Parishioners at St. Mary Catholic Church held a dedication ceremony Saturday of the bell tower, outdoor stations of the cross and the memorial to unborn children.

New addition Catholic church gets new look

By Lisa Allmendinger

More than 300 people attended the dedication ceremony of several new architectural projects at St. Mary Catholic Church Saturday.

According to parishioner Joseph Yekulis, who coordinated the $130,000 fund-raising project for the church, the seed was planted in 1997 with the thought of saving a 3/4-ton bell that had been out of use for 30 years and was housed at the Holy Ghost Seminary. The seminary is now a courthouse.

Added to this initial project were an outdoor shrine to the "Blessed Mother," 14 outdoor stations of the cross and a memorial to unborn children.

The 350-member St. Mary parish liked the idea for the three-prong project. Yekulis said the parish response was overwhelming.

"We sold all 14 stations of the cross in two weeks," he said, adding that the Knights of Columbus offered $40,000 toward the project.

The entire project was

Residents oppose proposed changes to Palmer site

■ Neighbors are concerned about noise, traffic near site.

By Kim Lange-Hytinen
Special Writer

Residents on South Main Street feel they have been left out of the loop regarding talk of redeveloping the Palmer Ford lot in downtown Chelsea.

The site has been slated for a possible mini retail village, an expanded post office and municipal office complex.

Postal officials are looking at two sites in Chelsea and, according to Postmaster Jeff Rickel, plan to announce a decision in mid-October.

Elizabeth Geisler, a five-year village resident, complained to the Village Council Sept. 26 about how the village has handled the planning for the proposed site. She said there has not been any community input.

Geisler's property sits adjacent to the proposed development. Neighbors Linda Hammond, a four-year village resident, and lifetime Chelsea dweller Fred Hoffman joined Geisler in sharing concerns with the council.

"We value our neighborhood and quality of life," Hammond said. "We put a lot of money into our house and I feel like I'm under siege. I don't want to be driven out of our home and neighborhood."

Hammond was referring to the traffic and noise that retail shops, a busy post office and village offices have the potential to produce.

Geisler also said she is concerned about the additional semi-truck traffic the post office would bring to the area.

According to Rickel, the post office would continue receiving deliveries from trucks 22- to 24-foot long two times a day as it does now.

However, as Chelsea grows, Rickel said, additional trucks, some with trailers spanning 40 feet, may be added, increasing deliveries up to five times a day to accommodate the expanding needs of the community.

It was announced last December that a new postal site would be necessary because space and convenience have become encumbered with the already heavy demand for mail services.

After talking with several of her neighbors, Geisler was surprised to discover that about half of the homeowners on her block were unaware of the significant commercial development about to occur next to them.

"There's been no communication between the developer and the council about it," Geisler said. "I want to develop a dialogue with the property owners, board and developers."

Residents are required to be notified of commercial property plans only if rezoning is involved, said Village Council Trustee Jim Myles. If postal officials decide to accept the South Main location, a zoning change from commercial to municipal will be needed.

At that point, the Village Planning Commission will hold a

Council approves new water system

■ Project narrowly passes in 4-3 vote.

By Kim Lange-Hytinen
Special Writer

A decision over a new water system sparked a heated debate among council members Sept. 26.

Ultimately, council decided, 4-3, to move forward with a $6 million water system project, which includes a $700,000 softening membrane.

The decision was made despite the denial of state funding. The conflict arose over whether the softening equipment should be implemented now or remain an option to add to the system at a later date.

The council decided the village could shoulder the bond on its own rather than wait until next fiscal year for possible approval for funding from the state's revolving loan fund.

The chance of getting state funding next year is slim, according to village officials. Still, council decided to have a recall option on the bond in case future funding does come through.

The council said bidding on the project would have to start from scratch if the project was postponed until next year.

Two bids for the project were opened Aug. 1. A bid must be accepted by December or the project will be put on hold indefinitely. This is what forced the council's decision last week.

Design of the proposed water facility has followed state regulations and includes equipment used for softening the water.

It was decided that had the council left out the softening equipment at this time, the state may not reconsider funding next year because the proposal would differ from the original, which included it.

Residents will pay for the new system in monthly increments and the average cost to the residential user, depending on water use, is expected to be less than $25.

The amount charged to residents depends on the number of years the bond is for and how much water use increases.

"We're at a point where we have to improve our water system... Do we want to pay the very minimum? In doing so, our citizens don't get a true benefit from improvement," Trustee Jim Myles said prior to the vote.

"I'll be more than happy to pay $2 for the village to provide softening when I'm going to pay at least $20 for salt per month anyway," he said.

The current facility was built

Residents still arguing over burning

■ Township supervisor pushes for compromise.

By Lisa Allmendinger
Staff Writer

Another effort at finding a solution to the ban on leaf burning facing residents on Stoffer and Forest courts and Stoffer Road in Dexter Township went up in smoke last week.

Township Supervisor Robert Tetens and the 45 area residents affected by the ban called a meeting Sept. 28 to work out a solution.

But that didn't happen. Opponents of burning leaves, twigs and branches cite health concerns for their stand, which calls for no burning at any time. They say the heavy canopy of trees and the direction of the wind in the area forces the smoke into their homes.

Proponents requested limited burning that would take place twice a year, once in the fall and once in the spring.

Their proposal is similar to what residents in Hamburg Township have been living with. This would allow residents bothered by the smoke to take precautions and allow everyone to rid their properties of yard debris.

The meeting had barely begun when anti-burning advocate Herb Mida stood up and announced, "There will be no compromise. I'm telling you

Ecology Center opposes power plant

Environmentalists say it will add pollution.

By Lisa Allmendinger

Efforts by the group NO to Panda Energy to thwart the Texas-based company recently received the backing of the Ecology Center.

The center formally opposed the power plant on the corner of Madden and Quigley roads in Dexter Township following a public meeting held Sept. 28 at Mill Creek Middle School.

The Ecology Center denouncement is based on two premises:

- The plant would produce an unnecessary increase in local and regional pollution.
- The proper implementation of energy efficiency programs could address the expected demand for energy during the next decade.

"We do not support the construction of any additional major sources in energy generation sector when there are clear alternatives which could meet increased energy demand," said Jeff Gearhart of the Ecology Center.

"The problem is that almost all of these programs have been abandoned in favor of supply-side solutions, which means building more plants at the cost of the environment and public health," he said.

Also at the meeting, NOPE announced its formal incorporation as a political non-profit group, which allows it to accept non tax-deductible donations, which have topped the $2,000 mark in less than a week.

The group is also selling T-shirts and bumper stickers in addition to red-and-white lawn signs.

The organization has more than 225 members and is in the process of interviewing an attorney, said President Andrea Bradbury.

The group recently elected a slate of officers, which includes Bradbury as president, Bruce Willoughby as vice president, Tracy Willoughby as treasurer and Marilyn Mitchell as secretary.

Trustees are Mark Hattie, Cathy Hunter, Sandy Nuber, Steven Oberholtzer, Jim Poultier, Rosemary Quigley, Joe Sytniak and Nancy Tata.

NOPE members announced that they will have an information booth in front of Central Street Station during Apple Daze Saturday.

There has been no further information about the launch date of a Panda Web site that will answer questions about the Dexter Township proposal.

NOPE already has an active Web site that can be accessed by going to www.usol.com/~nope.

NOPE members are getting help from residents across the country in its effort to fight the company's proposal.

The Dexter Township proposed site is located on 112 acres owned by Al Ruhlig.

Township officials still have not seen a site plan, nor have they received any zoning or conditional-use requests.

Panda officials said they chose the Dexter Township site because of its close proximity to natural gas and an electrical grid. What the site does not have is water, but there has been talk of piping it in from the Ann Arbor sewage treatment plant 17 miles away.

Meanwhile, Panda Energy has hired Harold Green as its director of communications, replacing the public relations firm it had hired to handle the Dexter proposal.

Fun Under the Big Top

Township supervisor speaks on Panda

EDITOR'S NOTE — Since Panda Energy officials made their presence known in Dexter Township, there has been a lot of information presented and discussed at public meetings.

The Chelsea Standard decided to put this information into perspective for area residents by conducting a question-and-answer session with Dexter Township Supervisor Robert Tetens.

When, exactly, did Panda officials first contact the township?

We were not contacted directly by Panda Energy. We were contacted by the Washtenaw Development Council, which told us Panda was looking for land near the Majestic substation.

That took place in mid-October (1999). And, at that point, we knew they were looking for about 100 acres.

What, exactly, did they ask for and to whom did they speak?

They asked for plat maps of the area. I photocopied and supplied them with that information, which indicates property lines and acreage near the Majestic substation.

Is this standard procedure for a company coming into an area from another state?

The township gets numerous inquiries about land and how it is zoned. This happens regularly by individuals and companies regarding particular pieces of property.

If the company is a local one, they usually do their own research. Some have identified the piece of property they are interested in. Some have not.

I gave Panda the information that they requested.

Can you give me a time line about when, and for what purpose, Panda Energy contacted you and what was said?

Panda visited the township in November (1999) to physically look at property in the area of the Majestic station.

They contacted us again several weeks later, after identifying the parcel and the owner of the property that interested them.

Panda officials asked if I would talk to the property owner to see if he would be willing to talk to them. This happened in late December.

Negotiations between Panda and the property owner began in early January. The township was aware that negotiations were ongoing, but it did not participate in those negotiations.

We had no further information until mid-summer when we were told by Panda that negotiations were complete. We have no knowledge of the terms.

Did the township, at any time, enter into any type of negotiation with Panda?

Absolutely not. Any negotiations were between Panda and Mr. Ruhlig. They did not involve us.

How soon before the initial presentation to the environmental groups did the township know about the meeting date?

It was our hope that an informational meeting could be set up with the community in late July or early August. But Panda was unable to hold the first meeting until Aug. 30 with the environmental community.

Panda did not make a final decision on a date to meet with residents until after that meeting.

At that point, I contacted the newspapers to provide as much notice as possible for township residents. The story was in the local newspapers the following day.

Then they scheduled the meeting with the community on Sept. 6 after the Labor Day weekend.

Why weren't residents contacted before the environmental community?

Once we were told that negotiations were complete, the WDC and the township encouraged Panda to meet first with the environmental community so the company could get a sense of the environmental issues and concerns in this area.

This way they could be better prepared to meet with the community well in advance of any application that they might submit to the township.

Have you ever taken a public stance on the Panda project?

No. As elected officials, we have not taken an official stance on this project. There is no preliminary site plan. There has not been a rezoning application nor has a conditional-use permit been requested. Until such time that an application has been submitted, we cannot take a formal position on the proposal.

Are you receiving, as other township officials have said, angry letters and phone calls at your home about this project?

I have received many letters and phone calls about this proposal. Most have been against the project. Some have been for it and others are undecided.

Have any of them been threatening?

Threatening may not be the right word, but certainly some of them have crossed the line of civil discourse. I would like to think that we could discuss and debate this issue without it becoming a personal affront to anyone regardless of his or her opinion.

What's the status of the project at this point?

As of Oct. 2, we have not heard anything new from Panda about the status of this project.

Have Panda officials ever followed up on a request to put together a smaller committee of residents and township officials to further discuss this proposal?

No. An initial story in the media quoted you as saying, "I see nothing wrong with this project."

This keeps coming up at public meetings, can you explain this?

I spoke at great length with a number of reporters about a range of issues and concerns involving this project. We discussed the size, the length of time it would take to construct it, air quality, as well as water quality. Included in this conversation were the potential benefits that the project could have for the township.

One of the comments I made, "I see nothing wrong with this project" referred to the impact of the project on the township's infrastructure.

There are obvious environmental impacts and disruptions during any construction phase. But that comment was made in the context of the impact on public infrastructure, specifically the township road network.

Library adopts new rules for 'Net

LYNN FOX
BOARD PRESIDENT

LIBRARY NOTES

As of Oct. 1, no one younger than 18 is allowed to use Chelsea District Library's Internet-access computers without their parent or legal guardian sitting at the terminal with them.

The new rule is the result of Public Act 212, which took effect Sunday.

For those who might not be familiar with this new law, let me try to give a brief explanation.

Basically, it says that if a library offers Internet access, it must either provide at least one terminal that is restricted from receiving obscene or sexually explicit matter or have a parent or guardian stay with anyone under the age of 18 who is using the Internet.

On the surface, this seems like something everyone would want, including libraries and library boards. After all, we do not want children viewing anything that might harm them.

But there are several problems that our library board found as we attempted to determine just what we could do to follow this law.

The U.S. Supreme Court has already ruled that filtering all computers in a local library is unconstitutional. So, we began looking at other options.

We could do one of the following:

1. Discontinue all Internet access.
2. Allow Internet use by those 18 or older.
3. Allow those younger than 18 Internet access only with a parent or guardian sitting with them.
4. Add filtering to computers for use by those younger than 18 years old.

Chelsea District Library has only three computers with Internet access. All are in demand by those older and younger than 18. They are used for research, chat and e-mail.

Discontinuing Internet access would have presented a hardship for those people who do not have access from home or choose to use our access because the speed is so much better.

If the library staff were to require identification for Internet access by those 18 or older, that could be seen as an invasion of privacy, which is prohibited by law.

Internet access, with parent or guardian, poses problems for many of our patrons. Filtering of one or two of the public-access computers means that staff must monitor which computer those younger than 18 can use.

It also means that the library board and staff may be required to review Web sites to determine if they contain obscene or sexually explicit material that could be harmful to minors.

With more than 36.7 million sites and more being added each day, that task would be impossible.

But that is only part of the issue, because a library must then prove in a court of law that the Web site is harmful to minors. We do not have the financial or the human resources to do this.

People have pointed out that filtering products do not provide 100 percent protection against children viewing objectionable material. But the law says libraries are required to ensure that no child view anything that will be harmful unless their parent or guardian is with them.

So, in order for the Chelsea District Library to comply with the law, no one younger than 18 will be allowed to use the Internet-access computers without their parent or legal guardian sitting at the terminal with them.

Residents still arguing over burning

■ Township supervisor pushes for compromise.

By Lisa Allmendinger
Staff Writer

Another effort at finding a solution to the ban on leaf burning facing residents on Stofor and Forest courts and Stofor Road in Dexter Township went up in smoke last week.

Township Supervisor Robert Tetens and the 45 area residents affected by the ban called a meeting Sept. 28 to work out a solution.

But that didn't happen. Opponents of burning leaves, twigs and branches cite health concerns for their stand, which calls for no burning at any time. They say the heavy canopy of trees and the direction of the wind in the area forces the smoke into their homes.

Proponents requested limited burning that would take place twice a year, once in the fall and once in the spring.

Their proposal is similar to what residents in Hamburg Township have been living with. This would allow residents bothered by the smoke to take precautions and allow everyone to rid their properties of yard debris.

The meeting had barely begun when anti-burning advocate Herb Mida stood up and announced, "There will be no burning at all. There will be no compromise. I'm telling you that." Mida followed up his statements by saying he'd take photographs of anyone burning in the area, and turn them into the Department of Environmental Quality, the state body that investigates instances of this type.

Patricia Cooper, who opposes leaf burning in the neighborhood, echoed Mida's sentiments.

At the last meeting, Cooper handed out material from the American Lung Association, explaining the health problems involved with leaf burning. She also stated that the burning affects her asthma.

It was Cooper's complaints to the DEQ and subsequent investigation by state officials that prompted Chelsea Fire Chief Dan Ellenwood to impose the burning ban in the area that is so heavily wooded.

Cooper said that she and Mida were not the only residents that felt this way. Others were unable to attend the meeting or had made their own arrangements for debris removal.

Continuing efforts have been made by township officials and area residents to reach a compromise that would allow residents to somehow dispose of their leaves.

Smaller committees of residents have met with township officials to resolve the dispute. Letters and surveys have been mailed to area property owners offering a number of options.

None of these efforts have been successful, however.

There was just a 44 percent return of the most recent survey that was sent to area residents following a meeting in August.

Even residents outside the affected area have offered help. Michelle Balaka, who lives across from the neighborhood, offered to allow residents to bring their leaves to her property to dispose of them.

This would require residents to gather the leaves and take them to her property.

"I feel badly for you guys. I can burn on my property and I live 10 or 12 houses away," she said. "I don't understand why you cannot find a middle ground here."

Residents were grateful for her offer, but felt it was just a Band-Aid solution to a much larger problem and was fraught with potential problems in the future.

Burning proponents said they could not understand why a limited-burn compromise could not be an option, but no burn advocates ruled this out completely.

"There are a lot of people here who want to compromise," said Mike Cross, who owns 2½ acres, one of the largest parcels in the area.

"Twenty-five feet from where I live, the guy can burn," he said.

Cross said he's been collecting twigs and branches all summer and he would like to be able to put these in a burn barrel and get rid of them.

Mida asked how he could know that Cross would not just burn twigs and sticks?

"You've got to have a little trust. Trust me on this. If I say that's all I'm going to burn, that's all I'm going to burn," he said.

"We have a strong case. While the rest of the township enjoys these privileges, we don't... I, for one, am getting tired of people not willing to compromise," he said.

A majority of the group was willing to burn for only two weeks twice a year to get rid of the debris, while the rest of the township is able to burn at any time.

No one seemed to want to pay a contractor to remove the leaves during the year.

"I don't know how to resolve this," Tetens said. "There has to be a compromise."

Township hires contractor for hall

■ Board will look into a special bank loan to help finance project.

By Lisa Allmendinger
Staff Writer

Axis Construction of Pontiac will be heading up the renovation project at Dexter Township Hall. The contractor was the low bidder at $536,800.

Nine bids were received, ranging from $536,800 to $723,969.

Although the bid falls within the township's budget, the project could end up costing more. In a letter dated Sept. 14, Axis Construction highlighted four issues that may increase its bid.

Following a pre-construction meeting on Aug. 31, Axis came back to the board with four concerns that might bump up its original bid.

Among those concerns was the township's request for a performance bond. Axis said it would be willing to provide one, but it would cost the township.

"As a rule, we avoid projects (that) require bid or performance bonds, primarily due to the fact that the principals and spouses are required to individually personally guarantee the bond," the company said in a letter.

The company also said that the bid documents did not specify a need for performance bonds, which would have affected its bid.

"The cost for a performance bond would be 2.5 percent of the

The 13th annual CROP Walk was a big success, with initial pledges totaling $13,000, and more donations expected before month's end. Organizers hope to surpass last year's total of $15,000. Shown are Margaret Wiedmayer (left) and Pam Hawley, totaling pledges and number of participants.

CROP Walk deemed a success

By Sheila Pursglove
Staff Writer

The 13th annual Chelsea CROP Walk — helped along by wonderful fall weather — was a huge success.

More than 160 walkers raised a preliminary total of $13,415 in pledges.

"We usually see another $2,000 to $4,000 by the time all the pledges are turned in at the end of the month. So, I expect to top last year's total of $15,000," said organizer Jan Roberts.

The deadline for pledges is Oct. 31, and donations until that time may be credited to the CROP Walk.

"Of course, donations to Church World Service/CROP are welcome at any time," Roberts said.

Harriet Van Houten, a CROP walker from the Chelsea Retirement Community, has a daughter-in-law, Sybil Van Houten, and granddaughter, Jenny Van Houten, both teachers at Cornerstone Elementary School in Dexter.

"When Sybil and Jenny told their first- and second-grade classes about Harriet, the kids raised $65 in pledge money," Roberts said.

The Chelsea CROP Walk may lay claim to a couple of records.

"We may have the oldest walker in Michigan in Bess Purdy, 97 years old," Roberts said.

"Last year's record holder was 96-year-old Beulah Cool from Williamston. So, it may depend on whether she returned this year."

"Kearney Kirkby, from the Chelsea Retirement Home, has been walking for 52 years, since the World Council of Churches first began meeting," Roberts said.

Ten volunteers helped the walkers by manning rest stops, helping in the kitchen, tallying pledges and driving, while Kevin Costello of Sanctuary Massage, provided free massage for the weary walkers.

"The wonderful thing about a community CROP Walk is how it brings people of many different faiths and ideas together for a common purpose, to help others in need," Roberts said.

The Sunday school class from St. Paul United Church of Christ blew up 100 balloons for the event, while a group of high school students tied ribbons on the balloons.

"Others pitched in and put up signs for registration and sorted T-shirts by size for distribution, while committee members helped run the registration and sign-in process," Roberts said.

A rivalry is brewing between some of the groups over the Golden Sneaker Award, a special award presented to the church or group raising the highest pledge per walker.

"North Lake United Methodist Church won in 1994, and Dexter United Methodist Church was last year's winner, with the Chelsea Retirement Community taking it in all the other years," Roberts said.

"We are thrilled to have this kind of good-natured competition in support of a great cause."

United Way supports child guidance clinic

Chelsea United Way's Campaign-2000 is under way, with "Give Where You Live" as the theme.

Huron Valley Child Guidance Clinic is a member agency, serving members of the Chelsea community.

Huron Valley Child Guidance Clinic, the outpatient program of Washtenaw County Community Mental Health, provides a range of mental health services to children and teens up to age 18, as well as their families.

The clinic's services are community based and family oriented, designed to maintain children in their families, schools and communities. Services include assessment, as well as individual and family treatment.

The type of treatment to be provided will be determined together by the therapist and family. Common referral problems include serious emotional disturbance, Attention Deficit Disorder or Attention Deficit Hyper Disorder, peer difficulties at school, depression, anxiety, adjustment reactions to traumatic events, such as death or loss, and parenting issues.

The clinic is located at 2940 Ellsworth Road in Ypsilanti. However, to better serve those living in the Chelsea area, space is used at the United Methodist Church on Park Street.

Anne Capobianco, a clinical social worker meets with clients between 11:30 a.m. and 8 p.m. on Wednesdays. She is also available in Manchester on Thursdays at the Community

Resource Center.

Call ACCESS at 481-2502 or 1-800-440-7548 for a referral. Indicate whether you would like to be seen in Ypsilanti, Chelsea or Manchester.

The clinic provides specialty mental health services for children with Medicaid and all levels of service for children with MI Child Insurance. The clinic accepts M-Care and Care Choices insurance, along with other private insurance. Fees for families without insurance are based on a sliding scale.

The clinic receives some support from Chelsea United Way and Manchester United Way.

HONORS

Elizabeth Wagenschutz of Chelsea has been named to the Aquinas College dean's list for the spring semester. She was among 512 students to earn this honor.

To earn the dean's list honors, students must achieve a grade point average of 3.5 or higher while carrying at least 12 hours of graded credit.

Corrections

Freshman Homecoming princess Lindsay Cook should have been identified in a photograph in the Sept. 28 edition.

A photo caption in the Sept. 28 edition should have identified Jessie Ott's escort as Adam Schmid.

An article in the Sept. 21 edition should have said that the quarterback for the Chelsea varsity football team is Chris Brigham.

A photo caption in the Sept. 28 edition should have identified Dan Mueller as extending his arms in an effort to block an extra point attempt.

Quest for Fire

Sixth-graders from Beach Middle School recently spent three days and two nights at the YMCA Storer Camp in Napoleon. This is the 30th year Beach students have gone to camp, enjoying a variety of activities, including climbing a 55-foot tall tower, building shelters and participating in a "low ropes" course. More than 60 parents volunteered to assist with the car wash fundraiser, help with camp preparations and serve as cabin leaders. Shown learning how to create fire with flints are Jon Seelbach (left), Ron Hopp, Abe Kane, Michael Bazydio and Chet Hopp.

contract value and would be passed on to the owner," the letter said.

Axis was also uncomfortable with an extension in starting the project. Company officials said that there could be increased costs involved in beginning the renovation with a late fall or winter start.

Permit and fee costs were mentioned in the letter.

Last on the list was an alternate proposal for construction management, with Axis providing professional project management services for a fixed percentage of the construction costs.

"Competitive proposals are solicited from qualified subcontractors and the selection process is shared with the owner," the letter said. "This method is very effective in expediting projects, as we are able to commence work with the early trades while continuing to solicit cost savings and value engineering for the later finish trades."

The board voted to accept the original bid from Axis of $536,800, and discussed the cost increase issues outlined in the letter. No vote was taken, however.

Financing options for the project were explained by township's accountant, who told the board that it had a surplus in its general fund of $628,148. The accountant said $589,033 is not designated for any special purpose.

The board plans to use approximately $400,000 identified in the capital-improvements portion of the budget to fund the project.

The accountant cautioned the board to keep 20 to 25 percent of its annual revenue base in reserve and recommended that it get a special loan to fund the rest of the project.

The loan would not have to be approved by a public vote. It would be paid off in 15 years and only used for the project. Interest would be a little higher than a municipal bond, the accountant said, but it can be implemented by a resolution of the board.

It will cost the township approximately $15,000 to move the paperwork, but funding could come together quickly and rates could be shopped around, the accountant said.

The accountant also recommended that the board hire a financial consultant to put together the package.

The board authorized Township Supervisor Robert Tetens to hire the consultant.

The township also needs planning board approval before the project can move forward.

In other business, the board approved a contract for snow plowing service with A-1 Tree Inc., the same company that the township has used since 1998.

Fees for the service are $80 for

The 13th annual CROP Walk was a big success, with initial pledges totaling $13,000, and more donations expected before month's end. Organizers hope to surpass last year's total of $15,000. Shown are Margaret Wiedmayer (left) and Pam Hawley, totaling pledges and number of participants.

CROP Walk deemed a success

By Sheila Pursglove
Staff Writer

The 13th annual Chelsea CROP Walk — helped along by wonderful fall weather — was a huge success.

More than 160 walkers raised a preliminary total of $13,415 in pledges.

"We usually see another $2,000 to $4,000 by the time all the pledges are turned in at the end of the month. So, I expect to top last year's total of $15,000," said organizer Jan Roberts.

The deadline for pledges is Oct. 31, and donations until that time may be credited to the CROP Walk.

"Of course, donations to Church World Service/CROP are welcome at any time," Roberts said.

Harriet Van Houten, a CROP walker from the Chelsea Retirement Community, has a daughter-in-law, Sybil Van Houten, and granddaughter, Jenny Van Houten, both teachers at Cornerstone Elementary School in Dexter.

"When Sybil and Jenny told their first- and second-grade classes about Harriet, the kids raised $65 in pledge money," Roberts said.

The Chelsea CROP Walk may lay claim to a couple of records.

"We may have the oldest walker in Michigan in Bess Purdy, 97 years old," Roberts said.

"Last year's record holder was 96-year-old Beulah Cool from Williamston. So, it may depend on whether she returned this year.

"Kearney Kirkby, from the Chelsea Retirement Home, has been walking for 52 years, since the World Council of Churches first began meeting," Roberts said.

Ten volunteers helped the walkers by manning rest stops, helping in the kitchen, tallying pledges and driving, while Kevin Costello of Sanctuary Massage, provided free massage for the weary walkers.

"The wonderful thing about a community CROP Walk is how it brings people of many different faiths and ideas together for a common purpose, to help others in need," Roberts said.

The Sunday school class from St. Paul United Church of Christ blew up 100 balloons for the event, while a group of high school students tied ribbons on the balloons.

"Others pitched in and put up signs for registration and sorted T-shirts by size for distribution, while committee members helped run the registration and sign-in process," Roberts said.

A rivalry is brewing between some of the groups over the Golden Sneaker Award, a special award presented to the church or group raising the highest pledge per walker.

"North Lake United Methodist Church won in 1994, and Dexter United Methodist Church was last year's winner, with the Chelsea Retirement Community taking it in all the other years," Roberts said.

"We are thrilled to have this kind of good-natured competition in support of a great cause."

United Way supports child guidance clinic

Chelsea United Way's Campaign 2000 is under way, with "Give Where You Live" as the theme.

Huron Valley Child Guidance Clinic is a member agency, serving members of the Chelsea community.

Huron Valley Child Guidance Clinic, the outpatient program of Washtenaw County Community Mental Health, provides a range of mental health services to children and teens up to age 18, as well as their families.

The clinic's services are community based and family oriented, designed to maintain children in their families, schools and communities. Services include assessment, as well as individual and family treatment.

The type of treatment to be provided will be determined together by the therapist and family. Common referral problems include serious emotional disturbance, Attention Deficit Disorder or Attention Deficit Hyper Disorder, peer difficulties at school, depression, anxiety, adjustment reactions to traumatic events, such as death or loss, and parenting issues.

The clinic is located at 2940 Ellsworth Road in Ypsilanti. However, to better serve those living in the Chelsea area, space is used at the United Methodist Church on Park Street.

Anne Capobianco, a clinical social worker meets with clients between 11:30 a.m. and 8 p.m. on Wednesdays. She is also available in Manchester on Thursdays at the Community

Resource Center.

Call ACCESS at 481-2502 or 1-800-440-7548 for a referral. Indicate whether you would like to be seen in Ypsilanti, Chelsea or Manchester.

The clinic provides specialty mental health services for children with Medicaid and all levels of service for children with MI Child Insurance. The clinic accepts M-Care and Care Choices insurance, along with other private insurance. Fees for families without insurance are based on a sliding scale.

The clinic receives some support from Chelsea United Way and Manchester United Way.

This is the 30th year Beach students have gone to camp, enjoying a variety of activities, including climbing a 55-foot tall tower, building shelters and participating in a "low ropes" course. More than 60 parents volunteered to assist with the car wash fundraiser, help with camp preparations and serve as cabin leaders. contract value and would be passed on to the owner," the letter said.

Axis was also uncomfortable with an extension in starting the project. Company officials said that there could be increased costs involved in beginning the renovation with a late fall or winter start.

Permit and fee costs were mentioned in the letter.

Last on the list was an alternate proposal for construction management, with Axis providing professional project management services for a fixed percentage of the construction costs.

"Competitive proposals are solicited from qualified subcontractors and the selection process if shared with the owner," the letter said. "This method is very effective in expediting projects, as we are able to commence work with the early trades while continuing to solicit cost savings and value engineering for the later finish trades."

The board voted to accept the original bid from Axis of $536,800, and discussed the cost increase issues outlined in the letter. No vote was taken, however.

Financing options for the project were explained by township's accountant, who told the board that it had a surplus in its general fund of $829,148. The accountant said $589,033 is not designated for any special purpose.

The board plans to use approximately $400,000 identified in the capital-improvements portion of the budget to fund the project.

The accountant cautioned the board to keep 20 to 25 percent of its annual revenue base in reserve and recommended that it get a special loan to fund the rest of the project.

The loan would not have to be approved by a public vote. It would be paid off in 15 years and only used for the project. Interest would be a little higher than a municipal bond, the accountant said, but it can be implemented by a resolution of the board.

It will cost the township approximately $15,000 to move the paperwork, but funding could come together quickly and rates could be shopped around, the accountant said.

The accountant also recommended that the board hire a financial consultant to put together the package.

The board authorized Township Supervisor Robert Tetens to hire the consultant.

The township also needs planning board approval before the project can move forward.

In other business, the board approved a contract for snow plowing service with A-1 Tree Inc., the same company that the township has used since 1998.

Fees for the service are $60 for plowing and salting 2 to 4 inches of snow, $80 for 4 or more inches, $12 for salting and spreading per bag and $20 for sidewalks.

The contract says that overnight snow will be plowed by 8 the following morning and any snowfall after 3 p.m. will be plowed as soon as possible, returning if necessary, throughout the day to clear.

BURNING

that. Mida followed up his statements by saying he'd take photographs of anyone burning in the area, and turn them into the Department of Environmental Quality, the state body that investigates instances of this type.

Patricia Cooper, who opposes leaf burning in the neighborhood, echoed Mida's sentiments.

At the last meeting, Cooper handed out material from the American Lung Association, explaining the health problems involved with leaf burning. She also stated that the burning affects her asthma.

It was Cooper's complaints to the DEQ and subsequent investigation by state officials that prompted Chelsea Fire Chief Dan Ellenwood to impose the burning ban in the area that is so heavily wooded.

Cooper said that she and Mida were not the only residents that felt this way. Others were unable to attend the meeting or had made their own arrangements for debris removal.

Continuing efforts have been made by township officials and area residents to reach a compromise that would allow residents to somehow dispose of their leaves.

Smaller committees of residents have met with township officials to resolve the dispute. Letters and surveys have been mailed to area property owners offering a number of options.

None of these efforts have been successful, however.

There was just a 44 percent return of the most recent survey that was sent to area residents following a meeting in August.

Even residents outside the affected area have offered help. Michelle Balaka, who lives across from the neighborhood, offered to allow residents to bring their leaves to her property to dispose of them.

This would require residents to gather the leaves and take them to her property.

"I feel badly for you guys. I can burn on my property and I live 10 or 12 houses away," she said. "I don't understand why you cannot find a middle ground here."

Residents were grateful for her offer, but felt it was just a Band-Aid solution to a much larger problem and was fraught with potential problems in the future.

Burning proponents said they could not understand why a limited-burn compromise could not be an option, but no burn advocates ruled this out completely.

"There are a lot of people here, who want to compromise," said Mike Cross, who owns 2 1/2 acres, one of the largest parcels in the area.

"Twenty-five feet from where I live, the guy can burn," he said.

Cross said he's been collecting twigs and branches all summer and he would like to be able to put these in a burn barrel and get rid of them.

Mida asked how he could know that Cross would not just burn twigs and sticks?

"You've got to have a little trust. Trust me on this. If I say that's all I'm going to burn, that's all I'm going to burn," he said.

"We have a strong case. While the rest of the township enjoys these privileges, we don't ... I, for one, am getting tired of people not willing to compromise," he said.

A majority of the group was willing to burn for only two weeks twice a year to get rid of the debris, while the rest of the township is able to burn at any time.

No one seemed to want to pay a contractor to remove the leaves during the year.

"I don't know how to resolve this," Tetens said. "There has to be a compromise."

WATER

in the 1940s, but has had updates since then. The problem is that community growth has pushed the old system to its maximum, and Chelsea is still a popular area for development.

According to engineer Trevor Wagenmaker of Tetra Tech MPS, smaller communities usually shy away from soft water treatments because of the cost.

He pointed out during the meeting that Chelsea's water hardness level of 440 is questionable, and that industry-wide softened water is superior.

Village President Richard Steele is the only council member without any form of water softener in his home.

Council Trustee Frank Hammer voiced concerns about the safety of the chemicals used to treat water for softening. He said Chelsea's high copper content means additional chemicals will be used in the process.

The consultant gave information on the membrane system's 25-year track record, but Hammer held fast to voting against softening the village's water.

This membrane system will be the first of its kind used in Michigan.

Talk of carcinogens and chemicals continued to surface during the meeting as council members stressed their unease with the issue. They weighed the value of money against community input and came up with a split vote.

The first vote failed 4-3. It was only after more arguing ensued that the vote shifted the other way 4-3, in favor of going through with the project.

Village Council Trustee Janice Ortbring proposed a motion that was similar to the defeated one offered by Myles.

Ortbring added a clause that allows the council to pursue community input on the softening part of the system while the rest of the project gets underway.

Money will not be spent toward softening until feedback is received from residents.

"We have to make a decision today," Ortbring said, "and what we have to ask is: Are we spending the public's money or are we investing the public's money?"

Both Ortbring and Trustee Brian Cashman vehemently complained about a pattern they've noticed in the council's decision making.

Ortbring said she feels uncomfortable when a pressing item comes up for immediate vote and decisions are made without community involvement.

"This happens over and over," Cashman said. "An innocuous item appears on the agenda and then suddenly a decision has to be made without any sense of what we were walking into at the start of the meeting."

Opposed to the outcome of the final vote, Trustee Richard Rigg said that the so-called decision-making problem has gone on for years. He said he wants to see a policy of whether a vote has to be won by two-thirds in favor of if it can be by simple majority, as in this case.

The council plans to meet this week regarding the bond issue.

Village Manager Jack Myers said he will send out a questionnaire to village residents asking if they want water softening added to the water supply.

BELL

Chelsea designed the bell tower. Darwin Stain Glass provided the stained glass and Stein Electric did the electrical work. Robert Johnson Construction provided excavation services and JEL did all the bell repairs.

"A lot of people gave of their time and talents to make this happen," Yekulis said to the assembled audience that encircled the bell tower, and spilled out through the stations of the cross on Saturday.

Yekulis said he spoke at all the masses to get the project on its feet. Committees were formed to keep it on track.

"If you believe in God, this is something God wanted to happen," he said.

As parishioners walked en masse from the church through the stations of the cross, they walked through a line of the Knights of Columbus that had preceded them.

Bishop Kenneth Povish blessed the project.

Food safety prevents illness

Michigan consumers, Michigan's food and agriculture industry and regulators have a joint responsibility in preventing foodborne illness, says Dan Wyant, Michigan Department of Agriculture director.

Wyant said this year's food safety month message was "Be Smart. Keep Food Apart. Don't Cross Contaminate."

Cross contamination is the unintended transfer of harmful substances to food from other foods or items like cutting boards and utensils.

"Food safety remains MDA's top priority," Wyant said. "We work closely with Michigan's food and agriculture industries to ensure a safe and wholesome food supply."

"Consumers also play an important role in preventing foodborne illness by properly handling, storing and preparing foods they purchase."

Wyant added that preventing cross contamination is especially important as research shows better practices are needed in this area.

According to a joint 1998 U.S. Food and Drug Administration and U.S. Department of Agriculture survey, 21 percent of consumers do not wash their cutting boards after cutting raw meat, and 25 percent do not wash their hands after handling raw meat and fish.

MDA and its food-safety partners offer these helpful tips to prevent cross contamination:

- Wash hands with hot, soapy water for at least 20 seconds after handling raw meat, poultry, seafood, eggs, or fresh fruits and vegetables.

- Wash cutting boards, dishes and utensils with hot, soapy water after they come into contact with raw meat, poultry, seafood, eggs, or fresh fruits and vegetables.

- Keep raw meat, poultry, and eggs — and the juices from raw foods — away from other foods in shopping carts, kitchen counters and in refrigerators.

- Use one cutting board for fresh produce and a different one for raw meat, poultry and seafood.

- Never place cooked food back on the same plate or cutting board that previously held raw food without washing between uses.

- Do not use sauces that were used to marinate raw meat, poultry or seafood on cooked food unless the sauce is boiled first.

In other efforts, Michigan also recently passed comprehensive legislation updating the state's food-safety laws for the first time in more than three decades.

The Food Law of 2000 was enacted to modernize, standardize and consolidate Michigan's food laws while adopting the FDA's 1999 Food Code as a uniform regulatory standard for retail food establishments, including restaurants and grocery stores.

In addition, the state kicked off a new toll-free number in late spring to improve consumer access to the most recent food inspection reports of retail food establishments. The number is 1-800-292-3939.

Chelsea student earns honor

Chelsea High School senior Jennifer Diesing has been nominated to compete in the national Principal's Leadership Award scholarship program sponsored by the National Association of Secondary School Principals.

A total of 150 national leadership award winners will be chosen in the spring to receive $1,000 college scholarships.

High school principals nationwide nominate one student leader based on leadership skills, participation in service organizations and clubs, achievements in the arts and science, employment experience and academic record.

Students are also required to write an essay.

"Jenny has demonstrated exemplary achievement in her academic work and service to her school and community," said Gerald N. Tirozzi, executive director of the National Association of Secondary School Principals.

"She is a fine example of the outstanding caliber of young people in America's high schools."

In recognizing leadership in co-curricular activities as well as academic performance, the scholarship helps stress the importance of a well-rounded

Honor guard takes second place in flag competition

Chelsea High School Honor Guard competed in Eastern Michigan University's annual Flag Corps competition on Sept. 30.

The CHS precision flag unit, performing a routine to the hit song, "Johnny B. Goode," finished second overall.

Approximately 12 Michigan high schools competed in the event, which was won by Riverview High School Honor Guard.

"Our girls did the best job on their routine that I've seen this fall, better than any practice," said Phil Jones, Chelsea High School Honor Guard adviser.

The group has practiced since mid-August to prepare for the competition.

The event was part of the EMU Band Day program, featuring 21 Michigan high school bands, including the Chelsea High School marching band directed by new Pride of Chelsea Marching Band Director Rick Catherman, assistant Kevin Klink, and led by drum major Robert Hohnke.

The flag corps competition was held Saturday morning before the football game.

During the competition, the combined bands rehearsed with the EMU marching band, under the direction of EMU music department Chairman Max Plank of Chelsea to prepare for the EMU-Central Florida football game halftime show.

Choir starts new season

The Washington Street Show Choir, comprised of Chelsea High School students, is back for its 11th season of singing and dancing productions.

A potluck dinner kicked off its return Sept. 25. Members of the show choir, technical crew and band attended the event with families.

Show choir dance captains Sarah Horazdovsky and John Marshall were introduced to the students and their parents, and shared the fall rehearsal schedule.

Director Steve Hinz has planned two concerts and three area competitions with other show choirs for the 2001 season.

Members of the show choir will be selling poinsettias, available for Thanksgiving and Christmas deliveries, as a fund-raiser, to help offset the costs of sets and costumes.

The showcase will be held Jan. 27. The cabaret is set May 11 and May 12. Both will be held in the Chelsea High School auditorium.

POLICE BLOTTER

Chelsea Village

Vandalism
Police are searching for the vandals who sprayed gold paint on the side of a pickup truck that was parked in the 700 block of Provincial Drive. The damage took place sometime last weekend.

Suspicious Person

Police were called to the Farmer Jack parking lot by a man who told them that someone was hiding behind one of the brick pillars outside of the building.

When police investigated, they discovered a 14-year-old Chelsea boy there. When they looked in his backpack, they found three knives and a hatchet. Police said the boy told them he was carrying the weapons because he aspired to be a ninja.

Police confiscated the weapons and the boy was taken home. The incident took place at about 10 p.m. Oct. 1.

Stolen Vehicle

Someone stole a 1992 Dodge Caravan that was parked in a driveway in the 14400 block of Old US-12. The theft took place sometime between 12 a.m. Sept. 24 and 10 a.m. Sept. 25.

Jackson County police called later on Sept. 25 to say the vehicle had been found in Grass Lake. The car is valued at $3,000.

Scio Township

Possession of Drugs
Police arrested a 23-year-old Ann Arbor man for possession of drugs and possession of a handgun after a traffic stop at about 9:30 p.m. Sept. 29 in the Eagle Point apartments.

Police said they observed the man stopped in traffic on Talon Drive, talking with a driver in another car and passing something back and forth between the cars.

When deputies stopped the 23-year-old man, they found a bottle of liquor, a bag of suspected marijuana and a loaded handgun in his car.

Police said the man admitted that the items were his, and he was taken to jail.

Warrant Arrest

Police arrested Teneisha Kenyetta Moss, 19, on several outstanding warrants Sept. 29. The arrest took place in the Eagle Point apartment complex after a traffic stop.

Police said Moss was wanted

Campaign under way

The United Way Campaign 2000 is under way with the theme Give Where You Live.

One example of how money given to the United Way stays in the community is the United Way funding of the Chelsea Area Transportation System, known as CATS.

Last year, United Way contributions enabled the creation of an administrative position for CATS. Since February, CATS has made strides toward moving to an area-wide transportation system.

Some of the steps include:

- Computerizing the scheduling of trips.

- Working with the Michigan Department of Transportation to arrange for a second bus.

- CATS's request is currently being reviewed in Lansing. It is possible that by the fall of this year CATS will have a second vehicle on the road.

- Working with Michigan WorksFirst Agency. (CATS has been written into a state transportation-to-work proposal and will be given a van to provide rides for its clients to go to work.

- When the van is not in use for that purpose, CATS plans on using that vehicle for the general population for more affordable trips into Ann Arbor.)

- Planning has begun to offer evening and weekend rides to the developmentally disabled population of Chelsea for social and educational purposes.

- Veterans are a particular segment of the Chelsea population that CATS serves. Many of these vets are elderly, with no family living in the area. Often on fixed income, they use the CATS vehicle to help provide daily needs such as food, laundry, health care and socialization.

- CATS also serves physically handicapped people, providing rides for daily errands and rides to work.

- CATS is also available for temporary situations requiring transportation help.

for a failing to appear for a court date on a misdemeanor charge of driving on a suspended license and a felony charge for writing a bad check.

Lance Alexander Ellison, 20, was arrested on an outstanding warrant out of Tecumseh for failing to appear for a court date for a traffic infraction. The arrest took place at about 2 a.m. Sept. 27 in the 1000 block of Rabbit Run Circle.

Vandalism

Someone broke the handle on the door at MedImage, 8276 Jackson Road, in an apparent effort to break into the building. The damage took place at about 2:30 a.m. Sept. 29.

Police said that no one had gained entry to the building. The damage was estimated at about $500.

Drunken Driving

A 44-year-old man from Florida was arrested for drunken driving after police said they saw him driving erratically on I-94. The arrest took place at about 7:30 p.m. Sept. 23 on M-14 near Wagner Road.

Police said that a preliminary Breathalyzer test showed the man had a blood-alcohol level of .28 percent. A level of .10 is considered legally drunk.

A 30-year-old Dexter man was arrested for drunken driving after police stopped him for speeding on Jackson Road. The arrest took place at about 1:30 a.m. Sept. 30.

Police said the man refused to take a preliminary Breathalyzer test and was arrested. At the police station, a Breathalyzer test revealed the man had a blood-alcohol level between .15 and .16 percent.

Police arrested a 35-year-old Dexter woman for drunken driving after she refused to take a Breathalyzer test. The arrest took place at about 1:30 a.m.

Sept. 27 on Zeeb Road near Miller.

Police said they stopped the woman after they saw her swerve off the road several times and run a stop sign.

A 53-year-old Chelsea man was arrested for drunken driving at about 5 a.m. Sept. 26 on Scio Church Road near Wagner.

Police said they the man's car appeared to be parked on the side of the road. But when they approached, the man drove off. A Breathalyzer test showed the man's blood-alcohol level to be .15 percent.

Police arrested a 19-year-old Chelsea woman for drunken driving after they stopped her for failing to dim her lights. The arrest took place at about 5 a.m. Sept. 17 on Scio Church Road near Strieter Road.

A preliminary Breathalyzer test showed the woman had a blood-alcohol level between .18 and .19 percent.

Embezzlement

Police were called to McDonald's, 373 N. Zeeb Road, by a manager who told them someone had stolen $290 from the cash register. The theft took place sometime between 11 a.m. and 11 p.m. Sept. 28.

Police said they have a suspect. The case remains open.

Assault

Police arrested a 20-year-old Ypsilanti man after he allegedly assaulted his girlfriend and then assaulted police. The incident took place at about 2 a.m. Sept. 27 at a home in the 1000 block of Rabbit Run.

Police investigated the residence after an emergency hang-up call from the home. When they arrived, police said a woman occupant of the home told them that the call had been a mistake, and that nothing was wrong.

Police said they wanted to check the home to make sure, but the woman was reluctant to let them in the house.

At this point, police said a man appeared and tried to drag the woman back into the house. Police said the man resisted arrest and spit on one of the officers as he was being taken into custody.

A Breathalyzer test showed that the man had a blood-alcohol level of .14 percent. A copy of the police report has been sent to the prosecutor's office for possible charges.

Assault

Police investigated an alleged assault that occurred after a dispute between a painting contractor and customer. The incident took place at about 9:30 a.m. Sept. 28 at a home in the 4600 block of Fox Sedge Court.

The woman at the home told police that she was unsatisfied with the job the painting contractor had done, and refused to pay him. She said the painter took the check off the table without her permission, and then shoved her when she tried to take it back.

The painter told police that he grabbed the check from the woman after she dangled it in front of him. He said the woman chased him around the house, grabbing his arm and tearing his shirt.

Police forwarded a copy of the report to the prosecutor to consider possible charges.

Sharon Township

Arson

Police were called by a man who spotted an abandoned car in flames near the corner of Smyth and Pleasant Lake roads. The fire was reported at about 4:30 a.m. Sept. 28.

Police said the car was completely destroyed. One of the owners of the vehicle, a Redford man, was contacted. Police said he would not give them any information about who may have been driving the car before it was set on fire.

The car was valued at about $10,000.

Lyndon Township

Burglary

Someone broke into a home in the 20200 block of North Territorial Road and stole items worth more than $2,300. The theft took place sometime between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Sept. 25.

The thief pried open a screen to gain access to the house. The missing items included jewelry and compact discs.

Fish supplies being threatened

Steelhead, chinook, sockeye and chum — names that conjure up visions of fast-moving freshwater streams and National Geographic photographs of riverbank-to-riverbank fish — are among the endangered or threatened anadromous species that contribute so much both to the character and the economy of the Pacific Northwest.

Anadromous fish are those that begin life in fresh water, travel miles to the oceans to mature and return to their freshwater origins to spawn. Their travels take them up and down the Columbia, Snake, Kootenai and Clearwater rivers in the Pacific Northwest, a trip that many of them will not survive even under optimal conditions.

Temperature is a vital factor in the lives of these species, said Steven J. Wright, professor of civil and environmental engineering at the University of Michigan.

Wright spent a sabbatical leave last winter term exploring options for control of the temperature in salmon streams and rivers with the National Marine Fisheries Service, the Bonneville Power Administration, and the Fish and Wildlife Service through the Boise Center of the University of Idaho.

Habitat decline and hydroelectric dams that provide power to Idaho, Montana, Oregon and Washington in the Columbia River Basin have contributed to the diminishing number of salmon and steelhead.

Wright, who teaches courses in hydraulics and hydrology at both the undergraduate and graduate levels, looked at the consequences of managing the flow of cooler waters from the Clearwater River in order to improve survival rates in the summer when temperatures in the Snake River rise.

Salmon, steelhead and other cold-water species die when water temperatures exceed 20 degrees Celsius (68 degrees Fahrenheit).

His computer models of temperature changes and the difference the cooler flow from the Clearwater River would make to the temperature of the rivers are the basis for an ongoing study that considers removing four dams on the Snake River, introducing the colder Clearwater River water, increasing the number of salmon released from hatcheries and controlling the salmon harvest.

"There are lots of factors to consider in this commitment to preventing extinction of these salmon," Wright said. "And every factor has a consequence." Breaching the Snake River dams would affect the power production in the region.

Releasing colder water over the Dworshak Dam on the Clearwater River would lower the water temperature when temperatures in the Snake River rise above the danger level. But it also would further threaten the bull trout, already listed as a threatened species, which lives in the waters above the dam.

In addition, sudden onrushes of water have their own consequences, Wright said.

"Fish that are beneath the dam when there is a release can die from an overdose of nitrogen."

Water cascading over the spillway incorporates air bubbles and becomes supersaturated with nitrogen. The extra nitrogen remains in the water for some time, affecting fish as much as 100 miles downstream.

"In effect," Wright said, "they get the bends just like divers do when they surface too quickly." Before modifications at dams on the Snake River, fewer than 15 percent of the smolts (young salmon and steelhead) survived the run. In 1977, Wright says, a dry summer combined with nitrogen gas bubble disease and fish caught in the dam's turbines resulted in fewer than 1 percent survival of the smolts.

Breaching the four dams on the Snake River would return much of the river basin to its natural state, Wright says, but it also would release mud, silt and debris that has been trapped behind the dam, which also would kill fish as it made its way downstream.

"However, dams have had the most negative effect on the biology of these areas," Wright said. "Migration of the young salmon to the mouth of the Columbia River used to be about 10 days. Now, it takes them about two months to make that same trip."

Removing the dams also would increase the spawning area by about 70 percent for fall-run chinook salmon, but positive results would be tempered by the fact that the dams generate about 5 percent of the power in Oregon and Idaho. Locks on the Snake River, much the same as the Soo Locks in Michigan, allow transportation of goods such as wheat on the river.

Fires in the surrounding park and wilderness areas would probably have only a minimal short-term warming effect on the rivers, Wright said. But after the fires, when the rains come, he said, there is more runoff and more erosion.

After the fire, if the stream bank vegetation is destroyed there would be more direct solar heating of the water. A lack of riparian vegetation is known to cause an increase in stream temperatures.

Wright based his studies on existing temperature data for the Snake River and graphed the water temperatures in warm and cool years, calculating the difference that adding cooler waters from the Clearwater River would produce.

Surgery can help to prevent strokes

A follow-up analysis confirms that surgery to unclog severely blocked neck arteries has long-term benefits for preventing strokes, researchers report in this month's Stroke: Journal of the American Heart Association.

In 1991, the North American Symptomatic Carotid Endarterectomy Trial showed that surgery was beneficial in people with symptoms such as numbness on one side of the face, trouble speaking, dizziness, or a sudden severe headache as a result of carotid artery blockages of 70 percent or more.

Recent analysis of the data revealed that after three years, there was nearly 20 percent reductions for stroke in patients who had undergone surgery vs. those who received non-surgical treatment.

"This operation continues to be worthwhile," said Dr. Henry J. M. Barnett, professor of neurology at the University of Western Ontario in Canada, and a NASCET researcher. "Even after a decade, patients who underwent surgery still have a high level of benefit compared to people who were only treated medically."

In a recent component of the research, physicians involved in the trial had the unique opportunity to compare the outcomes of the patients who underwent surgery to the patients who initially received non-surgical treatment but had surgery later — once researchers discovered the clear benefit of surgery.

Carotid endarterectomy, the surgical procedure to remove plaque from the carotid artery before it can cause a stroke, proved durable in the long term and reduced the risk of stroke. There was moderate benefit in the patients with delayed endarterectomy.

Patients who did not have surgery had a greater amount of blockage in the neck artery. However, the longer these patients remained symptom-free, the lower their risk of stroke.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Panda plant does not represent 'progress'

The proposal from Panda Energy International to build a generation facility, in Dexter Township sounds so preposterous that it is difficult to take it seriously, yet one must.

Regrettably, too often nowadays, business interests are not genuine in respecting the wishes of affected people and the environmental concerns do not come from within but are expressed only because it is politically correct to do so.

To put it succinctly, Panda's proposal is equivalent to placing a cow pasture in the middle of Time Square. Undeniably, both electric energy and beef are needed. Although the Time Square site would be as close as it could be to meat consumers, it clearly would be an improper place.

The Panda people should understand that I and many others feel the same way about Panda's choice of Dexter Township. In satisfying any demand, the values that might be destroyed in the process must always be carefully weighted and sensitively considered.

Just imagine the chemical, visual and acoustic pollution of the fields, woods, wildlife habitats and residences by a concrete and steel monster with towering, steaming and hissing stacks.

The disturbing effects of the proposed plant would go far beyond the boundaries of Dexter Township and would affect, among others, the Pinckney-Waterloo corridor of recreational and natural areas.

Are the Panda people really so blind or callous they cannot or do not want to see the revolting backdrop for the unfortunate neighborhood and passers-by? Who wants to breathe additional volumes of carbon monoxide and nitrous oxides and live in fear of toxic chemicals spills and probability of ground water contamination?

How many of Panda's key people live next to the company's power plants, or given the choice, would prefer to live there? Yet, they seem to be appalled when the people who would be affected raise their voices against such a proposal.

The Dexter Township officials (and other townships who might be affected) should depart from the anachronistic assumption that growth and development are always signs of progress. Actually, movements across the country are gaining strong momentum against such "progress" when the quality of living is at stake and natural resources would be imperiled.

Township officials have been elected to work toward what is good for us — the residents — including protection of our living conditions.

We are blessed that we live in a rural area in the midst of farmland and wildlife habitat, with woods and lakes for recreation and clean air to breathe. These are very precious resources disappearing at alarming rate under the pretense of so-called progress, development and growth. No amount of money or extra tax dollars can justify their destruction.

We should have the right to define and defend the desirable qualities of the environment where we live. We owe it to ourselves and to those who come after us.

If Panda is really sensitive, as it claims, to environmental concerns and sentiments of the people then the company should realize the only place suitable for their facility is one already industrialized.

Property owners had right to know plans

Has there been a conspiracy of concealment by Dexter Township officials and Panda Energy?

The Aug. 31 front page of The Ann Arbor News stated that Panda Energy was in town to follow up on nearly a year's worth of negotiations with township officials for building a power plant on the southeast corner of Quigley and Madden roads.

Supervisor Robert Tetens was quoted as saying, "The project would generate tax revenue without significantly affecting rural township life. On the face of it, it appears like a real opportunity." Tetens further stated, "If we talked about it too early (Panda) might have packed up their bags and gone somewhere else. I've been looking for someone to show me why this is bad, but so far no one has been able to. I don't see a lot of problems."

Did the affected property owners have a right to know about these, secret negotiations? Did Supervisor Tetens' stated position encourage Panda Energy to move forward without any public input? Did we have a right to know about his negotiations before the community meeting a year later? Do the citizens have a right to know which Township Board members are really on our side of who's voting "yes" at the last minute?

How sad it is that township officials saw fit to exclude affected property owners input for over a year.

As stated by Trustee Harley Rider, putting the revision of the township ordinances on a fast track is urgently needed. With the proper protective covenants in place, the Panda Energy project moving forward would be moot.

Why make it easy for new development?

It just amazes me that anytime our council members, or should I say council business people, want new development in the area they pass a bond issue for their gain in the name of progress.

The citizens of Chelsea already pay the same outrageous taxes as Ann Arbor residents. The council business people said they needed $8.9 million for more water for future developments. So, the council decided to charge all residents $20 a month, and since it's a bond issue, there is nothing the residents of Chelsea can do about it.

The truth is that this is a development tax that Chelsea residents will pay for the next 20 years.

The scary thing is what if the bond was $100 million? Would every house have to pay an extra $100 a month for water and still have nothing to say about it?

One possible solution is to make all the new developers who want to be a part of this community, or should I say make a profit along with the council business people, pay Chelsea to make room for them at the water trough.

The residents of Chelsea already pay too much for water and sewer service that's close to capacity. Why should I or anyone fund the development advocates' need for more? If they want it make them pay for it.

The $700,000 needed for water softening. I'll pay $4 a month for that. It will save me the trip to the grocery store to buy salt.

Hey folks, guess what? Next month, $15 million for sewer work. As Village Manager Jack Myers and his cronies would say, "We don't need voters' approval, just charge them an extra $50 a month for sewer. It's a bond thing!"

Can I switch my vote now.

Find out more about the Panda proposal

My wife, Nancy, and I have just joined NOPE, which means NO to Panda Energy.

We live in Dexter Township and have a business in downtown Dexter. Both of these locations will be impacted by the proposed energy plant that wants to build on Madden Road, where 5 to 6 million gallons of wastewater will be used every day for tower cooling.

The wastewater will be evaporated into the air every day in the center of Dexter Township, the center of Washtenaw County.

We will all be breathing the mist from this sewer water if this plant is allowed to build anywhere in Washtenaw County.

You owe it to yourself and your family to find out what is going on before it is too late.

The Web site for NOPE, which is an organization of citizens who want this development stopped, is www.usol.com/~nope.

Proposal B, power plant indirectly related

I am writing to try to place the current Panda development issue in Dexter Township and Proposal B in some type of perspective. They are indirectly related and I hope that people supportive of NOPE will also support Proposal B, and those supportive of Proposal B will do what they can to help NOPE.

The group NOPE, which I am a member of, is currently doing everything in its power to stop Panda Energy from constructing and operating a 1,000-megawatt power plant in Dexter Township.

This is not just a Dexter Township issue. If allowed to operate, this plant will be the single largest source of air pollution in the county.

Much of the county, including Dexter Village and local subdivisions, such as Loch Alpine, Dexter Crossing and Ralaric Farms, will be downwind of the approximately 150-foot high stacks, depending on wind conditions. Hundreds of thousands of pounds of pollutants will be spewed into the air annually from this plant.

Proposal B, if passed, will allow us to remove 5,000 acres of land from the pool of land that developers are trying to pry away from landowners for residential, commercial, and industrial development. These 5,000 acres will be forever preserved for the enjoyment of our generation and succeeding generations at a very small cost.

The more land we can preserve in this manner, the less time, energy and money we will have to spend fighting Panda, the Newmarket developers and whatever other horrendous developments we are sure to see in the future.

Wouldn't it be nice to have that time to spend enjoying the natural beauty of our county and the satisfaction that would go along with knowing that we have played a part in preserving this land through voting for Proposal B?

Power plant would destroy quality of life

I am the president of NOPE Inc., the group against Panda Energy. I am disturbed that some people writing in seem to believe we are against energy. This is simply not true. What we are against is locating a 30-acre industrial facility in a township zoned agricultural, rural residential and recreation-conservation.

Some people have mentioned the plant would be better than 120 homes, but 120 homes cannot be put on a 111-acre parcel of land in Dexter Township. The land is currently zoned agricultural, which requires a minimum lot size of 10 acres.

Even if the zoning were changed to rural residential, minimum lot size is 2 1/2 acres, with a maximum number of houses of 44. This is, of course, if you could build on this entire piece of land, which is doubtful considering how wet it is.

Some people believe this will solve the electricity problem, but there is no guarantee that Panda Energy, a for-profit-only wholesale distributor of power, will even keep the energy in state. They can sell to the highest bidder.

Other people have accused us of not doing our part in the production of power, yet we live near a Detroit Edison substation and have high-tension towers and wires in our yards.

Others have said we just don't want to look at the plant, or deal with the noise from the plant. I won't argue with those two points, but our basis for being against the Panda plant runs much deeper than that.

The Panda plant would be the largest polluter in all of Washtenaw County. Yes, you read that correctly. It would be the largest polluter in all of Washtenaw County.

Three million pounds per year of criteria air pollutants would waft on the breeze, spreading pollution quite a distance. These pollutants include nitrogen oxide and volatile organic compounds, key components of acid rain.

Many lakes and streams examined in a National Surface Water Survey suffer from chronic acidity, a condition in which water has a constant low pH level.

Of the lakes and streams surveyed, acid rain has been determined to cause acidity in 75 percent of the acidic lakes and about 50 percent of the acidic streams. Several regions in the United States were identified as containing many of the surface waters sensitive to acidification, one of them was the upper Midwest.

Additionally, Southeast Michigan is classified as a maintenance area for air quality purposes. Until several years ago, we were classified as a non-attainment area. A maintenance area is just one small step up the air quality ladder. Allowing the Panda plant could knock us off the ladder entirely.

Cooling towers, by nature of their operation, emit fine water droplets known as drift. The proposed Panda plant will disperse 5 to 6 million gallons per day of drift over Dexter and the surrounding areas.

Wastewater effluent, based upon much research on the biological makeup of it, contains a host of disease organisms. For example, TB, measles, influenza and Legionnaire's disease have been detected in wastewater effluent.

By combining cooling towers and wastewater effluent, the residents of Dexter and surrounding communities would be exposed to the emission of bio-aerosols potentially containing bacteria, viruses and other infecting organisms.

A recent publication by the University of Portsmouth states that the health risks are unknown and further concludes, "The spray and mist from cooling towers can travel for several miles with the possible dispersion of aerosolized bacteria and viruses."

This 30-acre facility, with its combustion turbines, steam generators, steam turbines, water cooling towers, raw water storage tank and combustion stacks would not blend in with the rural character of the township.

The materials, whether it be construction equipment or hazardous chemicals stored on site after the plant is in operation, cannot be brought in on our narrow gravel roads.

Panda has offered to pay for upgrades to the roads, ignoring the fact that residents don't want these upgrades. We live here because we like the rural character, including the gravel roads.

Panda Energy is not a company to trust. They have said they will go away if the community doesn't want them. Does this explain why the residents of Upper Hanover Township, Pa., have been fighting them for over a year?

Does this explain why Panda has threatened to take that township to court?

The letters Dexter Township residents received regarding the community meeting appeared to have come from the Washtenaw Development Council because its logo was on the top, along with their contact information. But it turns out that the council did not approve the letter or even see it before Panda sent it out.

Panda Energy said the company follows the Sierra Club siting policy, but Nancy L. Schiffer, Huron Valley Sierra Club's Conservation co-chairwoman, said Panda officials reviewed the national Sierra Club's power plant siting policy "and tried to select portions that they judged would fit."

The Sierra Club has issued a statement indicating it does not endorse the Panda project.

The Ecology Center of Ann Arbor has announced it will formally oppose the Panda plant as well, citing unnecessary increase in local and regional pollution.

Does this sound like a company we want in our community? A company that misrepresents itself; a company that will build on a greenfield site in an area filled with lakes, rivers and recreation areas; a company that doesn't care whether the community wants it or not; a company that will become the largest polluter in all of Washtenaw County?

I say NOPE: NO Panda Energy.

NOPE's next meeting is Oct. 12 at Mill Creek Middle School. Andrea Bradbury
Dexter Township

Car buyers should consider depreciation

MONEY MATTERS

When considering the costs associated with purchasing a new vehicle - insurance, maintenance, loan interest - don't forget to factor in depreciation.

You won't find it on the sticker price, nor will you be billed for it. You may not even notice it until the time comes to sell your car. Still, depreciation can cost you big money over the years.

In the first year you own a new car, the vehicle may lose 20 percent of its original value due to depreciation, according to IntelliChoice, based in Campbell, Calif., which provides consumers with data about the true cost of owning cars and trucks. By the end of the fifth year, your vehicle's value drops by an average of 35.1 percent.

It's not only vehicle buyers who pay the price. Depreciation also affects the cost of leasing because leasing payments are based in part on what a vehicle will be worth at the end of the lease.

You can't stop depreciation, but you can lessen the impact it will have on your wallet. Here are a few points to consider from Home & Family Finance Magazine:

Some makes and models depreciate faster than others. Accurately predicting depreciation is difficult because so much depends on a vehicle's continuing popular appeal. But you can get a rough idea how much your vehicle will depreciate. Consult a blue book or other pricing guides to find out how well previous years' models have held their value. The Credit Union National Association Web site has a depreciation calculator. Go to www.cuna.org and then hit "calculators."

The pace of depreciation levels off after five years. Hanging on to a vehicle for at least that long minimizes the impact of depreciation on the overall cost of ownership.

It's smart to pick options that will appeal to the next buyer. Vehicles with air conditioning, automatic transmissions, sunroofs, and convertible tops tend to hold their resale value better. Lesser known models, luxury or limited edition models, and vehicles with odd colors or features tend to depreciate faster.

Vehicles that change dramatically in style from one year to the next tend to lose resale value faster. Last year's model quickly becomes outdated and loses its attraction to potential buyers. Choose a vehicle from a manufacturer that makes only subtle style changes each year.

Depreciation can deal a substantial financial blow to the owner of a new vehicle. But it can work to your advantage if you're in the market to buy or lease a used vehicle. A vehicle model that depreciates considerably in its early years may be an excellent deal as a used car.

Understanding The Law

with Leonard K. Kitchen, J.D. and Thomas L. Stringer, J.D.
CRIME AND PUNISHMENT

For the most part, criminal and civil law are distinct. Criminal law is generally designed to maintain peace and security among the general public. Those guilty of violating criminal laws are punished by society. Civil law regulates relationships between individuals, families, and corporations. Successful legal action usually results in monetary remedies. There are instances in which criminal and civil law overlap. For instance, those charged with assault and battery will likely be criminally charged. At the same time, attacking an individual may be a tort (wrongdoing) that may ultimately involve paying personal-injury damages to the victim. Consult with an attorney if you have suffered injury due to another's wrongdoing, even if the action involved criminal arrest.

Even if the individual responsible for your loss or injury is found not guilty of criminal charges, he or she can still be named as the defendant in a personal injury suit relating to the same incident for which they were charged. Not sure if you have a case? The LAW OFFICES OF KITCHEN & STRINGER invite you to call 426-4695 to schedule a free consultation at our offices, handle cases involving family law, real estate, business matters, wills, and estate probate.

HINT: A higher standard of proof applies to criminal law than to civil law.

Through Marnie's Eyes

Former Chelsea resident Marnie Taylor's photography is on display at Zou Zou's coffeehouse in Chelsea. The exhibit includes many pictures of Chelsea architecture.

Former resident's photography showcases local architecture

By Sheila Pursglove
Staff Writer

Marnie Taylor has come a long way from the box Brownie camera left to her by her great aunt.

She has also come a long way from her native New Zealand.

Taylor, whose photography exhibit of Chelsea architecture currently graces the walls of Zou Zou's coffeehouse in Chelsea, arrived in the village in 1995 to rejoin her family, who had moved from Auckland, New Zealand, the previous year.

"The Brownie didn't work, but it got me interested in photography — a path I've followed ever since," she says.

An honors student in Interior Design at Eastern Michigan University, Taylor transferred to Kendall College of Art and Design in Grand Rapids in 1999. She graduated in May with an honors degree in interior design.

Although she had been taking photographs for years, it wasn't until she was in college that Taylor discovered her aptitude for the more technical side of photography, which includes developing and printing.

Photography shows and commissions became more than a hobby. They were the means by which she paid her college tuition.

"Since I was trying to keep up good grades, tending bar till 4 a.m. wasn't working for me, and photography became a good way to make some money," she says.

"However, it's really nerve-racking when your rent and groceries depend on free-lance photography, and I'm so happy I can now enjoy it as a hobby rather than as a way to pay the bills."

While at Kendall, Taylor won photography competitions and had her work displayed in the college gallery.

"I was approached to provide some photographs to auction for charity, including an American Lung Transplant Association benefit fund-raiser in Grand Rapids for a young girl who had massive bills to pay after a double lung transplant," she says.

Not only was Taylor happy to oblige, she had the satisfaction of seeing her photograph receive the highest bid.

"This led to donating pieces for other charities, including the Grand Rapids Humane Society, to which I donate every year," she says.

Soon after, Taylor was getting commissions to do animal portraits.

"I also started doing portrait photography for friends. I didn't even know how much to charge," she says.

"It was just so satisfying. I so much enjoyed giving people images they could be proud of — that made them look beautiful."

"As far as I was concerned being paid was just a bonus."

As word spread, Taylor began doing portrait photography of babies, children, families and pets.

"People always say you should never work with animals and children, and yet that's exactly what I was doing," she says.

While family portraits helped pay the bills, Taylor was less than enthusiastic about doing them.

"It's very difficult to get a large group of people all looking in the same direction at once," she says.

"I felt I was getting away from what I really wanted to do, which was to be more artistic and expressive."

Taylor says she prefers a photojournalist approach, taking natural images of her subjects.

"I like black-and-white photographs, and use a documentary approach to try and capture the true self," she says.

Taylor found new inspiration with buildings in Grand Rapids.

"Grand Rapids has some beautiful, old architecture downtown, with cornices, columns and moldings," she says.

"I took some color photographs on a cold, crisp, winter day, with a bright blue sky as a backdrop and the results were dazzling."

Taylor was then approached by a coffeehouse gallery and, as a result, had a 22-piece exhibit at the business.

"Six of them sold, which was excellent for a first show," she says.

"I even designed frames, and a college friend from the furniture program put them together for me."

After her success with the Grand Rapids exhibition, Taylor came back to Chelsea — a place she views as her hometown — to concentrate on its local architecture.

Images of Michigan, and of Chelsea, including the Clocktower building and Chelsea Milling Co. now adorn the walls of Zou Zou's.

"My goal is to create beautiful artwork and make it accessible and affordable; everyone should be able to have something beautiful on their walls," she says.

"I'm able to do this by exhibiting in smaller venues such as coffeehouses, which generally enables me to keep my prices down."

Taylor chose Zou Zou's as a corner coffeehouse with a great atmosphere.

"It made sense to collaborate for my show as they have a very art-based atmosphere in their coffeehouse gallery," she says.

It was also a place with which she was very familiar.

"When I was younger, I used to work as a nanny for John and Margaret Lane of Lane Animal Hospital, and would push their twin babies up to Zou Zou's in their stroller."

Taylor's parents helped get the exhibit ready for its opening on Labor Day.

"I suffer from terrible stage fright, so opening night is very difficult for me until people start arriving. I'm so afraid no one will come," Taylor says.

"My parents and boyfriend are so supportive. They are always there to hold my hand and make me laugh."

Taylor used to work at Cleary's Pub in Chelsea and has many friends in the area.

"The wonderful people I met there have been very supportive of me," she says.

"Fifty people came to the opening, so the exhibit got a lot of attention and I've already had a number of commissions for photographs of cottages and homes."

Among these is a quadruplet of photos for the Staffan-Mitchell Funeral Home on Park Street in Chelsea.

"They're building a new funeral home on M-52 and asked me to document the old home throughout the seasons," she says.

"I've already done the summer shoot, and the fall one is

Margaret Spaly has worked as a social worker in Chelsea schools for the past five years. She splits her time between the high school and Beach Middle School. Spaly talks to high school student Amanda Schroeder in her office.

Spaly enjoys helping kids

By Michelle Rogers
Editor

Margaret Spaly was raised in a small town near Lansing. She was a sensitive child who worried about people's feelings.

"I felt uncomfortable when other kids in school weren't treated well," she says.

So, it's no surprise that more than four decades later Spaly is helping middle and high school-age students deal with their emotions, decisions and actions as a school social worker.

Spaly came to Washtenaw County 35 years ago in pursuit of a college degree. She graduated from the University of Michigan in 1969 with a bachelor's degree in psychology. She added a master's degree in social work two decades later.

Spaly initially came to U of M with the intention of studying French. Half way through the program, she started taking psychology courses and was fascinated by the subject.

"I am interested in how human beings work — how we think and why we do the things we do," she says.

So, Spaly switched majors and took an entirely different career path than she had originally planned.

Spaly started her career as a social worker with Catholic Social Services in Washtenaw County. She stayed for a year, then spent a decade as an adoption specialist with the Washtenaw County Juvenile Court, handling in-family and out-of-family adoptions.

From there, she was hired by Bethany

International Adoption Services, placing children from other countries with families across southeastern Michigan. Spaly remained with Bethany for nine years.

Her first job in a public school was in Ypsilanti, where she worked as a social worker in the high school and elementary schools.

After she was laid off, Spaly went to work for the Corner Health Center in Ypsilanti, where she provided maternal support services for teen parents, as well as infant mental health services.

From the teen center, she went to Huron Valley Child Guidance Clinic and then Chelsea schools.

This is Spaly's sixth year working as a social worker at Beach Middle School and Chelsea High School. She is responsible for 1,750 students. She says some students never need her help, others may need it once or twice, and some need continual support.

Spaly maintains offices in both buildings, splitting her week at each. She is one of two social workers in the district.

Whether she is working at the high school or Beach, Spaly says the problems are pretty much the same.

"The issues are often the same, but their way of seeing the issues change as they mature," she says.

For the most part, Spaly says she teaches students how to be resilient. "So when things get a little tough for them, they can come to a position of strength in dealing with their challenges in life," she says.

SPALY

Many of the issues Spaly helps children deal with relate to personality clashes and academic problems.

What brought Spaly back to the school setting five years ago was a desire to help students succeed.

"I like being in an education milieu," she says. "I love working with the students and I am a big believer in education."

"I like to help people find solutions to their problems and I especially like working with school-age students and families."

Spaly's job involves finding resources, such as family counseling, individual counseling and substance abuse treatment, for students and their families.

She works closely with the teaching staff to identify students who may need additional help, such as outside tutoring or counseling.

Spaly is part of a team that includes the school psychologist, teacher consultants, school counselors and administrators.

"Together we discuss students and how their needs can be met inside and outside of the school," she says.

Spaly is also the student assistant program coordinator, working with students who have substance-abuse problems.

Spaly describes her approach with students as sensitive and open.

"I really try to be a good listener to students and I try to understand how they're feeling — what it is that's on their minds," she says. "I really want to support them in making good decisions, coming to solutions on their own."

"I listen to them first and I kind of go from there."

In the end, Spaly says she hopes students see her as someone who cares about them and can help them sort through their problems.

While some students come to Spaly seeking help, most are referred to her. She also coordinates meeting groups as a forum for students who are dealing with similar issues.

At Beach, Spaly and counselor Patricia Compton offer a divorce group, a grief and loss group, and a concerned persons group for students who are concerned about family members or friends who are using drugs or alcohol.

"By doing groups, it's a way of helping students help each other find solutions to problems and provide support to each other," Spaly says.

While there are no special groups she organizes at the high school, Spaly is hoping to find several high school students interested in teaching peer resistance to sixth-graders.

She also wants to start a peer mediation program at the high school and Beach, with students trained to help their peers resolve conflict.

"I think it benefits who is trained, because they learn skills they might not learn otherwise, and it should reduce conflict from student to student and set a good tone in the building that there are ways to address conflicts that come up," Spaly says.

Outside of school, she is hoping to establish a Big Brother, Big Sister program in the community in conjunction with Faith in Action.

"The thing that is most successful for kids is having someone who really care about them," she says. "That person could be a teacher or anyone."

Looking back over her career, Spaly says she is happy about the direction it took. Although she hasn't spent all of her career in a school setting, the jobs she had in between helped make her better at what she does today.

"I really enjoyed working in a variety of settings and I think it gives me a sense of the big picture," she says.

For instance, Spaly can speak from her experience counseling teen mothers when she talks to Chelsea students about what can happen when they have unprotected sex.

Landing the job in Chelsea five years ago has worked out well for Spaly.

"When I think about why I like working in Chelsea it's because of the teamwork," she says. "We have good cooperation among administrators, counselors, social workers and teachers. We all work together to do the best we can for students."

"I look forward to staying in Chelsea," she says. "I definitely don't have any aspirations of going anywhere else."

"I just look forward to doing the best I can."

When she is not in the schools, Spaly enjoys spending her spare time staying fit. She does aerobics three to four times a week, she likes to in-line skate at Gallup Park in Ann Arbor, walk around her southeast Ann Arbor neighborhood and ride her bike.

Spaly also enjoys reading and spending time with friends.

She has two grown sons, Brian,

23, who lives in San Francisco; and Eric, 28, who lives in New York.

TAYLOR

coming up soon."

Taylor finds artistic inspiration and interesting examples of architecture — old homes, farms, barns, township halls, churches and one-room school-houses — throughout the area, and loves driving through small communities with her camera ready.

"My boyfriend, Randy, lived in Dexter until two years ago, and we spent a lot of time in local shops and restaurants," she says.

"At that time, the landscape remodeling in the downtown area had just been finished."

"I love the initiative that has been taken to improve Dexter; the refurbishing of the old buildings has really enhanced the overall feel of the village; and the architecture makes visiting there half the fun," she says.

"The old houses and commercial buildings in the Chelsea and Dexter area are so typical of the settlements in Midwest America."

"These areas are really going to explode in the next decade, and I'm enjoying taking photographs that will be enjoyed in the future," she says.

Taylor — who finds her inspiration in the work of Frank Lloyd Wright, I.M. Pei and Charles Rennie MacIntosh — currently lives and works in Troy, where she is a designer with Interior Dynamics, a Knoll furniture dealership.

Marnie Taylor currently has an exhibit of her photography on display at Zou Zou's.

Varsity gridgers domination continues

Last Friday's decisive 68-20 win over the Swartz Creek Dragons secured a place in the state playoffs, and preserved Chelsea's 6-0 unbeaten record so far this year.

But the Chelsea Bulldogs aren't resting on their laurels. The team was back in action this week at football practice, working on a variety of offensive and defensive plays, and getting ready to face a retooled Tecumseh team.

In the battle against the feared Dragons of Swartz Creek, the unstoppable Bulldogs scored 34 points in the first quarter alone. By halftime, the outcome of the game was a foregone conclusion and the score had increased to 48-6.

But the Bulldogs continued to press forward, bulldozing the Dragons. In football contests where one team leads by 35 or more points, the Michigan High School Athletic Association requires officials to keep the clock running and such was the case last Friday. By the time the teams started the fourth quarter, Chelsea was up 54-12.

Chris Cooper led the offensive charge for the Chelsea squad with three touchdown runs. Mike Sayers added two more sprints to the end zone, with Brigham passing for 13 and 10 yard scores, respectively, to receiver Tony Scheffler.

Mike Radka kept the Chelsea momentum going with a 14-yard score and added six extra points.

The undefeated Bulldogs will travel to Tecumseh this Friday to face the Indians Friday. The Bulldogs are walking into a hostile Tecumseh Homecoming game. Kickoff is 7:30 p.m.

Runners continuing to better times over season

Heritage Newspapers

It's what you want to see at this point in the cross country season, and in a couple of invitational last week, both the boys and girls of Chelsea had some pretty tangible proof.

At Mason last Thursday, "We had 14 girls record personal-record times for the season at this meet," said Pat Clarke, the Bulldogs' girls' coach. "We continue to improve, and that's all a coach can ask for from such a young team."

Ditto from Eric Swager, the boys' coach.

"Our runners made the time drop I've been waiting for all season," he said. "Fourteen of our 20 runners ran lifetime bests."

Chelsea's boys placed third at Mason with 85 points, trailing only Holt (60) and Okemos (71).

Mike Kattula led the way by placing fifth at 16:56. Next were Jared Daniel (14th), Kyle Brown (17th) and David Fedele (23rd), Trevor Bach (35th).

The girls were sixth among 13 teams, with Alison Sacks pacing the way in 18th. Ten seconds back was Jessica Dean, followed by Ashley Brainerd, Sarah Kaminsky and Erica Miller.

The results were even better and Chelsea's own invitational. The boys won the junior-senior contest with 18 points, beating Tecumseh (18, by a tiebreaker) and Lake Odessa Lakewood (25th).

Kattula had the best time of all the Bulldogs, taking third overall at 17:11.

"We ran hard, but we had fun," said Swager, who noted that Aaron Turek's 12th-place effort of 17:52 helped push Chelsea over the top.

The Bulldogs were third in the boys' freshman-sophomore race, getting nosed out by Pinckney and Dexter.

Chelsea's girls were second in the freshman-sophomore race. Sacks cruised to a fourth at 21:23, with Dean and Brainerd going 9-10 to complete the scoring.

Miller, Amanda Martin and Jessica Oberholtzer were the scorers for the Bulldogs in the junior-senior race. They placed eighth among 13 teams.

"Eleven girls medaled today, which is a season high," Clarke said. "We must continue to improve."

'Dogs offense lifts girls past Fowlerville

By Frank Weir
Heritage Newspapers

The Chelsea varsity girls' basketball squad easily dominated Fowlerville, 56-32, but couldn't quite get past Pioneer, 48-40, in action last week.

The Bulldogs forced 18 turnovers in the first half against Fowlerville and 34 for the game to forge a 28-15 half-time lead.

Chelsea exploded for 24 points in the third quarter, which was the best one-quarter performance of the season. The team led 52-22 after three quarters.

Michelle Dettling had 14 points and six rebounds, Lindsey Baker had 12 points, Ali Mann, 10, and Jessie Cole, 6.

Chelsea was ahead at the half against Pioneer, 26-24, in a see-saw battle throughout.

But in the second half, the Bulldogs had a tough time putting points on the board.

Add to that, untimely turnovers and missed shots that led to a 14-point second half output.

The Bulldogs trailed by one going into the fourth quarter and trailed by as many as nine in the quarter before making one last surge to cut the deficit to four points with 42 seconds left.

Chelsea turned the ball over, and four consecutive Pioneer free throws finished the scoring.

Mann led the way with 15 points (11 in the first half), Lindsey Baker had 10 and Dettling had eight all in first half.

"We played a great first half," said coach Todd Blomquist. "I think Pioneer is the best team in the area. They have two Division I prospects and they are good."

"We played our best in the first half and we were up by two. But we were sluggish in the second half, as was Pioneer. We only came up with seven points in the third quarter. And turnovers hurt us down the stretch in the fourth."

"The kids played well though," he said.

Blomquist is in his first year as head coach of the Chelsea squad. He coached the freshman boys program for three years and for two years was an assistant varsity coach of the boys. Blomquist is a former head varsity coach at Whitmore Lake.

Chelsea is 7-3 overall and 2-0 in the Southeastern Conference White Division.

State Bound

On Sept. 24, the Chelsea Equestrian team qualified for the state meet, to be held Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Team members, who all contributed many points to the score, include captain Kelly Jackson, a junior, senior Erin Ryder, junior Ashely Bartlett, sophomore Rachel Kilen and freshman Halley Sissom. Shown is junior Ashely Bartlett on her horse, "Cass."

Junior girls' squad rolls over three foes

By Frank Weir
Heritage Newspapers

The Chelsea girls' junior varsity basketball team continues to rampage through a golden season, posting a 9-1 record.

The Bulldogs posted three more victories in recent action, beating Manchester, 61-26, Fowlerville, 46-32, and Pioneer, 42-32.

"We've been shooting very well from the line," said coach Paul Terpstra. "At times, we have been in the 60 percentile, which is very good for JV kids."

Such was the case against Pioneer, where Chelsea knocked in 65 percent of its free throw attempts.

Anna Arend led the offense with nine points, while Jenelle Volcek and Stephanie Minzey added eight each.

Courtney Bentley had seven points and led on the boards with six rebounds.

Even with such success, Terpstra, who has been the girls' basketball coach for some 21 years, would like to see more consistent play.

"Against Pioneer, we only had 14 points in the second half to 28 for the first half," he said.

Terpstra said that the team is committing 15 or 20 turnovers per game and he would like to see that diminish.

"We've been fortunate not to have any injuries, so we've been able to play nine or 10 kids every game and been able to keep them in one position," he said.

"We have been having really strong first and second quarters, forcing our opponents to play catch up with us, which is always a nice position to be in."

Against Fowlerville, the Bulldogs scored a resounding first quarter. The team outscored its opponents 16-4. It was 25-11 at the half.

Both teams scored 21 points in the second half.

Arend had 12 points and eight rebounds, while Bentley added 11 points.

Chelsea completely dominated the Manchester Dutchmen. It was 29-8 at the half.

Chelsea had three players in double figures, including Arend with an amazing 21 points and seven rebounds.

Volcek added 16 points and Sarah Brigham had 11 points. She led on the boards with eight.

Tracy Carter was defensive leader with eight steals in addition to chipping in two points.

The team travels to Tecumseh today. Tecumseh is known as "The Jungle," to most prep basketball fans because of its tight, hot gym and cold welcome mat.

Swimmers dominated by Pioneers

By David Komer
Heritage Newspapers

Last Thursday the Chelsea girls' swimming and diving team took one on the chin against Ann Arbor Pioneer.

Pioneer, third ranked in the state and a perennial state power, showed why in its 132-54 defeat of the Bulldogs.

Despite the lopsided score, Chelsea had some positives to take home afterward.

"We know that Ann Arbor is a superior team," Coach John Crispin said. "We went in focused on getting a lot of girls into the lineup, performing well and gaining some valuable experience."

Pioneer will be the site of the SEC Conference Championship Meet November 3-4. The opportunity to compete there should help the Bulldogs later in the season, Crispin said.

"We had some very good times," he said. "A lot of these girls had lifetime bests. Considering that we are training very hard and that we are swimming tired and sore, we did pretty good."

Kari Ceo and Christine Rosentreter set season-best diving scores of 165.30 and 147.15.

In the 100 fly, Kayla Hack swam a state qualifying time of 1:08.71.

Jessica Bassett swam a personal best in the 200 freestyle swim of 2:17.36.

Swimming career bests in the 500 free were: Tracy Stetson (8:03.85), Kelly Varady (8:20.56) and Elena Street (8:25.68).

Also impressive was the 200 free relay performance of Hack, Alise Augustine, Danielle Hughes and Katrina Moffett who posted a state qualifying time of 1:48.67.

In the 400 free relay, Sarah Tschirhart's 59.82 split was big.

Netters take second

By Chuck Nelson

Heritage Newspapers
Chelsea tennis Coach John Capper thought that it was worth waiting an extra week to get the Chelsea Invitational tennis tournament in.

After being cancelled the previous Saturday, the tourney was played Sept. 28.

The host Bulldogs tied for second with 21 points with Marshall, behind winner Jackson Northwest.

Dexter came in fourth with 15 points.

Alyssa Warren and Ashley Cook won their flights at Nos. 3 and 4 singles to lead Chelsea.

At Nos. 1 and 3 singles, Catie Boshoven and Andrea Daane took second place medals, as did the No. 1 doubles team of Jessica French and Amy Baker. Kirra Sheremet and Sam Hepburn took the other Bulldogs medal at two doubles, taking third place.

At three doubles, Denise Arntson and Jenny Parker lost a couple tough three-setters, as did Alicia Seamon and Lindsay Parker at No. 4 doubles.

Chelsea also played at the Southeastern Conference league meet Tuesday, and tied with Dexter for fifth place.

Both schools finished with 18 points in the round-robin, pool-play volleyball style tourney.

Only one Bulldog managed to place at the league meet.

Danne won third-place honors at two singles.

Chelsea is off until the regional tournament, which begins Friday, Oct. 13.

Swartz Creek no match for 'Dogs

By Renee Lapham Collins
Heritage Newspapers

The junior varsity Bulldogs are following closely in the footsteps of the Chelsea varsity team, if last week's 34-2 win over Swartz Creek is any indication.

The Bulldogs had 370 total yards against their non-conference opponents, with Ryan Houle notching 126 yards on 15 carries and adding a touchdown to the Chelsea offensive.

Nick Auquier added 46 yards on three carries.

Jake Freeman completed 13 of 27 passes for a total of 172 yards, and had four touchdowns and one interception.

Matt Cunningham had 89 yards, while David Grabarkiewicz had 35 and Joel Rosentreter had 32.

Rosentreter and Grabarkiewicz each had a touchdown.

Joe Myers, Teddy Kielman, Chris Bauer and Grabarkiewicz each managed to intercept the ball during the course of the game.

The Swartz Creek squad seemed no match for the Bulldogs, getting a total of 108 yards against Chelsea.

In the first half, Rosentreter put Chelsea on the board with a catch in the Swartz Creek end zone on a pass from Jake Freeman. Rosentreter's kick was good to put the Bulldogs up 7-0.

Teddy Keilman caught a 6-yard toss from Freeman, and again Rosentreter's kick soared through the uprights.

Ryan Houle went 5 yards for a touchdown, but the point-after missed its mark. Rosentreter redeemed himself by nabbing a three-yard pass from Freeman, and then making good on the throw.

After the half, the Bulldogs came out ready to torment their opponents just a little more, with Grabarkiewicz scoring on a 14-yard pass from Freeman, and Rosentreter nailing the point-after throw.

Swartz Creek scored two points on a safety.

Soccer team 0-1-1 on week

By Dave Merchant
Heritage Newspapers

The Bulldogs had a rough week on the soccer field. They were able to earn one tie but they also lost a game.

The tie came last Thursday against Tecumseh.

The first goal was scored by Craig Forshee and assisted by Greg Kennedy. The second goal came in the first half off the foot of Kyle McKenzie and was unassisted to make the score 2-0.

The Indians stormed back get a goal 15 minutes into the second half. The tying goal came on the Indians second penalty kick of the match with about six minutes left to play.

Chelsea coach Chad Sealing said his team played well despite a few questionable calls. "It was not a great first 10 minutes," Sealing said. "We played well it was just unfortunate about a few of the calls."

On Sept. 26 the Bulldogs fell to Adrian 2-0. They were out shot 20-13 in the game.

Chelsea will play league rival Dexter today hoping to continue its winning ways over the Dreadnaughts. On Saturday they will play Jackson Lumen Christi. Tuesday they played Saline.

The Bulldogs fall to 3-3-5 overall on the season.

Seventh-graders win pair

The seventh-grade girls' basketball team notched wins over Lincoln and Saline in action last week.

At Lincoln Sept. 25, a team effort vaulted the girls past the Railspitters by a margin of 33-16. Shannon Olinyk led the scoring with 11 points, Jenny Carty had eight. Hannah Myers and Emily Woodruff each added six points and Rachel Vreeland had a bucket.

Other contributions to the win included four rebounds by Kat Fitzgerald, three rebounds and two steals from Kelly Milliken. Kara Reed had three steals, two blocked shots and two assists.

On Sept. 27, the girls hosted Saline, and came away with a hard-fought win, outscoring the Hornets 25-21.

The squad was trailing 6-3 at the half, and an aggressive third quarter put the girls ahead to stay.

Leading the effort were Shannon Olinyk with 10 points, three rebounds, five steals and two assists. Emily Woodruff added eight points, six rebounds and four steals, while Jenny Carty scored seven points and had four steals.

Haley Eder grabbed two rebounds and Katherine Lixey had two rebounds and two steals.

OBITUARIES

MARY K. HOFFMAN
Chelsea
Formerly of Howell
Mary Kepler Hoffman, beloved wife of Dr. Stanley Hoffman for 62 years, died peacefully at home on Sept. 17, 2000.
Born in 1913 in Kuling, China, of missionary parents, she came to the United States to attend college, there she met her future husband, whose parents were missionaries in Korea. Mrs. Hoffman earned her bachelor's degree in music from the College of Wooster, followed by a nursing degree from the University of Pennsylvania. She accompanied her husband as a medical missionary to China, where they served until it was unsafe to stay.
Mrs. Hoffman was a strong and supportive wife and mother through the China years, and later while living on various Indian reservations in the Southwest, where her husband served as a physician with the Bureau of Indian Affairs.
After moving to Michigan in 1955, she and her husband continued to work actively in their church and community. They gave a year of service as medical missionaries in South Africa with TEAM, and were later founding members of the Board of African Christian Ministries.
A consummate musician, cook and avid reader, her family would often call on her to settle a crossword or grammatical dispute.
Mrs. Hoffman and her husband always knew where the best wild grapes grew, and concocted many a jar of jelly made from the fruit to give to others.
In addition to her husband, Mrs.
Hoffman leaves a son, Kenneth
(Jan) Hoffman of Amherst, Ma., and two daughters, Jeannette (Don)
Faber of Ann Arbor and Katherine Hoffman of New York City; six grandchildren; and two great-grandchildren.
Known for her wonderful music, unassuming humility, kindness and dedication to her family and the Christian life, Mrs. Hoffman was a gracious lady beloved by all who came in contact with her. She wore peace and grace like a shining mantle to the very end.
A memorial service will be held
10 a.m. Oct. 9 at Westminster
Presbyterian Church in Ann Arbor.
Donations in Mrs. Hoffman's mem-

Hospice of Ann Arbor.

CATS awareness month under way

October is designated as "CATS Awareness Month," throwing the spotlight on the Chelsea Area Transportation System, which has served the senior and disabled population of Chelsea since 1976.
CATS is soliciting tax deductible donations to provide expanded services to seniors and the disabled, as well as to provide general transportation in the community.

These would include connections between Chelsea and Dexter, Chelsea and Ann Arbor, and long-distance runs.

Students at Beach Middle School and Pierce Elementary School are decorating fundraising canisters to place in the community during the week of Oct. 8.
