elected to a MAC director's position in the 100-year history of the state organization, which was founded in 1898.

MAC is the only organization dedicated to serving all 83 counties and 694 commissioners in the state. A non-partisan organization, its mission is to advance education, communication and cooperation among county government officials in Michigan.

MAC is the counties' voice at the state Capitol, providing legislative support on key issues.

Yekulis is completing his sixth year on the Washtenaw County Board of Commissioners. He represents northwest Washtenaw County in District 1. He is running for his fourth term this November.

Previously, Yekulis served with the Washtenaw County Sheriff's Department from 1975-1992, and held the rank of sergeant when he accepted an early retirement offer from the county in April 1992.

Washtenaw County Commissioner Joseph Yekulis, a Chelsea resident, has been elected to the position of first vice president of the Michigan Association of Counties.

Red Cross in need of donations

During the summer months, maintaining an adequate blood supply for patients is extremely challenging for the American Red Cross of Southeastern Michigan.

In June and July more than 40,000 units of blood were distributed to area hospitals.

"We are grateful to the blood donors who responded to the call to donate. With their help, we were able to keep our hospitals supplied," said Greg Vasse, executive director of the American Red Cross, Southeastern Michigan Blood Services.

"But we have been treading water. As quickly as the units are collected, the blood is distributed to our hospitals, frequently leaving less than a one- or two-hour supply of blood in our central blood bank."

Vasse said that it is imperative we maintain and adequate supply of blood to respond to emergencies and unexpected traumas.

Jeff Weathers, director of manufacturing at the Red Cross, cited one recent incident that an expectant mother went into delivery and began hemorrhaging.

"Within a few short hours she used 65 units of blood products in an attempt to save her life.

"We are happy to say the baby is doing well. This is the type of unexpected emergency we must be prepared to respond to. One such incident today would have depleted a major part of our supply," he said.

"It is only through the generosity of our blood donors that we are able to maintain an adequate blood supply."

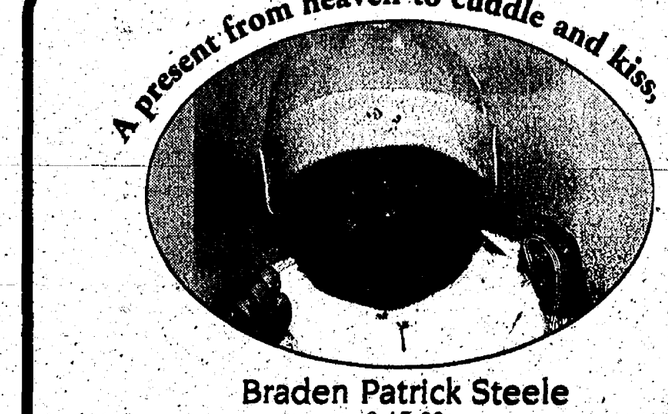

The American Red Cross is asking all eligible people to donate. Individuals can donate blood every 56 days. Those who you have not donated since July 4 can today.

"The public is invited to attend the grand opening and tour the apartments," said Shirley Mitchell, manager of The Pines.

The Pines contains 68 one-bedroom apartments and 30 two-bedroom apartments for adults age 55 and older.

"There is no typical Pines resident," Mitchell said.

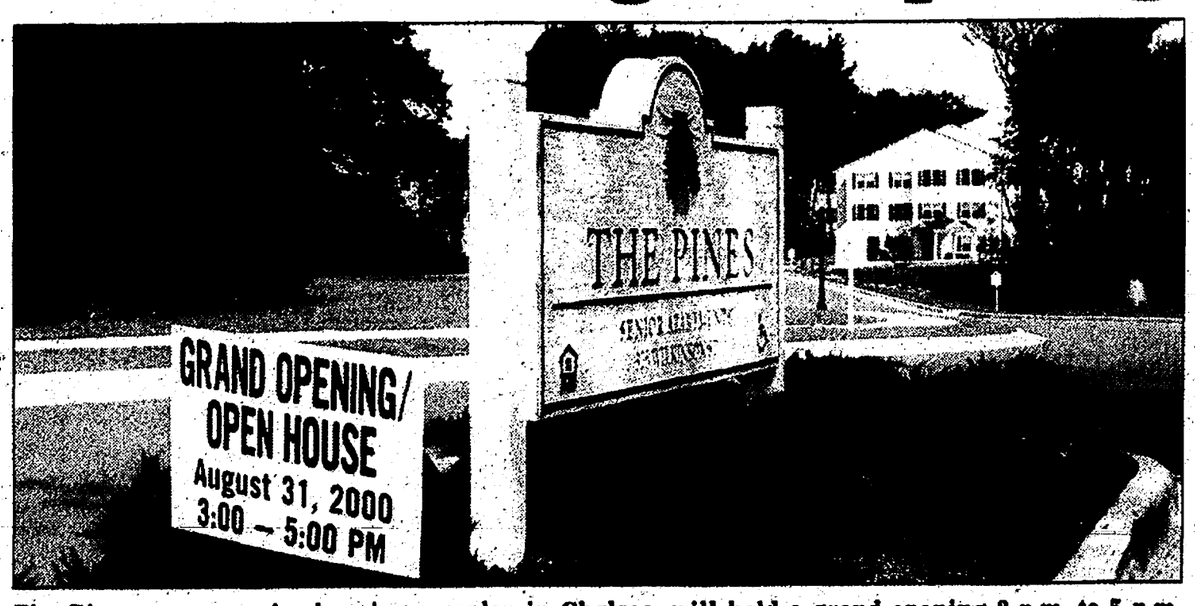

She said some are snowbirds from Florida who have returned to Michigan to be closer to their families while others are in their 50s and are still working in the Chelsea area.

Twenty apartments have been rented and rentals are pending on 20 additional apartments.

The Pines is sponsored by United Methodist Retirement Communities and Smith Equities of Mt. Pleasant.

Bill Healy, president and CEO of United Methodist Retirement Communities believes The Pines will offer a new alternative to seniors interested in living in the Chelsea area.

United Methodist Retirement Communities has earned a national reputation as a leader in senior housing and for 95 years has had a presence in Chelsea.

The Pines, a new senior housing complex in Chelsea, will hold a grand opening 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. today.

Program encourages environmental stewardship

Michigan Department of Agriculture Director Dan Wyant and LPGA professional golfers Michelle McGann and Donna Andrews recently praised Michigan's program to encourage environmental stewardship and enhance wildlife habitat at the state's many public and private golf courses.

The three were joined by Michigan State University Michigan Agriculture Experiment Station Director Ian Gray, Michigan Department of Environmental Quality Environmental Assistance Division Chief Paul Zugger and Michigan Turfgrass Foundation Board Member Gordon LaFontaine at the LPGA Oldsmobile Classic ProAm Tournament at Walnut Hills Country Club in East Lansing.

The Michigan Turfgrass Environmental Stewardship Program is a voluntary self-assessment program through which golf property managers can evaluate and improve their level of environmental protection.

Golf courses can also partner with state and local initiatives designed to enhance the environment, prevent pollution and protect natural resources.

"MDA is proud to be a partner in this unique, first-in-the-nation effort to help golf course superintendents incorporate sound environmental practices into their golf course maintenance programs," Wyant said. "We are equally proud to have support for the program from golf professionals of such caliber as Michelle McGann and Donna Andrews."

Of the 153 Michigan golf courses participating in the program, 20, including Walnut Hills Country Club, have already earned certification.

Improvements continue as the program grows, including the addition of new golf course construction guidelines, along with recent efforts to educate golfers on the ways environmental stewardship efforts on golf courses benefit them and the environment.

"As a professional golfer who has had the opportunity to play some of the most beautiful courses all over the world, I appreciate Michigan's efforts to preserve the natural habitats, and add to the quality of play at Michigan golf courses," McGann said.

"Experiencing the quiet beauty of the golf courses I play means as much to me as the technical difficulty of each hole."

The program also consolidates several environmental and wildlife initiatives into one model specifically developed for golf courses, and serves as a model for other states.

The program is jointly supported by MDA's Groundwater Stewardship Program, MDEQ, MSU, the Golf Association of Michigan and the Michigan Turfgrass Foundation.

The program partners began working with Michigan's prestigious golf community in 1996 to develop the program and self-assessment modules.

Gray hailed the program as a progressive and cooperative effort among MSU, which is a major turf research institution, the state agencies and a board of public and private golf course operators.

LaFontaine commended the state's golf course industry for its efforts to protect and improve water and other natural resources and enhance the environment.

Michigan leads the nation in the number of public golf courses and ranks third, behind only the warm-weather states of Florida and California, in the total number of golf courses.

Michigan's estimated 1.2 million golfers, combined with tourists from other states and countries, make the state's golf course industry worth $941 million annually.

County commissioner elected to MAC

County Commissioner Joseph J. Yekulis Jr. of Chelsea was elected to the position of first vice president of the Michigan Association of Counties at the MAC Summer Conference in Sault Saint Marie Aug. 22.

Following his election to a second three-year term as an at-large director representing all five regions of the state on Aug. 21, Yekulis was chosen to his leadership post by a vote of his peers on the 15-member MAC Board of Directors.

Wayne County Commission Chairman Ricardo Soloman was elected president of the association, and Director Larry Inman from Grand Traverse County was elected as second vice president.

Traditionally the first vice president moves up to take the president's position in the following year. So, Yekulis should become the president of MAC next August.

Elected to his first term as an at-large director of MAC in August 1997, Yekulis has been actively involved in many statewide issues effecting county government.

Removing the cap from the state's Child Care Fund, developing a fair formula for the state's County Jail Reimbursement Fund, state court reform and centralized collections for the state's Friends of the Court, are all issues that Yekulis has been involved in behind the scenes.

He has served on MAC's Judiciary and Environmental Affairs committees, and has been a member of the National Association of Counties Judiciary and Public Safety Committee for the past five years.

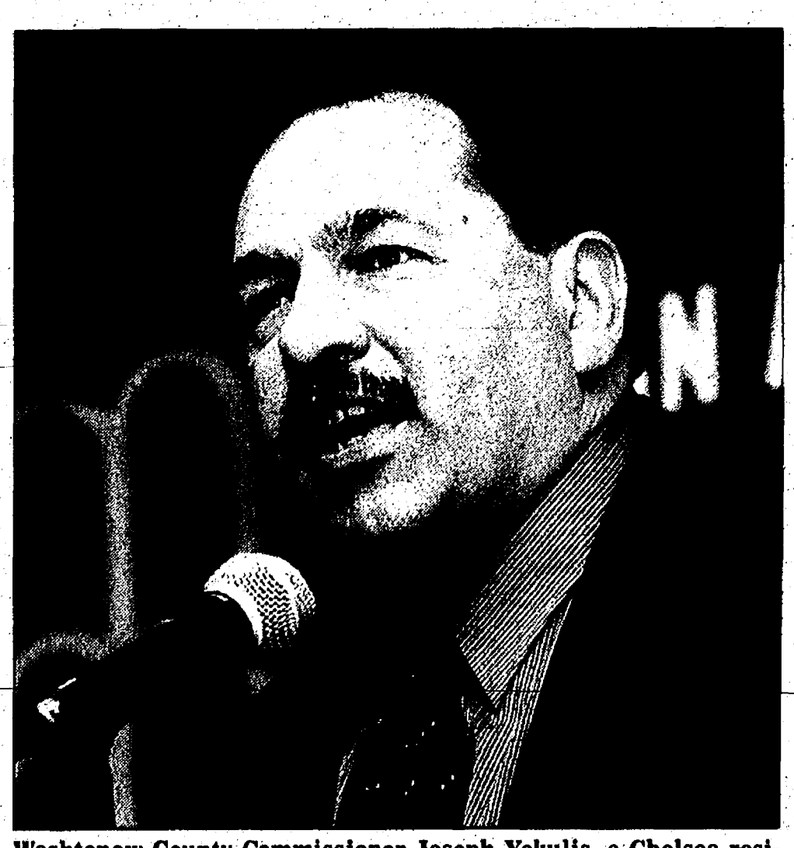

Yekulis was the first commissioner from Washtenaw County ever elected to a MAC director's position in the 100-year history of the state organization, which was founded in 1898.

MAC is the only organization dedicated to serving all 83 counties and 694 commissioners in the state. A non-partisan organization, its mission is to advance education, communication and cooperation among county government officials in Michigan.

MAC is the counties' voice at the state Capitol, providing legislative support on key issues.

Yekulis is completing his sixth year on the Washtenaw County Board of Commissioners. He represents northwest Washtenaw County in District 1. He is running for his fourth term this November.

Previously, Yekulis served with the Washtenaw County Sheriff's Department from 1975-1992, and held the rank of sergeant when he accepted an early retirement offer from the county in April 1992.

Washtenaw County Commissioner Joseph Yekulis, a Chelsea resident, has been elected to the position of first vice president of the Michigan Association of Counties.

Red Cross in need of donations

During the summer months, maintaining an adequate blood supply for patients is extremely challenging for the American Red Cross of Southeastern Michigan.

In June and July more than 40,000 units of blood were distributed to area hospitals.

"We are grateful to the blood donors who responded to the call to donate. With their help, we were able to keep our hospitals supplied," said Greg Vasse, executive director of the American Red Cross, Southeastern Michigan Blood Services.

"But we have been treading water. As quickly as the units are collected, the blood is distributed to our hospitals, frequently leaving less than a one- or two-hour supply of blood in our central blood bank."

Vasse said that it is imperative we maintain and adequate supply of blood to respond to emergencies and unexpected traumas.

Jeff Weathers, director of manufacturing at the Red Cross, cited one recent incident that an expectant mother went into delivery and began hemorrhaging.

"Within a few short hours she used 65 units of blood products in an attempt to save her life.

"We are happy to say the baby is doing well. This is the type of unexpected emergency we must be prepared to respond to. One such incident today would have depleted a major part of our supply," he said.

"It is only through the generosity of our blood donors that we are able to maintain an adequate blood supply."

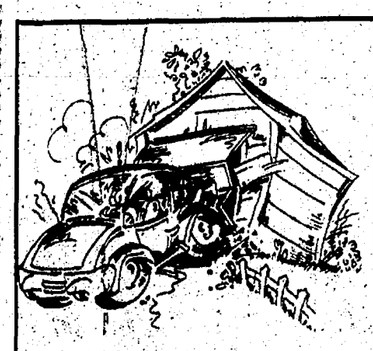

The American Red Cross is asking all eligible people to donate. Individuals can donate blood every 56 days. Those who you have not donated since July 4 can today.

POLICE BLOTTER

Chelsea Village

Disorderly Conduct

A 27-year-old Chelsea Fair patron was arrested for disorderly conduct after witnesses told police the man hopped on an ATV at the fair and began driving recklessly up and down the midway.

Witnesses told police that some unknown people pulled the man from the vehicle, and then the man began throwing trash at them. The suspect was also struck in the nose by one of the unknown people, causing him a minor injury.

Police took the man into custody for disorderly behavior. The incident took place at about 10 p.m. Aug. 26.

Larceny

Someone stole a 1997 Ford pickup truck worth some $30,000 from the Palmer Used Car Lot, 1194 S. Main St., on Aug. 23. No arrests have been made and police are investigating the theft.

Car Crash

Police cited a 25-year-old Chicago man for improper parking after officers saw his U-Haul truck roll across M-52. The vehicle damaged two cars parked at the Taco Bell, 1590 S. Main St. A off-duty officer said he saw the truck pull into traffic and proceed across M-52 when he noticed there was no driver in the vehicle.

The accident took place at about 6:30 p.m. Aug. 26. No one was injured in the incident.

Vandalism

Someone carved the words "die for yer country" into the restroom wall of Mancino's Pizza, 1250 S. Main St., with a key or some other sharp object. The vandalism took place at about 9 p.m. Aug. 25.

Warrant arrest

38-year-old Steven Robert Atkinson of Taylor was arrested by police on an outstanding warrant for failing to appear for a court date. The arrest took place in front of the Chelsea Fire Department, 200 West Middle St., at about 10 p.m. Aug. 22.

Police saw two men changing a flat tire on a vehicle parked in front of the Fire Department, and said they noticed a smell of alcohol coming from one of the men. Further investigation revealed the outstanding warrant for Atkinson.

The other man helping to change the tire, an 18-year-old, also from Taylor, was arrested as a minor in possession of alcohol. The vehicle was impounded.

Dexter Village

Larceny

Someone entered a building in the 7000 block of Dexter-Ann Arbor Road and stole various tools and construction materials when the door was unlocked.

The theft took place between Aug. 10 and Aug. 14.

Police were dispatched to the Clark Service Center, 8135 Main St., when the clerk told them someone pumped $22 worth of gas and then left without paying. The theft took place at about 1 a.m. Aug. 9.

Police traced the license plate number of the vehicle and contacted the suspect, an 18-year-old Dexter woman, who told them she left without paying because she did not have enough money for the gas. Police told her to return to the station and pay for the gas.

A store employee told police that the woman returned, but only repaid $10 of the debt. A report on the incident was sent to the prosecutor's office.

Someone broke into a boat parked in the 8900 block of Dexter-Pinckney Road and stole the watercraft's stereo.

Scio Township

Child Neglect

Police were called to the Eagle Point apartments by the apartment manager, who had three children in her custody. The children were found setting fires outdoors. The incident took place at about 8 p.m. Aug. 22 on Eyrie Drive.

The boys, ages 9, 10 and 14, told police they found a lighter on the ground and started burning some grass and weeds near the apartments.

One boy got some lighter fluid from his home to fuel the fire. When some adults passed by, they noticed the fire and told the boys to put it out, which they did.

The apartment manager rounded them up and called the police. All of the boys were released to their parents after the parents were informed of the incident. The 14-year-old boy, however, had no parents at home.

Police waited for about two hours before the boy's mother returned home from work. She told them that the boy is being medicated for psychological problems.

Police said the boy was left unattended for several hours with no way to contact any responsible adults. A copy of the report was forwarded to the county Family Services division of the court.

The theft took place sometime last week.

Police were called to investigate the incident at about noon Aug. 21. An employee at Bill Bradley Pontiac on Jackson Road told police that the man had been in the business several times that week, making threats and harassing employees. Police found the man walking on Jackson Road and questioned him.

Police said the man spoke erratically and had difficulty answering their questions. He was taken to the hospital and was asked not to visit the car dealership or Weber's again.

The perfect man is subject of new novel by Howard

LISA ALLMENDINGER

BOOK REVIEW

As the last summer weekend of the year is upon us, I wanted to suggest a new hardcover book titled "Mr. Perfect," that's a delightful read.

It's a combination mystery and contemporary tale that takes place in Warren and involves the lives of four professional women.

At dinner one night while at their favorite watering hole, they decide to pen a list of attributes that would comprise Mr. Perfect.

It's quite a list — one on which most women would probably concur. Men, however, might not be as amused. And, no, I'm not giving away any of the juicy details.

The conversation during this beer-induced list planning process is hysterical. However, what happens once the list finds its way onto the Internet isn't quite as funny, as people take sides in their opinions about the merits of the friends' opinions.

Shortly thereafter, the scenario actually turns deadly for two of the four best friends. Everyone involved is deeply affected by the publication of the list as a stalker decides to eradicate the women and their evil thoughts from the face of the earth.

Tossed in for good measure is a terrifically written romance between Jaine Bright and her next-door neighbor, a cop.

Brief glimpses into the private lives of other three list members could have stood to be fleshed out a bit more, but this was a great book overall.

"Mr. Perfect" is delightfully clever. It blends humor and passion, suspense and sleuthing, into a terrific 343-page read that will leave you wishing for more.

I had a hard time putting this novel down.

BOOKMARK

New to the Publisher's Weekly nonfiction list is "Kitchen Confidential" by Anthony Bourdian, which I just started reading. Written from the chef and author's point of view, it's quite an eye opener.

Early reviewers say you'll never go to a restaurant feeling quite the same way again. I'll let you know.

Back on the list is "Sugar Busters," which made a 194-week run when it first came out as compared to "Tuesdays with Morrie," which has been on the bestseller list for 144 weeks.

On the fiction side, "Winter Solstice" by Rosamunde Pilcher continues its top spot.

Faye Kellerman has a new book out called "Stalker" that jumps into the fifth spot for its first time on the list.

Also new is a book called "Move to Strike" by Perri O'Shaughnessy that starts out at No. 14 on the list.

On the paperback side, "Black Notice" by Patricia Cornwell continues to top the Mass Market list, while "Rich Dad, Poor Dad" by Robert T. Kiyosaki rides the crest on the trade side.

Little Professor Staff Pick

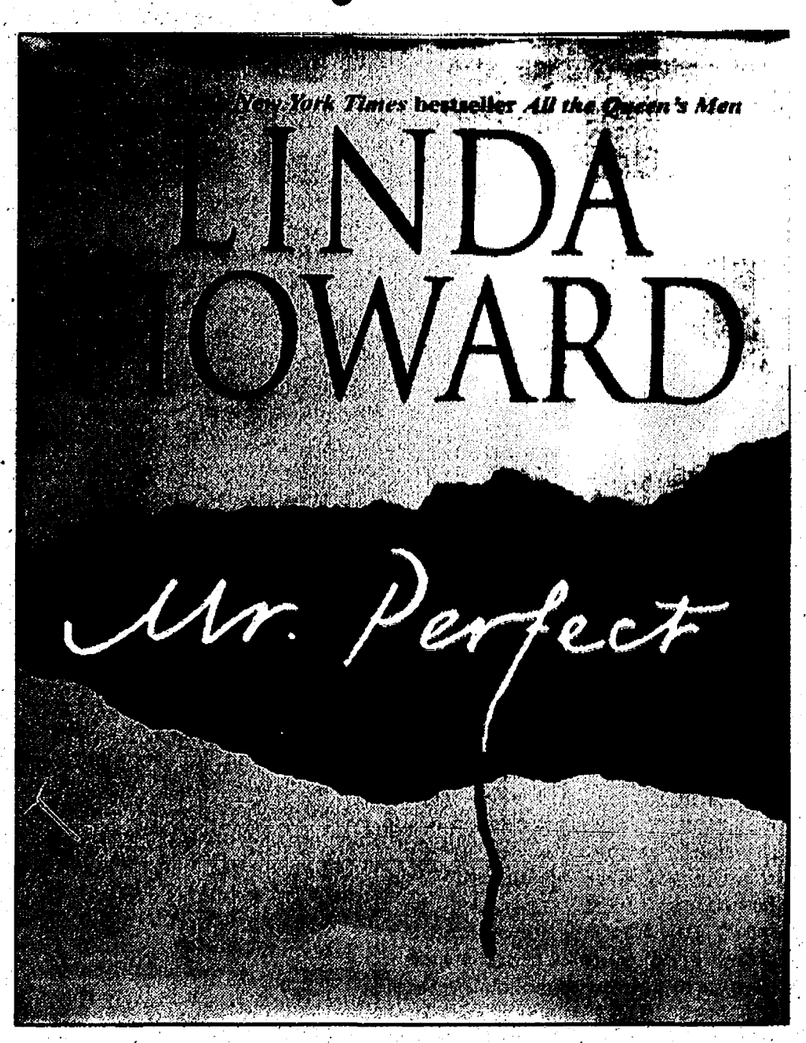

"The Neverending Story," by Michael Ende is the staff pick at Little Professor book store in Chelsea.

This book deserves as much recognition as the Harry Potter books. It is a delightful romp into the realm of childhood fantasy, where enchanted creatures of all sorts come together to create a world guaranteed to capture the any reader, young or old.

Ende's characters are wonderful. The staff promises the characters will keep you busy until Potter No. 5. Read this book, then rent the movie. And watch it over and over.

Council, school boards can endorse ballot questions

The Michigan Campaign Finance Act does not prohibit city councils, school boards or any other public body from passing resolutions endorsing ballot questions, according to a final interpretative statement recently issued by the Michigan Department of State.

In its statement, the department's Compliance and Rules Division noted that not only can a public board adopt a resolution, it can disseminate the meeting minutes that reference the council's discussion and subsequent action in the same manner as any other minutes it disseminates.

While the interpretative statement is in response to a request for a declaratory ruling on whether a city council can adopt resolutions endorsing ballot questions without violating Section 57, it addresses questions raised in complaints against nine school districts and two city governments.

In those complaints, it was alleged that the school boards and city governments violated Section 57 when they adopted resolutions opposing the Kids First! Yes! and Let Local Votes Count ballot proposals.

In its interpretative statement, the state emphasized the primary purpose of Section 57, which is to prevent public bodies from using public resources to wage campaigns.

Under the Campaign Finance Act, a public body or an individual acting for a public body, shall not use or authorize the use of funds, personnel, office space, property, stationery, postage, vehicles, equipment, supplies or other public resources to make a contribution or expenditure on behalf of a candidate or ballot question.

The law defines a contribution as a payment, gift, subscription, assessment, expenditure contract, payment for services, dues, advance, forbearance, loan ... for the purpose of influencing the nomination or election of a candidate or for the qualification, passage or defeat of a ballot question.

The law defines expenditure as a payment, donation, loan or promise of a payment ... in assistance of, or in opposition to, the nomination or election of a candidate, or the qualification, passage or defeat of a ballot question.

The interpretative statement also cited Section 22, Article 7, of the state constitution which notes: " ... city or village shall have the power to adopt resolution and ordinances relating to municipal concerns, property and government subject to the constitution and law."

The department chose not to issue a declaratory ruling on the question because the original request did not include a statement of facts sufficient to support a declaratory ruling.

Under the law, when the department is unable to apply the law to an actual statement of facts, it may offer guidance by issuing an interpretative statement, which is an informational response to the question presented.

The department has ruled that several school districts violated Section 57 when they disseminated information opposing the ballot question but, to date, has chosen not to impose any fines against school districts.

Township to award bids

By Lisa Allmendinger
Staff Writer

Dexter Township is making progress in its quest to expand the township hall.

Township officials will meet 9 a.m. today with the three lowest bidders out of eight bids they received to expand the township hall.

The project is expected to cost some $580,000.

John J. Francey, an architect with Bowers & Rein Associates Inc., will meet with Axis Construction of Pontiac, Construction Solutions of Ann Arbor and Heaney General Contracting of Ypsilanti to discuss each company's bid.

Township officials will also be on hand to ask questions.

The next hurdle will be financing the project. A committee has been formed to look into possible solutions to fully fund the addition.

FIA has provided two decades of service

By Elizabeth Wagenschutz
Staff Writer

This year marks the 20th anniversary for Faith in Action, a community organization in Chelsea that provides more programs and services than most people realize.

The center provides numerous services and help for local people in the Chelsea and Dexter school districts.

FIA began as an outreach program of St. Barnabas Episcopal Church and was incorporated as a Michigan non-profit, tax-exempt corporation in 1982.

The Rev. Jerold Beaumont, pastor at St. Barnabas, began the outreach program.

"We started it because we saw people in need, and their needs weren't being taken care of," he said.

Since the inception and formation of FIA, the program has considerably grown and expanded. In its first year, FIA had a budget of $500 and helped around 20 people.

Services were run out of St. Barnabas Church and then a small building on the hospital grounds. Beaumont and other church members worked as volunteers to staff the program

In only 20 years, things have greatly changed. FIA's current budget is $120,000. Last year, the organization served more than 8,000 people. The organization has its own building on the hospital grounds.

FIA is now run by Beaumont, founder and president. He has help from a full-time assistant to the president, a 15-member board of trustees and a large staff of volunteers.

FIA also provides counseling, with either a male or female certified social worker, and approximately 20 different service programs.

"I'm really quite proud of the organization," Beaumont said. "I'm very gratified we started (it) in the first place."

Nadine Shaneyfelt, the assistant to the president and only full-time staff member of FIA, has been working with the agency for 13 years.

She is also very proud of what FIA has accomplished and the many services it offers.

Shaneyfelt began working for the organization as a volunteer. She became the volunteer coordinator, then a Volunteer in Service to America worker before Faith in Action hired her.

FIA is a non-profit organization and is not a government agency, so its monetary support comes from the local community.

FIA receives support from churches, businesses, clubs, students, the Dexter Area Services Association, the Chelsea United Way and many other groups and individuals.

The community's support allows FIA to supply the services it does. Many of the area's residents are aware of, support and use these programs.

One of the most familiar services is the clothing room. FIA's food and financial programs are also well known, as are the Meals on Wheels, Community Christmas Dinner and Christmas Adopt-a-Family programs.

But there are many other services that aren't fully utilized.

One such program is Carrier Alert. This is performed in conjunction with the Chelsea Post Office and is only offered in Chelsea. The service is seen as a form of security for older people who live alone.

A small decal is placed in a nondescript location inside the person's mailbox. If someone's mail is not picked up and the post office has no notice of an absence, then FIA is contacted. FIA in turn contacts someone close to the client to make sure that the person is safe and well.

"It's a really good program if we could just get people to use it," Shaneyfelt said.

Another valuable service is the Senior Outreach Program. A volunteer calls and visits a senior on a weekly basis, acting as a companion for the senior.

There is also a school shoe vouchers program. FIA has a limited fund with money for people who need children's school shoes.

A free health clinic is available for people with no insurance. FIA acts on behalf of the client to set up doctor's appointments. This program is also applicable to children.

The utilities assistance program is not always used, either. FIA can provide monetary assistance to pay for utilities, excluding telephones. But this can only be used in emergency situations when utilities will otherwise be disconnected.

In addition to these, there are also tutoring, transportation, advocacy, housing and parenting services available.

Many people volunteer their time, energy and resources to make sure these programs succeed.

Maggie Ulrich is a retired Dexter resident who has been volunteering her time at FIA for over 10 years.

"I just enjoy volunteering," she said. "(I enjoy) doing something with my time to help others."

Chelsea resident Emily Arend and her family often donate their used clothing to the FIA clothing room.

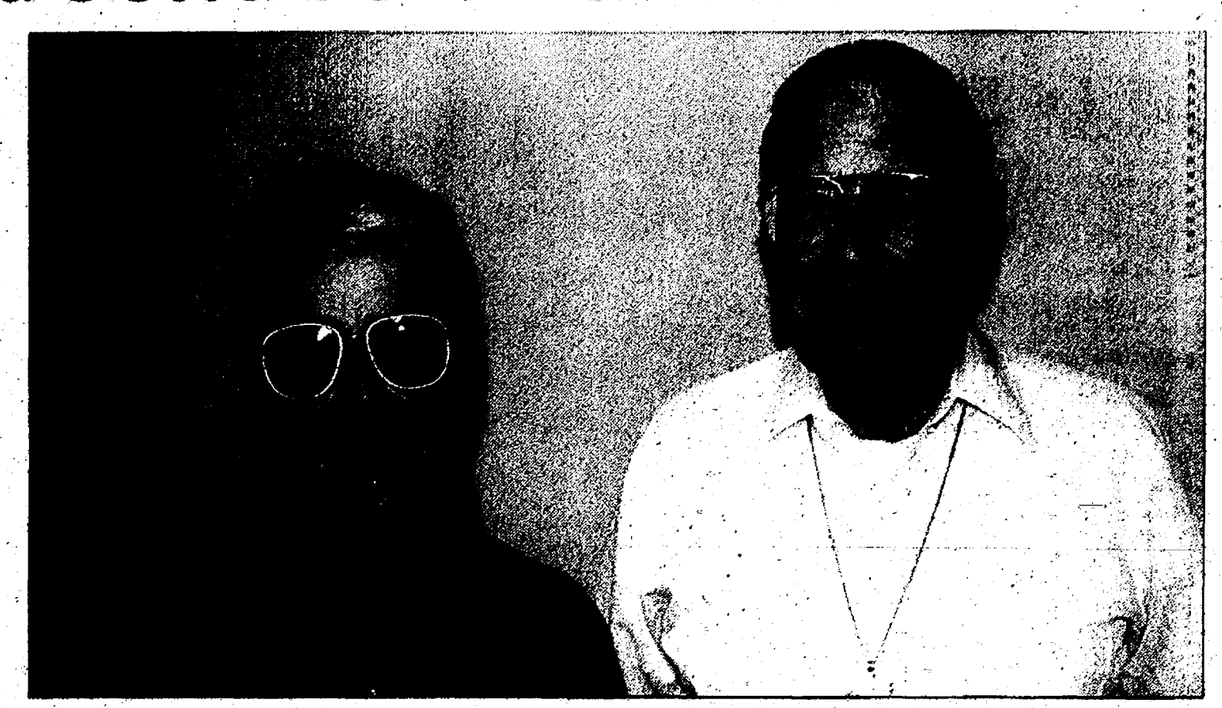

"We donate to help those who are less fortunate," she said. "They're clothes that we've outgrown, but they're still in good condition. Why wouldn't you do it?"

Anne Comeau is a member of Faith in Action's board of trustees. She has been serving on the board for three years.

"I'm on the board because I respect the services Faith in Action provides to people who need it," she said. "I feel very strongly about giving back to the community and doing something to make it better.

"We're very fortunate here in Chelsea, (but) we can help to make it even better."

Making the community better for all people is integral to FIA's role in Chelsea. To find out more about its services or volunteer your time, contact FIA at 475-3305.

Nadine Shaneyfelt and the Rev. Jerold Beaumont will mark Faith in Action's 20th year.

Bedwetting can affect children's self-image

A new school year can bring excitement and anxiety. For children who wet the bed the anxiety can outweigh the excitement.

The embarrassment and teasing brought on by bed-wetting can affect a child's self-image and self-confidence. An estimated five to seven million children wet their beds regularly.

If a child is a frequent bedwetter it does not necessarily mean there is a problem with their kidneys. In most cases, no physical problems are found. Bedwetting is a common problem and is usually outgrown.

There are things parents can do to help curb bed-wetting, some include:

Limiting the amount of fluid consumed before bedtime;

Waking the child to remind them to use the bathroom;

Using a device called a "moisture alarm";

Special exercises;

Medicines.

Betwetting may be considered a problem if a child is 6 to 7 years old and has never been able to stay dry overnight.

Lotions can help ease the pain of sunburns

JOHN C. WOLF, D.O.
ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR OF FAMILY MEDICINE OHIO UNIVERSITY COLLEGE OF OSTEOPATHIC MEDICINE

FAMILY MEDICINE

Question: I forgot to put on sunscreen when I was working in the garden the other day and got a sunburn on my neck and arms. Should I have gone to my doctor? Is there anything he could do to help me get over this quicker?

Answer: Sunburn is produced when sunlight damages the deeper growing layers of the skin. The resulting irritation to the skin, blood vessels, and associated tissue causes the inflammation we call sunburn.

In addition to being painful, the burn can interfere with the skin's functions of protecting us from injury and helping maintain the ideal environment for the body's cells.

The skin is rich with nerve endings. These keep us informed about the environment around us by allowing us to feel the size, shape and texture of everyday objects as well as sense temperature and pain.

The pain of sunburn develops when these nerve cells are stimulated as part of the inflammation of the sunburn. The label sunburn only tells that the damage came from being out in the sun, not the extent of the injury.

The health problems associated with burns are related to the amount — the area — of skin involved, the depth of burn, the individual's age and pre-existing health conditions such as diabetes that may be present.

The specific cause of the burn — the sun, boiling water, chemical injury or other cause — is not important. The extent of skin damage is what counts and also what determines if you should see your doctor about it.

Typically, sunburn is painful with or without being touched. The sunburned look and discomfort improve after two or three days. The dead, damaged skin usually peels off in a week or two. This type of burn is referred to as a superficial, or first-degree, burn.

A second-degree or partial thickness burn produces damage deeper into the skin and can be very painful. Even air blowing across the burn can hurt.

In addition to the pain, the skin will blister. Healing usually takes two or three weeks, and a permanent mild scar or change in skin color may sometimes result.

As a general guideline, if your burn doesn't seem any worse than mild sunburn, you can probably take care of it yourself. Protect the skin — stay out of the sun — and take aspirin, acetaminophen or ibuprofen for the discomfort.

Don't put butter or other gooey substances on the burn. There are several non-prescription sunburn lotions and sprays that are soothing, but they will not hasten the healing of damaged skin.

If you feel sick because of the burn, or if it covers a large percentage of your body, you should see your doctor. More severe burns with immediate blistering or blackening of the skin should have a doctor's attention today — don't wait until next week.

Deep burns over a large amount of the body surface can be immediately life threatening and require prompt hospitalization. Fortunately, these most severe burns don't happen with sunburn.

Here are two tips that will help keep you from having to deal with the pain of sunburn this summer:

Avoid being outdoors during the hours of the day with the sun's rays are the most direct — between about 10 a.m. and 2 p.m.

When you go outside during the day, protect your skin with clothing or by putting a number 15, or higher, sunscreen lotion on the exposed areas of your body. Remember, a thin shirt or a water soaked one doesn't provide much protection. You may need sunscreen on your back even though you have a shirt on.

Saving for retirement takes sacrifice and patience

MICHAEL CAESAR
HERITAGE NEWSPAPERS

MONEY SENSE

Q: I am 40 years old and my husband and I have found it very difficult to save and invest, other than through our 401(k) plans at work.

With two young children, it seems as though there are always things that we are buying every month that prevent us from doing any additional savings.

Just like almost everyone else, we want to retire in comfort someday, but it just seems like that will be impossible.

Is there any way that we can have the opportunity to accumulate some significant savings by the time we retire, hopefully by age 65?

A: Almost anyone can achieve a great degree of financial success and independence if they set realistic goals and are willing to make some sacrifices today in order to achieve those long-term goals.

In a recent survey of 1,000 households, when people were asked how much they thought they could save each month, almost one quarter of the respondents could not come up with any kind of meaningful answer.

These households run the very real risk of failing to achieve any degree of financial independence because they have been unable or unwilling to make systematic savings a conscious priority.

On the positive side, slightly more than 25 percent of the respondents felt that they could save at least $500 per month.

Although this might seem like an amount that would not be realistic for you, in order for you to really know that, you should carefully examine your monthly expenditures to determine which expenses are really necessary and which ones are merely examples of just "keeping up with the Joneses" or even the inability to put off the need for instant gratification.

It is a constant source of amazement to many families approaching retirement how some of their peers have been able to accumulate substantial wealth with virtually the same income, while they have accumulated very little.

One of the reasons for this is a failure to understand the power of compound interest. Let's use the example of a 40-year-old couple saving $500 per month.

If this couple could earn an average rate of return of eight percent, by age 65 they would have accumulated $457,425! Over the 25-year period, the total deposits have only been $150,000; the additional $307,425 represents the earnings on those $500 deposits over time.

The fascinating thing about the compounding effect is that the earnings on the deposits eventually become a much larger figure than the deposits themselves.

The family that didn't do the systematic savings knows that they did not save the $150,000, but they simply cannot understand where the other $307,425 came from and, therefore, mistakenly think that they would never have been able to accumulate that much money, even if they had saved the $500 each month.

In order to encourage people to save, sometimes it is helpful to show them that they in fact do have the opportunity to accumulate a substantial amount, if they are serious and committed to achieving financial success.

It is not unusual to see a 40-year-old couple with $75,000 combined in their 401(k) plans. If this couple continued to make deposits totaling $500 per month, and they were able to earn an eight percent return, by the age of 65, their 401(k) plans would have accumulated a total of $1,000,000!

Of course, we have no idea what rate of return will actually be earned over the next 25 years or the amount of money that you will actually be able to save each month, but the real issue is to commit yourself to some kind of systematic savings plan that is not a "put and take" type of plan.

You should make every effort to set aside a significant portion of your earnings that is earmarked as your long-term savings. This should be an account that should not be touched except in the event of some extreme financial emergency.

By the way, buying a car or going on a vacation does not qualify as a "financial emergency."

When you look at the numbers, it becomes easier to imagine what you could accomplish by saving even a little more each month.

Naturally, we all need to enjoy life before we reach retirement age, but deciding to save on a regular basis can go a long way toward ensuring that your retirement years will be comfortable and financially worry free.

If Only for This Life
(I Corinthians 15:19)
Dear Friends and Neighbors,
There is something melancholy about this time of year, as summer winds down and we approach Labor Day. In spite of the fact that it's a beautiful time of year and that we can still look forward to many beautiful warm days before winter sets in, still there's a sense that summer is dying, and is nearly over. The days are rapidly getting shorter, and the end is in sight for the growing season.
All my life I've tried to hang on to summer. As a child, I greatly preferred summer vacation to being cooped up in school. As an adult I sort of relive my childhood summers vicariously through my own children. And it's even a little frightening to think that my 51st summer has just slipped away from me, and there's nothing I can do to get it back.
That's how it is with all of life. Although this sin-cursed world still contains much beauty, much pleasure, much happiness, suffering and misery are also present, often just around the corner. I've seen plenty of that in my profession. Ultimately, for everyone, the good times and the summertimes slip away, our bodies and lives deteriorate, and there's little to look forward to on earth, and nothing to which we can hang on. Our Christian faith can help us through all this, but will not enable us to avoid it.
The beauty of the Christian faith, though, is that we don't have to hang on desperately to this life, because our God has prepared a better life for us after this one, a life where there will be no more night, no more pain and tears and sorrow, where we will reign with Him forever and ever. This better life is yours as a free gift. Please come Sunday, at 10:00 a.m., as we worship the Lord who gives us this life.

Public should follow the rules of decorum

LISA ALLMENDINGER

THROUGH MY EYES

After sitting through a number of rather raucous public meetings in several different towns in the last month, I thought I'd give area residents a little lesson in how to conduct themselves properly at a public meeting.

These words of wisdom come from about 20 years of experience in these matters, from both sides of the table. For those of you who have never attended a public meeting, there are rules of decorum and etiquette that apply to how one should act while both conducting business and while listening during these assemblies.

For a full range of details, pick up a copy of "Robert's Rules of Order," which pretty clearly explains what should happen at any public meeting.

For those of you who regularly attend these meetings, I applaud you for keeping an eye out on what's happening in your town and encourage you to continue.

For those of you who haven't attended, you should check one out sometime. Get to know your public officials, where they stand on the issues that are important to you, and see how they conduct themselves in public. This is an election year, you know.

The press is usually at these meetings to keep you informed. But we aren't the be-all and end-all of what really happens at these meetings. We try to be, of course, but deadlines and space requirements do not allow us to do justice to everything that goes on during these hours of deliberation and debate.

Each meeting has a printed agenda that includes, not just one but sometimes two (or more), blocks of time afforded to residents for public comment. The number depends on the type of meeting and what's on the agenda.

Just as your elected and appointed public officials are expected to conduct themselves with dignity and civility, so are the members of the audience.

To find out what's on a particular agenda, you can always call the village or township hall to find out.

With this in mind, if you plan to speak, jot down some notes to yourself. Plan your comments accordingly for the amount of time afforded to you.

Sometimes it will be a couple of minutes, if there is a really hot topic and a lot of people would like to speak. Other times it is five minutes or more, if you make special arrangements ahead of time.

You can always send letters to your public officials, as well. They do read them. And you are welcome to send a copy to the press. Public officials read the newspapers, too.

But back to meeting decorum. These times for public comment are the only times you are allowed to speak, period.

This is done in the interest of fairness and productivity during a meeting. No one wants to be there all night long or until after 1 a.m., as happened recently at a Dexter Township Planning Commission meeting.

Everyone in the audience, as well as the public officials, would like to be able to hear what residents have to say. This includes reporters, who are many times in the audience with you.

Yelling at public officials while they are deliberating is non-productive, disruptive and downright rude. They don't want to look like bad guys, asking you to be quiet.

They do want to hear your opinions, but at the appropriate times. Bickering with them while they are trying to discuss an issue or talking in small groups during the meeting makes it hard on everyone.

If you feel a need to comment, write a note and pass it to your neighbor, or take your debate outside. Please, don't conduct it while everyone else is trying to listen.

At a recent Dexter Village Council meeting, which involved a sewer backup that rendered a few dozen residents homeless, audience members æ understandably upset about the situation æ shouted derogatory comments at village officials.

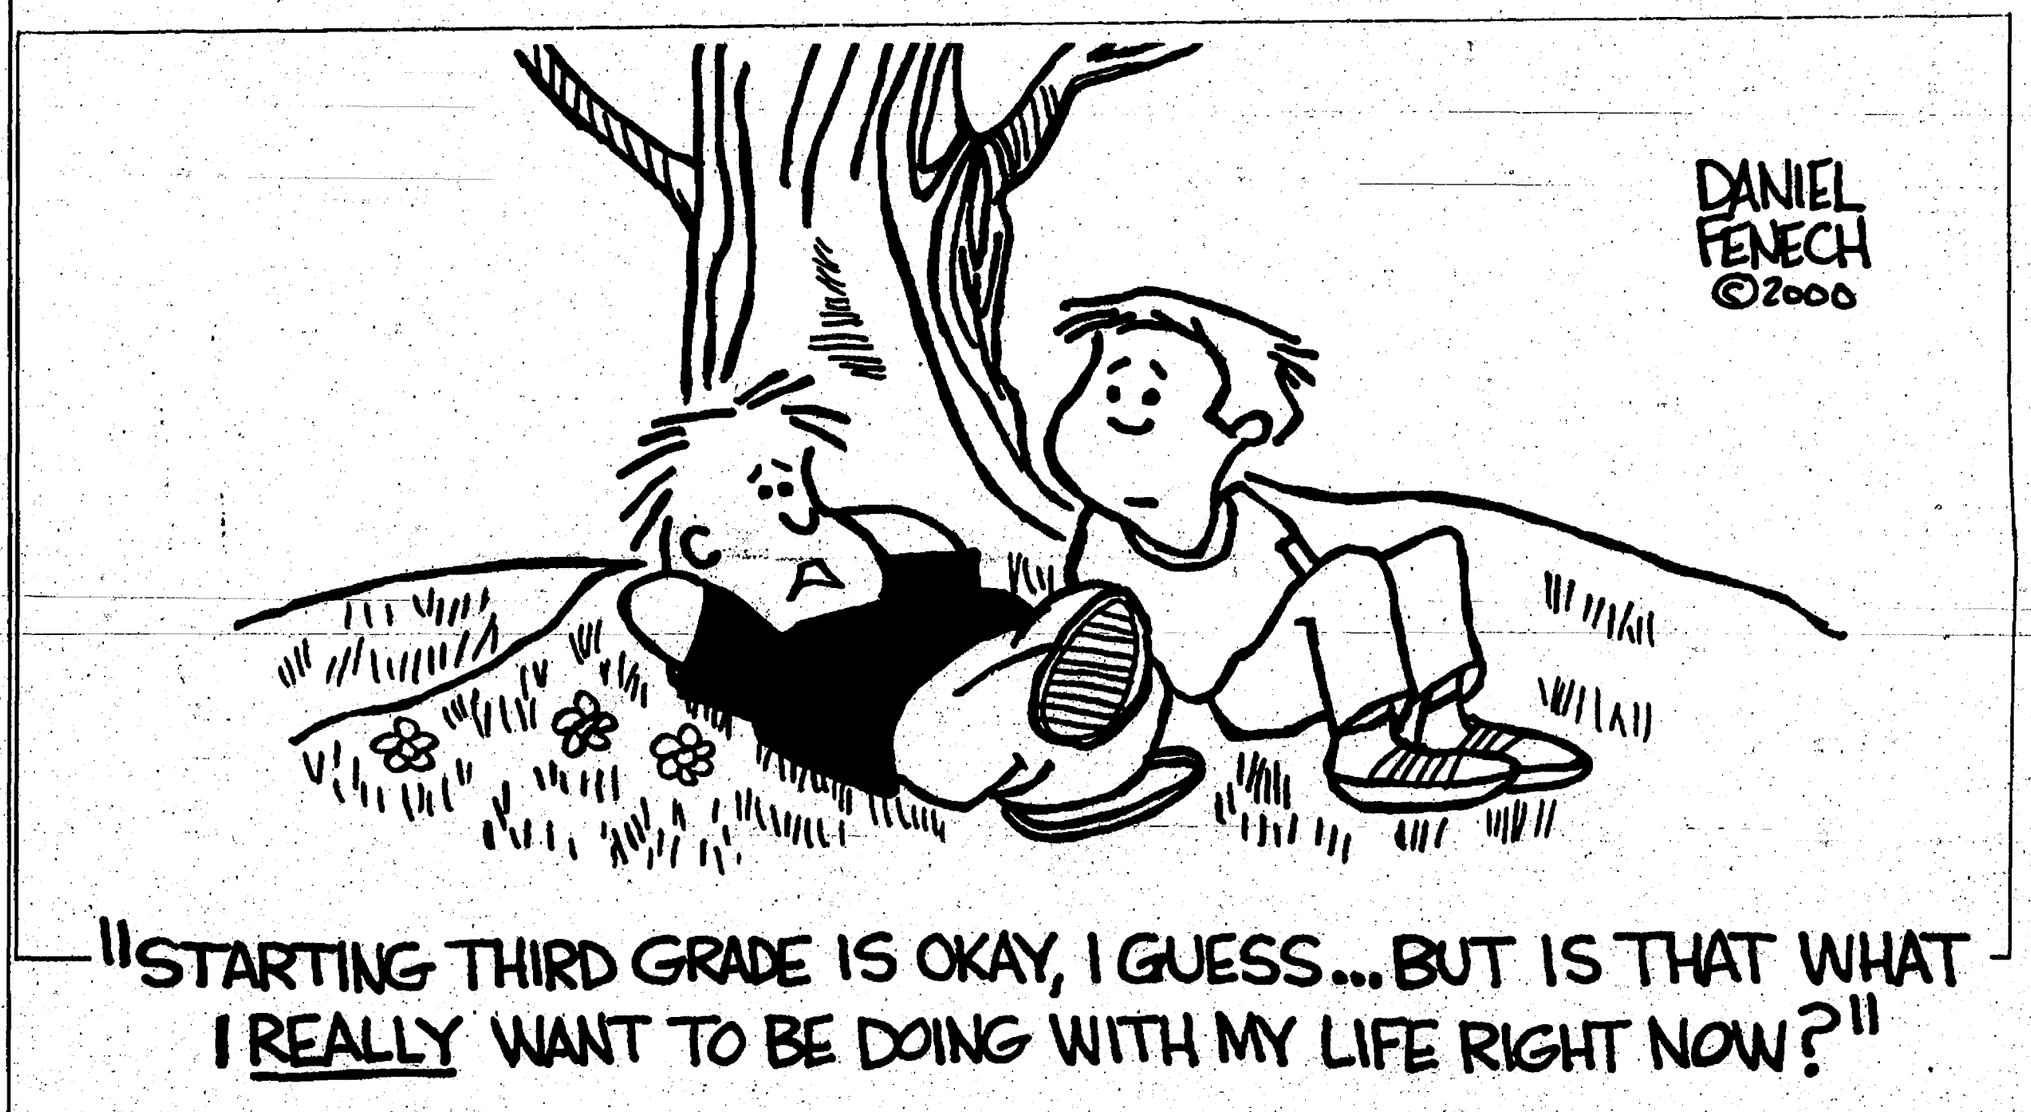

This happened while they were discussing how to proceed with the issue. When a break was called, those same residents went outside and admitted they didn't hear what the officials had said.

When emotions are raw, the temptation to speak up is understandably high, but this does not help matters any. It's frustrating to all involved, and that's precisely why there are rules of order for public meetings.

Just as you shouldn't talk loudly in a library while others are trying to concentrate, or shout fire in a public building, yammering and yelling at public meetings, though maybe not a safety issue, is still detrimental for all.

And given the right circumstances, it could get you booted from that meeting or even arrested.

As I see it, common courtesy should not be tossed out the window while attending a public meeting. No matter how hot the topic of discussion.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Sen. Mike Rogers cares about his constituents

When I brought my newborn son home from the hospital, I strapped him into his car seat with confidence – a feeling I may not have had except for the training I received from a clinic sponsored by Sen. Mike Rogers.

Several months ago, I learned from Rogers that nearly 90 percent of child car seats are not properly installed or used by parents like me.

Almost 2,000 children in the United States die annually due to car crashes. I know that nothing in this world is 100 percent safe, but the lifesaving instruction that Rogers provided to my husband and me gives my son a much better chance of survival in a crash.

Rogers has vigorously campaigned for child safety here in Livingston County and the surround areas of his district.

Someone who cares so deeply about the safety of our children should be our next representative in Washington for the 8th Congressional District.

I am confident that he will remain in touch with the needs of parents and children here in Michigan.

Exercise your right to vote this November

Never underestimate the power of the ballot.

One of the greatest strengths of America is that all citizens are provided a voice through the voting booth. And every vote does count. Many an election has been won by a handful of votes or even just one vote.

But before you can vote in an election, you must be registered.

Registering to vote is an easy process. In fact, Michigan was the first state in the nation to implement "motor/voter" registration, allowing residents to register to vote at any Secretary of State branch office. More than 88 percent of all eligible voters are registered.

To register, you must be a U.S. citizen, at least 18 years old by election day and a Michigan resident. Any Secretary of State branch office or county, city or township clerk's office can register you.

In addition, specified agencies providing services through the Family Independence Agency, the Department of Community Health, the Michigan Jobs Commission and military recruitment centers also provide voter registration services.

You may also register to vote by mail. Forms are available at your local clerk's office or from the Secretary of State Web site www.sos.state.mi.us/election/elecadmin.

If you register to vote by mail, and you have moved to a new voting jurisdiction or are registering for the very first time, you must vote in person in the first election in which you participate. The only exceptions are if you are 60 years or older, disabled as defined by law or temporarily living overseas.

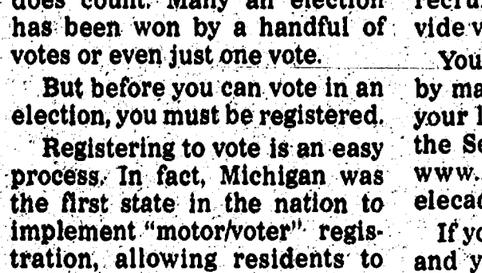

You also have the option of registering to vote when you renew your driver license by mail. Eligible drivers receive a voter registration application in the mail with their driver license renewal information.

There are several options for you to choose from when registering to vote, but no matter where or how you register, you will vote in your assigned precinct in your hometown.

Boy born with half of a jaw grows a new bone

Nine-year-old Ryan Dewald just wants to have a steak dinner with his parents. But because he was born with almost half of his jaw and one jaw joint missing, he can't.

His face has been deformed since birth, caved in on one side and affecting not only his appearance but hindering his ability to chew, breathe and speak.

Now, Ryan is looking forward to that steak, and to a more normal life, because of treatment he's receiving at the University of Michigan Health System. In a pioneering attempt, plastic surgeon Dr. Steven Buchman, has led the effort to grow Ryan almost an entire left jawbone, and a joint to connect the bone to his skull.

But it didn't happen in a test tube. Buchman has been able to help Ryan's own body to grow 35 centimeters of bone and a joint where there was none before.

The process, which previously has been used only to heal fractures in large bones or lengthen or repair existing facial bones, has successfully created an entirely new structure for Ryan's tiny face. He's the second young patient to undergo such an extensive treatment at the U of M's multidisciplinary Craniofacial Anomalies Program, one of the largest and oldest in the nation.

The technique is called distraction osteogenesis — literally growing bone by distracting, or pulling apart, the ends during the healing process.

Buchman and a handful of other surgeons around the country are hopeful that with more research, the technique could be used to help thousands of children born each year with facial defects, and others with facial bone problems.

"This is a process by which new bone is formed from the old bone that was there," says Buchman, who heads the U of M craniofacial program. "You cut the bone, and when you cut it, it wants to heal.

"If you fool the body by moving those two cut surfaces away from each other very slowly, almost like a clock moving every day, you'll fool the body into making new bone."

In Ryan's case, distraction osteogenesis offered hope after a more conventional approach — a bone graft using part of one of his ribs — failed last year. So, Buchman and the Dewald family decided to form something from nothing in order to overcome Ryan's severe form of the congenital problem called hemifacial microsomia.

"Hemifacial microsomia is a big word, but essentially what it means is that part of his jaw did not develop normally in the womb," Buchman says.

"The jaw is the growth center for our face, so the entire part that didn't develop initially won't grow at all. Meanwhile, the normal side develops correctly, and it shifts the opposite side because there is nothing there to push against it."

Ryan's condition is actually the second most common facial birth defect, after cleft lip and palate. As many as one in 3,000 children are born each year with the abnormality, in varying degrees of severity. Some have an undersized mandible, or jawbone, on the affected side, and distraction osteogenesis has been used for several years to grow the bone long enough to make a joint with the skull.

Patients as young as 2 years old have been able to have it done, but only if there is some bone there to work with.

In the case of patients like Ryan, who have almost no bone to grow, and no existing joint bone to fit into the skull, a bone graft has been the only hope. Once the child is old enough to have a rib bone of sufficient size to transplant, doctors have performed the surgery in hopes that the graft will take root and become permanent.

Since Ryan's bone graft failed, Buchman and his team started from scratch, much as they had done with the other patient, who had not wanted a bone graft. After making a cut at the very end of Ryan's tiny, existing malformed bone, Buchman installed a device called a distractor beneath Ryan's cheek.

The distractor, an adjustable rod, is connected to two sets of pins, one set implanted in the bone on either side of the cut. The rod has a gear mechanism on it, which connects through the cheek to a device outside the skin.

This allows Buchman or Ryan's parents to use a key to turn the gear half a millimeter at a time. Each tiny turn creates just a little more room for bone to grow in the gap between the cut ends.

"The body thinks it's going to heal a fracture, and by stretching the sides away from each other, we sort of throw a little monkey wrench in the works, and the body says, 'Well I thought we were healing a fracture that was just that big. OK, we'll now fix one that's that big," Buchman says.

Ryan's only complaint is that the distractor has kept him from playing hockey and riding his bike, to protect the new bone.

"Most of the time I can't even feel it, so it's pretty good," he says.

Ryan's progress has been slow and steady, but the distractor has allowed him to grow nearly 35 centimeters of three-dimensional bone.

Buchman is optimistic that it will produce solid bone after a healing period ends and the distractor is removed in early fall.

When it is done, Ryan will have a new main horizontal body of his left mandible, an ascending ramus, or vertical part of the mandible, and a condylar joint that articulates with the skull to make up the jaw joint. His teeth will be better aligned, and he should be able to move his jaw much better because of the new joint.

The success of Ryan's treatment, and of dozens of less-extensive distraction osteogenesis procedures around the county encourages Buchman. But there's still more to learn, he says.

"What the extent of the bone growth can be, and how far we can go, these are questions we're going to have to answer in the laboratory," Buchman says.

So, he and colleagues from U of M's School of Dentistry are doing basic laboratory research to study at the microscopic level how the bone cells form and harden in the gap during distraction osteogenesis, how growth signals are sent within and between cells, and how genes govern the bone cells' action.

Buchman is also studying the long-term effects of distraction osteogenesis on the psychosocial and communication status of children who have the procedure done for facial deformities, compared with these who do not.

Since social and psychological factors are often cited as part of the reason to make such dramatic and costly efforts to fix facial birth defects, Buchman hopes to show how the outcome and timing of each procedure affect patients in non-physical ways.

That kind of information will only add to what he says parents already know.

"I think it is medically necessary to have a face that looks like a face," he says. "Only after you're a parent of a child with a congenital deformity do you realize that it's a very important thing to look normal."

As for Ryan, his experience has given him a new ambition for later in life, and a new pen pal: the little girl who has gone through the same procedure at U of M.

"When I grow up I want to be a doctor, because I want to help people and I've seen a lot of good things that they can do," Ryan said.

DOWN ON THE FARM

Community Farm provides alternative for families

By Sheila Pursglove
Staff Writer

Visitors to the Ann Arbor Community Farm may be deceived by its name.

That's because it's located in Lima Township.

An example of community supported agriculture, the Ann Arbor Community Farm is an ecosystem, totally supplying itself. All manure and natural fertilizers are made and grown on site.

"We live life from scratch here, growing a variety of fresh, organic produce," says farmer Anne Elder.

"Our members play a large part in helping us heal our earth and support an alternative form of farming, bio-dynamic agriculture. Each member of the farm is a part of the whole organism.

"By financing our farm and allowing it to work as it does, no chemical fertilizers are used, just wonderful compost," she says.

Currently in its 13th year of operation, the farm's first home was in Whitmore Lake, before moving to Huron River Drive in Dexter.

For the past eight years, it has been located on the former Dettling farm, at 1525 S. Fletcher Road, in Lima Township.

A Centennial Farm in old Jerusalem Village, the farmhouse, one of the oldest in the Chelsea area, dates back to 1832. The property also boasts two huge, red barns and the original one-room village schoolhouse, now dilapidated and boarded up.

Property owner Isabelle Yingling, delighted with the community farm concept when she accompanied her son's fourth-grade class on a visit to the Ann Arbor Township location, offered the farm its current home eight years ago.

In exchange for leasing the land and barns to the Community Farm, she shares in the produce and gets the equivalent value in rent.

"I even worked on the farm myself last year, as an apprentice, and my own garden has benefited from advice from Paul and Annie," Yingling says.

"My daughters, Celeste and Mani, enjoy living on a working farm."

Yingling is currently working with the Washtenaw-Potawatomi Land Trust and the Community Farm for a permanent deeding of the land to offer a longer lease.

"When we started here, the soil hadn't been tilled in many years. So, while it was hard work, it was perfect in that there had been no pesticides and the land had rested for several years. It has been a very productive site," Elder says.

More than 30 different crops grown here include carrots, broccoli, peas, tomatoes, beets, Swiss chard, string beans, winter squash and sweet corn.

Each of the farm's seven fields has its own charming and evocative name, from The Old Pasture, Toad and Love in a Mist to Aldebaran's Dream, Heron, Redwing Blackbird, Killdeer and Old Spring Garden, also known as The Fruit Fields, where strawberries, pears, watermelons, and cantaloupes grow.

Honeybees from seven hives, tended by beekeeper John Ochs, produce organic honey.

The farm runs seven days a week, with farmer Paul Bantle and Elder putting in at least 80 hours.

So valuable is this hard-working couple that when they were considering a move up north, members raised funds to keep them on the farm, and help them find a home locally. They now live just down the road from the farm.

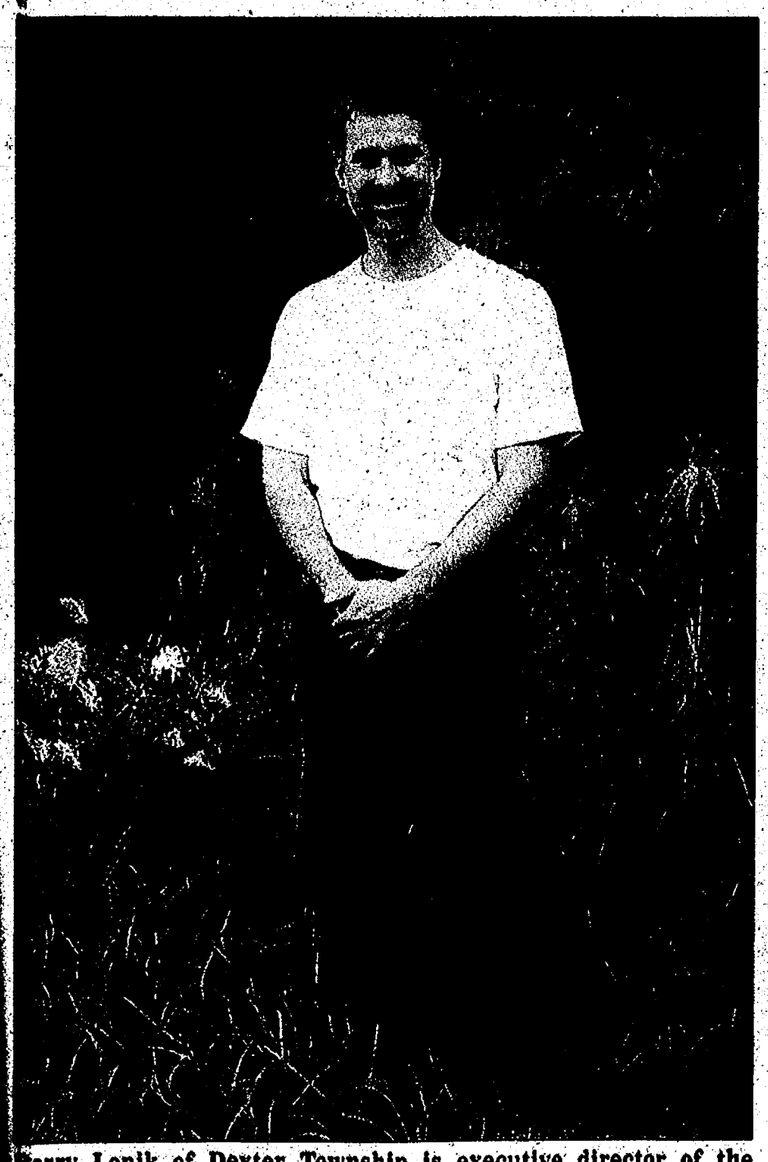

Bantle, formerly of Adrian, and Elder, an East Coast native, met while working at the now defunct Wildflour Community Bakery in Ann Arbor, where Barry Lonik of Dexter Township is executive director of the Washtenaw-Potawatomi Land Trust. He has been a familiar face across Washtenaw County as he helps people find ways to preserve land from development.

Township man works to preserve land

PERSONALITY

By Michelle Rogers
Editor

Barry Lonik loves nature and all it has to offer æ from the rich farmland that produces food for his family to the wetlands, rivers, lakes, woods, hills and valleys he likes to explore.

A friend to farmers and nature lovers, this local man is a familiar face across Washtenaw County. And even though he didn't grow up in this area, he now says he can't imagine living anywhere else.

A native of Oak Park, a working class suburb of Detroit, Lonik is the youngest son born to Joann and Tony Lonik. There is a 12-year age gap between him and his middle brother, Larry.

Although he felt more like an only child, Lonik says the age difference was advantageous in some respects.

"It was almost like having four parents," he says.

Lonik was an average child growing up in the 1960s and '70s. He enjoyed playing team sports and was on the honor roll.

He says Oak Park had a lot to offer as far as entertainment, but there was something missing.

"There were interesting and challenging things to do, but not in the natural world," he says.

"I remember at age 12 or 13 pulling out a map of southeast Michigan and finding out where the nearest flowing water was, which was in Birmingham," he says.

"I got on my bike and rode the six or seven miles to Birmingham until I found the stream."

From then on, Lonik says, he spent at least one day a week in the summer near the water just hanging out, dangling his feet in the river and taking in all nature had to offer.

By the time Lonik was of the age when he wanted to go camping and investigate the outdoors, he says his parents had already done it with his brothers and were no longer interested.

So from ages 5 through 12, he says, he had this longing to explore nature. Finally, his oldest brother, Gary, stepped up. He took the youngest Lonik camping and canoeing on the Pine River, Muskegon River and the Flat River.

Now, Lonik says, he is making up for that seven-year period when he was out of touch with nature. Besides helping to preserve the landscape as executive director of the Washtenaw-Potawatomi Land Trust, Lonik shares his favorite recreational spots with friends and people he meets.

"That's the kind of thing I enjoy doing. I like to point people to trails and lakes and rivers, so they can have a nice, quiet recreational experience," he says.

After graduating at the top of the class from Berkley High School in 1979, Lonik went straight to Albion College to study economics.

"Basically, I think I didn't know what I wanted to do and it sounded interesting," he says.

"I quickly found that was not the life for me. I found I hated accounting, for one thing, and that was a required class.

"There were other things in the curriculum that didn't interest me," he says. "But I remember more than anything being in an economics class and the professor talking about units of labor.

"I kept thinking, 'Units of labor, you mean people.' It seemed so foreign and disrespectful to refer to human beings as units of labor. It didn't seem right to me, so I got out of that program."

Lonik returned the fall of his sophomore year open to any new experiences that came his way. He sampled a variety of courses and decided to create his own major: human ecology, which today is more commonly known as environmental studies.

Lonik signed up for the work/study program and was assigned to the White House Nature Center, a 230-acre preserve on Albion's campus, where he helped clear trails, plant trees, conduct outdoor education programs and teach outdoor skills.

"That was definitely an influential experience, being able to have a hands-on, broad-based role in running an outdoor education center and being involved in land management.

"For a long time, I thought of that as the best job I've ever had," he says. "Now, what I do, I consider the best job I've ever had."

Lonik graduated from Albion in 1983. Having never been west of Chicago, he packed up his car and hit the road with his then-girlfriend. They ended up settling in Jackson, Wyo., for a year.

"It's strikingly beautiful with a number of amazing things one can do, from wildlife viewing and hiking to paddling.

"It's one of the most intact and diverse ecosystems in the United States," he says.

Lonik worked odd jobs to make ends meet and volunteered his time to the Alliance for Responsible Planning. It was through this organization that Lonik became interested in development issues.

Lonik returned to Oak Park in 1984 and applied to graduate school at the University of Michigan's School of Natural

Varsity football squad rolls over Fowlerville

By Doug Trojanowski
Special Writer

The Chelsea Bulldogs varsity football team opened their season on the road with a dominating win over the Fowlerville Gladiators. The final score was 41-13.

The 'Dogs took advantage of three Gladiator turnovers early in the game, jumping out to a 21-0 lead in the first quarter.

On Fowlerville's first possession, Nate Keiser picked off a Gladiator pass. Chelsea quarterback Chris Brigham tossed a pass 44 yards to wide receiver Tony Scheffler, down the sideline for the Bulldogs' first points of the season. Mike Radka added the point after for the 7-0 Chelsea lead.

The Bulldogs continued to capitalize on Fowlerville turnovers. After a fumble, the Bulldogs scored on a reverse with some dazzle. On the reverse, Scheffler took the ball from Brigham, then tossed 55 yards to an open Cory Picklesimer for the touchdown.

Still in the first quarter, Chelsea recovered another Fowlerville fumble. Out of the backfield, Radka rambled for 17 yards into the end zone.

In the second quarter, the Gladiators attempted a comeback as Fowlerville quarterback Zack Douglass found Justin O'Neil open in the end zone for a touchdown. The extra point was good and Chelsea's lead was cut to 21-7.

When the Bulldogs' first drive of the second half stalled, Radka came on to try a 37-yeard field goal. But a Fowlerville lineman broke though the line and blocked the kick.

The Gladiators' O'Neil picked up the loose ball and ran 73 yards for a touchdown, cutting the Bulldog lead 21-13.

But in the end, Chelsea was too much for the Gladiators, overwhelming them on the ground.

"In the second half they made a commitment to stop our passing game," said Brad Bush, Chelsea's head coach. "(That) opened up our rushing game in the second half."

The Bulldogs would take the next kickoff and sustain an impressive drive capped by a Picklesimer 23-yard touchdown run.

On Fowlerville's next possession, Eddie McClendon, picked off a Gladiator pass. On the next play, Chris Cooper scampered 64 yards to score again. Later in the game, Mike Sayers rounded out the scoring with a 34-yard touchdown run.

Chelsea dominated on the ground, grinding out 319 yards in 34 attempts; 249 of those yards came in the second half. Cooper was the Bulldog workhorse, running 166 yards in just 13 carries. Picklesimer had five carries for 67 yards.

In the air, Brigham was five of eight for 93 yards. Scheffler threw one pass for 55 yards. Scheffler also led all receivers with four catches for 88 yards, Picklesimer had a 55-yard grab and Cooper had one catch for five yards.

Chelsea's total offensive output came to 467 yards while Fowlerville posted 265 total yards.

The Bulldogs will put their 1-0 record on the line as they host the Adrian Maples (0-1) at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow at the Jerry Niehaus Field.

The Maples dropped their opener to Portage Northern by a 21-18 score. Adrian was a Division 1 quarterfinalist in last season's playoffs.

During its home opener, the varsity football squad dumped Fowlerville 41-13. The Bulldogs were led by a strong running game that included 166 yards by Chris Cooper (right). The defense held Fowlerville to just 265 yards. Junior linebacker Joe Koengeter (54) brings down a Fowlerville runner.

Chelsea golf team season underway

By Colleen O'Neill
Special Writer

Like the dropping nighttime temperatures and the first hints of color on the maples, high school fall sports have arrived.

The Chelsea boys' golf team has opened its competitive season in excellent fashion. The team started with a fourth-place finish in Manchester then followed that with two, third-place finishes in other tournaments.

"The team turned in an outstanding performance at the prestigious Jackson County Western Invitational," said head coach Jim Tallman.

Traditionally, Tallman said, the invitational features some of the top teams from the southern part of the state.

Ann Arbor Pioneer won the tournament with 298, followed by last year's state champions, Coldwater, with 315. Chelsea took third place honors with 318.

Bulldogs Craig Indyke scored 77; Paul Newhouse, 79; Chris Johnson, 81; and Jared Wacker, 81.

"This finish marks the best performance at this tournament in the past 11 years," Tallman said. "Our previous best was a 322 team score."

Earlier in the week, the team took another third-place finish at the Tecumseh Tournament with a score of 321.

Newhouse led the Bulldogs with a 75, good enough for second-place honors at the tournament. Indyke's 77 was the third best score among all golfers. Johnson's 82 and Mike Mignano's 87 also counted toward the team score.

The Bulldogs started their season on Aug. 18 with a fourth-place finish at the Manchester Invitational.

The tournament, originally scheduled for 18 holes, was reduced to nine holes after rain began accumulating on the greens.

Dundee won the event with a 162, followed by Pinckney with 163. Ann Arbor Gabriel Richard was third with 165 and Chelsea was fourth with 168.

Scoring for Chelsea were Newhouse with 39, Jared

JV football squad squeaks past Fowlerville

By Doug Trojanowski
Special Writer

The junior varsity Bulldogs held on to take a tight win, outlasting Fowlerville 14-13 in the season opener.

Chelsea got its first points of the season after a impressive drive highlighted by a third and long 59-yard pass from quarterback Jake Freeman to wide receiver Ben Daniels.

Before the crowd could settle down, Freeman was at it again, this time completing a 39-yard touchdown pass to Dan Grabarkiewitcz. The point after attempt was good, lifting Chelsea to a 7-0 lead.

Chelsea came right back to score a second time in the first half with a corner pass from Freeman to Daniels.

However, disaster would strike as the Bulldogs, backed up to their own end zone, fumbled on a quarter back option and left the ball in the end zone for Fowlerville to pounce on for its first score of the game.

Chelsea got its first points of the season after a impressive drive highlighted by a third and long 59-yard pass from quarterback Jake Freeman to wide receiver Ben Daniels.

Fowlerville came out strong in the second half, dominating time of possession. Another Fowlerville touchdown would bring the team within a point of the Bulldogs.

But on the point after attempt, Bulldog lineman Nick Wood broke through the line for the block, denying Fowlerville the extra point, and the win. Chelsea was able to hold on a late run by Fowlerville to preserve the victory.

Chelsea committed five penalties for 30 yards on the game, while Fowlerville had five penalties for 40 yards, including a costly clipping penalty, late in the fourth quarter, which nullified a Gladiator touchdown.

Chelsea had 228 yards in total offense, 76 rushing and 152 in the air. Fowlerville had 140 yards of total offense, 67 rushing and 73 passing.

Nick Auguier from Chelsea led all rushers with eight attempts for 82 yards. Freeman was eight of 12 passing for 152 yards. Daniels led the receivers with two catches for 61 yards and a touchdown. Woods and Jacob Holton both recovered Fowlerville fumbles for the Bulldogs.

The junior varsity team will see action at 7 p.m. tonight

Local swimmers compete at Olympic Trials

By Kristine Militello
Special Writer

Two local swimmers showed record of their amazing achievements as they arrived in Indianapolis to compete at the U.S. Olympic Trials last month.

Adam Messner of Dexter and Josh Hack of Chelsea, two young men who were once teammates at the Ann Arbor Swim Club, went to the trials with one goal in mind: to secure a spot on the U.S. Olympic Swim Team.

While neither swimmer realized his Olympic dream, it was certainly not an event to throw away.

Messner, who turned in personal best times in each of his three events, has a lot to be proud of. In the 100-meter butterfly, he turned in a seventh-place finish; in the 200-meter freestyle, he secured an eighth-place finish; and in the 100-meter freestyle, he grabbed 33rd place.

In each event Messner swam against no less than 80 of the country's top swimmers. Only the first-place finisher is guaranteed an Olympic berth.

Four years ago, Messner only qualified for one event, the 400-meter freestyle, and then finished 12th.

But according to his father, Dave Messner, this year's event had a much different face from that of the last Olympic Trials.

Four years ago, the trials took place in March just as Messner was finishing his training season. This year, with the trials in August, Messner was not at his peak.

That's not the only difference.

This year's trials, according to Dave Messner, were very commercial.

"They doubled the number of swimmers. I think they're trying to popularize the sport. A good portion of those swimmers there didn't even have a chance," he said.

Hack was one of those swimmers not expected to do very well. But as he explained himself, his performance was "unbelievable!"

"I didn't expect to be at that level of competition. I was nervous," he said.

Hack, who finished 25th in the 200-meter breaststroke and 12th in the 100-meter breaststroke, exceeded all expectations.

"I dropped a lot of time in the last year," he said.

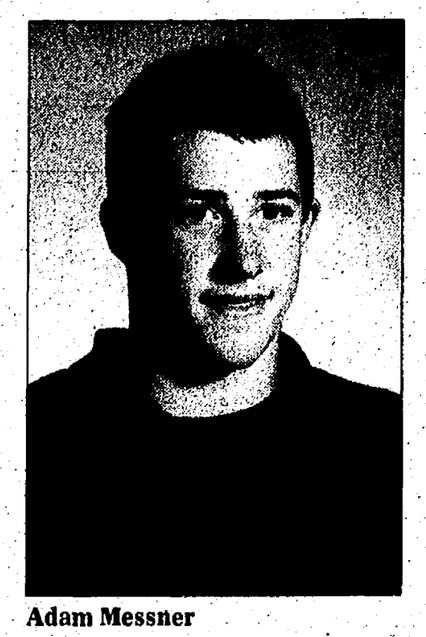

It all changed for Hack last year when he joined the University of Michigan Swim Team under coach John Urbanchek.

"He started to change my stroke, and I've been adapting," he said. "It's still not there yet, but it's getting there."

Hack, whose stronger event is usually the 200-meter breaststroke, turned in his best time in the 100-meter breaststroke.

"I can't maintain my new stroke for the 200, but I'm working on it," he said.

Hack remembers starting swimming when he was just 5 years old.

"We had a pond on our property, and my parents enrolled me in swimming so I could swim in the pond," he recalled.

It was then that his parents enrolled him in his first competitive swim experience. But Hack didn't like it and quit.

It wasn't until he was 9 years old that he took up swimming again.

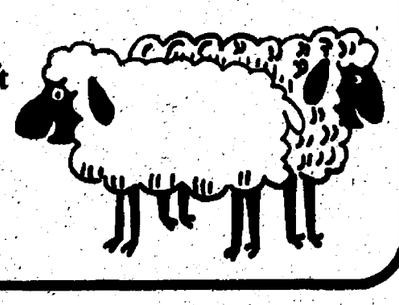

"I wasn't very good," he said. "I always tried to get out of practice by saying my goggles were filling up with water."

But at the age of 11, Hack decided to give it one season of hard work, and to his surprise he just started improving.

"And I've been improving ever

Wacker with 42, Mignano with 43 and Johnson with 44.

Newhouse took second-place medal honors for the day with his score. Stu Proctor of Pinckney took first place with 38.

Senior captains Wacker and Craig Indyke lead the 2000 Chelsea golf team. Tallman held a three-round qualifying tournament to determine his top 12 golfers.

Indyke has three varsity letters going into his final season and Wacker has one. Mignano lettered last year as a sophomore.

Sophomores Newhouse and Johnson are on the varsity team. Other sophomores are Andy Mossburg, Tony Bowen, Andre Bravo, Justin Beeman and Joel Lawrence.

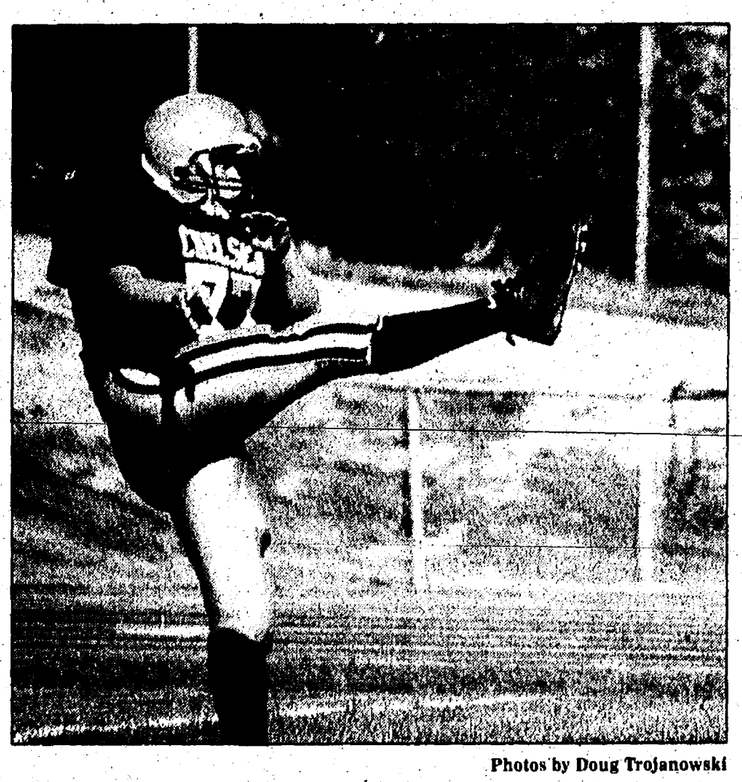

"In addition, 10 freshmen round out the team and several have displayed potential for earning a varsity letter," Tallman said. "Nate Chamberlin and Mike Lucas both finish high enough in the qualifying tournament to deserve shots in at least some varsity matches."

The remaining freshmen members on the team are David Bailey, Pieter Boshoven, Andy Clemons, Andy Daley, Bryce Olejniczak, Spencer Gallagher, Chance Mikkelson, and Kenny Mallory.

Tallman said he feels the Tecumseh tournament taught him a lot about what his team will face in the league. The Jackson tournament, he said, taught him how the Bulldogs stack up with a lot of the better teams in the southern part of the state.

"I'm starting to get some really good feelings about this team," Tallman said. "Their work ethic and desire to win are tremendous.

"If we keep this up, we could be real contenders for the first championship in the newly aligned SEC."

Chelsea swimming set high goals

In swimming, as with any other sport, the more participants you have, the better your team. That's because depth is a critical component of team success.

This year's Chelsea girls' varsity swim team has high expectations and lofty goals, as a result of an additional 20 more team members in the program.

Expanding from 24 to 44 competitive young athletes, the team recently completed its preseason training camp in Holland during the week of Aug. 13.

Coaches John Crispin and Bob Moffett describe this year's camp as one of the best they've ever had from a training and coaching perspective. They hope to improve on last year's 8-6 dual meet record.

Another important addition to this year's team will be the presence of diving coach Tom Ceo.

Changes to this year's camp included renting a large house on the Lake Michigan shoreline for the team, similar to the approach taken by the Chelsea girls' varsity softball program during the spring of each year.

The end result, according to Crispin, was the players got adequate rest and good food.

"The quality of our training sessions was much higher as a result, and we had more control over our environment," he said.

The team practiced twice a day at Bouws Municipal Pool, near the Hope College campus, and received three substantial meals a day, prepared by a cadre of parents and coordinated by master chef Pat Minnick, a dad with three girls in the program.

Crispin, now in his fourth year as head coach, feels that this year's team will be stronger and better than those of the recent past.

"Based on this year's camp, we're one week ahead of schedule, and our morale is great," he said.

The difference in this year's team from those of the recent past will be the huge number of girls in the program.

"This will be the largest team in recent history, and we've doubled in size. Three-fourths of the team are freshman and sophomores, but they're all very talented and very experienced," Crispin said.

"This incoming freshman since!" he said. "I thought my chances at the Olympic trials were slim. But after one year with coach Urbanchek, my times have dropped so much it's just amazing."

Hack's immediate goal is to qualify for the NCAA Championship in the spring and to score in each breaststroke.

For Messner it's back to Stanford University to finish his last year on the swim teach as team tri-captain.

Both swimmers end their summers with a tinge of sadness at having walked away empty-handed.

But it's sadness that will only fade with time, and it is then that they will both realize the magnitude of what each has achieved.

For it isn't every day that two young athletes from our little corner of the world qualify for the Olympic trials, let alone finish so well.

LONIK

Resources. He was accepted and earned his master's degree in 1987.

Lonik's master's project involved him and six others researching the Saginaw River and Saginaw Bay for possible sources of pollutants and identifying where those pollutants were coming from. They turned in a 700-page report that was used as part of a remedial action plan to clean up both waterways.

Lonik's first job out of graduate school was with the Citizens for a Better Environment in Milwaukee. Lonik says Wisconsin at the time did not have any discharge limits for toxic pollutants being released by industry and wastewater treatment plants.

Lonik represented a coalition of environmental groups in the negotiation process to set discharge limits.

"That was a pretty big challenge for me, having to be the only voice in a group of antagonist people," he says.

Also as part of his job, Lonik helped work out a remedial action plan to identify where pollutants were coming from in the Milwaukee Harbor and reducing them. At the time, the harbor was one of the most polluted areas in the Great Lakes.

Lonik left the job in 1989 to return to his college stomping ground of Ann Arbor. He had been driving the 330-mile trip back on weekends to spend time in the city with friends.

It was during those trips back that Lonik says he started to notice the difference in the landscapes from Wisconsin to Michigan.

"It wasn't until I got to Washtenaw County when I noticed a different feeling for the land that didn't come to me on those other rural routes," he says. "I can't put a finger on it, but it feels different. It feels special, and I knew it was where I wanted to be."

So Lonik found a job in Flint, but made his home in various rural locations across Washtenaw and Livingston counties.

In Flint, he ran a research and outreach project on waste reduction for the University of Michigan. The goal was to promote the collection of recyclable materials as a way of economic development in Flint.

Lonik helped set up a recycling program on the U of M Flint campus and other colleges around the city.

During the early 1990s, Lonik says he became concerned over the changes he was seeing in the landscape around Washtenaw County.

"I started to see more subdivisions pop up, more houses, more traffic on the roads, and I started to get more concerned," he says.

Lonik began researching the different options available to address the changing landscape and discovered land trusts were a way people could protect their property from development.

In 1991, Lonik received a phone call from the founder of the Potawatomi Community Land Trust asking him if he would like to join the board.

"I sometimes refer to it as the fateful phone call because over the course of a number of years my life has totally changed," he says.

Lonik accepted the board position and immediately began pouring his heart and soul into the organization. He continued with his job in Flint, which was flexible enough that it allowed him time to do research for the land trust.

One of the organization's first projects was the Community Farm of Ann Arbor. Lonik helped find a 12-acre site in Lima Township where city residents could buy shares and have farmers grow their vegetables and fruits.

The idea, he says, is that people share in the risk farmers take every season if there is a bad crop and the rewards when it's healthy. At the same time, valuable agricultural land is being used to its fullest potential.

After a year, Lonik was named board president of the land trust and the name of the organization was changed to the Potawatomi Land Trust. A year ago, the group merged with the Washtenaw Land Conservancy and is now known as the Washtenaw-Potawatomi Land Trust.

Five years ago, Lonik pitched the idea to the board that he become the executive director. A grant from the Community Foundation of Ann Arbor helped pay his part-time salary. In February 1999, his position was upgraded to full time.

From 1995 through 1998, Lonik also worked for the Michigan Environmental Council, a coalition of environmental, health and conservation groups funded by the Kellogg Foundation. It was his job to work on a project that promotes farmland preservation and sustainable farm practices.

The job culminated in November 1998 with a countywide millage request to preserve farmland and natural areas, do urban redevelopment projects and invest in planning.

Although the request failed the fight is not over. Lonik has since helped put a 10-year, .25-mill levy on this November's ballot for the county to buy sensitive areas for public use, as natural parkland or low-impact recreational use.

"For me, there is a measure of glee we were able to pick that piece out of a failed proposal and get the (opponents) to support it," he says. "But that still leaves the challenge of farmland."

Lonik saw the Washtenaw County Board endorse a farmland and open space preservation ordinance and is now encouraging townships within the county to put the law on their books.

As part of his job with the land trust, Lonik helps farmers fill out applications to a state farmland preservation program. Those farmers get extra points if the townships they live in have the ordinance in place.

Also as part of his job, Lonik helps property owners set up conservation easements on their land so that it will remain intact with no further development.

In the last five years, Lonik has helped preserve 800 acres in Washtenaw County and expects to cross the 1,000 marker by year's end.

Lonik enjoys living the rural life in Dexter Township. He and his wife, Laura Treemore-Spears, bought their first house on Island Lake Road. They have two acres in the middle of the township's agricultural district.

Lonik says they chose to buy an older home because of their commitment to not contribute to the changing landscape across Washtenaw County.

"I don't want my commitments to negatively affect the availability of land for agricultural use or for the natural community," he says.

The couple's home is surrounded by fields that make up the Ruhlig fruit and vegetable farm. Lonik says he likes that he can walk outside his back door and pick strawberries or sweet corn.

Lonik has restored his lawn to a more natural setting, with native prairie gardens, a natural area and a vegetable garden. He and his wife grow their own food, such as asparagus, grapes, raspberries and horseradish.

"I can't imagine living anywhere else," Lonik says. "It's so beautiful and we are so fortunate to be living here."

The couple have a 16-month-old son, Wesley Treemore. Wesley's first name means western meadow. The name Treemore is an old nickname of Lonik's that he and his wife legally adopted so they could share a last name with their son.

In his spare time, when he can find it, Lonik enjoys making raspberry preserves, cooking and eating dinner on his deck while watching the sun set. He also enjoys canoeing and windsurfing on local lakes and rivers, as well as hiking, skiing and swimming.

DEALING WITH A NUISANCE

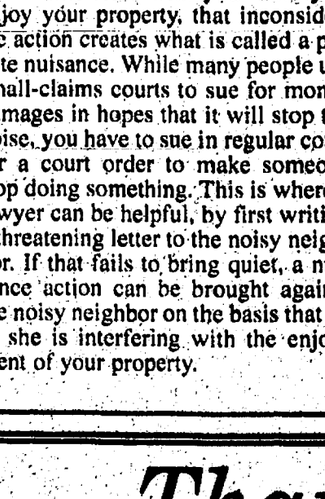

When a neighbor's unreasonable action interferes with your ability to enjoy your property, that inconsiderate action creates what is called a private nuisance. While many people use small-claims courts to sue for money damages in hopes that it will stop the noise, you have to sue in regular court for a court order to make someone stop doing something. This is where a lawyer can be helpful, by first writing a threatening letter to the noisy neighbor. If that fails to bring quiet, a nuisance action can be brought against the noisy neighbor on the basis that he or she is interfering with the enjoyment of your property.

Noise is just one type of nuisance that may be actionable, others can include polluting, and the causing of foul odors, performing dangerous activities, and damage resulting from domestic animals. To learn your rights as a homeowner, call the LAW OFFICES OF KITCHEN & STRINGER at 426-4695 to schedule a free consultation at our offices, located in Dexter, at 3249 Broad Street. We also handle cases involving personal injury, real estate, business and family law, wills, and estate probate.

HINT: When suing for private nuisance, it may be helpful to make a recording of the noise.

Class of 1960

A total of 32 classmates from Chelsea High School's class of 1960 celebrated their 40th class reunion at Reddeman Farms on Aug. 12. The class began high school at the Harrison Street school before transferring to the high school on Washington Street before the completion of their junior year in the spring of 1959. Arthritis topic of forum

People who live in Michigan have gotten used to using the palm of their right hand, thumb extended, as a makeshift map. It's an easy way to show people where a particular place is located.

For the 1.5 million people in Michigan who have one or more of the over 100 forms of arthritis and related diseases, their bodies serve as maps to where the pain is located.

A series of public education forums titled Arthritis from Head to Toe, scheduled by the Arthritis Foundation, Michigan Chapter, will offer help in taking control of arthritis.

Experts in diagnosis and treatment will discuss new drugs and answer questions at each forum.

From 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Oct. 24 at the Chelsea Community Hospital, the first forum will deal with arthritis and bones.

Forums at other locations around the state will detail treatments and strategies for managing arthritis in other parts of the body.

Admission to the forums is free, but seating is limited and pre-registration is required.

You may register by mail to Arthritis Foundation, Michigan Chapter, 17117 W. Nine Mile Rd., Ste. 950, Southfield, MI 48075-4508, or e-mail info.mi@arthritis.org.

In a recent Gallup survey, nearly all Americans (89 percent) said they experience pain each month. Despite the prevalence of pain, only about half of those polled (51 percent) have visited a doctor in the past three years for their pain and nearly two-thirds of Americans (64 percent) see a doctor only when they cannot stand the pain any longer.

Sixty-nine percent of older Americans (age 65 and over) who responded to the survey cited arthritis as the most common cause of their pain.

"Arthritis is not a natural part of growing older and pain is not simply a fact of life," said Michelle Glazier, president and CEO of the Arthritis Foundation, Michigan Chapter. "There are things people can do to take control of arthritis, including managing their pain and other symptoms."

The mission of the Arthritis Foundation is to improve lives through leadership in the prevention, control, and cure of arthritis and related diseases.

Arthritis refers to more than 100 different diseases, which affect areas around joints but also can affect other parts of the body. It causes pain and loss of movement, and is a leading cause of disability in the United States.

The Arthritis Foundation, Michigan chapter sends about 91 percent of its revenue on medical research and quality of life programs and services.

For more information on these programs and services, call the Arthritis Information and Referral Service at 1-800-283-7800 or visit the Foundation's Web site at www.arthritis.org.

FARM

they met Community Farm founders Cindy Olivas and Marsha Barton.

Bantle and Elder joined the farm full time in its fourth year of operation. Trustee Karen Chalmer came on board full time the fifth year. The couple's daughter, Mahogany, is a student at Washtenaw Community College.

Fourteen apprentices, who work between five and 20 hours a week, receive a small stipend, lots of produce and an education in farming.

"Our crop of apprentices, ranging from retirees to high school students, is great," Elder says. "We are feeding other farms with trained farmers and many return to learn and grow a second or third year."

On a recent produce pick-up day, apprentice Bob Avery, a retired computer programmer from Ann Arbor, washed collards and kale at the sink, a far cry from his former work.

"I was a member for six years. Now, I work as an apprentice. I enjoy working with something more real than machines," he says, while shaking excess water from the leaves.

More than 200 families receive weekly baskets of produce throughout the farm's growing season and, at the end of the fall harvest, a mound of winter root vegetables.

The $650 annual share provides sufficient vegetables for a family of two adults and two children.

The shares, which may be subdivided, are paid on a voluntary sliding scale, ranging from $475 to $850.

An additional $100 fee may be paid in any of three optional forms: cash, by volunteering in the fields or the farm office, or by selling one's own services. One member offers massage therapy, a boon to bodies weary from farm labor. Another offers career counseling.

Volunteer opportunities include carpentry, tree removal, baking and working in the fields.

"The most famous spas use organic mud as beauty treatment, we can get ours for free in the fields," says Karen Chalmer.

Members, who receive the Barn Swallow newsletter, pick up their harvest produce twice weekly, on Wednesdays and Saturdays.

They will all join in celebrating their annual Community Farm Festival, with a potluck dinner and dessert, bonfire and square dancing.

Dexter residents Barry Lonik and Lara Treemore-Spears have been shareholders for years.

"We appreciate the holistic approach, the direct relationship with the land, the food and the people who grow it," says Lonik, executive director of the Washtenaw-Potawatomi Land Trust. "It's amazing what people can accomplish when they work together as a community group with the same ideals and goals.

"We all come together with a central theme, to produce good food, take care of the soil, and take care of the farmers who work so hard for us, by offering them health benefits and a reasonable salary for their long hours and hard toil."

Lonik originally came across what is called Community Supported Agriculture while living in Wisconsin.

"I loved the idea, it seemed very personal, and I signed up for it. When I moved back to southeast Michigan 12 years ago, I looked to find another community farm. It's certainly been one of the more unique experiences I've had."

Lonik would like to see the idea of community farming become more widespread.

"This is a successful example of a different approach to farming. Everyone benefits—the consumer, the grower and the land," he says.

Fund-raising for the farm includes garage sales, the sale of cookbooks and greeting cards, and a booth at the Alternative Holiday Fair at the First Baptist Church in Ann Arbor during the winter.

Visitors who stop by the Community Farm are guaranteed a warm welcome from farmers Paul Bantle and Anne Elder — and their four cows, 9-year-old Aldebaran, her two offspring Ama and Ashoka, and Rehlein, whose name is German for "little deer."

"Our girls are peaceful and gentle, love meeting people, and especially enjoy getting hugs and pats," says Elder, while giving a tummy rub to an appreciate Aldebaran, who she calls the queen of the farm.

The "ladies" are joined by two goats, Billy Butt and Ginger, and 25 chickens, led by Jessica and Snowflake.

"We raise our baby chicks in our bathtub, so they are very used to human touch and socializing with people," Elder says.

Visitors are welcome Monday through Saturday, but should call ahead. For more information, call 433-0261.

Beaumont to retire

The Rev. Jerrold F. Beaumont is stepping down as vicar of St. Barnabas Church by June 30, 2001.

Beaumont has been the minister of St. Barnabas for more than 23 years and is the founder of Faith in Action as an outreach program of the church. This agency has become the largest community supported human services agency in western Washtenaw County.

Beaumont has served as a non-stipendiary priest for several years beyond what is considered the retirement-age for a priest.

He could leave his post earlier than June.

Welcome to the Synagogue where nobody is a stranger for very long.

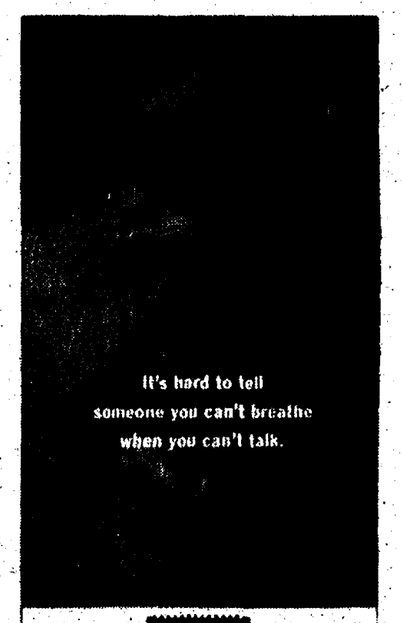

Getting to know newcomers is always our top priority. We are a family of friends who study, pray, and celebrate together.

Let us welcome you.

LOVING HOMES NEEDED

Katie - log number 63081
Katie has done it now... This female Siberian Husky mix managed to lose her family. Katie arrived as a stray August 10th. If you know her family - please let them know she's here! Otherwise, the best we can hope for is that this 40 pound gal can find a new family - one that will keep a close eye on her even after she learns to stay home!

Fred - log number 63121
Fred is a hound mix. If we couldn't tell by looking at him, we'd still know it by his letting his nose get him separated from his family... This 50 pound guy arrived stray August 12th. He seems to be about 6 years old. We really hope his family will come and claim him, and return him to a more familiar environment. If not, perhaps Fred can link up with a new and lasting family like yours.

GOALS

class could be one of the most talented groups we've had in a very long time, if not the most talented," Moffett said. "This kind of depth will allow us to zone kids into one or two events that they're good at, as opposed to putting kids in spots just to try to win meets. We'll now be able to specialize in different events."

An analysis of the strength of a team in sports begins with its leadership, and this year's team is led by four impressive seniors. They are Ashley Augustine, Chris Broshar, Jennifer Minnick and Mary Paul.

Augustine has been a team standout since her freshman year, and the holder of three varsity records at Chelsea High School.

Last year, she finished third in the state (Class B) in the 100-meter backstroke, ninth in the 50-meter freestyle, and was a top 12 finisher as a member of the 200-meter medley relay team.

As a captain, Augustine's team goals are to see the team finish in the top eight in the state and to serve as a mentor for the younger girls on the team.

Augustine said she would like to achieve beyond anything she's ever done at the state meet by the end of the year.

Captains Broshar and Minnick were both 1999 state meet qualifiers. Broshar swam in the 200- and 500-meter freestyle races. Minnick swam in the 100-meter freestyle and was a member of the 200-meter medley relay team.

Broshar said she would like to see the team become more successful at the state level.

Minnick said she would like to see the girls bond as a team, and to personally beat all of my previous times to make it back to the state meet.

Paul, also a captain competes in the backstroke. According to Crispin, she has won the respect of all of her teammates and is an outstanding leader.

"As large and diverse as this group is, Mary will be instrumental in maintaining team unity and harmony throughout the season," Crispin said.

Paul's goals for the year are to see the team work as hard as possible, but continue to have fun during the season.

"I'd also like to help the team to achieve its goals in any way possible," she said.

According to Crispin, other swimmers to watch include Kari Ceo, a junior he describes as a talented third-year diver who leads an up-and-coming core of freshman and sophomore divers. He said she would add more depth to the team.

Julie Mida, a sophomore and 1999 state medley relay qualifier is another one to keep an eye on. Although recovering from an injury, Crispin said she hopes to return to state level form by mid-season.

Sophomore Rebecca Armstrong is another. She was last year's leading freshman point scorer and is expected to become a state caliber performer in 2000.

Crispin said Tracy Stetson, a sophomore, had a fine year in 1999 as a 200- and 500- freestyler.

Alise Augustine, Kayla Hack, and Katrina Moffett, all freshmen, competed in the middle school state meet in February 2000. Crispin said they are expected to make an immediate impact on this year's program.

The team's dual-meet schedule will be one of the most challenging ever, as Chelsea competes in a re-aligned Southern Conference.

The schedule will include meets against perennial Class A powers Ann Arbor Pioneer and Ann Arbor Huron, as well as Class B State runner-up Dexter.

They will also compete against fourth-place finisher Fenton, as well as top 10 opponents Detroit Country Day, Milan and Tecumseh.

"The quality of our competition will make (the team) more competitive in the end, and our real strength will come through at the end of the year during the SEC championships and at the state meet," Crispin said.

"Last year, we finished 14th in the state in Class B. This year, I'm hoping to improve our dual meet record to nine wins, improve our performance in the SEC, and finish in the top 10 in the state.

"If we really swim well, we could be a top six team," he said. "It all depends on the performances of our young swimmers and divers on the team, who have yet to be tested at this level of competition."

"We have the potential to be a very, very good team," Moffett said, "maybe even one of the best in the history of the Chelsea girls' varsity swim program.

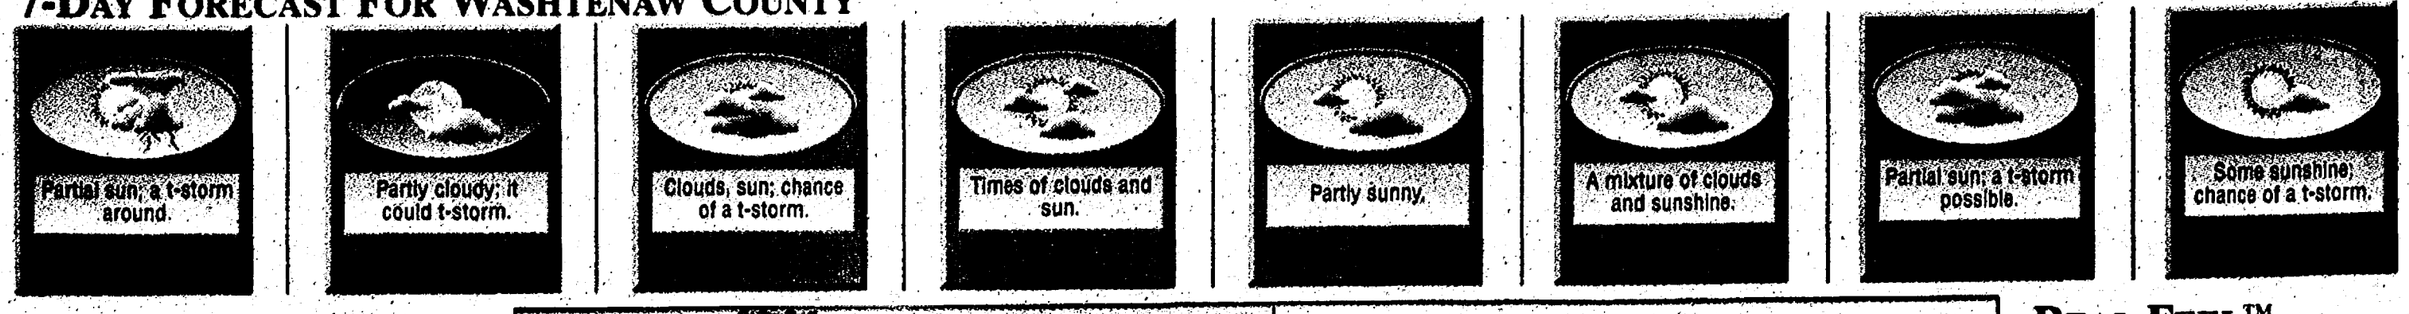

"Our girls need to learn that hard work and desire will be what it takes to get us to the next level. If they can work together as a team to achieve their lofty goals, then there's no limit to what this team can do this year."

The first meet is this afternoon against Detroit Country Day.
