LIMA TOWNSHIP

Right-of-way issue heats up

Township faces lawsuit over roads platted in former village

By Jennifer McArdle
Staff Writer

The question of whether rights-of-way still exist in the former village of Harford, now known as Lima Center, may be up to a judge to decide.

A court hearing has been scheduled for this fall in a year-and-a-half long battle between residents and Lima Township regarding the existence of rights-of-way for streets that were platted in the mid-1800s but have not been used for a number of years.

Lima Center consists of two village plats, the village of Lima and the village of Harford. The village of Lima once included three side streets to the west of Lima Center Road and north of Jackson Road. Those three streets no longer exist because they were vacated in Circuit Court, said Ken Unterbrink, Lima Township's supervisor.

But on the other side of Lima Center Road, in the plat of the village of Harford, the streets were never vacated, even though they have not been used and have been replaced by trees and other growth.

"Nothing was ever done in Circuit Court on that plat," Unterbrink said.

In the village of Harford plat, a 66-foot right-of-way is designated for North Street, which extends from Lima Center Road east, parallel to Jackson Road, and runs along the northern property line of the township hall and several residences on Jackson Road.

Rights-of-way are also designated in the plat for West Street, Cross Street and East Street, which each run south from North Street, across Jackson Road, and end at South Street.

According to the plat, the township hall is located on Jackson Road between the area designated for Cross and West streets.

Plans to eventually expand the township hall led to the purchase of a house just east of the township hall. Unterbrink said that although the township does

City manager gets mixed review

Evaluation shows city council concerned about performance

By Jennifer McArdle
Staff Writer

An evaluation of Chelsea's city manager last week resulted in mixed reviews by the Chelsea City Council.

Mayor Ann Feeney said a strong relationship with the business community and good written communication skills were cited as strengths for Chelsea City Manager Michael Steklac during the evaluation June 27, but council members also found many areas in which they feel Steklac needs to show improvement.

The evaluation, based on Steklac's performance in relation to the job duties set forth in the city charter, as well as the goals and objectives of the city council, gave city council members an opportunity to complete an individual performance evaluation form. Each city council member rated the city manager's performance on a scale of 1 to 5 in a variety of categories, with 1 being unsatisfactory and 5 being outstanding. They were also able to provide written comments on each factor.

The forms were compiled by Feeney prior to the city council's closed session review of the evaluation with Steklac. She said Steklac's relationship with the business community has been an asset to the city.

"They love him downtown. He's made contacts with pret-

Youth to present production

Summer workshop teaches students the art of acting

By Jennifer McArdle
Staff Writer

Local youth are gaining a love of acting and next week they'll show off their skills with a performance of "That's Showbiz."

Chelsea Area Players Youth

Theater's Summer Theater Workshop kicked off June 28, offering a summer day camp for youth in second through eighth grade.

The camp ends July 14 with a special performance by the students 7:30 p.m. at Chelsea High School. Doors open at 7 p.m. Tickets for the performance will be on sale at the door for $5.

"That's Showbiz" is a game show that incorporates music from various Broadway musicals. In the show, contestants guess musicals based on short scenes that include a song and dance.

"Each year, we strive to improve the program to better meet the needs of children participating," Tomi Dres, program director, said. "This year in efforts to do so we developed our own show that allows each child the opportunity to be a part of the final performance. We want each child to really feel

Plan to aid in transition

Identification process determines which students are 'at risk'

By Jennifer McArdle
Staff Writer

Since the Chelsea School District announced that it would be closing the Alternative High School earlier this year, staff members have been working on a plan to help transition students from an alternative high school into the traditional high school setting.

Last week, Chelsea High School Assistant Principal Patrick Little presented the plan to the Chelsea Board of Education, along with the referral process to identify students who are "at risk."

The identification process to determine which students are at risk involves a number of steps. Once a parent or teacher becomes concerned about a student's progress, that concern would be brought to a Student Services member. The Student Services team would then discuss the student's issues and come up with recommendations, which could include counseling, changes in curriculum, a special education evaluation, a problem-solving session with staff and family members, or enrollment in the Academic Learning Lab, a pilot course to be implemented for the 2006-07 school year.

The transition from an alternative high school to a model of serving at-risk

Sesi – 60 years in business and counting

Tradition of service, honesty, integrity and caring continues

Sesi Lincoln Mercury Volvo, located in a brand-new facility at 3990 Jackson Road, between Wagner and Zeeb roads, may be a relatively new dealership, but it is backed by a 60-year tradition of service, honesty, integrity and caring.

Sesi Lincoln Mercury Volvo has been in business for 3 years, but the Sesi family's successful business experience dates back to 1946 at its Ypsilanti location.

Now serving its third generation of customers and still treating them like honored members of the family, Sesi's Ypsilanti Lincoln-Mercury-Mazda dealership, located at 950 E. Michigan Ave., is in the top 25 in the nation for vehicle sales among all Lincoln Mercury dealerships and is also among the fastest-growing Mazda dealerships in the nation.

The customer-friendly environment allows Sesi to offer better service to their customers and keeps them coming back for future purchases. More than 75 percent of Sesi's business comes from repeat customers, many of whom are referred by other Sesi customers.

"Our reputation for employees and our customer service are our assets," Sesi says.

Chris Conley, general manager at Sesi's Jackson Road location, is enthusiastic about the new location and the fantastic opportunity service it provides.

"Our service and parts departments have doubled in size," he says. "Even though we're a relatively new dealership, it's important for people to know that we operate under the Sesi family's tradition. Our employees are committed to honesty, integrity and providing excellent customer service."

The sales and service staff has one of the most experienced staffs in the business.

"Our employees stay and our customers keep coming back," says Joseph Sesi, owner of the dealership. "That combination has always led to our success."

The unique aspects of the Ypsilanti dealership, including up front pricing, great deals in financing and dealing with the same person throughout the sale process, have extended to their new Scio Township location as well.

A state-of-the-art facility opened at 3990 Jackson Road in December, offering separate and unique showrooms for Lincoln, Mercury and Volvo brands; customer lounges featuring amenities such as wireless internet, kids' play areas and flat-screen televisions.

Certified Pre-Owned vehicle offers the customer greater peace of mind.

Now that Sesi is selling cars to the children and grandchildren of its original customers, they rely on the trust they have placed with generations.

Preliminary budget reflects cuts

Boosters donation to fund sideline cheerleading program

By Jennifer McArdle
Staff Writer

After slicing $1.5 million from the budget, the Chelsea Board of Education approved a $28 million preliminary budget for the 2006-07 school year last week.

Among the cuts that were made this spring was $90,000 from the athletic department budget, including the elimination of funding of the varsity sideline cheerleading squad. But the program will continue at the school thanks to a contribution from the athletic boosters organization.

"The athletic boosters recently made a $20,000 contribution to the program and that money will be used to reinstate the fall cheer team, some supplies, some entry fees and some lower level contest fees," Teresa Zigman, executive director of business and operations at Chelsea School District, said. "It will also reinstate some weekend travel."

Travel expenses for the athletic department and uniforms were completely eliminated and the athletic department is also facing a 25 percent reduction in supplies, a reduction of time for athletic training on-site, and the elimination of the girls freshman soccer program.

One significant cut in the transportation costs for the athletic department is the elimination of weekend/one way transportation for weekend events.

District-wide cuts also included $40,000 in reductions in library staffing.

Other reductions in expenditures included a $130,000 cut in teaching and office supplies, a $90,000 reduction in budgeted professional development and a $100,000 cut in curriculum expenditures.

Zigman said the district is doing what it can to ensure the cuts do not have an impact on the quality of education offered.

"Any time we cut any (professional development) or supplies from classrooms it has an impact. However, our goal is to maintain our student-to-teacher ratio so that our students have the benefit of learning in an appropriate class size, which we were able to do for the 2006-07 year by trimming in other areas," Zigman said.

Even after making those cuts, which affected every department in the district, the Chelsea school board still dipped into its fund equity for almost $493,000 to balance the budget. The estimated $4.1 million fund equity is expected to drop to $3.6 million by June 30, 2007.

Contributing factors to this year's $2.1 million budget shortfall included an expected decline in student enrollment and increases in expenses such as utility costs. An anticipated loss of approximately 40 students translates into $290,000 less revenue for the year, as more students graduate this year and fewer students enroll in kindergarten.

Increases in expenditures for next school year include $240,000 in retirement expenses, $350,000 increase in health insurance costs, a $400,000 rise in salaries based on a 2 percent increase and a 15 percent increase in utility costs.

In the spring, the school district issued lay-off notices to three teachers in an effort to balance the budget, but after receiving a number of resignations, requests for transfers and leaves of absence, the school board was able to rescind those layoffs.

REVIEW

ty good success," Feeney said.

Feeney said Steklac has done very well in the area of written communication, but some members of the city council felt he could improve his verbal skills. She also noted that Steklac has been a great fiscal manager and a good custodian of the city's assets.

Feeney said the city council felt that Steklac has been good about meeting with the public. According to the evaluation, the majority of the city council members felt that Steklac maintains effective relationships with various segments of the community.

But the evaluation shows a harsher view of Steklac's performance.

When it comes to how well Steklac keeps the city council informed on issues that should be addressed, the majority of the city council rated his performance as below their expectations. In the evaluation, Councilman Frank Hammer noted that too often the city council is not provided with important information.

"The issue of privatizing the transfer station came to council by way of gossip and not a report from the manager. The final bid package for this issue was never shared with council. The 'water study' that ended up failing month after month had to (be) extracted out of him. Currently we know nothing of what is going on with the hunt for a supervisor of public works," Hammer said in the evaluation.

Feeney, who admitted she has the advantage of being around the city offices to hear what's going on daily, said Steklac is addressing that concern.

"He's working hard on trying to improve that," Feeney said.

The city manager's progress toward meeting short-term and long-range program goals also fell short, according to the evaluation. The majority of city council members rated Steklac's performance in this category as unsatisfactory or below expectations.

"The city manager has no problem developing goals both long and short term, but I would say he is doing a poor job finalizing most of them," Councilman Jamie Bollinger said in the evaluation.

Another concern expressed by the city council during the evaluation process is that Steklac may be taking on too many other responsibilities outside of his position as city manager, Feeney said. Among his other activities, Steklac has been involved in Summer Fest. Feeney said he will fulfill his responsibilities at Summer Fest this year but may step back from that role in the future.

But Feeney believes some remarks about Steklac's performance were unfair.

"Some of the comments by the city council were very harsh. They were pretty extreme," Feeney said. Low morale among city employees was cited in the city manager's evaluation. Most of the city council agreed that Steklac is doing an unsatisfactory job of fostering a feeling of unity and enthusiasm among the city's staff. Steklac's management style was cited as a concern.

The city council also noted that Steklac could improve his organizational skills.

Steklac's overall rating by the city council showed two council members rated his performance as unsatisfactory, while two council members rated his performance at below expectations.

"Over the last 15 months, the manager's performance has fallen from the quality exhibited during the first year," Councilwoman Cheri Albertson said in the evaluation.

Hammer's evaluation of Steklac was even more critical.

"The average of my ratings is just under 2. However, if the questions were weighted by importance of city management, I would suggest that my score would be no higher than 1.2 at best. It is my suggestion that Mike be told at the end of this process that his contract will not be renewed," Hammer said in the evaluation. Feeney said Steklac responded well to the concerns expressed during the evaluation process and in many cases was able to explain his position on the issues.

"Overall he's done a good job. He's had a lot to deal with," Feeney said.

Art project provides plenty of opportunities

The Chelsea Center for the Arts is opening all sorts of doors this summer with this year's community public art project, "Opening Doors: A Community Celebration of McKune Memorial Library."

The project celebrates the grand re-opening of Chelsea's downtown library and brings artists and local residents together to creatively explore how libraries and learning spark creativity and imagination in people and communities.

The project is funded in part with a $12,000 Community pARTners: Artists-in-Residence grant from the Michigan Association of Community Arts Agencies with support from the Michigan Council for the Arts and Cultural Affairs.

The program is designed to bring artists and communities together to explore local issues or celebrate milestones through the process of making art. Community partners for the project include the Chelsea District Library, Chelsea Area Chamber of Commerce, Chelsea Lumber Co., the city of Chelsea, Holbrook Design, River Gallery and Sleeping Bear Press.

New and recycled doors will be used as the canvases for the artwork and the completed doors will be assembled as an outdoor public art exhibit in downtown Chelsea, and other public gathering spaces in Chelsea.

The exhibit is scheduled for installation in mid-August and will remain in place through September.

To date, 16 artists and 19 community groups and individuals will be involved in creating doors for the project.

"We expect nearly 50 doors to be featured once the exhibit hits the streets," Jennifer Goulet, CCA executive director, said in a prepared statement. "There's been a strong level of community excitement showing Chelsea's creative spirit for these community-based public art projects."

Sixteen local and regional artists have been selected to participate in the project, each offering their own perspective on the theme. The grant requires each artist to be responsible for working collaboratively with the community as part of the project.

In the last month, the CCA has worked with each artist to develop activities that match their creative ideas and skills to activities that will involve people in creating doors for the exhibit.

"There's been a lot of work involved in coordinating with this large group of artists, but it has been so fun to watch their creative energies get to work as they've worked through the process of deciding what to do with their door," Goulet said.

The project opened doors into other communities, as well. It will be the featured community public art project at the ArtZone activity tent, which is an annual part of the Ann Arbor Street Art Fair. During each day of the fair, July 19 through 22, the CCA will host door artists who will lead interactive door art activities with visitors to the Ann Arbor Art Fairs.

Artists to be featured are Cathy Barry July 19; Lynnette Michalik-Staffeld, Penny Olsen and Maribeth Hammer July 20; Christine Kelly-Bentgen July 21; and Candace Pappas July 22.

The CCA also will host other door art activities at Chelsea's summer festivals and events, offering local residents and visitors a chance to "catch the door excitement."

Door artists Marsi Parker Darwin, Sandy Knapp and Leah Newman will conduct art activities with visitors to the CCA's booth at the Chelsea Art Market. The market is a new addition to this year's Sounds and Sights on Thursday Nights, and it will feature artist selling their artwork from 5 to 8 p.m. near the Chelsea Clock Tower.

Chelsea Summer Fest and its Articipation area, featuring artist booths, music and food, also will offer opportunities for people to be part of the door project. Several artists will work with Summer Fest visitors as they design and create their doors for the public art exhibition. Featured artists will include Troy fashion and mural artist Diana Jellinek July 28 and 29, Michalik-Staffeld July 29, and John Schwarz July 28.

CCA summer camps will feature a number of door artists offering kids of all ages an opportunity to join in. Youth art students will have the opportunity to experience the process of working with an artist in a group to design and create a door that will be featured as part of the outdoor exhibition.

Thanks to the grant funding, these camps will be free but advanced registration is required and enrollment is limited. Camps will be held at the CCA, 400 Congdon St., in Chelsea.

For a complete list, call 433-2787 or e-mail Goulet at jennifer@chelseacenterforthearts.org.

students at the high school began over the winter when a study group of teachers, counselors, administrators and support staff was established. Three meetings were held to define the problems, shape solutions, discuss specific student needs and finalize plans for identifying at-risk students and serving them through the Academic Learning Lab.

Little said a lot of thought and preparation has gone into the plans for the Academic Learning Lab, limited in size to 12 students with a staff to student ratio of 1:8.

But some changes may need to be made once teachers and administrators see how well it meets the needs of the students.

"This is something that we really feel like we've researched," Little said. "It is truly a pilot in that we don't know how the students are going to do in it."

Enrollment in the course, open to students in ninth through 12th grades, is determined by a referral process to include students who are at-risk and whose schoolwork is suffering.

Of the 72 students who have been identified by the Student Services team based on a variety of factors, 43 were determined to be eligible for enrollment in the Academic Learning Lab and 38 are enrolled for the fall semester.

Little said the students who were not offered enrollment in the class typically have good grades in school and may not benefit as greatly from the course, which will focus on the development of skills essential for academic success.

The course is intended to help students improve test-taking and studying skills, as well as develop self-monitoring skills and responsibility.

Students may choose to take the course more than once, but they have to apply for enrollment each semester.

Although a number of students who could benefit from the course have already been identified, Little said a checklist has been established to help teachers refer additional students into the Academic Learning Lab.

"We will continue to see new students qualify for the at-risk factors throughout the school year," Little said.

Since early May, individual meetings have been held with students and families to explain the Academic Learning Lab.

not have the money to undertake such a project at this time, future improvements could include an expansion of the township hall and the construction of a fire substation east of the hall.

If the township ever expands and adds a fire substation, Unterbrink said the township intends to use the rights-of-way on Cross Street and North Street as an ingress and egress to the township facilities.

But some neighboring property owners oppose the idea and believe the township's plan to reclaim the right-of-way would result in a loss of property.

Florence Beach and four other Lima Township residents filed a civil lawsuit in 22nd Circuit Court July 26, 2005. Beach is co-owner of the Dwight E. Beach Farm, which borders the right-of-way.

Although she would not comment on any details of the case, Beach said she believes she is following in the footsteps of her father, the late Dwight E. Beach, for whom Beach Middle School is named.

"We would do no less than what our father would do," she said. Other plaintiffs in the lawsuit against the township are Cynthia Guthrie, Lillian Mumaw, Ann Jaekle and Dwight Beach.

The case was scheduled for a non-jury trial June 2, but was adjourned. A settlement conference is slated for Sept. 19, and a new trial date has been set for Oct. 12, 2006.

Lima Township's attorney, Vic Lillich of Reading, Etter and Lillich in Ann Arbor, did not respond to requests for comment on the issue.

CRC, Alzheimer's share anniversary

In a fitting overlap, this is the centennial year for United Methodist Retirement Communities (UMRC) and also the 100th anniversary of a medical breakthrough in understanding progressive memory loss. In 1906, when construction began on the Chelsea landmark that grew into UMRC, German neurologist Alois Alzheimer first described what became known as Alzheimer's disease.

The parallel timing is apt because the Chelsea campus has provided a model for dementia care since the 1980s. Geriatric care professionals from UMRC and the University of Michigan developed pacesetter approaches to comfort, support and house residents with Alzheimer's.

Doctors now understand that the disease involves a loss of nerve cells in areas of the brain vital to memory, reasoning, comprehension and language. Until the 1980s, however, the symptoms were blamed on aging and "senility." And, still today, specialists cannot prevent, cure or specify the cause of Alzheimer's. They do know the risk rises with age — with the disease affecting just 5 percent of 65-year-olds, but 50 percent of those who are 85.

Visionary caregivers at the growing retirement community on West Middle Street recognized the value of a therapeutic environment. In 1983, Wesley Hall was dedicated, on the campus of Chelsea Retirement Community, to provide individualized care for 28 residents with fading memories — becoming the first residential memory loss care unit in the United States and a model for future programs around the country.

They benefited from a family-like atmosphere, flexible schedules, special programming, intensive staff training, visual cues that stimulate awareness and strategies to support their remaining capacities. Positive results led to similar approaches at Boulevard Temple, UMRC's Detroit residence.

Ahead of Trend Both sites during the 1980s were among the first in Michigan to reduce physical restraints that held some elderly people in wheelchairs, seats or beds. "Safety straps" were eliminated for virtually all residents in Chelsea and the Detroit continuing care center years before a 1990 Medicaid reform law emphasized restraint-free care whenever possible.

Outsiders paid attention to the pioneering work. A 1993 book, Victims of Dementia, described the philosophy behind Wesley Hall and the gains that resulted. "The strategies used seemed to retard the surprisingly rapid general decline that typifies most dementias," wrote William Michael Clemmer, a professor at Siena Heights College, which became Siena Heights University in Adrian, Michigan.

"The people who made Wesley Hall happen," added the author, "were ahead of their time in terms of their focus on proactive change,

Progress at Chelsea Retirement Community included the 2000 opening of Towsley Village, a 72,000-square-foot building with a cozy, home-like setting for 100 residents with Alzheimer's. Four "neighborhood" wings surround a "village square" with a movie theater, chapel, library, hair salon/barber shop, 1940s-style ice cream parlor and physician's office.

client-centeredness and quality of care. Wesley Hall, in its environmental approaches and programming strategies, has shown itself to be very effective in managing the symptoms of dementing illness."

Administrators came from other long-term care organizations to see how they could adapt the breakthroughs. The Institute of Gerontology at the University of Michigan produced training materials based on lessons from Chelsea.

Progress expanded in 2000 with the opening of Towsley Village, a 72,000-square-foot building with a cozy, home-like setting for 100 residents with Alzheimer's. Four "neighborhood" wings surround a "village square" with a movie theater, chapel, library, hair salon/barber shop, 1940s-style ice cream parlor and physician's office.

Residents have private suites, daily activities and freedom to move in a safe, secure, familiar environment. Each wing is designed and decorated to resemble the others, reinforcing the sense of comfort.

"Households" of up to a dozen residents share a living room, kitchen/dining room, den, activity room, secure courtyard and enclosed porches.

Distinguished Benefactors

The distinctive setting is named for Harry A. and Margaret D. Towsley, whose charitable foundation provided $1.5 million for the innovative building. Dr. Towsley, who died in 1993 at age 87, was a University of Michigan Medical School professor. His wife, who died a year later at 88, was a daughter of Dow Chemical Co. founder Herbert Henry Dow.

Another U-M physician upholds this tradition of leadership in Alzheimer's care. Dr. Sid Gilman, a member of the UMRC Heritage Foundation's board of directors, is director of the Michigan Alzheimer's Disease Research Center, established by the university and funded by grants from the National Institutes of Health in 1989. Dr. Gilman's team conducts medical research and promotes effective clinical care practices, which he shares in person with families of Towsley residents.

"We are extremely proud of our role in advancing knowledge for Alzheimer's care and establishing best-practice benchmarks for the profession," said UMRC President and CEO William J. Healy. "It's rewarding to know our work brings comfort not only to our residents, but to countless others."

The 100-year milestone marked by Alzheimer's pioneers worldwide, as well as at United Methodist Retirement Communities, is a reminder of the lasting benefits that flow from innovation, compassion and commitment.

Ten ways to save gas

To save a gallon of gas, you probably need to cut about 22 miles of driving from your week.

Here are 10 of the easiest ways to save.

1. USE MASS TRANSIT

Or carpool. Leaving the car at home and sharing your commute with others can help you reach your gallon-goal very quickly.

2. SLOW DOWN

Research shows that speeding uses more gas. If your average commute includes 20 miles of highway time, and you drive it at 60 mph instead of 70 mph, you'll save approximately 1.3 gallons of gas in a five-day work-week.

3. COMBINE ERRANDS

Need to pick up a prescription, mail a package and go to the bank? Instead of spreading these tasks out over a few trips, do them all at once. Park in a central spot and walk from place to place.

4. SHOP ONLINE

Save the trips to the store, and consider other errands online, such as banking, buying stamps, and paying bills.

5. DRIVE THE SMALL CAR

Do you own a SUV and a fuel-efficient sedan? Take the smaller car on any long trips you can this week.

6. TAKE A HIKE OR RIDE A BIKE

Instead of driving everywhere, lace up your sneakers and get some exercise while you save gas. A bicycle can help you rack up car-free miles even faster.

7. WORK FROM HOME

If you have a job for which working from home is possible, ask the boss if you can pick one day when you and your coworkers can telecommute to save gas. If you are the boss, make it a company-wide project (and be sure everyone makes a pledge online so we can include them in our tally).

8. HAVE A DINNER PARTY

Instead of your usual dinner-and-a-movie Saturday night out, invite your neighbors over for a small dinner party. You'll save the miles to the theater and restaurant — not to mention the money.

9. SHARE SCHOOL RIDES

Instead of picking up your kids from school every day, ask a neighbor with kids in the same school to help. You can each take turns picking up the tykes.

10. KEEP THE TRUNK LIGHT

The heavier the load your car has to carry, the more gas it guzzles. Don't use your trunk for long-term storage.

Synthetic turf planned for football field

Fund-raising efforts to begin this fall for field improvements

By Jennifer McArdle
Staff Writer

Fund-raising to install a new synthetic turf at the Chelsea High School football field could begin this fall.

Representatives of the Football Stadium Committee presented information to the Chelsea school board last week on a proposed project to install synthetic turf on the football field.

The committee originally looked at a larger scale project that would have cost more than $2 million. But a feasibility study of the project, performed by the Breton Group, suggested scaling the project back and waiting until fall 2006 to initiate a fund-raising campaign. The proposed project now only includes the installation of synthetic turf.

Dennis Bauer, who serves on the Football Stadium Committee, said the group received a "favorable proposal" from ProGrass, one of several synthetic turf vendors the committee considered.

Of the estimated $650,000 cost to install the synthetic turf, Bauer said $375,000 already has been pledged toward the project by various donors. The pledges are expected to be paid by July 1, 2007, and $45,000 has already been received.

Fund-raising efforts are expected to begin in the fall.

Potentially, the subsurface could be installed after the fall season, with the turf being laid in the spring.

Bauer said the installation of the synthetic turf won't just benefit the football team, but also other students.

"Right now, with the natural grass surface, we're very limited with the amount of time we can spend on that surface," Bauer said.

The band, he said, currently practices off the field, but the synthetic turf would make it possible for the band to practice on the football field.

Maintenance of the turf would be minimal. Bauer said the school may have to periodically comb the surface to raise up the infill.

Superintendent Dave Killips said the school district is not expected to contribute to the project.

"This is all privately raised funds," he said.

The life of the turf could be as long as 12 years or more, and the cost of replacement would only be about half of what the initial installation will cost.

Killips said the district could plan to set aside funds to pay for the replacement of the turf down the road.

Resident attends leadership training

Michelle McClellan, vice president of Preservation Chelsea, was among the participants attending a program for community leaders who are in positions to influence preservation activities in their states, regions, towns and neighborhoods.

The weeklong program took place in Nebraska City, Neb., June 10 through 17. The city served as a "living laboratory," where participants studied issues related to the 1929 Nebraska City Memorial Building, constructed to honor the World War I veterans in Nebraska City. Participants also made recommendations for its future use and preservation.

Preservation Leadership Training emphasizes the most up-to-date, effective preservation techniques, including training in current preservation practices, issues and action strategies. The sessions included classroom lectures, tours, team projects, role playing and participatory experiences. National, state and local experts in preservation and organizational development comprised the workshop faculty, giving the 34 participants a balanced national perspective and a network of statewide and local resources for the future.

The workshop was co-sponsored by the National Trust for Historic Preservation and Nebraska Lied Main Street Program. It was made possible with support of The Gifford Foundation and the Nebraska State Historical Society Foundation. Support was also provided by the Farmers Bank and Trust Co. in Nebraska City.

LETTERS

Support American labor and products

I am responding to Bob Turner's letter to the editor ("Manufacturing in the U.S. too expensive") published June 22. Mr. Turner, president of the Chelsea Teddy Bear Co., issued a response to a letter the week before about his factory, which doesn't make teddy bears in Chelsea.

The way that I read his response is that he has all of his product line built and assembled in China to cut consumer cost.

I am sure that there are a lot of people who look at bottom-line cost when buying a product.

I tried to imagine how much it would cost to make a teddy bear. I probably can come up with marketing and shipping cost per bear. When you factor in the material and labor from China and ship it back to the United States, I believe that the only thing that you can get cheaper is the labor cost.

How much are these people in China paid to make these bears? How many hours a day or week do they work? What is the age requirement to work in this factory?

If I decide to order a teddy bear for a loved one, you can bet that I now will be looking for that bear to be "Made in the USA."

Also, I read in the Chelsea newspaper that this same company was planning on giving out 10,000 flag gifts for our Fourth of July holiday. Hopefully, an American product was used for this great giveaway.

I was flying and waving our stars and stripes this holiday celebration to acknowledge our great Independence with an eye out for the American label.

Factory farming is barbaric, should stop

I have recently become aware of a shocking example of the cruelty of factory farming: the pig "farrowing" crate.

The farrowing crate is a metal cage in which sows are confined a week before giving birth and remain imprisoned until their piglets are 3 to 4 weeks old. The crate is so small that the sows cannot even turn around, and it rubs against their skin.

After their piglets are born, their mothers are unable either to reach them if they choose, or escape their attention if they need to.

For more than 30 days, the sows remain in this cage.

Granholt, Millikens play political games

Even though he's been out of office for more than 20 years, when former Republican Gov. William Milliken speaks, lots of ears in this town still perk up. That is, with the exception of two ears.

He and Gov. Jennifer Granholm have a disagreement over letting women out of prison.

Milliken believes the sitting governor is the "court of last resort" when it comes to correcting "inequities in the judicial system."

Granholm considered the plight of 14 female inmates after talking with Milliken about them. She made her decision, and women went 0 for 14.

The governor, acting on a recommendation from the parole board, conducted an "exhaustive review," but in the end the clemency arguments "were not compelling enough."

Milliken begs to differ.

"In the interest of justice and fairness ... at least some of them ought to have their sentences commuted," he said.

Reminded that the public does not like early releases, and that the governor was, after all, running for re-election, Milliken is blunt.

"There comes a time when one has to say, 'Politics be damned.' I will do the right thing and I will do it now."

He told Granholm exactly that.

Milliken was quite passionate on the issue of political backbone during the taping of a statewide Public TV broadcast that recently was aired.

Speaking in general and not specifically about Granholm, Milliken noted that to be a good governor, you have to be willing to expend political capital ... to "pay the price," as he put it.

And if one "is not willing to pay that price" he went on, "then that person does not deserve to be in public life."

Lots of ears in this town should be ringing.

And echoing that hard-hitting sentiment is former first lady Helen Milliken. Asked if she shared her husband's concerns about those 14 female prisoners, she was equally direct: "Those women need and deserve to be released."

Did she think the current governor was ducking because of the "politics of the issue?"

Like husband, like wife. "Frankly, I'm afraid that is the basis of the issue, because I think (Granholm) is a fair and an educated person."

Out of fairness, the former first family also was asked to check in on the candidacy of GOP challenger Dick DeVos.

"I have deep concerns," Helen Milliken said. She worries about his pro-life stance and she is ardently pro-choice.

On balance she concludes: "I'm just not certain what he stands for yet. He's made a lot of glowing hopes for the state of Michigan."

She wants details, as does her husband. He will meet with DeVos soon and wants to hear about his stance on the environment, helping the city of Detroit and supporting public education.

Both of the Millikens profess to be undecided in which candidate they will support in the gubernatorial race. But it's obvious they have leanings toward the incumbent.

"She has tried very hard to do a good job," the former governor said, noting the tough economic times that Granholm did not create.

Helen Milliken holds a "very high" assessment of Granholm. So is she leaning toward an endorsement?

She would not say, and neither would her husband.

They have obviously not forgotten how to play the political game.

DeVos plan lacks details right now

The devil is in the details.

That's a message that gubernatorial candidate Dick DeVos must realize if he is to win over voters disenchanted with Gov. Jennifer Granholm this fall.

DeVos brought his "The Michigan Turnaround Plan" road show recently to the editors of The Macomb Daily, a sister publication, complete with a PowerPoint presentation and a slick-looking 64-page catalog of what's wrong in Michigan and what the candidate wants to do.

The assessment: You have our attention, but what are the details of your plan?

We want specifics. It's not enough to state the obvious about the economic and jobs climate in Michigan. It's not enough to claim that you will turn it around.

The people of Michigan deserve to know how you plan to turn it around.

DeVos owes it to the voters to provide those details between now and November. Otherwise, the "Turnaround Plan" amounts to little more than a "trust me because I've run a business" plan.

Voters need concrete specifics, mainly in the form of answers to three key questions: how much will it cost, where will the money come from and how long will it take?

DeVos repeatedly points to his business experience, and says he will use that knowledge to run state government like a business, including shedding wasteful and duplicated spending. But businesses need detailed plans to launch new products. DeVos' plan to date appears headed in the right direction, but we'd like a roadmap telling us how he plans to get us there.

DeVos says he wants to eliminate the Single Business Tax and make Michigan's tax climate more attractive to businesses. He wants to replace the SBT with a more broad-based business tax that doesn't punish companies for growth. Business owners and investors need to know how much that tax will be, and how it will be assessed.

He vows to increase funding for colleges and universities and calls for merit pay for outstanding teachers, along with targeting more state funding for middle school math and science classes. But how will we pay for it? Where is the money going to come from?

DeVos said his plan is a starting point, and that he's willing to accept and try new ideas. That's admirable, but we need to hear his ideas first.

We're listening, but we need to hear much more.

Decision could impact waterways

Supreme Court sends Michigan case back to lower court

By Emily Burton
Heritage Newspapers

In a decision that could have implications nationally on waterways and wetlands, the U.S. Supreme Court remanded a Michigan case back to a lower federal court.

The 5-4 decision divided the justices on the federal Clean Water Act of 1972, saying Congress should redefine the law because little has changed since it was adopted.

Chief Justice John Roberts and Associate Justices Antonin Scalia, Clarence Thomas, Samuel Alito and Anthony Kennedy voted to remand the case.

The dissenting associate justices were John Paul Stevens, David Souter, Ruth Bader Ginsberg and Stephen Breyer.

In the 100-page decision, the court defined federal waterways as those that were permanent, continuously flowing and are not "channels through which water flows intermittently or ephemerally or channels that periodically provide drainage for rainfall."

The justices also said the Army Corps of Engineers' definition of a navigable waterway in the Michigan case would "leave room for regulating drains, ditches and streams remote from any navigable-in-fact water."

In addition, the justices said that the engineers' actions "deliberately sought to extend the definition of 'waters of the United States' to the outer limits of Congress' commerce power."

The case now is headed to federal district court in Detroit.

The two cases, Rapanos v. United States and Carabell v. Army Corps of Engineers, were bound into one case and argued before the court in February.

John Rapanos is a Michigan landowner convicted of illegally filling wetlands to build a shopping center in Macomb County in 1995. He was put on probation and fined $185,000.

Also, Keith and June Carabell have been fighting for decades to construct a condominium development on 19 acres of forested wetland in Chesterfield Township.

The Carabells were issued a permit to go ahead with the development but the Army Corps of Engineers contested the decision and said the wetlands were too important to the neighboring environment.

Both proposed developments lie along tributaries that flow into Lake St. Clair, a federally navigable waterway. So, will the court's decision affect wetland mitigation permits currently awaiting approval by the state Department of Environmental Quality?

Downriver, the proposed mitigation of one acre of wetland in Gibraltar has been controversial for years. A public hearing on the proposed development was held in December, where more than a dozen residents turned out to express contempt for the project.

A preliminary site plan for the western half of the development near Old Fort and Gibraltar roads, where the wetland is, was approved by the City Council in May 2003.

The plan would include the construction of single-family homes and attached condominiums. The units would be constructed on a portion of a flood plain that would have to be excavated and filled.

This means other wetlands would have to be developed to replace the one being filled.

The DEQ defines a wetland as land that is consistently flooded with enough water to support the growth of vegetation and/or aquatic life.

Robert McCann, press secretary for the DEQ, called the court ruling a "mixed bag."

"The court seemed to be somewhat confused as to whether the Clean Water Act was applying in these cases," he said.

McCann said that for now, the DEQ is not making any changes to its wetlands program based on the court's ruling. "We're not ultimately sure how this ruling is going to affect how we administer the wetland program," he said. "We're not making any changes."

He also said the DEQ receives more than 6,000 wetland mitigation permit requests per year and that about 95 percent of those are granted. But, McCann also said, the priority in recent years has been to protect the state's wetland resources.

"The natural wetlands provide a much richer ecology and function much better," he said. "We've lost a lot of our natural wetlands. We don't want to lose any more than we actually have."

Although over the years, many natural wetlands along the Detroit River had been destroyed, the DEQ was trying to halt that kind of obliteration.

"We've seen the trend start to reverse," McCann said. "We're trying to protect wetlands and restore those that have previously been lost along coastal areas along the Detroit River."

able to do nothing but stand up, lie down and eat. Most face a blank wall.

Naturally, mother pigs are restless and active, making nests of twigs for their young; the farrowing crate imprisons them for the crime of being mothers. Then, a month after the piglets are born, they are abruptly removed months before weaning would take place naturally. Their mother is normally re-impregnated just days later.

Animals should never be kept in cages just inches larger than their own bodies. The total frustration of any creature's mothering instincts can never be right.

Sadly, this treatment is typical of factory farming, which puts profit ahead of animal welfare every time. I urge people to stop eating the meat produced in this barbaric way.

How many lives are worth the war in Iraq?

A good debate involves fairness, respect for your adversary, and a foundation in fact. Unfortunately, Maria Vaughan's letter (June 29, 2006) doesn't meet those basic requirements. She aims to tar opponents of the war as somehow disloyal, craven, even indifferent to the murder of American soldiers. That has become a favorite, mean spirited strategy of many supporters of President Bush: suggest that critics of the Iraq war lack the requisite courage and commitment ("cut and run"); worse yet, lack the patriotism to Support Our Troops. (As if all Americans do not.) Such Bush supporters should be held to a simple standard of straightforward honesty.

Ms. Vaughan asserts that war critics are not outraged by the gruesome death of those two American soldiers. She prefers the public display of self-righteous anger to the silent sorrow and shock so many of us feel for the cruel loss of those lives, and for the death of more than 2,500 young men and women in uniform, some 20,000 wounded, and the devastation of a land and a people who posed no palpable threat to us. Evidently, Ms.

Vaughan's "outrage" doesn't cross national boundaries or include faceless people with strange names. Nor is she outraged by the deceptions of the current administration, those endlessly repeated lies, half-truths, and misstatements that coaxed us into this war: nonexistent WMDs; the connection of Iraq to 9/11; the "liberation" of the Iraqi people; the torture of "noncombatants." The full list is a very long one indeed. No administration in history has so tirelessly spun the facts as this one. Yet Maria Vaughan wants to employ still more harsh and aggressive methods in Iraq, tactics which only serve to subvert our noblest values and traditions.

But the most reprehensible aspect of the Vaughan letter is the implication that we should honor the memory of our fallen by spilling still more blood, our own and theirs, in pursuit of a chimerical victory. I am outraged by such a proposition. That was the rationale for the prolonged bloodbaths of World War I and Vietnam, both of which ended through sheer fatigue more than anything else and with little to show for the sacrifice.

Of course we should grieve for the deaths of those two Americans, and for all the soldiers and victims of this futile war. And we should mourn as well the circumstances that fostered the massacres and killings in recent headlines. But had we not "preemptively" invaded Iraq, we would not be debating how many lives are worth it now and just what are the exigencies of war. Thinking on that, my outrage is boundless.

$2 MILLION Pledged to Local Non-Profits

Many local, non-profit organizations are finding support from Todd's Services, Inc.'s (TSI's) Give Back to the Community Program (GBC). The response has been so well received that TSI has raised their pledge from One Million Dollars to TWO Million Dollars. The TWO Million Dollars will continue to support local, non-profit organizations over the next few years.

TSI's Give Back to the Community Program has been very successful to date, donating over $400,000 to local, non-profit organizations. Approaching the half-way mark to one million dollars, TSI met last week to consider the longevity of the program. The owners of TSI reviewed a large stack of thank you notes and discussed the numerous calls from local organizations expressing their need for the program to continue. After much consideration, TSI decided to double their pledge to TWO Million Dollars. Todd LaButte, co-owner of TSI stated, "The appreciation from the non-profit organizations has been so rewarding that we have decided to double our commitment to help support the community." Kurt LaButte, co-owner of TSI commented, "We have met so many wonderful people through this program and we know that the many non-profits in our community is what makes it such a great place to live. We want to continue supporting them."

For TSI, the Give Back to the Community Program has helped them achieve record sales in 2006, and for that Todd and Kurt would like to say thank you for your patronage. The increased sales have allowed TSI to support the community with donations to local non-profits. Organization managers have expressed that they feel the success of the program has been TSI's price guarantee. Local, non-profits are able to bring their supporters and members their best value on landscaping and at the same time generate donations for their organization. It's a win-win for everyone! ## Get fresh food from local farmers

When it comes to food, fresh is best. Foods may be crunchy, colorful, crisp, creamy or raw, so many words can conjure up desirability. But is there anything that says "high quality" more than fresh?

From a nutrition standpoint, vitamins are at their peak right before a food is picked, like the amount of vitamin C in asparagus. The vegetables are at their easiest digestibility also when they are freshest.

You can get some foods that are only a couple hours and a couple miles out of the field in which they grew and were tended. Foods in your local farmers' market and roadside stands are thousands of miles fresher.

Asparagus, rhubarb, herbs, maple syrup and honey are in season now. Berry season will begin soon. These are just a few fresh foods grown for you by local farmers. Let the farmers' market and roadside produce stands help improve the freshness of the food at your meals and in your refrigerator.

NUTRITION SKILLS GAME
(For children 4 to 8 years old)

Give your child $1 and tell them they can buy anything they see as you look at everything in the farmers' market together, as long as it is something you haven't had before, as long as it is purple or as long as it is a fruit for lunch.

Once home, use the food your child chose in a meal as soon as possible.

FARMERS' MARKET
FIBER FINDS

There are two major types of fiber. Insoluble includes sweet potatoes, summer squash, berries, carrots, rhubarb, corn-on-the-cob and greens, while soluble includes apples, pears, peas and legumes.

Play a game of seeking at least two fiber foods at your meals. Examples include succotash (corn and lima beans) or the following recipe with high fiber strawberries and rhubarb:

RECIPE FOR FARMERS' MARKET FIND

Strawberry-Rhubarb Cobbler Filling:

4 cups hulled strawberries
4 cups sliced rhubarb
1/3 cup sugar
1/3 cup honey

TOPPING:

1 1/2 Jiffy Mix
1/2 cup milk
1 t vanilla
4 T melted butter

Cinnamon sugar
Pre-heat oven to 350 degrees.

Mix Filling ingredients in a 9-by-13 baking pan and spread evenly. Prepare Topping ingredients in a small bowl. Mix to clumpy dough and plop onto top of fruit filling. Bake for approximately 35 minutes.

Expand your nutrition resources by being a regular at our local farmers' market. They make it possible for us to have our foods thousands of miles fresher.

bringing innovation

"This summer won't be normal for public libraries across the country, as I've organized what I'm calling the first-ever Rock and Roll Library Tour."

— Bill Harmer

Harmer wants Chelsea library to rock

By Sheila Pursglove
Special Writer

If Bill Harmer gets his way, libraries will no longer be solemn, quiet places. They'll rock.

Harmer, the new head of adult services at the Chelsea District Library, says he's keen on shattering people's misconceptions about libraries and what they have to offer.

"For example, normally, you're asked to keep the volume down at the library. But this summer won't be normal for public libraries across the country, as I've organized what I'm calling the first-ever Rock and Roll Library Tour featuring the Detroit band The High Strung," Harmer said. "Nobody's ever done anything like this before."

"I've set up 60 gigs at public libraries in 42 states. The band blows into town to play a full-set of their rousing Beatlesque jams, patrons will get a firsthand look at making records for major music industry labels, get an insider's view of creating a video for MTV and learn about touring on the road year-round all across the country."

In what Harmer says is sure to be the highlight of this first Rock and Roll Library Tour, at each appearance the band will solicit the audience's help in writing and improvising a song on the spot.

Harmer, a Port Huron native who also has worked at the Farmington Community Library in Farmington Hills and the Baldwin Public Library in Birmingham, set up a similar tour last summer for Michigan public libraries. The goal, he said, was to find "cool, innovative ways" to attract teens to libraries.

Although he thought he would perhaps only get 10 or 12 libraries to sign up, he ended up with 35 on board. From June through August, The High Strung performed every other day at libraries across Michigan.

Last August, in a segment touting the Library Tour, Harmer and the band were featured on National Public Radio's "This American Life."

Married with two young children, Harmer originally worked full time as an editor for the reference publisher Gale Group, whose primary customers are libraries.

"I went to night school to finish my master's in library science and started subbing at libraries in the area," he said. "The rest is history."

Harmer came on board at the Chelsea library April 24.

Harmer says he's "been sworn to secrecy for now" about future programs for the new Chelsea District Library. "But to quote Ed Sullivan, we've got a 'really big show' planned for the public."

"In fact, we've got a number of things lined up that are truly going to knock people's socks off," he said. "This is an unbelievably exciting moment for Chelsea and the staff at the library is really looking forward to showcasing what we have to offer."

One project is a new film and discussion series called "World War II: Generation of Leaders," a program to be led by University of Detroit professor Gregory Sumner. It will be held on Sundays starting Oct. 29. The series will focus on Franklin Delano Roosevelt, George Marshall, Dwight Eisenhower, Douglas MacArthur, Eleanor Roosevelt and Harry Truman.

Harmer also plans to expand the annual Jackie Robinson Art Essay and Poetry Contest. During the winter, he partnered with the Detroit Tigers to promote the contest, designed for Metro Detroit area middle school students to capture the struggles and spirit of baseball legend Jackie Robinson.

"Students are invited to submit original works of art, poetry and essays that are judged by local artists, writers and educators," he said. "I was able to pull in over 300 entries from Oakland County, shattering the record for entries received in previous years."

"This year, my plan is to help spread the contest across the state."

Harmer has quickly made himself at home among the library staff. Youth and Teen Services Librarian Karen Persello said, "Bill has great experience in creating new and unusual library programs for people of all ages and I am thrilled to have someone with his energy and creativity join our staff."

Shawn Personke, the library's community relations and development coordinator, says it's great to work with someone who really believes in and has a passion for what they are doing.

"Bill's got some great ideas for new programs and events," Personke said. "It's going to be great fun to have Bill on our planning team."

Harmer's own top choice from the shelves is "The Brothers Karamazov" by Fyodor Dostoevsky, a book he considers to be "the greatest novel ever written."

"I try to read a lot of contemporary authors, as well, so I'll have something new to talk about with our patrons," he said. "Two recent books come to mind that really knocked me out — 'Dead Fish Museum' by Charles D'Ambrosio and 'As Simple As Snow' by Gregory Galloway. Both are a must-read for everyone who cares about literary writing, and belong on the shelf next to Faulkner and Maxwell Grant."

In his spare time, Harmer enjoys racing sailboats, a passion he's pursued since childhood.

"For the past several years, I've been racing in the Wednesday night series on Lake Erie, sponsored by the Grosse Ile Yacht Club," he said.

"I sail with a couple of other librarians. We may not be the fastest boat in the fleet but we are the most well read."

CHELSEA-DEXTER AREA

FIA launches Adopt-A-Student

Faith In Action has just been awarded a grant from the TCF Employees Fund, which will allow them to initiate a much-desired program to help area kids get off to a good start in school this fall.

Adopt-A-Student, modeled after the longstanding Adopt-A-Family conducted by both FIA and Dexter Family Services, will aim to provide needy participating students from Dexter and Chelsea with a new backpack filled with school supplies and a voucher for a new school outfit to begin the school year.

FIA is hoping to recruit area groups to "adopt" individual kids and shop for the necessary items. "The beginning of the school year is so exciting for kids and they take such pride in coming in with their new things. I always felt sorry for the kids who didn't have the items they were expected to have or that brought in all their old stuff," said Sue Walsh, who recently retired from 30 years of teaching first grade in Dexter.

Retired Chelsea teacher Barbara Brown called it a wonderful program.

"There are always families that have difficulty providing funds and supplies at the beginning of the school year," she said. "And with the cuts in teachers' classroom budgets, kids are being asked to bring in more and more of their own supplies."

To help with the planning, Brown, Walsh and several other Dexter and Chelsea teachers are helping to compile lists of the essential items needed at each grade level.

"We have had limited funds in the past to make sure some of our neediest kids had a new pair of school shoes," Brown said. "But this will be a greatly expanded program that will help out in a much broader way in both Chelsea and Dexter with educational supplies, as well as a new outfit for that first day."

"No one likes to go back to school wearing all the same clothes as last year, and the excitement of these first days can go a long way toward setting the tone for a successful school year."

FIA Director Nancy Paul is hoping that both new and experienced adopters will consider participating.

"The expense of adopting one child might not be prohibitive if spread out over a group of friends, family, church group, book group, or whoever," she said.

Indeed, her greater concern is that summer vacation's activities might make it harder to gather those groups together for the effort.

"Time is of essence and we'd like to be making our confidential matches before the end of July," Paul said.

"We're just so happy these TCF funds presented themselves at a time when we were increasingly concerned for many families having a hard time. We're going to give it a good effort and help as many kids as we can."

The TCF Employees Fund is generated through payroll contributions and awards are given to applicants within the TCF service area.

To sign up to adopt or to discuss signing your kids up for the program, call 475-3305. Limited funds will be available within the scope of the grant for preschool scholarships, as well. To qualify for help, family income must fall within the same guidelines as for free or reduced school lunch.

WASHTENAW COUNTY

Wireless plans move forward

Group selects local communications company for project

By Brian Gougherty
Heritage Newspapers

As of June 15, Washtenaw County is a step closer to receiving wireless Internet service throughout the entire county.

The Wireless Washtenaw Advisory Board met in June to receive a recommendation from the Steering Committee for an Internet service provider for the initiative. The committee recommended 20/20 Communications of Ann Arbor.

After further discussion and public comment, the advisory board approved the recommendation, which was sent to the Washtenaw County Board of Commissioners for consideration July 5.

Also up for decision in July are the locations for three pilot programs — one urban, one suburban and one rural — that the county will be running to test out the new wireless service.

As a result of efforts by the Southwest Washtenaw Council of Governments and local lobbyist Ray Berg, the Manchester area is in a strong position to be selected for the rural pilot program.

Saline is also likely to be chosen for the suburban pilot and Ann Arbor for the urban program, Berg said.

The exact geography and range of the pilot programs have not been determined, Berg said, but a Manchester project would have to show the effectiveness of widespread wireless Internet in both the village and rural settings.

For now, the recommendation for 20/20 Communications to be the private sector partner for Wireless Washtenaw is a huge step for the initiative. At the advisory board meeting, representatives also formed a committee to finalize an agreement with the company.

20/20, a local Wireless Internet Service Provider already offering wireless service from select public infrastructure in the county, was chosen over MichTel Communications, Everywhere, AT&T and IBM bids.

"We are so pleased that a decision has been made here today, and we look forward to working with our partners in implementing these important new services for county residents," said Bill Lockwood of 20/20 Communications.

20/20 Communications' bid is teamed with additional services to be provided by Siemens Communications Group, CenturyTel and BelAir.

It has been a long process since January 2004, when county officials first started organizing the Wireless Washtenaw initiative. Freedom Township resident Ray Berg has been involved in the initiative ever since, focusing on the needs of the southwestern part of the county that lacks adequate high-speed Internet options.

An area that is selected for a pilot program will be provided with wireless Internet within months, if not a full year, earlier than other areas in the county.

Psychic investigator series continues with release of second book

By Brian Cox
Heritage Newspapers

Any good psychic would have seen it coming.

Gilda Joyce, the quirky 13-year-old ghost enthusiast and mystery solver created by author and Washtenaw County native Jennifer Allison, is back in a sequel to her popular debut novel "Gilda Joyce: Psychic Investigator."

In Allison's first book, the witty and wacky Gilda visits a distant cousin in San Francisco only to become embroiled in a mystery surrounding a secret tower that has been locked for 10 years.

"Gilda Joyce: Psychic Investigator" received critical praise and School Library Journal named it one of the best books of 2005.

Now Allison, who grew up in Saline, has completed her young and irrepressible heroine's second adventure, titled of girls who have a disturbing secret to conceal.

Allison earned an English degree from the University of Michigan and eventually moved to Washington, D.C., where she taught English and creative writing to high school students.

"Teaching and writing served each other," she said. "My understanding of the real challenges a writer faces gave me insight into the struggles my students were experiencing in their own work. My connection with students also helped me imagine the concerns of my fictional characters with greater empathy."

Allison took a year off from teaching to complete "Gilda Joyce: The Ladies of the Lake."

Cartoonist earns recognition

Art featured in 2006 'Best Editorial Cartoons of the Year'

By Tom Kirvan
Heritage Newspapers

Poking fun at life in general — and periodically wayward politicians in particular — has become a nationally recognized specialty of Washtenaw County-based cartoonist Dan Fenech.

For the sixth year in a row, Fenech has been featured in the "Best Editorial Cartoons of the Year" in its recently released 2006 edition. He has been a cartoonist for The Saline Reporter for 11 years and has contributed regularly to The Chelsea Standard and The Dexter Leader for many years.

Fenech, who lives in Saline with his wife, Linda Speegle, has two cartoons published in the book edited by Charles Brooks and released by Pelican Publishing Co.

The book includes award-winning cartoons from across the newspaper country, and targets such subjects as the Bush administration, Iraq, natural disasters, Congress, the economy, sports, foreign affairs, politics, society and media/entertainment.

One of Fenech's featured works takes a jab at drilling in the Alaska Wildlife

Refuge, while the other offers a light-hearted look at a young boy hoping to persuade his father to deliver his allowance in Google stock.

"It's an honor to have my work included in 'The Best Editorial Cartoons of the Year,'" Fenech said.

"I would like to congratulate my other colleagues who were also honored. I would also like to thank all of my editors."

A graduate of the University of Michigan, Fenech earned a degree in motion picture directing at U of M.

He is a professional cartoonist, who counts some of the country's major publishers and corporations among his clients.

A past president of the Saline District Library board, Fenech is devoted to providing pro bono work for organizations that promote animal rights and welfare, and also for organizations that promote math and science education.

"I think the role of an editorial cartoonist is to shine a light on important social and political issues," he said. "It's never my intention to try to persuade anyone. Rather, I try to remind people to think for themselves and question everything."

"My guiding principle is that the world would be a better place if we just treated all living creatures with kindness."

Local resident teaches Highland dance

Scottish dances help preserve, celebrate family heritage for Chelsea area residents

By Sheila Pursglove
Special Writer

Heather Allen's childhood was a magical time of celebrating her family's Scottish heritage through Highland dance.

Allen, whose own two children are following in their mother's dancing footsteps, offers local children the same thrill in her Scottish Highland dance classes held at the Chelsea Center for the Arts.

Allen and her brother, the youngest of six siblings, traveled almost every weekend to competitions, mostly throughout Canada.

"These were always so much fun because we met families from all over the place, camped out usually in very small, picturesque communities right at the fairgrounds, went to sleep listening to bagpipe music and were always awakened to bagpipes and the thrill of competing," Allen said.

"There are kids and families from all over the place and it's an experience I want for any child I teach."

Allen's family belonged to the St. Andrew's Society of Detroit. Founded in 1849, the society is dedicated to preserving Scottish heritage through its literature, customs, music, dance and dress, and hosts many events throughout the year. Most, if not all, of these have the St. Andrew's band play and will usually have several dancers perform, Allen said.

"This was always a lot of fun for me while growing up. It was an opportunity to dance in a non-competitive environment and be a part of a very Scottish environment," she said.

"Most attendees dress in various formal-wear like kilts, and eat Scottish dishes like haggis. At that time there were still many Scottish accents and brogues to be heard."

When Allen was young, St. Andrew's Society owned the historic St. Andrew's Hall in Detroit, a structure built by Scottish immigrants as a place to gather, celebrate their heritage and their benevolence to other Scots.

"A typical Saturday for me was to attend a dance class for several hours on the other side of Detroit and then make our way to the hall for bagpipe or drum lessons," said the Chelsea resident. "I only danced, but my brother did both.

"I really look fondly on my youth and my involvement in this part of my heritage. It was a lot of fun for us."

Allen hopes her children will participate Aug. 5 in St. Andrew's 157th annual Highland Games presented at Historic Greenmead in Livonia. Allen also has a dance pupil who is ready for competition.

Allen loves teaching Highland dance, and the opportunity it can give her dance pupils. Although competitive dance is the predominant activity and goal for youngsters involved in Highland dance, there are other venues, she said.

"It's such a thrill for me to have any child interested in this form of dance," she said.

"Scottish dance can be made into whatever these kids seek and that is how I approach my teaching."

It's such a thrill for me to have any child interested in this form of dance. Scottish dance can be made into whatever these kids seek and that is how I approach my teaching.

Heather Allen Dance Instructor

"They can just learn it as an art form, they can present it locally at festivals, dance at the school talent show, dance it for a Girl Scout function, dance the jig for St. Patrick's Day or they can enter the realm of competition."

"It is a fantastic discipline and can be quite beautiful."

Highland dance has its roots in the Scottish military and dates from around the 11th century. The first dances a newcomer learns are the Highland Fling, Sword Dance, Seann Triubhas and Reel.

"All first three dances are very specific in their movements, are done by an independent or sole dancer, and have specific histories related to men in battle or military," Allen said.

The five basic positions in Highland dance are almost a duplicate of those in ballet, she said. "Therefore, many of the dances can look quite balletic, but may lack a feminine approach to dance as these dances were only performed by men until the 1900s."

After mastering the Highland dances, a dancer will progress to the National dances. These are more feminine, Allen said, and include dances like the Scottish Lilt, Flora McDonald Fancy and many more. Dancers usually wear something other than their Highland gear of kilt, hose and jackets or vests.

"There are also two character dances that are probably pretty familiar to most — the Irish Jig and the Sailor's Hornpipe," she said.

To enter a competition, a dancer applies for a Scottish Official Board of Highland Dance card with a signature from a certified

— HIGHLAND DANCING —

A great many tales and legends surround the origins of the Highland Dances. The oldest of these include:

■ The Highland Fling originated as a dance of triumph following victory in battle. It's said to have been inspired by the capers of the stag, the dancer's upraised arms representing the animal's antlers. It should be danced throughout in the same position on the floor, perhaps because originally the Highland Fling was said to have been done on the shield of the clansman.

■ The Sword Dance is the war dance of the Highlander. It was traditionally believed that for the warrior to touch or displace his sword portended evil in the coming fight.

■ Seann Triubhas means without trousers. After the Jacobite Rising of 1745, Highlanders were forbidden to wear their traditional kilt, and had instead to wear trousers. When the ban was lifted in 1782, it's said that the Highlanders danced for joy, kicking off the unwelcome garment.

These dances go back to the 18th century or before and were committed to memory and handed down by word of mouth.

Newer dances that are danced in competition include Highland Liddle, The Sailor's Hornpipe, Barracks Johnnie, Flora MacDonald's Fancy and Scottish Lilt.

For information on Highland dance lessons, call the Chelsea Center for the Arts at 433-2787. Informal summer classes for children ages 6 to 14 last about one hour at a cost of $4 to $6. A regular course schedule will be offered in the fall.

instructor who has been approved by the SOBHD and one of its member groups like the British Association of Teachers of Dance.

Allen is a member of the BATD, as well as the Federation of the U.S. Teachers and Adjudicators. Most U.S. teachers and judges belong to both of these organizations, Allen said, and competitions in the United States are sanctioned and registered by the SOBHD and FUSTA.

Allen cherishes her Scottish roots. Her father had an English, Scottish and Irish heritage, and the English side came to the United States in the 1800s. The Scottish branch of the family owned land and a farm in the 1840s in North Collins, N.Y., which is still in her cousin's family today.

Allen's maiden name is Turnbull, and her ancestors came from the border region between England and Scotland. The name was bestowed on her forefathers by the legendary Scottish king Robert the Bruce.

"Apparently, the family turned the bull away from the king, hence the name Turn and Bull. How factual this is, who knows," she said.

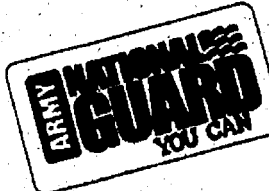

"The family emblem is a bull and reads 'I Saved The King.'"

With the potential development of a mixed use residential and retail complex slated for the site of Tiger Stadium in Detroit, the old ballpark's days appear to be numbered.

Like a lot of people, I have many memories of the stadium at Michigan and Trumbull.

My first recollection of Tiger Stadium as a youth is the drive. My father always took Michigan Avenue to get to the park. For a young boy, the drive, with all of its stoplights, seemed endless. In anticipation of seeing my Tiger heroes, I was bouncing off the backseat walls.

My saving grace was that with every stoplight passed, I knew I was getting closer to the red bricks. And once my father's car hit the red bricks of Michigan Avenue, I knew I was only minutes away from baseball heaven.

For anyone who grew up in the western suburbs and took Michigan Avenue to Tiger Stadium, the red bricks of the street were akin to the fabled yellow brick road that took Dorothy to magical Oz. For once you reached the red bricks, which replaced the pavement on Michigan Avenue a mile or two from the stadium, you knew in a couple of minutes the hulking white outline of the stadium would come into view and all of your baseball dreams would soon be realized.

Even though today most of the red bricks have been paved over, there still is a stretch near the stadium that survives. Despite the current potholes and roughness of the street, whenever I ride over the bricks today and see the stadium, I still feel a tinge of excitement deep in my gut, even though I know baseball is no longer played there.

Another memory is of taking an end-of-year sixth-grade class trip to Tiger Stadium. I don't really remember the game itself, but I do recall sitting on the bus during the trip to the ballpark in front of Kim Franke, my elementary school's most beautiful girl. She was the new student in class who had moved into the district halfway through the school year.

Being basically shy, I had never talked to her during the year. For some reason, throughout the entire ride, she kept tapping my shoulder and giggling, forcing me to turn around. I played along and we ended up talking and getting to know one another. The future Michigan Junior Miss runner-up would become my first real girlfriend a year later in seventh-grade.

Occasionally, when I see the stadium, I think of her and that bus ride and I wonder what she's doing now.

A final memory is from my Easily one of the most recognizable landmarks in Detroit, Tiger Stadium could be just a few months away from demolition. A new documentary film, "Stranded at the Corner," examines the ballpark's "demolition by neglect" over the last seven years.

For nearly a decade, the fate of Tiger Stadium has been an issue of economics, image and strong emotion.

As the old ballpark's fate appears to be coming to a head, award-winning filmmaker Gary Glaser will present his latest documentary of the stadium's "demolition by neglect" since it's closing in 1999.

"Stranded at the Corner" was shown at the Adray Auditorium of Henry Ford Community College in Dearborn last month.

The film premiered April 24 at the Gem Theatre in Detroit. According to Glaser the timing of this screening, coming on the same day as the official announcement of a plan for the Tiger Stadium site, was the result of an educated guess.

"We knew something was going to happen this summer," Glaser said. "We just kind of arbitrarily picked this weekend to have this screening, hoping that it would coincide with some sort of announcement."

Glaser, whose previous Detroit-based documentaries include "The Hudson's Building," "Train Station" and "Borderline: The Story of 8 Mile Road," spent a year making "Stranded at the Corner," written by Richard Bak. It includes interviews with city officials, fans, baseball professionals, hometown Tiger hero Willie Horton, investors and dreamers, with recurring appearances by comedian Thom Sharp.

The film looks at the history of the site, making use of rare archival footage. This is juxtaposed with shots of the ballpark's current abandoned state. Much of the film's focus is on what many consider to be the willful neglect of the stadium while city officials dragged their feet coming up with a plan for the site.

"I'm a lifelong Tiger fan," Glaser said. "That doesn't take away from the fact that the stadium shouldn't have been left to rot."

Over the years, there has been a constant refrain that no one has come forward with a feasible development plan, Glaser said.

"We go a long way to refute that, and we interview several people who presented plans."

One of the interviews is with Harry Glanz of Capitol Mortgage Funding.

"He was pretty vocal about the fact that he's got the money, he's willing to spend the money," Glaser said. "He had a hard time even getting in there to assess the damage. These developers couldn't even get in to take it the next step further."

"It certainly was not a level playing field, no pun intended, with respect to developers attempting to do things with the stadium."

Until recently, most of the public has not seen the inside of Tiger Stadium since the last game was played several years ago. The refusal to allow events in the park was most noticeable last season when Detroit hosted the Major League All-Star Game.

The reason, Glaser contends, is that to open the doors to the stadium would have shown how much it had been allowed to fall apart, and that would have raised questions about the nearly $2.5 million in maintenance fees the city has paid Tigers' owner Mike Ilitch since the park's closure.

Recently released photos show trees growing among the box seats, a flooded visitors' dugout and many other signs of neglect.

"No one expected the stadium would be maintained like the Tigers were going to take the field the next day," Glaser said. "But it was criminal, some people think, to take that money and underperform at the level the Ilitch organization did with respect to maintaining the stadium — $400,000 a year and you couldn't cut down this tree?"

"And the reason they're acting now is because that money has dried up."

Glaser said he doesn't believe there was an overt plan that led to the way things have transpired over the last 6 1/2 years, that it's more the natural result of a relationship between a dysfunctional city and a greedy corporation.

Ilitch declined to be interviewed for the film, as did Detroit's director of planning and development, George Jackson.

Glaser said the film isn't meant to be a knock against Comerica Park, which he rather likes for the most part, nor is it a misguided call to resurrect Tiger Stadium.

"There are some people who are fighting for saving the stadium that are not going to sleep at night until the Tigers come back to Tiger Stadium," he said. "I'm more realistic. That's never going to happen."

"Stranded at the Corner" deals with inactivity during the critical years since the park's closure that have all but assured the stadium could not be saved for any purpose.

The film also has interviews with Scott Martin and Kelly Cavanaugh of the Greater Corktown Development Corp., who developed the plan that appears to be what the city is going with for the site.

If that is the plan that comes to fruition, Glaser said, there is at least the justice that people with a personal interest in Corktown conceived it, and the plan honors the stadium. The venerable ballpark deserves that respect.

"I hope it retains a sizable amount of the field, and not a little 2-by-2 thing with a marker," Glaser said. "There's already too many of those green markers where things used to be in Detroit."

Spring season is over, it's time to breathe

ON THE SIDELINE

DON RICHTER

Okay, time to take a breath. Exhale. Inhale. Exhale.

The spring sports season is over. And what a season it has been for Chelsea and Dexter teams.

The spring sports campaign is always one big blur. In April, it roars in with a vengeance and doesn't let up until the state finals in June. It's three months worth of games packed into one intense two-month stretch.

For Chelsea and Dexter, however, this past spring season was a time to rejoice and marvel at how talented and dedicated their athletes and coaches truly are.

In Dexter, the girls' soccer team dominated foes all year long, reaching the Division II state semifinals before losing to Bloomfield Hills Lahser, ranked No. 1 in the state. The Dreadnaughts ended the season with a 21-2 overall record and a No. 3 state ranking.

On the diamond, Chelsea (28-11) baseball defeated two-time defending state champion Dearborn Divine Child and its stud University of Michigan recruit and Major League baseball draft pick pitcher Alan Oaks, on a late-inning rally that eventually sparked the Bulldogs to the Division II state semifinals. In the semis, Chelsea fell to unbeaten Upper Peninsula power Escanaba 11-5.

In girls' golf, two-time defending state champion Dexter fell one stroke short of making it three straight titles, finishing runner-up to Birmingham Seaholm 675-676. Individually, Dreadnaught junior Katelin Davis placed sixth in the state, with a two-day score of 159 (80-79).

It was a banner year for girls' soccer in the area, as Chelsea's squad had one of its best seasons in memory this past spring. The Bulldogs finished 15-4-0 overall, concluding its season with a heartbreaking, double-overtime 1-0 loss to Dexter in the district semifinals. Chelsea set or tied nine team records this past season. The program also recorded its 100th win this spring campaign.

In boys' tennis, Chelsea placed ninth in the state in Division III, recording eight points. The Bulldogs advanced four players to the state quarterfinals, with singles competitors Josh Stiles and Chris Tapping and doubles partners Eric Dudek and Chris LaDuke playing deep into the state tournament.

In track and field, Dexter's boys' squad finished 10th overall at the Division II state meet, with 21 points. Individually, senior Scott Chevalier placed second in the 100 meters, with a career best time of 10.77. In the 3,200-meter run, the Dreadnaughts had two competitors in the top five, as junior Dan Jackson crossed the line second, in 9:09.93 and sophomore Bobby Aprill fourth, in 9:20.19.

The Dreadnaught girls' track and field team placed 12th at the state meet, with 16 points. Sophomore Becca Pilkerton led Dexter individually, finishing second in the pole vault, clearing a school record 11-feet, 3 inches. Senior Amy Roberts was fifth in the 400-meter run, with a personal best time of 58.44.

Chelsea's boys' track and field team finished eighth overall at the Division II state meet, with 22 points. Pacing the Bulldogs was the 3,200-meter relay foursome of Al Stewart, Ian Girard, Brendan Smith and Riley Feeney, who combined to place first in the event, with a clocking of 8:02.4. Girard ended up third in the 800-meter run, in 1:55.0 and third in the 1,600-meter run, in a school record 4:17.66.

Leading the Bulldog girls' squad was the quartet of Jessica Lodewyk, Rachel Severin, Athena Eyster and Nicole Bougher, who finished fourth, with a personal best time of 9:45.6.

In softball, Chelsea lost to Jackson Lumen Christi 7-5 in a first round Division II district contest. Despite the loss, the Bulldogs ended their season with a 21-15 overall record.

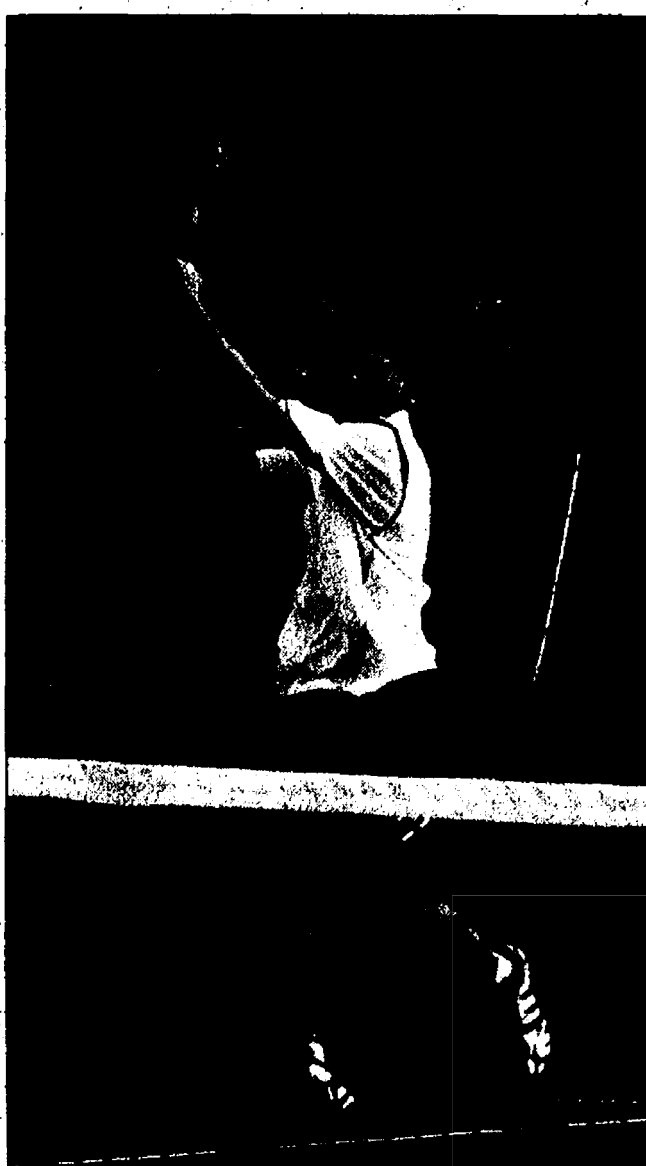

In Dexter, it was a rebuilding season for a young Dreadnaught softball squad, as second-year head coach Shan Cook and her players gained valuable experience this past spring season.

Dexter's girls' water polo team finished the year ranked No. 10 in the state. Senior Kaitlin McMurray led the Dreadnaughts offensively this season with 75 goals.

In girls' golf, Chelsea junior Emily Hardcastle barely missed a top-10 state finish, as she shot a two-day score of 169 (82-87) at the Division II state match at The Meadows Golf Course on the campus of Grand Valley State University.

In baseball, the Dreadnaughts had a strong season, falling 5-4 to Chelsea in the Division II district final. Dexter ended up 14-12 overall on the year.

The Dreadnaught boys' tennis team finished second in the Southeastern Conference White Division, recording seven points. Dexter placed high school and college years when I was a bona fide "Bleacher Creature." The bleachers were the cheapest seats in the stadium. They also were the farthest away from the action, situated a country mile or so from home plate high above centerfield. My three buddies and I sat in every area of the bleachers, but our favorite spot, and the place where we sat most often, was in the top row, as far away from the playing field as one could get. Despite the height, I don't remember thinking I was that far from the action.

My first year sitting in the bleachers was 1984. The Tigers, like they are today, were the best team in baseball. The city and the stadium were alive. The ballpark was always packed. The excitement was palpable, especially in the wild, free-for-all bleachers, where there was no assigned seating and basically no rules. You could sit wherever you wanted, whenever you wanted. It was like one big party every time I ventured up into the bleachers.

It was in the bleachers where I first did the wave. My buddies and I also had our fair share of "ginger ales" in the bleachers. I, along with my friends, also participated in numerous other activities that heretofore will not be further mentioned, thank you, very much. Though it was all harmless fun, being a "Bleacher Creature" will always be one of my fondest memories of my high school/college years.

If Tiger Stadium is ever razed, and the probability of its demise grows stronger every day, it'll be a sad moment for many people, indeed.

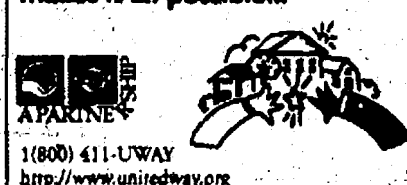

I, however, won't shed a tear.

Though the actual building will be gone, the memories will last forever.

And, to me, that's all that matters.

The Orange County Register thought its readers might like to know about the criminal histories of workers in the state's day-care facilities. After all, the paper's readers were placing their own trust and their children's well-being in the hands of those workers.

But the state of California turned down a series of newspaper Freedom of Information requests to look at those histories, citing the privacy rights of the workers. It also refused access to its data base of offenses and other day-care center violations unless the newspaper paid $45,000 for the information.

In the end, the Register won its fight for access to documents—which were used to track down the criminals and public court records that revealed their histories. The newspaper also built its own data base from nearly 50,000 pages of inspection and complaint reports in Orange County. These efforts allowed the Register to unveil for the state's parents the uncomfortable truth. Throughout California, thousands of day-care workers had long criminal histories. The results of the data base analysis also showed pervasive problems of mistreatment, neglect, overcrowding and unsafe conditions.

If you lived in Orange County, or any other county with day care, wouldn't you like to know whether the adults your children come in contact with have committed crimes?

Alaska Halibut With
Grilled Pineapple,
Chipotle and California
Raisin
Salsa

Reel in the Flavor

FRESH FISH, SAVORY SAUCES

Alaska Halibut With
Grilled Pineapple, Chipotle
and California Raisin Salsa

- 1/2 cup California raisins
- 1/2 cup dark rum
- 1 fresh pineapple, trimmed, cored and sliced 1/2-inch thick*
- Vegetable oil or grapeseed oil, as needed
- 2 chipotle peppers canned in adobo sauce, rinsed, seeded and finely diced
- Juice of 1 lime
- Zest of 1/2 orange
- Juice of 1/2 orange
- 1/4 cup extra-virgin olive oil
- 1 green onion, sliced
- 2 tablespoons finely chopped roasted red pepper
- 2 tablespoons finely chopped cilantro
- Sea salt
- 4 to 6 Alaska halibut steaks or fillets (6 to 8 ounces each)

Lemon pepper seasoning, to taste

Plump raisins in rum 30 minutes; drain. Heat grill to medium-high (400°F). Brush pineapple with oil; grill until lightly caramelized on both sides. Cool slightly and cut into 1/2-inch pieces; place in mixing bowl.

In separate bowl, combine chipotles, lime juice, zest and orange juice. Whisk in olive oil vigorously. Pour over pineapple chunks, fold in green onions, red peppers, cilantro and raisins. Season with sea salt, to taste. Set aside.

Brush halibut with oil. Grill just until fish is opaque throughout, turning once during cooking. Season with lemon pepper and serve with salsa.

Makes 4 to 6 servings

FAMILY FEATURES

Want a delicious new way to enjoy fresh-caught cod, halibut or sole from the cold, clear waters of Alaska? Pair the fish with a salsa, sambal or mousseline containing the flavor of the summer sun — sweet raisins from California.

A sambal is an Indonesian take on salsa, with lemongrass, lime juice and golden raisins. And a French mousseline is paired with sautéed leeks and plumped California raisins. Add a dollop to moist, firm and slightly sweet Alaska cod; naturally lean and light halibut; or delicate, mild and tender-textured Alaska sole — all caught in the wild from sustainable fisheries.

When you reel in the flavor, you'll reel in nutritional benefits too. Alaska seafood is a good source of high-quality protein, vitamins and minerals as well as omega-3 fatty acids, which are not found in many other foods. California raisins are fat- and cholesterol-free, high in antioxidants and an excellent source of dietary fiber.

Pan-Seared Alaska Sole With California Raisin Mousseline

Pan-Seared Alaska Sole With California Raisin Mousseline

- 1 cup California raisins
- 2 cups sliced leeks (about 4 whole), white and light green parts only
- 3 tablespoons olive oil, divided
- 1 package (about 1 ounce) hollandaise sauce mix
- 1 tablespoon heavy cream
- 1/2 teaspoon curry powder, divided
- Salt and pepper
- 4 Alaska sole fillets (3 to 4 ounces each)
- Parsley sprigs, for garnish

Soak raisins in warm water 10 minutes; drain. Sauté leeks and raisins in 2 tablespoons olive oil until leeks are soft, about 5 minutes. Set aside and keep warm.

Prepare hollandaise sauce mix according to package directions. Add heavy cream and 1/4 teaspoon curry powder; season to taste with salt and pepper. Cover and keep warm.

Heat heavy nonstick skillet over medium heat. Add remaining olive oil and sole fillets to pan and cook, uncovered, about 2 minutes, until browned. Gently turn fillets and cook 1 to 2 minutes more, just until fish is opaque throughout. Season fillets with salt and pepper.

To serve, place leeks on serving plate and top with fillets and sauce. Sprinkle with remaining curry powder and garnish with parsley sprigs.

- 2 cups (about 5 medium) shallots, sliced lengthwise
- 2 cloves garlic, very thinly sliced
- 1/3 cup very thinly sliced lemongrass (white part only)
- 1/4 cup peanut oil
- 1/2 cup California golden raisins, divided

- 4 Alaska cod fillets (6 to 8 ounces each)
- Salt and pepper
- 1/4 cup chili sauce

In nonstick pan, sauté shallots, garlic and lemongrass in peanut oil until shallots soften and begin to caramelize. Remove from heat; stir in 1/3 cup raisins and lime juice. Cool slightly.

Preheat oven to 400°F. Prepare 4 squares parchment paper, 12 inches each.

Season cod fillets with salt and pepper; brush both sides with chili sauce and place in center of parchment sheets. Divide and portion sambal onto fillets. Bring edges of parchment together to form packets and fold together to seal.

The Tuscan House's closure last year left many wondering what would become of the 150-year old structure that once was Cousins' Heritage Inn.

The sight of painters, construction workers and lights at the 7854 Ann Arbor Road property until late hours has amused motorists, neighbors and pedestrians passing by.

Project Manager Jackie Scheller notices the anticipation and said that people stop by to ask many questions. They'll get their answer when the restaurant opens its doors on July 14.

Owner Terry Braciszewski, 50, knows that the restaurant business is tough, but believes Terry B's Restaurant and Bar will bring something exceptional to the downtown.

The restaurant underwent a drastic, extensive renovation. Scheller said she couldn't give an estimate on costs.

With Brazilian cherry wood floors, a bright ambience and a custom-built full bar, Braciszewski said the restaurant's motto of "a comfortable place to be" would be obvious when diners walk in the door.

"We can never replace Cousins' Heritage Inn," he said. "We can only offer the area something different."

Architects and designers Terry Alexander and Azadeh Ezati of Ann Arbor-based Alexander & Ezati Architects, Inc. worked to retain the historic value of the Victorian building.

"We tried to be respectful of the historical building," Alexander said.

"We removed the second story to try to make it contemporary."

The impressive metal balcony on top of the bar gives the impression of being in an outside courtyard, Alexander said.

"People will be really impressed with the custom wood and metal works," Scheller said. "It's open space with custom lighting."

Guests will also be surprised to see splashes of yellow and terra-cotta-colored paint.

Chef Brian Jennings said that the menu would be mainly American fare with an eclectic twist.

Jennings, who worked at Ann Arbor Chop House for more than three years, said he's excited about the opening and believes the menu is appealing.

Jennings said that the restaurant's signature dishes would be the house-smoked salmon, the rib eye steak, halibut and eggplant triangles. The featured desserts would be Crème Brulee and the gateau.

Appetizers range from $6 to $9; entrees from $14 to $24; desserts from $4 to $6.

Jennings said that they'd have an extensive wine list. "The restaurant will be geared toward families with live music on the weekends," Scheller said. "It will definitely be a non-smoking atmosphere."

Scheller said operating hours aren't set in stone and will change in the fall.

Summer hours are Tues.-Thurs. from 4 p.m. to 10 p.m.; Fri.-Sat. from 4 p.m. to 11 p.m.; Sun. from 4 p.m. to 11:30 p.m.

"We'll serve dinner for now, but in the fall we'll add a lunch menu," Scheller said. Braciszewski is pleased with the results.

"The restaurant will bring something different to the table," he said. "Residents will see why I'm so proud of it."

Hospital offers oxygen therapy

Treatment used to heal longstanding problems in diabetic patients

By Joe Slezak
Heritage Newspapers

Ron Morrison has been driving from his Westland home to go "diving" six days a week.

Well, it's "diving" from an air-pressure standpoint.

Morrison, 65, actually is undergoing hyperbaric oxygen therapy at Oakwood Heritage Hospital's Mobile Hyperbaric Center, which opened in May.

Morrison, a retired Oakwood Healthcare System nursing administrator, was diagnosed with Type 2 diabetes in 1987 and has a small ulcer on his right foot.

Through 11 treatments, the ulcer's size has decreased by about 50 percent, he said.

"It would appear to me it's a godsend for diabetics with longstanding problems," Morrison said. "We've made tremendous progress."

The hospital had an open house and ribbon cutting for the center June 8.

Hyperbaric oxygen therapy is used to heal wounds and diseases that wouldn't heal otherwise, including foot ulcers caused by diabetes.

Breathing 100 percent oxygen at between two and 2.4 times the atmospheric pressure increases blood-oxygen levels by 20 times. It's the equivalent of scuba diving in 33 to 45 feet of seawater.

Oxygen helps to heal tissue with poor circulation, helps

Cohn named to post

Nonprofit Enterprise at Work has hired Larry Cohn as director of shared services.

Cohn will oversee NEW's shared service program, which will enable nonprofits to achieve greater efficiencies by consolidating their operations with other nonprofits while maintaining their unique organizational identities, according to a press release from the center.

The new director will initially oversee the design and launch of a new technology platform for nonprofits, which will be followed by additional shared services in the future.

After working at a number of high-tech companies, Cohn founded and later sold Image Data Systems, a pioneering company in machine vision technology. Additionally, he co-founded Harbor Benefit Services.

After selling Harbor in 2001, he retired to volunteer full time with nonprofits through Lighthouse Nonprofit Technologies, an organization he founded to build online database systems for other nonprofits.

He also developed a joint online grant application system for those wishing to donate in the Ann Arbor area and is currently designing a database for the Blueprint for Aging, a collaboration of organizations providing services to older adults.

NEW's chief operating officer, Neel Hajra, said the agency is thrilled to have Cohn on staff.

"Larry is a true innovator and entrepreneur whose dedication to nonprofits has spanned decades," Hajra said in a prepared statement. "Nonprofits today face a challenging economic climate, and we believe that Larry and the shared service program will be at the forefront of creating new, affordable and practical solutions to help nonprofits succeed."

NEW's mission is to help nonprofits succeed by strengthening nonprofit management and offering solutions to issues facing the nonprofit community. For more information, call 998-0160 or visit the Web site www.new.org.

HOSPITAL

white blood cells kill bacteria, helps new blood vessels grow and helps the body's natural healing process in general, according to Oakwood literature.

Treatments are two hours at a time, five to six days a week for four to six weeks.

Heritage placed the unit near the emergency room, and the hallway has its own outside entrance.

On one side of the hall, patients have a changing area to switch into cotton gowns; there also are lockers. Under the gowns, patients can only wear cotton underwear and socks. Other types of material are not allowed because of how they react to the oxygen.

Patients undergo a check-up, which is especially important for diabetics, before entering the chamber. The change in pressure sometimes makes blood sugar levels fall, technician Ryan Kurylo said.

Patients then cross the hall to the hyperbaric chamber, which seats 11. Chairs line the two walls, and patients can watch a movie on a flat screen or read a magazine or book, if they like.

"My dive partner and I are very conversational," Morrison said. "We never shut up."

Pressurization takes eight to 15 minutes, and patients usually have to adjust their ear pressure. They then put on a clear plastic hood that has a tube that connects to a wall port so they can breathe 100 percent oxygen for 45 minutes. There's a rubber seal at the hood's bottom.

After a five-minute air break, they spend another 45 minutes breathing 100 percent oxygen in their hoods before a 10- to 15-minute decompression.

Each patient has his or her own hood and water bottle that are cleaned after every use.

One or two technicians operate the controls and monitor the dials and video feeds outside the chamber; another is inside the chamber with the patients. If a doctor isn't also at the monitors, he or she is nearby.

To get to the main chamber, patients must go through a smaller one to which they can be moved if they have a problem in the larger chamber. Emergency repressurization of the main chamber would take three minutes, Kurylo said, but there have been no problems so far.

The chambers and monitoring station actually are a truck trailer that is attached to an outer wall of the hospital. Mobile Hyperbaric Centers Inc. of Cleveland built the unit for nearly $2 million and is responsible for running it.

Heritage spent about $400,000 for utility upgrades, creating the space for the unit and constructing the area across the hall that includes the waiting, changing, checkup, storage and restrooms.

"This is an awesome example of new, excellent health care we provide for people," said Lynn Torossian, Oakwood Heritage Hospital's chief operating officer. "This is proven to help people save limbs."

Drs. Ronald Gordon and Charles Cowap, co-presidents and chief executive officers of Mobile Hyperbaric Centers Inc., attended the ribbon cutting.

They founded the company in 2003, and the Heritage unit is their fifth. The other four are in northeastern Ohio.

"We're Midwest-based, so it only makes sense to come that far to Michigan," Gordon said. "You look for the premium system."

"This system made a commitment to do it right."

The truck portion of the unit was built in Indiana; the oxygen vessel was built in Wisconsin and the controls and compressors were built in Texas. It took six months in Texas to assemble the unit, and it was trucked to Taylor.

The entire unit is 53 feet long, 10 feet wide and weighs 20 tons. The company had to get permits to transport such a large load. Upon arrival, part of the trailer was widened to accommodate the control room.

After a week of state inspections, it was given the green light to operate.

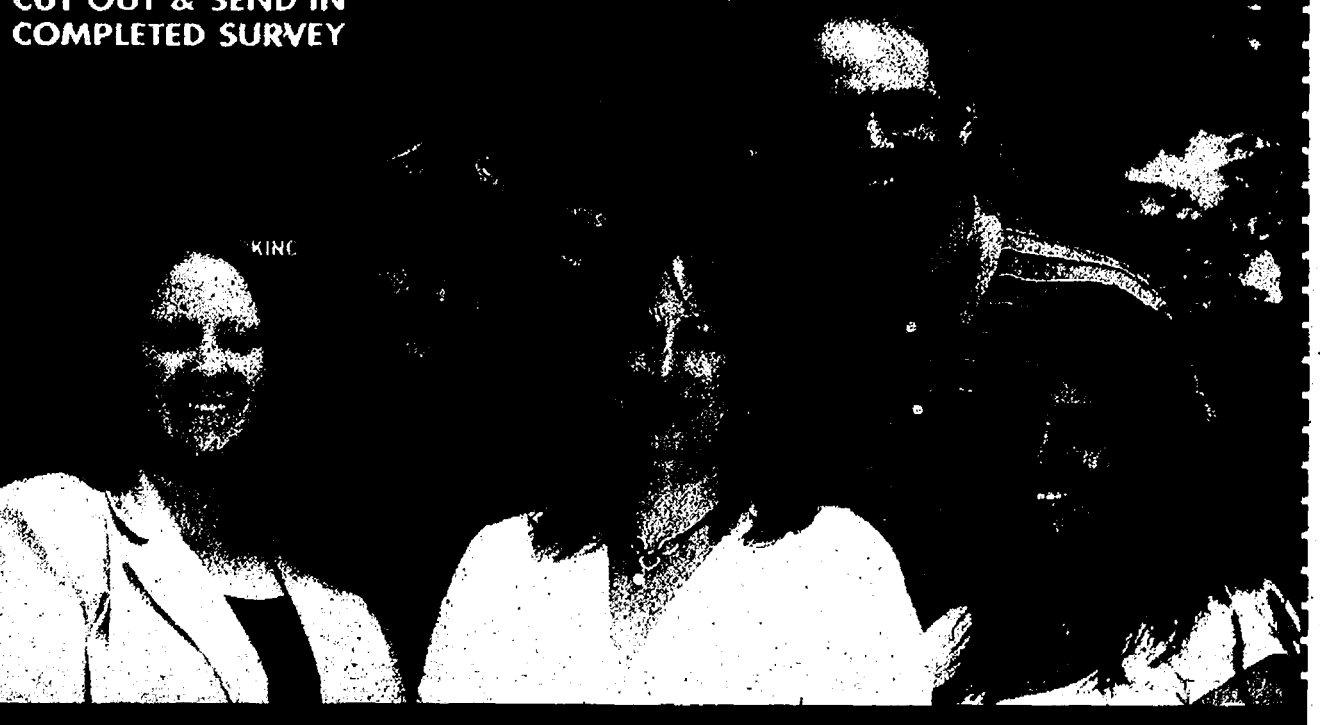

When patients cross the hall from the changing/checkup area, they go up a flight of metal stairs into the control room, through the single-seat chamber and into the larger chamber. Most adults have to duck to get in.

There's also a wheelchair lift. When they get into the main chamber, wheelchair-bound patients are moved into one of the seats and the wheelchair is removed.

Gordon said there's an enormous need in Michigan for hyperbaric chambers because so many people have diabetes. He added that the company is looking to expand further, heading east to Pennsylvania and New England and south to states such as Tennessee.

For more information about the center, call 1-313-295-5343 or visit www.oakwood.org. Referring physicians continue to manage the patients' wound treatment.

Accident results in damage, telephone outage

Single-vehicle crash causes $10,000 in damage to business

By Marsha Johnson Chartrand
Heritage Newspapers

At 6:30 a.m. June 18, a north-bound 1987 Chevrolet Camaro lost control going through the construction area on M-52 near Pleasant Lake Road.

The single-car crash took out a corner of the building, a telephone pole, a fence at Wacker Oil and damaged an estimated $10,000 worth of concrete statues before catching on fire.

Passers-by stated that they saw someone fleeing from the vehicle before the Camaro caught on fire, according to State Police.

The Manchester Township Fire Department was called on to extinguish the blaze, and the vehicle was discovered to be unoccupied.

After numerous calls from a person in the area, State Trooper Nikki Hiserote located the registered owner of the vehicle on Sylvan Road near Heim in Sylvan Township.

The man told Hiserote that his vehicle had been stolen and he was walking back to his home in Dexter.

Kim Mahrle, corporate secretary at Wacker Oil, said that while the damage to the statues was extensive, it was probably fortunate that the driver crashed in that particular location, and she said that she had no idea of the costs that might be incurred in replacing the telephone pole or restoring service to those whose phones were cut off by the crash.

Anyone with information on the crash is asked to contact Trooper Hiserote at the Sylvan Detachment, 734-475-7207.

Many turning to solar energy

Solar power a growing alternative in light of rising gas, utility prices

By Gary Gosselin
Journal Register News Service

With gas hovering at nearly $3 a gallon and utility costs jumping more than 20 percent in the last year, everyone it seems is searching for alternative energy sources.

Last year, investors put more than $48 billion worldwide into clean energy companies and projects and this year that figure is expected to rise to approximately $60 billion, according to research firm New Energy Finance. An estimated $7.96 billion was invested in U.S. and Canadian clean energy companies and projects in 2005.

Many are turning to solar power to cut dependency on traditional energy sources as well as for its environmentally friendly properties, namely, no greenhouse emissions.

Progress has been slow but it is picking up mightily," said Brad Collins, executive director of the Boulder, Colo.-based American Solar Energy Society, which at 51 years old is the oldest and largest solar organization.

The shift has been a boom for Auburn Hills-based United Solar Ovonic, which completed a solar panel manufacturing plant last year and is building two others in Michigan that will triple its capacity.

"They are an example of what's happening in many corners of the industry because of the confluence of several vectors; the twin dynamic of global climate change and whether we are at or near the end of cheap oil," said Collins. "And both those approaches to energy ask 'where will we be tomorrow?'"

If a homeowner or business installs solar it becomes a maintenance issue and not a volatile energy issue any more, Collins explained. Not only is that environmentally responsible, he said, but it lends a certain peace of mind, too.

"It's just wonderful. The market is growing 30 percent to 40 percent a year. We are growing much faster (than that)," said USO President Subhendu Guha. "Our products are different, most (solar panels) are heavy, based on glass; ours are flexible and can be molded to the roof easily. That's why we are getting so much market acceptance."

"Nobody else in the world makes this large volume of flexible product," Guha added. "And we get good support from the county, city and the state, we are very fortunate that the state wants to keep high-quality jobs in Michigan."

The first Auburn Hills plant, across from the Palace of Auburn Hills, produces 25 megawatts worth of solar cells, as will the second Auburn Hills plant just north on Lapeer Road. Both are estimated to cost $80 million and employ 220 each. A $129 million plant under construction in Greenville will produce enough panels yearly to produce 50 megawatts. That plant will employ about 250. There's also a Troy R&D office that employs 30.

By 2010, the company hopes to have enough capacity to output enough product per year to generate 300 megawatts.

For example, a typical home uses 2.5 kilowatts, said Guha, so those plants will be able to produce enough solar capacity each year to power 40,000 homes when completed next year. The thin, flexible panels however, are mostly used in commercial applications. If the capacity eventually reaches 300 megawatts, as hoped, the panels produced in one year could power the equivalent of 120,000 homes.

"Today what is happening is that many countries, many cities give incentives, they want clean energy, they don't want to burn fossil fuels," said Guha. "In California, if you put solar in, 50 percent of the cost will be provided by the California Energy Comm-

And in many cities there are different energy cost rates depending on time of day and usage, and for some, the more you use, the more you pay, he said, so it can be very cost effective for a business, even without subsidies.

Photovoltaic cells convert sunlight directly into electricity. When sunlight strikes a PV cell, electrons are dislodged, creating an electrical current. The cost of PV has fallen by 90 percent since the early 1970s. Rhone Resch, executive director of the Solar Energy Industries Association estimates solar power costs about $3 per watt now. When that hits about $1 a watt, it would be cheaper than traditional sources. In California and New Jersey, photovoltaic systems qualify for a 50 percent tax credit.

More complex systems provide electricity to pump water, power communications equipment, light homes and run appliances. Beyond the utility power line, PV is often the lowest-cost means to provide electricity, and almost always simplest and cleanest to operate.

According to one source, a solar-powered water heater, while about double the cost, would recoup the extra cost in eight to 10 years. Whole home systems range from $20,000 to $60,000 and could return as much as 20 percent to 50 percent of energy costs per year.

According to a recent "road map" report by the US Photovoltaics Industry, it is envisioned that solar will provide a "significant share" of the U.S. energy market by 2020, and by 2030, it is expected to meet 10 percent of U.S. peak energy demand, equivalent to about 180 million barrels of oil in that year. To reach that vision, millions of homeowners and businesses would have to go solar.

The American Solar Energy Society is trying to take some of the mystique out of the solar question with a Web site www.find-solar.com.

Visitors can enter data such as their state, county, the average electricity or water bills and other pertinent information and the site will calculate the cost of a system, how much energy it will provide and even what the annual savings will be. The site will give a payoff date for the initial investment as well as a number of other calculations including how many hydrocarbons are not polluting the air.

Just because Michigan is not in the desert is not a reason to dismiss solar, says Collins. He points to Germany, a leader in solar manufacture and use, as an example.

"There's no place in the southern 48 (United States) that does not have a better solar (exposure) than any place in Germany and Germany has a much, much more vibrant solar presence," Collins said. "The reason is they have already suffered the (energy) spike, and economically solar makes a lot of sense, and they have had the leadership, they are the world leader."

So there's no reason folks in Michigan can't use solar effectively, he said. In fact, because of advancements and some cost relief, people are going from an average 2 kilowatt system to 3 and 4 kilowatt systems, which allow for even less dependence on the energy companies.

A trend, he said, is sure to continue as more and more solar manufacturing capacity comes on line, like those in Auburn Hills and Greenville.

Secret to success: Hundreds of volunteers

By Perry Plouff
Journal Writer

Caroline Arbour admits that as far as her involvement in the Saline Celtic Festival, as concerned, some things have not gone quite as she initially planned.

Before last year's Festival, Arbour sat down for coffee with her friends Pat Little and Elizabeth Busch, two of the Festival's founders, thinking they might be able to give her a lead toward a night-duty, part-time job in a city office.

By the time they were done talking, Arbour found herself volunteered to be in charge of coordinating all of the Celtic Festival's volunteers. And she wasn't done being surprised.

Soon Arbour found that many of the Festival's committee chairpersons took care of their own volunteers, every year, and that there had not been much central coordination of all these helpers.

"There's a very high rate of returnees," she says, "because people really want to be a part of the Festival again and again."

Many volunteers, says Arbour, are good friends or family of the Festival's organizers. They share the same sense of joy about the event - her own motivation for volunteering many years to the Festival.

With a wry smile, Arbour notes that, as she began work on coordinating Festival volunteers last year, she "didn't have a clue." To start with, her official volunteer list had only about 75 names on it - far short of the actual number. Her challenge to find out what all the volunteers do each year, and what they especially need help with.

Last year, in spite of the heavy rains that curtailed Festival turnout, Arbour was extremely impressed because all but about ten of the scheduled volunteers showed up. Still trying to track down every name, she has uncovered "many people whose names never show up on lists, but contribute so much every year." Her unofficial list has grown substantially, nearing 400 names, and she still hopes to further refine the list for accuracy and to show how many folks there truly are, devoting their time and energy to the event.

Volunteers will receive a free admission pass to the Celtic Festival, and get to spend the entire balance of the day at the event, if they wish to. Volunteers are also entitled to advance purchase of commemorative T-shirts for just $6, under half the retail price.

For those thinking about volunteering, Arbour lists the job requirements: "Workers are expected to be flexible, enthusiastic, hard-working, and friendly." Flexibility, she emphasizes, made the biggest difference for her last year.

Most volunteers will work a shift roughly three hours long, depending upon their assignment and abilities, and there are several openings on the days before and after Festival Saturday. The deadline for applications is Friday, July 7.

New volunteers can contact Arbour by email at carbours546@comcast.net. Alternatively, they can call the Saline Celtic Festival office at 944-2810, to leave a message for her.

New blood meets old fun at Festival

By Perry Plouff
Special Writer

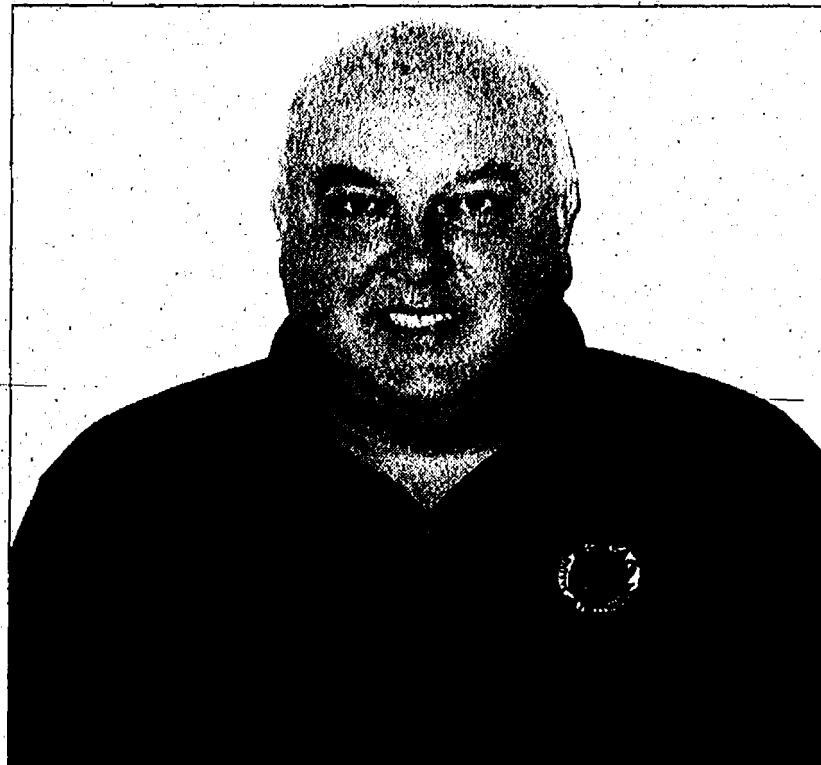

A torch has been passed. The 11th annual Saline Celtic Festival will be led for the first time by chairman Pat Collins, a mortgage loan officer at First Horizon Home Loans.

Collins succeeds another Pat - Pat Little, a former mayor of Saline and a current City Council member, who served as Festival chairman through the event's first decade.

Involvement in the Festival is certainly not new to Pat Collins, yet the scope of his leadership role has led him to realize his perspective on the event will likely be a bit different this year.

Collins' involvement began in the fourth year of the Festival, when he was president of the Saline JayCees. That year he worked on implementing the children's area, which has since grown into the Isle of Kids. Two years later, he said, "Wally MacNeil (of Mac's Acadian Seafood Shack) invited me to help in the food tent," and he spent the entire day of that Festival there. The next year, Collins became head of the food tent, and history repeated itself for five years in this way.

Now, as Festival chairman, Collins will enjoy all of the performers, athletes, vendors, and activities he hasn't seen much of in nearly a decade. He has harder work before the day of the Festival, however.

Collins noted that several long-time volunteers stepped down or reduced their roles after last year's Festival. He called it a "changing of the guard," observing that such changes mean that newer people who may not be as familiar with what has happened in the past have stepped up to the task.

Collins points to two important goals for his chairmanship: to cover all necessary details, and to make sure that Celtic Festival patrons see continued high level quality of the performers, vendors, or the Festival itself.

Collins is optimistic. First off, he knows how good the Festival is, having grown up in West Roxbury, Massachusetts, with a big Irish-family including quite a few talented musicians, singers, and dancers. He also admires the Highland athletes scheduled to compete, and hopes that plans to involve local high school athletes in the amateur events come to fruition.

"Having a dozen amateurs on the field, the same size as the pro's, will add so much to the Highland events," he said.

In spite of reduced attendance and revenues stemming from last year's heavy rainstorms, Collins was smiling as he listed several "new contributors who are giving us support." These include local businesses and corporations who are joining with long-time friends to keep the financial side of the Festival fluid.

Collins also smiled when he talked about his favorite lead-in event. "The Dusk Before Dawn Celebration should be a great success," he said. "The entertainment should be some of the best of the whole Festival when these musicians just get together and play on Friday evening."

Given that Pat Collins grew up with a tradition of people simply getting together and making music for the joy of it, he'll probably be smiling Friday night and all of Saturday at the Saline Celtic Festival, too.

A monstrous tale continues

Mill Pond monster may welcome offspring this year

By Perry Plouff
Special Writer

As the weather warms and the skirl of bagpipes moves from faint memory to impending reality in this quiet Midwestern town, anticipation mounts for the chance to once again see a monster in action. "Millie," allegedly a distant relative of the Loch Ness Monster, is named for Saline's Mill Pond Park, where she has appeared in recent years at the Saline Celtic Festival.

The man who has invested the most time and energy into Millie is Jim Peters, an irrepressibly enthusiastic mechanical designer who has volunteered for the Saline Celtic Festival since 2002. He said that as he strolled around Mill Pond Park, the Festival's site, a few years back, and took in the glorious sights and sounds, it got him to pondering all things Celtic. Amid those thoughts, the Loch Ness Monster reared its beastly head. Peters wondered, given the long expanse of water at Mill Pond, where Saline's own monster might be. Later, sitting in the pub tent, he even began to sketch out a possible monster on a bar napkin.

ENTIRELY BY chance, the Festival's chairman at that time, Pat Little, strolled by, noticed the sketch, and asked if it might be possible to construct a model of the beast for the Festival. Mr. Peters said, "Sure." And that winter he began construction of the mechanical monster in his home. The operating model ended up 28 feet long and seven feet high, since nothing larger could have fit in his basement.

Peters was in well-traveled waters with his beastly ideas. The Romans noted Pictish stories of strange marine beasts in Loch Ness after their Legions invaded Northern Scotland during the first century of our modern era. The biography of St. Columba, ca. 565 A.D., holds an early record of similar monster stories. Since 1933, more than 4,000 sightings have been documented there, and those possible plesiosaurs (aquatic dinosaurs) have admirers worldwide.

Millie is expected to put in another appearance in Saline on July 15 at the Celtic Festival. Peters hopes she will be accompanied by a smaller creature, presumably her offspring, which showed up with her last year. Peters has constructed a mural of Castle Urquhart, the famed ruins on the shore of Loch Ness, for the far shore of the Saline River. This should make Millie and her little lizard feel more at home or, at the least, to rekindle ancestral memories.

Whether for serious or lighthearted reasons, the Millie story has traveled around the world. Not only did media in Southeast Michigan mention Millie upon her first Saline Celtic Festival appearance in July 2004, she also appeared on the front page of the News in Walla Walla, Washington, and in the New York Post, the Anchorage Daily News, and the Shenzhen (China) Daily News. The story was translated into French in Quebec, and into Vietnamese by Que Huong Media. Fox News picked it up, as did UFOs Today. The Dennis Miller Show requested photos.

Celtic Week: Whiskey, rugby and more

Events over six days offer something for everyone

By Perry Plouff
Special Writer

The 11th annual Saline Celtic Festival, happening Saturday, July 15, at Saline's Mill Pond Park, offers more than just a single day of celebration. The community will warm up with affiliated gastronomical, educational, and sporting events throughout the week before the Festival.

On Sunday, July 9, Brookside Golf Course again hosts a Scottish Team tournament, featuring two-person teams alternating their shots. The registration fee of $35 per person includes 18 holes' worth of greens fees, plus a cart, a snack lunch, and an informal barbecue following play. For skins, add $10 per team. All profits go to Saline Social Services. Check-in is at noon at Brookside, located a mile north of the city on Ann Arbor Saline Road. For more information or to register, call 973-1828 or e-mail scf.golf@comcast.net. Pre-registration is required.

Mac's Acadian Seafood Restaurant is preparing for their third-annual whiskey-tasting dinner, a culinary event that has received rave reviews. On the evening of Wednesday, July 12, diners will be treated to six luxurious Celtic-themed food courses, and, of course, several rare whiskeys to taste. Appropriate wines and beers will also be available. Reservations are required - call 944-6227. Mac's is located at the corner of Ann Arbor Street and Michigan Avenue (US-12) in downtown Saline.

Expect the following evening's festivities to be just a wee dram less elegant. Washtenaw Rugby Football Foundation will kick off with a game at 5:30 p.m. on Thursday, July 13, at Henne Field. Next, the Detroit Rugby Club's women will face the Flint women, followed by the Flint men against the Detroit men. Admission and parking for all three games are free. The Henne Field pitch is located on Bennett Street, just a block east of Ann Arbor Street.

The Detroit Rugby Club continues its tradition of hard work and excellence at their Celtic Festival tent on Saturday, where they will prepare superb fish and chips.

Friday evening will be a very busy one at the Festival site in Mill Pond Park, located at the east end of Bennett Street. Starting at 6 p.m., the Festival's top artists will lead workshops in tin whistle (beginning), Irish flute (intermediate), bagpipes (intermediate), Celtic singing (beginners and intermediate), traditional music composing (beginning), Irish rhythm guitar (intermediate), Scottish fiddle (intermediate), Celtic fiddle (beginning), foot percussion (beginning), and Irish step dancing, sean nos style (beginning). Workshops will run over an hour and cost just $8 per person. Participants should be at least eight years of age, and pre-registration is strongly recommended. (call 734-944-2810.)

Before the workshops have ended, the Red Dragon Tent will open up for the Dusk Before Dawn Celebration. Music, dance, and good cheer will all be available for a $5 cover charge (kids 12 and under, with adult, are admitted for free). The informal "pub session" for musicians starts at about 7:30 p.m.

from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Damhsa Uisce Ban Mor will lead ceilidh dancing at the Dance Stage. Music will be provided by Nutshell, Matt and Shannon Heaton and Laura Cortese.

The ceilidh is free and open to all. Nutshell moves over to the big stage in the Red Dragon from 9-11 p.m. for the balance of the evening's celebration.

Parking for the workshops and Dusk Before Dawn events will be available at Mill Pond Park on Friday only.

Of course, the Celtic Festival itself starts with a bang at 10 a.m. on Saturday, July 15. That's when the Festival parade kicks off at Saline Middle School. The sounds of pipe and drum bands will alert most of the area that the big event is about to begin. For the few residents still unaware, some of the participating historical reenactors might fire off an occasional cannon to drive home the news. Official Festival opening ceremonies are slated for 11 a.m. at Mill Pond Park.

On Saturday all Celtic motorists must park at the Middle School, the old high school, or at the Visteon lot, and then ride in free, air-conditioned shuttle buses to the park.

Festival features talented old friends and new

By Perry Plouff
Special Writer

This summer, the 11th annual Saline Celtic Festival will again welcome a lively assortment of entertainers - some familiar and some new to our area. On Saturday, July 15, the town will reverberate with stirring sounds and dance drawn from the many different varieties of Celtic music as they are performed in Saline's Mill Pond Park.

Liz Carroll and John Doyle have been called geniuses of their instruments. The internationally acclaimed Carroll is considered one of the masters of traditional Irish fiddle music living in America today, while Doyle is among the most talented and innovative musicians to come out of Ireland in recent years. Together, they have combined their talents into dynamic live stage shows and recordings.

Liz and John return to the Saline Celtic Festival, she for the fourth time and he for the second. John's participation adds another Celtic knot to the musical circle - he's also currently working on a major project with Saline's own Scottish fiddler, Bonnie Rideout.

Grey Larsen and Cindy Kallet, each well known and beloved for many years, recently joined forces as a duo. Cindy is a superb singer, guitarist, songwriter, and multi-instrumentalist. Grey is one of America's finest Irish flute and tin whistle players, as well as an accomplished singer and concertina, fiddle, piano, and harmonium player. Larsen has also authored acclaimed books on tin whistle and Irish flute.

Matt and Shannon Heaton and Laura Cortese return to this year's Festival with their crowd-pleasing Celtic/roots music from the Boston area. The three are versatile instrumentalists and singers, performing together to celebrate the release of their new album. Festival guests should look forward to tunes featuring Scottish fiddle, Irish flute, and guitar, in wide-ranging song

Multi-instrumentalist Beth Patterson integrates many musical influences into her unique performances. Beth's skill on Irish bouzoukis blends with her Cajun roots and her studies in Ireland of tropical musical styles and of traditional Irish music. Listeners will find her music intriguing and memorable.

Donnybrook is a group so engaging that Hanover, Illinois named the Donnybrook Festival after them. They return to Saline after a year's absence, bringing along clever arrangements for flute, fiddle, bouzouki, and bodhrán and a diverse repertoire of ballads, airs, and pub favorites.

Local high school students in their internationally recognized organizations will add to the delights featured on the Festival stages. The Chelsea House Orchestra and Saline's own Fiddlers ReStrung return again to the Red Dragon to enliven the tent with their rich interpretations of old styles applied to venerable and contemporary tunes.

Faileas, a local duo whose name is Gaelic for "shadow," also exemplify the great talents right here in Saline's own backyard. Jesse Nieves, a dancer-singer-fiddler who graduated from the Fiddlers ReStrung, and Zak Read, multi-instrumentalist and composer whose greatest passion is the bagpipes, have extended their musical mastery at Celtic gatherings across the midwest.

The Celtic Festival is pleased that two favorite emcees will come back to assume anchor duties.

Michael Hough, who has already appeared seven times in the last ten years, returns to the Red Dragon Stage for the 11th annual Festival. A singer-songwriter for more than three decades in the local duo Mustard's Retreat, Michael is eminently qualified to hold the audience's attention between other performers' sets, and to keep the festival attendees informed with announcements throughout the day.

Bryan Kelso Crow will be back on the Brecon Stage as he has been for many years. Host of the syndicated radio show Celtic Connections, Professor Crow is quietly wise in the ways of traditional Celtic music, performing during the rest of the year with his Carbondale, Illinois-based group, the Dorians.

For familiar Celtic sounds altogether too grand for any single stage, this year's Festival features six Michigan pipe bands: the Glen Erin Pipe Band from Lansing, the Muskegon Regional Police Pipes and Drums, the Michigan Scottish Pipes and Drums from Troy, the Detroit Shrine Highlanders, the Cabar Feidh Highland Pipes and Drums Band from Royal Oak, and the Ann Arbor Pipes and Drums.

The Dance Stage offers Festival patrons a full day's worth of toe-tapping entertainment. Audiences can look forward to a cavalcade of step dancing - Irish, English, Scottish, Canadian, Appalachian, and tap, plus historic routines from the 1930s. The Commonwealth Dance Collective, a masterly group from all over Southeast Michigan, will lead a lineup which includes the Dancin' Feet School of Music and Dance.

Ann Arbor's own traditionalists, Nutshell, perform Friday evening blending flute, whistle, fiddle, harp, bodhrán, guitar, dulcimer, and sitar to achieve a refreshing musical variety, from driving, percussive reels to delicate contrapuntal planxties and airs.

Those who wish to learn more about Celtic music and dance can also investigate the Festival's Friday evening workshops, led by several of Saturday's headliners, in such varied disciplines as step dancing, foot percussion, beginning Celtic Fiddle and intermediate Scottish fiddle, Celtic singing, Irish rhythm guitar, intermediate Scottish bagpiping, tin whistle, Irish flute, and even traditional-style composing. All workshops will be held Friday, July 14, 6-7:15 p.m. at Mill Pond Park. The cost is only $8 per person.

Friday evening at about 7:30 p.m. Nutshell, Matt and Shannon Heaton and Laura Cortese will provide music for a ceilidh dance led by some of the Festival's featured dance performers on the Dance Stage, entirely for free. At 9 p.m., Nutshell will head into the Red Dragon Tent to lead the Dusk Before Dawn Celebration, where for a nominal admission fee, patrons can listen to exception Irish-style music. Beverages and pizza will be available for purchase. Kids 12 and under are admitted for free.

Highland athletes flex their muscle

The ancient Celtic traditions of heavy athletics are returning to Saline. This year's Saline Celtic Festival will again present a Highland Athletics competition, with events drawn from times when men in kilts were revered as some of the strongest people in the world.

The best-known Highland Athletics event is the classic caber toss. Here a competitor picks up a telephone pole or a trimmed tree trunk as tall as a two-story house, balances it straight up as he runs to build momentum, and then flips the log end over end. The results are judged for distance and accuracy of direction.

The stone put challenges the Highland athletes to throw a 17-pound rock in the same way as Olympic shot putters. Historically, catapults and, later, cannons often fired a rounded stone called a "shot" after a Dutch word for rock. The tradition of the stone put was adapted and renamed in the modern Olympics.

The Highland athletes also throw weights for distance in the manner of the modern discus. The Highland competition uses 28- or 56-pound weights, traditionally described as "two-stone" or "four-stone." Last year Will Barron set a Saline Celtic Festival record by heaving a 28-pound (two-stone) weight some 86 feet 11 inches.

IN THE WEIGHT toss for height, a competitor picks up a 56-pound (four-stone) weight and heaves it, one-handed, above his head and over a rail similar to a pole vault bar. Last year Harrison Bailey, a middle-school teacher from Pennsylvania, set a new world record when he cleared a bar at 19 feet 4 inches.

The Scottish hammer brings yet more drama to the Highland games. It uses a 16-pound hammerhead attached to a rattan cane handle. The competitor whirls the hammerhead above his own head like a chain-handled mace from long ago, then digs in hard with spiked boots, builds up speed, and releases the hammer downfield for distance.

IN ANOTHER EVENT - called the farmer's walk - the Festival's spectators are invited to participate. Like a Scottish farmer clearing rocky soil by main force, the athlete picks up a 200-pound weight in each hand and carries both as far as possible across the field. The current record is 327 feet, farther than the length of a football field.

Athletics chairman Don Makins is pleased to note that this year the Festival also offers everyone the chance to compete in the sheave toss, hurling a bale of straw over a high bar using a pitchfork for leverage. Lads and lassies can also choose to enter the haggis hurl, wherein the most maligned delicacy in Scottish cuisine is tossed for distance.

Ancient celebration becomes new festival tradition

Children can dance around the Maypole on the Isle of Kids

By Perry Plouff
Special Writer

New to the Saline Celtic Festival's Isle of Kids this year will be a traditional Maypole - with all the streamers, music, dancing, and fun that go with it.

Children who would like to learn about dancing around the Maypole can expect help from experts on the Festival's Dance Stage. Tammy Corwin-Renner and Natal Motawi will lead and instruct the festivities.

Maypole dancing traces its traditions back to England, with some similar Irish and Norse influences. The Britons raised Maypoles for years before the Roman invasion nearly 2,000 years ago, creating a "Feast of Flora" or honoring "the Green Man" or the May Queen. May Dances evolved into a fairly common rural England tradition until about a century ago, when more formal Victorian versions appeared in various schools and societies. The ribbon-pleating dances, possibly French in origin, were first popularized in the early to middle 1700s.

SOME MAYPOLES also were raised in Switzerland and Germany, and what is now a Swedish midsummer celebration. Many versions and origins are ascribed, but most are about celebrating. Many Maypole dances commemorated the bloom of spring or the promised bounty of the land, a few elevated local crafts and guilds, and most provided an opportunity for boys and girls to get together.

Based on the historical standards, it is important to have the Maypole raised in a public place, with verdant reminders around it. And the Isle of Kids is perfect for that - very green, very public, and surrounded by a wonderful celebration.

Experience feats with the feet - including your own

By Perry Plouff
Special Writer

This year's Saline Celtic Festival, set for July 15, will showcase great talent from near and far. But patrons may be advised to watch their feet - and the feet of others. The action at the Festival's Dance Stage will be lively, and audience members of all ages will have opportunities to participate.

Ren'ee Ginell is the director of the Dancin' Feet School of Music and Dance, and brings her troupe from the area around the northern edge of Livingston County. Although Ren'ee teaches many popular and traditional dance styles, she has given her group a special emphasis on interactive and educational presentations of Gaelic culture.

The very young Toby and Lukas Heller will join the performance, playing fiddle and guitar for a hard-shoe treble reel with the members of Dancin' Feet. The Hellers are also participating in the Festival's youthful Whippersnappers showcase. They hail from Ortonville where they regularly participate in the Friday evening jam sessions at the town's center.

Nic Gareiss returns to the Festival for the seventh year, this time with the Commonwealth Dance Collective. Gareiss has studied percussive dance for more than a decade, and is pursuing a degree in music at Central Michigan University. He has appeared with Footworks Percussive Dance Ensemble as well as numerous guest spots with the best of the best of Celtic music. Nic teaches the traditional sean nos style of Irish dancing. He will facilitate two workshops, on Friday evening and on Festival Saturday.

Another serious student of dance, Nellie Schrantz, comes from St. Johns by way of Denison University in Ohio, where she studies music and environmental science. Schrantz has competed for years in Irish step-dancing events, and has broadened her styles in recent years at workshops and festivals around the state.

The Commonwealth Dance Collective also includes Becky Hill, a member of the Footworks Dance Ensemble and performer with the Rhythm Billies, Gandy Dancers, and Puck Faire.

Sheila Graziano should be familiar to area residents, and to Salinians in particular. She and her family lived in the city for many years, moving to the hills outside of Chelsea more recently. But she maintains strong Saline connections.

One of the original Celtic Festival leaders, Graziano is the choreographer for the internationally acclaimed Saline Area Schools group known as Fiddlers ReStrung (also appearing at the Festival) and its privately run offshoot, the Saline Fiddlers. She is also half of the duo Matter and Ghost, touring the state paired with Michigan's official troubadour, Neil Woodward.

She is the co-founder, with Nawal Motawi, of the Commonwealth Dance Collective. Graziano promises that this year's Festival Dance Stage will be a cavalcade of stepdancing - Irish, English, Scottish, Canadian, Appalachian, tap, and historic routines from the 1930s.

Sheila Graziano's spouse Angelo Graziano built the rugged Dance Stage, which drew delighted accolades from the dancers last year. He has been one of the unsung heroes with hammers every year before and after the Festival. He created the beautiful Maypole, which will make its dancing debut at the Isle of Kids this year.

Nawal Motawi is a traditional English vernacular dance specialist, with long sword and rapper sword expertise. Between performances on stage with the CDC, she joins Tammy Corwin-Renner to lead the Wee Folk in the rituals and patterns of the Maypole dances. The CDC also includes illustrious local musicians Paul Winder and Myron Grant, the multi-talented Jessie Nieves of Faileas, and Adam Wheeler, a Manchester high school senior who brings award-winning contemporary clogging skills to the Festival for the second year.

If audience members catch the contagion of tapping toes or happy feet from the great performances, they will be encouraged to join various dance workshops and ceilidh dancing on the Dance Stage. The Ann Arbor Council for Traditional Music and Dance (AACT-MAD) will lead two sessions of family dancing, one on the Dance Stage and one on the Wee Folks' island.
