Group opposes enlarged home

■ Dexter Township ZBA grants variances.

By Lisa Allmendinger Staff Writer

Tom Prose and his family want to demolish their 50-year-old cottage on Half Moon Lake and replace it with a much larger home that includes an attached garage and an observation tower.

The Glennbrook Beach Association, which owns land on three sides of the Prose property, opposes, among other things, the size and scope of the new

The association comprises 44 homeowners that own the shoreline of the Prose property, the lake access on the north side and the undeveloped road easement on the east side.

The association reviewed the information on file for the Prose project April 9 and asked the township's Zoning Board of Appeals to consider its position.

The average home size on the lake is less than 3,000 square feet. Prose wants to build a 6,000-square-foot home that the association said is not in keeping with the character of the neighborhood. The home is to be built on three parcels of land along the lake.

The association opposes Prose's request for an 8-foot setback from the association's property line on the lake side. The house has a 12-foot setback, while the township ordinance calls for 30 feet.

"The purpose of association ownership of the shoreline is to maintain an open park-like feeling along the shoreline, allow pedestrian movement along the lake edge and provide a forced setback of private uses from the lake edge," according to a letter from the group to the ZBA. The association also opposes the use or development of the roadway easement on the east side of the property.

"We feel development of this easement will lead to a number of problems and potential problems and is completely unnecessary," the letter states.

The group also opposes development of the easement because of six significantly large trees that might be affected, as well as possible problems with a common sewer pipe that angles through the road easement. The easement runs along a wetland.

The letter also states that there is a pipe that drains excess water from the wetlands to the lake across the northeastern corner of the Prose property

Prose and his attorneys brought the case to the Dexter Township ZBA May 2, requesting relief from four sections of the zoning code and three nonconformities. The requests were heard after letters were exchanged and court orders issued over the controversial matter.

The beach association oppos es the new home because, among other reasons, the group says the home would block non lakefront owners' views of the lake; it could impact nearby wetlands; and the association questions the homeowner's right to use a road easement, according to the letter.

Farmer's Market has successful first weekend

■ Space still available at market for interested vendors and artisans.

By Will Keeler Staff Writer

Vendors with jars of honey, stalks of rhubarb and flats of geraniums lined the curb along Park

Street Saturday, kicking off this year's Chelsea Farmer's Market. Lima Township resident Sue Rodgers brought a white rooster to serve as the market's mascot.

Residents and visitors had a number of goods to choose from, including fresh flowers, vegetables and crafts. The items lined the sidewalk near the theater as the market opened for its first weekend.

Chelsea resident Pat Hicks was one of the first to visit this year's market.

Keith Taylor of Taylor and Son's Nursery in Grass Lake, a regular vendor, said that he begins to wonder if he doesn't see Hicks every weekend. "She's here rain or shine," he said.

Taylor had several greens and herbs, ranging from rosemary to lavender, for sale. Rodgers, another faithful attendee and vendor, had a table full of goods parked next to Taylor.

Among the items she was selling were red rhubarb and fresh honey from her farm on Dexter-Chelsea Road. Rodgers said that she had a slow start this plant-

Board discusses school budget

By Sheila Pursglove

Chelsea Board of Education is hoping the state delivers on its promise to provide additional money. The district stands to gain almost $1 million.

According to Lim Novak, executive director of business and operations, the district currently receives $6,573 a year from the state for each student.

The current budget is based on receiving an additional $300 per student for the 2001-2002 school year. With a blended pupil count of 2,934 in the Chelsea School District, Novak said the state would provide about $900,000 in additional funding.

At Monday's school board meeting, Novak said he would have more information May 18 as to whether the state will come through on its promise.

The school budget is close to its bottom-line limit. Novak said. While he is optimistic the additional funding will come through, he said that realistically it may not or it could be reduced.

The board discussed its priorities for the budget, specifically technology, new positions and new programs.

"We have a five-year replacement plan for technology hardware," Novak said, "Next year will show a big spike in the cycle, so we need to consider do we combine two years of expenses or delay some of them?"

The school Finance Committee will meet Wednesday for further discussion. Talks will continue June 11 before the June 25 budget hearing, when a formal budget will be adopted.

Grass Lake resident awarded heroism medal

Billy Ray Dorsey of Grass Lake is among 19 recent recipients of the Carnegie Medal given to people who risk their lives to an extraordinary degree while saving or trying to save the lives of others. Dorsey will receive a medal and a grant of $3,500 for his heroism last March in trying to save Dean Langenderfer from electrocution.

Langenderfer was spreading stones from a dump truck in the driveway of a business in Scio Township when the raised bed of the truck contacted overhead high-voltage lines. The truck was electrified and caught fire. Langenderfer got out of the vehicle but made contact with it and received an electrical shock.

Dorsey, a truck repair shop operator, immediately ran to the truck and threw himself against Langenderfer, knocking him away from the vehicle. Efforts to revive Langenderfer were unsuccessful.

Dorsey was hospitalized for four days and treated for injuries, including a fractured vertebra.

Lima discusses police options

■ Board to solicit input about hiring community service officer.

By Kent Ashton Walton Special Writer

Lima Township Board reviewed progress Monday on its options for law enforcement services once the county stops providing free road patrol.

Officials have decided to rely on the Michigan State Police and discussed the cost of hiring a community service officer. It was suggested that the cost be kept under $30,000 and not exceed the $80,000 it would cost to contract for one full-time sheriff's deputy.

Vince Spade, a member of the Police Service Review Committee, said a community service officer would be responsible for low-priority calls that do not require immediate action or police intervention.

The board decided that costs: were dependent on the officer's job description.

The board also discussed waiting a year before hiring a community service officer to see if it's necessary.

Officials said the position would not be full time and the officer would be involved in the community.

residents in the decision, and will set a public meeting when the objectives for the position have been defined.

In other business, Township Zoning Inspector Charles Schauer provided the board with a draft revision of the township's private road ordinance that contains changes and additions to the current ordinance.

Some of the proposed revisions relate to the manner in which structures adjoin public streets by private easement or right of way. Essentially, the aim is to ensure that emergency vehicles have adequate access to properties.

Revisions were also proposed The board wants to involve concerning the quality of pavement, drainage, road testing and insurance.

In addition, she covers Dexter Village and Dexter Township government, and has written a pet column for The-Chelsea Standard and The Dexter Leader.

Allmendinger has won numerous awards for promoting animal health care and welfare, including the Excellence in Journalism award from the New Jersey Veterinary Medical Association for outstanding news article contributions while a columnist at The North Jersey Herald and News.

Dear Friends and Neighbors, A few years ago an 8-year old girl had a party with some of her girlfriends. Her mother and father were taking care of the refreshments. One of her friends asked in astonishment; "Does your Dad actually live here?" Recently a young woman submitted a question to a brides' magazine, "My fiance wants us to move in together, but I want to wait until wo're married. Am I doing marriage an injustice?" These two incidents have a lot in common. We're becoming a society in which it's more and more common for a man and woman to live together outside of marriage, and less normal to live together in marriage. This is obviously not the ideal environment for raising children. God created one parent male and one female because He knew the children need both, He set it up that way.

A third portrait belongs in this picture: a young man recently praised his mother in a magazine interview because of her guidance and understanding; particularly

Faith in Action welcomes donations of clothing

Faith In Action is accepting donations of spring and summer clothing for adults and children. Donations may be dropped off between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. weekdays at Faith in Action, 775 S. Main St.

"We appreciate donations but please keep in mind our storage space is limited," said Nadine Shaneyfelt, assistant to the president of Faith In Action.

Shaneyfelt said people who want to donate large furniture or appliances should call first.

'We take names of donors and people in need and try and match them up, then they make their own delivery arrangements," she said.

Shaneyfelt asked that people not leave donations outside because sometimes animals get into them.

The organization needs seasonal clothing, sheets, blankets, towels, curtains, drapes, functional infant furniture and equipment, footwear, personal products, paper products and cleaning products.

The organization does not want TVs, VCRs, typewriters, chandeliers, large artificial Christmas trees, ski and bowling equipment, textbooks, video games or pet food.

But cash and check donations are welcome. Tax receipts will be issued on request.

Volunteer Donna McDonald, who coordinates food donations and distributions, has been kept busy since the April 28 Scouting for Food campaign, when the organization received a record amount of food and personal items from Chelsea troops. Dexter troops also brought in donations. Faith In Action expects another influx of donations when the Chelsea post office holds its food drive on Saturday. Local businesses donate regularly, as well, Shaneyfeit said.

"We truly appreciate the generous help we receive from individuals and businesses in the community so we can continue to help the needy," Shaneyfelt said.

Faith In Action can be reached at 475-3305.

Group gets Land Use

Design Award.

By Lisa Allmendinger Staff Writer

Last Thursday, the Chelsea Area Planning Team was given the Land Use Design Award from the Huron Land Use Alliance for providing an outstanding example of regional planning.

"It's a tremendous honor for Chelsea Area Planning Team to win this award. Plus, the leadership that we have provided in creating such a plan has generated a snowball effect in which other communities have followed suit," said County Commissioner Joseph Yekulis, who was one of the first officials to get involved in the effort.

The alliance recognizes projects that use innovative methods to develop land efficiently, protect the environment, preserve open space and promote livable communities.

The alliance is an organization of groups and individuals who provide information about land use in the Huron Valley area that is environmentally, fiscally and socially sound.

The Chelsea Area Planning Team, comprised of officials from Chelsea Village, and Lima, Lyndon, Sylvan and Dexter townships, worked with the Washtenaw County Metropolitan Planning Commission document that would help communities plan the future development of their municipalities.

Chelsea schools accredited

All Chelsea school buildings have received accreditation from the North Central Association of Colleges and Schools for the 2000-2001 school year. The action was taken at the NCA's annual meeting in Chicago April 3.

Board hires assistant principal

'Shawn Lewis-Lakin will be the new second assistant principal at Chelsea High School, succeeding Lori Reece, who resigned from the newly created position last fall after only four months. His emphasis will be on instruction.

Lewis-Lakin will join Principal Ron Mead and Assistant Principal Robin Raymond at the high school.

Lewis-Lakin is currently an assistant principal at a 1,100-student middle school in Monroe Public Schools.

'We interviewed Shawn when we were looking for an assistant principal for Beach Middle School last year," Chelsea Superintendent Ed Richardson said. "We hired Andrew Ingall, and they were both such good candidates we were sorry we couldn't place both of them.

"So, we're very pleased to be able to offer Shawn a position now, and are confident he'll do an excellent job."

The board approved the hiring at Monday's board meeting.

"Along with hosting periodic on-site evaluations by a visiting team of educators, each NCA school is accredited on the basis of an annual report on conditions in the school and on such supplementary information as the Commission on Schools requests," Chelsea High School-Principal Ron Mead said.

"The continued accreditation means that the conditions for effective education exist in the school."

Pierce Lake Elementary School Principal Lucy Stieber said that NCA accreditation had been a helpful process.

"We are looking forward to concentrating next year on a reanalysis of our goals and the development of a means to concentrate our efforts in a manner

A few years ago, a group of citizens came together and painted a beautiful mural on the aging, decrepit Rockwell Building in the Clock Tower complex. A grassroots effort transformed an ugly loading dock into a beautiful piece of public art.

Now, McKinley Associates wants to renovate the Rockwell Building. They will tear down its loading dock - and hence the mural - to restore the building's façade and create parking for the development.

In doing so, they're helping shape the village's future, providing mixed-use space that will retain and create dozens of jobs in the downtown area. They're not building another strip mall or office park, but using existing buildings that are aesthetically pleasing and an important part of Chelsea's history.

While concerned citizens organize to save the mural, McKinley Associates contends that saving it is unfeasible. They say that keeping the mural intact as a freestanding wall isn't practical in terms of cost, safety or aesthetics.

COMMUNITY ROOTS

it's hard to demonize McKinley Associates because they don't seem to be the evil, fat cat corporatists that usually tear down things like public murals. They should be commended for restoring the Clock Tower complex instead of demolishing it. They should be commended for saving these important examples of architecture. But nobody is denying them these laurels.

While McKinley Associates holds that saving the mural is problematic in terms of cost, safety and aesthetics, I hold that money and safety are secondary concerns. If McKinley Associates has the money to perform a historic renovation, they proba-spaces.

They could tear down the loading dock and leave the mural wall standing. Shore it up with structural bracing, if necessary. Or move the mural wall, brick by brick, to an adjacent site. Don't laugh - it's been done before with other buildings. And if they didn't have the money, the Chelsea community could help in terms of manpower and

No, I don't think this debate is about money or safety. I think it's about history.

It's nothing personal. I'm sure people at McKinley Associates like the mural. It just doesn't fit with their vision of_ historic preservation for the Rockwell Building and the Clock Tower development. Why spend the time, effort and money to restore a building only to have it hidden from public view by a mural wall? Two McKinley executives said as much in last week's article on the mural controversy.

cism because they are taking on the noble task of preserving our past. But whose past are they preserving?

In historic preservation, there has to be a decision about what history should be preserved. McKinley Associates wants to preserve the architectural history of the Rockwell Building. But history is subjective. It's insulting to say that the only historic legacy of the Rockwell Building is its architecture when one of its walls is adorned with a beautiful mural created by members of the community.

McKinley Associates is exercising a monopoly on the history of the Rockwell Building. Their version of the building's history is its architectural legacy. Others look to the mural for the building's historical significance. The dilemma is that both sides are right. Both histories are significant, but neither side holds exclusive title to the history of the Rockwell Building.

It seems McKinley Associates historical significance of the reached at glparker@umich.edu.

Rockwell Building is the mural, not the architecture. And if we're supposed to learn from the past, a lesson in grassroots, community action is just as important as a lesson in architectural history. In fact, I'd argue that it's more important.

While both sides argue that their version of the Rockwell Building's history is the most important, I think that both sides can agree each version is significant. So keep them both.

Sure, keeping the mural costs more. But for once, maybe profit shouldn't be the bottom line. And, for once, history should be inclusive instead of exclusive.

Why would you want to restore a beautiful old building and leave a wall standing in front of it, hiding the renovated landmark from public view?

On the other hand, why would you want to tear down an incredible mural created by community volunteers to make it easier to see a building?

We could buy a piece of wall

gotta admit it's kinda erresning to be back in Chelsea after my whirlwind presidential campaign. I mean, with all the issues I had to deal with on the campaign trail, walls never came up once. Concrete block is a much harder issue than block grants, if you know what I mean. So the first thing about the wall wars is, what's hysterical, anyway? Used to be that hysterical meant that things had to be kinda old, like made of brick with little fancy decorations and maybe wavy windows, but this wall in question doesn't even have windows, so how can you tell if it's hysterical or not?

And besides which, there's this guy around Chelsea who makes stained-glass windows and stuff that's all wavy but not even old. Seems to me that the real question here is what's older, a wall or a metal fence?

Walls are made of mortar, concrete and, in this case, paint, of which the oldest is concrete. You see, concrete has sand, which is basically fancy comes. Metal is made of, well, metal, which is made from old cars and sand was around before cars were even invented, so the wall is clearly older.

So now we gotta figure out what to do about it. Actually, not to tell you I told you so or anything, but when Auntie and I were out taking Arf for a walk the other day, she commented how we used to talk about a mural on the Jiffy Towers and if we would have put it there, we wouldn't be having this problem. Because the Jiffy towers are freestanding and have been through a lot of high winds and recessions and buyout offers and they're still there. But I won't tell you I told you so dirt, which is about as old as it because I told you I wouldn't. So what can you do with a wall that's in the wrong place? It's too bad the Village Parents didn't think about that when they were fighting with the railroad, because maybe they could have gotten the railroad people to move it over to block the defunct crossing instead of having to slap big fines on the

And the wall's a little too big to fit beside the rock. And eventhough it's a very artistic wall, I suspect it would be a little overpowering if they tried to sell it at the Chelsea Painters Art Fair, even if they could get a big enough pickup truck to haul it over there. Besides, if it didn't sell, who's gonna take it last time I did something like that it got me in big trouble with Auntie.

Seems to me, maybe we could all buy a hunk of it and use it as yard ornaments, like they did with that wall over in Germany. It could become, like, another tourist attraction, "The Great Chelsea Puzzle Wall," where all these tourists would flock here from all over the world to drive around to people's yards and take pictures of wall pieces and re-assemble them into the

If they did it right, they could win a fabulous prize, like a Jiffy Mix tour or a chance to be "Village Manager for a Day" or a bungee jump from one of our various world-famous towers.

So if you want a piece of the wall, send your check to me. here at the paper or email to uncleapollo@mediaone.net...

Make sure you add shipping of $50,000 per ton. In no time, you'll be the proud owner of a hunk of concrete with some paint on it, and you'll have the to serve all children with his -satisfaction of knowing you're making Chelsea a safer place for tourists, not to mention helping history and my retirement fund.

We should celebrate Martin Luther King Day

I am an eighth-grade student at Beach Middle School and just recently moved to Chelsea from Ann Arbor. As you know, just recently was Martin Luther King Jr. Day. And having just moved to Chelsea, it was a shock to me when I found out that we had school on this very important holiday.

This greatly disturbs me because coming from one of the most ethnically diverse cities in Michigan it has become a tradition for me to have that day off. I think it is very disrespectful to go to school on a day that is meant to honor and praise a great man for his accomplishments.

It also upsets me that, even if we do have school, we learn nothing about King and his accomplishments. Like when he and the NAACP organized sitins and bus boycotts so that African-Americans had the right to ride a bus and go into a store or a restaurant without being discriminated against.

King was also a motivational speaker at the Million Man March, where he gave his most famous speech, "I Have a Dream." He didn't give that speech just for the African-American population, but for all the other races in this country and in the whole world who were discriminated against.

I know that Chelsea doesn't have a very big African-American population, but that is no excuse not to take this day off. You do not have to be just African-American for this holiday to affect you. King did many things for people of all races.

I am aware that you can only take so many days off in a school year, but I know there are a lot of days we have off, that we don't need off, We could substitute one-of these days to-have this holiday off. This holiday is very my race.

So please take it into great consideration when thinking about taking this holiday off. I am not the only person who is greatly upset about this, as are some of the people in Chelsea. Please think about doing something for King's birthday, whether it is taking the day off or having a day full of activities in school.

John Davidsen will make a good trustee

As we approach the upcoming June 11 Chelsea school board election, it is time to remember that all voters have an opportunity to make a difference in the lives of many children and families in this community.

Every citizen, whether or not they have school-age children, will benefit from a quality school system that offers the highest standards of public school education possible. All of our students and their families deserve the resources, support, and encouragement that meets their needs in a safe and secure environment.

So, please take the time and effort to educate yourselves about the candidates and issues that will have a direct impact on our students and the entire community. Plan to attend the Meet the Candidates Night sponsored by the Chelsea Education Foundation June 4. Contact the candidates personally to ask questions and learn what they have to offer.

Chelsea is an exemplary, unique town blessed with high levels of parent participation, committed and caring educators, and strong support of the general business community. important to me, and people of But without the partnership of all voters in the process, we cannot expect the leadership we need and deserve to happen by magic.

The backward attitude that "it won't make a difference anyway" is unfair and shortsighted. In our aim to make this a healthy community that we are proud to share with our children, it is our duty to participate in the fundamental responsibility of electing the voices that represent us.

While all of the candidates have impressive qualifications and special skills, I am most pleased to see John "Jack" Davidsen running for one of the two positions this year. He comes from a teaching family and worked throughout his career in and for higher education. He has a personal devotion to his school-age sons and desire strong focus on educational priorities first, complements his fairminded, ethical and patient approach.

John Davidsen is an independent candidate who also deeply understands the value of honest cooperation and a true team spirit when tackling sensitive issues. I know he will listen, learn and help to lead the board, along with the essential input of parents and the community.

Hope to see you all at the polls at the Washington Street Educational Center cafeteria June 11.

Local backpacker joins fight against breast cancer

By Sheila Pursglove

iking across an avalanche field in Nepal, Sue Williams faced her own mortality.

"I felt the only reason I didn't die is that God didn't decide to open up the crevasse where I was walking," she says.

In midlife, the 52-year-old Chelsea resident has experienced several awe-inspiring events that have fueled her courage and determination to face challenges head on.

One was the six weeks she spent in Nepal last spring hiking the Annapurna Circuit in the Himalayas with her oldest daughter, Beth.

Another was in 1990, while hiking the Appalachian Trail. She met Bill Irwin, author of "Blind Courage," hiking the trail at the age of 55 with his seeing-eye dog.

Williams was inspired to hike the trail in its entirety and plans to do so when her youngest daughter graduates in 2005.

"Then I can be really selfish," she says. A third catalyst was the death of a friend from breast cancer on Christmas Day.

Returning from her friend's funeral, Williams went online and registered for the June 15 Avon Breast Cancer 3-Day-Walk from Kenosha, Wis., to Chicago, to raise funds for research, support services and early detection programs.

The lady whose boots were made for walking came to the Chelsea area 24 years ago from Cincinnati.

Her husband, John, state director with the Michigan Department of Career Development, was principal of Chelsea High School for 12 years.

The couple raised three daughters, Elizabeth, 25; Melissa, 23; and Rebecca, 20. Williams, a substitute teacher in Dexter schools, was involved in Girl Scouts, the Chelsea Area Players, the Washington Street Show Choir, Chelsea Center for the Development of the Arts and Chelsea Music Boosters.

Filling the void with activities, she spent her spare time hiking, backpacking, canoeing, traveling, golfing, downhill and crosscountry skiing, and gardening.

"I've been the most challenged and the most active in the last five years," Williams says. "At this age, you can't just pick up a sport, you need to be in shape. I made a resolution five years ago to get in shape and stay in shape."

Williams acknowledges the toughest challenge can be finding time for leisure with her full-time career as a senior financial adviser with American Express.

Williams got the backpacking bug five years ago. "Every spring, the family would head to the Smokey Mountains and hike up to 16 miles a day," she says. "I guess I ran out of day hikes.'

A member of the Great Lakes Hiking Group, she has covered many trails, including those in Michigan's Upper Peninsula, the local Potawatomi Trail, trails in Idaho,-Shenandoah National Park, the Smokey Mountains and the 120-mile Centennial See STRIDE - Page 2-B

Operation Mother Goose Community members escort Canada geese to safety across busy M-52 in Chelsea

Brian Groesser (left) of Chelsea Pharmacy and Pat Beeman of Chelsea State Bank escort Canada geese and goslings across M-52.

By Sheila Pursglove. Staff Writer

Cars and big rigs weren't the only things honking on M-52 last week.

A pair of anxious Canada geese and their four goslings caused some pandemonium in the parking lot of Chelsea Shopping Center before crossing M-52 to the wetlands at Pierce Lake.

The sextet first made their appearance outside The Chelsea Standard last Tuesday, and hung around the Wolverine parking lot before heading for Old US-12.

Chelsea Standard receptionist Colleen Cooper joined Pat Beeman and Tina Keck, data processing employees from Chelsea State Bank, in escorting the feathered family across the road to the relative safety of the shopping center parking lot.

"I was on my lunch break, looked out the window and there were the geese trying to cross US 12." Beeman said, "Tina and I went out to help them across."

According to Beeman, this is the second consecutive year of the geese crossing in the exact

Newspaper staff called Bird Rescue of Huron Valley, who suggested escorting the geese to the nearest water, which, as luck would have it, was the far side of busy M-52, not a happy combination for tiny goslings and massive big rigs.

As the geese made their way across the parking lot, Brian Groesser of Chelsea Pharmacy and Dona Baird of Chelsea Community Hospital's White Oak Inn joined the escorts.

Drivers cheered on the odd entourage, patiently waiting while the little goslings struggled to climb up and then slide down high curbs.

As one parent goose led the group in single file, the other brought up the rear, keeping stragglers in line. One tired little gosling repeatedly tried to sit down but was hustled along by its parent.

While the geese seemed to instinctively head for water, that instinct evidently did not include knowledge of traffic lights or safety. Instead, the jaywalking band headed south of the lights, forcing their two-legged escorts to stop traffic on M-52.

The group made its way across the road as Chelsea Police Chief Lenard McDougall pulled up in his cruiser to ensure a happy ending to 'Operation Mother Goose."

Drivers honked, cheered and waved as the little family disappeared into the wetlands east of the highway.

According to Karen Young, head of Bird Rescue of Huron Valley, it is not uncommon for. people to find ducks and geese nesting under bushes or close to buildings.

"These are relatively safe places for them," Young says. "The best thing is to leave them alone, keep pets and kids away and don't move the nest. We can't move the nest, either legally or ethically. If the nest is moved, the parents won't return and it destroys the eggs."

According to Young, once the eggs hatch, usu ally in three weeks, the mother will move the young ones to water as soon as they dry out, usually within 24 hours. The family does not return to the nest.

"If you see the eggs starting to hatch, then you know the family will be on the move soon," Young says. "The best thing is to give them safe passage, escort them through tricky areas like parking lots and across roads; but obviously being careful not to put yourself at peril in traffic.

"Local police are usually very good about coop erating with traffic control."

Saturdays were lively during century's first half

EDITOR'S NOTE — This is the third in a seven-part series of excerpts from the book: Our Hometown: America's History as Seen Through the Eyes of a Midwestern Village," by Cynthia Furlong Reynolds and published by Steeping Bear Press in Chelsea.

Saturday nights were lively in Chelsea throughout the village's first century and a half. Saloons were open and full of convivial customers. Slot machines lured nickels, dimes, and quarters from hard-working factory workers and farm boys. Music spilled over onto the sidewalks and streets - and sometimes, so did brawls and fistfights. The stores were all open Wednesday and Saturday nights and full of shop-

They weren't the only ones intown in the evenings. On Saturday nights, farmers would finishtheir chores and drive their entire families into town, pull their wagons into the same spot every week, then shop, browse through the library's shelves for a week's supply of books, and visit with friends. On other warm evenings, the village residents would sit on each other's front porches and visit after supper dishes had been done.

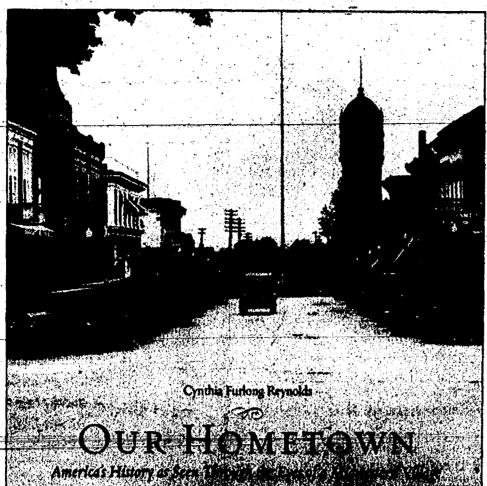

Later, with the advent of the automobile, people would walk up and down the street and climb into the back of friends' cars to visit.

"The cars served as front porches for country people coming into town," Marjorie Hepburn says. "They'd sit together for awhile and then move on to visit with other friends down the street."

For many years, a flagpole stood in the middle of Main Street and around the flagpole generations of town activities took place. On Saturday nights, a wagon would be pulled up to the flagpole to serve as a stage for the community band. Every week throughout the summers. the band would entertain the

"In my early days, Wesley Smith was the director and everyone who had an instrument would climb up there and play to the best of their abilities," says Rolly Spaulding, adding with a grin, "If you were bad, it didn't really matter. The noise was what was important."

Conrad Lehman, who owned two Lincoln cars, drove one twoblocks away to Main Street early on band concert days, so his wife and her sister would have front-row seats. Then he would walk home. He wasn't the only dutiful husband to do this.

"The thrill of a band concert was more about people-watching than about listening to the pleasant tones of the band," John Keusch says.

Baseball was the all-Americentury. Visiting teams toured the area, challenging locals to action on diamonds carved out of farmers' fields. In 1924, an old baseball was found in a drawer at Kempf Commercial & Savings Bank inscribed with the year 1902 and signed by players fielded by Chelsea in a showdown with the Ypsilanti Knights of Pythias.

The local team won the game 10-8, with John Merrinan, catcher; Philip Steger, pitcher; A. Gulde at first base; George Staffan, second base; H.D. hands with soap. Then he would Witherell, third base; Frank Leach, right field; A.E. Winans. center field; L.P. Vogel, left field; J.S. Cummings, short stop. George BeGole and Hugh Van De Walker served as umpires during the game, and BeGole kept the ball as a memento.

A 1924 Chelsea Standard article announcing the discovery noted, "The ball will be hung in Chelsea Knights of Pythius rooms, where it is expected it will attract considerable atten-

The medicines, which contained a high alcoholic content, offered to cure everything from "ladies' ailments" to arthritis and bunions, cost a dollar a bottle.

George Staffan remembers the show's "Popular Lady Contest" and learned the trick of making a soap look particularly effec-

"Mr. Sharpstein would choose a lady and wash one of her hold her hand up to the audience, squeezing it at the wrist, which would drain the blood and make the hand look whiter than the unwashed hand!"

Sleeping Bear Press has provided the excerpts from the book. Publisher Brian Lewis said proceeds from the sale of the book benefit the Chelsea Community Foundation and Purple Rose Theatre Co. In addition, Hallmark, Chelsea Market, Little Professor Book Center in Chelsea and Borders have agreed to donate $5 from every sale to both

Woman's club celebrates 70-year anniversary

The Woman's Club of Chelsea is celebrating a milestone.

This year marks the club's 70th providing community ser-

It all started in 1931, when several women teaching in the Methodist Sunday school talked of forming a child study group. They invited women from other churches to a meeting and, after receiving information from the State Association of Child Study Clubs and the Dexter club, a charter was issued in October

There were 11 charter members of the club, originally called the Chelsea Child Study Club.

From its inception, the objective was "the unified study of child nurture for the betterment of home and community."

The name was later changed to the Woman's Club of Chelsea. and the statement of purpose now is "to come together in the spirit of friendship and unity of purpose, for the benefit of home and community."

For a better community, members envisioned three important goals: to start a library, start a Girl Scout troop and to work with the needy,

These goals were achieved. From 1932 through 1946, the club had the entire sponsorship of the Girl Scouts, which included finding leaders, organizing Courts of Awards and staffing summer camp. In 1954, the Girl Scout troop became part of the Girl Scout Council of Washtenaw County and a new era began for Chelsea Girl Scouts.

Community service was one of the three objectives of the founding members. It began with mittens and stockings for four families on the first Christmas of the club's existence.

Club members also gave Community Chest. layettes and literature on child care to needy mothers of the village, gathered used children's clothing for distribution through the American Red Cross, packed Christmas boxes for shut-ins. made dresses for the local Red Cross and made surgical dressings to be used in Chelsea for emergencies.

The club promoted and donated substantial funds to summer recreation programs until 1955. when they became completely supported by the Community Chest. The club spearheaded the organization of the Community Chest in 1953 and 1954.

Awareness of the urgent need for help with the underprivileged children in Chelsea led to the start of the Social Service Committee to do work among the poor. After five years, the committee became the Chelsea Social Service Inc., a project entirely supported by the lated to military conflicts resulted in the baking of thousands of cookies for Army hospitals, knitting, Russian relief, Korean relief and the adoption of two European and one Korean orphan.

The Chelsea Public Library now the Chelsea District Library - was the realization of one of the club's biggest early dreams. The library was started in 1932 with 22 donated books and 100 loaners from the state library. It first occupied space in a store owned by the Palmer family on East Middle Street. Volunteer help from the club members kept in running.

After a vote of the people, the library became a tax-supported public library in 1938. The club. however, has continued to make gifts to it and express concern for the library's welfare.

The library found a permanent home in 1959 when the McKune family donated the McKune House to the Chelsea Public Library, which became known as the McKune Memorial Library.

A committee of the library received its first donation from the club, and funds were used to redecorate and furnish a clubthe public.

Organizations that have grown out of the club's efforts include the Chelsea District Library, the Chelsea Girl Scouts, the Young Mother's Child Study Club, the Grass Lake Child Study Club. the Recreation Council, the Community Chest, now the United Way, and Chelsea Social

FARM FACT

Inbred flowers often have disappointing aromas, and that's a problem for farmers as much as for romantics. Plants selected for their large fruit or bold blooms often have little energy left for the manufacture of sweet smells,. Without a strong fragrance, the plants have trouble attracting pollinating bees and birds. But help is on the way. Plant biologists recently isolated the gene for methyl benzoate, a major componant of the scent of snapdragons. This gene seems to be a blueprint for plant smell. Some 30 to 40 other agriculturally important plants use the same gene; however, intensive breeding evidently deactivates the gene. Scientists plan to put additional copies of the key DNA into de-scented flowers to restore their scent.

WHEN GUM POCKETS FORM

Does toothbrushing or eating hard foods make your gums bleed? If so, you can be sure that some inflammation is going on. Pockets of bacteria may have developed around some of your Gum tissue has two parts. The lining or surface tissue is called the epithelium. The dense supportive tissue that lies under it is called connective tissue. In the early destruction phase, called gingivitis, bacteria attack the gum lining and connective tissue. Your body sends cells to fight the bacteria, but some of them are destroyed in the process. When these cells die, enzymes and other substances are released that contribute to the destruction of gum tissue and bone. As the disease progresses you may notice that your gum tissue looks red and shiny. It may also look slightly puffy or swollen and bleed more easily.

Fortunately, gum disease, even at this stage, is reversible if you get the treatment you need from your dentist. The longer you delay treatment, however, the greater your chances of losing teeth.

Someone to Watch Over Mom.

"I told my Mom that I believed The Meadows at Silver Maples was the perfect place for her and Dad. They were able to enjoy being together, with Dad getting assistance from The Meadows very caring staff, until Dad needed to move on to more intensive care. Dad has since passed on. It has been comforting for Mom to be in the beautiful environment and among friends she has made at The Meadows while her life has gone through very emotional phases. Having 'someone to watch over Mom' has been reassuring to me.'

Rover rules

Dogs appear to be the most popular local pet among community leaders

By Lisa Allmendinger Staff Writer

An informal poll of area officials shows that man's best friend is the pet of choice for public officials in the readership area as America celebrates National Pet Week. Although a few admitted to at one time owning cats, most are diehard dog lovers.

There are a handful of exotic pets, of course. County Road Commissioner Pam Burns, a Democrat, is particularly proud of her donkeys. A Dexter fireman has peacocks and Michelle Rogers, editor of The Chelsea Standard and The Dexter Leader, is gaga over her two bunnies, -Blackbird and Zupa.

Zupa, a mixed-breed rabbit, likes to bite wires, Rogers said, especially telephone cords.

"She destroyed a telephone cord and two replacements in one week's time and since has been banned from that part of the apartment.

"Blackbird doesn't chew on anything except carrots," she said.

The two lagomorphs eat fresh vegetables and rabbit pellets, but prefer yogurt treats, bread, oats and apple juice, Rogers said.

For the most part, however, move over fluffy bunnies, peacocks and donkeys because the dog brigade has taken charge.

Baron, a 9-year-old German shorthaired pointer, belongs to County Commissioner Joseph Yekulis of Chelsea.

"Moose," as he is also known. (because he reminds the family of the moose on "Northern Exposure") literally carries on conversations with his owners.

"He talks to us," Yekulis said, demonstrating a conversation by whining and howling that was immediately answered by the 75-pound American Kennel Club registered pooch.

"We had a pointer mix previously and, during her life, she looked after the kids. We wanted a good, family-oriented breed," he said.

A trip to an Ypsilanti breeder provided the perfect answer to the family's dreams. Baron went home with them when he was 3 months old and was crated to housebreak him.

Twice the pointer's call of the wild has gotten him in trouble. When Yekulis lived near the Waterloo Recreation Area and Baron was just a puppy, the dog took off after an animal during a blizzard.

The family later found out their beloved pet wound up on the south side of Sugarloaf Lake and a newspaper carrier had taken him home.

In the meantime, Yekulis had posted signs. When the dog lover brought Baron, minus his collar, into Lane Animal Hospital, the canine and family were reunited.

The newspaper carrier was given a reward for his efforts,_ Yekulis said.

Another time, the dog took off into the woods to do what pointers are bred to do, which is to flush game. When he came. back, he became very ill, lost almost half his body weight and Tetens grew up with do nearly died, Yekulis said, Again, it was Lane Animal Hospital that saved the day this time nursing him back to health.

For Angus, state Rep. John Hansen's dog, life hasn't been. quite as exciting. However, Angus does receive quite a bit of adoration while participating in numerous parades across the state official's district sporting his specially designed blanket.

The rough-coat collie, the second that Hansen of Dexter has owned, came from a breeder in Hartland.

Holly, who lived for 11 years, Angus is the first dog the Hansens have owned as a couple. Before that, there was an orange cat named Buffy, who lived in their apartment.

Angus is a veteran of more than a dozen parades, ranging from the Ann Arbor Fourth of July Parade to Dexter's Memorial Day and the Dexter Daze parades to Chelsea's Fair Parade.

"Angus is known more for his personality quirks," Hansen said, noting his pet does not like to go up stairs. The 104-pound dog is not "a digger" and "he's not a licker." "He's the perfect net."

Hansen said. Sandy Hansen added, "He's a love sponge."

And she should know since she's in charge of grooming the longhaired Lassie look-a-like. "It's good for both of them," Hansen said of the 15 to 20 minutes every other day that his wife spends grooming the 2%year-old dog.

Down the road in Dexter Township, after 25 years raising malamutes, Township Supervisor Robert Tetens decided to make a change to another large dog breed when he chose Wyatt from a litter of black German shepherd puppies about three years ago. Now 90 pounds, "Wyatt wakes me up by dropping a tennis ball on me, and he won't stop until I throw it for him," Tetens said. Wyatt is now joined by Xena, Tetens' newest family addition. She is almost 2 years old.

The two black German shepherds are a daunting duo, as Wyatt is as masculine as Xena is feminine. They share a common occupation of continually getting into some sort-of-trouble, Tetens said.

"I can't tell you who instigates it," Tetens said, "but they share the blame.'

While Wyatt is always up for a game of Frisbee or ball, Xena has never forgotten the pampered existence of her short show career.

Tetens admits his dogs are very tolerant of this hectic. schedule. As township supervisor and the new director of Washtenaw County Parks and Recreation, many days start with early morning meetings, followed by a regular workday and ending with an evening meeting.

But, Tetens said, "Whenever

Tetens grew up with dogs smaller than he has come to prefer - and spent many hours in the woods playing with his uncle's dog.

"I've had a lot of good dogs. Jake, a malamute; Jessie, a German shepherd mix, and before Xena came into the picture (there was) another dog named Austin," Tetens said. Several miles away in Dexter

Montpetit breaks Chelsea girls' pole vault record

For the second week in a row. the Chelsea girls' track and field team suffered a one-point loss.

The host Bulldogs fell 69-68 to Ypsilanti Lincoln May 1.

Despite outscoring the Railsplitters, 33-12, in field events and winning three of four relays, Chelsea (1-2, 0-2) was unable to capture any individual running events.

In pole vault, however, the Bulldogs shined.

Danielle Montpetit set a new school record, clearing 9 feet, 9 inches.

The old record of 8-6 was set last year by Montpetit.

"Usually a record like this gets broken by 6 inches to a foot at a time," said Chelsea coach Bill Bainton. "To better it by so much shows the quality of Danielle's performance.

Maria Worke still roams the halls of Dexter High School, vet she's a Division I college athlete.

The Dreadnaught senior was recently one of two incoming freshmen named to Valparaiso University's cheerleading squad.

Worke, who plans to major in pre-law, traveled down to the northern Indiana school, located 40 miles outside Chicago, for a one-day tryout April 27.

The official tryouts were scheduled for April 28, but Worke, a star defensive specialist for Dexter's Class B state semifinal volleyball team this bast winter, had an AAU match hat same day... Woike couldn't miss her voleyball match, so she asked if he could tryout on the 27th and, o her surprise, the Valparaiso Roach said yes.

"It was so nerve-racking," Woike said. "I had no clue what hey were going to make me do." Woike practiced the night efore by watching videotapes f college cheerleaders given to er by Dexter cheer coach Lea Augustine knew of Woike's lack of "flying" experience.

Besides displaying her tal-

New process makes blood plasma safer A University of Michigan

researcher has made a surpris-ing discovery that will make blood plasma transfusions even

Research by Dr. Robertson Davenport, U of M associate professor of pathology and medical director of the U of M Blood Bank and Transfusion Service, will ensure that human parvovirus B19 is not transmitted through the donor plasma supply, potentially causing harmful effects in some patients.

The research, which will be presented Dec. 4 at the annual meeting of the American Society of Hematology in San Francisco, has already resulted in improvements in the processing of blood plasma.

The intent of Davenport's study was to establish whether solvent- or detergent-treated plasma can transmit parvovirus B19, which can result in minor infections in healthy people but may be dangerous to pregnant women and those with bone marrow diseases. He also wanted to look for Hepatitis A, a cause of jaundice.

"Our hypothesis was that there would be little, if any virus, and that antibodies in the plasma would protect against infection if virus was present," he said.

In fact, what he found was that parvovirus is present, and in much greater amounts than ever expected.

from normal volunteer blood donors that may go to donation appearance" - that fades and sites like the Red Cross. From there, it goes to hospitals and blood banks for use in patients with clotting problems, those suffering excessive bleeding or those with blood diseases.

In the study, Davenport started with 100 healthy individuals who were found to have had no prior exposure to Hepatitis A or parvovirus B19. Each person that underwent typical treatment processes.

The plasma was the same as that which any patient might have received from a hospital or blood bank at the time. The 100 study recipients then were monitored for three months.

"Nobody developed any signs of Hepatitis A so we concluded that treated plasma is safe from the point of Hepatitis A transmission," Davenport said.

Hepatitis A does not progress. to a chronic infection and will not cause cirrhosis of the liver.

"But as the early data became available, we were surprised that 18 subjects did develop parvovirus. None of them got sick but there was clearly virus in the blood," Davenport said. "Though there was no danger to the volunteers, we immediately became concerned and stopped the study.

"We looked at the lots of plasma that had been infused. Three out of 10 had high amounts of the more common than previously parvovirus and these were the same ones that were associated with transmission. The other lots had low amounts of parvovirus and didn't result in transmission."

In some healthy people, parvovirus B19 infection causes Fifth Disease, named so because it was the fifth disease doctors discovered that caused a red rash in children. This common affliction can produce a mild Blood plasma is collected rash and reddening of the face - called a "slapped-face

> Although minor for most, parvovirus can cause a miscarriage in pregnant women and can cause the production of blood cells to stop for those with certain bone marrow diseases. Davenport said.

Unlike human-immunodeficiency virus - HIV - or Hepatitis B and C, which are all was given one unit of plasma lipid-enveloped viruses, parvovirus B19 and Hepatitis A are non lipid-enveloped. This means they can't be killed by a common process used to treat plasma.

A commercial treatment called the solvent or detergent process is now used to inactivate HIV, Hepatitis B and C from plasma and plasma products such as clotting, factor concentrates needed by hemophiliacs.

In that treatment, a substance that disrupts the lipid layer is introduced and the viruses cannot then infect another person. This process was created by the New York Blood Center and was commercialized by Technologies, or VITEX - the same company that sponsored Davenport's research, VITEX is the only manufacturer of solvent- or detergent-treated plasma in the country.

The discovery of parvovirus in the plasma-infused volunteers suggested that the virus is thought.

When a volunteer makes a blood donation, their plasma is mixed into a pool of 2,500 donations. Each such pool is individually processed, packaged and sent to blood banks and hospitals.

5,000 donations would have the virus," Davenport said "If that was true, we would expect about every other lot of plasma to have one donation in it that has parvovirus. But instead, nearly every lot showed that some virus was present, a few lots had high amounts of parvovirus."

Because this study showed that parvovirus was in greater amounts than expected and that. in high concentrations, it could be transmitted. VITEX pursued a way to amend the normal processing of plasma to prevent the transmission of parvovirus.

Currently, there is no FDA-approved test for parvovirus in blood broducts. Davenport and VITEX used a propriatary test newly developed by National Genetics Institute to determine the concentrations of parvovirus in the plasma samples.

The company also will present data on that test at the American Society of Hematology meeting. After Davenport's discovery, VITEX voluntarily recalled lots of plasma that were associated with parvovirus transmission. The company also began screening plasma for parvovirus.

"Before the plasma went into the pool, it was screened and donations with high amounts of parvovirus were rejected," Davenport said.

This significantly lowered the concentration of parvovirus in the plasma pool.

Equipped with the new test, Davenport and his collaborators resumed the study. Another 50 healthy people were given an infusion of the plasma that underwent the additional screening for parvovirus. Subsequently, none were found to have the virus.

Davenport's conclusion: There is a threshold, and if the "We expected that one in concentration of virus is under that threshold, the virus will not be transmitted.

'With additional screening, solvent- or detergent-treated plasma does not transmit parvovirus," he said. "As it is currently manufactured with this screening in place, it is safe from transmission.

'The small amount of residual parvovirus does not result in transmission and would not present a risk even to patients who might be susceptible to the more serious consequences of parvovirus infection," Davenport

True health from inside out

DR. JAMES DUNCAN

CHROPRACTIC CARE

What is health? What does it mean to be healthy? Where does health come from?

These are common questions that millions of Americans are trying to find the answers to every day. They look for it in pills, potions, lotions, fad diets, health food stores, health clubs. and the list goes on.

While some of these things can help enhance your health, some can actually decrease your health potential due to side effects or nutritional deficiencies. Before we try to improve our health, we should define what health is so we can do things that will lead us in the right direction.

How would you define health? Is it having no symptoms? Is it having no diseases?

One definition of health is "a state of optimal physical, mental, and social well-being, and not merely the absence of disease and infirmity."

So, health has nothing to do with the presence or absence of disease and symptoms.

Another definition says, "Health is a condition of whole- but the body does the healing.

are functioning 100 percent, all the time."

This definition, in general, says your health is determined by how your body is functioning not by how you feel. Let's look at some of the key components of this second definition.

All parts of the body serve a purpose. There are no extra parts. You have your highest health potential if you have all of your original parts. Tonsils used to be taken out routinely at the first bout of tonsillitis and the appendix used to be removed during other surgeries as a "preventive" measure even if it was perfectly healthy. Now we know both of these organs play a major role in the immune

Who wants their heart or lungs to function at less than 100 percent? What other organs or systems in your body would you want to work at less than 100 percent?

Would it be all right for your heart to function at less than 100 percent when you are asleep? Of course not! It may have less demand put on it while you are asleep but it still had better meet 100 percent of the demand at the time.

These definitions tell us that true health comes from inside out not outside in. Your body is designed to be a self-healing, self-regulating organism as long as it is not interfered with. If you break a bone and it needs a cast. does the cast heal the broken bone? No, it removes interference so that it can heal properly.

ness in which all of the organs. Nature needs no help, just no interference. With this being the case, how can we improve or regain our health naturally?

Since health has to do with function, should we stimulate or inhibit body function with drugs? This has been the primary form of health care for years. Yet, while drug expenditure continues to escalate (99.6 billion in 1999 for prescription drugs alone) the health rank of our country continues to plummet.

In 1970 the United States ranked about 15th compared to other countries. Recently, we have been ranked around 25th. As a nation we make up about 4 percent of the world's total population, yet we expend almost half of all money spent on medical care. If drugs were the answer we should be the healthiest nation on the planet.

Maybe it is time we focus on how to keep our body function at 100 percent from a natural approach. A chiropractor's primary purpose is to remove interference to the nervous system. The nervous system controls and coordinates the function of every part of the body. To perform at your highest level you need a nervous system free from interference just like you need water, rest, exercise, a balanced diet and a positive mental attitude. Chiropractic care should be an integral part of your true health care regimen.

Typically, more homes go on the market during these months. Many people lay low in the winter and are now starting their house hunting as the weather warms up. But it takes some planning to help everything go smoothly.

CATS serves the community well

CATS CORNER

Chelsea Area Transportation System has compiled its 2000-2001 fiscal-year statistics.

During the last fiscal year, CATS provided 3.149 rides for medical appointments, 1,711 munity Foundation, Chelsea rides to work, 737 rides to nutrition programs, 746 rides for social purposes, 1,734 rides for business and 66 rides for volunteer opportunity.

The majority of miles were driven in the village of Chelsea, bringing the village's ride total to 6,402.

CATS' nonprofit status makes it necessary to raise funds for all operational expenses, such as salaries, supplies, gasoline, insurance and bus maintenance.

Major financial contributors were Ann Arbor Area ComCommunity Foundation, Chelsea Community Hospital, Chelsea Retirement Community, Chelsea Retirement Community Council. Chelsea Kiwanis Club, Chelsea Lions Club, Chelsea Milling Co., Cheisea Rotary Club, Chelsea VFW Club, United Way, Chelsea

DaimlerChrysler Corp., Modern Mothers Club, Pierce's Pastries Plus, Rosebud Foundation. Silver Maples Retirement Center, Sylvan Township, Chelsea Village and Dr. Steven Yarrows.

Their contributions made last year's fund-raising campaign the second best year in the history of CATS.

CATS is on the edge of explosive growth. June will bring with it both rehabilitated and new vehicles to the fleet, and an offering of expanded service for senior and disabled clients, as well as the general population.

Contributions have made this possible.

For more information about CATS call 433-1338. For ride reservations call 475-9494.

Your tax-deductible contributions may be sent to CATS, P.O. Box 272, Chelsea, MI 48118.
