Relay for Life a success

Participants weather heat to raise money

By Rita Fischer

Area residents came out in droves this past weekend to support the Western Washtenaw Relay for Life, a fund-raiser for the American Cancer Society.

Even in 95-degree heat, this year's 10th annual event was a great success, organizers said, despite shutting down 1 1/2 hours early because of a power outage.

A total of 30 teams, representing some 1,300 participants, walked the Chelsea High School track for 24 hours as part of the event.

Polly's to relocate

New stores will open at sites vacated by Farmer Jack in Chelsea and Saline

By Steve Ricci
Staff Writer

Business is good for Polly's Food Service Inc., and it could get even better as the company opens two new stores in Chelsea and Saline next month.

Customers at Polly's Country Market, 1101 M-52 in Chelsea, said Monday that they are looking forward to shopping at a new Polly's in the city.

Now, the big question is what will become of the 28,700-square-foot retail space soon to be vacated by the store, which has stood on the site since opening in 1972.

With the acquisitions, Jackson-based Polly's Food Service Inc. will own a chain of 12 grocery stores — called either Polly's Country Market or Country Market — in Jackson, Lenawee and Washtenaw counties.

In Chelsea and Saline, the corporation will move into grocery stores formerly occupied by Farmer Jack, a supermarket chain owned by Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co.

The new Polly's Country Market stores will be located at 1255 S. Main St. in Chelsea and 1335 E. Michigan Ave. in Saline.

Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. announced last month that it would sell 18 Farmer Jack stores in Michigan and Ohio within 90 days, including the Chelsea store.

Board OKs pay raise for school leaders

Contracts for school administrators extended through June 30, 2007

By Heather Connor
Staff Writer

Administrators in the Chelsea School District will see a 2.1 percent salary increase in the fall.

The Chelsea Board of Education approved the salary hike Monday for all non-union district employees. The board also approved the extension of administrators' contracts by one year. Their contracts will now expire June 30, 2007.

Teresa Zigman, executive director of business and operations, said the raise also applies to teachers. The Chelsea Education Association approved a three-year contract with the district earlier this year, she said. The raise for teachers was part of the contract, but the raise for non-union employees needed separate board approval.

Below is a list of all administrators' current salaries and what they will be making with the 2.1 percent raise.

Superintendent David Killips will see his salary of $115,487 increase to $117,912;

Assistant Superintendent Iva Corbett, from $102,020 to $104,162; and Executive Director of Business and Operations Teresa Zigman, from $99,716 to $101,810.

Chelsea High School Principal Ron Mead will see his $98,640 salary increase to $100,711; Beach Middle School Principal Andrew Ingall, from $88,807 to $90,671; Executive Director of Student Performance Shawn Lewis-Lakin, from $89,831 to $91,717; Pierce Lake Elementary School Principal Lucy Stieber, from $87,731 to $89,573; North Elementary School Principal Marcus Kaemming, from $81,278 to $82,984; South Elementary School Principal Lisa Nikel, from $85,580 to $87,377; and Chelsea High School Assistant Principal Julie Deppner, from $81,278 to $82,984.

Athletics Director Wayne Welton will see his $82,149 salary increase to $83,874; Community Education Director Jeff Rohrer, from $82,149 to $83,874; Operations Director Ron Livengood, from $81,688 to $83,403; and Technology Director Scott Wooster, from $79,383 to $81,050.

The salary of Assistant Principal Patrick Little has not yet been determined.

St. Vincent de Paul Needs Shoppers and Volunteers to Help Bridge Gaps for Poor

BY ANITA LEBLANC • Special Writer

The possible thrill of finding a rare antique or the lure of a great deal on clothing, jewelry or household wares may motivate shoppers to visit the St. Vincent de Paul Thrift Shop on Ann Arbor's northeast side on Broadway.

However, those who make purchases also support the mission of the non-profit that provides a low-cost shopping alternative of quality goods to needy individuals and families and personal and household items to those unable to afford those purchases. A voucher system is arranged by local social service agencies through its office at St. Thomas the Apostle Catholic Church. Surplus funds from the store operation are used to offset the expense of its other assistance programs for county residents.

The store's volunteers, shoppers, donors and staff help the store meet its objectives.

A series of challenges now threatens the mission of the shop. Jennifer Hackett, the store manager, attributes a drop in shoppers and donations to the past two-year construction of the Broadway Bridge that made for difficult traffic maneuvering and parking. A poor economy has resulted in a sharp rise in customers with vouchers for donated clothing and household goods. Fewer donations from the community have also strained the operation.

Hackett notes that the majority of the store's clients come from Ypsilanti while Ann Arbor residents provide most of its donations.

"Thank heaven the construction is over!" she exclaims. "The new bridge is beautiful, but we really took a hit. Unfortunately, people aren't returning and we need them desperately. Our rent is going up and frankly, we don't know how long we can stay here."

"We're doing a lot of different things to try to bring folks back. We've put a sign up on the outside wall of our building to make our store more easily recognizable. We're advertising in local newspapers for the first time in our nearly 37 years of operation at this location. We recently decorated a store window on Michigan Avenue during Ypsilanti Pride Day to encourage store traffic."

The store is also placing an ad twice a month in the St. Thomas church bulletin and an occasional one in the St. Francis Catholic Church bulletin.

Hackett "cleaned house" when she arrived two years ago. Along with the store staff and volunteers, she reorganized the former hodge-podge of randomly arranged goods into customer-friendly, easy-to-access shelves and racks of merchandise. The bright sun beams through the large windows at the front of the store into its two rooms of attractively displayed stock.

The shop, unlike some other local thrift stores, boasts two private dressing rooms. Hackett says the prices at St. Vincent de Paul are comparable or less than those of their competitors. The shop welcomes gently used small furniture (end tables, small chests and lamps), kitchen appliances, household items and clothing from individuals, parishes and organizations. Donations are tax-deductible to the extent allowed by the IRS.

"Storage space is a big problem for us," says Hackett, as she laughingly shows off the store's office crammed floor-to-ceiling with donated goods to be evaluated, priced and stocked. "We welcome donations Tuesday through Saturday from 10 a.m.-3 p.m. We don't take donations on Mondays or the second full week of the month."

It's a good idea to call the shop at 734-761-1400 before a drop-off to make sure they have space.

"We unfortunately don't have the means to do donation pick-ups," Hackett adds.

Hackett says, "We're not just a store. We're part of the community. A lot of people stop by to browse and visit."

"I can't say enough about the value of our 15 volunteers. We're always looking for more good people to help us sort, price and sell merchandise."

Volunteers basically do everything paid staff does with the exception of bookwork.

"We are so grateful for them," Hackett adds.

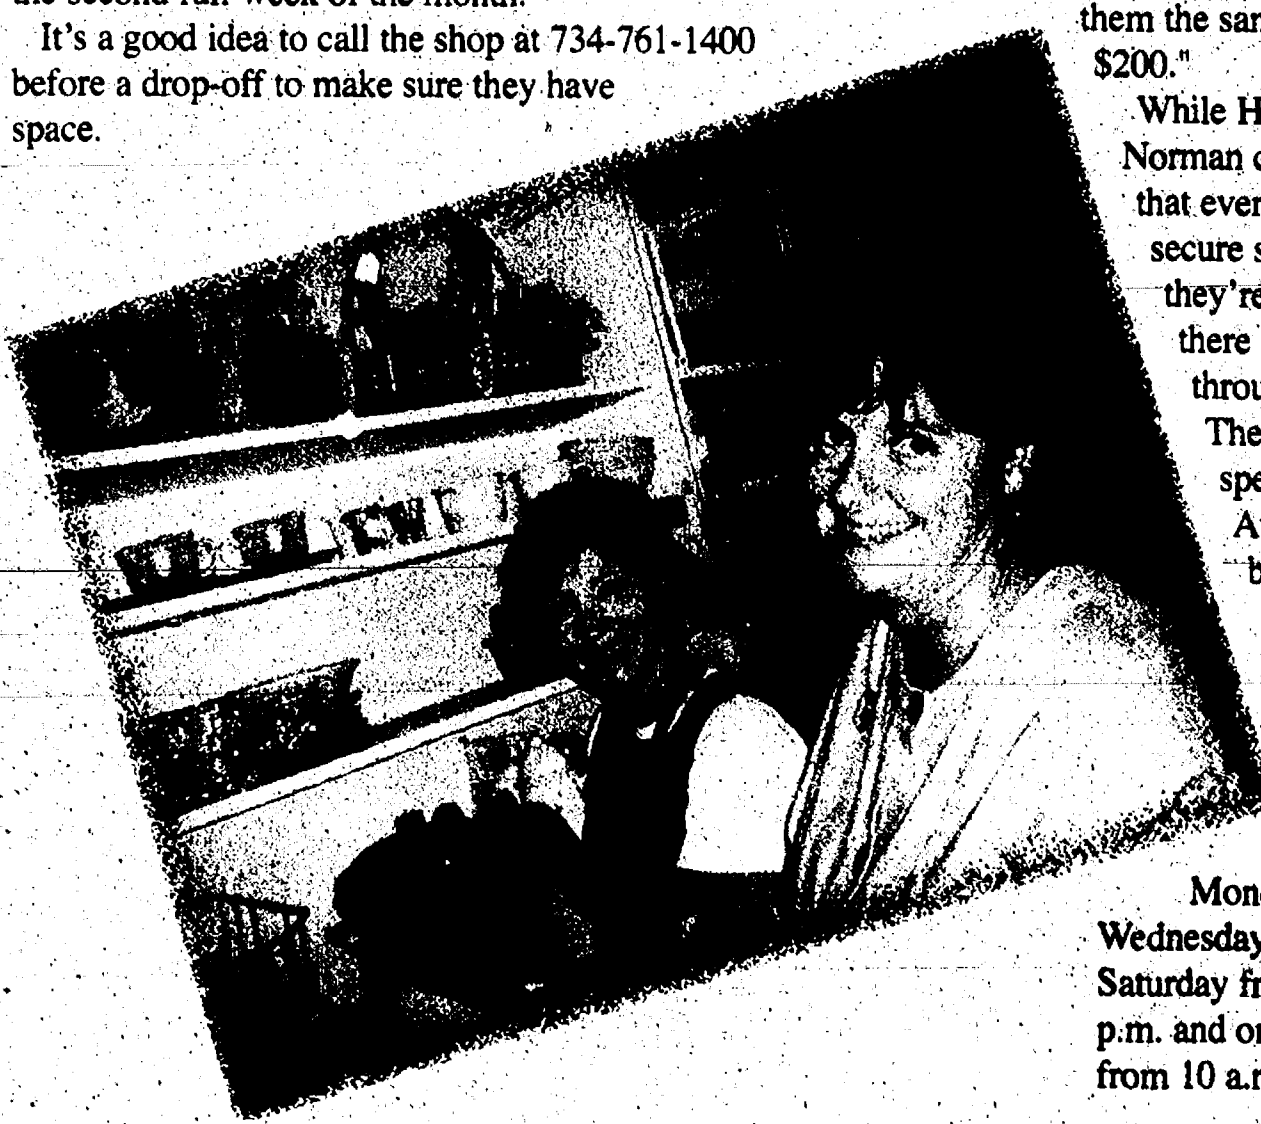

Barbara Norman, a long-time volunteer and the local St. Vincent de Paul Conference president, relates a few of the store's most amazing treasure stories.

"A few weeks ago someone donated a Tiffany necklace and matching bracelet that were worth about $1,000. We sold the necklace for $200 that day. The bracelet sold for $100 later that same day. "We also had a pair of 10mm pearls donated a few years ago that were worth $850. We sold them the same day for $200."

While Hackett and Norman can't guarantee that every shopper will secure such bargains, they're confident that there are good deals throughout the store. The store will hold special sales in August to celebrate its 37-year anniversary at the Broadway location.

They invite the community to shop

Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday from 10 a.m.-5 p.m. and on Thursdays from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Man poses as reporter, solicits boy

Preliminary exam set Tuesday for Michael Roy Pierce of Dexter

By Gary Anglebrandt
Staff Writer

A man posing as a reporter for The Dexter Leader allegedly attempted to solicit sex from a 10-year-old Dexter Township boy June 20.

Michael Roy Pierce, 27 of Dexter, read a sports story in the June 16 edition of The Leader that listed several children's names, including the boy's, said Cmdr. David Egeler of the Washtenaw County Sheriff's Office. Pierce found the boy's last name in the phone book and called his home Monday afternoon, Egeler said.

The boy answered the phone, and Pierce, claiming to be a reporter, began a conversation about sports. The conversation began with questions about where the boy plays sports, Egeler said.

Then Pierce twice asked the boy to perform sexual acts on Pierce, according to a police report.

The boy refused and later that day told his father about the call. The father called the Sheriff's Office. Deputies used an SBC emergency phone number lookup system to identify Pierce and locate his address.

Deputies arrested Pierce June 21. He was arraigned the next day and charged with accosting a child for immoral purposes. He is being held at Washtenaw County Jail on a $150,000 cash bond.

A preliminary examination hearing has been set for Tuesday to establish probable cause.

Pierce faces a felony conviction with a punishment of four years in prison or a $4,000 fine if convicted, Egeler said.

Pierce has been a client of Community Support and Treatment Services, a county-provided mental health program, Egeler said.

School board approves 2005-2006 budget

Officials hoping for $175 increase in per-pupil grant from the state of Michigan

By Heather Connor
Staff Writer

Chelsea school officials approved a preliminary budget Monday for the 2005-06 school year.

The Board of Education unanimously approved the budget, which assumes the district will receive the $175 annual raise in per-pupil funding from the state proposed by Gov. Jennifer Granholm.

Chelsea Superintendent David Killips said the state is not required to determine how much the raise will be until Sept. 30, the last day of its fiscal year.

Teresa Zigman, executive director of business and operations, said she hopes there will be no proration as it is not reflected in the budget. The district is also assuming the student count will remain steady, with no expected increase or decrease in enrollment.

The budget also reflects a 2.1 percent salary increase for all district employees.

Zigman said the district retirement rate has increased to 16.34 percent, a jump from about 14.87 percent. Health insurance costs for the district also have increased by 23 percent, she said.

The budget also reflects a 5 percent increase in property and liability insurance costs, Zigman said. Costs for utilities also increased by 10 percent.

There was no need for cuts in building allocations in the budget, Zigman said. The district did see some savings in vacancies created by retiring teachers. All of the empty positions are budgeted at mid-level salary, she said.

The budget reflects an expected revenue of $30,549,499 for the 2005-06 year, with an estimated fund balance of $4,125,513.

Killips said the district may see a deficit in the 2006-07 budget if per-pupil state funding does not keep up with mandatory costs.

Killips said he believes state legislators are doing their best for education, but it continues to be difficult to manage finances.

"After three years of no increase and more cuts, $175 does not keep up with inflation," Killips said.

Library Board waives review

Library director to be reviewed annually instead of twice a year

By Heather Connor
Staff Writer

Library officials voted June 21 to waive a mid-year review of Director Metta Lansdale.

The Chelsea District Library Board voted to change Lansdale's contract to require one performance appraisal each year. The two-year contract originally required two reviews each year.

Lansdale was reviewed in January and was scheduled for another evaluation next month. Board Secretary Greg DeGraff said a number of trustees expressed a desire in January to discontinue the mid-year review.

"We thought we didn't want to do it semiannually," said Trustee Colleen Verge. Before the vote, DeGraff said that Lansdale had said she was willing to waive the mid-year review.

Vice President Kate McAuliffe said the review of the director in past years had been quarterly, then was reduced to semi-annual.

DeGraff said Lansdale's contract will expire Dec. 31 and she will be evaluated that month before the board votes on whether to renew her contract. The library's personnel committee will meet soon to implement the change, he said.

Director evaluations are used to track performance and determine salary, among other uses, DeGraff said. Staff Writer Heather Connor can be reached at 475-1371 or hconnor@heritage.com.

Kim Kennedy, president of Polly's Food Service Inc., said Monday that Thomas Litzler of New Plan Excel Realty Trust Inc., who brokered the sales on behalf of Farmer Jack, told him that two other supermarkets also bid for the sites.

The new Polly's store in Chelsea will boost its space to 49,600 square feet, doubling its selling area.

The new Saline store will house 55,000 square feet.

Polly's will take over 15-year leases at the new sites, with options to extend their durations.

Kennedy said the Chelsea Farmer Jack building is owned by two different entities — the names of whom he had not verified — that leased it to Farmer Jack.

As of press time, Farmer Jack was scheduled to close its Chelsea store last Tuesday. Kennedy said the new Polly's would open at the site July 7.

Farmer Jack will close its Saline store July 5, with Polly's opening in Saline July 12 or 13, Kennedy said.

As part of the deals, Polly's bought the Farmer Jack equipment and inventories. Kennedy said the company purchased the two stores for about $1.4 million.

"It was a very economically feasible package for us," Kennedy said. "It's nice to get into stores of these sizes with equipment packages."

Kennedy said equipment packages in one brand-new store would cost about $3 million. He added that purchasing land and building a new store would cost substantially more than signing a 15-year lease.

Similarly, Kennedy said the purchases cost considerably less than it would have cost to remodel the old Chelsea store.

About 65 new hires will be added to the 100 employees in Chelsea, while the Saline store will add between 40 and 50 new employees to its staff of 90, Kennedy said.

With the new stores, the company will employ about 1,000 employees.

Frank Kennedy started the corporation in 1934. A fourth generation of the Kennedy family currently owns it.

Kim Kennedy said employees at both Polly's and Farmer Jack stores work under United Food and Commercial Workers Local Union 876.

Polly's Food Service Inc. built and owns a 50,000-square-foot mall contiguous to the old supermarket building. It leases to tenants such as Aco Hardware, Subway and a Secretary of State branch office.

The company will put money into the old store, sprucing up its façade and aiming to bring in new tenants by October.

Kennedy said two businesses have expressed interest in leasing the soon-to-be-vacated area but declined to identify them.

Pharmacies and two bank branches — Comerica in Chelsea and BestBank in Saline — will remain in the new Polly's stores.

Because of time constraints, Kennedy said the new stores would open with few changes.

Eventually, the company will change décor in the stores and possibly rearrange products. Refrigerated display tables will be added to existing wooden racks.

The new Chelsea store will have full-service meat and seafood counters.

Kennedy said the new Polly's stores would maintain the company's price decks, which are consistent in all of its stores.

The corporation's pricing differs from "high-low" supermarkets such as Farmer Jack, which mix higher price decks with lower advertisement prices, he said.

The company plans to eventually phase out the Polly's moniker and name all its supermarkets Country Market.

Plans for site unclear

Officials say Chelsea Post Office will not relocate in Polly's

By Steve Ricci
Staff Writer

Will a new Chelsea Post Office move to a site soon to be vacated by Polly's Country Market at 1101 M-52 in Chelsea?

Don't bet on it.

On the heels of news that Polly's will move next month to the site of the Farmer Jack supermarket at 1255 S. Main St., rumors have circulated throughout the city that the U.S. Postal Service will relocate to the old Polly's site.

But those rumors aren't based on facts, Chelsea Mayor Ann Feeney said Monday.

In concert with Postal Service personnel, Feeney said city officials have narrowed sites for a new Chelsea Post Office to two spots, which she declined to identify.

A party unaffiliated with the city is currently putting together a proposal for the Postal Service for one of the sites, Feeney said.

On behalf of the party, the city asked the Postal Service to extend a deadline for the plan to the first week of August.

Feeney said the Postal Service has one site in mind that it prefers above all others.

When asked Monday about new Chelsea Post Office locations, Bryant Schroeder, a U.S. Postal Service real estate specialist, gave replies that were more vague.

"It's probably premature for me to be commenting on any sites at this point," he said, although he confirmed that postal officials have been talking to city employees.

"We're waiting to see how a few things develop. In the next two to three months we expect to be in a position to start doing something."

Schroeder said the Postal Service has not set a deadline for announcing a new location, adding that the agency "hasn't actively looked for sites."

Like Feeney, Schroeder dismissed rumors of a new facility at the old Polly's site.

"I've heard there are rumors that we're moving there, and it's news to me," he said.

Schroeder said the Postal Service would continue to listen to suggestions for new sites from local residents.

"We formally request community input when we have sites to look at," he said.

Feeney said she was "really excited" for Polly's.

"It's a nice opportunity for them," she said. "It will be a nice store."

During a recent conversation with Feeney, Schroeder said the Postal

CHELSEA SCHOOLS

Chelsea school officials attend Lansing rally

Attendees show support of bills to increase funding for schools

By Heather Connor
Staff Writer
By Emily Burton
Heritage Newspapers

Educators, administrators and parents from across the state marched to the state capital June 21 to demand more funding for schools.

The K-16 Coalition organized the event to support Senate Bill 246 and House Bill 4582.

A group of parents, teachers and administrators from the Chelsea School District were among the participants. Superintendent David Killips said about 12 people represented the district.

SB 246 is co-sponsored by state Sen. Raymond Basham, D-Taylor, and HB 4582 was introduced and is sponsored by state Rep. Hoon-Yung Hopgood, D-Taylor.

The parallel pieces of legislation seek to establish a minimum level of funding and would increase that funding by 5 percent or the level of inflation for that fiscal year, whichever is less.

That day, a vote to discharge SB 246 from the Senate Appropriations Committee failed. It remains under consideration by the committee.

Its counterpart, HB 4582, was discharged from the House Committee on Appropriations June 22 and was placed on the floor for a second reading. But because an earlier education bill already was up for passage, the bill was not read.

Hopgood said that as a sponsor of the legislation the attendance at the rally was very encouraging.

"Education is something I've been concerned with since I was elected to the Legislature," he said. "To see that many people out there in the summer — some of whom took off work to attend — and to see that there were kids there, to see that much support was great."

Basham said he voted not to discharge the bill from committee because he believed that doing so would not be productive in balancing the budget for dealing with the funding of public schools.

He said he wanted to co-sponsor the legislation to make it "the vehicle that would start the debate on the education process in Michigan."

"What I hope to accomplish is that there's adequate funding across the state," he said. "We want to make sure that our schools are the best in the country."

Basham called the estimated 11,000 people who attended the rally "democracy in action."

"I think the rally was the beginning of a very strong message from districts across the state, not a Democrat or Republican message, but a district message that both houses need to deal with (school funding). They set the agenda and they need to deal with the issue," he said.

Jennifer Kundak of Chelsea was at the rally. She said it was very civilized and the spirit of the people was inspiring.

Although the Chelsea School District is in relatively good financial shape, the point of the rally is to make the funding system work for everyone, Kundak said.

Chelsea Board of Education Trustee Stephen Olsen also was in attendance. He said he heard the last time a crowd that large had gathered at the capital was during the Vietnam War.

"It took a war to get that many people out before," he said.

Other local residents in attendance were Jeff Rohrer, director of Chelsea Community Education and his wife, Pat; Board President Dayle Wright; Teresa Zigman, executive director of business and finance for Chelsea schools; Band Director Rick Catherman; Pierce Lake Elementary School Principal Lucy Stieber; North Creek Elementary School Principal Marcus Kaemming; Beach Middle School Principal Andrew Ingall; and South Meadows Elementary School Principal Lisa Nickel.

Killips said that a message was sent loud and clear that day to lawmakers, but only time will tell if they were heard. Kundak said she liked what Gov. Jennifer Granholm said at the rally about how education is the key to economic success in the state. "I'm an advocate not only for schools but education," Kundak said.

tion with Bob Daniels, owner of Chelsea Lumber Co., Feeney said Daniels expressed confidence that the vacated Polly's site would not be difficult to lease.

Feeney said the property wouldn't lend itself well to a new post office.

"I don't want a post office there," she said. "There's already a lot of car traffic there. I'd prefer (for a new post office) to stay in the downtown area."

Feeney offered some ideas for more appropriate uses of the Polly's site.

She noted that Merkel Furniture & Carpet One, at 209 S. Main St., attracts more than 50 percent of its clientele from outside the Chelsea area.

"Something unique would be good — something we don't have that people would get in their cars to use," she said.

"A discount place might work."

Feeney added that the Polly's supermarket site is not large enough to attract a "big box" store.

The city has plans to add more sidewalks around the site in an effort to improve pedestrian access.

Among other reasons, three shoppers at Polly's said Monday that they regularly use the store because they want to support locally owned businesses.

"The prices are good," said

Manchester resident Joan Paskewitz. "By and large, they've got what I want."

Chelsea resident Kris Hohnke said Polly's prices are "very reasonable," and that she enjoys the store's proximity to her home.

Ted Barron, another Chelsea resident, said he would definitely shop at the new Polly's store.

Hit and Run

A 70-year-old Saginaw man told Chelsea police a Pinckney teenager side-swiped his car June 10 near the intersection of Main and Van Buren streets. The man followed the teen, described him to police and requested that police contact the teen.

Drunken Driving

A 40-year-old Dexter woman was arrested and jailed for operating a vehicle while intoxicated June 10. The woman hit another car at the intersection of North Freer Road and Old US-12.

The other car was stopped at the intersection waiting for a traffic signal.

The woman, who was slurring her words when police spoke to her, refused a Breathalyzer to test her blood-alcohol level at the scene. The woman admitted to police she had been drinking and said she believed her alcohol consumption contributed to the crash.

Police took her to Chelsea Community Hospital for a blood draw and then to Washtenaw County Jail.

Civil Dispute

Chelsea police responded to an argument between a husband and wife at their Chelsea home June 10.

The wife told police her husband had been drinking and caused an argument.

A police officer advised the man to separate himself from the woman until the following day.

Assists to Other Agencies

Chelsea police assisted a Washtenaw County Sheriff's detective at a traffic stop June 11 near the corner of Pierce and Garvey streets.

A man got out of a car and approached two police officers. An officer pointed a gun at the man, handcuffed him and put him in a police car.

A stolen dog was inside the man's car. The dog was described as "extremely vicious," according to a police report.

Larceny

A 17-year-old employee at McDonald's, 1535 S. Main St., told Chelsea police her new cellular phone was stolen at the restaurant June 11.

The woman said store management would view a surveillance video of the area where she was working.

A manager at Big Boy restaurant, 1610 S. Main St., reported to Chelsea police June 11 that a terminated employee, a 37-year-old Chelsea man, had stolen data from her computer.

Data was stolen involving 94 employees, including Social Security numbers, according to a police report. The case is open pending interview of the suspect.

Trouble with Subject

A 47-year-old Chelsea man told police three youths drove by his residence June 15, yelled profanities and "flipped off" him and his daughter.

The man followed the car and reported its license plate number to police.

He told police he wanted no further action taken, but wanted the incident documented in case there were any retaliation to him or his property.

A security guard at the Chelsea Community Hospital emergency room told police a Manchester man, the husband of a patient at the hospital, was making threats to hospital staff June 9.

The man allegedly was making threats with a gun. Hospital staff requested that police provide extra patrols around the hospital.

The man called the hospital later and apologized for his actions, according to a police report.

Embezzlement

An assistant manager at Pamida Discount Center, 1040 S. Main St., reported a case of embezzlement to Chelsea police.

An 18-year-old Chelsea man, a store employee, admitted to police that he charged his friend, an 18-year-old Grass Lake man, for only two out of four items during a June 15 transaction at the store.

Delinquent Minors

A Chelsea police dispatcher saw a Chelsea youth throwing toilet paper on light poles downtown June 16. Police officers told the girl to clean up the mess.

Lima Township

Property Damage

A manager at Stiver's restaurant, 11 Fletcher Road, reported June 18 that someone had stolen a rain gutter and had broken two windows.

Lyndon Township

Drunken Driving

A man suspected of drunken driving crashed and rolled his vehicle while making a turn on Werkner Road June 16. He was arrested at the scene.

Neighbor Dispute

A woman in the 11000 block of Boyce Road told police June 18 that her neighbor left a vulgar message on her telephone answering machine. The woman had earlier told the neighbor to stay out of her yard.

The complainant said her neighbor repeatedly put three large rocks in her yard after her husband would put them back in the neighbor's yard. A trooper advised her to put the rocks in the woods and told the neighbor not to contact the complainant again.

Sylvan Township

Property Damage

Residents on Cavanaugh Lake reported that their trees were covered in toilet paper and their windows painted June 19.

Scio Township

Resisting and Obstructing

A man was arrested in Scio Farms Estates June 20 after running from sheriff's deputies. Deputies and Scio Township firefighters had been called to the area initially for a report that the man had poured radiator fluid from a vehicle into a storm drain. The material was determined to be non-hazardous, but the man had a warrant for domestic assault in Marquette.

The suspect ran when a deputy tried to handcuff him. He fell to the ground and looked as though he might try to kick the deputy, so the deputy tried to spray him with a face irritant, according to the deputy's report. The deputy accidentally sprayed himself in the face, however, and the suspect ran off again.

More deputies arrived and created a perimeter to locate the suspect. They eventually found the man at his residence. He was taken to jail.

Drunken Driving

A man was arrested and jailed June 18 after a breath test showed his blood-alcohol level to be 0.29 percent. A level of .08 percent or higher is considered legally drunk under state law.

Property Damage

A mailbox in the 8000 block of Scio Church Road had gray paint poured into it. A woman at the home said two girls who had been giving her daughter a hard time may have done the damage.

A deputy questioned the parents of the girls and the principal of their school, but were unable to link the girls with the vandalism.

Dexter Village

Domestic Violence

A married couple got into an argument June 15 when, according to a report, the wife smoked a cigarette, despite promising to quit. Both had been drinking vodka that day, according to a police report.

The man reportedly threatened to kill himself, put a gun to his head and pulled the trigger, but the gun was not loaded. Then he threatened to kill his wife when she ran to a telephone.

The woman managed to call 911 and her husband left the house. She told police that her husband had never had a similar outburst, had no criminal history and had never hurt her, but he had been drinking more alcohol and taking medication for mood swings.

Larceny

A Dexter High School teacher reported to police that a student stole a wallet from her purse. The student admitted to stealing a bottle of rum from Country Market prior to stealing the wallet. The teen used the teacher's credit cards to buy a marijuana bong, a pipe and prescription medication on the Internet.

A resident on Ann Arbor Street reported 30 plastic flamingos stolen from her lawn June 18.

Webster Township

Domestic Assault

A woman told police that her husband returned home with two bottles of liquor in his hands and began kicking at her. She said he threatened to kill her and left their home when she called police.

Compiled by staff writers Steve Ricci and Gary Anglebrandt based on reports filed with the Chelsea Police Department, the Washtenaw County Sheriff's Office and the Michigan State Police.

Buried treasure sparks interest in our history

Some day our landfills will be treasure troves for future archeologists.

What we discard today as worthless junk may one day be coveted by sociologists trying to figure out our culture, or at the very least by collectors looking for a scarce item.

James Mush and his wife, Sandy Kay, do not fit into either category. Mush was digging out a stubborn tree root in his back yard in Wyandotte on a warm spring day when he came upon a beer bottle.

Not a big deal really, even though the bottle was 2 or 3 feet in the ground and looked rather old.

"I found the first one and said, 'That's pretty cool,' showed my wife, cleaned it off and went back to digging," Mush recalls. "Then I found another one and said, 'Hey, he's got a friend.' But then there was another one, and another one. That became my job — digging up beer bottles."

The strange thing was that the bottles weren't heaped into a pile, but rather were stacked in rows, opposite of each other in deliberate placement.

Quite a few of them broke, but by the time he finished digging, he had about 200 bottles still intact. They were cleaned, organized and placed in boxes that Mush acquired from a friend who owns a brewery in Detroit.

A handful of the bottles are labeled, but most are not. Brand names embossed in some of the bottles include those from Detroit breweries Stroh and Goebel. Perhaps most notable are four bottles from the Marx Brewery, founded in 1863 in Wyandotte.

But the burning question Mush had was, "Why? Who would bury empty bottles, and for what purpose?"

Mush had his theories, one being that they were buried during Prohibition and the person didn't want to get caught with them. However, a friend tried to convince him that the bottles are not that old, perhaps from the 1950s.

When he called me, the person who immediately came to mind was George Gouth, a retired teacher and local historian with ties to historical societies in both Wyandotte and Taylor.

I telephoned Gouth and told him the story. He talked to Mush, went over to the house and saw the pit where Mush made his discovery. However, no one was home at the time, so he never saw the bottles.

But that didn't prevent Gouth from offering a possible answer to Mush's burning question.

"It sounds like someone had a pile of bottles and the wife said, 'Get rid of this junk,'" Gouth said. "I've talked to other people who have dug up Marx bottles. Most have been empty."

According to Gouth, the Marx Brewery was a major employer in Wyandotte for many years. In Gouth's opinion, its excellent beers and ales were the finest brewed in the state.

During Prohibition, near beers, ginger ales and birch beers were produced. The fact that the brewery went bankrupt in 1936, forcing its closing, could give credence to Mush's theory that the bottles date back to that time period.

Gouth is no stranger to these kinds of calls.

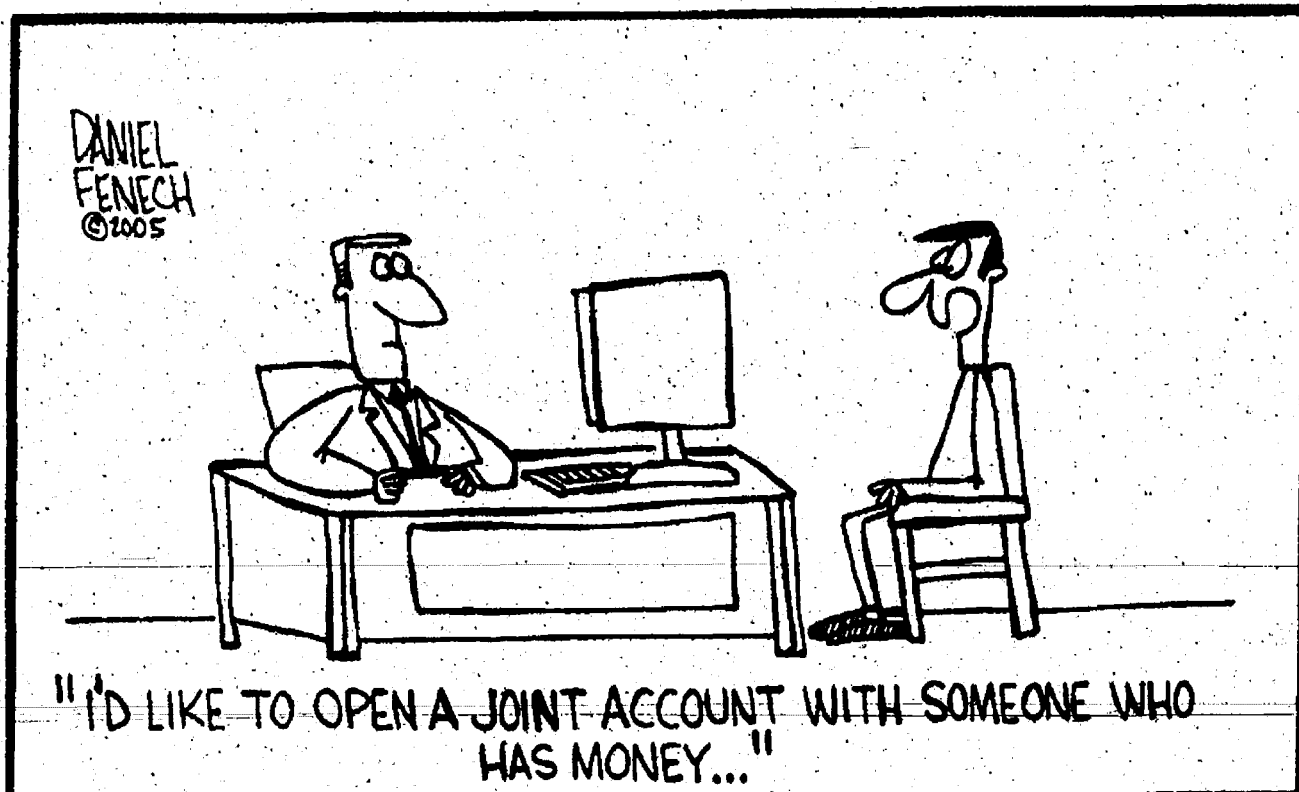

"People dig up all kinds of things in their back yards," he said.

The biggest find of beer bottles, according to Gouth's recollection, came out of the Detroit River near Portofino restaurant when workers were digging out a slip. There were hundreds of them, dumped during the days of Prohibition.

Perhaps the most fun aspect of finds such as these is that it brings out the amateur sleuth in each of us. We want to know as much as we can about the artifact and how it may have gotten there.

For Mush, the answer might never be clear, but one thing's for certain: It brought excitement to the mundane job of digging up a tree root and produced historical keepsakes that provide a link to the past.

Community rallies behind Relay for Life

When I left the office of The Chelsea Standard Friday and drove the short distance to the track at the old high school, I had no clue what I was about to experience.

Rita Fischer, one of our freelance reporters and photographers, approached me about three weeks earlier and said she was forming a Relay for Life team in memory of my late husband, who died last August of colon cancer. I was very touched by the gesture and provided her with a list of people she could contact to walk in the event and donate to the cause.

While we had published preview stories as well as articles reporting the outcome of this annual fundraiser, I had never actually participated. So, I didn't realize the enormity of the event or its impact on people, both physically and emotionally, until I saw it firsthand.

When I arrived at about 3 p.m. Friday to help Rita set up, I was amazed at how organized everything was and the campground-like atmosphere. People had their motor homes, campers and tents set up around the perimeter of the track. Lawn chairs and coolers were in place, and spirits were high despite temperatures in the mid-90s.

At 4:30 p.m., the Survivors and Care Giver Dinner was held in the cafeteria at the Washington Street Education Center. This is where I joined scores of other caregivers and 124 registered cancer survivors as we met Lisa Harvey, a 16-year-old Lima Township girl who battled leukemia after a diagnosis three years ago. Her story and the story of Angie Chastain, the woman from Tennessee who helped save her life, was inspiring.

Chastain donated her bone marrow to Harvey and was among more than 1,300 people at last weekend's event helping to raise money and awareness as part of the American Cancer Society's 10th annual Western Washtenaw Relay for Life.

Harvey's words still ring in my ears and give me hope that all is not lost when one is diagnosed with cancer.

"Because of this angel, I no longer face death every day," she said while speaking at the dinner.

"I believe everything happens for a reason. It's because of these relays and other fund-raisers that bone marrow transplants happen.

"I am so lucky for this gift Angie gave me ... It gives me hope there will be

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Editorial cartoon was racial stereotyping

I am writing in response to the Bill Mangold cartoon in the June 16 Chelsea Standard and Dexter Leader portraying a Mexican complete with hiratchis, sombrero and moustache opposite a neat, suit-clad Caucasian businessman. It showed the Mexican man inquiring about the welfare office, with the statement, "Services for legal and illegal immigrants cost taxpayers over 68 billion per year."

I was dismayed to see such an irresponsible display of racial stereotyping and misinformation.

The benefits of immigrant labor in this country are immeasurable. The figure of $68 billion is wrong. We would not be the wealthy country we are without the economic contributions of labor, taxes and culture. Immigrants have contributed since our inception.

Michigan is host to a large population of migrant workers. We have a choice: We can spread ignorant, deceiving myths that promote hostility and fear, or we can respect and appreciate these workers and as a community help support them and their families.

Most importantly, we can educate ourselves and our children to the historic and present-day importance of immigrant labor's critical contributions to our everyday livelihoods and communities.

To do otherwise is damaging to all communities, and I ask the newspaper to carefully scrutinize and abstain from printing any such messages in the future.

Send items to soldiers who are serving in Iraq
I have a dear friend whose 56-year-old brother-in-law was called out of retirement and sent as a commanding officer to Iraq. He is currently in charge of a group of 500 to 1,000 soldiers.

This is an apolitical request to send CDs and DVDs to him for distribution among his soldiers. These folks are living in weather with 100-degree-plus temperatures and have little to do during their downtime. They do have access to personal CD and DVD players, but nothing to play in them.

Please send your packages to the following address and include a note of encouragement to the brave women and men, if you are so inclined.

Piano Prodigies

David Adrian and Judy Kim of Chelsea earned the distinction of being semi-finalists at Student Achievement Test Day. The event, sponsored by the Ann Arbor Area Piano Teachers Guild, was held March 5 at the University of Michigan School of Music. Both pupils were graded on music theory, sight-reading, piano technique, aural awareness and performance of three memorized piano pieces. The semi-finals were held April 16 at Oakland University. Adrian was a semi-finalist for a second consecutive year. Both are pupils of LaVonne Harris of Chelsea, a Michigan-certified piano teacher and national certified organ teacher. Harris will present a recital for all of her pupils 4 p.m. Sunday at St. Paul United Church of Christ, 14600 Old US-12, in Chelsea.

more survivors."

What she said was inspiring and reflected the spirit of the event as 86 cancer survivors left the cafeteria for the track to participate in the opening ceremony and to walk a victory lap.

At dusk, more than 1,500 luminaria bags representing cancer survivors and those lost to cancer were lit. The sight was emotionally overwhelming and left an indelible impression as relay participants slowly rounded the track looking at each bag, which contained the names and, in some cases, photographs of those being recognized.

Last year, the western Washtenaw group had 27 teams on the track and raised $107,000. Julie Bernardi, the community development director for the relay, said this year that more than $93,000 was raised as of Monday by 30 teams from the area. More is expected as checks continue to come in.

In addition, $19,400 worth of sponsorships were contributed by local businesses, including The Chelsea Standard.

Across the country, three million Relay for Life participants in 4,200 communities are expected to raise millions of dollars this year as part of the fund-raiser, which just marked two decades. The money supports cancer research, patient programs, education and advocacy.

For those who have never been to the Relay for Life, check it out next year. It's a lot of fun, from the lively antics of emcee Art Finger to the many children's activities, the me-based laps, such as the Mardi Gras and Jammies laps, and live music.

The Relay for Life is more than a fund-raiser. It's a time for reflection as we remember those lost to cancer, a time for joy as we celebrate the lives of cancer survivors, ours and our family members, and a time to come together for a good cause.

Surrounded by hundreds of people who experienced the same feelings and hardships I went through was cathartic. Being joined by my family, friends and co-workers as we celebrated my husband's life and the lives of those they lost to cancer was comforting.

"Being joined by my family, friends and co-workers as we celebrated my husband's life and the lives of those they lost to cancer was comforting."

Last weekend, we were no longer victims of cancer and the devastation it leaves in its wake; we were working toward a common goal of raising money to fight it, educate people about it, and eventually eradicate it.

ANN ARBOR

Online resource directory available

Nonprofit Enterprise at Work has launched ResourceConnect, an online resource directory for nonprofit organizations.

A grant from the Ann Arbor Area Community Foundation helps support the endeavor.

The directory includes a wide array of resources, including service providers, Web resources and print resources, all of which are expected to help nonprofits improve management and operational capacity.

ResourceConnect serves as a centralized "one-stop shop" where nonprofit organizations can find resources organized into 23 categories ranging from fundraising to evaluation to volunteer management.

The directory is tailored specifically to Washtenaw County and southeast Michigan nonprofits and includes a mix of local, regional and national resources. Organizations of all sizes, budgets and sub-sectors are expected to be able to find information to meet their needs.

Special features, such as a resource suggestion form, will grow the directory to include the resources that nonprofit organizations find most useful.

Nonprofit Enterprise at Work is based in Ann Arbor. Its mission is to help nonprofits succeed by strengthening nonprofit management and offering solutions to issues facing the nonprofit community.

RELAY

make it, around the track," said Juli Huddleston of Dexter Village, a member of the Dexter Jazzercise team. "It really brings home why we relay."

In addition to raising money in the community by soliciting family, friends, neighbors and co-workers, teams continued to raise funds during the relay by selling handmade items, ice cream and other goods on the track.

Proceeds will be used for cancer research, patient programs, cancer education and advocacy, said Julie Bernardi, community development director for the Relay for Life.

Relay for Life is about hope and the 24 hours represents the unrelenting fight of the cancer patient, Bernardi said.

"I am proud of our teams and committee for not giving up in such harsh conditions," she said. "I am also proud of this community for supporting Relay for Life and all that it stands for."

As of Tuesday, $93,689 had been raised. The figure is expected to climb over the next 30 days as more money comes in. In addition, $19,400 worth of sponsorships was raised from local businesses. That amount is also expected to grow.

There were 124 registered survivors at the event of which 86 walked the survivors victory lap as part of the opening ceremony.

Cancer survivor Lisa Harvey, 16, of Lima Township introduced Angie Chastain of Tennessee who donated bone marrow to save Harvey's life.

"It has been wonderful to be here and get the chance to meet Lisa," Chastain said. "Everyone in Chelsea has been very nice to me."

Chastain and Harvey cut the ribbon Friday to kick off the local event. Under sunshine and blue skies, the track was the hottest it had ever been during the relay.

The luminaria ceremony featured 1,500 bags, filled with sand and candles and decorated with the names of loved ones who are battling cancer or who died of the disease, placed around the track and lit at dusk.

Participants also enjoyed clowns, music, face painting, children's activities, free massages and haircuts, as well as a display of the survivors quilt. Many people camped overnight.

The event has been held in Chelsea for the past 10 years and Art Finger of Sylvan Township has served as emcee since its local inception.

The event ended at approximately 4:30 p.m. because of a power outage in the Chelsea area. The staff and committee felt that without running water or working bathrooms conditions were unsafe to continue, Bernardi said. Several years ago, the relay ended early because of a lightning storm.

Diane Matthews, events chairwoman for Chelsea, said there were more activities for participants this year, which likely contributed to its success.

This is her fourth year on the events committee, and she recognized all the volunteers who gave their time.

"Because of them, I keep coming back," she said. "Also, my sister just passed away last year after a six-year fight against cancer, and I thank God I am able to do it."

Dana Emmert of Dexter Township, a member of Team Starkey, said the most memorable part of the event is honoring the survivors and the final lap, which is walked in silence.

"I loved that our children could be a part of this event, as well as see how our community works together with the same goal," she said.

"Art Finger kept reminding us that those with cancer don't give up and neither should we. It was a more challenging relay because we were battling the heat, but knowing the reason we were there got us through it."

Jaymie Jablonski, co-captain of the Silver Sands Beach Club of Silver Maples in Chelsea, marked her second year at the relay. She said the heat made walking difficult, but making it through felt more rewarding as people weathered the challenge.

"I relay because I have lost two family members and a friend to this dreaded disease," she said. "I also have several friends that have beaten it. I'm so grateful that I am able to do it."

"I also think that it's a wonderful experience for my three daughters to have. They are 15, 12 and 10, and I pray that a cure will be found in their lifetime and that they will never lose someone that they love to cancer."

Kim Till, who works at ADP in Ann Arbor and represents the Bosom Buddies team, chairs the media committee. She has been with the relay for three years, and found it amazing that despite the heat, people were still there to raise money.

Angie Chastain (left) of Tennessee stands next to Lisa Harvey of Lima Township. Chastain gave the bone marrow that saved Harvey's life. Both participated in last weekend's Relay for Life in Chelsea.

Till began participating after her mother, Sandy Pietrasz, died June 6, 2001, of cancer. She has lost many other family members to the disease, as well.

"Now, I relay for anyone who has ever heard the words 'You have cancer.' We can't stop the fight, we must continue to raise money to fund the research," she said.

"I am totally amazed at the dedication and devotion of the people in the community. Even in the extreme heat, people were still out on the track walking for a cure."

ORGANIZE THIS

BONNIE EVERDEEN

Get your kitchen in order

This week we're tackling the kitchen. It's the most used room in the house and the catchall for a lot of the clutter.

We all use the counter as the paper holder. It's where the mail goes, as well as school papers, projects and photographs. It's where my kids put their half-eaten candy.

Because we have bar stools at the counter, the kids work on their drawing projects—and their homework there. So, the kitchen isn't just for food preparation. If it were, you wouldn't find me within 10 feet of it because I don't like to cook.

I recommend dividing the kitchen into zones. Put all similar items together, but with some exceptions. I have my pantry organized with a pasta shelf, baking shelf, canned foods and dry foods.

In my cupboards, I have all my items stored together, including glasses, dishes, mugs, candles, towels and spices, as well as bowl drawer and pan drawer. I also have a silverware drawer and an "other utensil" drawer.

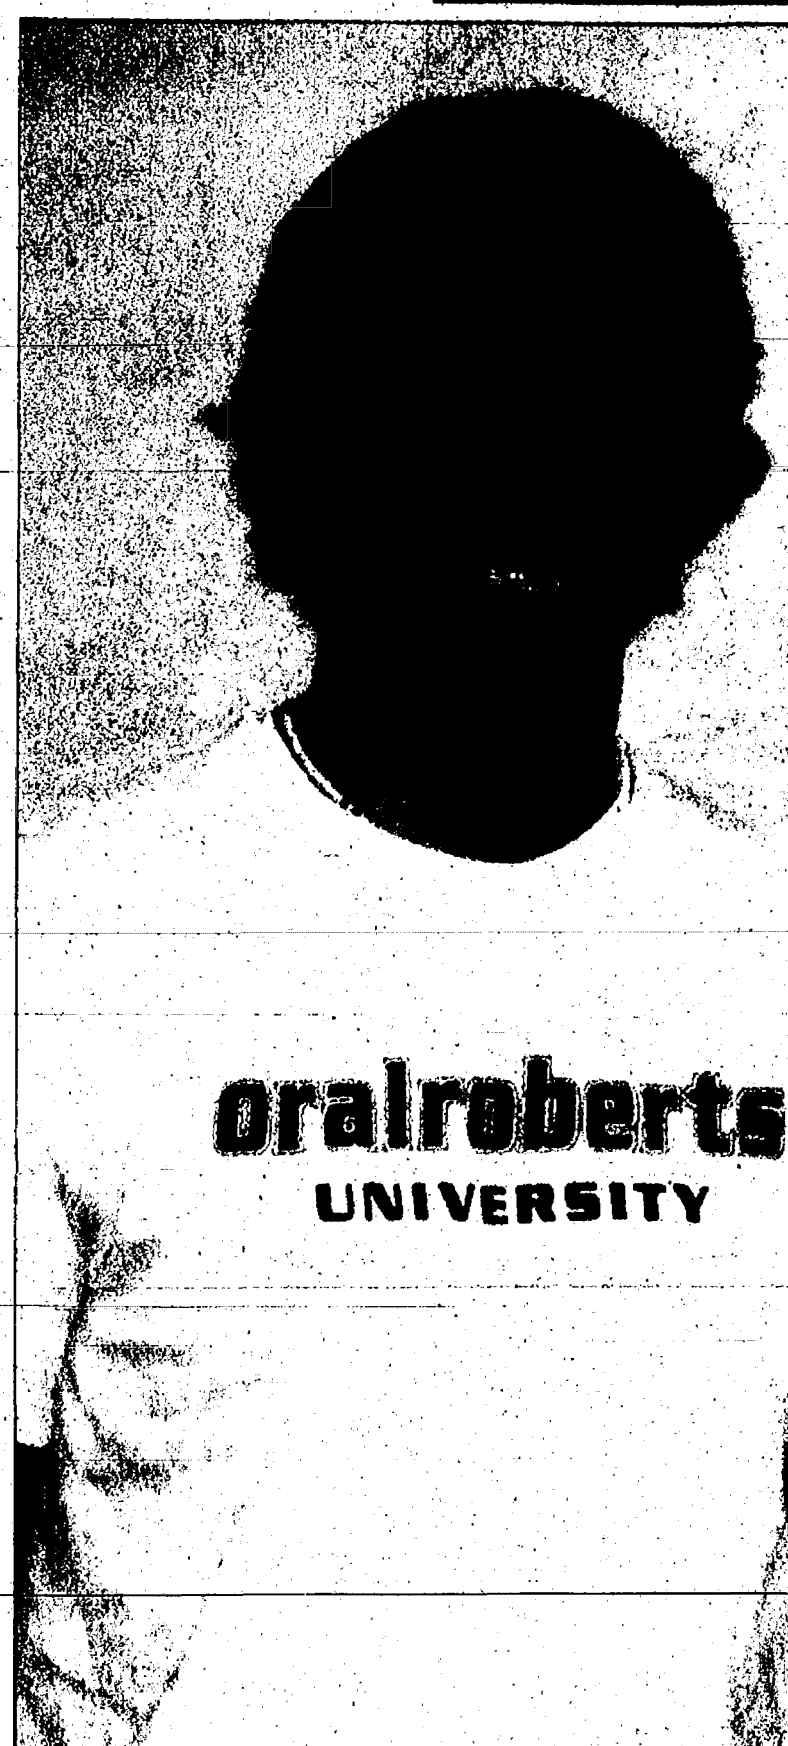

My husband has his own drawer in the kitchen with who knows what in it. It has everything from tools to papers to gum to batteries to flashlights. It's organized the way he wants it, and I leave it alone.

The other zone I have is the coffee cabinet. It has everything I need to make coffee and a few favorite mugs. I also have a drawer that holds the toaster and peanut butter. That gets used a lot.

I have a miniature office in the kitchen with a drawer with pens, pencils, tape, scissors, stapler, personal phone book and city phone books. I actually have a mini-office in every room of the house. Yes, I have paper and pencil in the bathroom. I get all sorts of ideas while drying my hair.

Finding Calling

Mike Groesser is the founder and leader of a ministry for young adults called 40/40. The Chelsea High School graduate has plans to become a minister after college.

Brian Groesser follows in parents' footsteps

By Heather Connor
Staff Writer

For Mike Groesser, becoming a minister was the last thing he wanted to do with his life.

That was until recently. The Chelsea High School graduate has taken an unexpected path in life since leaving the city to attend Oral Roberts University in Tulsa, Okla., two years ago.

In high school, Groesser was the editor of The Bleu Print, the school newspaper, and executive producer of WCHS-TV, a now-defunct in-school station.

A career in multimedia seemed to be the destiny of the "Ted Turner of Chelsea High School," as he was known. But Groesser said that began to change when his mother encouraged him to consider Oral Roberts University.

Groesser, 20, said he was accepted at Syracuse, Northwestern and Central Michigan universities, as well as the University of Michigan. He was leaning toward Syracuse when he checked out the Oral Roberts Web site.

"As soon as I looked it up, I felt a real peace about going there," Groesser said. "They have a real strong commitment to developing the whole man. I felt like it was where God was telling me to go."

Now Groesser is a business administration major with a minor in the New Testament.

The college years often prove to be a time for spiritual exploration for many young adults. Groesser has been no exception, as he is almost positive he will attend Rhema Bible Training Center in Tulsa after he completes college in two years.

As the son of pastors John and Sarah Groesser of Fire Mountain Worship Center in Chelsea, Groesser said he thought for a long time he would not want to follow in his parents' footsteps. Many children of pastors go through that kind of thinking, he said.

"It's funny how I ran away from what God wants me to do for so long," Groesser said.

Groesser said he is unsure what he will do once he is ordained, but his efforts in ministry have already begun. This summer, he is leading his own ministry for young adults called 40/40, referring to the time in the life of Jesus when he spent 40 days and nights in the desert preparing for his ministry.

Groesser said young adults are at a stage in life where they are preparing for what God has planned for their future. The goal of the group is to build up students during the summer so they can return to college ready to impact people, he said.

"We decided early on we didn't want to have a high school youth group," Groesser said. "I think we're mature enough now to do more than just socialize and play games."

The non-denominational group for adults between ages 18 and 24 meets at 8 p.m. every Tuesday in Room 235 of Chelsea High School. Students attend from many different schools, including Eastern Michigan University, Central Michigan University and Grand Valley State University.

The goal of the group is not to evangelize, but to encourage one another and build each other up, Groesser said. Prayers, sharing and a message from Groesser highlight each meeting. He said students from many different religions are a part of the group in which everyone is welcome—even non-believers.

"All we're doing is talking about God. We don't delve into theology. We stick with what's important to us right now," Groesser said. "We come with the common bond that we all love Jesus."

Fletcher has an eye for design

Dexter High School graduate to study interior design this fall

By Heather Connor
Staff Writer

For Corrie Fletcher, her dreams rest in floor plans and furniture stores.

Renovating homes with her parents, Dan and Jeanine, is what helped her get a glimpse of what she would like to do with her life.

Fletcher, a 2005 graduate of Dexter High School, has lived in Dexter her entire life. In the fall, she will head to the University of Cincinnati to pursue studies in interior design.

"At first, I started out wanting to be an art teacher. But, in sixth grade, my parents decided to start renovating properties," Fletcher said. "It just kind of gave me a new perspective on how light and color affects people."

After pursuing four internships last summer to explore both architecture and interior design as potential careers, the latter won out for the enjoyment she gets out of it.

"I just figured that's something I would like to do with my career," Fletcher said. "It has something to do with art, just taking it to a different level."

"I like to see how the final product looks, how color and natural light will look as opposed to the construction of a house. Interior design thrilled me more than architecture did."

Fletcher, who graduated summa cum laude with many awards and scholarships, was a top scholar in German. She also harbours hope of studying or working abroad.

"If I can, I would like to get an internship to Austria, Germany or Switzerland," she said.

The teen surpassed a hurdle last year when her plans fell through to serve as an exchange student in Austria for part of her senior year. By the time she had to change her plans, a lot of the classes she needed at school were full.

Fletcher ended up not taking a fourth year of math and physics, which are required courses for her studies at the University of Cincinnati.

Despite the fact that most interior design schools do not require the classes, Fletcher kept with her plans to go to the university. She took a pre-calculus course at Washtenaw Community College and is also currently making up her physics credit there, as well.

It was what the school offers that kept her going.

"It just felt right," she said. "I like the campus. It's a small enough program where I won't get lost, but large enough for good opportunities."

The interior design program takes a year longer to complete than most undergraduate degrees, but what makes it unique is the fact that Fletcher will have about a year and a half of experience in the field when she graduates.

She will have the opportunity to work in cooperatives in many major cities and even overseas, in addition to her studies.

Fletcher credits her parents and her uncle, Frank Piatkowski, who helped her get the internships last summer, with making the biggest impact on her life so far.

She also said working with Tracy Wolsofer, who holds a degree in interior design, at the high school has helped her tremendously. Her supportive friends and family are too many to name.

WESTERN WASHTENAW COUNTY

Money to benefit school playground

The Western Washtenaw Democratic Party held its first fundraiser Saturday at the Chelsea Depot and saw a large turnout of more than 100 residents.

The event raised more than $3,000, with proceeds benefiting the North Creek Elementary School Parent-Teacher Organization to improve the school's playground equipment.

"We wanted to do something to help the community," Frank Grohnert, chairman of the Western Washtenaw Democrats, said in a press release. "Everyone had a great time, and we were also able to help our neighbors."

State Sen. Liz Brater and state Rep. Pam Byrnes were among those in attendance. Byrnes praised the Western Washtenaw Democrats for its efforts.

"It's great to see so many people out here in support of our local schools," she said. "A lot of time and effort went into this event, and it really shows. The Western Washtenaw Dems deserve a lot of credit."

A silent auction was held to raise additional money, with auction items ranging from a weeklong Hawaiian vacation to a lunch for four at the Capitol in Lansing.

The event featured music by Bigfoot Bob and the Toe Tappers, and food from the West Texas Barbecue Co.

"We were quite happy with the turnout," Grohnert said. He hopes it will become an annual tradition.

Driving Hard

Brandon Bellotti, a fourth-grader at Wylie Elementary School drives a basketball down the court as part of Wylie Field Day activities. The event was held before the end of the school year. Other activities included crafts, science experiments and swimming.

"I have a long list," she said. "There's a lot of people that influenced me in many ways that led me in the direction I am now."

Fletcher said her dream is to own her own interior or furniture design firm and possibly decorate hotels and cruise ships for Disney. But her heart will always be in Dexter.

"I'm sure I will miss it here because it's where I grew up, but I am ready to move on though I've not really known anywhere but Dexter. It's my base camp," she said.

KITCHEN

It's a good time to brainstorm.

Just note that everything should have a place it can be put away, not sitting out and making the counter looked cluttered. And remember, while organizing the kitchen, watch for items you're not using. This is a good time to add to the pile for the garage sale. If you're not a garage-sale-type of person, make a donation pile. Garage sales are a once-a-year event that could make you some decent money.

Players to perform 'Sweeney Todd'

Dexter Community Players starts its new season this summer with Stephen Sondheim's suspense-driven musical thriller "Sweeney Todd."

Based on the 200-year-old horror stories of "The Demon Barber of Fleet Street," this tale entertains with a gruesome plot, astounding score and razor-sharp wit.

The story centers on Sweeney Todd, a barber who returns to London to find the lecherous judge who had him wrongly exiled so he could claim Todd's beautiful wife. Of course the barber's desire for blood doesn't stop with those who wronged him, so he enlists the help of the resourceful pie shop proprietor downstairs. Soon people are lining up to get a taste of Nellie Lovett's mysterious new meat pie recipe.

For all the gore, the musical, created by Stephen Sondheim and Hugh Wheeler, has endearing times and more than a few comic moments.

The production will be directed by Jason Smith, who, though a veteran director, is a relative newcomer to the Dexter theater scene. He played Bernardo in the group's production of "West Side Story" last summer.

Dexter native Bridgit Rutz will serve as music director of a cast of actors who hail from all across the Southeast Michigan area.

Performances are set 8 p.m. July 22, 23, 28, 29 and 30, as well as 2 p.m. July 24 in Dexter's Copeland Auditorium. Tickets are $8 for seniors and students, and $12 for adults. They are available at the Dexter District Library or online at www.dextercommunityplayers.com.

DAY-TRIP DESTINATION

The 8-mile-long James S. Miner Bicycle/River Walk connects the communities of Owosso and Corunna.

Town offers history, art, nature and rail cars

By Patricia Majher
Special Writer

What's the first thing you think of when you hear the name "Owosso"? If you're familiar with this Michigan city at all, you probably know that it contains a place called Curwood Castle.

"Castle" is a bit of a misnomer; the structure is more the size of a gatehouse. But it's still a must-see stop for anyone who visits this community of 15,000 located 25 miles west of Flint.

The castle was the working studio of Owosso native and author James Oliver Curwood. A contemporary of Jack London, Curwood wrote adventure novels and short stories about life in the north woods.

In 1922, at the height of his career, he had the castle constructed so he could work uninterrupted outside his home. Today, the building — with its original draperies and furniture, as well as a library of his works — is operated as a museum. Its hours are from 1 to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Sunday year-round.

During the first weekend in June, the author is celebrated at a Curwood Festival. Events include an arts-and-crafts show, river races, a hometown parade and more. For details about the 2005 festival, check out the Web site www.shianet.org/community/curwood.

Just south of the castle is another museum — this one devoted to art. The Shiawassee Arts Center showcases the work of area, state and national artists, and also serves the art education needs of county residents.

Chief among its attractions is a special gallery dedicated to Frederick Frieseke, an Impressionist painter and another Owosso native.

Frieseke, who was fascinated by sunlight and vivid colors, enjoyed a fair amount of fame in his lifetime, and his paintings still adorn the walls of such institutions as the National Gallery and the Corcoran in Washington, D.C., and the Musee d'Art Americain in Giverny, France.

A third native son, who made his mark in the world of politics, was Thomas Dewey. In his middle years, Dewey served as the governor of New York and was the Republican nominee for president in 1944 and 1948.

Dewey's boyhood home at 421 W. Oliver St. is a stop on a walking tour of old homes prepared by the Owosso Historical Commission. At 100 W. Oliver St., you'll find the Amos Gould House, an impressive Italianate structure that may be viewed from 1 to 5 p.m. on Sundays May through December.

Many of the home on the walking tour overlook the Shiawassee River, a scenic waterway that connects Owosso with its southern neighbor, Corunna. Also connecting the two communities is the 8-mile-long James S. Miner Bicycle/River Walk, an all-seasons recreational resource.

The River Walk passes directly through Owosso's downtown, close to several enjoyable eateries, including the Sassy Sandwich and Risto's Bistro. Around the corner from the bistro, on Exchange Street, you'll find an eclectic mix of businesses, including the Book Mark bookstore and an old-fashioned five-and-dime called Springgrove Variety. On my last visit, nonpareil candy was just $1.99 a pound for sale there.

On the other side of Main Street may be the city's most unique attraction of all. The Steam Railroading Institute, 405 S. Washington St., includes a museum, visitor's center, steam-era railroad displays, a model railroad setup and archives all under one roof. Among its rolling stock are a Pullman sleeper and passenger coach, a boxcar, a combine car and a caboose. The institute also owns two old locomotives: the Flagg Coal 75 and the Pere Marquette 1225. The 1225 recently attained movie star status. It was used as the model for the engine in the animated feature film "The Polar Express."

The institute regularly offers an "Engineer for an Hour" training program for adults and a rail camp for kids.

For more information on the Steam Railroading Institute, check out its Web site at www.mstrp.com.

'Mr. Diabetes' spreading the word on health topic

Florida man has walked across the United States raising awareness

By Joe Slezak
Heritage Newspapers

Step by step, Andy Mandell is trying to generate public awareness about diabetes.

Since 2000, the self-proclaimed "Mr. Diabetes" has taken a lot of steps — about 6,500 miles worth.

Mandell, who has type II diabetes, is executive director of the Defeat Diabetes Foundation Inc. and is on a mission to walk around the perimeter of the United States through his "Mr. Diabetes Wake Up and Walk Tour." He arrived in the Detroit area a couple weeks ago and was planning to head to Toledo, Ohio.

When it's all said and done, Mandell's journey is scheduled to cover more than 10,000 miles and about 20 million steps over a seven-year span.

"This is what I can do, so this is what I do," Mandell, 60, said.

Mandell was born and raised in the Boston area and eventually moved to the Tampa Bay area. The foundation, founded in 1980, is based in Madeira Beach, Fla.

He was athletic and active, though admittedly not athletically gifted ("mediocrity with gusto," he said), as a triathlete and a black belt in shaolin kempo karate. But 20 years ago, he was diagnosed with type II diabetes and things got progressively worse. From March 1996 to July 1998, he was bedridden because of neuropathy, or nerve damage in his legs.

"The dimensions of pain can be severe," Mandell said.

Leading up to that time, he was unemployed, facing the choice of buying food or medicine.

It was during the time Mandell was bedridden that he formulated the plan for the foundation, which his brother, Jerry, runs today. He also figured that he wanted to run across Florida — a marathon a day for eight days — to promote diabetes awareness once he got better.

But, because of the permanent nerve damage in his legs (he still has numbness), running was out of the question. And, while getting back into shape, he started losing weight, a warning sign of diabetes.

So, he turned to Plan B.

"I discovered the joys of walking," Mandell said.

In December 2000, he walked 450 miles, from Madeira Beach to Pensacola, Fla., to see if he could do it. After undergoing surgery on both eyes to address diabetic retinopathy, the bigger journey began.

On Jan. 15, 2002, he left Pensacola and headed west, arriving in San Diego that October and in Seattle in September 2003. He then turned east, eventually walking through Chicago before arriving in Detroit via US-12. He had planned to leave Detroit for Toledo via Telegraph Road (US-24).

"Michigan has been a wonderful state," Mandell said. "This place is as green and lush as any place you've seen. The air quality is absolutely delicious."

After an eventual side trip to Toronto, where insulin was invented for the treatment of diabetes, his goal is to arrive in Portland, Maine, in late August or early September, and get to Boston in October. He's planning to arrive in the Florida Keys in late 2006 or early 2007, and then return to Madeira Beach.

He's been invited to walk across Europe and Japan and participate in a 40-mile Santa Catalina Island, Calif., swim once this journey ends. Or, he said he just might go fishing.

Mandell walks 10 to 15 miles a day while being trailed in a vehicle driven by tour manager Steve Hopf, who has supplies like first-aid equipment and insulin. Mandell carries a walkie-talkie and a cell phone, and uses a walking stick.

Mandell takes just one injection of Lantus, an organic insulin, a day, after formerly having to inject insulin every six hours. He still checks his blood sugar six to 10 times a day.

As part of his journey, Mandell has given away about 33,000 brochures that contain information about diabetes and a written screening test to determine if a person

Artful Visit

Artist-in-Residence Kay Stefanski recently visited the studio art class at Mill Creek Middle School to demonstrate how to create Japanese Temari Balls. These traditional thread-covered balls make use of patterns to create colorful designs. The Education Foundation of Dexter subsidized four artists to show how students can make a living through fine art as part of the Artist-in-Residence program. Other invited artists were Norma Penchansky-Glasser, a sculptor; Jean Lau, a pastel artist and printmaker; and David Bona, a local architect.

Protect pets in hot weather

Keep your animal companions inside

By Emily Burton
Heritage Newspapers

Summer days mean freedom, adventure, fun and time outdoors.

For many people that fun includes bringing the family pet on routine trips and leaving that pet outside for extended periods of time.

But for animals, that fun can turn to agony if they are not properly looked after.

Janey Noel, a licensed veterinary technician, said there are many dangers for animals during the summer months, some obvious and others less so.

One of the biggest dangers is heat. Noel said her office sees several dogs a year suffering from severe heat exhaustion. That is a decrease from previous years because people are becoming more aware of the adverse effects of heat on animals, she said.

Some police department's have animal control officers who bring in these animals after they have been confiscated from an owner's yard.

Large dogs tend to be victims of neglect in these cases more often because they're more apt to be confined to back yards, than, for instance, cats.

Chuck Gillenwater, an animal control officer Downriver, said officers do have the right to confiscate a dog if it's exposed to extreme weather.

"If the dog has no shelter from the sun, no water and no food, we have the right to take the dog and to cite the owner for animal cruelty," he said.

Animal cruelty carries a fine and up to 90 days in jail, depending on the severity of the offense. But, typically, animals are released to their owners. Depending if the pet is again confiscated, the owners may or may not be charged with animal cruelty.

Gillenwater said people should treat their animals as if they were their own children.

should visit a physician.

He said the feedback he has received is "absolutely incredible."

"It's a very energizing thing," Mandell said. "It's important (that) they want to know and they want to share."

"Everywhere, there are diabetics."

The Defeat Diabetes Foundation has compiled statistics from various governmental and health sources that say there are 22 million diabetics in the United States — about half of whom have not been diagnosed. Another 41 million American are "pre-diabetics."

Diabetes is the leading cause of adult blindness, a leading contributor to kidney disease and a leading reason for non-traumatic limb amputations.

More than 200,000 people a year in the United States die from diabetes complications, and the disease reduces life expectancies by 10 to 15 years.

But 75 percent of type II diabetic cases are preventable, Mandell said. That's why he's walking and talking — talking to anybody who will listen.

People have been listening. Earlier this month, he received a congressional proclamation.

"That's the granddaddy of them all," Mandell said.

The most receptive people,

"This is what I can do, so this is what I do."

Andy Mandell
Tampa Bay, Fla.

he said, are children, who ask many good questions, especially when they've seen family members afflicted by diabetes.

"They're an army of people that haven't been tapped," Mandell said.

He added that he wants schools to make lunches healthier, with more fruits, vegetables and whole grains, while getting rid of junk food.

Good nutrition is just part of addressing diabetes — so are getting medical attention and exercising.

A tremendously important medical test, Mandell said, is the A1c, which measures blood sugar levels. For someone without diabetes, the normal range is 4.0 to 6.0; for a diabetic, 7.0 is a realistic target, Mandell said. From there, they should aim for 6.5, and then 6.0. If it goes higher than 7.0, that's a problem. At his sickest, he was above 14.

He also emphasized that diabetics should not be afraid of injecting insulin. It's just a fact of life for diabetics to keep the disease in check.

As far as exercising, Mandell would like to see schools increase their physical fitness requirements.

For the general population, exercise can include many things, from gardening to biking to running — and walking.

"This is definitely what it's about," Mandell said. "We're trying to reach the diabetic community in a way they'll remember us."

you take your child to the store, you take the child in with you; if you take the dog to the store, take it in with you," he said. "If you can't leave it at home."

"If you put the dog out in the yard, check up on it. Don't be an idiot and think the dog will be OK and think he can get his own water. A good pet owner will make sure the dog is OK. It's normal for a pet owner to do that, go by the old adage, 'Dogs are human, too. They just can't speak.'"

Noel said that leaving a pet in a hot car, even with the window rolled down, is not recommended.

"The temperature in the car increases," he said. "You have no air circulation, and the air heats up and the car becomes like an oven you've turned on to preheat."

Animals that are left outside during the summer months need extra attention.

Noel recommends freezing a pan of water, and then placing that ice inside another pan filled with water. This will last longer and keep the pet better hydrated. She further recommends that owners purchase a small pool, fill it with water and place it in the shade. This helps the dog to cool down externally because, unlike humans, dogs have no sweat glands.

A dog that is overheating will show some signs, the most obvious of which is panting.

"A dog's sweating is their drooling and panting through their mouth," Noel said. "That's the only way they can cool off."

She said owners can tell if a dog is dehydrated by feeling the animal's gums. The gums will be red, not pink, and will be tacky or sticky and not wet.

She said animals that exhibit these symptoms should be given water immediately.

Other dangers to animals during the summer months are males running in front of cars when they are chasing females who are in heat.

"The animals become oblivious," Noel said. "They become blind to what is around them."

Also, some dogs may be in danger of being sunburned, particularly dogs with little pigmentation on their noses, and animals with long fur whose owners shave them bald.

She said that while it may seem compassionate to shave them, the fur actually protects them from the sun, and that trimming the fur is preferred.

Also, Noel said owners can apply a lip balm with an SPF of 15 to their pets' noses to keep them from becoming burned.

She also advises owners to beware of letting their pets walk on hot sand, concrete or pavement. Just like humans, those surfaces, when they're hot, can burn animals.

Noel also said her office sees several animals each year that have suffered serious cuts from jumping off the back of boats and becoming caught in the propeller blades.

When on a boat, animals should be kept on a leash, and owners should keep a close eye on them.

If going on a long walk or run, Noel recommends that owners carry a separate canister of water, available at most pet stores, for their four-footed companions.

New hope for cancer patients

A new surgical technique offered at the University of Michigan Comprehensive Cancer Center is helping people with early stage lung cancer recover more quickly with less pain.

The minimally invasive technique involves removing a portion of the lung without cutting large muscles or spreading open the ribs. As a result, patients leave the hospital in half the time of conventional lung surgery, and they can usually return to work in only two weeks.

With a traditional thoracotomy, patients remain in the hospital as long as a week after surgery.

"It's a way of treating cancer with a less invasive procedure that will get patients back to their regular activities sooner," said Dr. Allan Pickens, a thoracic surgeon at the U of M Comprehensive Cancer Center and lecturer in surgery at the U of M Medical School.

Pickens recently completed fellowship training to learn this procedure. Since coming to U of M in January, he has performed about 20 of the procedures, called thoracoscopic lobectomies. U of M is one of a select few centers nationwide offering the procedure.

Traditional lung cancer surgery is a thoracotomy, in which the surgeon cuts through the muscles into the chest and spreads open the ribs to access the lungs. The incision is large, about 20 centimeters, and recovery is slow and painful.

With the new technique, thoracoscopic lobectomy, the surgeon makes three small incisions of 2 centimeters to 4 centimeters each. A camera is inserted through a fourth incision that is only half a centimeter long. The camera allows the surgeon to see inside the chest. Very little muscle is cut and the ribs do not need to be spread.

"Thoracotomy is one of the more painful operations surgeons perform. It cuts into the muscles in a dynamic part of the body, an area that moves a lot from breathing. This makes it harder to heal afterward," Pickens said.

Surgeons are seeing better pulmonary function, a measure of how well a person can take a deep breath, in patients who have the minimally invasive procedure compared to thoracotomy patients. In addition to going home sooner, recovery is easier and requires fewer narcotic painkillers. Initial research suggests cancer survival rates are similar for both procedures.

Thoracoscopic lobectomy is primarily done in patients with stage I or stage II disease, meaning the nodule is smaller than 5 centimeters, has not invaded the chest wall and has not spread to distant organs. More

Musical line-up set for festival

Manchester will come alive in August with music as part of the annual Riverfolk Music and Arts Festival.

Susan Werner will headline the Aug. 6 evening show. Joining Werner are The Glengarry Boys, Nathan and Seth Bernard, Billy Jonas, Matt Watroba and Jukebox Folk, Millish, The Red Mountain White Trash and more.

Werner's main stage set will begin at 9 p.m. and she will present an intimate workshop in the afternoon focusing on song writing.

"Susan performs as an amazing singer," said Mark Palms, festival director. "There's not a moment that goes by in her shows that Susan Werner is not absolutely fantastic."

"She comes out with guns blazing and it doesn't quit until the show is done."

Even Werner's quiet sections are filled with energy and meaning. Her latest recording, "I Can't Be New," is a collection of self-penned tunes that have a smoky, jazzy feeling.

"This is a brilliantly constructed, soulful, and cleverly tender effort by a songwriter and musician in complete command of her gifts," said Palms.

"Her song writing is worldly and literate, and sardonadvanced cancer will still require traditional thoracotomy.

In lung cancer treated with thoracoscopic lobectomy, the entire lobe is removed, called a lobectomy. The same procedure may also be used to remove a portion of the lung, called a wedge resection. In some cases, surgeons can perform a wedge resection to biopsy a nodule, and then proceed if it's cancerous to the full lobectomy at the same time. This may eliminate the need for needle biopsies or additional surgeries. Thoracoscopic lobectomy can be used for any disease of the chest or lung.

Results to date have been positive. Among the first 1,100 patients to receive this surgery, mortality rates were below 1 percent. The most common complication was air leaking through staple lines, a condition that typically resolves on its own.

"This is the way thoracic surgery is moving toward for lung cancer treatment. It's a technology I think in my heart improves medical care," Pickens said.
