Search policy may hinder students' rights

Recent court settlement could impact school policies on searches

By Jennifer McArdle
Staff Writer

Searches of student lockers and drug sniffing dogs have become commonplace at high schools throughout the state. At Chelsea High School, canine searches are typically conducted at least once a year with coordination with local police agencies.

But last month, the American Civil Liberties Union of Michigan and Detroit Public Schools agreed to settle a lawsuit that was filed after the school district performed schoolwide searches of students. The lawsuit was filed in response to Detroit Public Schools policy that allows periodic police "sweeps" without notice in intermediate and high schools. As a result of the settlement, the school district's policy has been changed.

Dave Killips, superintendent at Chelsea School District, does not expect the court settlement to have an impact on local search policies, which restrict the search of students' property to ensure their rights are not violated.

"We have to have suspicion. The courts make it pretty clear and they are generally in support of the school districts as long as there is reasonable suspicion," Killips said.

Searches, according to the district's bylaws and policies, are generally restricted to the district's property, which includes lockers, and conducted only when there is reasonable suspicion.

"School authorities will respect a student's right of privacy in their person and their property. However, lockers are the property of the school district and a student's locker or other possessions may be searched in the event reasonable suspicion dictates that the administration takes such action," the policy states.

"In addition, students who drive to school and park on school district property agree to have their vehicles searched by administrators who have reasonable suspicion that the student's vehicle contains drugs, weapons, or other items not permissible in school or on school district property."

Killips said the district typically coordinates with the Chelsea Police Department to conduct canine searches throughout the school year. The results of a canine search could provide reasonable suspicion to conduct a search of student property.

"We usually do it a couple

Four learn to lead the state

Chelsea High School students attend camp at Michigan State

By Jennifer McArdle
Staff Writer

For one week, four Chelsea students learned first-hand how government really operates.

Chelsea High School seniors Dolan Personke, Jeff Squires, Alex Stacy and Chet Hopp represented the area at Boys State June 18 through 24 at Michigan State University in Lansing. Sponsored by the American Legion, Boys State is an educational program intended to help high school seniors learn about government and how it works by allowing them to create a fictional 51st state in the Union.

"We were in cities, little individual cities, and we had to make a self-sustaining government for each city and a government for the state," said 17-year-old Stacy.

The four teens were selected by their teachers. Going into the program, now in its 69th year, they didn't know what to expect.

"At first, I was a little nervous because I wasn't sure what it was going to be like. But as the week went on, it was fun," 16-year-old Squires said.

Stacy also enjoyed the experience.

"I had no idea what I was getting into when I went there. I just knew it was like a camp, and I went there and they told me we were going to be doing government stuff and I was like, 'Oh, boy.' But it was really cool. I liked it a lot," he said.

The motto of Boys State is "Learn by Doing," and that's just what the teens did. The first half of the program exposed participants to the world of politics, where delegates nominate candidates for partisan and non-partisan offices on the city, county and state levels.

"You ran a state," said 17-year-old Personke. "We were all in different cities. First we elected the city and county officials. After that, there was a state convention. We were in two different parties — the Federalists and the Nationalists.

"We had like a nine-hour convention where we (decid

'Honus' pays homage to baseball

Purple Rose Theatre's production expected to run through Aug. 26

By Sandi Kasha
Staff Writer

In a made-for-movie-script irony, the Detroit Tigers and the Pittsburgh Pirates opened their three-game series on June 30 when the Purple Rose Theatre debuted its production of the Steven Dietz play "Honus and Me."

One of the play's settings takes place at the 1909 World Series, where the Pirates faced off against the Tigers.

"It's an interesting twist, isn't it?" said Purple Rose Theatre Artistic Director Guy Sanville. "Baseball was a different sport back then than it is now. Athletes loved the game and you didn't have million-dollar contracts and commercial endorsements."

"Honus and Me" centers on 10-year-old Joey, whose parents' recent divorce and his fear of failure shape the strange events that take place.

In the opening scene when he holds the bat during his junior league baseball game, he tells the audience, "It makes no sense at all."

He explains that his fingers and body start to tingle and he feels funny.

His innocent confession foreshadows the plot. Joey loves baseball and something is set to happen.

"It's magical and meaningful at the same time," Sanville said. "It's also a love story wrapped around baseball with some time travel elements thrown in."

The magic starts when Joey cleans out his elderly neighbor's attic and comes across a Honus Wagner baseball card.

"Baseball cards used to be packaged with cigarettes," Sanville explained. "Honus didn't like the idea of children buying cigarettes to get a baseball card."

The Pittsburgh Pirates' famed shortstop stopped manufacturers from making more cards and turned down a lot of money.

"They are very valuable," Sanville said. "There are only 40 cards left."

The cards are valued at $1.5 million each. Joey knows the card's value and feels that the money could bring his parents back together.

The baseball card is also a form of escapism for Joey. The card magically unites him with Honus and then sends him through time to the 1909 World Series.

Through many transpiring events Joey learns valuable lessons. The play entertains through number soliloquies and monologues.

This marks the third time the play has been in production. It premiered at the Seattle Children's Theater in March, which commissioned the play, and then played at Pittsburgh's City Theater in May.

Actor Nick Smith, who plays Joey, loves the character's innocence.

"He is naïve and he isn't afraid to pour his heart out," Smith said.

The 23-year-old actor said playing a 10-year-old is challenging.

"It took about a month to really ease into the role," he explained. "It's my first starring role and I'm ecstatic. So I want to make sure I get it right and really get inside the character's head."

Smith lost 30 pounds to play Joey. He also had to slouch his 6'1 frame in order to appear small.

Sanville said that the production would appeal to everyone ages seven and up.

"I've enjoyed this production and I think it's the best we've done in a while," Sanville said. "I've always loved baseball and in directing this production, I fell in love with the game all over again."

Student to attend prestigious program

This summer, Megan Frame, a student at Chelsea High School, will attend the Cambridge College Programme for three weeks in Cambridge, England.

The program, which was founded 19 years ago, was developed to give American teenagers the opportunity to experience the sights and culture of England through courses taught by British teachers associated with the University of Cambridge and day trips to many places in England.

Megan Frame

Frame will fly to London and then travel to Cambridge. She will stay in one of several of the university colleges, along with other students of the same age and interests. They will be supervised by a university student, who will live in the college with them.

The courses Frame has chosen to study are "WWII: Churchill" and "American and British Intelligence." All students will take a third course titled "British Cultural History: Faith and Power, Learning and Leisure," which will consist of lectures on various subjects concerning Britain and include field trips to Ely Cathedral, Stonehenge, Stratford-Upon-Avon, Warwick Castle, Bath, the Tower of London, the British Museum, Buckingham Palace, and many other sites and museums in London.

The students also will see two plays in London's West End, as well as a play at the Royal Shakespeare Theatre in Stratford.

Frame, 17, will be entering her senior year at Chelsea High School this fall. She is the daughter of David and Lisa Frame.

Judge to rule on right-of-way

Decision expected within 60 days on Harford roads

By Jennifer McArdle
Staff Writer

Area residents and Lima Township took a long-standing dispute over rights-of-way to court last week, but a decision still could be weeks away.

Judge Donald Shelton presided over an evidentiary hearing July 6 in 22nd Circuit Court to determine whether rights-of-way still exist in the former village of Harford, now known as Lima Center. A decision is expected by Shelton within 60 days following the hearing.

The dispute began in 2004 when Lima Township Supervisor Kenneth Unterbrink authorized the removal of brush and tree cutting at the rear of several lots adjacent to the township hall. According to an affidavit submitted by Unterbrink to the court, some of the tree cuttings were moved into the North Street right-of-way, one of several areas that were designated as streets when the village of Harford was platted in 1835.

Although the streets were never used and have been overgrown with brush and foliage for years, Unterbrink said the township plans to eventually add a fire substation on a parcel adjacent to the township hall. If that were to happen, Unterbrink said, the township would need access to the fire substation by utilizing the rights-of-way on Cross and North streets as an ingress and egress to the township facilities.

But the existence of those rights-of-way is being questioned by Lima Township resident Florence Beach, who owns property along the North Street, Cross Street and East Street rights-of-way. Beach, co-owner of the Dwight E. Beach Farm, filed a civil suit against the township in 22nd Circuit Court July 26, 2005, claiming ownership of the rights-of-way on the three streets by adverse possession.

In the brief submitted to the court by Beach's attorney, Peter Flintoft, Beach also claims that the rights-of-way have been included as part of her family's property for more than 100 years, being conveyed to the family by deeds dating back to 1853. The brief cites a conveyance of land to the family in 1962, specifically describing the land platted as Cross Street.

But the township, represented by Vic Lillich of Reading, Etter and Lillich in Ann Arbor, claims that since the streets in the Harford plat were never vacated in Circuit Court, the rights-of-way still exist.

In the Harford plat, a 66-foot right-of-way is designated for North Street, which extends from Lima Center Road east, parallel to Jackson Road, and runs along the northern property line of the township hall and several residences on Jackson Road. Rights-of-way are also designated in the plat for West Street, which is now Lima Center Road, Cross Street and East Street, which each run south from North Street, across Jackson Road, and end at South Street.

According to the plat, the township hall is located on Jackson Road between the area designated for Cross and West streets.

Other plaintiffs in the lawsuit against the township are Cynthia Guthrie, Lillian Mumaw, Ann Jaekle and Dwight Beach Jr.

Staff Writer Jennifer McArdle can be reached at 475-1371 or jmcardle@heritage.com.

ALLEVIATE JOINT PROBLEMS IN DAYS

SCIENTIFIC ADVANCEMENT GIVES GENERAL PUBLIC THE PERFECT AND COMPLETE SOLUTION FOR SORE, ACHING JOINTS THROUGHOUT THE ENTIRE BODY

FIRST FORMULA OF ITS KIND TO GIVE FAST RELIEF TO THE WORST TYPE OF JOINT STIFFNESS WITHOUT DANGEROUS DRUGS

By S. Hufford, Media Services

A new medical breakthrough has just been approved for release to the general public that actually stops joint stiffness right at the source.

Now, joint pain sufferers no longer need to endure unbearable sore and stiff joints thanks to this new joint relief product known as FlexComfort Complete.

It has been proven that users of FlexComfort Complete feel and act younger, are free of joint stiffness, have improved mobility and most of all... get their life back.

You can do this quickly and all-naturally with no dangerous drugs or surgery.

This new joint relief breakthrough brings such fast, incredible relief that even normally skeptical medical professionals marvel at how dramatically FlexComfort Complete can better your life in just ten days.

This amazing new joint relieving formula was developed by the world renowned, highly respected Dr. Neil D. Ross.

With over 30 years of medical experience in the pharmaceutical and nutraceutical industry, Dr. Ross successfully designed FlexComfort Complete after helping develop the world famous and powerful line of Centrum® and Stresstab® Vitamins.

Now Dr. Ross is bringing welcomed relief to the world where so many people need it.

FlexComfort Complete has proven that you may not have to endure sore or stiff joints any longer regardless of your current age or joint health.

And this is extremely exciting news for our readers since Arthritis is the leading cause of disability in the United States and nearly one of every six Americans will be affected by this disabling disease.

The United States Center for Disease Control estimates that by the year 2020, 60 million Americans will suffer from some form of arthritis, and more than 11 million of us will be disabled by the condition.

And since Arthritis' meaning originates from the Greek words for "joint" and "inflammation", Dr. Ross' formula FlexComfort Complete couldn't come at a better time.

It really is proving to be the future of joint relief support.

A well-known professional golfer even stated that he used to take 16 ibuprofen a day for years before using the active ingredient in FlexComfort Complete. And, he hadn't won a golf tournament in 18 years until he started taking FlexComfort Complete's active ingredient.

Once he started taking the same ingredients as those in FlexComfort Complete, he even passed on an opportunity to be the spokesperson for a leading analgesic brand.

He said that he just couldn't be their spokesperson because he doesn't need ibuprofen anymore at all.

Plus, after taking the active ingredient in FlexComfort Complete he won his first championship in 18 years.

For even more information on this phenomenal new joint relief product, here is my interview with the Product Development and Specialist for BioTech Research.

Q. Is FlexComfort Complete completely safe for my readers to use?

A. Yes. In fact the doctor that created FlexComfort Complete, Dr. Neil Ross' staff and colleagues use it to relieve their joint aches and stiffness.

FlexComfort Complete relieves sore and stiff joints and is composed of 100% natural substances that are completely safe.

Q. What is so great about the new FlexComfort Complete and what makes it different than other joint formulas that claim to be just as good?

A. First, FlexComfort Complete is the most revolutionary joint compound ever developed. It is a perfect and complete formula that is fast acting.

FlexComfort Complete reduces your joint aches, stiffness and discomfort in 10-12 days. Not 6-8 weeks like most products.

FlexComfort Complete contains the purest form of Glucosamine... the compound that increases formation of cartilage and ligaments in your joint areas.

And the Glucosamine that is used in FlexComfort Complete provides 1.7 times the bioreactive glucosamine versus sulfate.

Most companies don't use this pure, premium grade of glucosamine because it is more expensive than sulfate. But trust me, the pure, premium grade of glucosamine that is in FlexComfort Complete is worth every penny.

FlexComfort Complete contains MSM, the heavily tested ingredient that supplies vital nourishment to your joints and helps you to maintain healthy joint tissue.

And the best part about the amazing new FlexComfort Complete is that Hyaluronic Acid, which is usually only used in prescription form as an injectable by your doctor has been turned into an oral form.

Hyaluronic Acid (that I will call HA from now on) is actually found in every cell of your body. However, it depletes with age because over time oxy radicals, produced mostly through exposure to pollutants and sunlight, degrade and destroy HA. In fact, fifty year olds are estimated to have less than half the HA they had in youth.

That is why HA is considered in the medical field to be the body's natural lubricant for your joints.

And... what really puts FlexComfort Complete above and beyond all other joint relief products out there is that in the past, HA could only be extracted from chicken combs. So anyone allergic to chicken or eggs could not reap the benefits of HA.

NOT SO with FlexComfort Complete. Dr. Ross was able to use HA in a biofermented form so that chicken and eggs are not used.

Now everyone can reap the benefit of HA when taking FlexComfort Complete and not have to worry about allergic reactions to chicken or eggs.

Q. How does FlexComfort Complete end joint problems so fast?

A. Although it is the combination of all 3 of these powerful ingredients together, it is really the addition of the biofermented form of HA, nature's lubricant, that puts FlexComfort Complete over the top.

You see, HA has been used to treat degenerative arthritis, also known as osteoarthritis since the 60s. Two brands of hyaluronan were approved by the FDA as devices to treat osteoarthritis of the knee. When present in a joint, even a joint with minimal or no cartilage, it can provide a cushion effect.

HA is normally part of the cartilage and synovial fluid, thus helping the cartilage to handle the force of weight-bearing and movement in the joint. In synovial fluid, HA acts as a lubricant of the cartilage against lining of the joint and has been said to have "shock absorber" properties.

Studies show that:

- HA is an important part of all normal joint fluid.
- HA plays a role in joint protection and lubrication.
- Individuals suffering from osteoarthritis have less hyaluronic acid in the synovial fluid in their joints leading to poor joint lubrication and increased pain.

Nothing is as powerful as FlexComfort Complete has proven to be in helping end joint problems. And nothing is as safe and effective at ending joint problems while restoring easy movement and activity.

So, as you can see, with FlexComfort Complete you cannot lose.

Plus, if you tried to buy MSM and the premium form of Glucosamine separately, you would pay well over a hundred dollars. But we have combined both of these powerful, natural ingredients into 1 perfect and complete formula, plus added the amazing HA, which you cannot buy in its fermented form without paying a lot more.

If you suffer from any type of hurting, sore or stiff joints anywhere in your body then you absolutely need FlexComfort Complete. It's just inevitable.

Q. Can I take FlexComfort Complete with me anywhere?

A. Yes. You don't need any type of refrigeration or special storage. Just 2 easy to swallow tablets per day are necessary to end your sore and stiff joints for good.

Q. How can my readers get FlexComfort Complete?

A. FlexComfort Complete will not be in stores for an extended period. In the mean time, readers can order directly from BioTech Research... End of interview.

I had difficulty bending and even getting out of bed most mornings. I began using Glucosamine/CSA in 1998 in attempt to alleviate the daily pain I experienced. Glucosamine/CSA gave me more flexibility and a wider range of movement than before but did not reduce the pain at all.

I began using HA (30 mg per day) in 2003 and after only 7 days all the pain I had was gone. This pain had been with me for over 25 years. I stopped taking all pain medications. I have better flexibility, no joint pain, and a positive side effect was less dry skin issues than before. I always got a dry skin condition every winter but have not since using HA. I now workout 4-6 times per week for 30 to 60 minutes without any pain. I can also type effectively now that all the pain and swelling has subsided from my hands and fingers. Several elderly family members are now knitting and sewing again after over 20 years of inactivity after using HA regularly.

The best testimonial I have is that I have given the product to over 300 people in the last 3 years and only 1 has returned to me saying they didn't think it worked. Most say it is the best product they have ever used including drugs such as Vioxx® and Celebrex®. Most use no other medication other than HA for joint pain. That is an effective rate of over 99%.

You have my permission to use my name and my testimonial as you like.

Regards, Michael Cielensky; VP of Sales and Marketing

Foundation gets start over cup of joe

Charitable endowment fund has grown to $12 million since 1981

By Sheila Pursglove
Special Writer

In 1981, three local residents met at a restaurant in town and over breakfast a major community resource, the Chelsea Community Foundation, was born.

Today, the foundation is a $1.2 million permanent charitable endowment that has invested more than $857,000 in 58 grants to area nonprofit organizations for programs that serve a variety of Chelsea-area needs.

The trio comprised local businessman Art Dils, who was the owner and president of Typographic Insight Ltd. in Ann Arbor and a member of the Chelsea school board; Will Johnson, then-president and CEO of Chelsea Community Hospital; and Ray Van Meer, who was superintendent of the Chelsea School District.

The three met at the old Woodshed Restaurant in Chelsea and discussed ways of encouraging local entities to collaborate resources to better serve community needs.

Key leaders in the community met and decided to start the Chelsea Civic Foundation, secure a nonprofit tax designation and raise funds to distribute to important causes that would benefit the community.

George Palmer of Palmer Motors in Chelsea was elected as the first president of the newly formed foundation and a volunteer board was named. Community members were invited to join the foundation for a $50 annual donation. Funds were then granted to entities that made grant applications approved by the foundation's board.

In 1994, the Civic Foundation of Chelsea and the Foundation for Community Care merged to create the Chelsea Community Foundation. In 1995, the foundation affiliated with the Community Foundation for Southeastern Michigan to offer the best way to maximize charitable giving with expert giving, grant-making and investment support from the Community Foundation for Southeastern Michigan consultants and staff. With this, the foundation has the advantage of large foundation resources yet with a local committee raising and directing funds to local entities, Dils said.

The Chelsea Community Foundation began providing grants for charitable programs in 1996.

Chelsea Community Foundation

■ The mission of the Chelsea Community Foundation is to support and improve public well-being and quality of life for Chelsea residents.

■ The foundation connects caring people with causes that matter most to them and to the community, and builds permanent endowment through gifts from individuals, businesses and other foundations.

■ The foundation makes grants to support charitable programs benefiting the Chelsea community, promotes philanthropy as an important value and assists individuals, families and businesses with their charitable goals.

"That year, we made three modest grants, totaling $2,500," Dils said. "Over the years, as we have gained the support and participation from many in our community, our grant-making resources have grown significantly."

Chelsea State Bank gave the lead gift of $250,000 æ $50,000 each year for five years, the largest gift they had ever given, Dils said.

In 2005, the foundation provided a record $182,000 in nine grants to Chelsea-area nonprofits for scholarships and educational programs for youth, health services for seniors, cultural programs and other projects to benefit the community.

The foundation focuses its grants on programs that aim to have a long-term impact, Dils said.

For example, a grant last year of $100,000 — the foundation's largest grant ever — is supporting a partnership between the Chelsea Community Hospital and the Chelsea School District to help Chelsea children develop lifelong habits of good nutrition and physical activity, a program with long-lasting effects for the children and the community.

In addition, the Chelsea Center for the Arts has received a total of $70,500, and senior services organizations have received more than $100,000 — just three examples of how the foundation benefits the community.

The Chelsea Community Foundation has helped individuals, families and businesses create charitable legacies that will benefit the community, either through contributions to its fund or through establishing a fund in honor of a family or business.

For the past year, the foundation — currently headed up by President Robin Phillips æ has partnered with the the Community Foundation for Southeastern Michigan to match endowment gifts of $1,000 or more to the Chelsea Community Foundation.

"Matching grant dollars come through the Community Foundation for Southeastern Michigan from the Kresge Foundation," Dils said. "The match is 50 percent of what we raise."

A total of $125,000 was available on a first-come, first-matched basis. Chelsea Community Foundation has received more than 50 gifts and pledges and all the available match dollars have been earned.

In all, the program will collect more than $400,000 in new endowment to benefit the Chelsea community. The first phase ran from last July to June 30, and another phase may start, Dils said.

"I never dreamed that what started as a cup of coffee 25 years ago would grow to where we have nearly $1,500,000 in endowed funds and have made grants of over $650,000," Dils said. "This is huge for the Chelsea area. People and companies in our area have been unbelievably generous.

"We have a committee of community leaders who will continue to thoughtfully recommend grants for worthy causes. Our affiliation with the Community Foundation for Southeastern Michigan assures our donors that their gifts are secure and in perpetuity from generation to generation."

Donors who make any size gift to the foundation can benefit from a little known state tax credit, in addition to deductions for federal income tax purposes.

Folk music on tap at center

Michigan Friends Center to host blues, folk event July 22

By Sheila Pursglove
Special Writer

For an evening of blues and folk music, head out July 22 to the Michigan Friends Center.

Chelsea musician Dale Osborn will perform in a celebration and fund-raising concert for the center, a Quaker-founded nonprofit conference facility located on Clark Lake Road, north of Chelsea.

The event, headlined by a blues harmonica and guitar performance by Ann Arbor musicians Peter "Madcat" Ruth and Shari Kane, gets under way at 6 p.m.

Osborn and his wife, Anne, members of the Friends Lake Community, have called Chelsea home for the past three years. After growing up in the Grand Rapids area, Osborn earned a bachelor's degree in English from Michigan State University, and now works as a freelance writer, specializing in corporate and technical writing. He's been playing acoustic folk guitar for more than 20 years.

"I lived in Ann Arbor for 17 years and am relatively well known in the Ann Arbor folk music community," he said. "I'm happy to be opening for Shari and Peter at the Michigan Friends Center fund-raiser.

"I'm a fingerstyle acoustic guitarist. This means I pluck the strings with my thumb and three fingers. I don't use a flat pick to strum like most players. I play six- and 12-string guitar."

Osborn, who has played at many venues in the Ann Arbor and surrounding area, released a self-produced CD, "On the Edge of Our Town," in 1999. The collection of 15 songs — 10 originals and five covers — was played on 6- and 12-string guitars unaccompanied by other instruments, and recorded live in the studio, using closed-miking techniques.

Madcat and Kane — like Osborn, long-time members of the Friends Lake Community — joined forces in 1990. They have appeared locally at the Ann Arbor Blues and Jazz Festival and The Ark, and performed throughout the United States, as well as in Brazil, Canada, Poland, Spain and the Cayman Islands. Their first CD, "Key to the Highway," was released in 1992.

The July 22 festivities include a silent auction of non-material gifts.

"The silent auction features opportunities rather than things — offerings of people's time and talents," said Pam Hoffer of the Michigan Friends Center. "We wanted to use the silent auction to find ways to bring people together."

Examples include a massage, a day sail on a sailboat, watercolor painting lesson, weekend for two at a cottage in the woods, gardening consultation, interior decorating consultation and a meditation lesson.

Food will be available for purchase from a local caterer who does organic food and locally grown produce.

"The idea is to celebrate the 'local'," Hoffer said.

There also will be plenty of time for concert-goers to enjoy a walk in the woods, along the trails and by the lake.

Tickets, which must be purchased in advance, are $20 per person or six for $100. For tickets, contact Nancy Paul at nsimmonspaul@yahoo.com or call 475-0425.

WAVE seeks increased funding

City Council approves $30,000 contribution to transportation system

By Jennifer McArdle
Staff Writer

The amount of money the city of Chelsea is contributing to the Western Washtenaw Area Value Express transportation system is doubling this year.

An agreement between the city and WAVE for public transportation services for July 1 through June 30, 2007, was up for approval Tuesday during the regular meeting of the Chelsea City Council, with the city planning to double its contribution this year to $30,000, up from $15,000 last year. The city council approved the expenditure on a 6-0 vote, with Councilman Joe Merkel absent.

From 1999 through 2003, the then-village of Chelsea contributed $4,000 annually to WAVE operations. In the 2003-04 fiscal year, Chelsea contributed $9,167. The following year, the city's contribution jumped to $10,000.

WAVE, a service that has been in the Chelsea area for 30 years formerly under the name Chelsea Area Transportation System, requested funding of $10,000 for the Community Connector bus and $20,000 for door-to-door service in Chelsea this year.

According to a report by Chelsea City Manager Michael Steklac, the city budgeted $30,000 in the 2006-07 fiscal year budget for the WAVE services. But the financial burden is growing each year.

"This is an essential service for many of our residents, but as the cost increases we may have to evaluate this service and the number of distinct individuals served compared to other services that the city provides or subsidizes for its citizens," Steklac said in his report to the City Council.

According to figures presented by WAVE, which provided 14,784 rides in the 2004-05 fiscal year, each ride costs $15, though riders typically pay $1.50.

Funding comes from a variety of sources, with about half coming from state funding sources through the Ann Arbor Transportation Authority. Remaining operational expenses are provided by municipalities, grants and donations from individuals and service organizations.

Statistics from the 2004-05 fiscal year show that WAVE provided 4,551 rides for seniors age 65 and older and an additional 1,236 rides for seniors in wheelchairs. Handicapped residents account for a large number of residents served by WAVE, with 4,301 rides that year, 237 of which were for handicapped residents in wheelchairs.

An additional 4,459 rides were provided for the general population — residents under age 65.

More than half of all rides (7,627) are part of the Community Connector. Another 3,815 of rides in the 2004-05 fiscal year were for medical appointments and 1,009 were for employment. Other uses included business, hair appointments, socialization, education, banking, senior activities and nutrition programs.

The largest number of riders come from the city of Chelsea, where ridership in 2004-05 totaled 8,120.

SEARCHES

times a year. We usually work very closely with the police department," Killips said.

A canine search was conducted at Chelsea High School and Beach Middle School last fall.

During the searches, Killips said, schools are put on lock-down and students typically remain in their classrooms.

Killips emphasized that searches of student property are only conducted when an individual is suspected.

But how closely administrators are following the district's policy of student searches remains to be seen. Students at Beach Middle School reported that the school conducted a search of female students' purses as they arrived on the last day of school, apparently to make sure students weren't bringing cans of shaving cream and other items to school on the last day.

When questioned on the issue, Killips appeared to be unaware of the student search.

"The principal may have done this as a precautionary method," he said.

Andrew Ingall, principal at Beach Middle School, could not be reached for comment.

Whether the settlement between Detroit Public Schools and the ACLU of Michigan will impact other school districts is still largely unknown.

Under the negotiated policy changes, Detroit school officials may no longer search students' clothing, backpacks, cars or other items unless they have reasonable suspicion that the student violated school rules and the search will result in evidence of the violation.

The lawsuit was filed in 2004 after the entire student body of Detroit's Mumford High School underwent a mass search on Feb. 18, 2004. At the time of the search, which was conducted under the supervision of Detroit Police and the school board's public safety officers, students were ushered into the school, lined up against the walls, and marched to the end of the hall where they were searched after going through metal detectors. They were then taken to the school auditorium, where they were forced to stay until the entire search was concluded, about 1 1/2 hours later.

No drugs or guns were found upon the conclusion of the search, according to a press release by the ACLU of Michigan.

The sweeps were planned and scheduled in advance and, therefore, were not based on reasonable suspicion that any particular student or group of students had committed or was about to commit a crime.

In addition to the policy changes, the district agreed to pay the plaintiffs $22,500 in damages and attorney fees. The Detroit Police Department also paid $10,000 for its role in the searches.

STATE

ed) our state nominees for the governor and the lieutenant government, all the way through to the board of trustees for the university. And then the next day we had elections and elected our state officials."

Squires found the experience more challenging than he expected.

"I ran for a couple positions and didn't get anything," he said.

"There were some people that went there knowing what topics they were going to talk about and (ready) to try to get people to campaign," Stacy said.

Personke, on the other hand, did get elected to a position and served on the state board of trustees. Hopp also was elected to the House of Representatives. Both were sworn in on the steps of the state capital.

The remainder of the week was spent with the elected and appointed officials learning how to govern their state.

Delegates to Boys State also met with elected and appointed officials to learn more about the duties and responsibilities of a variety of positions in government.

"I actually had a great time. It was good to meet a bunch of new people," said 16-year-old Hopp. "It's an especially good experience in preparing for college."

Boys State was originated by the Illinois Department of the American Legion in 1934. The plan was adopted by the national organization in 1935 and is operated in most states in the Union.

Boys State began in Michigan in 1937 and has been held at Michigan State University since 1938.

High school seniors are selected for the program based on merit. Most participants also exhibit leadership qualities, as well as character, scholarship, loyalty and service to their schools and community.

Drunken Driving

Police stopped a 36-year-old Jackson man June 29 who was speeding southbound on Zeeb Road near Huron River Drive. His 1999 Honda appeared as though it was going to strike the police car, but the driver braked and the vehicle skidded to the side of the road, according to a police report.

There was a strong alcoholic odor in the vehicle, according to the report. The man admitted to police that he had a few beers at the bar.

Following a series of sobriety tests, which the man reportedly failed, a Breathalyzer was given, showing the man's blood-alcohol level at 0.21 percent. A level of 0.08 percent or higher is considered legally drunk under state law. The man was arrested and his vehicle was impounded.

A 22-year-old Whitmore Lake woman was driving northbound on Zeeb Road in her 2000 Ford June 28 when a deer ran in front of her car and caused her to swerve and go into a ditch. She contacted police and reported that she wasn't injured. But after speaking to her, police detected an odor of alcohol on her breath. A Breathalyzer indicated that her blood-alcohol level was 0.20 percent. A level of 0.08 percent or higher is considered legally drunk under state law. She was arrested and taken to jail.

A 34-year-old Ann Arbor man was arrested on suspicion of drunken driving June 24 while driving southbound on Zeeb Road. Police said that his 1997 Nissan was weaving in and out of the crossover center lane several times. After failing a series of sobriety tests, the driver refused a Breathalyzer test and was arrested.

Larceny

A 74-year-old Scio Township man told police June 27 that a pair of fog lights, valued at $100, was stolen from his 1995 Ford truck. His truck was parked on his property in the 4000 block of Dexter-Ann Arbor Road.

Dexter Village

Larceny

A 20-year-old Dexter Village man reported that his white, I-Pod Nano, valued at $350, and cassette I-Pod converter, valued at $15, were stolen from his 1992 Ford Explorer June 21. The vehicle was parked in his driveway in the 3000 block of Huron View Court.

Road Rage/Assault

A 43-year-old Chelsea man told police June 24 that he had been assaulted as a result of road rage.

The incident occurred at about 12:30 p.m. The man was driving west on Interstate 94 when he changed from the left lane to the right. He told police that he did not believe he cut anyone off, but an older red and white sport utility vehicle with Wyoming license plates pulled up next to him and the driver started making obscene gestures.

According to a report filed with the Michigan State Police Ypsilanti Post, the man exited I-94 and followed Old US-12 toward Chelsea. The second vehicle followed. The man pulled over onto the shoulder of the road, as did the second vehicle.

The Chelsea man got out of his vehicle and walked back to the SUV. As he approached the second vehicle, the driver, a man who appeared to be approximately 65 years old, opened the door and sprayed him in the face with pepper spray before driving away.

The victim managed to find his cellphone and called his wife, who called the police.

The second driver has not been identified.

Alarm

Troopers from the Michigan State Police responded to a breaking and entering alarm 12:30 a.m. June 25 at Apple Electric on Luik Road. Upon arrival, troopers determined that the business was secure.

Lyndon Township

Assault

A 42-year-old woman reported that she was assaulted at about 7:45 a.m. June 10 while working at the Cassidy Lake Correctional Facility on Waterloo Road. The woman told police she was helping restrain a female "trainee" at the facility when the woman spit in her face. The incident was caught on a video surveillance tape.

Breaking and Entering

A home in the 4000 block of Loveland Road was broken into between 11:30 a.m. June 26 and 9:45 a.m. June 27.

The owner of the home, a 52-year-old woman, told police she found two window screens cut, but nothing was missing. The screens are valued at $30.

Impounded Vehicle

Police impounded a vehicle found blocking traffic on Boyce Road near Farnsworth Road at about noon July 5.

The 1991 Ford F-150 was found with the keys still in the ignition, up against a tree, blocking approximately two-thirds of the roadway.

Police later located the driver, a 17-year-old Gregory man. He told police that he had been driving when he got a flat tire. He tried to drive home on the flat tire, but lost control of the vehicle on the loose gravel and hit a tree.

According to a police report, the man did not have a cellphone to call for help and left the scene on foot.

Attempted Break-in

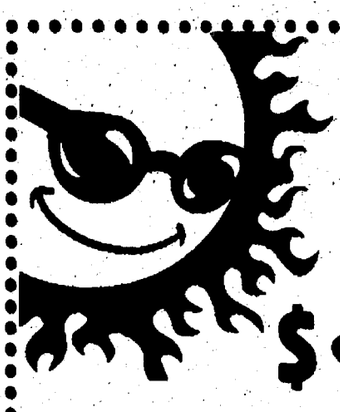

The owner of Vogel's Party Store on M-52 reported that he found the glass to the front entry door of the business smashed.

The 45-year-old Gregory man told police that the incident occurred between 9 p.m. June 27, when he closed the store, and 7:15 a.m. June 28, when he returned the following morning. He arrived to find that the glass on the door had been broken, along

Voters should support Fire Authority millage

The Chelsea Area Fire Authority was created in 1999 to position our fire department for future growth, provide efficiencies of scale, share liability with surrounding townships and enable a dedicated millage for financing operations.

In November 2003, the Chelsea Village Council appointed a citizen task force to evaluate the village's participation in the Fire Authority. The task force members were Scott Broekhuisen, Tom Osborne Harry Thurkow, Joe Tinsley and myself.

The task force issued its final report to the new City Council April 27, 2004. Among its recommendations were to levy a millage for fire services in lieu of equal general fund amounts.

A fire department, of course, does more than just put out fires. They minimize deaths, injuries and property loss from fires, medical emergencies, hazardous material incidents and motor vehicle accidents, and provide rescues and other services.

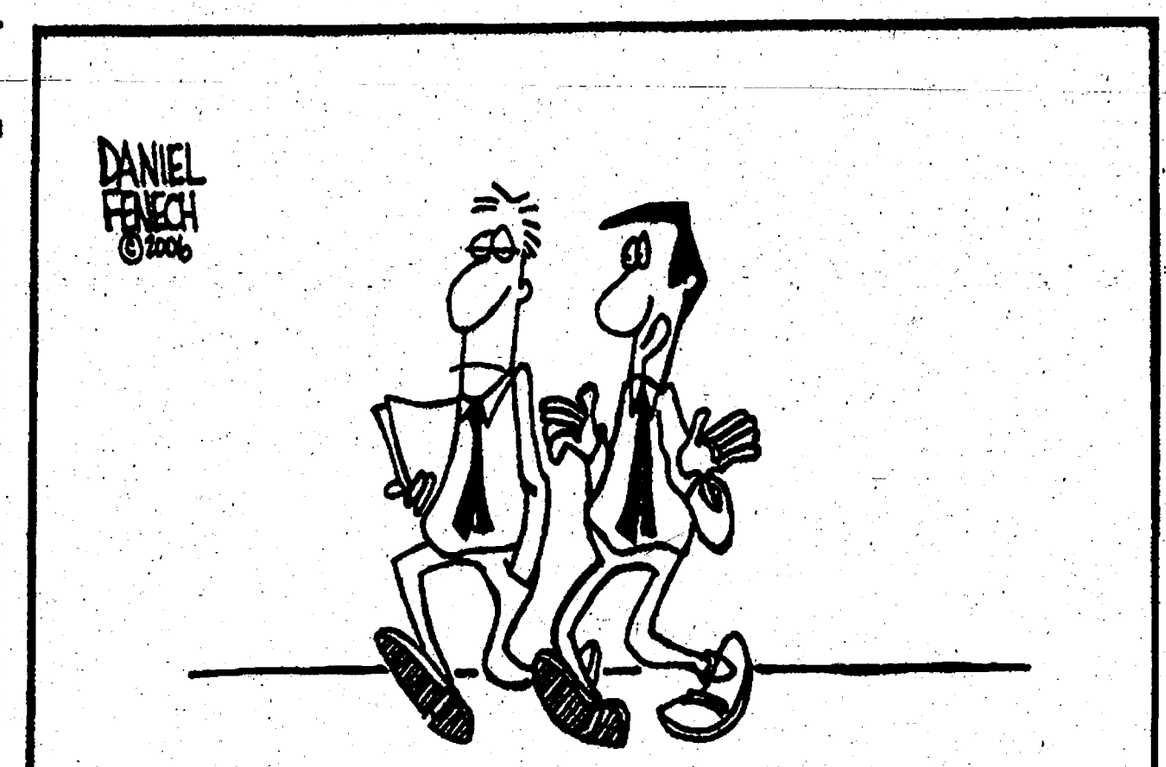

Gradual-but-continuous increases in public expectations, in training requirements and in equipment complexity have put steady upward pressure on costs. The task force's studies found that the Fire Authority is cost-competitive with neighboring fire departments. Since 1999, the per-run cost increases in inflation-adjusted dollars has been small, and the proactive operations management that has resulted by the hiring of full-time Fire Chief James Payeur is expected to keep those costs under control.

A referendum Aug. 8 gives area taxpayers the opportunity to change the way the Fire Authority is funded. Today it is reimbursed out of Chelsea's general fund. The city then bills the other participating municipalities. If the Aug. 8 referendum is approved, a dedicated operating millage will provide funding and will provide several benefits:

- It will "earmark" a specific amount for fire service, providing a framework for budgetary discipline.
- It will provide financial autonomy for the Fire Authority, enabling confident long-range planning not subject to the changing priorities of the city and each township.
- A millage will help ensure the Fire Authority's long-term financial stability.

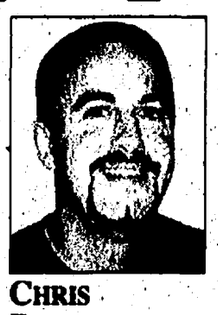

Passage of this millage will be neither a tax increase nor a tax decrease. The City Council has resolved to reduce the general fund budget by the amount of the

Many details surround one little proposal in life

CHRIS BARNES

The biggest questions I always had for newly-engaged men – How did you really know it's time? Do things really feel different? And is it truly the best feeling in the world?

Tough questions for a guy to answer. I never really got any solid ones, anyway.

So since too many proposals don't seem to be very concrete, as three out of five marriages end in divorce these days, is there really a point?

Other than the certificate, some rings and a huge bill for a banquet hall, what's the deal? So many questions.

What about the parents? How will they react? Will they be accepting? Will they help financially, emotionally and support us unequivocally?

What about the church location? Will it be in an area that all guests can find accordingly? Will it hold enough people? Will enough people even want to come?

How many friends do I have? How many family members are there? How many family members does she have? Better yet, how many friends and family members will make the trip? Can we afford all of them? These people like to eat.

I want a good tux. A really good, elegant, classy tux that would make Cary Grant jealous.

How much will that be? Will it look great or will I resemble a midget penguin on an Atkins diet?

The dinner is always the budget killer. Most couples offer beef burgundy, roasted salmon or some type of chicken dish in a cream sauce.

But I guarantee there wouldn't be any complaints about a taco bar (with do-it-yourself toppings) and a sundae station.

Think of the money saved and how many memories people will share of "that wedding with the taco bar." No one will ever forget it.

What about that commitment? Do you know it's real and forever? I don't want to become another statistic.

But then again, I shouldn't buy the ring and ask for the parents' blessing if the commitment isn't ready.

This is getting confusing. Should it be this way? Shouldn't it just be simple?

Just a mere decision that lasts a lifetime that has no hassles or millions of choices to make one special expensive day stand out from all the rest?

"So since too many proposals don't seem to be very concrete, as three out of five marriages end in divorce these days, is there really a point? Other than the certificate, some rings and a huge bill for a banquet hall, what's the deal?"

About that ring. How did you know what size to get? What style? What about the price range? I've seen really nice rings at some stores for about $39.

That would work just the same, wouldn't it?

Must I get down on one knee? Do I have to offer a poem or something? I hate poetry. It really makes no sense. What about flowers? Do flowers need to enter into the equation? Candy? How about a new DVD? Mariachi band?

There are really too many questions and details surrounding an engagement. The best part is, if you find a woman who's not materialistic and truly uncaring about all the Hollywood drama and princess spectacles, all that really matters is that commitment itself.

Eventually, I found the answers to my initial "biggest" questions when Andrea accepted my proposal recently in Cape Cod.

You just know. Yes it does. And yes, it really is.

Congress should end estate tax

Congress should abolish the estate tax, not because it's a gift to the wealthy — it isn't — but because it's the correct action to take.

The tax is discriminatory, and smacks of socialism.

Proponents like to point out that the wealthy, because they have more, should pay more. With that type of attitude, it would behoove Americans to stay put and not attempt to enhance their economic status.

There is an inherent flaw in taxing people twice simply because they are wealthy or because a family member died and bequeathed them wealth. The reason the estate tax has earned the monicker "death tax" is because the government taxes goods and wealth twice.

For example, say your wealthy parents liked to collect artwork. Upon their death, you find they willed to you a painting valued at $5 million. When your parents purchased the painting, they paid taxes on it. But now that the painting has passed to you with their death, you're on the government's hook for additional taxes. In fact, you can be taxed at up to 46 percent of the painting's value. You not only have a wonderful piece of art, you have a nearly $2.5 million tax debt.

America is great for many reasons, among them the possibility that anyone can become wealthy. Build the proverbial better mouse trap, design must-have software, make the right investment at the right time or even pick the correct lottery numbers, and we all can become wealthy. And we can all become the government's next target because of that wealth or luck.

Estate tax proponents claim the government can't repeal the tax because of the nation's deficit. Following that line of logic, because politicians continue to run the national budget into the red, they believe it's just to single out and penalize one specific class. Which class will be next?

It's not government's role to take our money and hold it for its projects, or to redistribute an individual's wealth — no matter how great or how meager.

The wealthy have more because they either worked for it, invested to earn it, or it was bequeathed to them. They should not be singled out for extra punishment because of it.

The last group of politicians who attempted such wealth redistribution became leaders of the former Soviet Union.

Something needs to be done about water woes

Folks in Chelsea supported a new water treatment system with expectations to finally have decent water, regardless of all the rate hikes. But what do we have? The answer is nothing that was promised, except rising water hikes and disappointments. Somehow this doesn't make sense to me.

I have a few very serious physical problems. I have financial problems. I cannot afford to purchase and install a water softener. Nor can I lift heavy bags of salt and maintain one.

What I will have is more corroded water pipes, as I have in the past, and get to pay for something I am not getting.

If anyone has a sign-up sheet and wants my signature to stop this silliness and give us what was promised for what we have to paid for, I would be very happy to sign.

My phone number and address are in the phone book. Please don't hesitate to contact me.

Make a difference in a teenager's life

Recently, the Alternative High School in Chelsea had to close its doors. Without the school, some kids will not graduate.

Chelsea has the best fair in Washtenaw County, an awesome theater, many great artists, wonderful Thursday night events and a pretty good school district.

Are our teens not as important as everything else?

This whole problem of people not taking time for others and the closing of the Alternative High School has bothered me for weeks.

Many people embrace that whole "me" thing by spending money only on themselves. They party and live it up, and shop for themselves, not having a care in the world about anyone else.

Many people do that because when they were children they did not have what they wanted, so now they are the opposite extreme and provide too much stuff without taking the time to teach one another about caring for others.

The life of an "alternative" student is very real. Many had to take care of parents, their own problems and make ends meet with circumstances you and I could never fathom.

Some have learning disabilities, but they are not dumb. They did not ask to be born into circumstances beyond their control. It's wrong as a community to turn a blind eye to kids in need.

We must serve as role models and help in our community so that there will be change.

If our kids see us snub our nose at a kid all dressed in black, then our kids will follow suit. If we gossip about each other, then so will our kids.

Just what kind of legacy are we teaching our kids? Are we teaching that to be successful we have to be perfect and do just for self?

The "fittest most perfect" kids tend to avoid the kids who have so-called problems. The kids who are "different," whether it be a speech impairment, handicap, learning ability or disability, they refuse to associate with the kids who don't live in a "nice house," or have a single parent or divorced parents and can't afford a nice new pair of shoes or even clothes.

I was one of those kids. I had a dad who was never home. Since he took little interest in me, at 9 years old I started to look for love in all the wrong places. I look back and thank God that I had many people step in my path and literally pull me out of the muck.

A man and his wife took me to church, where I found out about Christ and realized I needed to change my ways of drinking and dating, and just being mean to others.

A teacher paid me to clean her house. Even though I hated it, she encouraged me. Another man paid me to clean out Sherman tanks, mow his yard and rake leaves.

A kind neighbor lady would play cards with me, and a nice neighbor lady would have me over and cut my hair and make me "pretty" for a while.

Best of all, I had a grandpa who believed in me and knew how to make me get what he thought I should have. My grandpa knew if he told me I could never do something, then I would do it just to prove him wrong.

Today not all our kids are kept busy learning a useful trade or exploring the possibility of helping a neighbor, nor do we take the time to hear them or show them what to do. We just buy them the next best thing and send them on their way.

There is no amount of money in the world that can replace the kind of encouragement I got from so many people. Those people helped me get through the rotten times, and we can do that right now for these kids.

I am very sad to say that these "lost" kids in Chelsea are not getting much encouragement. The teachers who left after the alternative graduation did all they could do and had little support from the majority of the community.

Many times, I would try to talk to people about the alternative school and they would say, "Isn't that the school for tough kids?" They had no idea what the school really was or some had not even heard about it.

Those kids act tough because they come from single-parent homes or have no parents. They have a learning disability, and kids in the regular school teased them to the point of awful depression.

Many have been abused in one way or another and some abuse alcohol or drugs because that's how they were raised. Some have a parent with an addiction or a parent in jail.

If people would just help them, it could be different. This can be your chance to return the favor others have done for you.

I think it would be the coolest thing to have Chelsea stand out in Michigan, not only for its fair, library and theater, but also in the city's ability to care for its teens. It would be so wonderful if we had a haven for our lost teens.

But I can't do it alone. I would love it if a dozen people e-mailed me to tell me that they will help support our kids in need. I have tried to mentor a few kids, but I can't do it alone. This is our community and we need to do something to help these kids before it is too late.

I can be reached at ritafisch@yahoo.com. Please e-mail me if you want to help make a difference.

There is no end in sight for the war

In her letter published June 29 ("Where's the outrage about the war deaths"), Maria Vaughan defends incidents of torture as resulting from the pressures of war on our soldiers.

The overwhelming use of torture, however, is the result not of an exhausted military or a few bad apples, but of U.S. policy. Officials defend practices such as "water boarding," in which the victim is brought to the brink of drowning, saying that it is not torture because it leaves no visible marks.

The president lies, denying the use of torture, while the evidence reveals his deception. Our official use of torture is not fighting terrorism, it is terrorism.

Ms. Vaughan defends our presence in Iraq with what she calls a "news flash" for those of us with different opinions. Her news flash is a tally of terrorist attacks on U.S. targets from the first World Trade Center bombing of 1993 to the multiple attacks of Sept. 11, 2001.

Ms. Vaughan missed an important news flash. None of those attacks has anything to do with Iraq. There was no connection between Al-Qaeda and Iraq until we invaded and turned the country into a hot bed for the fermentation of terrorism.

Her letter is titled: "Where's the outrage about the war deaths?" But, it is only American deaths that she is asking about.

The outrage I feel is not just for the loss of lives but for the injured as well, and for the weight of broken lives torn apart by the insanity of killing. My outrage is for all who suffer from this war, Americans and Iraqis — all mothers hurt with the same unbearable pain when they lose a son or daughter; all fathers hurt when they lose a child, as do sisters who lose a brother and neighbors who lose a friend.

My outrage is that this great loss was not only unnecessary but has cost us, and the Iraqi people, in ways that will remain with us long into the future. I am outraged because:

• This administration ignored the intelligence that said, just as it had during Desert Storm, that going into Baghdad would destabilize the region and lead to civil war.

• This administration was so incompetent that they promised the invasion would be a "slam dunk," that Iraqis would greet us as liberators and the reconstruction would be paid for with Iraq's oil.

• After more than three years, the Iraqi people still do not have the level of basic necessities — water, electricity and sewage — that they had under Saddam Hussein.

• The majority of Iraqis just want us out. What kind of freedom is that which is imposed against a people's will?

• We squander our resources in Iraq while Osama Bin Laden remains at large.

• We are about to reach the milestone where the Iraq war will have gone on longer than our engagement in World War II. There is no end in sight.

Gravel digging should be off limits near Waterloo

This is just a little notice to those of you in the area who use the Waterloo Recreation Area about a deal with the Department of Natural Resources and the gravel pit on Loveland Road, and its expansion into state land.

Those of you who drive on Clear Lake Road, where Harvey Road meets, can't help but notice the big eyesore gravel pit that backs up to state land and the ones off Loveland Road and Green Road. Well, the DNR has plans to give part of the land south of Green Road to the gravel company in exchange for around 350 acres to be given to the DNR that the gravel company now owns.

Once they have destroyed all the woods and hiking and horseback trails and milked the land for its gravel, they say they will put it back into a natural setting. This sounds like a win-win for the state and us, but is it really?

I have lived in this area for 48 years and all I have ever seen out there are big open pits that keep expanding and never amount to anything other than a big hole. In fact, there are quite a few used-up pits in that area.

I think a line should be drawn and state land left alone, and all the open pits smoothed out and cleaned up once the gravel has been removed from the land they own. What makes the rolling hills of the recreation area so rolling is the gravel in them that may now be their demise in the search of the dollar.

Maybe this will turn out to be a good thing and they will smooth it all back out and replant all the trees. But it will never be the same, at least in my lifetime and for a lot of others who use the area to hike, ride horses and snowmobile.

And what will happen if this deal does go through and all the gravel in their set area from this deal is removed? Well, you can just bet they will push for more of the state land to extract gravel from. Everyone uses gravel — we drive on it, our house's foundation is made of it, and we need gravel pits. But the Waterloo State Recreation Area should be off limits.

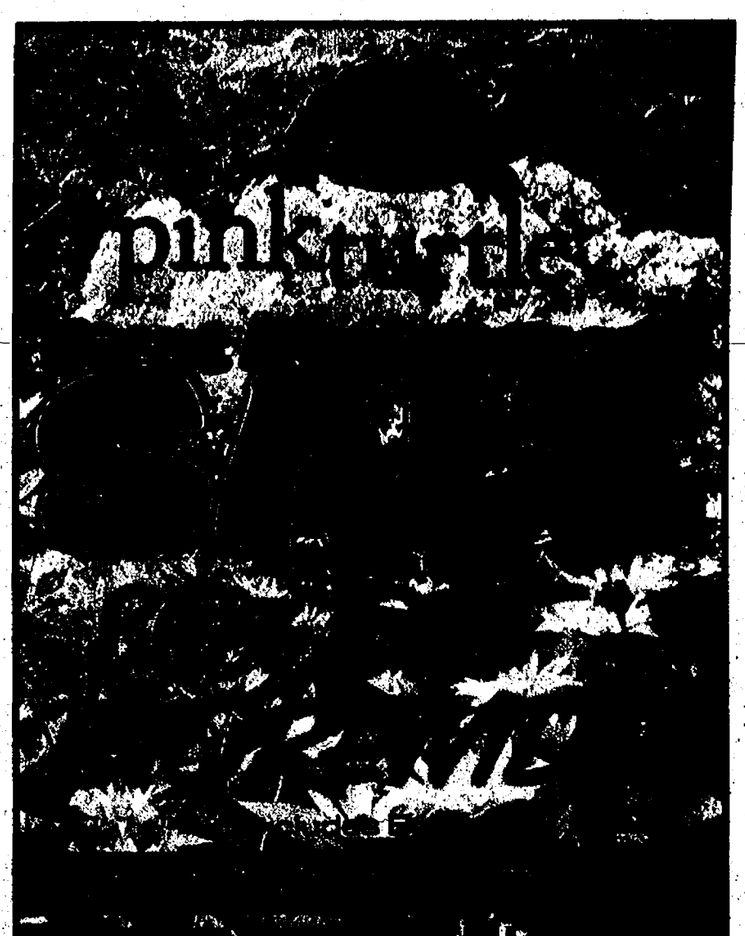

If you have any questions about this, call the DNR at 1-517-335-4824. I did.

based Teddy Bear Co. was criticized in a letter for selling teddy bears manufactured in China. A local resident opted not to buy a teddy bear upon discovering they were made in China.

While I don't know the owners of the business, and have not studied the teddy bear industry, I'm fairly certain the markets for these products give them little choice but to work with oversea producers.

Perhaps large companies have the resources and scale to choose where and how their products are produced, but for many small businesses there is no choice, as the cost advantages virtually guarantee that their products will be produced in low-wage regions of the world. In these circumstances, you either accept that reality and try to build your business, or cease to exist.

Fortunately, in many of these situations, the distribution, marketing and sales activities are a significant part of the overall effort of bringing the products to market, so that successful businesses that create jobs and pay taxes can still develop.

Save animals' lives by becoming vegetarian

If grocery stores kept live pigs or chickens crammed inside tiny glass tanks along with recipes suggesting that the animals be boiled alive, there would be a lot more vegetarians. But how many of us have walked by supermarket lobster tanks without as much as a second thought?

Take a look the next time you're at the store. Often, lobster tanks are filthy and overcrowded, with lobsters piled on top of each other, as I witnessed at a Meijer grocery store recently.

Even under the best of circumstances, eating lobsters can be a public health risk. Seafood is the No. 1 cause of food poisoning in the United States, and shellfish are involved in more than 66 percent of all seafood-related illnesses. In fact, as much as 10 percent of raw shellfish are infected with organisms that can cause hepatitis, salmonella poisoning, cholera and even death.

Keeping these sea animals in filthy tanks doesn't make them any safer.

It's cruel to confine animals of any species to a small space and slowly starve them. Most lobsters in restaurant and grocery store tanks are never fed in order to prevent the water from being fouled with excrement. Of course, this does nothing to protect consumers from the mercury, DDT, PCBs, dioxin, disease-causing bacteria, and other contaminants that are commonly found in lobster flesh.

It's time to liberate these and other animals from the pot by switching to a healthful, humane vegetarian diet.

TAX

Those who support the estate tax are playing a game of class warfare, pitting Americans against each other. They pander to envy, and paint the wealthy and successful as a greedy enemy to be targeted.

Lest we think there is a great number of America's richest who would benefit from killing the estate tax, consider that the Internal Revenue Service reports that only 1.17 percent of Americans who died in 2002 left a taxable estate. That's a pretty paltry number considering politicians fighting to keep the estate tax would have us believe there are millions of millionaires who will roll in even more dough if the tax is repealed.

The real enemy in this scheme of "look at what they have" is not America's wealthy. It's politicians perpetrating this fraud on people who are not wealthy. They are practicing class-ism at its worst, and need to stop.

Chelsea

Drunken Driving

A 24-year-old Pinckney man was arrested following a routine traffic stop at 12:58 a.m. July 7 in Chelsea.

The man was stopped for not having a light on the vehicle's license plate. During the traffic stop, officers performed sobriety tests and a Breathalyzer was administered, indicating the man's blood-alcohol level was at 0.106 percent. The legal limit in the state is 0.08 percent.

Stolen Property

A 19-year-old Grass Lake woman reported that her cellphone was stolen while she was working at a Chelsea business located in the 1100 block of Main Street.

The woman told police that she arrived at work around 3:30 p.m. July 6 and placed her phone in her purse, which was hanging on the wall in the break room. When she got ready to leave at the end of her shift at about 7 p.m., she could not find the phone.

According to the police report, the theft is the third to take place at the business in two weeks. In addition, a cellphone was reported stolen from a neighboring business.

Compiled by staff writers Jennifer McArdle and Sandi Kasha based on reports filed with the Washtenaw County Sheriff's Department, the Chelsea Police Department and the Michigan State Police Ypsilanti Post.

U of M committee to look at health care

In response to the national invitation from Citizens Health Care Working Group, a nonpartisan group authorized by Congress and charged with stimulating a national discussion on health care in America, the University of Michigan Health System's ethics committees will host a community meeting Wednesday.

The meeting is aimed at engaging individuals in the process of finding solutions leading to a healthcare system that works for all Americans.

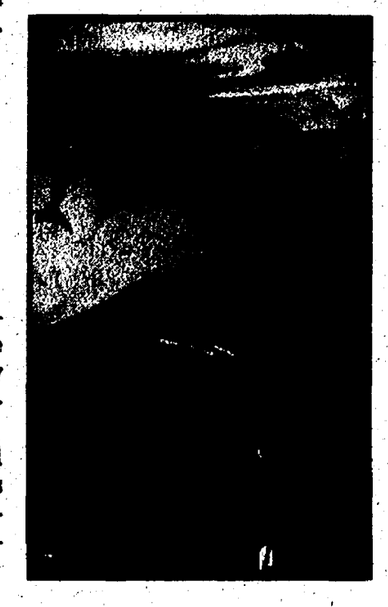

The meeting will be held from noon to 1 p.m. in the Maternal Child Health Center Auditorium at C.S. Mott Children's Hospital, 1500 E. Medical Center Drive., in Ann Arbor.

Participants will receive information on the nation's healthcare system, including problems related to cost, quality and access to care.

Participants will have an opportunity to share their ideas within small-group discussions about ways to improve the healthcare system.

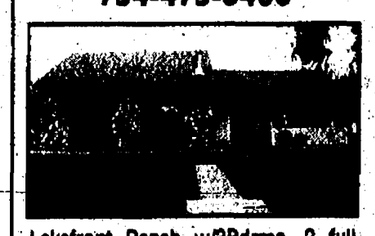

The information will then be sent to the Citizens Health Care Working Group, who will make recommendations to the president and Congress. The meeting is among many being held across the country.

Q: How many terms have you served in this or other government positions, including the present?

A: Two

Q: What has drawn you to run for this position?

A: The unsafe condition of our roads and public health programs, the apparent inattention of our current members missing meetings, etc.

Q: Describe the responsibilities and duties of the position you are seeking.

A: The county commissioner directs Washtenaw County government legislative, budget and oversight.

Eric Borregard

Q: What experience or qualifications do you hold that qualifies you for this position?

A: For last six years, I have produced cable TV shows on local and state issues, interviewing top experts and elected officials. I also have the experience of having run for public office three times at the state level.

Q: If you are an incumbent, please list your major contributions to your township.

A: No response

Q: If you are not an incumbent, how have you contributed, either in the past or currently to local government? How do you keep current on local government affairs?

A: In my broadcast, I have actively supported the efforts of the Michigan Campaign Finance Network and Women's League of Voters efforts to fight the corruptions run rampant in our current system of elections.

Q: Describe the three most pressing issues in your township, district, county or state and your thoughts on this issue.

There is really only one pressing issue for our local county government: government waste at the federal and state levels of government. Waste No. 1 would be President George Bush's oil war in Iraq. Waste No. 2 is the public dollars being diverted from public use into the corporate welfare system. Waste No. 3 is the corruption of our electoral process and system of financing elections and the resulting journalistic frauds of a corporate-controlled media receiving billions in campaign ad revenue.

the people of the district, from the well-to-do to the impoverished.

Q: Describe the responsibilities and duties of the position you are seeking.

A: The individual elected to the Washtenaw County Board of Commissioners for District 1 represents the residents of Dexter, Lima, Lyndon, Sylvan and parts of Scio and Webster townships on the Board of Commissioners, which is the governing board and policy-making body of the county government. The board is in charge of development and approval of county policy. One main duty of the board is set the budget for the county.

Q: What experience or qualifications do you hold that qualifies you for this position?

A: I am the best candidate to represent the interests of the citizens, residents and taxpayers of District 1 because of my experience, leadership qualities and dedication to western Washtenaw County. I've lived in Chelsea all my life and operated my small business in Dexter all my professional life. I know what it's like to pay taxes and what it takes to run a business. I have strong community involvement in both the Dexter and Chelsea areas. I am an advocate as well as a problem solver.

Q: If you are an incumbent, please list your major contributions to your township.

A: N/A

Q: If you are not an incumbent, how have you contributed, either in the past or currently to local government? How do you keep current on local government affairs?

A: In the past, I have contributed to local government by serving on the Dexter Downtown Development Authority and the Lyndon Township Board of Review. I keep current on local government by attending meetings of local municipalities, viewing their Web sites and by reading the local newspapers. I also discuss matters directly with government officials.

Q: Describe the three most pressing issues in your township, district, county or state and your thoughts on this issue.

A: Police protection and personal security are basic responsibilities of county government. I believe that we can find a way to provide countywide road patrol and relieve jail overcrowding without destroying the safety net of human services.

It's evident that more and more of the funding for services is falling on the backs of the township taxpayers. The federal level is cutting back, which cuts back on the state, and the domino effect is tipping toward the townships. The county should take a serious look at budget cuts to address the problem. We can lower property taxes and still maintain our quality of life by exercising fiscal restraint and finding ways to cut costs.

Clean air, clean water and responsible land use are among my top priorities. Regionalized planning and standardized, sensible development guidelines will preserve our open and special places.

Celebrate National Hot Dog Month

If you needed a reason to get excited about July, you've come to the right place:

National Hot Dog Month, a 31-day celebration of our nation's greatest culinary gift to the world, is under way.

Let us all pause for a moment to thank the good Lord for making us Americans.

While our heads remain bowed, a shout-out to the brilliant man who declared July National Hot Dog Month is due.

I'll bet it was Bill Clinton.

Apple pie might be the food we bring up to evoke fond feelings about the U-S-of-A, but mustard tastes terrible on apple pie and it's even worse when you wash it down with a beer.

Hot dogs are democracy on a bun. Republicans and Democrats eat them. Men and women eat them. Four hours after you finish one during a day game at Comerica Park, some lucky fellow in Seattle is having one for lunch.

What do people do on the Fourth of July? Grill hot dogs, of course.

Stop into a Coney Island in and around Detroit and chances are good your host will be from across the world or the other side the neighborhood.

Even the Bible extols the virtues of hot dogs.

Enjoying hot dogs is like a friendship that starts in kindergarten and lasts until the day you die. They never change or think they're too good for you.

They're always there.

In fact, the only time I got food poisoning was from a hot dog at Comerica Park. As I gradually made my way back to solid food, I had no desire to complain to anyone at the ballpark — I just wanted to know what I ever did to hot dogs to make them mad at me.

The thought was worse than a woman leaving you for another man. You always can get another woman, but what could replace hot dogs?

Frankfurter etiquette also can tell you plenty about other people.

True connoisseurs know, for instance, that a man who puts ketchup on his hot dog is precisely three-fifths of a man. You'll want to be cautious around this type of fellow.

Rule clarification: Brian Kelly, a Ferndale-based father and tastemaker who will likely be delighted to see his name in the paper, says it is OK for a man to put ketchup on his children's dogs.

Kids love ketchup but thankfully outgrow it.

You'll want to completely avoid the man who says he doesn't like hot dogs at all. He probably takes no pleasure in puppies, baseball, stupid movies or cheap beer.

Chances are pretty good he's also a Heineken drinker — and we all know about those Heineken drinkers.

Let's not even discuss that weird sect of misguided souls who think hot dogs can be made of tofu.

Rick DeTroyer of Chelsea is exhibiting his sculptures in unique outdoor art displays in Flint and Saugatuck. The experience has inspired him with plans for the local arts community.

Local artist has displays in Flint, Saugatuck

By Sheila Pursglove
Special Writer

Iron artist Rick DeTroyer has spread his wings far beyond Chelsea this year, exhibiting his sculptures in unique outdoor art displays in Flint and Saugatuck.

The experience has inspired him with plans for the local arts community.

DeTroyer's sculpture "Sand Maker" is among 34 outdoor sculptures by 24 artists chosen for this year's "Art 'Round Town" exhibit on display in downtown Saugatuck and neighboring Douglas, a project designed to bring sculpture to the streets of the community. Like Chelsea, Saugatuck, located on the southeast coast of Lake Michigan, is a community with a strong commitment to the arts.

"I'm very interested in adding a walking sculpture to Chelsea's downtown," DeTroyer said. "It would be similar to Saugatuck's Art 'Round Town and encourage folks to pick up a map and tour brochure and walk to the 30-some proposed spots in town. I have many supporters and ideas."

DeTroyer and Scott McElrath of Dangerous Architects, a longtime art supporter, are brainstorming a formal proposal for review by city council.

DeTroyer also is among seven artists chosen to exhibit this summer and fall in the gardens of the Applewood Estate in Flint, for which he was awarded a $1,000 honorarium.

Applewood, listed on the National Register of Historic Places, was built in 1916 as a family farm for the Mott family. Each year, thousands of visitors enjoy the estate's perennial, rose and demonstration gardens.

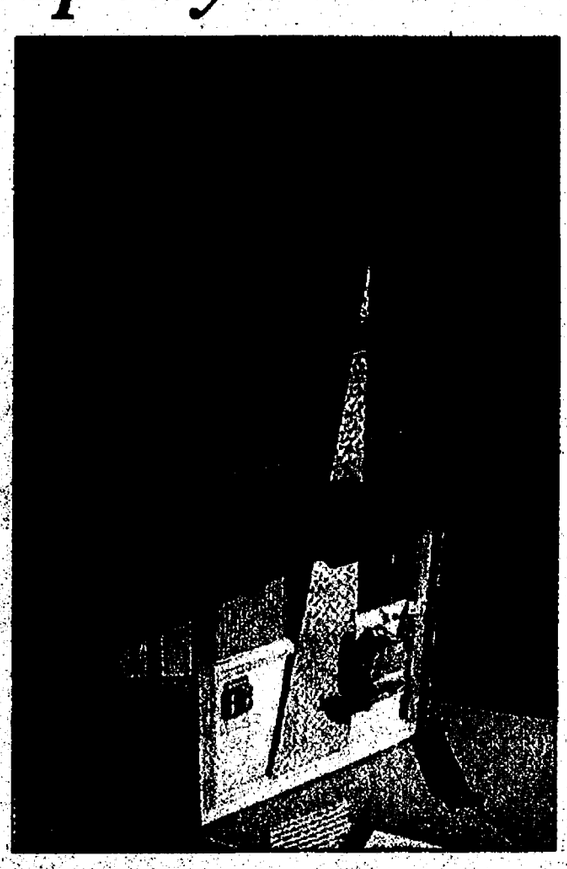

Ruth Rawlings Mott, who died in 1999, lived there after her marriage in 1934 to General Motors Corp. Vice President Charles Stewart Mott. A prominent leader and philanthropist, she established the Ruth Mott Foundation, which continues her support for the arts through the Applewood Public Art Program.

"I was blown away when I heard back from the Ruth Mott Foundation that I was invited to show in their beautiful Applewood garden," DeTroyer said. "I hoped Saugatuck would accept my work as it was a larger show and they look for new and different pieces. But the Mott Foundation is far more refined and I'm thrilled to be among their guest artists."

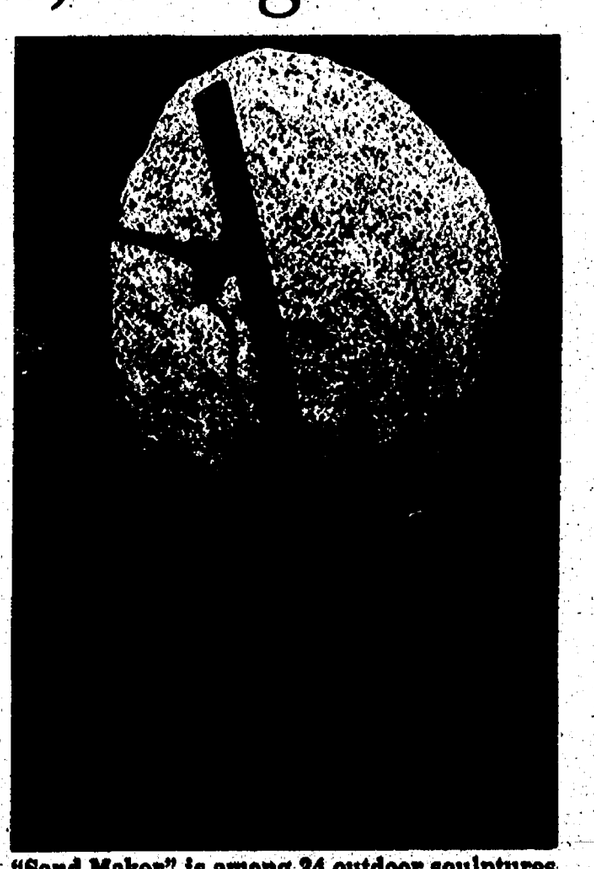

These two outdoor exhibits were in addition to DeTroyer's participation in this summer's Chelsea Center for the Arts project, "Opening Doors: A Community Celebration of McKune Memorial Library," celebrating the grand reopening of the Chelsea District Library.

New and recycled doors, used as canvases for artwork, will be assembled in mid-August as an outdoor public art exhibit in downtown Chelsea and other locations, and displayed through September.

DeTroyer, who teaches metal art at the CCA, was in at the start of this project, and made a couple of "mini doors" for CCA Director Jennifer Goulet to show and promote the door concept. DeTroyer also made a metal screen door to show how the art project door could be auctioned off later as a useable garden gate.

This outdoor sculpture, called "Regrowth," by Chelsea artist Rick DeTroyer is on exhibit.

"Sand Maker" is among 34 outdoor sculptures at the "Art 'Round Town" exhibit in Saugatuck and Douglas.

"I've been pretty excited about the concept, as a door is such a symbolic image to play with in the art world," he said. "I made a few more of the mini doors to serve as poster boards to set up in local store windows to keep the concept in the public eye.

"I'm displaying my 'Aluminum Screen Door' in my front yard to encourage others to support the door project and even make their own."

It's all a far cry from more than a quarter century spent teaching industrial arts to middle and high school students. Since retiring from Pioneer High School in Ann Arbor, DeTroyer has enjoyed working his own style of projects, capitalizing on his love of restoring old houses, and making the old come back to life and into practical use.

In a happy marriage of early craftsmanship and 21st century practicality, using both wood and metal, DeTroyer designs and builds furniture, door hardware, signs and planters for commercial office and restaurants, fences, light fixtures and more, in his converted barn studio.

His work is well known around Chelsea, and includes the metal gateway at the Pathway to Renewal mosaic sculpture in Timber Town park, and metalwork at ZouZou's Café, the Common Grill, Chelsea House bed and breakfast and Cranesbill Books.

Currently recuperating from a broken ankle, DeTroyer has been using the unexpected downtime to catch up on reading.

"Inconvenient Truth," has sharpened my goal to act on doing something to take responsibility for our global warming problem," he said. "I would love to let others know of the beauty in reusing what our landfills over-abundantly have to offer."

As an example of this, DeTroyer's latest sculpture, "Regrowth," utilizes an old I-beam from the demolition work at the Chelsea Clock Tower complex.

"I'm very excited about it," he said. "I've always been into recycling and my art shows strong use of found objects. I use old found objects as I feel it's my way of helping reduce global warming.

"By using old I-beams, I don't buy the new ones that are being produced with the remaining energy and resources that would have to be dug up, moved, processed, heated to melting point, trucked to sales and finally to Chelsea.

"I want people to know we all can do something to take responsibility for this earth," he said. "The found objects are an integral part of my style of art, and I do hope people see and like this style."

DeTroyer has planted this newest sculpture in front of his home.

"I love to see the traffic from Dexter stopped on McKinley at East Middle Street, staring up at my metal work," he said.

DeTroyer also is among the artists in the new Chelsea Art Market at the Clock Tower complex, part of the Sounds and Sights on Thursday Nights program, for which he also created banner poles.

"It has been a trick moving my large metal pieces around with this plaster foot, but I want more folks to be part of all this beautiful art we produce around here," he said.

Adult Learners Institute kicks off fall line-up

Course offerings to include culture, history and literature

By Jennifer McArdle
Staff Writer

It's hard to go anywhere in Michigan and not find some influence of Native American history. Even the names "Michigan" and "Washtenaw" come from the Native Americans that lived here before European settlers arrived.

The Adult Learners Institute is holding its fall kick-off registration event from 10 a.m. to noon Aug. 15 at the First United Methodist Church, 124 Park St., in Chelsea.

"Last year we had over 100 people come to our kickoff. We hope to have an even greater audience this year to find out what the Adult Learners Institute is all about," said Maggie Roberts, public relations coordinator at the Adult Learners Institute.

Included in the line-up of courses is "The Mystic Warriors of the Woodlands: A History of Native Americans in the Old Northwest."

With John Gibney, assistant director of the Monroe Historical Museum and the River Raisin Battlefield, instructing the course, residents will delve into Native American history and discover the people of the Land of the Great Turtle. The course will also introduce students to the "Mystic Warriors of the Woodlands."

Other ALI courses planned this fall include:

Values in Videos: The popular course returns with instructor Susan Conley Weeks, who has been a professor of religious studies at Siena Heights University in Adrian since 1984 and has taught a course in film for 20 years.

"Values in Videos" is designed to engage participants to help them discover the layers of meaning embedded in films such as "Dead Man Walking." Throughout the course, participants will select two other films to view and discuss, as well.

Splendors of Ancient Egypt: Elizabeth Thoburn is the instructor of the course, which explores the ancient Egyptians through the study of art and architecture, mythology and material culture. Participants will discuss the impact climate and geography had on the Egyptian worldview and find out what it took to be deified in Egypt, who could become pharaoh, and how ordinary people lived.

Thoburn has been the recipient of various teaching awards and scholarships by Fulbright and the National Endowment for the Humanities, which allowed her research trips to China and Peru. She has traveled to Europe, Egypt, Israel, Jordan, Turkey and India and within the United States.

Participants in the course may also choose to travel overnight with Thoburn to the show "Tutankhamun and the Golden Age of the Pharaohs" on display in Chicago until Jan. 21, 2007.

Creating the Onscreen Couple: The Battle of the Sexes 1938-1941: Instructor Jan Loveland, who has been teaching at the university level for the past 15 years, and participants in this course will explore how people's notions about romance come not only from real life, but also from couples they encounter in fictional works.

Participants in the course will view clips of various films and engage in discussion about the characters, while Loveland will offer some history of each film and provide handouts of how the films were received at the time and why they are uniformly thought to be masterpieces by film scholars.

Glacial Geology of Michigan: Larry Bean, a geologist with the Michigan Department of Natural Resources and Department of Environmental Quality for 18 years, will answer the question of why Michigan is shaped like a mitten. The class will cover two billion years of Michigan history and describe how bedrock geology influenced glacier movement and the subsequent formation of the Great Lakes.

Participants also will discover how and why glaciers form, and discuss the types of deposits and landforms created by glaciers, including the landforms and deposits around Chelsea.

Vamos a Hablar Espanol (Let's Speak Spanish): With guidance from instructor Patti Felipe, participants will join in discussions of customs and learn basic phrases and travel words to help them interact with Hispanic people and travel in Spanish-speaking countries.

Felipe, who teaches Spanish in the continuing education department at Washtenaw Community College, will reinforce participants understanding of the Spanish language with a focus on correct pronunciation, vocabulary, and basic sentence structure.

Trees and Shrubs

Bob Collins will introduce participants to the native trees and shrubs of Michigan with classes that involve a short lecture and hiking along hilly and woodland paths for up-close studies of plants. The course will include comparisons of cone-bearing plants and flowering plants meeting each week at the Eddy Discovery Center, 17030 Bush Road, in the Waterloo State Recreation Area. Participants will also learn about flowers, seeds, reproductive strategies, leaf changes, and winter survival.

Collins recently retired after 40 years as a full-time biology professor at St. Clair County Community College in Port Huron.

The Great Gatsby: Who, When, Where, Why

Paul Terpstra and participants in this course will explore the American dream and whether it is even possible to achieve by looking at the novel, The Great Gatsby, and attempting to learn why it is considered to be such a great book.

Terpstra, who taught English and psychology at Chelsea High School for 36 years, was named Teacher of the Year in 1997.

The Cofan People of the Ecuador Rainforest

Husband and wife, Bob and Carolyn Collins, will lead this course, which emphasizes the biodiversity and interrelationships of the South American rainforest, the most complex ecosystem in the world. The couple spent a week living with the indigenous Cofan people of Ecuador, traveling by boat 130 miles into the rainforest to stay in the Cofan village. They hunted and fished from a dugout boat, ate the Cofan foods, and learned of the Cofan customs. The Cofan people continue to maintain their traditions despite modern encroachments from tourism to oil exploration in South America.

Membership to the Adult Learners Institute is $25 per year and runs from Sept. 1 through Aug. 31, 2007. As of Sept 1, fees for most courses will be $10 for members and $25 per course for non-members.

Pet photographs wanted for special publication

Have you ever wanted to enter your pet in a cuteness contest?

Have you ever photographed your pet doing something insanely funny but weren't able to share it with a large audience?

Well, now's your chance to make your pet a local celebrity by submitting a photo and a written description for Heritage Newspapers' Pet Appeal special section, which will be published July 27. The deadline for submissions is July 20.

Whether you own a dog, cat, bird, fish, llama, rabbit, ferret, iguana or ant farm -- we are asking all of you to send in photos to be published in our special section.

In addition, submit a brief write-up of your pet that should include a physical description and history. The write-up could also include a story about something your pet has done or just tell us why your pet is so special.

After receiving submissions, we will decide which pet will grace the front cover of the section.

The Pet Appeal publication will be circulated throughout eight communities throughout Washtenaw and Wayne counties, so a great number of readers will be able to see just how adorable your pet is.

So come on, send us your photos and make your pet a star!

HOT DOG

Ick.

The all-time greats might forget anniversaries or their kids' birthdays, but they can remember the taste of Stadium Mustard in Cleveland, the magnificence of a true Chicago-style or the awe-inspiring feeling that comes when you order a Hippo Dog.

Seek out those people and get to know them.

While most of you, I'm sure, are giddy over the prospect of 31 days of hot dog revelry, there might be a few people here and there reaching a slow burn.

Every month, they'll say (and I agree), should be National Hot Dog Month.

Can we get Clinton to run again?

Editor's note: A quick call to a priest reveals that the Bible does not, in fact, extol the virtues of hot dogs.

It should. Along with the rule about ketchup.

LOVING HOMES NEEDED
HURLEY is a well-mannered 6-year-Old Beagle weighing 29 pounds. He is easy to walk on a leash, understands the command SIT, and simply loves to stroll around the yard and follow the scents. Hurley also likes to lie on his back and roll around on the lawn. He really would enjoy a fenced-in yard. Hurley has a calm nature and loves to sit by your side on the lawn, bench, or whatever is handy. Hurley appears to get along well with other dogs. He also has a microchip. He would be an ideal addition to a family with children ranging in age from infants thru adults.
CANDACE is playful and loves to have her ears scratched. She is already house trained.
BRANDI is a wonderful family-friendly Golden Retriever. She came to HSHV as a stray just over a week ago. Now this beautiful 5-yr old is in a foster home; waiting and hoping for a new friendly, loving home where she can be part of the action. Brandi is already well-trained (she knows sit, shake, and speak), loves kids and kittens, loves to run on leash and take walks. She is more interested in people than other dogs and animals.

Chelsea's Jerry Niehaus Field is undergoing major renovations this spring and summer. One of the new features will be an expanded home side stands. The new bleachers will extend from goal line to goal line and seat 3,200.

FOOTBALL

A new look

Chelsea's Jerry Niehaus field gets facelift

By Don Richter
Sports Editor

Fans of Chelsea football can look forward to not only another exciting Bulldog season this fall, but also to a new and improved Jerry Niehaus Field

The venerable stadium is getting a major overhaul this spring and summer in preparation for the 2006 home opener Sept. 15 against Adrian.

The field and surrounding environment will look quite different from seasons past. Bonds are paying for all stadium renovations.

First off, there will be a new entrance to the stadium parking lot.

"The old parking lot is being torn out and redone," said Chelsea Athletic Director Wayne Welton.

Welton said the new parking lot entrance would be across from the current Chelsea High School entrance on Freer Road.

"The two driveways will be linked by a traffic light," he said. "The new entrance will provide for better traffic flow."

Welton said the current lot entrance at Washington and Freer still would be available as an alternative opening.

Despite the resurfacing of the stadium parking lot, Welton said there would be no significant number of spaces added.

Once fans park their car and head to the field, they will be greeted by a brand new stadium entryway.

"It (entry) will be more centrally located," Welton said. "There will be a new ticket building, with a restroom facility. Spectators will enter through the middle of the building."

The new entryway will be aligned with the goalposts, on top of the hill behind the north end zone. The entryway will have two ticket windows, with bathrooms on either side.

Jerry Niehaus Field will have a new entryway this fall. The entrance will be centrally located and aligned with the goalposts on top of the north end zone hill. The entryway will have ticket booths and restrooms.

"The restrooms will be a much-needed addition to the stadium," Welton said.

The new entryway will have a peak, which Welton said might be adorned by a Chelsea "C."

"We're still deciding what will go there," he said.

The old entryway at the northwest corner of the field has been filled in, Welton said. The long jump pit has been relocated to the southern portion of the field/stadium complex.

Once fans enter the stadium, there will be an asphalt pathway on top of the north end zone slope leading spectators to either side of the field.

"They'll walk above the field toward their seats," Welton said.

The visitor-side stands, once the bane of opposition fans, will now be one of the area's largest.

"They'll seat about 1,000 people," Welton said. "The old stands used to (seat) about 300 or so."

Whereas the old visitor side stands used to cover the field from approximately one 30-yard line to the other, Welton said the new stands would almost stretch the entire playing surface.

"The (visitor) stands will now be from about the 17-yard line to the other 17-yard line," he said.

While the visitor side stands will be impressive, it's nothing compared to the renovated home side bleachers. Seemingly stretching up to the sky, as compared to the old home stands, the new bleachers will be a sight to see.

"They will run the length of the entire field," Welton said. "From goal line to goal line. It'll go up 20 or more rows. They'll seat about 3,200 fans. The whole stadium will seat about 4,200."

That number is for stadium seating only. The field will pack in even more fans for those choosing not to sit in the stands. Long a tradition at Chelsea games, Welton said spectators would still be able to sit on blankets or on the grass to watch the games.

"There will be spaces on the hill in the north end zone and a few spaces by the goal line where people can still sit on their blankets," he said.

The new home side stands will have four access points, Welton said.

"There will be two at each end (of stands), handicap accessible on either side," he said. "There will also be two entrances in the middle of the stands. People will come out (onto stands) at about the 10th row (from the entrance). There will be an asphalt walkway underneath the stands. It will make the stadium much cleaner than it used to be."

Welton said the home-side steps throughout the stands would be painted Navy blue.

"It's going to look really nice," he said.

Towering above the field will be a new and improved press box.

Chelsea senior pitcher/shortstop Kelly Jo Milliken was named co-MVP this past season with senior third baseman Hannah Myers. Milliken, who'll play for Saginaw Valley State University next year, hit .429 with 35 RBIs.

SOFTBALL

Milliken, Myers co-MVP for Bulldogs

Nadolny, Jacobs, Kindt also earn awards for Chelsea

Chelsea softball held its end-of-season banquet last month. The Bulldogs finished the season with a 21-15 overall record, falling to Jackson Lumen Christi 7-5 in a first-round Division II state district playoff game, ending its year.

Named co-MVPs of this season's squad were seniors Kelly Jo Milliken and Hannah Myers.

A shortstop/pitcher, Milliken batted .429 with 35 RBIs, 14 doubles and four triples. She had a slugging percentage of .625 and finished with 48 hits. The first-team All-Southeastern Conference White Division selection will play next year for Saginaw Valley State University.

Myers, a third baseman, hit .298, with 11 RBIs, nine doubles and one triple. Defensively, she had a fielding percentage of .958. A first-team All-SEC White Division and All-District pick, Myers will play next season at Grand Rapids Community College.

Receiving the Coaches Award was Megan Nadolny. The senior outfielder ended up with three RBIs and a fielding percentage of .857.

Excellence Program skates into town

Michigan's best prep icers to compete at Arctic Coliseum

Top high school hockey players from throughout the state will gather for the Michigan High School Hockey Excellence Program today through Sunday at Chelsea's Arctic Coliseum.

The program features 160 players that will participate in practices and games. National Hockey League scouts will be in attendance to evaluate players on their performance.

This year's camp will include scouts from the NHL's Tampa Bay Lightning, Montreal Canadians and the Washington Capitals.

Founded by Saginaw Spirit head coach and General Manager Bob Mancini and Chelsea High School hockey head coach Don Wright, the Michigan High School Hockey Excellence Program gives elite players a chance to be evaluated by top level scouts and to compete against fellow prep players.

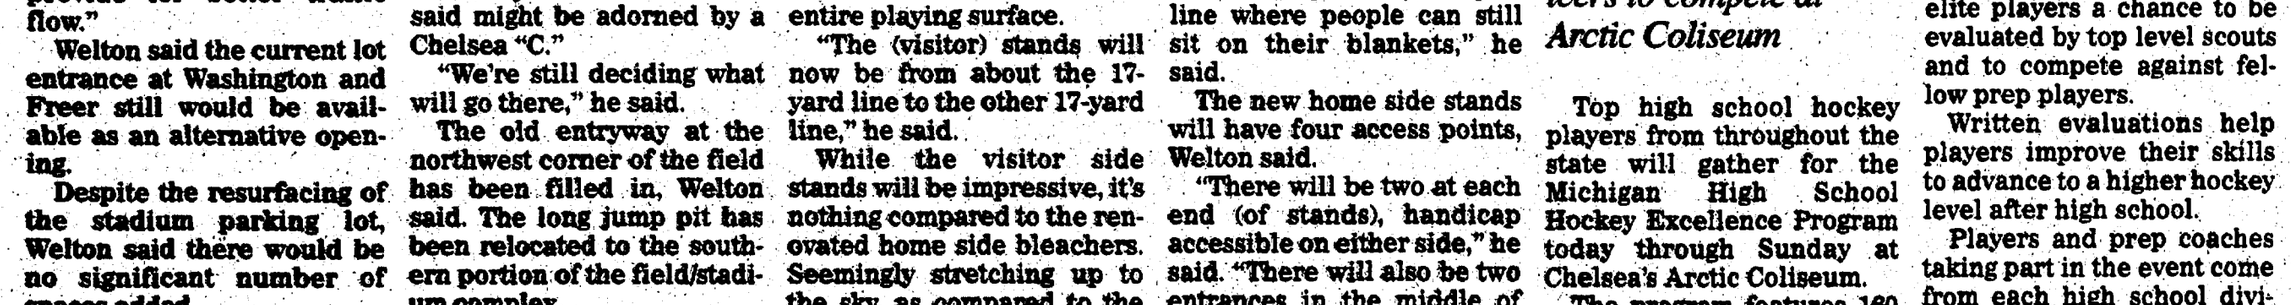

Written evaluations help players improve their skills to advance to a higher hockey level after high school.

Players and prep coaches taking part in the event come from each high school division and from locations across the state.

This year marks the sixth Excellence Program hosted by the Arctic Coliseum. The arena is also home to the Chelsea Bulldogs prep hockey squad.

Games take place Thursday through Saturday evening, with final games Sunday morning.

For more specific schedule information or additional questions, contact Jennifer Wright or Don Wright at 433-4444.

By Don Richter
Sports Editor

Former Chelsea standout Jimmy Baker was named to the first-team All-Mid-Continent Conference baseball squad last month.

The Centenary College third baseman finished the season with a .315 batting average, and team highs in home runs with four and in RBIs with 43. He also recorded team highs in doubles with 14 and in at-bats with 197, while he had 62 total hits, which was second on the squad and scored 42 runs, good for third on the team.

A junior, Baker, who started all 53 games for the Gents (23-30, 11-11), also was selected to the Mid-Continent's All-Tournament team, hitting .500, with five RBIs. Centenary lost to league champion Oral Roberts 5-4 in 10 innings and 10-5 to Oakland University to conclude its season last May.

In the loss to Oakland, Baker led Centenary, cranking a three-run home run and connecting for an RBI single.

Besides Centenary, Oral Roberts and Oakland, other schools comprising the Mid-Continent include Western Illinois, Southern Utah, Valparaiso and Chicago State.

The Gents, whose colors are Maroon and White, are an NCAA Division I collegiate athletic program.

Centenary is in Shreveport, La.

This summer, Baker is playing for the Little Falls Diamond Miners in the New York Collegiate Baseball League.

At Hillsdale College, Dexter sophomore Jennifer Gunderson was impressive for the women's track and field squad, finishing 22nd in the 3,000-meter steeplechase with a time of 11:58.83 at the Gina Relays last spring.

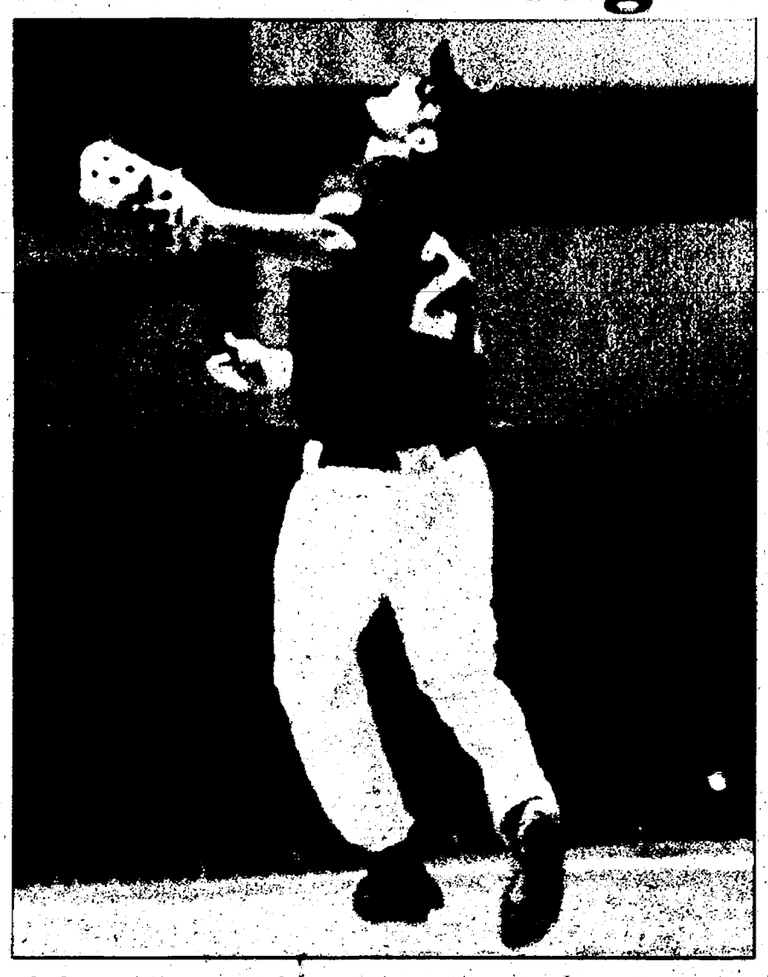

Also at Hillsdale, Dexter resident Krista Pfautz was a senior captain on the women's track and field team this past spring. Pfautz, who competed in sprints and jumps, is a graduate of Ann Arbor Gabriel Richard.

At Western Michigan University, Chelsea's Connie Kolokithas helped lead the Broncos to a Mid-American Conference regular season softball title. WMU finished with an overall record of 34-14 and a league mark of 18-4. Kolokithas started all 48 games for the Broncos in centerfield. She batted .224, with two home runs, 16 RBIs and four doubles this season.

At Eastern Michigan University, Chelsea's Matt Moffett earned the Eagles' Captain Award. The senior third baseman/catcher started 45 games this past season for EMU. He batted .280 with a team-high seven home runs and 32 RBIs. He had a fielding percentage of .961 and made 139 putouts. The Eagles finished with an overall record of 27-27 and a Mid-American Conference mark of 14-12 this year.

At the University of Michigan, Dexter's Tony Nalli was a member of the men's track and field team. A freshman, Nalli competed in distance events for the Wolverines.

U-M offers fantasy gridiron event

The University of Michigan Men's Fantasy Football Experience, a first ever two-day event championed by Wolverines head coach Lloyd Carr, will benefit the Men of Michigan Prostate Cancer Research Fund.

The inaugural fund-raiser, Aug. 3 and 4, will help advance awareness, research and treatment of prostate cancer while giving participants an unique insider's perspective on Michigan football.

Prostate cancer cases are increasing, while funding for prostate cancer research is lagging, according to a press release from U of M.

"With the help of the University of Michigan's Athletic Department, this unique event will raise prostate cancer research funds and promote awareness of this devastating disease," Dave Brandon, a U of M regent and former Wolverine football player, said in a prepared statement.

The Men's Fantasy Football Experience is open to Michigan fans from throughout the country. Only 116 select individuals will be allowed to register for the event, which is the exact number of lockers at Michigan Stadium.

"This is a once-in-a-lifetime chance for maize and blue fans to get inside of Michigan football like never before possible," said Scott Draper, assistant U-M athletic director.

Each individual will get his own personalized locker in the Wolverine team locker room and wear authentic practice and game apparel.

U of M coaches, current players and former Wolverine gridders will provide a special opportunity for individuals to gain insight on the requirements needed to successfully compete at the national level in Division I college football.

Participants will dine with the coaches and players at a recruitment dinner, review and analyze game films and learn insider Michigan football coaching tips, including weight training and conditioning, defensive and offensive plays and effective winning strategies.

There also will be a roundtable discussion on leadership, player recruitment and game strategy.

Participants will attend a typical team meeting, review an actual scouting report and suit up in the U of M team locker room.

After taking the field in Michigan Stadium, participants will experience a pregame warm-up, run patterns from the Wolverine offensive and defensive playbooks, catch a touchdown pass and kick an extra point.

The cost for the two-day U of M football extravaganza is $2,500 per person and includes meals and overnight accommodations.

Boyer named All-Star

Chelsea offensive lineman to play in elite gridiron game

By Don Richter
Sports Editor

For the first time ever, Dexter and Chelsea will each have a player competing in the Michigan High School Football Coaches Association East-West All-Star Game.

The 26th annual contest is set for 2 p.m. July 22 at Michigan State University's Spartan Stadium. Pre-game introductions are at 1:30 p.m.

Suiting up for Dexter in the game will be quarterback Jeff Ziegler, while offensive lineman C.J. Boyer will represent Chelsea.

The game includes the top 88 players in the 2006 graduating class.

The East squad is made up of players from Wayne, Oakland, Monroe, St. Clair, Lapeer, Sanilac, Macomb, Huron and Tuscola counties.

The West team is comprised of players from throughout the rest of the state.

Each team will consist of 44 players, with eight players from Class A schools, six players from Class B schools, four from Class C and two from Class D schools. Each squad will have 24 players selected regardless of school size.

Each team will have 19 offensive members and 17 players on defense, as well as one punter and one place kicker. There are six at-large players on each roster.

No high school may have more than one player on the team. There are 88 players from 88 different schools.

To be eligible for the team, a player must be nominated by his high school coach.

The All-Star coaches are selected by the MHSFCA board of directors at their spring meeting.

The game is played under regular high school football rules, except that kickoffs and punts can be run out of the end zone and there can be no attempt to block punts.

Throughout the years, the series has been close, with the East holding a slim 13-12 margin in wins over the West. The West, however, has won the last two All-Star games, including last year's 30-20 victory.

The game is traditionally held at MSU, but with construction and renovation at Spartan Stadium the past few years, the contest had been moved to Michigan Stadium the past few years.

Ziegler and Boyer will play for the West squad.

Ziegler (6-foot-6, 215 pounds) will be one of two quarterbacks on the West roster. He is the first player from Dexter to ever play in the All-Star game. The other signal-caller will be Michael Canfield (6-2, 220) of Lansing Everett. Ziegler will play football for the University of Michigan this fall, while Canfield will play at Central Michigan University.

Boyer (6-4, 250) will be among nine offensive linemen on the West team. Boyer will play for Saginaw Valley State University in the fall.

The West team is loaded with talent. Leading the squad will be University of Michigan recruits linebacker Obi Ezeh (6-1, 220) of Grand Rapids Catholic Central and linebacker Quintin Patilla (6-2, 215) of Flint Carman-Ainsworth. Both linebackers run 4.5 40-yard dashes.

Other top West performers include Eastern Michigan University signees running back Richard Franklin (5-11, 205) of Ann Arbor Pioneer and defensive back Clint Allen (6-0, 185) of Muskegon Orchard View. Allen is the two-time defending Division II state 100 meter champion, winning this past June's final in 10.4. He edged Dexter's Scott Chevalier (10.7) in the final for the victory.

Western Michigan recruits defensive back Nathan Turner (5-9, 160) of Haslett and wide receiver Tyler Aldridge (5-10, 160) of Jackson Lumen Christi, along with CMU recruit defensive back Cam Bramer (6-1, 200) of Olivet, also are standouts.

Two other players of note on the West squad include arguably the Upper Peninsula's best performers in defensive tackle Matt Payment (6-4, 275) of Newberry and linebacker Jordan Barley (6-2, 220) of Menominee.

The East squad is led by Iowa recruit wide receiver Dominique Douglas (6-1, 185) of Detroit Murray-Wright and MSU signee defensive lineman John Stipek (6-4, 255) of Macomb Dakota.

Other standouts for the East include hulking offensive linemen Jake Vermiglio (6-5, 310) of Rochester Stoney Creek, Jeff Maddux (6-4, 293) of Monroe and Ryan Jonik (6-5, 305) of Canton.

Fullback Scott Heidtman (5-10, 180) of Temperance Bedford is also on the East team.

Danny Stiefel (6-2, 190) of Sterling Heights Stevenson and Jacob Ball (6-2, 205) of Rochester Adams will quarterback the East team.

Coaching the West will be Joe Keglovitz of Lowell, while Tim Baechler of Canton will coach the East.

FACELIFT

"It will be above the home-side stands," Welton said. "It's a modular press box built in Texas. It will sit on the very top of the stands. It'll have a great view of the field."

Welton said the press box would have four separate rooms.

"There will be a main center room for game operation and the media," he said. "Radio broadcasts will be in another room. There will also be a room for each of the coaching staffs. It (press box) will be about 500 square feet."

To get to the press box, media members and officials will have to walk to the top of the grandstands.

The old home-side concession stand will remain, along with the restrooms.

The visitor-side concession will be up on the north end zone hill.

New black, vinyl-coated fencing will surround the field.

Another Bulldog tradition will continue, despite the renovations, Welton said.

"The players' entrance will remain the same," he said of the stairs Chelsea players walk down to get to the field before every game.

Welton said with the stadium improvements, there would be no more spectators on the track surrounding the field.

"There will be no more white fence," he said, describing the portable fence used to block off the fans on the track from the players on the sideline. "It will make managing the field much easier."

While the stadium is used for football, it also is home to Chelsea track and field. Welton said the new renovations would also benefit the track program.

"The track has been resurfaced," he said. "It has been recoated. It'll be more of a Navy color. The markings on the track will also be completed soon."

Welton said the new home side stands also would be an improvement for track and field spectators.

"Fans will be able to sit at the finish line now," he said.

Welton said the locker rooms, located in the old high school adjacent to Jerry Niehaus Field, are also being renovated.

"We're not expanding them, but they're being cleaned up, and redone with new amenities," he said.

The next project to be addressed at the stadium will be the potential conversion of the playing surface from grass to a synthetic field.

"That's a whole other story," Welton said. "But we could possibly see a new field after this (upcoming) season."

With the field and stadium improvements nearing completion and new landscaping being added, Welton said the community would be proud of the renovated complex.

"It will be a facility to match our football program," he said. "With the improvements to the stadium, I believe we now have some of the best facilities in the state."

Sports Editor Don Richter can be reached at 475-1371 or at drichter@heritage.com.

The players' entrance at Jerry Niehaus Field will remain the same after recent renovations. The players will continue to enter the field via the stairs in the foreground. The former long jump pit (behind stairs) has been filled in. The new stadium entryway is seen in the background on top of the north end zone hill.

Renovations at Jerry Niehaus Field include expansion of the visitor's side stands. The visitor's side capacity has been increased from 300 seats to 1,000.

Chicken broil set July 20

53rd annual event to be held at Alumni Memorial Field

By Marsha Johnson Chartrand
Heritage Newspapers

If you take 12,500 chicken halves, four pits, nearly six tons of charcoal, 250 pounds of butter, almost two tons of cabbage and a cast of thousands, what do you get?

It's the Manchester Chicken Broil, of course.

On July 20, Manchester will fire up the pits at Alumni Memorial Field for the 53rd annual chicken broil.

The pits are four deep, each 150 feet long, and filled with charcoal and topped with metal grids on which the chicken is slowly cooked.

"When all four pits are full, we are cooking about 4,400 chicken halves at a time," said Bob Rhees, co-chairman of the Manchester Chicken Broil.

While it's well-known that the event runs from 4 to 8 p.m. on the third Thursday of each July, the day starts long before that time, and ends long after the gates have closed and the fires have burnt down to mere embers.

It's at about 10:30 a.m. that the chicken halves are delivered by truck to Alumni Memorial Field. The charcoal is lit an hour later and the cooking starts at around 12:15 p.m.

The cooking process was originally conceived by Howard Zindell, a professor at Michigan State University, and debuted at the first chicken broil in 1954. The same process has been used ever since.

"Most chicken cooks for about an hour and 45 minutes," Rhees said. "It is basted with butter — many times — and salted.

"That's all there is to the secret ingredients."

The cooked chickens then are placed into 25-gallon stainless steel cans, about 85 at a time.

"They're kept over a fire then, so they continue cooking," Rhees said.

A tip from the top on picking up your chicken dinner is to line up early, Rhees said.

"The time to get your chicken is at 4 p.m.," he said. "There will be about 5,000 to 6,000 chicken halves already done by that time."

That's not quite half of the entire number of chicken halves that will be cooked for the event. Rhees says that by 7 p.m., all 12,500 chicken halves will be cooked and ready to be served to their appreciative audience.

When the fires start burning down in the pits, the volunteers retire for some well-deserved relaxation at the Manchester American Legion for an "Afterglow," where workers can re-hash the events of the day.

The chicken is only half of the magic, however. From the beginning, the secret recipe coleslaw — the other half of the combination — has held a special charm for many Manchester Chicken Broil fans.

"In so far as I know, this is still the original recipe from the first broil," said Bob Little, who, as chairman of the coleslaw committee, holds the secret recipe for the dressing.

Or, at least, most of it.

The legend of the coleslaw recipe is that each of the committee members has a part of the recipe, but no one has everything. And Little, who has been involved for more than 30 years, is not going to be the one to spill the beans as to whether that fractional rumor is 100 percent true.

"The recipe is often imitated, but never duplicated," is all he would say.

While Rhees claims that the recipe found in the Emanuel church cookbook is "as close as you can get" to the original, even he admits that he doesn't know exactly what makes the coleslaw one of the don't-miss portions of the meal.

The coleslaw committee does its work in secret, mixing up the salad dressing on the Monday at the Manchester Bakery before the broil.

"And then it goes to the Legion hall to be refrigerated," Little said, describing another mysterious ritual that merely adds to the coleslaw's legendary status.

On Thursday, the cabbage will be delivered, about 3,750 pounds of it. The cabbage is cut and prepared on the field and the dressing is added there, in 20-gallon washtubs which are then delivered to the serving tables and the take-out area.

Little said the rumor of the recipe being passed down to his first-born male child is, indeed true.

"He is my co-chair," Little said of his son, who evidently will become heir apparent of the coleslaw crew.

Alumni Memorial Field is located at the corner of Wolverine and Vernon streets. Shuttles will be provided from major parking areas in the village.

TALES FROM ABROAD

Mexico provides learning environment

Editor's Note: Julia, Doug, Heather and Robin Jackson of Dexter embarked on a trip around the world June 23 and will return home June 17, 2007. They plan to write periodically, sharing stories from their travels.

Hola to you all! We have been in Nuevo Vallarta for a week at Dad's luxurious timeshare. We were also with my stepmom, Susan, and the 13-year-old triplets. Together, we took a jungle tour (could have been called gift shop tour, as they steered us into a silver jewelry shop), a tequila factory, and later to a restaurant (not included in the price). But the highlight was swimming in natural rivers and waterfalls, and learning about Puerto Vallarta and area.

Another day's tour was an EcoTour, where we hiked in the mountains up and around to a secluded cove, where we snorkeled. The kids gave up after 15 minutes, when they got little stings by jellyfish.

The adults loved it so much, seeing so many colorful fish. This marine biologist guide of ours told us also about the birds, lizards and plants. Frigate birds and brown pelicans are so common here.

We had some days to relax at our fancy resort with the gang, seeing the Mexican Fiesta at night, including fancy dancing, a rope twirler, a flame thrower and good food. The swimming pools and the ocean kept us busy.

The highlight for most of us was the canopy tour, in which we did nine traverses by zip line, stood on 14 observation platforms (from 10 to 90 feet up in the air), and did a long repel down at the end. It was very exciting. We were up in the trees. Saw big termite mound, too, and some orchids growing natural.

The food is great. We're all getting along. We played cards and cooked many of our own meals in the room. Home schooling has begun in full force, with math and science. What a great setting, with the view of ocean out the window.

Today, we head to the airport, to fly to Chetumal, Mexico. Tomorrow, we'll be in Belize.

Adios from Mexico. We've been learning some Spanish. It's so easy when you can ask practically anyone if you said things right.

Knights donate to St. Louis Center, special ed

The Chelsea Knights of Columbus recently donated money from its annual Palm Sunday weekend Tootsie Roll Drive for the mentally impaired.

This year's Michigan drive produced $3,019 in the Chelsea community, with $2113.44 distributed to the St. Louis Center, a home for developmentally disabled children and adults in Sylvan Township, and $905 to Chelsea schools' special education program.

Many Knights of Columbus Councils in Michigan hold the drives annually on Palm Sunday weekend. All of the money raised is dedicated to programs that care for the developmentally disabled. The Chelsea council has traditionally shared its money with the St. Louis Center and the special education programs.

The Rev. Joseph Rinaldo, administrator of the St. Louis Center, said the Knights of Columbus is a supportive organization for the developmentally disabled population of Michigan.

"I don't know where we'd be without them. We receive support from many K of C councils throughout the state, and we would have difficulty surviving operationally without their help," he said in a prepared statement. "The local community is also very helpful to us every year, and we appreciate every nickel, dime and dollar donated during the Knights' collection efforts."

Council member Frank Pignanelli served as chairman of this year's event.

"The first principle of our order is charity, and every one of our members understands the importance of helping those in need who struggle the most in their day-to-day lives," he said. "We are enriched by the charity that we extend to others."

Pignanelli and several fellow council members presented a check June 27 to the St. Louis Center during special ceremonies at the Golf and Glory Outing at the University of Michigan Golf Course.

Bugs & Butterflies

Beekeeper Bob Benedict shows the children how a beekeeper must dress to be safe around a bee hive and shows them a bee smoker.

Tony Iannelli and his son, Jaron, search for insects on the playground.

During the week of June 26 through 30, Chelsea Community Education held "Bugs & Butterflies" camp.

Preschool students learned what an insect is, how insects defend themselves, the life cycle of a butterfly and how insects work together in social communities.

In the classroom, there was a microscope station where children could observe different insects daily. They also searched for insects and put them in the classroom bug observatory.

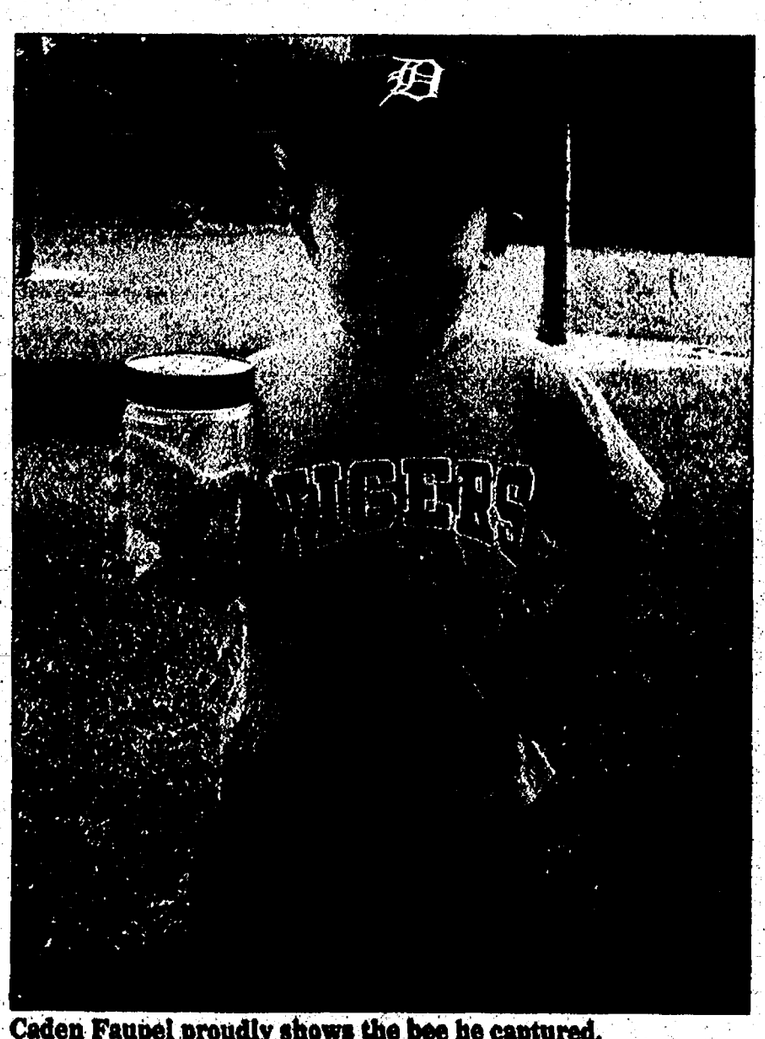

The children made crafts, pretended to be bees in a giant hive, and learned several insect songs.

Beekeeper Bob Benedict visited the classroom and taught the children about how bees make honey, while also giving them a taste of honey and candy made with honey.

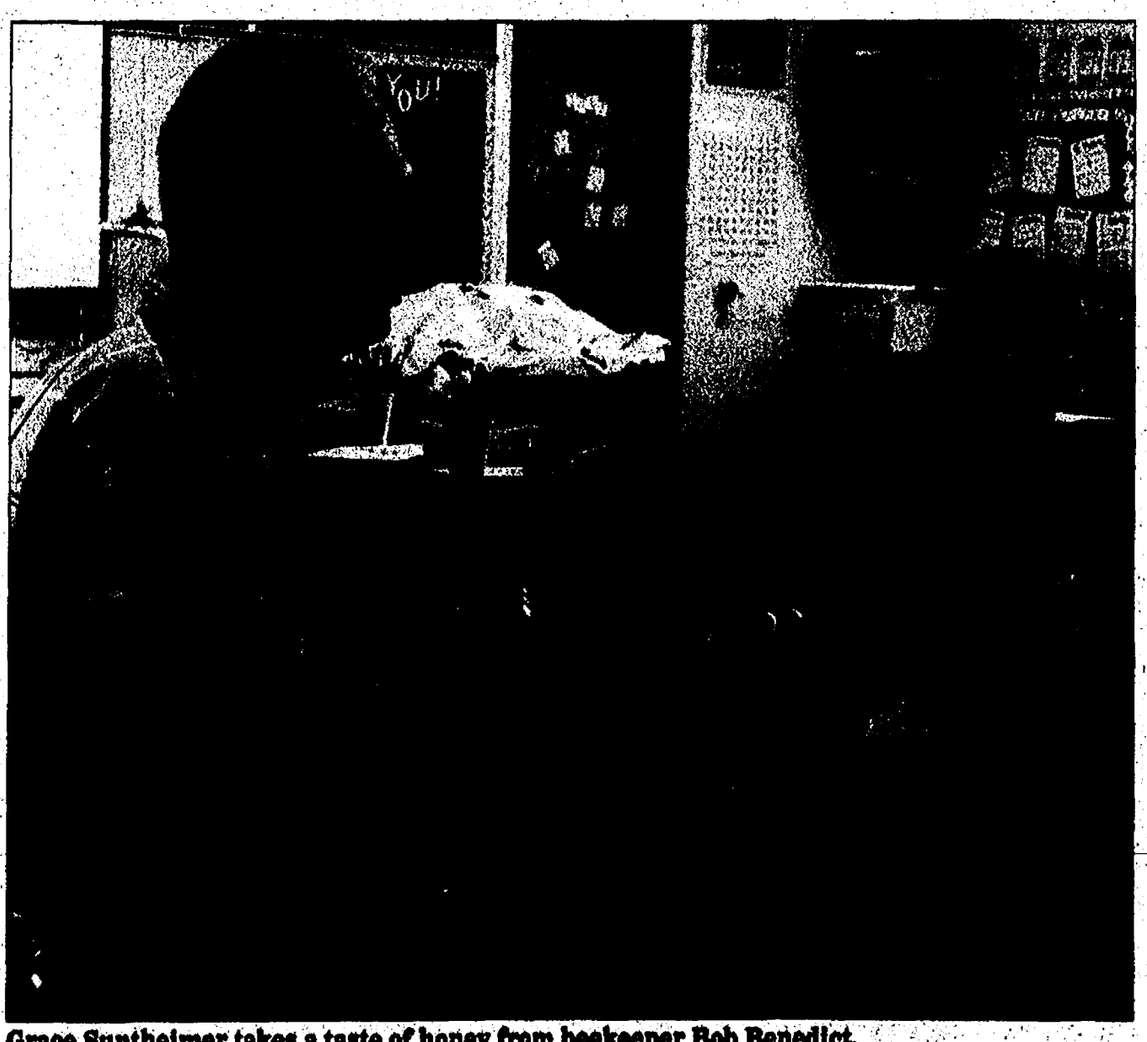

Entomologist Pat Hudson also visited the class. The children learned about many insects and how to catch them.

MONEY SENSE

SHAWN BUMGARDNER

Check out charities before you give

In the past few years, Americans have given generously to disaster relief efforts in our country and around the world, while at the same time supporting local causes near to their hearts.

With the increase in charitable organizations, many people are taking a more active role in determining which causes to support by seeking confirmation of the charity's legitimacy, as well as monitoring the effective use of their donations.

The process of selecting a charity can leave even the best-intentioned philanthropist confused and overwhelmed. There are a few simple steps you can follow to help ensure your money is being used effectively and efficiently by the organizations you choose to support.

Step 1: Clarify your own values and preferences

Before you reach for your checkbook, ask yourself a few questions. What is important to you? What do you want to support? Is there a particular area in which you are interested? Health care? Education? Hunger? Is there a particular demographic you would like to support? Children? The elderly? A specific ethnic group? Would you prefer to give to a local, regional, national or global organization?

By taking the time to answer these questions, you can identify causes and organizations that are important to you and take steps to align your financial resources with your personal values — making your donation even more meaningful.

Step 2: Gather facts to evaluate charities

Once you have determined which organizations meet your criteria, it's time to do some research to make sure the programs, mission and goals of the charitable organization match your own.

You can start by asking the charity who they are and what they do. A legitimate organization will be able to articulate its strategy and purpose clearly. Make sure the charity can explain its short- and long-term goals, as well as the methods used for measuring success.

You want to be sure that the charity is actually making progress toward achieving its goals and has specific criteria for evaluating its progress. Reputable charities will be willing to share all of this information with you. If they don't have a policy of full disclosure, consider making a donation elsewhere.

In addition to evaluating a charitable organization's goals, you'll want to investigate its financial health. Be sure the money you donate is actually going to the purpose promoted by the charity, as opposed to overspending on fund-raising and other administrative expenses.

Charitable organizations are legally required to provide you with a copy of their most recent Form 990 if you ask. This form is filed annually with the IRS and outlines information about the organization's budget and financial plans. The company's annual report is also a resource for budget allocation and program information.

If you don't have the time or the resources to personally investigate a charity, there are a number of companies — BBB Wise Giving Alliance (www.give.org), Charity Navigator (www.charitynavigator.org), and GuideStar (www.guidestar.org) to name a few — that offer unbiased charity evaluations.

This is an excellent place to get more information on a charity's financial health, fund-raising practices, day-to-day efficiency and accountability standards. These watchdog groups also offer guidelines and accountability standards on acceptable spending habits for a charitable organization.

Generally speaking, the standards advocate that a charitable organization spend at least 65 percent of its total expenses on program activities and set limits on the percentage allowed for fund-raising and overhead costs. (Source: Better Business Bureau Wise Giving Alliance www.give.org).

Step 3: Document your charitable giving

When you've decided on the charities you would like to support and determined the most effective plans for giving, it is important to keep records of your donations. A gift to a qualified charitable organization may entitle you to a charitable contribution deduction against your income tax if you itemize deductions.

For gifts of less than $250, a canceled check or credit card statement is sufficient for IRS requirements. For donations of $250 or more, you will need a properly worded receipt from the charity confirming your donation.

And remember, if you received a tangible benefit with your donation such as tickets to an event or dinner, you can only deduct the excess of your donation over the fair market value of the tickets or dinner.

As evidenced by estimates that this year's charitable donations will reach $250 billion in the United States (Source: www.charitynavigator.org), many people are taking steps to integrate philanthropy into their overall financial plan.

A professional financial planner or tax adviser can offer help in selecting the most appropriate method of charitable giving for you and ensuring that your choices meet tax and legal requirements.

By taking the time to thoroughly evaluate charitable organizations, you'll give yourself the peace of mind that your money is being used wisely, effectively and for the purposes you intended.

Surovell relocates

Edward Surovell Realtors' Chelsea branch has relocated to a new building constructed to its own specifications at 1301 S. Main St.

The real estate company's former office building at 323 S. Main St. has been purchased by Chelsea State Bank.

"We are leaving the downtown area with regret," Edward Surovell, the company's president, said in a prepared statement. "We enjoyed the prominent location in the heart of downtown and the architectural merits of the building.

Unfortunately, we lacked adequate conference facilities there, parking was quite limited and, most importantly, the building was not barrier-free. Now all Surovell offices are fully accessible."

Surovell's former Chelsea office was built as a residence, but it had been a real estate office since the 1960s. It was occupied for many years by Thornton Realty and was later acquired by Spear and Associates. Edward Surovell bought the company in 1994.

"Our new space is wonderful," said Kari Newman, sales office manager for the company. "It's exciting to be working in a building that was designed to meet our needs as Realtors. We have room for sales meetings and conferences, room for closings and, most of all, with over 3,000 square feet, we have room to grow."

PUBLIC COMMENT & OTHER ISSUES

There was no additional public comment.

Jessica Woods, Dexter Township's engineering representative from OHM Engineering, reminded the Board that she submitted written commentary for this months Board packet and requested comments from the Board regarding the content and future need for that written commentary.

Trustee Lesser expressed concern that a Board member was not a voting member of the MLSWA board. Supervisor Kelly responded that she is an alternate on the MLSWA board and is able to vote when sitting as an alternate. The Board also discussed a concern about whether or not all of the Township's representatives to the MLSWA board will vote consistent with stated policy and in the best interest of Dexter Township, despite their assurances at the May 2nd Special Board meeting.

Trustee Ottoman asked why it was necessary for the Board to take specific action to approve purchase of items that were specifically included in the approved budget, as doing so appeared to result in unnecessary time and Board attention. Treasurer Knight responded that taking specific action provided fiscal accountability and the Board had always done it that way. Trustee Wojno suggested putting expenditures in the Consent Agenda, as Board members can pull items off the Consent Agenda for specific action when they have a concern.

Trustee Ottoman also expressed concern that the Chelsea Area Fire Authority has voted Dexter Township out of the Chelsea Area Fire Authority. She intends to get all related documentation and would like to see the issue as a June Board agenda item.

Clerk Rider informed the Board that the State has decided on a voting machine for persons with disabilities and will be providing said machines for all precincts prior to the August primary election. However, this will likely result in more crowded polling places and additional expenses for personnel and other items.

Supervisor Kelly updated the Board on current legal actions and related court decisions.

Treasurer Knight informed the Board that Official Payment Corporation has expanded its service so that it will accept electronic checks, in addition to credit and debit card payments.

The meeting was adjourned at 10:41 PM.

Respectfully Submitted,
Harley B. Rider, Clerk
Dexter Township

SYLVAN TOWNSHIP

Town hall meeting looks at alternative fuel sources

State Rep. Pam Byrnes, D-52nd District, was set to host a town hall meeting yesterday in Sylvan Township to promote Michigan's role in the expanding field of alternative fuels.

Mitch Irwin, director of the Michigan Department of Agriculture, and Kim Mahrle of Wacker Oil were expected to join Byrnes to explain the benefits of alternative fuels. Max Gates of the DaimlerChrysler Safety and Communications Office also was to be on hand with a Jeep Liberty, which has an innovative common-rail diesel engine running on biodiesel.

"With the price of gas skyrocketing, it's obvious that we can no longer solely rely on foreign oil," Byrnes said in a prepared statement. "As the state prepares to move forward and compete in the global marketplace, it will be essential to develop new industries. The production of alternative fuels will create jobs and boost Michigan's agricultural economy. This is the kind of positive change Michigan needs."

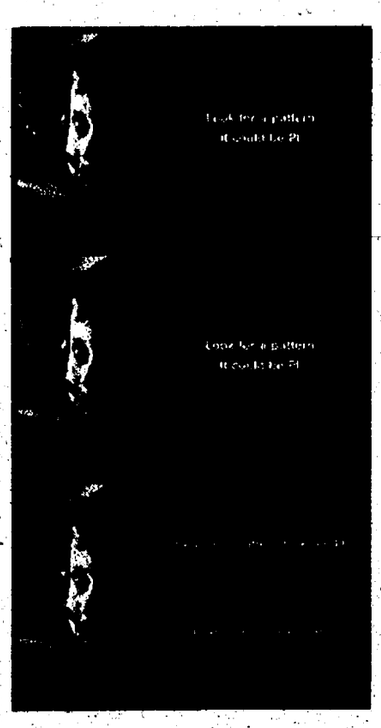

Recently, Michigan House Democrats passed a package of bills that will:

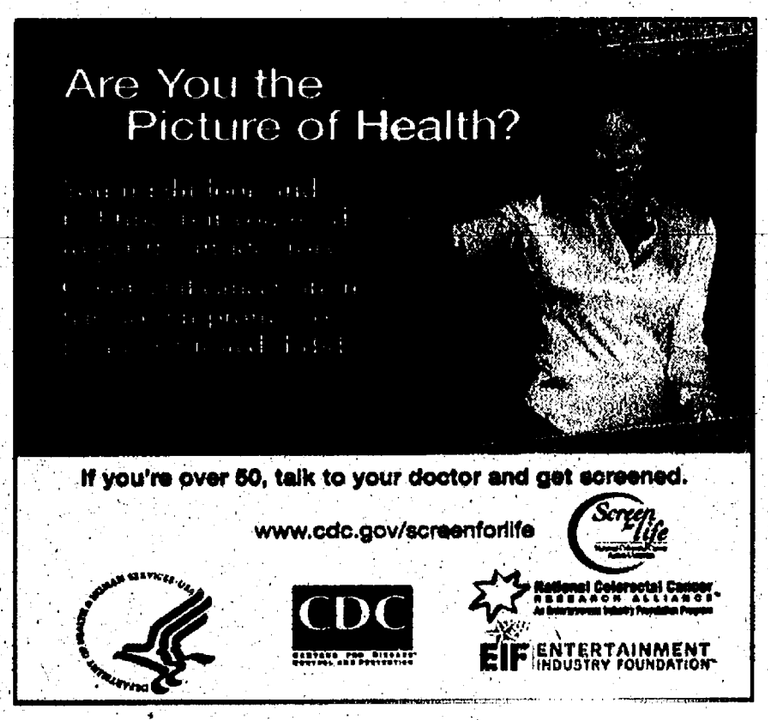

- Create incentives for gas station owners to install equipment for ethanol and biodiesel. Gas station owners will be eligible for grants ranging from up to $2,000 to update a current pumping system to up to $15,000 to install a new system.
- Create an alternative fuel tax of 12 cents a gallon for gasoline that is at least 70 percent ethanol and diesel that is at least 5 percent biodiesel, down from 19 cents a gallon.
- Require that the state install fuel pumps that dispense biodiesel and E85 for the state fleet.
- Create a Renewable Fuels Commission to investigate and recommend strategies for encouraging the use of alternative fuels and educating residents on their benefits.
- Establish new renaissance zones for renewable energy facilities.

Biodiesel is made from soybeans and ethanol is made from corn; both are major agricultural commodities in Michigan.

Ethanol costs an average of 70 to 80 cents less than regular gasoline, which will help reduce gas prices for Michigan motorists, according to a press release from Byrnes' office.

In addition, increased investment in alternative fuels will help create jobs as new facilities are built across the state, the release stated.
