Lyle Green holds his book, "My World War II Experience Revisited," chronicling his wartime experiences. At right is the Eisenhower jacket he was given after returning to the United States in December 1945. Green and his wife, Doris, have been residents of the Silver Maples Retirement Community for two years.

Remembering World War II Local man publishes his wartime memories

By Sheila Pursglove
Associate Editor

Lyle Green had thought that at age 32, with a weak left arm and flat feet, he was an unlikely candidate for the armed forces.

But Uncle Sam thought otherwise. On Aug. 21, 1942, Green, a high school principal in Nebraska, received a letter of "greetings" from President Harry S. Truman. The following day, he received his orders to report for induction into the U.S. Army.

Instead of making lesson plans for chemistry class or planning offenses and defenses for the school football team, the teacher, scoutmaster and sports coach found himself immersed in the world of roll call, "K" rations, and close-order drills.

At Sunday's observance of Veterans Day draws near, the resident of the Silver Maples Retirement Community in Chelsea is sharing his memories of the war. He has chronicled his wartime experiences in a book called "My World War II Experience Revisited," detailing his life from his call to military services in 1942 to his discharge in December 1945.

The Nebraska native's first experience in the army was at Fort Robinson in Wyoming, where the draftee felt humiliated by having his head shaved.

From there, he was sent to Fort Bliss in Texas where Barracks 42 was his home for 13 weeks. He was assigned to a weapons battalion of the Coast Artillery.

One of the oldest men in his battalion, Green brought a wealth of experience, including a degree in physical science and experience from several part-time jobs, including lawn mowing, janitorial work, sales and chauffeuring.

Even his skill as a duck hunter came in handy. A sure shot with a rifle, he gave his comrades tips that enabled them to increase their percentage of hits during firing practice.

Green was selected to attend Officers Candidate School at Camp Davis in North Carolina. Unfortunately, despite getting a 95 percent grade average, he washed out as a second "Looney" after he forgot the command to turn right and marched his squad into a ditch.

Green's next stop was the Midland Radio School in Kansas City, Mo. Always fascinated by radio technology, in 1928 Green had traded in a 1919 Model T Ford for a crystal radio set.

In Kansas City, Green found life during the 12-week course quite serene, billeted in a hotel and with no guard duty, drill or calisthenics.

He was then sent to study radar at Camp Murphy, near Hobe Sound, Fla., training to install, use and repair the SCR 268 radar that was employed exclusively in the invasion of

Residents petition for park

Subdivision contractor open to possibilities.

The open fields that greet travelers along Chelsea-Dexter Road could all change in the next couple of years.

In the past two months, many village residents have voiced concerns over the 157 acres of farmland targeted for a 352-unit subdivision called The Vineyards.

The farmland owned by Martin Merkel includes land near North Freer Road and Chelsea-Dexter Road.

The Committee for Chelsea Park, a grassroots group opposed to the development, would like to see a park at the site instead of homes. The group kicked off a petition drive Nov. 1 in hopes of collecting 1,000 signatures from village residents to convince the village to buy the land for a park.

FFH Enterprises of Southfield has plans to develop the land for a subdivision. However, Steven Fisher of FFH Enterprises said he is not opposed to the group's efforts.

"I always like to keep the door open to any possibilities," Fisher said.

Fisher, who is speaking on behalf of Merkel, said that he would like to see a purchase agreement soon if the village plans to purchase the land. Fisher added that the land has not been appraised and did not specify a price for the property.

For now, Fisher said that he will continue with his plans for the housing development.

Wendy Wallace, a member of the Committee for Chelsea Park, said that she doesn't want to see another subdivision in the vil-

Church forum draws crowd

Second forum set for Sunday.

By Kent Ashton Walton
Special Writer

Local residents and representatives from the area's churches on Sunday attended the First Congregational Church forum titled "Where do we go from here?"

The Dexter Area Ministerial Association, the Interfaith Council for Peace and Justice and members of the Chelsea religious community sponsored the forum to discuss questions arising from the Sept. 11 terrorists attacks on the United States.

The forum was conceived to provide a place for community members to openly discuss issues raised by the events following the terrorist attacks on

New York City and Washington, D.C.

When people were divided into discussion groups, more questions were raised than answers given. Participants, including ministers and residents, were asked to suggest answers to questions such as "Is the U.S. military response the right one?" "Is talk of peace unpatriotic?" "Why do terrorists hate us?"

Some suggested a more Christian response than bombing Afghanistan using spiritual weapons, including feeding the starving in Afghanistan and Pakistan. This, it was argued, would be more likely to win the U.S. global support.

Others asked what the United

Community survey meeting generates interest

Key communicators filled out survey focusing on millage issues.

By Sheila Pursglove
Associate Editor

The board room at the Washington Street Education Center was filled Monday evening when the Chelsea Board of Education presented a community survey focusing on funding issues for the district.

People the board perceived as key communicators in the community, such as religious leaders, civic leaders and PTO representatives, were invited to give their input on the survey.

About 59 out of 160 invitees came. Surveys will be mailed to those who were unable to attend. A handful of people from the general public also came to the presentation.

Board President Scott Broshar, who joined Superintendent Ed Richardson in delivering two back-to-back 30-minute presentations, estimated about 70 people attended.

"The turn out was great, and we appreciate the effort people made to be there," Broshar said Tuesday. "People seemed to be interested in learning about the issues, which is important."

"There were some good questions from the audience during our presentation, and some good individual questions to board members and administrators over refreshments."

The five-page survey will be used to gather information regarding three key funding issues for the district, namely the sinking fund millage, recreation millage and facility use fees.

It focuses on such items as repairs, capital improvements, land purchase, senior citizens' facilities and programming, youth and adult recreation programs, art education, student athletic programming, operation of the swimming pool and auditoriums, and whether to charge fees for use of school facilities.

Broshar said it's not a scientific survey but a means of putting a finger on the pulse of the community.

Celebrating Community Education

National Community Education Day set for Tuesday

Dan Salow (left) plays with his daughter, Sierra, in the Chelsea Community Education Parents As Teachers Program, one of many programs and activities offered in the district.

The Chelsea School District will celebrate the 20th annual National Community Education Day on Tuesday. The theme will be "Community Education: A Beacon for All Ages."

Sponsored by the National Community Education Association, the day was established in 1982 to recognize and promote strong working partnerships between schools and communities.

It emphasizes the benefits of community involvement in the nation's schools by members of every age group, and highlights the importance of community renewal and practical strategies for achieving the goal of whole communities collaborating for the greater good.

The 20,000 community schools across the country have become community centers, encouraging lifelong learning opportunities for all community members, regardless of age.

They have challenged surrounding neighborhoods to become learning communities and are open evenings, weekends and during the summer to serve as the focal point for community activities and services in a safe and nurturing environment.

"In the Chelsea School District, our Community Education program services thousands annually with educational, enrichment and recreation programs serving (all ages) from new babies to senior citizens," Community Education Director Jeff Rohrer said.

"For almost 25 years, the Community Education program has helped stimulate an environment that facilitates our schools and community learning together," he said. "This concept supports the development of a better educational environment for students and a supportive learning community."

Rohrer is in his 10th year as Community Education director, succeeding Jackie Rogers Tracy, who was hired in 1978.

"Charles Cameron, who was superintendent here for many years, hired the first Community Education director and kicked the program off," Rohrer said. "It has been an important part of the school district ever since.

"Most of the programs are self-supporting through state aid, grants, fees or tuition. The program in Chelsea is successful because the community supports education and the concept of building a community of lifelong learners."

Rohrer is supported by secretary Mary Ann Sprague, receptionist Kris Hohnke, Becky Morse, Lana Ching and facilities coordinator Missy Cowan.

"We have six coordinators who each help to organize and implement programs," Rohrer said. "We also have many adult education and preschool teachers, support staff and pool staff and enrichment teachers."

Judy Stratman is the enrichment coordinator and also produces school publications. Dave Jolly is the pool director, Scott Mancha is the theater manager and Colleen O'Neill is senior citizen coordinator.

Ann Valle coordinates the Adult Education program. Sara Houle coordinates the Parents As Teachers program, assisted by secretary Debbie Stieger and four parent educators.

National Community Education Day, co-sponsored by more than 39 organizations, is an opportunity to showcase programs and initiatives and to raise public awareness of the benefits of community education and community schools.

Firefighters undergo intensive training

Rapid Intervention Training teaches escape and removal procedures.

By Sheila Pursglove
Associate Editor

Four members of the Chelsea Area Fire Department took part in Rapid Intervention Training last week, learning techniques and procedures for rescuing and removing fellow firefighters who are lost or trapped from confined spaces.

Chris Trotter, Denis Fowler, John Veck and Jim Boritzki, from Station 3 on Maute Road in Waterloo Township took the training.

The foursome did two evening classes at Chelsea High School last week, and spent last weekend training at an abandoned house on Waterloo Road.

Approximately 24 firefighters from Washtenaw and Livingston counties took the course, Chelsea Fire Chief Dan Ellenwood said Tuesday. Other Chelsea firefighters helped with such logistical work as keeping batteries charged and moving equipment.

"It's a very specialized, highly skilled class and very difficult to do," Ellenwood said. "They learn things like how to cut holes in roof and floors, how to cut out windows to make a doorway, how to cut notches in a wall so they can climb up it, and how to use ropes."

During the last training exercise, Boritzki injured his back after falling several feet.

Ellenwood took him to Chelsea Community Hospital, where he was treated and released.

Ellenwood said another class may be scheduled in the spring.

Reunion set for Nov. 15

The first Chelsea School District employee reunion is set from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. Nov. 15 in the Chelsea High School commons area.

Board members and school employees, including all retirees, are invited to the event.

The reunion replaces the traditional holiday gathering that has been poorly attended and that was canceled last year.

By holding the event the week before Thanksgiving, instead of in the middle of December's party-going season, the district hopes participants will find it easier to attend.

STRAIGHT FACTS

A story in last week's Chelsea Standard should have said Kent Reames did the punting for the Bulldogs in their first round playoff game against Tecumseh. Reames also kicked a 41-yard field goal against Milan Oct. 19.

AFRAID OF BEING "OUT-BIBLED"

Dear Friends and Neighbors,
A few months ago a friend of mine was asked to move up from teaching preschool children in Sunday School, to teaching 6th-graders. Many of these 6th-graders attend Lutheran Elementary School, where they have religion classes five days a week, and their young minds can absorb a lot more than a middle-aged person.

For that reason my friend was quite concerned that she wouldn't be qualified. Her main fear, as she expressed it, was that "the kids would 'out-Bible' me."

That certainly is a valid concern. In every church there are probably children who can put many adults to shame with their Bible knowledge. This should motivate adults to keep growing in this knowledge. Being busy or being lazy is no excuse. After all, the Bible is our source of life, the only definitive message that God gives us in this life. It's sad when adult Christians are "out-Bibled" by children, or by members of religious cults who come knocking on their door.

Still, I assured my friend that she need not be worried, because she has something her 6th-grade students don't have: She has over 35 years of life experience more than they do. It's one thing to know your Bible. It's another thing to be able to apply it and see how it works in your life.

We want our Sunday School teachers to be fully knowledgeable about the lessons they teach, and our church body provides excellent material to help them. We don't want our Sunday School to be just another academic class, however, but rather, 45 minutes when young Christians can draw strength for a living faith in Jesus their Savior.

Your children are welcome in our Sunday School, 8:30 a.m. Sunday mornings. At that same time you are welcome in our Sunday morning Adult Bible Class, which includes a number of people whose thought-provoking questions often push their pastor to the limit.

Please visit us this Sunday morning at 8:30 a.m., and stay for worship at 9:30 a.m.

Fun weekend

Chelsea Cubs join Boy Scouts at Camp Teetonkah

By Sheila Pursglove
Associate Editor

Chelsea Cub Scouts who will cross over to Boy Scouts in February got a taste of the Scouting program during the "Fun Weekend" hosted by Chelsea Boy Scout Troop 476 Oct. 26 through 28 at Camp Teetonkah on Big Wolf Lake southwest of Grass Lake.

A total of 21 Webelos Cub Scouts from North Creek Pack 435 and South Meadows Pack 455, as well as 15 Boy Scouts and 26 parents and leaders, attended the event organized by Troop 476 Assistant Scoutmaster Jim Leach Sr. and Senior Patrol Leader Sean Steinbach.

The Boy Scouts headed to Camp Teetonkah on Friday evening to set up a camping area into five patrols for the Cubs, who arrived the following morning. Each patrol area had four or five tents, a dining fly and picnic table.

"Our adult GOAT Patrol area included a large dining fly, two picnic tables and a collection of vintage tents that were much closer to the age of most of the adults than those of the Cubs who were present," Scout leader Jim Daly said.

Daly and adult leader Rick Gauthier founded the troop's GOAT patrol, an acronym for Scouts Joe Daly (left), Alex Mote, Jim Leach Jr., Ben Christie and adult leader James Daly enjoyed the activities of the recent "Fun Weekend" held at Camp Teetonkah on Big Wolf Lake. The weekend included a soccer game, campfire skits and demonstrations of First Aid and knot tying.

Geritol, Old Age, Tenacity.

Steinbach, who doubles as the troop bugler, roused the troop early on Saturday morning, so they could prepare the camp before the Cubs arrived at 11 a.m.

"Some Cub Scout parents were surprised to learn that Boy Scouts, not adults, would lead the events for the weekend," Daly said.

Daniel Gauthier, Andy Ramsey and Joe Turek gave demonstrations on first aid, knot tying and lashing.

Steinbach and James Daly organized an afternoon soccer game, giving parents a chance to tour the camp.

Camp Teetonkah, the second oldest Boy Scout camp in the country, opened in 1912.

"Many local families have camped there for generations," Daly said. "I went there in the late '60s and Jim Leach Sr. was a waterfront counselor there."

"It was a new experience for most of the Cub Scouts and their parents."

The evening meal brought a special treat — fresh venison provided by the members of the Western Washtenaw County Chapter of Whittails Unlimited.

Jim Leach Jr. gave a cooking orientation for the evening meal — an aluminum foil dinner which Daly said is a Boy Scout tradition for large groups. Each diner wrapped their own favorite ingredients — meat, potatoes, onions, carrots and spices — and cooked it over a hot wood fire.

Joe Bob Daly organized the evening campfire. The gathering included skits from each Scout unit. Tom Turek gave the Scoutmaster's Minute.

The campfire ended with "Scout Vespers," a traditional Scout song that was sung by everyone. The evening was rounded out by a snack of cider and doughnuts.

NAMING AN EXECUTOR

When naming an executor, consider a relative who is reliable, cares about your beneficiaries, is fairly sophisticated about finances, lives in-state, and is willing to carry out the details involved in probating an estate. This recommendation may help speed the process in that if a family member did not move expeditiously, he or she could count on a relative asking for answers. Additionally, if the executor is also a beneficiary, there is a stronger, more personal reason to complete duties quickly. A relative is also likely to be more attuned to a beneficiary's urgent need for early distribution. It can also be a good idea to look beyond family members if you suspect there will be feuding among your heirs.

While few of us enjoy contemplating the possibility of an untimely demise, those who are parents must take steps to ensure that their children are well provided for in the event of their death. One of the most important tasks is reaching a mutually agreed upon choice of guardian. If that guardian should reside in another country, it is all the more imperative to leave legally binding instructions. To schedule a complimentary consultation, call the LAW OFFICES OF KITCHEN & STRINGER, J.D., located in Dexter at 3249 Broad Street at 426-4695.

HINT: Depending on the complexity of the estate, an executor might use an estate attorney at different times during probate.

Lima board considers new liquor license

Decision postponed until next meeting.

By Kent Ashton Walton
Special Writer

Much of the Lima Township Board meeting Monday focused on the pros and cons of granting the owners of Reddeman Farms Golf Club a Class C liquor license.

Frank Garzia and Patty McCarthy own the facility, which is located at 555 S. Dancer Road in Lima Township.

Public comment at the meeting seemed fairly evenly divided. Residents who have known the couple for the last decade consider them to be courteous, responsible, supportive of the community, and able to maintain a clean and pleasant business.

They pointed out that the business has supported the schools, and has been free of serious disruptions and problems.

Many considered the business to be an asset to the township and saw no reason for the board not to grant the liquor license.

Others were against granting the license, arguing that the beer and wine license that the business currently holds is sufficient.

Some residents pointed to potential traffic issues, including possible increased traffic and safety problems that could arise with people drinking liquor on the premises.

Complaints were made about noisy delivery trucks and speeding golfers, as well.

It was also mentioned during public comment that there is one other facility in Lima Township that has a liquor license. Some residents consider one enough.

However, based on population size, the state has made another liquor license available.

Garzia said the business has always operated within the special-use restrictions set by the township. He said that the taxes on the property are among the highest in Washtenaw County for a public golf course, and that a liquor license would help increase profits.

The Township Board appeared uncertain about the transfer from a beer and wine license to a Class C liquor license and its relationship to the special-use permit the business currently holds.

A traffic study was suggested. Township Supervisor Ken Unterbrink, however, said he has conducted an unofficial survey of similar business traffic patterns both with and without liquor licenses. According to his findings, businesses with a liquor license do not show a significantly higher level of traffic. He also noted that the business practices are within the special-use restrictions.

The board decided that it needs more time to consider the request. The vote was postponed until the next meeting. A special meeting may be held 8 p.m. Nov. 15. The next regularly scheduled meeting is Dec. 3.

In other news, Township Zoning Inspector Charles Schauer announced his resignation effective in April. He has held the position for four years. Schauer cited health concerns as among his reasons for leaving.

"This is not a rallying cry for the school district, but a way to find out what people want — what the community might support or not support," he said. "The survey seemed to be well received by those who were there."

Broshar said the board will discuss the results of the survey at its Nov. 12 meeting, which will be a work session at the administrative offices at 500 Washington St., instead of its usual venue in the board room.

"We'll also discuss continuing focus groups and informational sessions for the community," he said.

Board Secretary Dayle Wright, who also heads the communications committee, said Monday's session was a good start to getting feedback from the community about issues affecting the district.

"We'd also like to find out how people define school success and student success," she said.

Colleen O'Neill, director of the Chelsea Senior Center and a member of the North Creek Elementary School PTO, was one of the key communicators invited to attend.

"I thought it was fairly well presented," O'Neill said Tuesday. "They did a good job of explaining what a millage is and the options that a school district has.

"In the long run, they got the points across."

O'Neill talked to school board members over refreshments.

"We talked about the process and what they want to do," she said. "(Trustee) Conrad Knutsen suggested it would be good to sit one-on-one with senior citizens, senior citizens and people interested in swimming programs, and find out what people's needs and desires are. I was very impressed with that idea." Village Manager Richard Steele was another key communicator invited to attend. Steele said afterward that he found the presentation interesting and informative.

"It was very well attended, which I think speaks well for the interest level of the community," Steele said Tuesday. "People learned specifics of things like Proposal A."

Superintendent Ed Richardson said the meeting was a good example of how school boards can communicate with the public and get feedback.

"These key communicators represented the community," he said. "We wanted to get an initial reaction and get a feel for what people are thinking."

Richardson said Tuesday that he had had positive feedback from participants, including people who said they had understood taxation for the first time, and how they liked hearing details about how the school district operates.

Associate Pursglove Editor Sheila Pursglove can be reached at 475-1371.

lage. "We already have a number of subdivisions in the works," Wallace said.

The committee would like to see a village park with open land, ball fields and bike and footpaths.

Petitions are circulating throughout the village asking village residents for their support and their tax dollars to pay for the land.

The committee said that the project could be financed through a combination of grants from land trust and farmland conservation organizations, donations and a millage of up to 2.5 mills per household over 10 years.

Village Clerk-Treasurer Jill Branson said that the village could not make an assessment of what the park would cost village residents if the village purchased the land.

"We don't know of an interest rate on the possible purchase or how much the committee could collect in donations."

Committee for Chelsea Park plans to submit the petitions to the Village Council Nov. 27.

Heritage papers to be sold

■ Newspaper chain has 21 publications, covers 65 communities.

By Karl Ziomek
Heritage Newspapers

Heritage Media, one of the largest community newspaper chains in the state, is for sale.

Fredrick G. Manuel, president of Heritage Media, told employee groups Friday afternoon that the newspaper chain's parent company, Prechter Holdings, has hired investment banker Dirks, Van Essen & Murray of Sante Fe, N.M., to put the publications on the market.

David Treadwell, president of Prechter Holdings, gave the same message to a group of company managers during an off-site meeting Thursday.

Heritage Media is based in Southgate and also has offices in Chelsea, Dexter, Saline, Milan, Manchester, Belleville, Dearborn, Grosse Ile, Monroe and Flint. It also owns a high-tech newspaper production and computer services arm in Southgate and circulates five monthly publications.

Earlier this year, Heritage Media started Greenleaper, a regional classified print and electronic publication.

In all, the newspaper chain comprises 21 publications covering 65 communities with a total circulation of 305,181.

The chain has about 325 employees and is involved in many civic and charitable endeavors in the communities it serves.

Heritage newspapers are published almost every day of the week, with Heritage Sunday (90,400 circulation) and Suburban Flint (82,873) coming out Sundays; The News-Herald Newspapers (80,000) coming out Wednesdays; The Dearborn Press & Guide (40,025), Monroe Guardian (8,100), Belleville View (2,200), Chelsea Standard (4,700), Dexter Leader (3,125), Saline Reporter (5,225), Milan News-Leader (3,000) and Manchester Enterprise (2,133) published Thursdays; and the Grosse Ile Camera (3,600) coming out Fridays.

The evolution of the chain as it is now known began in 1985, when the late Heinz Prechter bought what is now the core of the company from SEM (South Eastern Michigan) Newspapers, which was headed by the late John McGoff.

Prechter battled depression for the last 25 years before taking his own life this summer.

One of the most famous businessmen in Downriver history, he was widely known in automotive circles as the founder of ASC Inc. and the "Duke of Downriver," a title penned by Crain's Detroit Business.

"Heinz Prechter was a tremendous entrepreneur," Treadwell said Friday. "He was involved in numerous enterprises. Today, we are returning our focus to the core business, his founding company, ASC Inc."

Knowing that SEM was selling its publications in the mid-1980s, the then publishers of the Press & Guide (the late Shirley Henry), The Mellus Newspapers (Ernest Nagy) and the Wyandotte News-Herald (John Tarrant) approached Prechter about purchasing the chain.

Although Prechter had little interest in newspapers as a business endeavor, he was the Downriver area's biggest booster and had a deep sense of community. Henry, Nagy and Tarrant convinced Prechter that buying the newspapers would keep them locally held and would benefit the residents they served.

Under Prechter, the chain changed at first slowly and then in leaps and bounds.

In the first shakeup under the new Heritage Newspapers' name, the Wyandotte News-Herald and The Mellus Newspapers in Lincoln Park were merged to cover the entire Downriver area (under the News-Herald name) and the Guardian was moved from its home in Flat Rock to Monroe.

Later, Heritage bought out The Times Publications and folded them into the new News-

Herald as part of a string of Saturday newspapers dotting the Downriver and Dearborn landscapes.

Those weekend publications eventually became Heritage Sunday.

Manuel, a Flat Rock native and the former owner of the Times, rose through the ranks of Heritage Newspapers under Prechter, first as a general manager and then publisher and, finally, president, and became a key player in the chain's development over the past 15 years.

He orchestrated the development of Heritage Sunday and was instrumental in guiding the chain's expansion into other markets — suburban Ann Arbor, Belleville and Flint.

'Heritage Newspapers' Western Region publications were added in the last few years. The Reporter Papers were purchased from Jackie and Paul Tull in the spring 1995. The Chelsea Standard and The Dexter Leader newspapers were purchased from Helen and Walter Leonard in October 1995, and The Manchester Enterprise was purchased from Teresa Benedict in May 1999.

Ghost hunters investigate the inexplicable in Michigan

By Kim Boelter-Muckler
Special Writer

What do a technical writer, clerk, machinist, program director, an electronics distributor and a greeting card merchandiser do with things that go bump in the night?

Why, they investigate them, of course.

"I always knew I had special abilities since I was a small child," said Robin Lemkie, a technical writer. "But I never did anything about it until, finally, I decided to form a group called Ghost Hunters of Southern Michigan."

Once she designed a Web site, Lemkie found other people interested in paranormal phenomena and the group embarked on weekly adventures, searching for ghosts and investigating suspected haunted houses.

Every week, Lemkie said the group receives a steady stream of requests for home investigations.

"People sometimes can feel very uncomfortable in their homes," she said. "They know that something's there, but they're worried that maybe it's just their imagination. They call us and, usually, we are able to help."

The group brings an assortment of high-tech equipment to every investigation, including digital camcorders, temperature probes, electric magnetic force meters, tape recorders and a night vision scope.

While all of these gadgets are helpful, the ghost hunters agree that the most important tool is their own sixth sense.

"I know when I'm encountering a spirit when I get movie-like pictures in my mind," Lemkie said. "Sometimes, I just hear a voice or I get physical symptoms — trouble breathing or dizziness. It's really something when you experience it."

One of the most sensitive members of the group is Rhonda Cook, Lemkie's daughter-in-law and a program director for a Downriver group home.

"Most people, when they hear something strange or see something strange, their logical mind will kick in and help them to make sense of it," said Cook, who works as a program director by day.

"What we do is listen with all of our senses. I physically feel a spirit first. I usually meditate before an investigation. If I want to communicate, I count to three, then call my spirit guide to help me. I also see pictures in my mind's eye."

Sometimes Cook says she has encountered images that were too disturbing or intense to explore any further.

"There are times when I'm frightened," she said. "But when that happens, I stay in the car."

Members of the group said that on several occasions, they've been able to bring a sense of peace to people who haven't been able to feel comfortable in their homes.

"We go to a home, and if we find that it's haunted, we are usually able to help," Lemkie said. "We can usually communicate with the spirit and convince him that it's OK to go to the white light."

The group says that most spirits are just lost souls who are inflicting a kind of self-punishment on themselves for things they did while alive.

"Our main goal is to have compassion for them," said Tom Lundy, who works as a machinist by day. "We go into these situations and between the five of us, we can usually figure out what's going on or what's bothering the spirit."

Homeowners usually are greatly relieved once they know an ethereal being might be causing a problem.

"They can finally sleep at night and no longer hear strange noises. It's very rewarding to know that we are helping people and that we believe them," Lemkie said.

The group has been invited to investigate famous locations across Michigan, including The Whitney, located in the metro-Detroit area.

Most recently, the group investigated a cemetery in the Milan area.

Neva Magusin said that most hauntings occur because the ghosts are being held back by fear, anger, guilt or remorse.

"I ask the ghost several questions and usually get a response that I can understand," she said. "We help to release them from what's keeping them here and they go to the white light. We've made a difference with every single home we've investigated."

The group conducts the paranormal investigations free of charge, although Lundy said that they've accepted many great home-cooked meals for their services.

MTA to hold annual conference

More than 1,600 township officials and employees from across the state will meet in Grand Rapids Jan. 15 through 18 for the Michigan Townships Association's 49th annual Educational Conference at the Amway Grand Plaza and Grand Center.

The conference, themed "Michigan Townships: 1,242 Greatest Hits!" will provide a wide array of educational programs and networking opportunities for township officials and employees.

MTA's largest-ever three-day trade show, featuring more than 130 suppliers, also will be open during the conference for townships to shop for vendors and supplies.

Following pre-conference activities, the conference kicks off with the popular Township Parade of Flags ceremony during opening session Wednesday and concludes with the MTA annual meeting Friday.

"MTA's Annual Educational Conference provides a crucial forum to educate township officials on current issues and ways to efficiently govern their communities," said MTA Executive Director Larry Merrill.

Scio Township

Larceny
Several bundles of firewood were taken between 10:30 p.m. Oct. 28 and 5 a.m. Oct. 29 from Clark's gas station, 3535 Jackson Road.
When a gas station employee arrived for work Oct. 29, she noticed that 20 bundles of wood were missing. The wood was piled up outside the gas station. The wood taken is valued at $300.

A 53-year-old Ann Arbor man reported to police that someone stole a solar panel off the roof of his car between Sept. 1 and Oct. 31.

The man also noticed damage on the driver's side of his car. The solar panel is valued at $600. Damage to the car is estimated at $100.

Approximately $6,000 worth of shredded cheese was stolen from a semi-tractor trailer between midnight and 9:30 a.m. Oct. 29 at the Speedway Truck Stop, 750 Baker Road.

The truck driver noticed that a lock had been broken on the trailer door and that 60 cases of cheese were missing.

Someone smashed a car window and took a purse between 1:30 and 2 a.m. Oct. 29 in the 700 block of Malena Drive.

The owner of the purse forgot that she left it in the car. She recalls hearing her dogs barking in the middle of the night. The dogs continued barking and one of them ran toward the road. At the time, the woman did not think anything was wrong.

Several items were taken from the vehicle, including several credit cards, a palm pilot and $20.

Someone stole a briefcase from a vehicle between Oct. 29 and Oct. 30 in the 400 block of Burswood Court.

The owner of the briefcase left it overnight. When he left for work the next morning, he noticed that the briefcase was missing. The car was unlocked.

The briefcase was later found near a river, but his checkbook, palm pilot and sunglasses were missing. The items are valued at $500.

Malicious Use of a Telephone
A 53-year-old Ann Arbor woman was arrested for repeatedly calling 911 for non-emergencies at 7 p.m. Oct. 26 in the 3800 block of E. Delhi Road.

The woman repeatedly called 911 to tell operators about a potential terrorist attack on Michigan by Osama bin Laden.

Dispatchers told the woman not to call unless she had an emergency. The woman continued calling and was arrested. She was taken to the Washtenaw County Jail.

Domestic Assault
Police responded to a fight between a father and son in Scio Farms Estates, 6655 Jackson Road.

The two were arguing about a wedding that the son and his fiancée are planning to attend.

The father threw a glass at his 24-year-old son and the two began fighting and pushing each other.

When at the home they could not deputies arrived at the home, but they could not find the father.

Dexter Township

Breaking and Entering
A 47-year-old woman reported to police that between 4 and 6 p.m. Oct. 31 someone broke into her home in the 3100 block of McKinley Street and stole approximately $2,000 worth of jewelry.

The woman was with her children trick-or-treating when someone broke into her house. When she returned home, her son noticed that the basement door had been kicked in.

Nothing in the house appeared to be disturbed. The woman checked her jewelry box and noticed a gold bracelet, a pair of gold earrings, a diamond ring and a gold band were missing.

The woman wasn't sure who broke into the home because she was only away for a couple of hours.

Drunken Driving

A 45-year-old Dexter man was arrested at 1 a.m. Oct. 28 near the intersection of North Territorial Road and Huron River Drive for drunken driving.

Police noticed the man's vehicle weaving in the roadway and crossing the centerline twice. Deputies stopped the man after he drove onto the shoulder of the road.

While deputies talked to the man, they could smell alcohol on his breath. The man was given a Breathalyzer test and his blood-alcohol level was .22 percent. A blood-alcohol level of .08 percent is considered legally impaired.

The man was arrested and taken to the Washtenaw County Jail.

Webster Township

Warrant Arrest
A 44-year-old Dexter man was arrested on two bench warrants at 10:30 p.m. Oct. 29 near the intersection of Huron River Drive and North Territorial Road.

Police stopped the man for speeding. The man was wanted in Ann Arbor. The man failed to appear in court on a larceny case. He was arrested and taken to the Washtenaw County Jail.

Property Damage

A mailbox was damaged between 7 and 7:30 p.m. Oct. 30 in the 9300 block of Merrill Road.

The homeowner heard a couple of loud bangs, but did not think anything of it. In the morning, she noticed that the mailbox was damaged.

Police found several silver metal pieces of an explosive near the mailbox. Black residue also covered the box.

Someone damaged a mailbox in the 9100 block of Merrill Road between 7:30 and 8 p.m. Oct. 30.

The homeowner heard a loud bang and went to the mailbox. A black powder residue was on the letters in the box. The mailbox was worth $35.

Dexter Village

Property Damage
Someone used a pumpkin to smash a windshield of a car parked near the intersection of Wall Court and Kensington Street between 9 p.m. Nov. 2 and 8:30 a.m. Nov. 3.

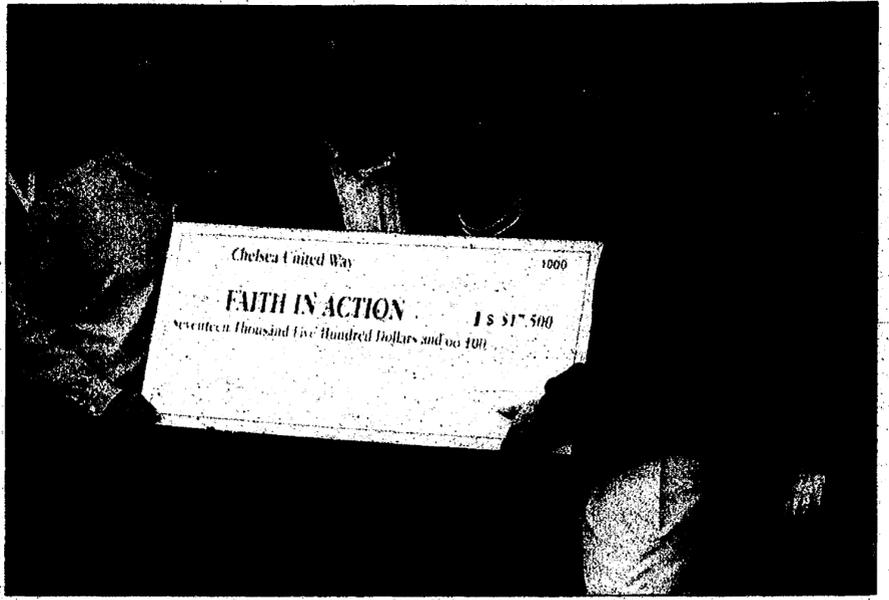

The owner of the car left it on the street overnight and was not sure who may have thrown it. He didn't hear or see anyone during the night.

Chelsea Village

Property Damage
Several windows were broken at 3 a.m. Nov. 5 at Chelsea Industries, 301 N. East St.

About 26 windows were smashed near the north loading dock. Damage to the windows is estimated at $200.

Another tenant in the building, Longworth Planting, also noticed damage to its second-floor windows. Two window panes sustained $100 in damage.

It's time to act on the park issue

GREGORY PARKER

COMMUNITY ROOTS

In the next couple of weeks, if you live in Chelsea Village, you may get a knock on your door. Members of the Committee for Chelsea Park - and their supporters - are taking to the streets with their petitions. The committee's mission is to find a way to turn a proposed development - The Vineyards - into a 157-acre park. The alternative? A 352-unit subdivision that could increase the village population by 20 percent, overburden infrastructure and potentially lead to higher taxes. As if that's not bad enough, The Vineyards would occupy one of the village's last expanses of open, agricultural land. The case against The Vineyards is substantial, but not in a legal sense. The developer is close to meeting Chelsea's zoning restrictions and ordinances, and it's nearly impossible for the village to halt the development for subjective reasons. So, while many of us may agree that The Vineyards is undesirable, there are few legal reasons for stopping such a development. So we must be creative. The Committee for Chelsea Park has developed a win-win solution for The Vineyards property. They propose that the village purchase the land from the property owners or the developer (who has an option on the property) and turn it into a park. That way, the landowners and developer can profit and, at the same time, the village gains a park. Of course, there's a cost. The land is worth a lot of money. One estimate placed the value at $4.5 million. The committee uses this as a "conservative" figure on which it bases its financial proposal. If the village bought the land at this price, it would likely obtain a 10-year bond to finance the purchase. According to committee research, this translates to an approximate 2.5 mill tax increase over a 10-year period. For a $200,000 house, that translates to a property tax increase of $250 for 10 years. That isn't cheap, but the committee plans to lower the cost by soliciting individual and corporate donations, working with land trusts to obtain money and exploring other funding sources. The committee believes a good deal of taxpayer costs could be averted using these resources. There's another aspect of the tax issue that must be considered. A recent study performed by the Washtenaw Land Trust found that when Ann Arbor Township converted some of its agricultural land to residential use, the township spent more tax dollars than it gained from the development. I don't think it's far-fetched to believe that the same scenario could happen with The Vineyards. Members of the Committee for Chelsea Park have done the research, they've done the footwork and they've taken the initiative. They don't want to take away the property rights of the landowners, nor do they seek a legal strategy that would forbid the property from development. They've proposed a voluntary solution that benefits not only the landowners but also the village. If you sign the committee's petition, you're not committing yourself or the village to anything but to "consider purchasing the parcel of land ... to be used as a park for the village." It is not a financial commitment of any type. You're not going to raise your taxes by signing the petition. If the village decides to purchase the land, many details still need to be ironed out. And village residents would have to vote on any proposed tax increase. So, you've got nothing to lose if you sign. After all, shouldn't we explore all our options? The Committee for Chelsea Park plans to submit the petitions to the Village Council Nov. 27. There must be decisive public interest in the issue for the council to consider the park initiative. Ideally, the committee would like signatures representing 25 percent of all Chelsea Village voters - that's around 1,000 signatures. Those who sign the petition must be eligible to vote in village elections. The committee needs your help. The group is taking petitions door-to-door, but there's a lot of territory to cover, so they may miss a few houses, or they may stop by when you're not home. To help or to show your support, call Diane Kyte at 475-0821 or Wendy Wallace at 433-1988. They can arrange a time for you to sign the petition, and they can also provide more information on the park initiative. They can also provide petitions if you'd like to solicit signatures. You can also download copies of the petition - and the committee's informational letter - on the Community Roots Web site at www.communityroots.org. I urge you to support this initiative. The committee has worked hard for a solution to this development, and members of the committee have found a great alternative to developing one of the last expanses of farmland in the village. It's not far-fetched. It's not a pipe dream. It can happen with your support. Gregory Parker is a free-lance writer living in Chelsea. He can be reached at gparker@umich.edu.

There are lessons to be learned from Sept. 11

RENEE COLLINS

HOME FRONT

The changes in all of our lives as a result of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks have been hashed over, debated, analyzed, questioned, answered and generally picked apart since Sept. 12. In fact, the "shift" in our daily lives is repeated so often and in so many forms of media that the change itself has taken on a life of its own. No one can predict how we all will be affected as we move through these uncertain times. So, it might seem burdensome to add yet another analogy to the speculative mix of adjectives and opinions so dramatically reported on 24-hour cable networks. But, as a writer, I really can't resist. Words, after all, are my life. And while my observations are personal rather than societal, there are correlations to be drawn. I have two sisters with a debilitating neuromuscular disease known as Friedreich's Ataxia, so named after the German physician who first discovered it back in the 19th century. Friedreich's, while the most common of all ataxia disorders, is incurable. Its victims steadily lose the ability to walk, to hold their children, to tend to their own personal care, to hear, to see and to breathe. Depending on the age at which FA victims are diagnosed, they may live three or four decades, eventually succumbing to heart disease, pneumonia or some other fatal complication of a weakening respiratory system. I have observed the ravages of this disease as long as I can remember. I have watched my sisters' conditions worsen, particularly my sister Carol, who lives in Ann Arbor. Not long ago, she called me to borrow money for an acupuncture treatment. She felt it would offer her some kind of relief from hearing loss and from the slowly-encroaching blindness. It seems pointless, yet, how can I blame her? She has no ability to care for herself nor for her two elementary-age daughters, yet she continues to be hopeful for some miracle even as she slides into an increasingly worsening physical state. Sadly, FA victims never lose their ability to reason and think. So, they are trapped inside of bodies that refuse to do what they want them to do, even to raise a fork to their lips or wrap their arms around their children. I have often asked myself why my sisters would have been so afflicted while I was spared, as were five other brothers and sisters. It doesn't seem reasonable to me that my sisters should suffer as they do, and for such a prolonged period of time. My mother is fond of wondering the same. "What do you suppose God is trying to teach us?" she asks when she is feeling particularly frustrated by my sisters' circumstances. In retrospect, having sisters who are in wheelchairs and dependent on others for much of their personal-care needs has made me more tolerant of those who are different from me, whether by race, physical and mental ability, creed or religion. Now, these lessons of tolerance that I learned so long ago suddenly have become, front-page headlines. We stand united as a nation, rallying around our beloved stars-and-stripes, and re-thinking the fundamental principles of brotherhood, equality and acceptance. In short, tolerance for each other, and for those of different nationalities, ethnic backgrounds and religious practices. Modern optimism says that the lessons of Sept. 11 - the sense of patriotism, unity, and tolerance - will live on. Americans, representing that great melting pot of nearly every race on the planet, will continue to co-exist in a world where peace, hope and brotherly love often are overshadowed by greed, terror and despair. Yet the experiences of history sometimes is stacked against our off-optimistic view of the world. Despite the civil rights movement of the 1960s, racism exists still and hate crimes persist against many groups. During World War II, we fought Hitler's Germany and Hirohito's Japan. Today, Nazism and anti-Asian sentiment remain common in many corners of the country. In our short history as a nation, there have been many opportunities for us to stem the tide of intolerance and, yet, we sit on the sidelines and wait until a crisis, such as the shocking attacks of Sept. 11, forces us to take a hard look at ourselves. It's typically a temporary glance at best. I fear our personal awareness of tolerance will diminish as Ground Zero starts to fade from the nation's front pages, and our resolve to once again resume our daily lives grows more courageous. It is the great resilience of human beings - mentally, spiritually, and physically - that allows them to move ahead in the face of adversity. I have seen that demonstrated over and over again in my sisters' lives as they cheat the odds with stubborn determination. But history has demonstrated that we all too easily fall back on what we once knew and believed, rather than what we learn in a time of acute crisis - no matter the lives lost or lessons conveyed. Hopefully, that won't be the case with the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11 and the aftermath. I still believe the world holds more good than evil, and that someday we'll all be living in the kind of peace and harmony I saw in those 1970s Coca-Cola commercials where everyone held hands and wished they could teach the world to sing. Doesn't seem quite real, I know, but there's the optimist in me again, sporting faith, hope and rose-colored glasses. Tolerance and understanding are two ways we all can apply the lessons we are learning from these changes in our lives. They illustrate that timeless adage known as the Golden Rule: love your neighbor as yourself. At the very least, try for a little tolerance. Today it is an accepted fact that our mental and emotional health can play a large part in such illnesses as ulcers, hypertension, insomnia, headaches and asthma, just to name a few.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Skit at concert was inappropriate
This is a letter of protest after attending my niece's sixth-grade concert at Chelsea High School Oct. 29. Does the Chelsea School District find it acceptable to have skits where a teen-age girl dresses in skimpy clothing, acts as a prostitute, pulls money out of her bra to give to her pimp who sends her off with another "John," while the pimp bullies her on stage? Is this the kind of values Chelsea portrays at family events? I was appalled this went on. My niece is only 12 years old. I had other nieces in the audience. One was 5 years old. I am shocked and disgusted by the poor taste in allowing this to go on stage at a school function. Debl Jordan Brooklyn

School district should address dangerous bog
Have any other middle school parents had concerns about the bog that many of our children must walk past to get to school? This bog is now very deep due to the heavy rains we have experienced lately. The only thing protecting our children from falling into this polluted, deep bog is an old, metal handrail. There is no fencing around the steep sides of the bog and no bars coming down from the handrail to prevent people from falling under the handrail and sliding down the concrete ramp leading into the bog. Let's handle this problem before something terrible happens to one of our children. Hazel Schroen Chelsea

72 years of barbering

Chelsea native closes family shop

This fierce-looking critter, waiting for his shampoo and set, was a regular fixture in the backroom of Doug Warren's barbershop. Warren's brother, Ron, bought the bear's head at an auction for $1.

By Sheila Pursglove
Associate Editor

When Doug Warren was born in 1939, his father, a barber, returned from the hospital to find a note pinned to the barbershop door. It said: "There's a new barber coming to town."

Warren says he fought against that pre-destination at first, although with barbers in the family — including an uncle aptly named Ed Trim — that was probably a losing proposition from the get go.

Sixty-two years later, Warren is wrapping up a career that spanned four decades for him and 72 years for the Warren family in Chelsea.

Although Warren initially wanted to be an architect, he took his father's advice and studied barbering as a second string to his bow.

Warren also studied liberal arts at Olivet College for two years with the intent of studying drafting at the University of Michigan.

After graduating from Green's Barber School in Detroit — the same school his father had attended — he followed his father into the barbershop on West Middle Street.

Jack Warren came to Chelsea in 1929 from Capac in Michigan's Thumb area. At first, he bought a shop where Merkel's furniture store is now located on Main Street. In 1946, he purchased the storefront on West Middle Street.

Jack Warren married Margaret Schiller, who he saw walk past his shop every day on her way to and from her home at Wilkinson and West Middle streets, and her job at the telephone office.

Doug Warren attended school where the Schoolhouse Apartments, 215 Park St., are now located. For a couple of years, he was bused with other pupils to Savage School on Pierce Road because of classroom overcrowding. He was a member of the last class to graduate from the old school location in 1958.

Between the ages of 7 and 11, Warren spent three years in a cast and a year in leg braces because of Perthes disease, a disease of the hip.

"I missed out on a lot of childhood activities," he says. "Dad wouldn't let me play football later because he didn't want me to get hurt."

Although Warren had helped out by sweeping the floor at his father's barbershop, his first full-fledged job was as a delivery boy at Wilbur Hinderer's grocery store. He stocked shelves and delivered groceries in the store's Ford pickup truck for about three years, before his younger brother, Ron, inherited his post.

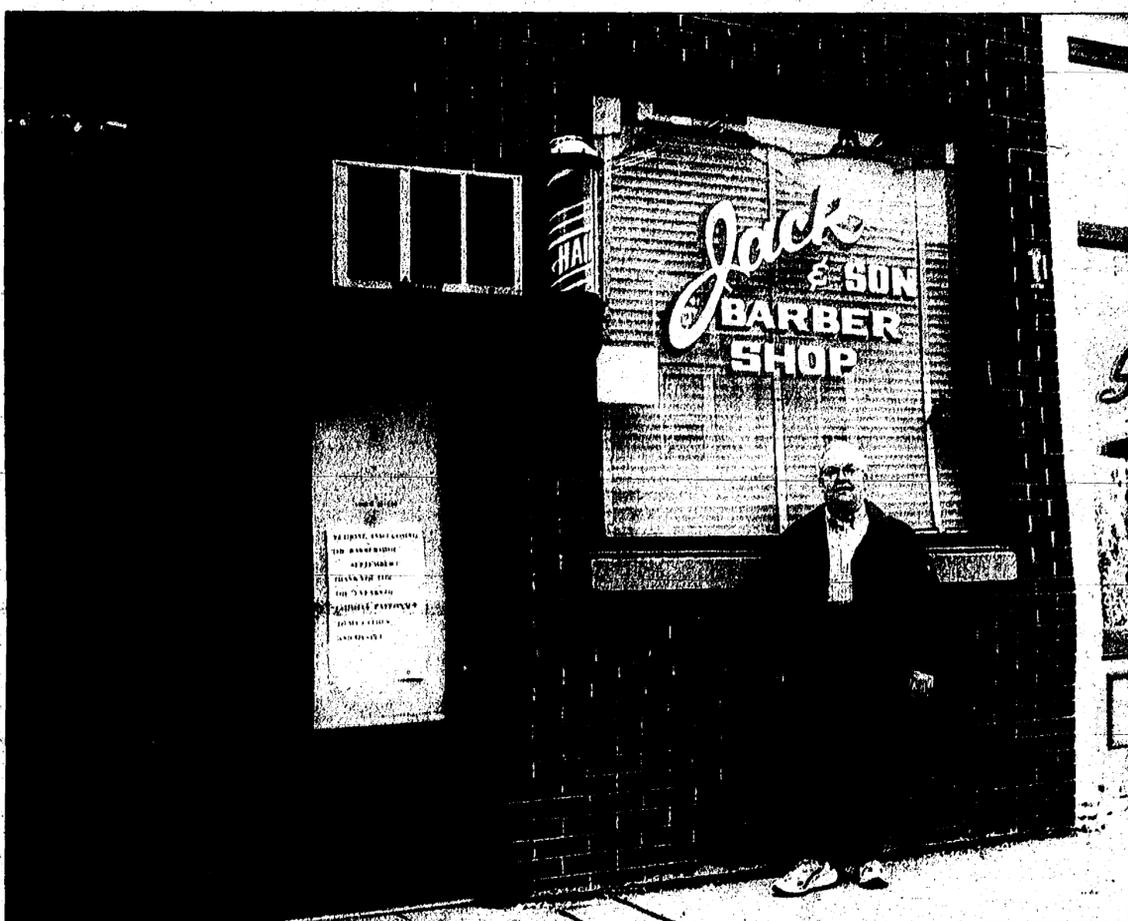

With two Warrens at the helm in the shop on Middle Street — with a two-year break for Doug in the early '60s to serve with the U.S. Army in Korea — the business thrived.

"Dad and I built up the shop together," Warren says. "Those were the best years. Dad always looked out for me and I had one of the best teachers."

"We always had a way of having fun together."

His aunt, Norma Schiller,

Former theater apprentice makes a name for himself

By Sheila Pursglove
Associate Editor

When Tony Caselli was in seventh grade, a performance of "Fiddler On The Roof" left him entranced.

"I was completely mesmerized," Caselli says. "There was the fiddler silhouetted on the roof of the house, and people slowly moving on stage from the wings. I was completely blown away."

Caselli's career course was set as he headed down the path of the three things he loves to do most: direct, serve as stage manager and act.

And it's not like Caselli, now the associate artistic director of the Purple Rose Theatre Co., has theatrical genes. His father is a retired pipe fitter and his mother worked in a data entry office job.

But for Caselli, it was the theater that beckoned — a passion he pursued through high school, college and beyond.

The New Boston native earned a degree in theater and communication from Eastern Michigan University. He met his wife, Jeanne, a third-grade teacher at North Creek Elementary School in Chelsea, at EMU, where she was studying theater and education. The couple now lives in Chelsea with their children, Maggie and Max.

While a college student, Caselli took a position as house manager at the Purple Rose Theatre.

"It basically paid $10 gas money and a chance to work in theater," he says.

A house manager takes care of the audience, running the front of the house before, during and after a performance, making sure tickets are torn, coats are hung up and ushers are seeing people to their seats.

Caselli then took a step up to become assistant stage manager for the play "More Fun than Bowling."

"Being a stage manager is never glamorous, but it's one of the most fun things in the business," he says. "It gives you a huge sense of accomplishment."

After graduating from EMU in 1991, Caselli got a gig at the California Theater Center in Sunnyvale, Calif., and headed west for six months.

He was offered a full-time position in Sunnyvale just as representatives from the Purple Rose Theatre called to say they were holding a spot for him in their apprenticeship program.

"So I had two options fall in my lap at the same time," Caselli says. "The chance to earn $30,000 a year with a full-time position in California, or to earn $150 a week working monstrous hours and paying my dues with the Purple Rose."

It was no contest.

"My friends, family and Jeanne were all back in Michigan, and I wanted to come back," Caselli says. "I really didn't like California very much. The area around Sunnyvale was like one giant strip mall, no matter how far you drove."

Back in his native state, Caselli became engaged to Jeanne and settled into the apprenticeship program at the Purple Rose.

Caselli took another step up the ladder when he was promoted to resident stage manager. He has since served as a stage manager for 18 productions and appeared on stage twice.

Caselli also took on the task of literary coordinator, with responsibility for maintaining the script database.

"We get several hundred scripts a year from all over the country," he says. "It was very disorganized, with big piles of scripts laying around."

Caselli makes it a point to read every script sent to the theater, even though many may never see the light of day on stage.

"The majority of scripts are by early writers and not of professional quality, but we appreciate seeing their raw material and like to encourage their talent," he says. "Every script is seen, although it's frustrating in that it takes forever. Here we are at the end of 2001 and I'm just finishing reading scripts from 2000."

"Remember, we only put on four shows a year, and we also have relationships with big-name writers."

Caselli says local actor Jeff Daniels founded the theater primarily because new American plays have trouble getting produced.

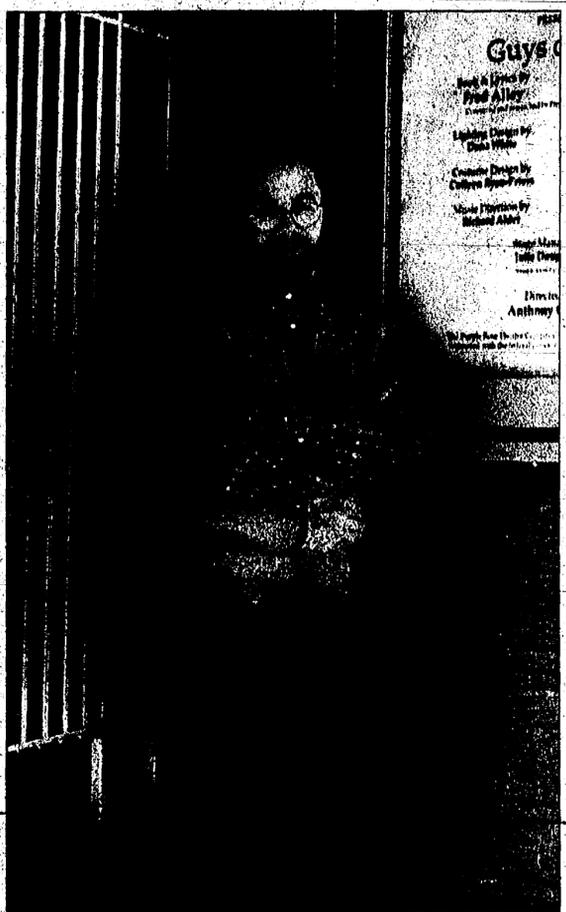

"Broadway has become HBO and Ringling Brothers," Caselli says. "It costs millions to get a play produced and tickets are a hundred bucks a pop. We have a place where local Midwest writers can be heard."

"I love writing too, although it's probably the thing I do worst of all."

Caselli — whose favorite TV shows are "The West Wing" and "Buffy the Vampire Slayer" — says he enjoys any show that sucks him in with good writing and good storytelling.

"I particularly enjoy exploring new plays. It's a whole dif-

PLEASE, HELP US HELP THOSE IN NEED IN CHELSEA & BEYOND!

The 2002 Chelsea United Way campaign pledge drive is in full swing. We need your help more than ever to help reach our campaign goal of $130,000 for the year.

Over 95% of the money we raise is donated to our member agencies, most of which are right here in Chelsea. Major recipients of Chelsea United Way funding include The CATS Bus, Faith In Action, and the Chelsea Help Line. We also donate to The American Red Cross and Salvation Army who are major contributors to the disaster relief efforts in New York City and Washington, DC.

If you give at work, you can designate Chelsea United Way to receive your pledge. So, please, give where you live - and help us help others here in Chelsea and beyond.

THANK YOU!

Prepare your home for winter

A snow-covered roof may look festive, but inadequate insulation could lead to a soggy ceiling, says AAA Michigan.

Last winter's heavy December snowfall caught many homeowners by surprise. To help homeowners prepare in advance for the worst that winter can bring, AAA Michigan has the following winter home care tips:

- Get your mind on the gutter. Eaves that are blocked with leaves can cause ice dams to form and force water up under the shingles. Clear gutters now and periodically during the winter.

- Trim your tree. Through selective pruning, weak branches can be removed that might otherwise break in high winds and damage your car or home.

- Inspect your insulation. If necessary, add extra insulation to attics, basements and crawl spaces.

- Pamper your pipes. Make sure your water pipes are adequately protected from the cold. If you wish to install "heat tape" on your pipes, hire a professional. Improperly installed heat tape can cause fires. Do not attempt to thaw pipes using an open flame; hairdryers have been known to do a great job.

- Stay warm and safe. Only as a last resort, use alternate heat sources. Kerosene, propane and electric heaters are a frequent cause of home fires. When using, always follow manufacturer's guidelines and never leave unattended. Keep heaters away from curtains, corners and walls. Keep electrical cords off carpeting.

Refuel kerosene heaters outdoors and use only kerosene recommended by manufacturers.

- Gas ovens should never be used as an alternate heat source.

- Clean your chimney and have your furnace inspected annually. These services can each range between $50-$100, but could prevent your house from burning down. Change your furnace filter every month to 45 days.

- Do not overload electrical outlets.

- If planning to purchase a wood-burning stove, have it installed by a professional, meeting all codes and manufacturer installation guidelines. Use a humidifier to add moisture to the dry winter air.

- Use ceiling fans to distribute warm air more efficiently throughout the home.

- Install and maintain smoke detectors on all living levels and near each bedroom.

- Keep snow clear from utility meters for easy access.

- If possible, don't pile snow against the side of the home.

"Spending a few hours now looking at roofs to make sure shingles are in place can save homeowners potentially expensive repairs later," said Ric Phillips, director of Homeowner Claims for AAA Michigan. "In their search for comfort, many homeowners unknowingly place themselves and their families at risk. Improperly used heat sources, frozen plumbing, dirty chimneys — these are all factors that can leave you, quite literally, out in the cold."

Washtenaw County Farmers' Day set

Washtenaw County Farmers' Day will be held Feb. 12 at the Washtenaw County Farm Council Grounds near Saline.

Farmers from across southern Michigan and northern Ohio are invited.

Based on requests from last year's participants, the 2002 program will focus on grain marketing.

"Come prepared for a fun day of hands-on learning," said Mike Score, a Michigan State Extension agricultural agent. "We've thrown away the overheads, and instead will be conducting a full-day grain marketing simulation. We will re-create the Chicago Board of Trade and local elevator system."

Participants will be given simulated bushels of corn and acreage. They will be able to work alone or in teams to price old and new crop corn. Cash prizes will be awarded at the end of the day to farmers who use cash sales, forward contracts, hedges and options to lock in the highest prices for their grain.

There will be a concurrent agricultural trade show, so farmers can visit with local agri-businesses about latest technologies and services throughout the day.

"This is a great opportunity for farmers to experiment with a wider range of grain pricing tools," Score said. "Farmers will be able to see how different marketing strategies can be used to lower risk and increase farm profitability."

"The great part about using a simulation as a teaching tool is that the learning is hands-on, interactive, fun, and is not costly if mistakes are made during the learning process."

The day will begin at 9 a.m. with registration and trade show activity. At 9:30 a.m., there will be an orientation to the marketing simulation. Grain trading will begin at 10 a.m.

and will continue, along with the trade show, until noon.

During the lunch hour, participants will hear about a couple of the on-farm research projects conducted in Washtenaw County during the 2001 growing season.

At 1 p.m., grain trading will resume and will continue through 3 p.m. Participants will be invited back for an evening meal and a review of lessons learned through the grain marketing simulation.

There will be a keynote speaker who will address the challenges of selling grain for a profit in today's market place. The day will end with cash prizes for marketing simulation winners.

The fee is $15. To register, mail checks payable to the Washtenaw Ag Advisory Council to P.O. Box 8645, Ann Arbor, MI 48107-8645.

Registration is limited to the first 150 people who complete registration with payment.

For more information, call Score at 1-734-997-1678, Ext. 2619.

Local teens win at county pageant

Sally Soroosh, 19, of Dexter was third runner-up in the seventh annual Miss Washtenaw County Scholarship Pageant held Saturday night at Chelsea High School.

The 2000 Dexter High School graduate was among 15 girls who entered the pageant. The contest included swimsuit, talent and evening gown competitions. For her talent portion, Soroosh played a marimba solo.

A sophomore studying chemical engineering at the University of Michigan, Soroosh won $450.

The teen is no stranger to pageants, having been involved in them since childhood. In March 2000, she won the Michigan Junior Miss pageant.

In a pageant held for younger contestants — a fund-raising innovation this year — Soroosh's younger sister, Rebekah, 17, won the Teen Miss Washtenaw County in the contest for ages 15 to 17. A senior at Dexter High School, she also played a marimba solo for her talent performance.

The girls are the daughters of Lydia and Robert Soroosh of Dexter Township.

Brittany Bourdon, 13, of Dexter, an eighth-grade pupil at Mill Creek Middle School, was named Junior Miss Washtenaw County in the contest for 12- to 14-year-olds and won "Miss Photogenic" in the junior division.

Bourdon, a member of the Chelsea Baton Corps and the Youth Dance Theater of Chelsea, is the daughter of Debbie and Jeff Bourdon of Dexter.

Taylor Sherman, 8, of Dearborn Heights won the Little Miss Washtenaw County contest and Tara Dauer, 10, of Saline, won the Miss Pre-Teen Washtenaw County.

Madonna Emond, a junior at Eastern Michigan University, won the title of Miss Washtenaw County and will go on to compete in the Miss Michigan contest.

First runner-up was Jane Arvidson of Saline and Justice Blazer of Canton was second runner-up. Kristina Marie Capiak of Three Oaks won $350.

started a beauty salon in the back room, assisted by his cousin, Lucille Martin, before they bought the store next door.

Warren says the art of barbering had a tough time in the '60s and '70s, when hair was worn considerably longer. Father and son adapted to the new tonsorial trends.

"I went to seminars and workshops to learn how to style longer hair, and also how to sell hairpieces," Warren says. "We also carried a lot of new hair styling products."

The only thing that hasn't changed much throughout the years is the price of a visit to the barber. A haircut that cost $1.50 four decades ago now goes for $12.

When the two Warrens weren't cutting hair, they cut wood, creating most of the woodwork in their shop, including the paneling and cabinets.

"My uncle, Ed Schiller, was a carpenter and got me interested in carpentry, as well," Warren says. "I still have a lot of his old tools, including a rare circular plane."

Warren has also done wood-working projects for the family's cottage on Crooked Lake and made cabinets and privacy screens for the Covenant Church on Freer Road, where he is a member of the congregation.

His latest interest is wood burning, a craft he first saw demonstrated at a wood carving show.

Warren's barbershop became well known for beer cans and a bear.

The shelves above the mirror were lined with hundreds of beer cans from all over the world, donated by customers.

"It started when someone asked why - when I went to Florida so much - I didn't bring some Billy Beer back from Georgia," Warren says. "It just took off and became quite a talking point."

Another talking point was Warren's "friend" in the backroom, a large bespectacled bear head wearing a smock.

"My brother, Ron, got it at auction for a dollar," Warren says. "When his wife wanted to get rid of it, I took it off him."

Deciding it was time to hang up the shears for a while, Warren recently retired. He also got married for a second time. His marriage to Mary Ann, a Southfield native whom he met in Florida, has made him an instant father of five and grandfather of 12.

The couple will divide their time between Chelsea and the Sunshine State, where his wife has made her home for more than two decades.

"My wife hadn't seen a snowflake in 26 years," Warren says. "She wanted to stay in Chelsea at least until New Year to see snow."

The couple has also enjoyed seeing the fall colors at their peak on a recent trip to the Algoma Central Railroad.

A former member of the Jaycees, Warren is also a ham radio operator, a member of the Choo Choo Chelsea train group, and a member of the VFW. He also served 17 years as president of the Washtenaw County barber local 689.

Warren, who has cut the hair of movie stars, a millionaire, a four-star general, a state senator and governor, has enjoyed seeing youngsters grow to adults and bring in their own families.

"I love kids," he says. "They always get a hug and a piece of bubblegum or a sucker."

Warren has even served as creative consultant to the Purple Rose Theatre Co. A long-time friend and neighbor of the Daniels family, he gave actor Jeff Daniels ideas for a character in the play "The Vast Difference," and coached Guy Sanville for his role as a barber.

"After I saw the play, I called them up the next day and told them if the play didn't work out, send Guy over to the shop and I'll have him work the first chair," Warren says. "I got a big kick out of seeing how Guy had picked up my mannerisms and recreated them in the play."

Warren says that when his father died, he didn't think he would continue in barbering for very long.

"But here I am 21 years later, and retiring," he says. "Dad would have been proud to see how the business turned out."

ferent level of excitement," he says. "I love to work with collaborative writers and see what their work inspires."

In 1995, Caselli directed his first professional show with the Purple Rose. "Star Wreck," a spoof on the sci-fi hit "Star Trek," was performed at the Gem Theatre in Detroit.

Caselli has since directed five plays for the main stage and three children's plays for the Purple Rose Theatre Outreach Program, which tours schools. He has also directed plays for the Performance Network in Ann Arbor.

"The theater encourages us to take outside work and keep learning, bringing something interesting and new back," he says.

Caselli also teaches workshops and seminars, oversees the apprentice program, and had a walk-on role in Daniels' recent movie "Super Sucker," shot on location in Jackson.

He is currently directing "Guys On Ice," the company's first musical.

"It's very sweet and has got a lot of heart - about two guys having trouble in their lives and male bonding," Caselli says.

In this, the theater company's first full year in its renovated building, the decision was made to have an all-comedy season.

"After the events of Sept. 11, it was tough to keep going, but we need to keep doing what we do," Caselli says. "It's good to hear 160 people laughing their butts off."

"In the talk-back sessions, we held during the play's previews, people were telling us how much they had needed the comedy as an escape valve."

Clearly the escapism is working. The play has been extended through Dec. 22.

Caselli has experienced the power of the stage before, when he appeared as an orphan boy in the Purple Rose production of "Beast on The Moon."

"The play was about Armenians coming to America after the slaughter in their country - about people trying to find each other in a world of hurt," he says.

"Michigan has a huge Armenian population and we had all kinds of clubs and groups coming to see us. After each performance, people would wait in the lobby to talk to us, and they'd be hugging us and crying."

"It was a very powerful experience and reminded me again of why I love the theater."

Chelsea Bulldogs lose in district title battle and it's 42-6, it might not seem like it, but I've seen other great teams compete and get beat like that."

Harrison coach John Herrington said Chelsea played well. "It was a good game," he said. "I don't think they were intimidated at all. They did a good job and hung right with us."

The Hawks have captured four consecutive state championships and have won 11 total titles.

This season, Harrison has two players already verbally committed to Michigan State University and a third who's highly recruited as well. Through in arguably, the state's best junior tailback, and one can see why opponents have problems with the Hawks.

"Our skill position kids - our quarterback, receivers and our tailback - are just real good players," Herrington said. "And they're fast. I think, though the field was a little slow, our speed made the difference."

Though speed was a factor for the Hawks, it wasn't as much an issue as last year's regional final loss. Last season, Chelsea fell to Harrison 50-6. In that game, the Hawks used numerous big plays to subdue the Bulldogs.

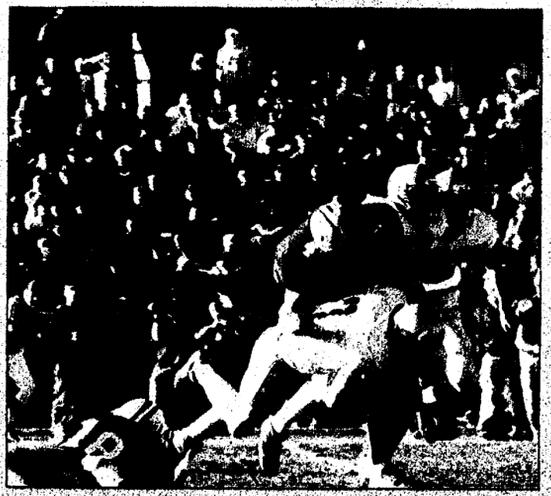

This year, Harrison's breakout plays were limited. The Hawks had to be patient and execute offensively to score.

Like last season, Harrison jumped out to a quick early lead against Chelsea.

On the game's opening possession, the Hawks scored on a seven-play, 67-yard drive that consumed 2:58 off the clock. Junior running back Marcus Woods bolted in from 9 yards out for Harrison's first touchdown. The extra point by senior Mike Kloosterman was successful and the Hawks led 7-0.

After Chelsea's opening drive ended in a punt, the Hawks upped their lead to 14-0 on quarterback Drew Stanton's 1-

Bulldog senior running back Adam Monero is brought down by Harrison junior linebacker Jake Ghannam during last Saturday's state playoff battle.

Chelsea's girls' basketball team defeated Southeastern Conference White Division foe Ypsilanti Lincoln 48-21 last Thursday.

With the victory, the Bulldogs, who celebrated Senior Night, improved to 14-5 overall and 4-1 in the SEC White.

With a Dexter loss tonight against Lincoln, Chelsea will capture the league title outright. With a Dreadnaught win, the two county rivals will share the championship.

Against the Railsplitters, junior forward Alison Mann had 12 points, five rebounds and four assists, leading the Bulldogs.

Junior post player Anna Arend added 10 points, while senior guard Stephanie Crews had seven points and four assists for Chelsea.

A 17-9 second quarter was the difference in the ballgame, according to Chelsea coach Todd Blomquist.

"The girls really competed well," he said. "This game will help us in the state tournament."

Crews, with 21 points and Mann, with 16 points, paced the Dogs offensively.

Arend added four points, five rebounds and three assists.

Arnold finished with two points and Vlcek had one point for Chelsea.

Country Day shot 55.8 percent from the field, while limiting the Bulldogs to 44.8 percent.

Chelsea begins district play against Milan at Onsted 5:30 p.m. Wednesday.

If successful against the Big Reds, the Bulldogs will play in the district championship game 7 p.m. Nov. 16.

Harriers place 10th at cross country finals

By Don Richter
Staff Writer

Chelsea's girls' cross country team placed 10th out of 27 teams at last weekend's Division II state finals at Michigan International Speedway.

The Bulldogs recorded 299 points.

"We accomplished the last of our season's goals with the 10th-place finish," said Chelsea coach Pat Clarke.

Leading the Bulldogs individually on the day was Alice Gauvin, who placed 30th overall with a personal best time of 19:48.

By finishing in the top 30, Gauvin was named All-State.

"Alice has certainly added a lot to our team this year and it was a well-deserved honor for her to make All-State," Clarke said.

Teammate Kim Gasieski placed 73rd with a personal best time of 20:28, followed by Ashley Brainerd, in 92nd position, with a personal best 20:41.

Allison Sacks finished 122nd with a time of 21:06, while Kari Moyle ended up 168th in 21:43. Brenda Satterthwaite was 179th in 21:55 and Sarah Kaminsky placed 222nd with a time of 22:47, rounding out Chelsea's scoring.

Clarke said both Kaminsky and Sacks were ill during last Saturday's meet.

"It adversely affected their performance," he said.

Overall, however, Clarke said it was a good day for his squad.

"We learned a lot about state meets and, hopefully, we will put that knowledge to good use next season since the entire team returns," he said.

Clarke said this year's squad was a wonderful group to work with.

"They are a truly special group who blended together well to form a championship team," he said. "I really look forward to working with them again next year."

Capturing the Division II championship was Middleville-Thornapple Kellogg with 156 points.

Bulldog tankers second in SEC White

Chelsea's girls' swimming and diving team finished second in the Southeastern Conference White Division and fourth overall in the league at last weekend's SEC championship at Ann Arbor Pioneer.

"If I'm not happy, then I'd have to be crazy," said Chelsea coach John Crispin. "It was fun. The girls were awesome."

Winning the overall SEC title was Class A No. 1-ranked Pioneer. Capturing the SEC White Division was Class B-C-D No. 2-ranked Dexter.

Crispin said, this year's Pioneer squad has been called Michigan's best ever.

This season's Bulldog squad isn't too shabby, either.

At the league finals, Chelsea recorded two All-American consideration times, five new varsity records, 16 divisional medalists and 36 scoring efforts by 18 different athletes.

"It was the best performance by a Chelsea team in many years," Crispin said.

The tone for the meet was set in the first event when the Bulldog 200 medley relay foursome of Dani Sawyer, Allise Augustine, Julie Mida and Katrina Moffett, not only set a new Chelsea record of 1:52.51, but also qualified for All-American consideration while placing third.

The B relay group of Kelsey Benton, Tara Jennings, Liz Skidmore and Sarah Tschirhart swam to an 11th-place finish.

In the 200 freestyle, Kayla Hack broke her own varsity record, set in last Friday's preliminaries, with a 2:00.41, capturing fifth overall and second in the White Division. Danielle Hughes and Jessica Rohrer added valuable points by finishing 15th and 16th, respectively.

finished 15th and 16th, respectively, for the Bulldogs.

In the 50 freestyle, Kara Stiles and Rebecca Armstrong placed third and fourth in the SEC and second and third in the White, respectively.

Teammates Augustine and Benton placed 10th and 15th, respectively.

In the diving competition, Allison Sayers finished fourth overall and second in the White. With her performance, Sayers qualified for the state regionals on Tuesday. Teammates Karl Ceo, Danielle Houle and Christine Rosentreter placed ninth, 12th and 13th, respectively.

"We have never had four girls place in a championship meet," Crispin said. "This was an outstanding job by these girls. They scored a heck of a lot of points." Mida finished eighth overall and third in the White Division in the 100 butterfly. Armstrong touched ninth, while Adams ended up 16th.

In the 100 freestyle, Stiles placed fourth overall and second in the White with a school record 55.08. Hack ended up fifth overall and third in the White with a 55.71. Bassett and Tschirhart placed 10th and 14th, respectively.

In the 500 freestyle, Moffett finished ninth in the league and third in the division, while Hughes placed 14th and Rohrer was 16th for the Dogs.

In the 200 freestyle relay, the Chelsea A team of Stiles, Sawyer, Armstrong and Hack set a new school record and qualified for All-American consideration with a time of 1:41.85. The B relay of Bassett, Augustine, Mida and Hughes finished in 1:46.89 for third place.

"The 200 free relay was our best event of the day," Crispin said. "Our sprinters were excellent, depth in 50s and 100 frees have been our strength all season."

Sawyer finished second overall and second in the division in the 100 backstroke with a time of 1:01.14. Moffett placed eighth in the league and third in the divi-

Lixey sparks JV hoops

By Don Richter
Staff Writer

A 10-1 third quarter outburst broke open a close ballgame, leading Chelsea's JV girls' basketball team to a 34-21 victory over visiting Ypsilanti Lincoln last Thursday.

Devon Lixey, with 10 points and seven rebounds, paced the Bulldogs (17-2).

Brittany Denison added nine points and Ashley Gadbury chipped in seven points and seven rebounds for Chelsea.

Melissa Koch finished with five points, Kaylyn Rohkohl had two points and Missy Morcom netted one point to round out the Bulldogs' scoring.

Morcom also ended up with three steals to lead the team defensively.

At halftime, Chelsea held a slim 16-15 advantage before creating some breathing room with its third quarter explosion. The Bulldogs continued to increase their lead in the fourth frame, outscoring the Railsplitters 8-5.

Besides Morcom's three steals, Chelsea shined defensively, limiting Lincoln to 19 percent shooting from the field.

The Bulldogs, on the other hand, shot 38 percent from the floor.

At the free throw line, Chelsea finished at 45 percent, while Lincoln ended up at 50 percent.

On Oct. 30, the host Bulldogs defeated Birmingham Detroit Country Day 37-26.

The key to Chelsea's victory was an 11-0 first quarter.

At the half, the Bulldogs led 15-6.

In the third period, Chelsea upped its advantage to 29-12.

In the fourth quarter, the Yellowjackets outscored the Dawgs 14-8 for the final margin. Chelsea received balanced scoring on the night, with Gadbury and Lixey each netting eight points to pace the Bulldogs.

Lixey also had five steals on defense.

Morcom recorded six points, Denison had five points and Koch had four points for Chelsea.

Becky Sprague, Jessica Manitz and Rohkohl each added two points for the Dawgs.

As it did against Lincoln, the Chelsea defense held Country Day to under 30 percent shooting.

The Yellowjackets finished the contest at 29 percent from the floor.

The Bulldogs ended up at 41 percent from the field.

At the free throw line, Chelsea shot 60 percent, compared to Country Day's 50 percent.

Rugby club needs players

By Don Richter
Staff Writer

Rugby in Washtenaw County?

If this were Australia or England, one could understand. But this is Dexter and Chelsea.

The only scrums seen in these parts are along the boards during a Dreadnaught-Bulldog hockey game.

That was last year.

This season, the newly formed Washtenaw Rugby Football Club, formerly known as the Pioneer Rugby Club, is looking for players.

The club, composed primarily of Ann Arbor Pioneer athletes in the past, is expanding its player base this year to include all area high school boys.

A pre-season clinic for those interested will be offered Sunday at the former Freeman

Elementary School in Dixboro from 1 to 2:30 p.m.

At the clinic, an orientation will be conducted and players will be able to sign up for a meeting scheduled later in January.

Indoor practices will start in February. The club will begin its spring season April 3.

Freeman School is the club's home field. Starting in mid-March, practices will be held 5:30 p.m. Monday, Thursday and Friday evenings.

Home games are 5:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Last season, Washtenaw finished 4-6-2 overall, including tournament competition.

Coach Jack Atkinson, a former player for the University of Michigan, is expecting great things in 2002.

Returning to lead the club are

Saline's Chris Ackermann, Pioneer's Andy Meade and Ann Arbor Greenhills' Josh Rubin.

Ackermann and Meade will captain this year's squad.

Atkinson said rugby is one of the fastest growing high school sports in the nation, with dozens of new clubs forming every year.

USA Rugby Football Union is the sports governing body.

Last year, state champion Grand Rapids Catholic Central represented the Michigan Youth Rugby Association in the national championship tournament in Columbus, Ohio.

Other top Michigan teams include, Dearborn, Northville, Brighton, Howell, Berkley, Battle Creek, Rockford, East Kentwood and Grand Haven.

For more information, contact Atkinson at 665-6535 or Mike Brooks at 761-1988.

Fedele 33rd at state finals

By Don Richter
Staff Writer

Chelsea's David Fedele finished 33rd out of 250 runners at last weekend's Division II boys' cross country state finals at Michigan International Speedway.

Fedele capped an outstanding season, shaving 18 seconds off his previous personal best, with a time of 16:34.

"I told David before the (meet) about the nature of this race," said Chelsea coach Eric Swager. "Many runners get over-anxious about the state meet and run the first part of the race way too fast. We worked on even pacing all week and David ran this strategy to perfection."

"He was roughly 100th at the half mile mark, moved up to 50th at the halfway and finished 33rd."

Fedele just missed making All-State. Only the top 30 runners earn that distinction.

Swager said the state meet proved what a tough regional competition Chelsea participated in at Haslett Oct. 27.

"David finished 13th in the region, but 33rd in the state (out of nine regions)," he said. "I am proud of his efforts this year."

Last Tuesday, the Bulldogs held their end-of-the-year banquet at the high school.

Fedele was named Most Valuable Player of the squad,

"Many runners get over-anxious about the state meet and run the first part of the race way too fast."

while Ryan Montgomery took home the Most Improved award. Levi Hyssong received the Southeastern Conference Sportsmanship award.

Earning varsity letters this season were Kyle Brown, Trevor Bach, James McKenzie, Joel Gentz, Andre Bravo, Max Wineland, Nate Hinderer, Aaron Turek, Justin Fitch, Jeff Fitch, Fedele and Hyssong.

Swager said this year's team ranked with the division's best.

"In some ways, the season was disappointing," he said. "In a league and region like we are in, there is little room for error.

"However, from an objective sense, Chelsea cross country enjoyed another top-notch, successful season. I can confidently say that we are among the top 20 Division II programs in the state."

Winning the Division II title was Big Rapids with 81 points. Rounding out the top 10 were Fremont with 130 points; Flint Powers Catholic with 168 points; Bloomfield Hills Lahser with 223 points; St. Clair with 239 points; Dexter with 262 points; Lake Odessa Lakewood with 266 points; East Lansing with 271 points; East Grand Rapids with 299 points and Petoskey with 318 points.

Placing first individually was Caledonia's Tim Ross, with a time of 15:03.60.

sion, while Benton ended up 11th, qualifying for the state meet.

In the 100 breaststroke, Augustine touched fourth overall and second in the division with a time of 1:09.45. Mida and Jennings placed 15th and 16th, respectively.

In the meet's final event, the 400 freestyle relay, Chelsea's A squad of Stiles, Armstrong, Hughes and Hack finished fourth overall and second in the division. The B team of Rohrer, Bassett, Moffett and Varady placed ninth.

"We had so many great performances. It's hard to single out anyone," Crispin said. "But Dani Sawyer was on two record-setting relays and set the backstroke individual mark. Kara Stiles was on a record-breaking relay and placed high in her two events, breaking the 100 record."

"Kayla Hack was also on that (record-setting) relay and set her own record in the 200 freestyle. And Alison Sayers had the best diving performance of a Chelsea girl in a long time and is now moving on to the next level."

Chelsea finished the regular season with a 12-2 dual meet mark.

The Bulldogs next compete in the Class B-C-D state meet at Eastern Michigan University Nov. 16 through 17.

Swish to hold tryouts

The Ann Arbor Swish girls' travel basketball club will be conducting tryouts for its U-11 squad at Emerson School's gymnasium from 2 to 4 p.m. Dec. 2.

Athletes should bring basketball shoes and a water bottle.

A permission form must be signed, so parents are asked to attend the tryouts.

Emerson School is on Scio Church Road, just east of Zeeb Road.

yard sneak with 4:28 remaining in the first quarter. Stanton will play for MSU next fall.

Harrison drove 62 yards, in eight plays taking 3:04 off the clock.

A key play in the drive was Stanton's 38-yard scramble down to the Bulldogs' 24-yard line.

On Chelsea's ensuing possession, the Bulldogs appeared to have things rolling, moving the ball down the field on a combination of runs and passes, before Harrison senior strong safety Dave Condeni used all of his 6-foot-4 height to snare an interception on a Jake Freeman pass. With the pick, the Hawks began drive No. 3 at their own 38-yard line.

Six plays later, Woods scored on a 4-yard run with 30 seconds left in the first quarter.

Kloosterman's extra point increased Harrison's advantage to 21-0.

Back came Chelsea, however. On their first possession of the second quarter, the Bulldogs executed a textbook offensive drive against the Hawks, culminating with junior running back Darl Bauer's 2-yard run with 6:44 remaining in the half.

During the 15-play, 78-yard drive, the Bulldogs converted two fourth down plays, and had Harrison's speedy defenders diving and chasing to stop them.

After a blocked extra point, the score was 21-6 Harrison. With the Chelsea sideline in an uproar, Harrison began its ensuing possession at its own 9-yard line.

After two short yardage plays, Stanton, under heavy pressure, attempted a pass out into the flat to fellow Spartan recruit Agim Shabaj. But Chelsea senior Dan Mueller broke up the pass, coming within a whisker of intercepting the ball and walking into the end zone.

After dodging that bullet, the Hawks were forced to punt from their own end zone.

Stanton boomed the ball to midfield, where the Bulldogs took over.

Chelsea moved the ball quickly downfield, threatening to cut the Harrison lead even more.

With the Hawk sideline getting jittery, shouts such as "C'mon, make the tackle" and "Let's go you guys" could be heard from the normally stoic and confident Harrison squad.

On a third and two, Bulldog senior back Eddie McClendon caught an 8-yard pass from Freeman, moving the ball inside the Harrison 20-yard line.

The Hawks, however, stiffened forcing the Bulldogs into a fourth and nine from the 18-yard line. A pass attempt from Freeman into the end zone was batted away, ending the Bulldog drive.

Four plays later, from midfield, Stanton found Shabaj streaking down the left sideline on a pick play for a 50-yard touchdown bomb with 45 seconds left in the first half.

"That hurt," Bush said. With Kloosterman's successful extra point, Harrison led 28-6 as the second quarter ended.

Bush said his team had opportunities to keep the game close. "We had a chance to make it 21-14 going into the locker room," he said. "But there's no room for error when you play Harrison. They're that good."

To begin the third quarter, Chelsea ran seven plays, but was unable to cross midfield.

On Harrison's opening possession of the second half, the Hawks scored on an 18-yard screen pass from Stanton to Woods with 7:04 left in the third quarter.

The four-play, 53-yard drive consumed 1:43 off the clock.

With Kloosterman's extra point, Harrison increased its lead to 35-6.

Chelsea refused to fold, however.

On their next possession, the Bulldogs moved from their own 24-yard line down to inside the Hawks' 20-yard line before stalling.

Key plays in the drive were McClendon's 32-yard halfback pass to senior wideout Kent Reames and McClendon's 13-yard reception from Freeman down to Harrison's 19-yard line.

On a fourth and two, Freeman was sacked, ending Chelsea's threat.

On Harrison's next drive, the Bulldog defense came to life as senior defensive linemen Eric Lixey and Joe Tripodi sacked the talented Stanton for a 9-yard loss as the third quarter came to a close.

Stanton rarely has seen the turf this season.

To begin the fourth quarter, Chelsea ran five plays before punting.

The Hawks took over at their own 47-yard line.

Four plays later, junior Charles Pickens scored on a 21-yard scamper around left end with 6:15 remaining in the game.

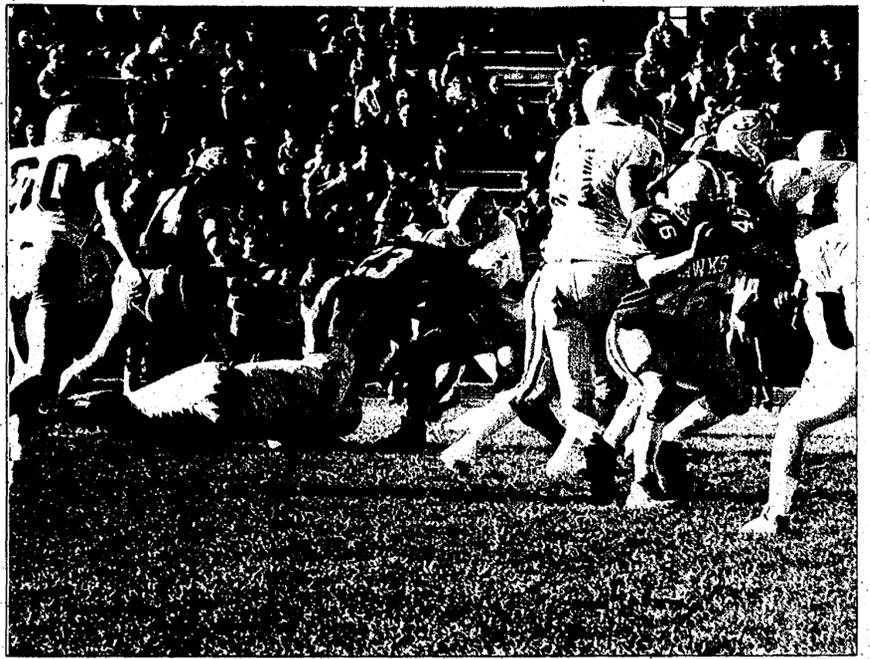

With the successful extra point, Harrison closed out the scoring at 42-6.

The Bulldogs had one more possession, running four plays before giving the ball over on downs to the Hawks.

Harrison ran four plays before time ran out.

Only on the Hawks' final drive did the first-stringers leave the field. Chelsea's first team also left the field at that point.

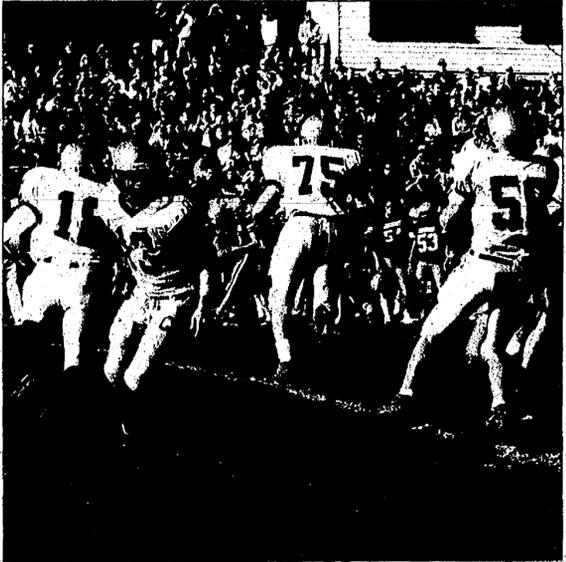

Harrison's top unit usually plays two quarters, if that.

Chelsea senior defensive tackle Chris Naab (74) and junior defensive end Tony Kimmen bring down Farmington Hills Harrison junior tailback Marcus Woods during last Saturday's Division III district championship game. Seniors Eric Lixey (60) and Joe Tripodi (51) close in to help.

"We had a chance to make it 21-14 going into the locker room. But there's no room for error when you play Harrison. They're that good."

Chelsea 8-year-old third-grader Alyssa Young finished second in the all-around competition at a youth gymnastics meet at Eastern Michigan University.

Dreads finish sixth at state finals

Dexter's boys' cross country team placed sixth at the Division II state meet at Michigan International Speedway last weekend.

The Dreadnaughts' finish was the best in school history.

According to Dexter coach Jaime Dudash, the team's saying all year has been, "There is no try, only do or do not."

Throughout this season, the Dreadnaughts proved they had no plans to just try.

Capturing the Division II title was defending champion Big Rapids with 81 points.

Rounding out the top five were Fremont with 130 points, Flint Powers Catholic with 168 points, Bloomfield Hills Lahser with 223 points and St. Clair with 239 points.

Dexter finished with 262 points.

Individually, Caledonia's Tim Ross placed first with a time of 15:03.60.

What makes Dexter's feat so impressive is this year marked the first time the Dreads had been to the state meet since 1995, and the first time they had finished as high as sixth.

"I looked up and figured out the stats and we were the youngest team in the state (by age and experience) going in," Dudash said. "It's real tough to have seven guys - with only Chris Burke with state experience - run head-to-head with more experienced juniors and seniors."

"I figured that if we ran as consistently as we have been, we could finish at best seventh, and if a couple guys were off, we'd at worst be 12th."

"The boys punched the gas and found another gear."

Burke, who finished in 31st place with a personal best time of 16:31.9, paced the Dreadnaughts.

"It (course) felt mushy when we walked it, and it felt slow as we were racing. But on the other hand, with the competition, it felt like we were flying," Burke said.

"I wanted to be somewhere in the top 30, but I ran a strong race and at least didn't get kicked or leaned at the line. That would have been a heartbreaker."

Placing 42nd overall for Dexter was sophomore Dan Meyer with a lifetime best time of 16:40.

"Danny ran a very strong race and was the eighth fastest sophomore in the state," Dudash said. "If he and Chris can stay healthy, they should easily contend for top 20 finishes overall next year."

According to Dudash, the real difference in the meet for the Dreadnaughts was in the 3-4-5 punch of sophomore Ryan Boluyt, freshman Tony Nalli and junior Andrew Porinsky.

Early in the year, Boluyt and Nalli were a dynamic duo, Dudash said.

"Those two were money in the bank, FDIC insured and guaranteed to return a fine race," he said.

Earlier in the season, at about the time of the Southeastern Conference Jamboree No. 2, Porinsky joined the group.

"When Porinsky joined the pair, they became more like the Three Musketeers," Dudash said.

At last weekend's state finals, it was no different.

Finishing 109th was Boluyt with a time of 17:16.3, followed by Nalli in 110th in 17:16.3 and Porinsky in 111th with a time of 17:16.9. All three runners recorded lifetime bests.

Nalli's time was the fourth fastest in the state for a freshman.

"Everything went so fast and it was over," Boluyt said.

Dudash said Dexter's sixth and seventh runners were also keys to the Dreads' success.

Freshman Mike Little placed 182nd overall with a time of 18:00. Jay Leadley finished 217th in 18:35.

Little's placing was even more surprising since he had to stop midway through the race to fix his shoe. Apparently, another runner had stepped on his spikes, flipping it off.

"I had to stop, go back and put on my shoe and start racing," he said.

Even with the shoe incident, Little turned in a lifetime best time.

All seven Dexter athletes were named "Stars of the Meet." Along with finishing in the top 10, Dexter also beat East Lansing, which had nipped them at regionals.

With 26 athletes returning next year, including the squad's top nine runners, Dudash said the future looks bright for the Dreadnaughts.

"A lot can happen in a year, but the level of excitement, enthusiasm and support has been phenomenal this year," he said. "Middle-schoolers are getting excited about the program and parents are coming in droves to the meets even if their son isn't running."

"It's a great feeling to see this happening. The kids have tasted it and now they really want to go to the next level."

Local veteran deserves our gratitude

GEORGE SPARROW

FROM THE HOME FRONT

I have a black-and-white photograph of myself standing in the middle of my mom and dad's victory garden in the old Botanical Gardens off of Stadium Boulevard in Ann Arbor. My hands are on my hips and I have a grim visage as I look over my fields of plenty. Under the picture is a caption written by some wit, "Damn nice crop!"

As I grew older, the picture always brought laughter to others and me. The meaning changed to one of solemnity as I began to grasp what or, rather, who had allowed me that moment of satisfaction and at what cost.

The classes in history gave me more insight as they brought about a sense of debt — mine to the men who gave of themselves at such a crucial time in their own lives — the change from adolescence to adulthood.

Then as a parent, I began to glimpse the terrible sacrifices made by parents of 50 years ago — the telegrams, the flags in the windows with stars in the empty place at the holiday tables — the lives that were never to be fulfilled.

As this became revealed to me, my response was and still is a sense of obligation to recognize those who — through no particular action of their own — did come back to marry, or bear children, complete their education, make their mark, die with dignity at home, while others never made it home.

For the latter, the thanks come too late. For others, let us make sure it is not so.

It is in this spirit that I thank fellow Chelsea resident George Prinzing for keeping me safe in my victory garden for so long.

This story is about George Prinzing and his experiences in the U.S. Army during World War II. He received his draft notice in 1941 while studying at Western Michigan Teachers College. He was granted a student deferment until June and then reported to Detroit for his Army physical.

George's hopes were raised when the medical clerk put red marks on his folder, which was a good sign because the marks could lead to a rejection from the U.S. Army. No such luck, however, as George found out that the only problem was that the clerk had run out of black ink.

George was sent to Camp Grant, near Chicago, where he was issued his uniform and given three days of indoctrination into the way the U.S. Army does things. From Camp Grant, he was sent to Fort Eustis, Va., where he received 12 weeks of basic training. Camp Stewart in Georgia was the next stop, where he was assigned to a regiment of anti-aircraft in the Coastal Artillery.

The unit was the 213th National Guard regiment from Eastern Pennsylvania. George was assigned there because more experienced men were removed for immediate service overseas.

With training completed in October of 1941, the regiment was sent to New York City, where the men were assigned to a lumberyard. It was while the new troops were being oriented to their weapons that a gun was fired accidentally.

As George remembers it, the sergeant was explaining patiently to the new men that they should "never touch this part of the weapon," when it discharged and took a chunk off the Equitable Life Insurance Co. building in downtown New York City. There were no human casualties or battle honors awarded for the action, George said.

The unit was transferred in February 1942 to a park across from the Brooklyn Navy Yard to protect the country from any enemy aircraft. The unit was again under strength by culling and transferred to Fort Oswego in upstate New York for further training.

By March of 1942, the regiment was back in Staten Island with their guns deployed. In April of 1942, the unit was sent to an embarkation center in preparation for duty assignment overseas. Sent first to Fort Dix, N.J., the men were then transferred to Fort Hamilton.

They boarded the USS Leadstone, a troop carrier, but their departure was delayed as they waited for the arrival of Canadian commandos. The ship finally headed out of port for Nova Scotia, Halifax, where there was another delay. Once they were on board, the ship joined a convoy and headed for Ireland.

Life on board the ship was not a very pleasant one for several reasons. Many of the men became seasick across the turbulent Atlantic Ocean for 12 straight days. To make matters worse, the area reserved for sleeping and recreating was very cramped, full of canvas triple-decker beds, with very narrow aisles and only one sink located at the far end of the sleeping area.

Most of the sick men were not able to reach the basin before the proper time and it ended up on the floor. As a result, the entire area had a very foul odor for the balance of the trip. In addition, the floors of the area became very slick with the gooey mess, so those walking through had to hold onto the sides of the bunks to keep from falling into the greasy substance.

After an arduous journey, the men reached Belfast, Ireland, and were sent for some needed "rest and recreation." This consisted of a 25-mile hike in full field pack to get rid of their "sea legs." The only good part about the duty station, George said, was that it was on the estate of the founders of the Guinness

VILLAGE OF CHELSEA NOTICE OF VARIANCE HEARING

An application has been filed by DAVID ESAU of CORNERSTONE DESIGN FOR MCKINLEY PROPERTIES, for a variance from the requirements of Section 7.05A of Ordinance No.79 (Zoning Ordinance), to ALLOW FOR THE CONSTRUCTION OF PARKING SPACES LESS THAN 200 SQUARE FEET IN AREA.

The property is described as follows:
TAX CODE: # 06-12-108-010
300 N. Main St., Chelsea, MI
And
TAX CODE: # 06-12-108-009
310 N. Main St., Chelsea, MI

Commonly known as the Welfare Building and the Clock Tower

Pursuant to the procedure for a variance request: a Notice of Hearing shall be given and will be served personally or by mail at least ten (10) days prior to the date of such hearing, upon the party or parties making the request for appeal, and all owners of record of property and occupants of property located within three-hundred (300) feet of such premises in question.

You are herein notified that a hearing will be held by the Chelsea Zoning Board of Appeals on Wednesday, November 21 at 5:00 o'clock P.M. or as soon thereafter as possible, in the Chelsea Village Offices, located in the Chelsea Bank Building, 305 S. Main Street, Suite 100 (lower level conference room), to consider objections to said request.

The petition is on file in the office of the Planning and Zoning Department, 305 S. Main St., Suite 100, Chelsea and may be examined prior to the date of the hearing. Persons requiring reasonable accommodations to disabilities in order that the hearing be accessible to them, are requested to notify the Zoning Board of Appeals Chairman no later than five (5) business days prior to the date of the hearing of such disability.

State Rep. John Hansen recently accepted a state award for his involvement with the Dexter School District and his dedication to public service. Pictured with Hansen is Rick Wiltse (left) from the Michigan Association for Computer Users in Learning and Fred Anderson, AT&T state director for government affairs.

Hansen receives statewide award

State Rep. John Hansen of Dexter and 27 other Michigan legislators were recently recognized for their contributions to education and their dedication to public service.

Hansen, a former superintendent of Dexter schools, was presented with an award from the Michigan Association for Computer Users in Learning and AT&T at a reception Oct. 9 at the state Capitol in Lansing.

The reception followed a student technology showcase, a related event earlier in the day at the Capitol building.

Students from more than 100 schools throughout the state set up displays and presented hands-on demonstrations to legislators about how technology is being used in the classroom.

DEATHS

CLYDE DUANE MYERS
Chelsea
Clyde D. Myers, 65, died Nov. 3, 2001, at Arbor Hospice Residence in Ann Arbor. He was born Jan. 14, 1936, in Chelsea, the son of Charles W. and Zola D. (Griffin) Myers.

Mr. Myers was a member of Chelsea First United Methodist Church and the Chelsea Senior Citizens. He had retired from Dana Corp. in 1987 after 20 years. He also was a volunteer with the Boy Scouts and he delivered Meals on Wheels for many years.

Mr. Myers will be remembered for his willingness to help others, his wisdom and humor.

On June 29, 1957, he married Maryann Musolf in North Waterloo, and she survives. Other survivors include three sons, Brad (Camely) Myers of Jackson, Kirk (Edith) Myers of Manchester and Eric (Nanette) Myers of Chelsea; three grandchildren, Christopher, Keith and Anna; and several nieces and nephews. He was preceded in death by one son, Clifford; and one sister, Zita Henry.

A funeral was held Wednesday at Cole Funeral Chapel in Chelsea, with the Revs. Richard Dake and Jennifer Whatley-Williams officiating. Burial followed at Oak Grove Cemetery in Chelsea. The family received friends Monday and Tuesday.

Memorial contributions may be made to American Heart Association, First United Methodist Church, Chelsea Senior Citizens or Arbor Hospice.

JERRY A. OSBORNE

beer company. The regiment received further training in preparation for its coming role in Operation Torch. Soon, orders were received to embark on board a ship for Gurloch, Scotland, where the soldiers found themselves being loaded onto the same ship that had brought them to Ireland. The ship left Gurloch and, to the delight of the Canadians on board, headed west. Their excitement soon cooled as the ship then turned southeast and headed for the Straits of Gibraltar.

George spent his time sleeping next to 2½-ton truck that had an annoying habit of squeaking whenever the ship would strike a wave, which would make the truck jump up and down, causing the shocks and springs to squeak. But it also got George out of cleanup duties because the officers couldn't find him when it was his turn.

As the Leadstown was pulling through the Straits of Gibraltar, one of the ships in the convoy was struck and disabled by a torpedo from a submarine. A tow-line was deployed and the ship was brought into the harbor a day after the rest of the fleet had arrived in Algiers, Algeria.

The date was early November 1942, several days after the landings that marked the beginning of Operation Torch, the invasion of North Africa mounted to drive the Germans and the Italians off the African continent.

By Nov. 12, the company had been ashore in Algiers and sent to its assigned airfield. The troops set up guns to protect against German paratroop attacks. When the ship arrived off the port of Algiers, the soldiers saw the harbor full of sunken hulks, either put there purposely or by enemy action — no one knew.

They did know that they would have to find a creative way to get to the piers through the tangled mess of steel. They put wooden planks on the deck portion of those ships that had decks above water and walked their way to shore.

The company was sent to an airfield, a small strip outside of Algiers. After a brief stay, the unit was transferred to another small airfield outside of Setif to the east and south of Algiers. The units were following the ground troops in their pursuit of Rommel's Afrika Corps, protecting their flank from any attempted German airborne landings.

The guns they manned were anti-aircraft weapons that could be fired manually or with the aid of a Sperry generator. There were runners, who retrieved ammunition in five-shell clips — two men to sight the weapon by hand, one to set the azimuth, the other to set the elevation and a man to fire the weapon when it had been properly calibrated.

When hooked up to the Sperry generator, the weapon could be fired by only two men. When an alert was sounded, the men would run and jump into their prepared gun pit — an area built up around the weapon to protect the operators from flying metal — take up their positions and prepare to fire their weapon, or set the Sperry generator on automatic.

In addition, if for some reason the weapon could not be readied before an attempt was made to disable the gun, the men were also equipped with a machine gun.

On one occasion, George heard the alert, ran for the pit, but refused to put his helmet on. When the first shell hit near their gun, that's when the helmet went on. It is a good thing that he did so because in the very next barrage, a piece of steel struck his helmet just above the hairline and left a crease that could have ended up in his skull.

George's company was also involved in the first action seen by American troops against the Germans at the battle of Kasserine Pass — considered to be one of the worst defeats inflicted on American troops during the war. Several men from the regiment died during the engagement.

While stationed at Bejaia, Algeria, they were put on alert and then told to hold their fire because a British Beaufighter, a twin-engine medium bomber, was chasing a German plane and the fear was that George's unit would shoot down the wrong plane.

From Setif, the regiment moved along the coast of North Africa in an easterly direction, following the retreat of the German Afrika Corps. The men were stopped at Bouira, but only for a short time because they were quickly moved to another air strip at Agaccio.

It was while stationed in Bouira that George took advantage of the recruiting poster promises of seeing the world. He said that they were very close to old Roman towns and villages that had survived through the centuries. He hitched rides on military vehicles to take tours during his off-duty hours.

The company was put on board another LST and taken to the island of Corsica in the port of Bonafacio. They were taken by truck to the northern tip of the island to the port city of Bastia before arriving at an airfield on the outskirts of the city.

Very early in its duty on Corsica, the unit experienced a very serious air raid by the German Air Force. The planes came over in wave after wave, strafing and dropping bombs on the airfield to deny its use by the Allied planes.

The guns on Corsica were set up to cover the airfields in umbrella shape — each gun responsible for a specific area of fire, so that the entire field was covered by anti-aircraft shells. The only time they were not assigned a specific area to fire into was when the men spotted a specific target. Then they could fire on the plane at their own pace. Their spare ammunition was buried in the ground some distance from the guns.

During this particular attack, George and his fellow ammo runners were so full of adrenaline that they each picked up the 100-pound cans of ammo and ran the whole way back to their guns.

By August of 1944, the company had its guns taken away and began a new career as an infantry. The men were taken back to Marseilles and then sent into the Maritime Alps to the town of St. Martin Visible, five miles from the border between Italy and France.

The company had been given the job of patrolling the area between two towns, one on one side of the ridge and the other down in the valley on the other side. George was assigned to a Browning automatic rifle squad as an ammo carrier. The squad had the job of making sure the Germans did not attain the high ground above the valleys because that would be a threat to the Allied positions.

Many times, the squad had come upon buildings that had been abandoned by the Germans. They had to be very careful as the Germans would leave traps. One time, one of the men in George's squad had walked into the doorway of a building and someone yelled, "freeze." The man had one foot on one side of a trip wire and his other foot on the other side. That warning saved his life.

Just after Christmas 1944, the company was pulled back from the Maritimes and sent to Marseilles for training as Signal Corps soldiers. Most of the Luftwaffe had been sent to the Normandy site to beat back the Allied invasion. The company was trained to string wire from the frontline troops to the rear echelon.

The squad's job was to follow the line of attack, keep the frontline troops in constant communication with the headquarters by stringing the four strand wires together off the ground to prevent arcing.

By May of 1943, the war in North Africa was over. Rommel was brought back to Germany to begin planning for the defense of the homeland and George's service in North Africa was at an end.

The unit was beyond Heidelberg when the Germans surrendered, but the men kept doing their job. Finally, the company was taken to Belgium in preparation to being sent back to United States.

One day, the sergeant came up to George and said, "Prinzing, don't go AWOL, you're being sent home in two days." Indeed, two days later the men were sent to Antwerp and put on board a ship for home.

Upon boarding the ship, they received a surprise as the other part of their unit from whom they had become separated was waiting for them. Keeping up the tradition of trouble leaving harbors, on their way out of Antwerp, a minesweeper ran into a mine as they were being lifted to the level of the sea through a series of locks.

They were on a Liberty ship and for two, long weeks they sat inside under less-than-admirable conditions. But no one cared because they were going home.

George Prinzing

The company landed in Virginia and was sent to the Poconos. The camp was just five or 10 miles from the homes of most of the men.

George reached home on VJ day, and a friend who had seen him get off the bus in Chelsea drove him the rest of the way home.

When he arrived, George just sat on his parents' front porch the rest of the day as friends and relatives came by to welcome him home. People offered him drinks, food, magazines and advice — whatever they had.

George just sat on the porch until the sun went down.

At the same time, I was in my new house peacefully asleep, grateful that George had been protecting me.

Thanks, George

Preventive maintenance

Staying in tune can save dollars down the road

Changing weather conditions remind us it's time to think of preventive maintenance for our vehicles.

Simply by replacing spark plugs, spark plug wires and oxygen sensors, you can save significant money on fuel, while helping to keep pollutants out of the atmosphere.

Did you know that each year you could save $87 in gasoline costs if you drive 12,000 miles per year?

By replacing worn-out oxygen sensors, gas mileage can be improved by 10 to 15 percent.

An oxygen sensor is a small device that senses the amount of oxygen in exhaust gases and sends a signal to the engine's computer, which adjusts the air/fuel mixture to the optimum level.

"It's important to monitor the amount of oxygen in the exhaust so the right air/fuel mixture can be maintained," said Chuck Ruth, director of product management for the Robert Bosch Corp. "If the sensor finds too much oxygen in the exhaust gases, that indicates the engine is running lean. That can cause performance problems, including misfire. Too little oxygen indicates a rich mixture, which wastes fuel and results in excess emissions. And a worn-out oxygen sensor will shorten the life of your catalytic converter."

Oxygen sensors last from 30,000 to 100,000 miles, depending on the vehicle. They wear out because of exposure to carbon, soot, harmful gases, antifreeze, chemicals and thermal and physical shock, all of which occur during normal driving conditions.

A worn-out oxygen sensor is the No. 1 cause of excessive harmful exhaust emissions.

Almost all gasoline-powered vehicles newer than 1986 have at least one oxygen sensor, and 1986 and newer vehicles have two or more oxygen sensors.

Bosch invented the automotive oxygen sensor and has manufactured more than 175 million sensors since 1976. Today, Bosch oxygen sensors are original equipment on more vehicles worldwide than any other brand, including the major domestic manufacturers: Ford Motor Co., General Motors Corp. and DaimlerChrysler AG.

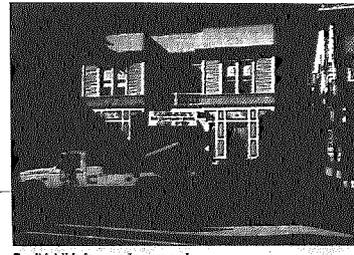

For retailers or service outlets handling Bosch oxygen sensors, log on to www.boschusa.com or call 1-888-OSENSOR.

While you're under the hood, you might consider making some additional performance and economy improvements. A simple change that can provide enhanced performance is changing the spark plugs.

One way you can tell the plugs need to be replaced is if they look blackened. Most importantly, a rough running engine, spitting/leaking idles, lack of power, reduced fuel economy and overall performance loss are also signs of worn spark plugs.

When you change your spark plugs, you should also consider changing your spark plug wires.

As spark plug wires wear out, you can have problems with hard starting, engine misfire, radio interference, higher emissions and reduced fuel economy. Courtesy of Car Care Council

Don't let this happen to your car!

TOWARD THE PURCHASE OR LEASE OF A VEHICLE FROM ONE OF THE PARTICIPATING ADVERTISERS

Each week, readers will have an opportunity to enter the sweepstakes with this entry form coupon, then deposited at dealerships. Forms also available at The Reporter Papers and participating dealers. Weekly, Heritage Newspapers will award prizes to reader to be used at each of the participating dealerships (eg. oil changes, tire rotations, front-end alignment; etc.) A $30 value.

Visit any of these participating auto dealers and deposit this coupon. Each week a participating dealer will draw a winner. One winner will be drawn at each participating auto dealer for a free oil change, tire rotation or front-end alignment. Your entry also provides you an opportunity to win a Grand Prize of $5,000 credit toward the purchase or lease of a new vehicle from one of the participating dealers. This credit may not be used toward previously purchased or leased vehicle. No purchase necessary to enter this contest. Employees and relatives of Heritage Newspapers of Heritage Media and participating dealers are not eligible. All prizes must be claimed by December 15, 2001. All taxes, licensing, insurance and vehicle registration fees or other fees are the responsibility of the winner. Must be licensed driver, 18 years or older to enter and win. Winner must be able to provide proof of ability to finance the balance of the purchase price of the vehicle.
