Paying Tribute

Common named Citizen of the Year

By Allison Marable
Special Writer

No one could have predicted 15 years ago the success Craig Common, owner of the Common Grill in Chelsea, would have experienced in such a short time.

With two cookbooks under his belt and a nationally known restaurant recognized by Gourmet Magazine, Common has been the talk of the town for years.

Now comes even more recognition, but made sweeter by the fact it comes from the community that has supported him in all of his ventures.

What started as a typical business meeting turned into a morning filled with tears, hugs, balloons and flowers.

Chelsea's first Lifetime Achievement Award was presented to Janie Brooks during a surprise ceremony Aug. 9 at Faith In Action.

The award, sponsored by the Chelsea Area Chamber of Commerce and The Chelsea Standard, is being given out for the first time to recognize individuals living, working or participating locally who have impacted the community in a significant way.

It was born out of the Citizen of the Year Award, which honors an individual for contributions to the community in more recent years. This year's Citizen of the Year is Craig Common, who was chosen Aug. 2 along with Brooks. He was told Aug. 10. Both have been invited to participate in the Chelsea Community Fair Parade as part of the honor and they will be recognized together at a dinner in the near future, once a date is

Water supt. admits guilt

Daniel Rosentreter to be sentenced in child porn case

By Edward Freundl
Special Writer

A former longtime Chelsea city official will find out Sept. 18 what punishment awaits him after pleading guilty Aug. 7 in Washtenaw County Circuit Court to five counts each of possessing child pornography and using a computer to commit a crime.

Daniel Rosentreter, Chelsea's former water department superintendent, was set to go to trial in front of a jury, but apparently decided at the last minute that the evidence against him was insurmountable.

His attorney, Michael Vincent of Ypsilanti, did not return calls seeking comment for this story.

"It's a good outcome," said county prosecutor Brian Mackie. "It will not change the sentencing by pleading guilty to 10 felonies rather than 20."

Rosentreter originally was charged with 10 counts of possessing child pornography, which carries a maximum penalty of four years in prison and a $10,000 fine on each count.

He also was charged with another 10 counts of using a computer to commit a crime, each punishable by seven years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

Mackie termed the case "disturbing," and said the harsh penalty reflects the grim nature of the crime.

"Obviously, this is disturbing behavior and, fortunately, the Legislature has taken it seriously to establish these laws," Mackie said. "We certainly hope it serves as a deterrent to those who would trade in child pornography."

Chelsea City Manager Mike Steklac suspended Rosentreter in March 2004 after allegations surfaced of Rosentreter downloading

Lead found in kids prizes

Children who won the toys at the library should return them

By Edward Freundl
Special Writer

Parents of children involved in the Chelsea District Library's summer reading program are urged to return the small, bendable toys given out as rewards.

The toys have the potential hazard of high lead content. Highsmith Publications, a vendor of library prizes and supplies, announced a recall of the dog and cat figures that were distributed nationwide for the summer reading program, "Paws, Claws, Scales and Tales," immediately after determining the paint used on the toys contained an unacceptably high level of lead.

"We want to make sure that people understand the recall was initiated by Highsmith and not the library," said Shawn Personke, community relations and development coordinator for the Chelsea District Library. "The company let libraries know they were recalling these items yesterday (Aug. 10)."

The library's summer reading program began June 16 and ended July 26, and the approximately 600 children who signed up could receive a prize for every hour of reading or book completed.

There is no easy way to tell how many local children might be affected.

"Not all chose the toys as prizes," Personke said. "We had a variety of other prizes like books, bookmarks and stickers kids could choose."

Independent laboratory testing showed that the amount of lead in the paint of the sample toys measured 0.277 percent, more than four times above federal regulations of 0.06 percent.

The tests were performed Aug. 9, and Matt Mulder, director of Fort Atkinson, Wis.-based Highsmith, said the company moved quickly to recall tens of thousands of toys that had been distributed to more than 1,100 public libraries in 36 states.

"We're concerned that we don't distribute anything that could hurt children," Mulder said. "It's not something we want to mess around with."

He said that by Monday he had received no official indication that any children had been injured by the toys, and that the Consumer Product Safety Commission is working with the importer to determine a final course of action.

According to the CPSC, young children are most commonly exposed to lead by placing lead-tainted objects directly in their mouths, or from handling such objects and subsequent hand-to-mouth activity.

Symptoms of lead poisoning include nausea, sluggishness, vomiting, diarrhea, loss of appetite, colic, weakness and dehydration and, more specifically, discoloration of the lips and skin and a lead line on the gums.

NEED TO KNOW

To return the summer reading program bendable toys as part of the recall, contact the Chelsea District Library at 475-8732.

For more information on the hazards of lead, visit the following Web sites:

■ www.cpsc.gov/BUSINFO/leadguid.html

Lead accumulates in the body, so exposure to even small amounts can contribute to the overall level of lead in the blood and the subsequent risk of health problems.

Lead poisoning in children may have long-lasting or permanent effects, including neurological damage, hearing problems, mental and physical developmental disorders, attention and learning deficiencies, anemia and sterility.

"It's an important thing to get the public the information they need to make decisions, and we'll help them in any way we can," Mulder said.

The Chelsea library appears to be the only local library involved with the recall.

"I did not purchase any of those toys, so no one is in danger in Dexter," said Kathy Jurich, children's services library director at the Dexter District Library. "They were kind of ugly. I was not impressed with how they looked, so I decided not to order any."

Youth Services Librarian Cathy Harmon also said the Manchester District Library was not affected.

"We have toys as prizes for our reading program, but they came from another vendor," she said. "We did have a lapel pin from Highsmith, but that's it."

Personke said she hoped this incident would not cast a shadow on a hugely popular event for the library.

"Our summer reading program is our marquee event," she said. "It's a longstanding, fun program that people enjoy."

COMMON

Aug. 10 when Michelle Rogers, editor of The Chelsea Standard, made the announcement at the restaurant.

"I'm stunned," Common said while standing in the front of his restaurant surrounded by members of the selection committee, past award winners and local officials.

The award is sponsored by the newspaper and the Chelsea Area Chamber of Commerce. For the first time, it's being given out in conjunction with the Lifetime Achievement Award, which was presented Aug. 9 to Janie Brooks, the retired director of the Chelsea Children's Cooperative Preschool.

Both winners have been invited to participate in the Chelsea Community Fair Parade as part of the honor and they will be recognized together at a dinner in the near future, once a date is selected. The community will be invited to join the celebration.

"To be put in the category of past recipients is definitely an honor," Common said of the award.

Past winners include Jane Diesing, Jack Merkel, the late Helen and Walter Leonard, Walt and Sandy Zeeb, Ann Feeney and Gloria Mitchell.

Common's nomination praised his participation on the Village Planning Commission and Chelsea Summer Fest Committee, his support of the Retail Advisory Council and for hosting weekly Rotary Club meetings.

It was his involvement in the second annual Sounds and Sights on Thursday Nights summer series, however, that made him the perfect candidate for the award, members of the selection committee said.

Sounds and Sights, which features a variety of live entertainment offered for free in the downtown area, was the brainchild of Common. The carriage rides, musicians, late-night shopping and street performers have helped revitalize the city as local families and visitors have rediscovered all that Chelsea has to offer.

Also in the nomination, Common was recognized for his two books, The Common Grill Cookbook and Return to The Common Grill Cookbook, and his giving spirit. He regularly donates restaurant gift certificates as prizes for fund-raising efforts and helped raise funds for the American Red Cross last year to aid victims of Hurricane Katrina.

"I'm really proud of everything he's done and happy that others have recognized it," said Donna Common, Common's wife.

Following a successful career as a corporate chef, Common moved his family from Farmington Hills to Chelsea in 1991. The restaurant, meant to complement an evening at the Purple Rose Theatre, was born from the remains of an old vacant building that used to be Dancer's clothing store on Main Street.

"I think he's worked very hard since the day he got to Chelsea. He has put his heart and soul into it," Donna Common said.

"Everything he does is with the idea of benefiting others in town, and he takes them into account when making decisions."

Others thought that Chelsea was too small for a restaurant to thrive. The dilapidated condition of the building left many people unable to see its potential. On July 28, however, the flourishing restaurant celebrated its 15th anniversary.

"I am blessed to be working and living in a community that is so generous," said Common, who intends to continue building on the success of the Sounds and Sights program next year.

Bob Daniels, owner of Chelsea Lumber and a past recipient of the award, said Common is deserving of the award because of his involvement locally and his generous nature. "Whenever someone needs help, he's there," Daniels said.

Daniels said one of the reasons Chelsea is thriving today is because of the Common Grill's popularity and its association with the city. He said he is amazed by the number of people who recognize Chelsea simply because they are aware of the restaurant.

"That's invaluable," he said. Donna and Craig's son, Brett, a college sophomore, was surprised when he learned of his father's award.

Brett Common said his father's restaurant, along with the Purple Rose Theatre, have brought people to Chelsea who wouldn't have otherwise known about the town.

"As I've grown, I realize more what goes into what he does. He loves it," the teen said.

Common's daughter, Rachel, a 21-year-old senior at the University of Michigan, had been chatting with her father before he received the award. He was unaware at the time that she was on her way to the restaurant to witness it.

"He's the hardest worker I've ever known," she said.

Jack Merkel, the 2003 recipient of the Citizen of the Year Award, said the award left him with a feeling of humility and gratitude. He was pleased to pass along the honors to Common.

"He lifted people's impressions of Chelsea," Merkel said.

During his travels, Merkel said he has met many people who have asked about the Common Grill and Chelsea.

"(Common) gave Chelsea an identity and a special name," Merkel said.

Constance Eder, co-chairwoman of the Chelsea Summer Fest Committee, credits Common, along with Pat Cleary, owner of Cleary's Pub, for re-energizing the Food and Entertainment Court at this summer's festival.

"Craig has immersed himself in our community since opening the Common Grill 15 years ago and Chelsea continues to benefit from his generous spirit," she said.

Others at the Chelsea Area Chamber of Commerce echoed her sentiments. Pam Radcliff, assistant director of the chamber, calls Common an ambassador for Chelsea.

"His fine restaurant has brought many, many people to Chelsea, who, in turn, have shopped in our retail stores and gone home to spread the word about what a charming place Chelsea is to visit," she said.

Bob Pierce, executive director of the chamber, said Common was an ideal candidate. He said Common's decision to take a leadership role in the community is also indicative of his character.

"The landscape of our business community would be radically different if it wasn't for Craig's vision and leadership," Pierce said.

BROOKS

selected. The community will be invited to join the celebration.

Nominations were submitted in the spring, with Brooks, the former director of the Chelsea Children's Cooperative Preschool, standing out among the pack.

Last week's surprise was no easy feat. After Brooks had entered the building, a small crowd of presenters gathered outside. She was having a serious discussion about childhood education when the presenters walked in.

Brooks stopped talking and glanced around at the individuals circling her, with a look of confusion on her face. Pam Radcliff, assistant director of the chamber, handed her a bouquet of flowers and made the announcement.

"We want to congratulate Janie Brooks for so many years of service to the children of Chelsea," said Radcliff as she presented the flowers donated by Jenny Ellison of Chelsea Village Flowers.

Brooks began to cry as she realized what was happening. Upon hearing that she had received the Lifetime Achievement Award, she managed to say, "I'm very humbled."

Organizers said it was difficult to catch up with Brooks, so the meeting she was attending was all a ruse to get her in a public place to present the award.

Brooks, along with her family, was supposed to have left for the annual Cheeseburger Days Festival in Caseville, but stayed an extra day in Chelsea to attend this supposed meeting. Brooks' husband, Tom, told her he couldn't go with her because he had to stay at home to take out the trash.

Their daughter, Jenna Brooks, was anxious to leave for vacation until her father revealed the surprise that awaited her mother. She then played along with the deception to ensure that her mother attended the meeting unaware of the events to come.

"I had no clue," Brooks said about the award.

She wiped away tears as she was handed a bouquet of balloons by children who had attended the Chelsea Children's Cooperative Preschool, where she served as director for 19 years before recently retiring.

This was to be the first year that Brooks wouldn't be on a float in the Chelsea Fair Parade hosted by the Chelsea Children's Cooperative Preschool.

"I've never been in the parade without a costume," she said.

Brooks recalled being dressed as a bee, a chicken and Raggedy Ann, as well as appearing in pajamas during previous parades.

Chelsea Mayor Ann Feeney attended the ceremony.

"We're so glad it's you," Feeney told Brooks.

Brooks' husband, Tom, described her as a hard-working person who simply loves kids.

"I think she's going to miss a lot of it," he said of her time away from the co-op.

Tom Brooks said the award is a great honor for his wife, who he said enjoyed her many years of working with local children.

Jenna Brooks brought along her newborn son, Austin, to join the festivities.

"It's nice to have her honored this way because my mom has dedicated all these years to the preschool and youth in Chelsea," she said.

Jeff Rohrer, director of Chelsea Community Education, described Brooks as a tremendous asset to the children and families in the community.

"She's made a positive impact on thousands of kids," he said.

Brooks was nominated for the award in a lengthy letter written by Karen Fahle, Courtney Aldrich and Deb Hubbard. The women, all current and past members of the Chelsea Children's Cooperative Preschool, emphasized the difficulties that parents face as they raise children and how Brooks helped them face the task.

Their words depicted an individual full of energy and endless ideas, which she used to reach families, as well as the community at large. Each child's experience in her care provided them with a solid base for their future academically, as well as socially.

Brooks has received other awards for her involvement and dedication to children. She was twice named the Outstanding Teacher of the Year by the Huron Valley Council of Cooperative Nurseries and in 2005 received their One Step Beyond Award.

Her community involvement includes establishing the Early Childhood Coalition, serving as director of both Safety Town and WRAP camp, establishing a scholarship fund for families in financial need, and securing a grant to help in promoting the love of reading locally.

It was her personal attention to each and every family, however, that touched so many lives in Chelsea. The letter describes her advocacy for children with special needs, her awareness of stressed parents, and her deep love for all children despite their situations.

Brooks went above and beyond being simply a preschool teacher. Her efforts extended far beyond the classroom to reach parents, grandparents, children and siblings in such a profound way that she will never be forgotten, friends and colleagues said.

Karen Fahle, president of the Chelsea Children's Cooperative Preschool, had three of her four children attend preschool with Brooks. She recalls being impressed with Brooks as a teacher.

"We felt like she was always looking out for us," Fahle said.

Fahle describes Brooks as never having or showing favorites in the classroom. She displayed affection and patience with every child, regardless of what the day brought or which children were there.

"Janie had a cool, loving demeanor throughout the day," Fahle said.

Community builds new play structure

Cavanaugh Lake residents participate in community build

By Sheila Pursglove
Special Writer

Under perfect blue skies and sunshine Saturday, about 40 friends and neighbors joined together in a 12-hour "community build" of a new playground at Cavanaugh Lake Park.

The enthusiastic builders, fueled by doughnuts, coffee and pizza, were spearheaded by Cavanaugh Lake residents Mike and Heather Zientek.

On Sunday, Mike Zientek was fatigued and sore, but thrilled to have the structure complete — and champing at the bit to take his two youngsters, 4-year-old Lindsay and 19-month-old Joshua, to the park Monday once the barriers were removed.

"It was truly amazing how everyone came together," Zientek said. "We had some very motivated volunteers. Everyone helped in some way, whether it was pouring concrete, picking up a socket, handing out tools, spreading out the cedar chips."

The biggest challenge, he said, was building the largest structure, which is about 8 feet tall.

"We were pretty ragged by the end of the day," he said. "By the time the last few bolts were put in and the last cedar chip raked, everyone heaved a huge sigh of relief."

The playground was the culmination of an effort that got rolling last fall, when Zientek approached the Washtenaw County Parks and Recreation Commission. He spoke on behalf of the Cavanaugh Lake Association, and said families living near the park wanted to replace and upgrade the playground at the park, and help raise funds to do so.

The commission agreed to match local fund-raising. The county will be responsible for playground maintenance.

The Zienteks helped organize a neighborhood committee of volunteers to determine play equipment needs, review products, solicit funds and construction materials, and select the equipment.

The new playground includes a large handicapped-accessible structure with eight different play features. It also has two swings and a "Rock 'n' Cross," a multi-rider teeter-totter with a dynamic overhead challenge.

The equipment is manufactured with U.S.-made, reclaimed steel and high-density polyethylene plastic.

The committee opted for a "community build" effort, which is a professionally supervised installation using community volunteers. Community builds save up to 30 percent of a contractor installation, and help to create strong relationships with civic groups and neighbors, as well as fostering a sense of community pride and ownership, said Ray Essell, park planner for the commission.

Ann Arbor Jackson Concrete Forming donated excavation services and Chelsea

Lumber Co. donated timber materials. Ollie's Pizza in Chelsea contributed lunch.

The project got a big financial boost from Zientek's employer, Pfizer Corp. Todd's Services plans to provide hydroseeding, and Chelsea resident John Torrance has volunteered his expertise to install a brick walkway, featuring bricks that will thank project supporters.

Cavanaugh Lake Park is the only public playground in Sylvan Township.

"In Sylvan, there's no real community place, so the park is a big focal point," Zientek said. "We hope families will use it a lot and enjoy it for years to come."

Fair parade in the works

Rules keep spectators, participants safe

By Alison Marable
Special Writer

The Chelsea Fair parade, which generally consists of two hours of colorful floats, local service clubs and plenty of candy, requires a lot of behind-the-scenes efforts on behalf of a small group of local volunteers each year.

Bill Paul and Kevin Van Orman, members of the Chelsea Area Fire Authority, and Steve Bergman and Keith O'Neil, retired members, are this year's main organizers. Bergman was the main organizer of the parade for many years.

"Without him, the parade never would have happened," said Van Orman.

Before the actual day of the parade, which will be held Aug. 26, organizers handle all the preliminary work, such as handing out permits, reviewing rules and answering questions. The morning of the parade, their day begins at about 5 a.m. as they tag certain streets as "no parking" zones and place signs directing participants where to go.

Members of the Chelsea Community Fair Board and the Fire Authority volunteers alternate years when choosing the parade marshals. This year, the fair board will make the final decision. But as of press time, none had been made.

The hours leading up to the 1 p.m. parade start time are busy with activity. Parade volunteers need to organize all participants, check paperwork and safety requirements, and judge floats so ribbons and prizes can be awarded.

Horses are staged on Park Street, between Main and East streets, between 12:15 and 12:30 p.m. and owners must have proof of a negative Coggins test. Riders must keep their horses on the roadway and off lawns.

Other parade participants may begin staging at 10 a.m. and must be in line by noon. Members of school bands are to form in the alley of the Municipal Parking lot off of East Street. All farm machinery should line up on the east side of East Street from Park Street south, facing north.

All antique vehicles are to line up on the south side of Harrison Street, from East to Madison streets, facing west. All trucks and miscellaneous vehicles are to line up on East Street, from Park Street south, on the west side.

Fire trucks and emergency vehicles are to line up on the south side of Park Street, facing west, starting at East Street.

Larry Gaken, also a member of the Fire Authority, handles the float portion of the parade. A safety inspection will be conducted on all floats. The crew will inspect each float to confirm that guidelines have been met. If any violations are found, the safety crew can remove the float from the parade.

Floats begin staging around 10 a.m. and must be completed and in line by 11 a.m. to be considered for judging. Floats arriving after 11 a.m. will not be judged.

Prizes in both an adult and youth categories are awarded for first through fourth places. The premiums to be handed out are in $70, $55, $45 and $35 denominations.

Several rules are in place to keep both participants and spectators safe during the parade. Participants are asked not to leave their motorized vehicles or floats once in line. This maintains control of the vehicles and prohibits delays in judging or starting the parade.

Children eagerly anticipate the candy that is tossed each year.

"It's almost like trick or treat," said Van Orman.

To ensure safety, only candy without sticks is allowed and candy is to be thrown near the curb to avoid having children run into the road.

The parade this year will have all the favorite attractions, including horses, fire trucks, local children's groups, middle and high school bands, and vibrant floats. Among the most popular are restored antique and muscle cars.

"They bring back memories," Van Orman said.

The parade will begin promptly at 1 p.m. Aug. 26. It's tradition for the VFW Honor Guard to begin the parade with the Scout Color Guard following them. Van Orman will be among the firefighters bringing up the rear after what is expected to be a full two hours of local flair that ends near the fairgrounds at the corner of Old US-12 and Chelsea-Manchester Road.

"Without (Steve Bergman), the parade never would have happened."

POLICE BLOTTER

Scio Township Malicious Destruction of Property

Police were dispatched to the parking lot of Peace Lutheran Church, 8260 Jackson Road, Aug. 2 to investigate a gas tank door that had been pried open. The vehicle belonged to a 23-year-old Dexter Village woman who told police the gas cap was cut from its tether and couldn't be located.

The woman said she checked her gas gauge and it was in the same position as it was when she parked the car.

Damage is estimated at $200.

Larceny

A 21-year-old Canton man told police Aug. 12 that his jacket containing his cell-phone and house keys was taken during a wedding reception at the Polo Fields Club House, 5200 Polo Fields. The items are valued at $200.

Larceny from a Vehicle

A 38-year-old Scio Township woman reported items missing from her 1999 Ford Windstar Aug. 9. She told police that her car was parked in the 3200 block of Waters Meadow Trail. Among the missing items was her brief-case, which is valued at $78.

Home Invasion

Police were dispatched to the 4100 block of Woodland Drive in Scio Township Aug. 3 to investigate a home invasion. The 58-year-old woman said she came home from work to find that the front door was unlocked and the window in her recreation room was open.

The woman found a number of items, valued at $659, missing.

The window in the basement was also open, according to a police report.

Domestic Assault

A 26-year-old Scio Township woman told police her husband, 25, assaulted her at their home. She said she and her husband have had similar situations before in which they've pushed and shoved each other.

Police reports indicated that the man ransacked the home, throwing his dinner, the TV set, computer monitor and other items. Damages are estimated at $790.

While police were interviewing the woman, the man reportedly called and told her to file for divorce. Police advised the woman to seek counsel at SafeHouse and provided her with other security precautions.

Drunken Driving

Police stopped a 27-year-old Scio Township man driving a 2000 Volkswagen eastbound on Dexter-Ann Arbor Road near Zeeb Road Aug. 2. He was reportedly driving in the wrong lane of traffic and nearly struck some oncoming vehicles.

The driver was reportedly sleeping when police approached the car. The vehicle was still in drive and the man had his foot on the brake, according to a report.

When the man woke up, he began looking for his driver's license. Police noticed a strong odor of intoxicants coming from his vehicle and the man told them that he had about five beers.

The driver failed a series of sobriety tests and was given a Breathalyzer test, which resulted in a 0.18 percent blood-alcohol level. A level of 0.08 percent or higher is considered legally drunk under state law. He was arrested for operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated.

WASHTENAW COUNTY

Board names new trustee

The Washtenaw Community College Board of Trustees confirmed Aug. 8 Margaret "Peg" Talburt as interim trustee. Her term begins immediately and ends Dec. 31.

Talburt, an educator and executive, fills the vacancy created by the unexpected death last month of Trustee Jerry Jernigan. It was her commitment and volunteerism on behalf of the college over many years that made her an ideal candidate for the vacant board seat, said Board President Larry Whitworth.

Talburt, an Ann Arbor resident, served on the 1998 Presidential Selection Committee that brought Whitworth to campus. For many years, she has lent her experience as a fund-raiser to the WCC Foundation, serving on the Foundation Board from 1992 to 1998 and as chairwoman of its successful and recently completed capital campaign for the WCC Children's Center.

She also has been a popular master of ceremonies for the foundation's annual Women's Council Luncheon.

Currently, Talburt serves as executive director of the James A. and Faith Knight Foundation. Prior to that, she was president and CEO of the Michigan Women's Foundation, from 1996 to 2003. Organizations such as the Junior League of Ann Arbor, Ann Arbor Area Community Foundation, SafeHouse, Michigan League for Human Services and the Academy for Sports Leadership have been recipients of her time and expertise. Local businesses are familiar with her work as a director of Comerica Bank.

Talburt received her doctorate, master's and bachelor's degrees from the University of Michigan, and is a founding member of Formative Evaluation Research Associates Inc. She has served as a lecturer for the U of M and as adjunct faculty for Franklin and Marshall College in Lancaster, Pa.

Great effort went into Chelsea fire millage

With the August primary election behind us, those who worked so hard for the Chelsea Area Fire Authority millage proposal can focus full attention again to the mission of the Fire Authority. Sadly, the millage proposal was defeated by just 17 votes.

To those residents who voted in favor of the millage, I offer my most sincere and grateful thank you. To those who voted against the millage, I look forward to the opportunity of gaining your confidence and trust.

To those who were unaware that the Fire Authority millage proposal was on the back of the ballot, and therefore missed the opportunity to vote on the issue, we apologize for the confusing ballot layout that was out of our control.

I would like to express my gratitude to all the residents and organizations that endorsed the millage and recognize those who made financial contributions to help pay for the advertising.

Millage committee members made a great effort in bringing information to the voters for their consideration, while Gary Adams, a former Chelsea Area Fire Authority Board member who chaired the millage committee, showed great dedication and service to the residents of Chelsea, Lima, Lyndon and Sylvan.

Are corporate profits really a bad thing?

Is "profit" a bad word? How much is too much, and who are we to decide?

Cisco Systems just posted net income of $1.154 billion on revenue of $7.9 billion, or roughly 14 percent. Walt Disney just posted net income of $1.13 billion on $8.62 billion in revenue, or roughly 13 percent. We can expect such stocks will probably go up in value, thereby helping people with pensions, 401(k) plans and retirement accounts prepare to sustain their later years.

Such gains are all about a free market, and should allow anyone with a retirement plan to expect growth in their investment. Without investments, where is growth?

One must ask how many people have pensions, 401(k) and retirement accounts that enjoy the growth of companies in their portfolio from companies like Disney and Cisco?

How many have oil and other energy stocks in their pension plans to help them prepare for retirement? Exxon Mobil experienced

"THOUGHTS OF SCHOOL DAYS BRING BACK THE HAPPIEST MEMORIES... LIKE WHEN THE SUMMERS ARE OVER AND MY KIDS ARE IN SCHOOL."

OTHER VOICES

No politics in Stone's 'World Trade Center'

I was wrong, or at least inaccurate, with my prejudgment. When news broke onto the entertainment pages months back that a full-length, massively-produced movie about the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001, was finishing production, I thought the worst — trying to bank off the tragedies, profit from the lost lives and tug at our heart-strings with teary goodbyes and poignant original scores of harps and violins. Maybe a chorus.

Forgive me for thinking the worst right off the bat, but I'm sure others agreed at the time.

Oliver Stone — named as director from the get-go — isn't exactly one to remain neutral in his scripts' views and political stances. "Platoon" and "JFK" aren't necessarily down the middle. So could his 9/11 perspective be void of any propaganda? Anything's possible and I take back my initial gut reaction.

"Many artists have struggled to capture 9/11. Now Oliver Stone directs a true story you'd never expect and won't forget," writes David Ansen in Newsweek.

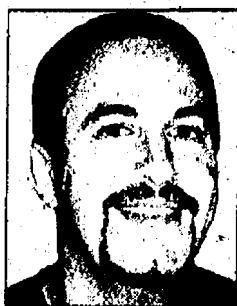

"On the morning of Sept. 11, a Port Authority cop named Will Jimeno is doing his everyday job, shooing away prostitutes and panhandlers from the bus terminal, when he hears a loud rumble overhead. The camera pans, not up at the sky, but down the street, to reveal the shadow of a low-flying plane climbing the face of a building."

Stone wisely never shows the planes crashing into the towers. He's letting us know, right from the start, that we'll see history unfold as it happened on the ground, from the perspectives of ordinary men and women.

We follow the eyes and actions of two Port Authority cops — Jimeno (Michael Pena) and Sgt. John McLoughlin (Nicholas Cage). But it's not all heroism. They don't rush into tumbling buildings like superheroes and grab the out-stretched hand of a pregnant woman.

They're hesitant. Scared. Unsure of how to handle the situation because it wasn't ever in the training and they weren't completely prepared — similar to the rest of the nation.

All of us who watched the events unfold on the news — as we stopped our workday and just stared in disbelief — were unprepared for those images.

We weren't ready to see a huge plane barrel into one of the largest and most populated buildings in the country. Stone remains sensitive to that fact.

The film isn't a reminder of what happened. That's not news anymore and without using the actual footage, computer-generated reenactments would've been insulting. Instead it's a stark time-travel back to feeling trapped.

"If this movie is what I hope it to be, it transcends 9/11," Stone told Newsweek. "It's about anybody, anywhere, who feels the taste of death. It's the theme of being trapped."

Too soon for that reminder? That's the major topic up for debate surrounding "World Trade Center." Hell yes, I thought initially. Why would the United States and beyond want to watch a deadly disaster turned into a Hollywood-created farce?

If that were the case, Stone did what he set out to do. Stone making a politically-neutral movie, especially about such a topic, is like Ann Coulter having little opinion on liberalism.

Shown the way it is, with the story remaining true to events and no embellishing just for effect, can respectably squash the done-too-soon discussion.

Something like this is a more powerful testament. And who better to offer such thumbs-up than those who are the star influences?

Jimeno and McLoughlin back up the movie 100 percent. They certainly would be two of the toughest critics of anyone.

Jimeno told Newsweek, "When I walked out of the theater, I gave Oliver a big hug and a kiss and said, 'You kept to your word. You told the story as accurate and as true as you could.'"

If they offer such support, we, as a still-healing nation, can only continue to support them.

Chris Barnes is the editor of The Free Press and The Saucon News, a Journal Register Co. newspaper.

Elimination of tax good for state's economy

The Legislature has finally driven a stake through the heart of the state's Single Business Tax, an albatross around the neck of existing business and a "warning, more costly to set up shop here" sign to companies considering locating in Michigan.

The tax has been a burden on Michigan, its businesses and residents for years. It makes it more costly for business to do business, and keeps companies from considering the state for new locations. That, in turn, has cost the state investment, and residents jobs.

The catalyst for removing this burdensome shackle is not the Legislature and not Gov. Jennifer Granholm. It is Oakland County Executive L. Brooks Patterson, who launched a petition drive to kill the tax after legislative efforts to do so either failed, or were stymied by Granholm.

Patterson's petition drive allowed the Legislature to repeal the tax without threat of a gubernatorial veto. With a Republican-dominated House and Senate, the Legislature then voted to end the tax in 2007, two years early.

Opponents to repealing the tax used the excuse that another source of tax revenue must be found before the SBT is shelved. What they, including Granholm, don't understand is that there is no time to waste until the original sunset date of 2009.

Michigan's economy needs resuscitation now, and repealing the SBT will now send a message across the nation and the world that we can offer a competitive tax environment for business. That, in turn, will bring jobs to Michigan, employing more people who will pay taxes to help make up for the loss of revenue through the SBT.

If Michigan is to succeed in attracting new jobs and maintaining existing ones, we must convince business leaders that the state understands the pressures of the global marketplace and is willing to tighten its belt as much as necessary to survive.

Granholm has repeatedly said that eliminating the SBT would force the state to place an additional tax burden on residents to make up the loss. Not so. We expect the state to stop looking for

OTHER VOICES

We can expect more commercials this fall

What do you know, the governor can talk.

The long-awaited premier of Gov. Jennifer Granholm's first TV commercial grabbed the attention of Lansing as she actually spoke to the electorate for the first time.

And what was the subject? Gas prices.

Wait a darn second, isn't the No. 1 issue the economy? Oh yeah, that's what the challenger Dick DeVos is saying, so maybe her jobs record needs more beef before Granholm boasts.

That aside, she is telling viewers that she has fought nasty gas station gougers and mobilized a brigade of inspectors to ferret them out.

Then she takes an oblique shot at "others" that would protect oil companies. Ah, by "others" she means opponent DeVos, but she doesn't say it. And she whacks President George W. Bush for the umpteenth time for failing to cap oil company profits.

She closes with her pledge to stand up for you, to fight back against those who threaten your paycheck and reassures everyone, "I'll put you first."

We're not really sure what that means, but it sure feels good.

The TV ad was the governor doing one of things she does best ... and as only she can.

But her biggest accomplishment was somehow left on the cutting room floor. She successfully and somewhat amazingly jawboned Marathon Oil last Labor Day to knock 30 cents off a gallon of gas.

You forgot about that, and apparently so did the commercial writers, although it does appear on the Granholm Web site.

Forget the brigade; forget about hauling gougers into court. She saved motorists a ton of money that weekend—but not a peep about it in the commercial.

Minus that glaring omission, it was a timely commercial but obviously "gas prices" is not her ace in the hole. We'll see that later on ... maybe from a porch near you.

And while on the subject of commercials, the DeVos full employment plan for state TV stations continues on its merry way.

But with all that advertising, why do 32 percent of the viewers have an unfavorable impression of him?

What's to dislike?

His suits are pressed, his shirt and tie match, he's got a pleasant smile and his "let's get out of the mud" line is a pretty good one.

Yet in the most recent EPIC-MRA review, almost a third don't like him and another 25 percent have no opinion at all.

Maybe that $12 million investment in TV spots isn't all it's cracked up to be?

In reality, the spots did what they were supposed to do — which was to move his name ID from a lousy 8 percent to parity with the governor.

As for that 32 percent unfavorable number, you can pretty much describe those folks as Democrats who would not vote for DeVos even if they got a year's supply of free soap.

By comparison, the governor's unfavorable numbers aren't so hot either — 40 percent, which includes all the Republicans and apparently some independent voters as well.

The key figure to look at for both camps is the 25 percent who have no opinion on DeVos. That is fertile ground for winning the election. How that number plays will determine the outcome.

Needless to say, both candidates will flood the airwaves to move that quarter of the electorate off the fence and into their corner.

$8.4 billion in net income on revenue of $88 billion, or roughly 9.5 percent.

This may sound like a defense of the oil companies, but if these gains are undesirable, why is the governor not suggesting that Disney and Cisco limit their profits? It's easy to see their gains are larger than the oil companies on a percentage basis.

Is $2.50 for a 16-ounce bottle of water at Disney World too much to pay? Should there be a limit to what any business can make in profits? Should that be controlled by the government, or should it be regulated by the free market economics of supply and demand? Who is anyone to say?

If we don't want to pay $3.50 for a gallon of gasoline, we can take the bus, share a ride, ride a bike or walk. There are lots of options.

I wonder how many teachers and state employees have pensions with investments in the stock market. Maybe I will look into that and see if there is public data available.

General election important for Dems

This year's general election Nov. 7 may well be even more important than the 2008 general election. At stake is our ability to hold the current federal administration accountable for its dismal performance over the last six years and reverse some of the damage that it has done.

In this year's general election, we can restore balance in government by electing Democrats to the U.S. House and Senate.

In recent history, Republicans have shown themselves to be skilled at getting elected to national offices. But once elected, they've been incapable of governing well and with integrity.

The Republicans' attitude of "We're in charge now, so push the Democrats aside" has led to systemic corruption in Congress and lack of attention to the concerns of those of us, common citizens, who don't have the money to buy their attention.

Republicans have made promises to constituents, especially in the area of values based on conservative religious beliefs. These politicians aren't interested in keeping those promises and know they can't keep them because they conflict with the values most Americans have.

An example is The Club for Growth's underwriting of Tim Walberg's campaign against Republican Joe Schwarz, R-7th District. The Club for Growth doesn't give a hoot about conservative religious values despite the content of their glossy pro-Walberg, anti-Schwarz campaign literature.

The Club for Growth is all about growing the wealth of the already wealthy and starving government so that it is incapable of functioning well in education, public health, stewardship of natural resources, emergency assistance and other areas that citizens who believe in building strong communities care about.

The Club for Growth refuses to see taxes, especially when corporations are asked to pay them, as an investment in the community.

Democrats believe that a well-run federal government can increase our security, not just as it relates to terrorist threats but also the impact of natural disasters, environmental degradation, illness and loss of income.

Democrats see the need to advocate for the interests of average citizens as a counterbalance to the power and influence exercised by those whose focus is on protecting and increasing their own wealth even at the expense of the country as a whole.

Theater, CCA help enrich the community

Our family recently attended the production of "Honus & Me" at the Purple Rose Theatre, courtesy of tickets donated by the Purple Rose Theatre and distributed through Chelsea Center for the Arts.

Live theater with a wholesome family theme about baseball made for a truly fun night out. Even the study guide added to the richness of the experience.

It's another example of the Chelsea community's commitment to excellence in the arts, and one of the reasons we fell blessed to live here.

ways to put its hand in our pocketbooks.

The money to replace the revenue now generated by the SBT will come when Michigan becomes a favorable state in which to open a business, and more jobs are created. Then there will be more working people in Michigan to buy goods and pay taxes.

Companies are investing in new plants in states that roll out the welcome mat for them. The SBT is a punishment on business, and only serves as one more reason for business to constrict, leave or not even bother considering coming to Michigan.

Businesses in the state must pay the tax even if in years they don't make a profit. Many new businesses don't turn a profit in their first year or two, so the SBT is a hindrance on entrepreneurship and a disincentive to locate here.

Now, Michigan mothballs the "unwelcome" mat for business.

Council endorses study of universal health care

Resolution asks Gov. Jennifer Granholm to appoint a panel

By Edward Freundl
Special Writer

The Chelsea City Council voted Aug. 8 to join a growing number of municipalities endorsing a commission to study ways to pay for health care for every Michigan resident.

Michigan Universal Health Care Access Network, or MichUHCAN, asked for passage of the Michigan Health Care Finance Resolution, which calls on Gov. Jennifer Granholm to appoint a panel to study the issue and make recommendations on changing the existing health-insurance system.

Gary Benjamin, a Detroit-area attorney and spokesman for the group, told the council of states such as Maine, Vermont and Massachusetts that have successfully adopted universal health care and paid for it through identifying cost savings.

"A study by General Motors showed that up to 40 percent of each health-care dollar goes to administration, overhead and waste, so the money to do this is there," Benjamin said.

"It's in the city's best interest to endorse this," he added, noting that the city of Detroit's annual budget includes $170 million for health-care costs for its employees and retirees.

Council member Jamie Bollinger expressed concern over how the initiative would be paid for. Benjamin said the resolution included no mechanism for funding, but the approximately $100,000 to $150,000 needed to conduct the study could be raised through grants and donations.

"This resolution is simply calling for the formation of the commission, and calling for the governor to implement it," he said.

There is no set timeline for getting local governments on board with the non-binding, voluntary proposal. MichUHCAN hopes to garner enough support that Lansing legislators would not be able to avoid the issue regardless of the outcome of the November elections.

"We were hoping to have enough (support) by the end of this year," Benjamin said. "We want to keep the heat on so no matter who is governor they should act on it."

With the council's unanimous vote, Chelsea becomes the 24th city, township or county board — including the Washtenaw County Board of Commissioners — to sign on to the resolution, along with 17 state representatives and senators, numerous labor unions, human services organizations and health-care providers.

CHELSEA FIRE REPORT

The Chelsea Area Fire Authority responded to 53 calls for service, including six fires, three motor vehicle accidents, 23 medical calls and 21 other types of calls between July 16 and 31.

Firefighters responded to the 2000 block of Notten Road in Sylvan Township July 19 for a structure fire. Upon arrival, approximately 60 percent of the two-story structure had fire involvement with smoke and fire showing from all windows on its roadside.

Firefighters responded to the 500 block of Madison Street in Chelsea July 27 for a structure fire. Upon arrival, light smoke was showing on the first floor of the two-story structure. All occupants were evacuated as firefighters made entry to the basement, where the fire had originated. The fire was knocked down and the structure was ventilated.

Firefighters responded to the Bruin Lake Campground in Lyndon Township July 31 for a possible water rescue. Upon arrival, firefighters were directed to help in searching for a lost swimmer. After approximately half-hour of searching, a patient was recovered from the water unresponsive and later was pronounced dead at the scene.

images of child pornography on his computer at the water department. The 29-year city employee, a Jackson resident, chose to resign. He was arrested last fall after more than 18 months of investigation by the Michigan State Police.

"I guess his admission of guilt brings some conclusion to this incident," Steklac said. "Certainly, we did what we had to do at the city level. Now he'll have to deal with the criminal repercussions of what he did."

Steklac said although some safeguards can be put in place to minimize the chance of a similar incident happening on city computers, ultimately it's the employee's choice between right and wrong.

"Dan should have known it was wrong to use city computers to access any kind of pornography, let alone child pornography," Steklac said. "It ultimately relies on the ethics of the employee to stick to business sites and not go to sites like that."

Another employee using the computer had come across the images while opening up a music media file, Steklac said, which included a pornographic video clip at the conclusion of the song. That employee notified his foreman, who told city officials.

Although Chelsea police were involved in the initial investigation, they asked the Michigan State Police to take over to avoid any potential conflict of interest.

Steklac said he was confronted with the situation on his first day at work as city manager, and used his background in personnel management to bring a sense of objectivity to the decisions that had to be made.

Steklac also expressed sympathy for the ordeal Rosentreter's family is facing.

"He has some relationships to repair with his family, and that's probably the biggest tragedy of all of this," Steklac said. "Certainly, we hope that it all works out for him and he gets the help needed and the family is able to be reconciled with what happened."

WASHTENAW COUNTY

Board OKs wireless provider

The County Board of Commissioners approved the Wireless Washtenaw Advisory Board's recommendation Aug. 2 to partner with 20/20 Communications.

The board's resolution makes way for finalizing the contract with 20/20 Communications to deploy a wireless high-speed Internet network throughout Washtenaw County.

The board reviewed the agreement, which outlines the deployment of three pilots for the Wireless project, one in Ann Arbor and one in Saline.

The third pilot will be deployed through a consortium of local units through Southwestern Washtenaw Council of Governments that includes the village of Manchester, Bridgewater Township, Freedom Township, Manchester Township and Sharon Township.

"With 20/20, a local company that really knows this area, in partnership with Siemens, CenturyTel and BelAir, I think we're in an excellent position," said Wes Prater, chairman of the Washtenaw County Board of Commissioners. "We hope to have the contract signed shortly so we can move forward on delivering these beneficial services to our community."

Residents and those visiting Washtenaw County can look forward to an unrestricted free level of service that delivers unlimited connectivity to the Internet at 84 kbps, or better than twice the speed of an average dial-up connection. Premium services will start at $35 per month at 500 kbps. Additional upgrades and services will be available for businesses and other high-demand users.

"This is one of the largest and most ambitious WiFi installations in the country if not North America," said Bob Wolff, president of 20/20 Communications. "We estimate it will take over 6,000 radios placed on many community assets."

Community assets include water towers, buildings, light poles and other structures owned by project stakeholders, including government and educational agencies.

Washtenaw County has taken the lead in creating a strong public-private partnership for this initiative. The implementation and maintenance of Wireless Washtenaw will not be funded through public tax money.

The goal for Wireless Washtenaw is to provide a wireless network for the urban, suburban and rural settings in 2007.

Objectives include providing residents a seamless wireless Internet experience; supporting economic development and improving the quality of life in Washtenaw County; serving as a model for other communities to observe.

STATE

Info needed on fallen heroes

Michael Bouchard, Oakland County's sheriff and president of the Michigan Fallen Heroes Memorial, is looking for help compiling biographical information, personal stories and photographs of Michigan's police and firefighters who died in the line of duty.

The material will be included in the Michigan Fallen Heroes Memorial Web site development project.

"We have been raising money, compiling names, and working diligently over the course of the last five years to bring the Memorial project to this phase," Bouchard said in a written statement. "Now we have a powerful, moving monument where the names of 761 fallen police and firefighters appear, permanently etched into a monument that honors their sacrifice."

"We now want to be able to share the stories of these heroes — individual by individual — so that their lives and their families can be honored."

The Web site is currently being developed and donated by 3D New Media in Birmingham, and will ultimately contain biographies of fallen firefighters and police officers from across the state and donor recognition.

The loved ones and survivors of Michigan's fallen heroes can participate by contacting the memorial staff at 1-248-858-5103 or e-mail MichiganFallenHeroes@yahoo.com.

Among those being honored from Washtenaw County will be Clifford Stang of the Ann Arbor Police Department, who died in 1935;

Kenneth Payne of the Ann Arbor Police Department, who died in 1946; Leonard Alber of the Ann Arbor Police Department, who died in 1956; Headly Downey of the Ann Arbor Police Department, who died in 1963; Douglas Downing of the Ypsilanti Police Department, who died in 1975; Steven Reuther of the Milan Police Department, who died 1991; Charles Uphaus of the Saline Fire Department, who died in 1976; Leo Borders of the Washtenaw County Sheriff's Department, who died in 1966; and Jerry Russo of the Washtenaw County Sheriff's Department, who died in 1967.

Also to be honored are Frank "Butch" Crampton of the Washtenaw County Sheriff's Department, who died in 1970; Harold Ewald of the Washtenaw County Sheriff's Department, who died in 1970; Tammy Sperle of the Department of Corrections, who died in 1996; R. Our Local Area Schools and Churches

Rev. Harvey and Maureen Otney of St. John Outreach Program received several donations.

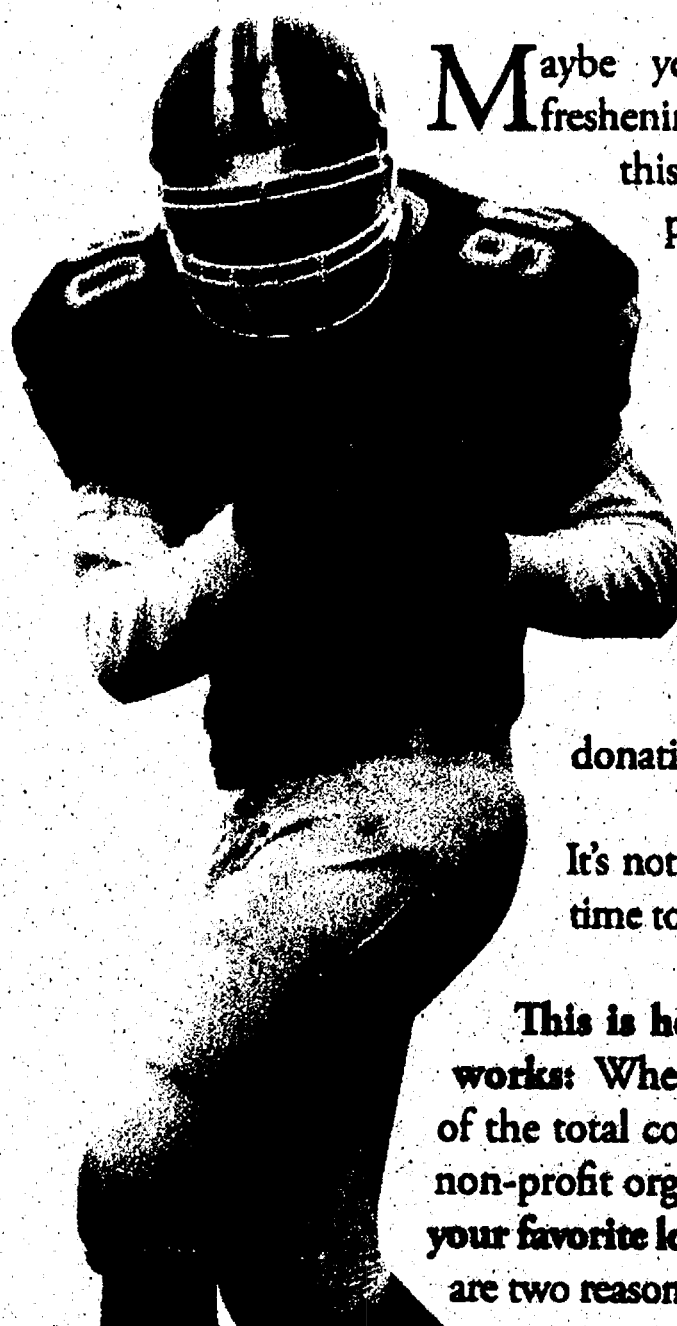

Give Back to the Community!

St. Agnes Catholic Church receives a donation.

Many local schools are feeling the stress of budget cuts. Parents are being asked to contribute to help support funding for many of the extracurricular activities such as sports teams, band, cheerleading, drama and other clubs. Fund raising events are at an all time high, yet organizations continue to struggle with budget cuts.

One way you can help is to hire Todd's Services, Inc (TSI), Michigan's Largest Residential Landscaping Company. The public has voted TSI the favorite landscaping company 7 years in a row! TSI has already donated over $500,000 to local, non-profit organizations through their Give Back to the Community Program! TSI is supporting the community by donating TWO MILLION DOLLARS to local, non-profit organizations over the next few years.

Maybe you are thinking of freshening up your landscaping this fall and you are planning on doing the work yourself. An order of topsoil, mulch or edging from TSI is enough to generate a donation for a local area school or church. TSI's Pass on the Savings Campaign offers the public the best available prices in the area on mulches and topsoil. We are extending these materials at our cost for the purpose of generating donations for local, non-profit organizations.

It's not too late to freshen up your landscaping. Fall is a great time to plant new bushes and trees or just re-mulch your beds.

This is how their Give Back to the Community Program works: When you hire Todd's Services, Inc., TSI will donate 3% of the total contract price (up to $600 max.) to the favorite local non-profit organization of your choice. Hire Todd's and support your favorite local area school or church. Our schools and churches are two reasons this community is such a great place to live.

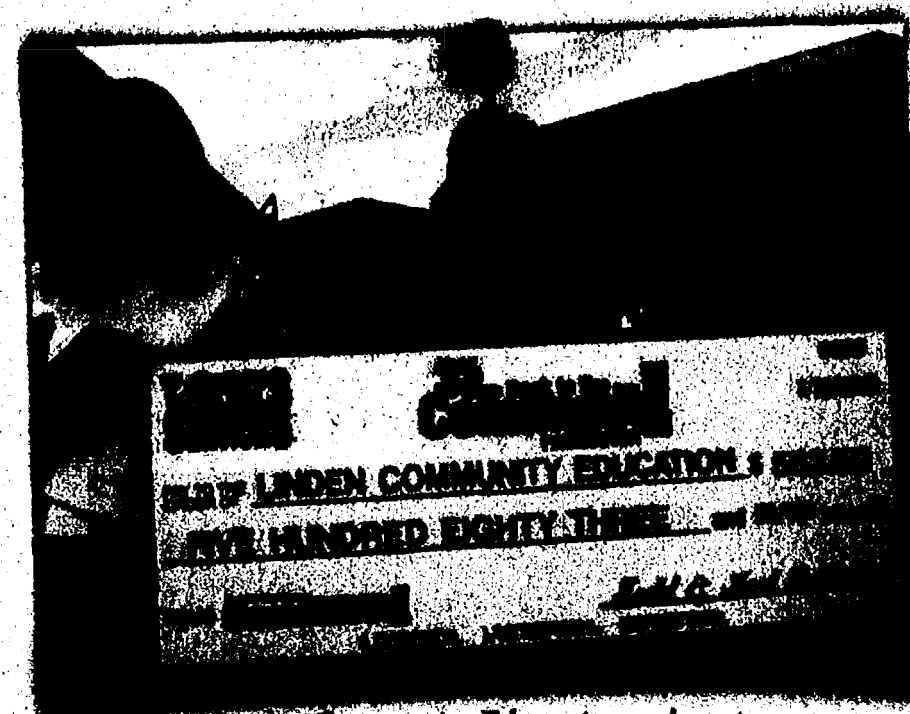

Todd's Services, Inc. is your best value. Guaranteed!

THE PRICE GUARANTEE IS SIMPLE: TSI will be a customer's best value on landscaping. If they are not, they will give the customer 10% of their bid in cash. There is nothing to lose by giving them a call.

If you are involved with a non-profit organization and would like your group to receive money, or if you want TSI to be your best value on landscaping, contact Todd's Services for details.

20 YEARS IN THE Making

First-time author shares complicated story

By Jennifer McArdle
Staff Writer

Ever wondered what a baby is thinking? Or how much of an impact your actions have on the developing psyche of a newborn? An area author explores that question in his new book.

Jeffrey Von Glahn recently got his first book published — "Jessica: The autobiography of an infant."

Though the mental health establishment has cautioned against it, Von Glahn was convinced that the most powerful method for psychological healing was through catharsis, the act of expressing deep emotions associated with events in the individual's past that have never been expressed.

In the book, Von Glahn follows the case study of a woman named Jessica, who struggles with her sense of self. Through an intense therapy, Jessica is able to recall some of her earliest memories and gain insight into many of the issues she has had to deal with as an adult.

She recalls with clarity her birth — her feelings leading up to delivery and the disappointing manner in which she was greeted by the medical professionals who delivered her and by her parents, who hoped for a son and a "good" baby. The accuracy of the events of her birth were later confirmed by Jessica's mother.

During the course of her intensive therapy sessions, Jessica revealed other incidents in her early days of life that shaped the person she eventually became.

Von Glahn, who earned a master's degree in social work from the University of Michigan School of Social Work and later earned a doctorate in human science from The Union Institute in Cincinnati, Ohio, was fascinated with the idea.

"What can possibly be more important than understanding what an infant experiences? What infants experience, we know very little about," he said.

And in his new book, he really does offer a look at how a young child views the world. But he also looks at other events in Jessica's life as she makes the transition from an anxious youth to an adult who fears her very being.

Von Glahn, an experienced therapist, spent more than 20 years working on the book before it was finally published this year.

"It took seven years to write the first draft. Part of the reason was I had to listen to about 225 hours of tapes and transcribe parts I thought might be appropriate, about 10 to 15 percent of the tapes," he said.

"The other reason it took so long is that it was a very complicated story. I knew from the start that this was a very special, very unique story. I wasn't going to have it published until my writing did justice to it," he said.

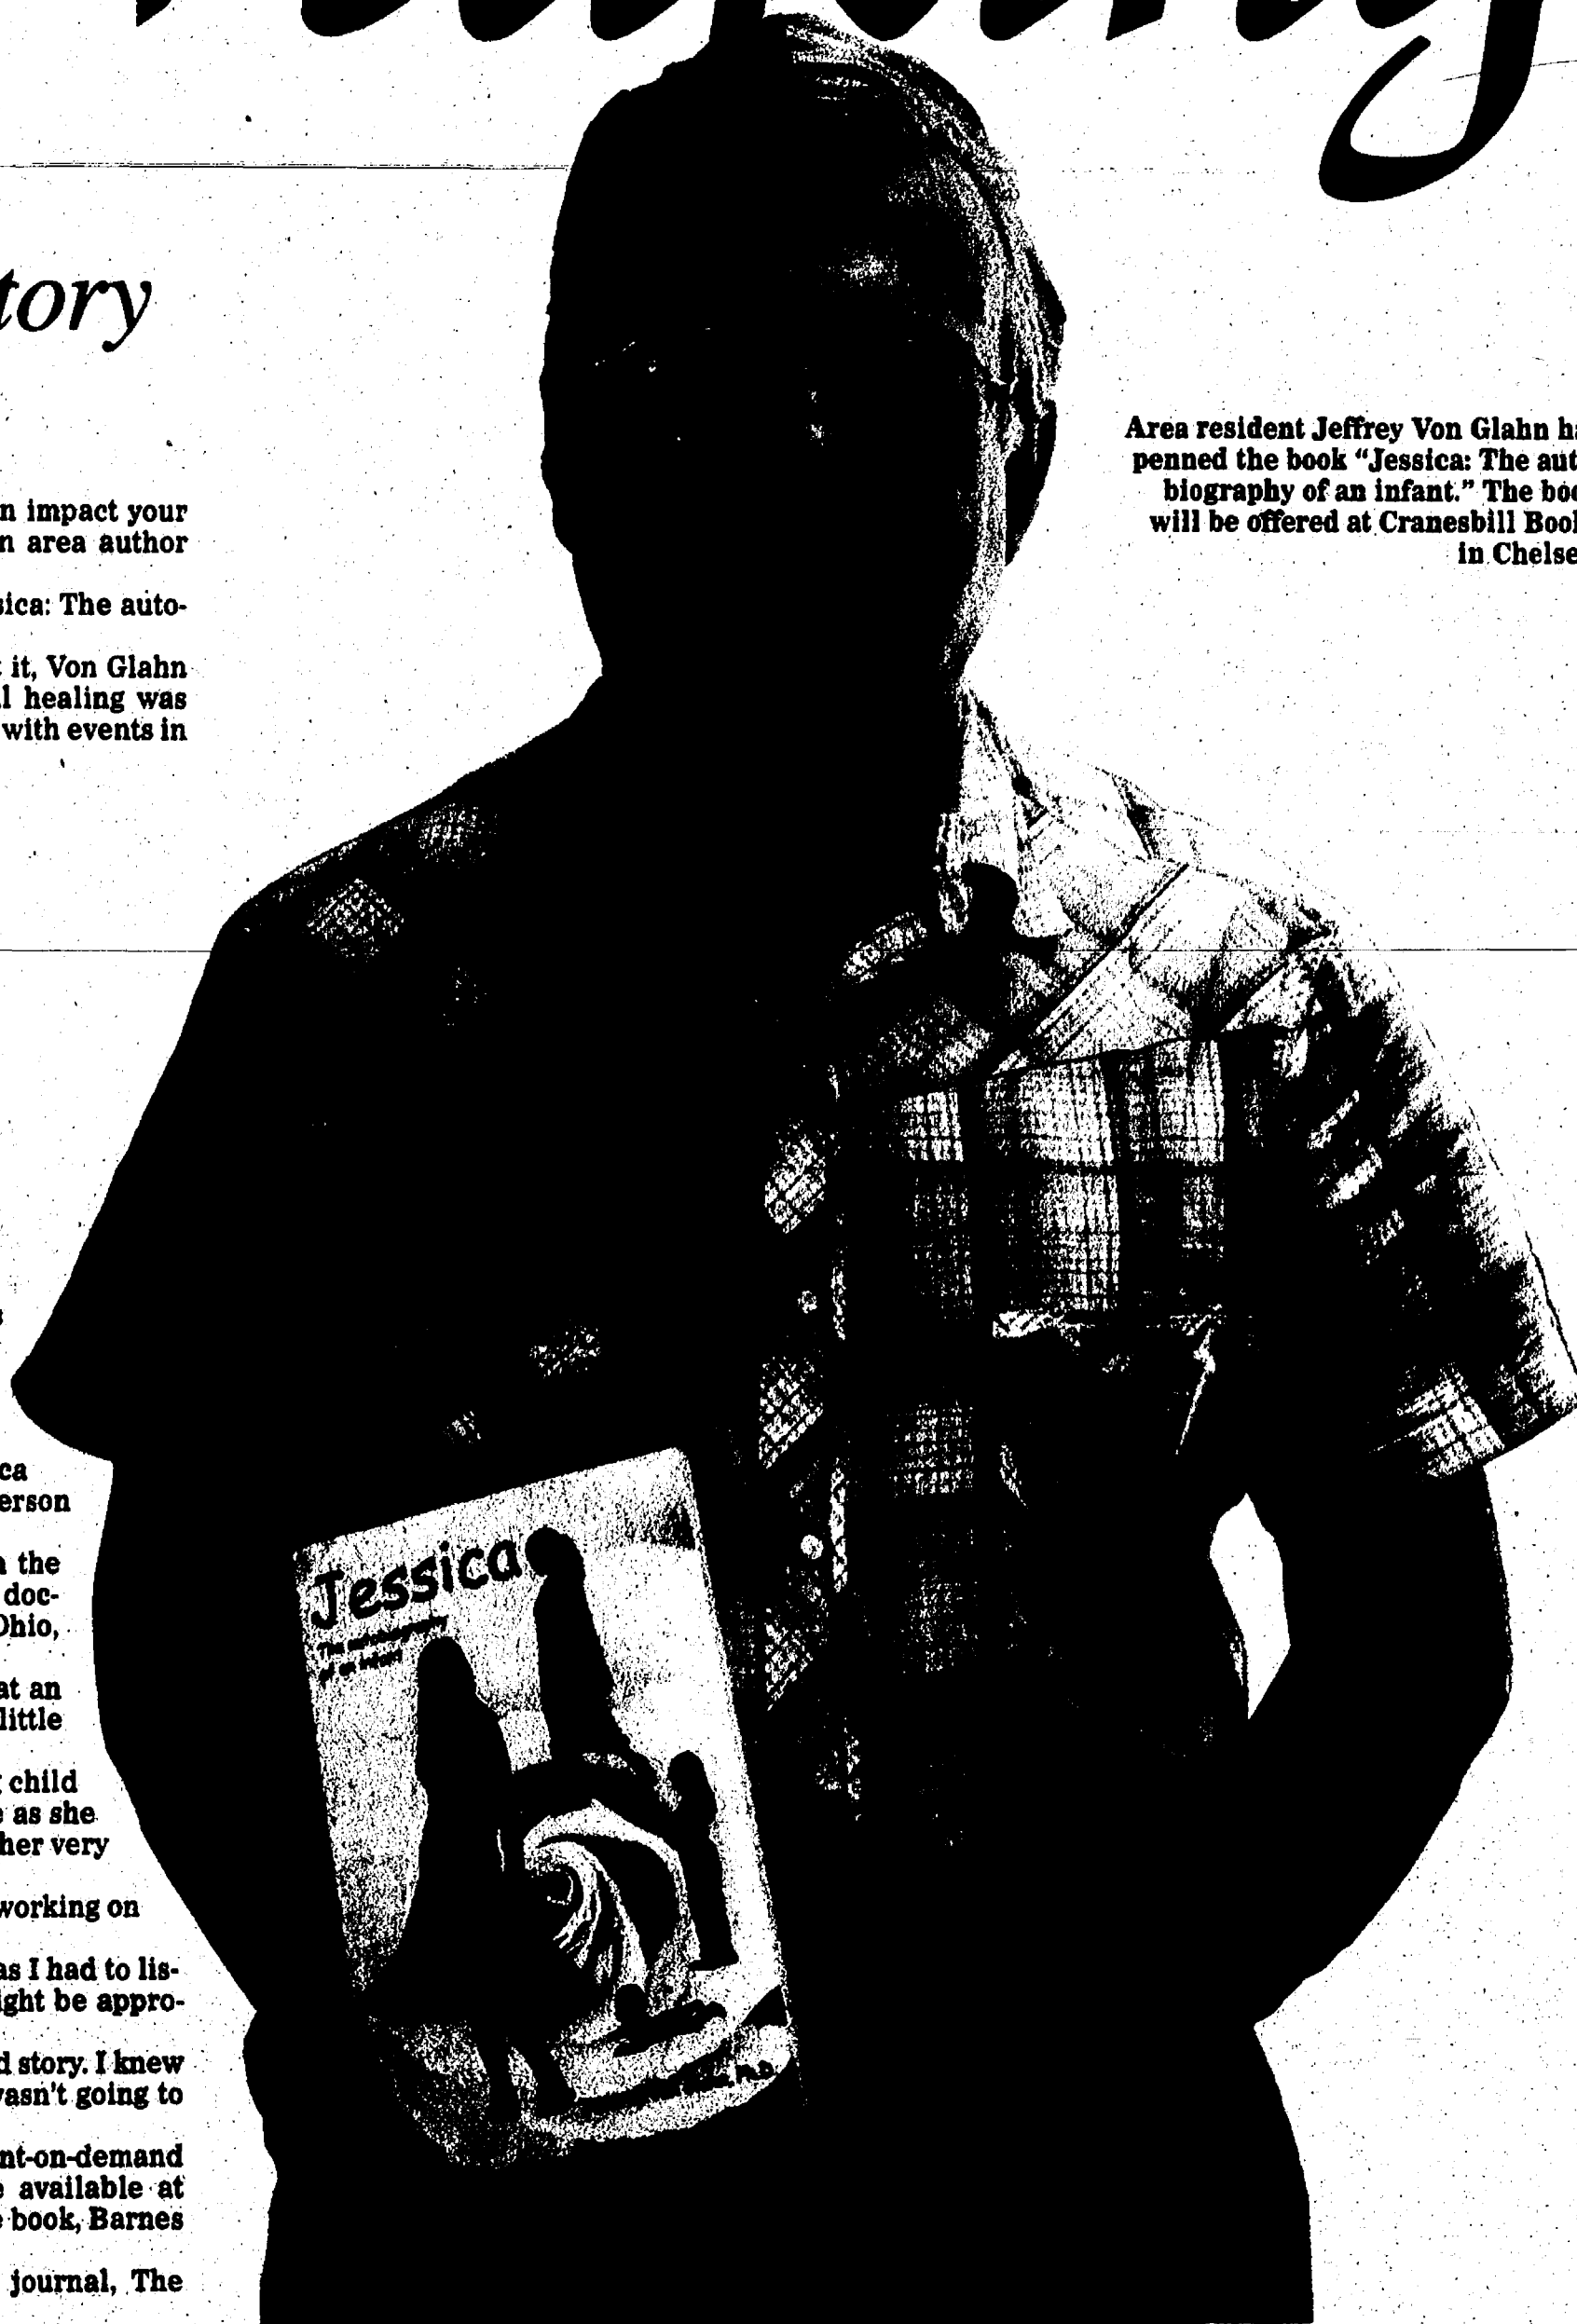

After searching for a publisher, Von Glahn finally found a print-on-demand publishing company that agreed to print the book. Copies are available at Cranesbill Books in Chelsea. If enough orders are received for the book, Barnes and Noble is also expected to offer the book.

An article about Jessica was also printed in a professional journal, The Journal of Pre- and Peri-Natal Psychology, in 1998.

Darr strikes gold with silver jewelry

Chelsea resident named a 'Star Leader' with Silpada Designs

By Sheila Pursglove
Special Writer

Chelsea resident Jennifer Darr has struck gold with silver.

A "Star Leader" with Silpada Designs, a home show company selling handcrafted sterling jewelry, Darr recently was honored as a national achiever with two awards.

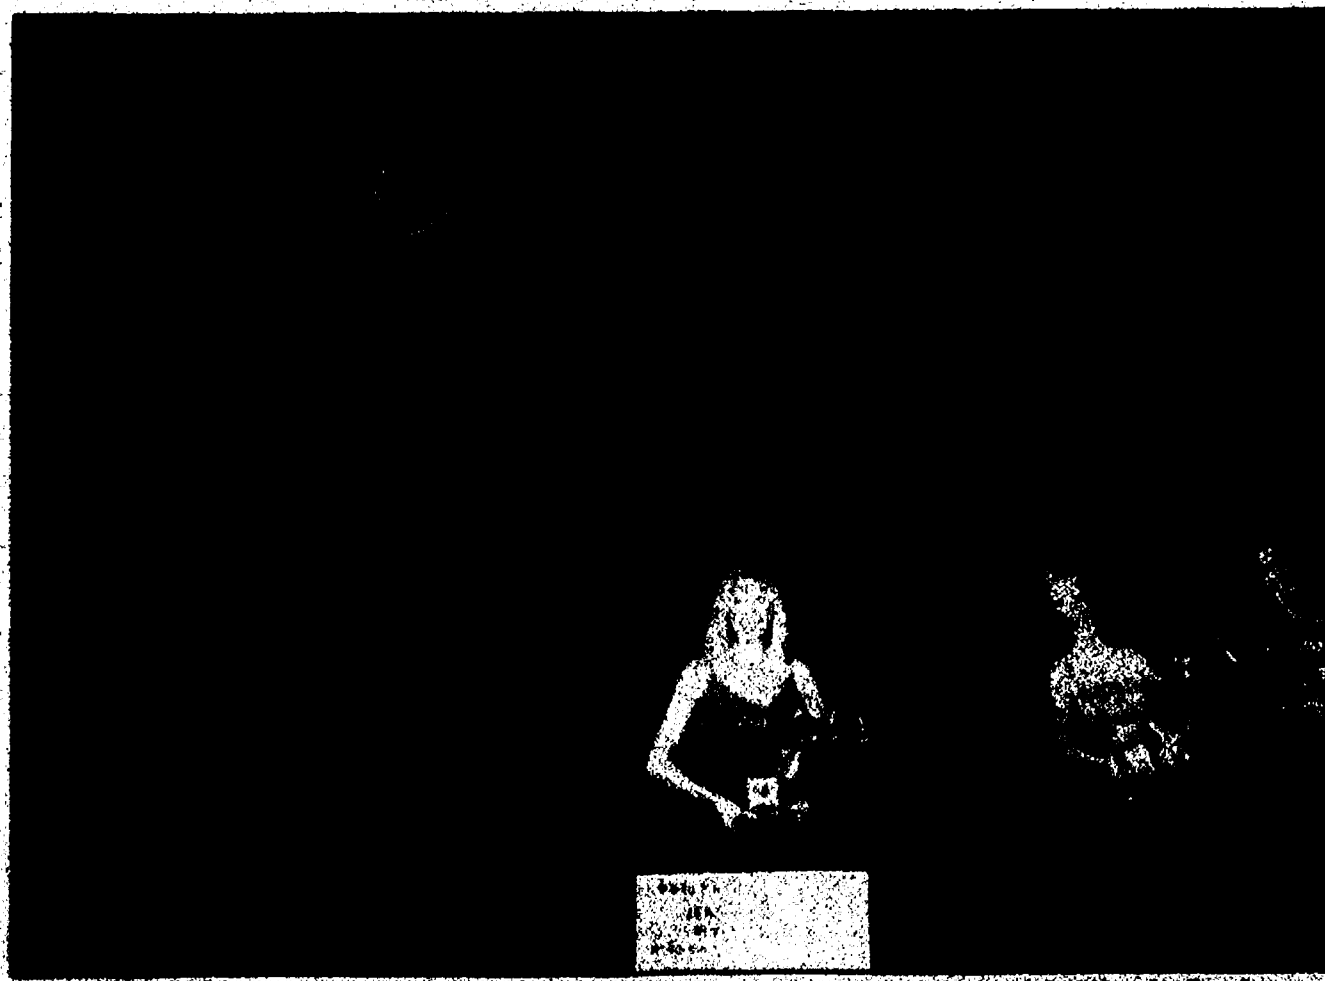

She earned the Career Recruiter award, which recognizes outstanding, uninterrupted, cumulative career recruiting, and placed fifth for Recruiter of the Year, which recognizes representatives who have the highest number of personal recruits for the sales year.

Darr was selected to receive the awards out of nearly 15,000 other Silpada independent sales representatives, and was honored in front of more than 2,700 Silpada representatives at the company's 2006 National Conference, held July 13 through 16 in Kansas City, Mo.

Awards are not the only prizes Darr has garnered along the way. In addition to income and free jewelry, she has earned six trips, including an all-expense paid trip to Cabo San Lucas, Mexico, with her husband last January.

Being a jewelry independent sales representative wasn't originally in her career cards. After 13 years as an at-home mom and with her three children growing up, Darr had planned on returning to college, but a Silpada Designs Show at a friend's house changed all that.

A dedication ceremony was held Saturday at St. Mary Catholic Church in Chelsea for the unveiling of a memorial plaque in honor of Riley Scott Sumner, Chelsea's police chief who died in a helicopter crash April 13 while pursuing a suspect. Family and friends of the fallen hero gathered for the service, which was delivered by the Rev. William Turner. The plaque is located in the church's Garden of Peace to the east of the Parish Center. Turner cited Sumner's association with the local parish, and dedication to the community and its welfare. The Garden of Peace was dedicated in 2002 to the victims of the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001, and includes a small pond, bridge and garden area. "As a peace officer, our friend, Scott Sumner, is fittingly remembered there," Turner said.

CHELSEA

Library to collaborate with senior center

Programs, activities to be held at Chelsea Senior Center

By Sheila Pursglove
Special Writer

Books, movies and World War II history are all on tap as part of a new programming venture by the Chelsea District Library.

"We're really expanding our outreach efforts to area senior groups, particularly the Chelsea Senior Center," said Shawn Personke, the library's community relations and development coordinator.

"Our new librarian, Bill Harmer, is excited about initiating these efforts. He's keen on taking it to the streets, so to speak. We've met with (senior center director) Tina Patterson at the Chelsea Senior Center and Jude Hein at Silver Maples to talk about what they feel would complement what they are already doing."

Based on that information, Bill's designed some neat programs."

The new programs will be held at the Chelsea Senior Center, located at the Washington Street Education Center, 500 Washington St. in Chelsea.

"Today's older adults are better educated, more vigorous, and keenly interested in programs and activities," Harmer said. "Service to older adults is not a fad and the need for library services will only increase. Simply planning and creating programs are not adequate. Spirited outreach must be included."

"Everyone in the senior community has expressed a great deal of interest in having a series of events just for them."

Friday afternoons will be movie matinees, kicking off 1 p.m. Sept. 22 with "Good Night and Good Luck" about famed broadcast journalist Edward R. Murrow and his bid to bring down Sen. Joseph McCarthy. Chelsea actor Jeff Daniels plays TV news pioneer Sig Mickelson.

Harmer, head of the library's Adult Services, will show a movie, followed by a group discussion. Snacks and drinks will be offered, and moviegoers also may bring along a sack lunch. No registration is required.

The Oct. 20 movie matinee also stars Daniels, this time in "The Squid and the Whale," the true story of an eccentric Brooklyn family torn apart by divorce.

"Super Size Me" is the choice for Nov. 17. It's an irreverent look at the role fast-food corporations play in America's battle with ever-expanding waistlines.

The winter season wraps up Dec. 15 with "Munich" about the 1972 murder of 11 Israeli athletes at the Munich Olympics, and the five men chosen to eliminate those responsible.

For bookworms, Harmer and Patterson will lead book discussion groups, starting 1 p.m. Sept. 27. The Wednesday sessions will lead off with "One Thousand White Women: The Journals of May Dodd," by Jim Fergus.

It's the story of an American Wild West during its fading days and the government's clandestine "Brides for Indians" program. The book follows May's marriage to Little Wolf, chief of the Cheyenne nation, and her conflict of being caught between two worlds, loving two men and living two lives.

Books will be provided and registration is requested.

World War II history will come alive with a presentation 1 p.m. Nov. 8 by veteran William Rosnyai, who will share his memories as a second lieutenant navigator aboard a B-17 bomber with the Army Air Corps. The presentation is free, and no registration is required.

Silver Maples residents also will enjoy a presentation of "Good Night and Good Luck" 1:30 p.m. Sept. 13, followed by a discussion.

These programs are only the beginning, Harmer said. "Elizabeth Goldman and I, along with the rest of the staff at the Chelsea District Library, are exploring several other exciting possibilities, including services to the homebound," he said.

"This service would be offered to residents of the Chelsea District Library who cannot get to the library because of physical disability, visual impairment, temporary convalescence, or age."

"Many don't realize or understand the range of activities and programs that are available at the library, and we hope to demonstrate that library services extend beyond books and Internet access."

Patterson, director of the Chelsea Senior Center, says the center is delighted to participate in collaborative programming with the Chelsea library.

"We see this as a way to bring new opportunities to our members and the greater community," she said.

"Collaborative projects allow us to expand our programming utilizing the expertise of other professionals who bring a new perspective and open doors to unique and creative experiences."

"Both our new book program and the film series create an enriched atmosphere for people to explore and share as we learn together. That we are able to offer these programs without charge thanks to the library's generous support means a great deal to the senior center in times of financial belt tightening."

"This is an exciting time for both the library and the senior center and we look forward to continued shared programming."

Since Darr preferred gold jewelry to silver, she went "grudgingly," mainly to support her friend and enjoy a girl's night out.

That's when this golden girl found a silver lining.

"Right away, I was impressed with the quality of the jewelry," she said. "The biggest test was wearing a pair of earrings at the show. I'm allergic to costume jewelry and never realized it was the nickel in it."

"Silpada is made with .925 sterling silver, a higher quality of silver with no nickel. I was so excited that I could wear the jewelry without my ears hurting."

Darr bought a couple of pieces of jewelry and booked a show to help her friend.

"I decided I would sign up and if it didn't work out, I would have a lot of nice pieces of jewelry," she said.

Her first show netted $2,400 retail, she made $700 and as hostess also received $700 in free jewelry. She was on her way.

Three weeks later, Darr hosted another home show, sold $2,200, made $600 and received $600 in free jewelry. From that early beginning, Darr started to get bookings. Her Silpada sign-up kit was paid for within 35 days and she earned more than $3,400 in free jewelry in the first 90 days from Silpada's Fast Start Program.

"Right away, I started thinking of others who could benefit from making a few extra hundred dollars a month, so I started sharing the business opportunity with others," she said.

"I've personally recruited 54 people in less than two years and have 88 ladies on my team."

With her daughter, Brittany, headed to Central Michigan University this fall, and sons Matthew and Ted playing ice hockey, Darr says she no longer worries about college tuition or hockey bills.

"More importantly, Silpada Designs has given me the opportunity to develop new friendships and change lives along the way," she said.

Darr and her husband Mark — part owner of John Darr Mechanical, a commercial heating and cooling company — have called Chelsea home for 16 years, where they are members of the Chelsea Free Methodist Church.

"I've volunteered and work with just about every age group at our church, the latest was leading a small group for high school girls," she said.

"It's funny how when you help others, your life in return is blessed."

Deserving Honor

Chelsea baseball coach Wayne Welton will receive the Michigan High School Athletic Association's Allen W. Bush Award for service Sept. 15 at halftime of the Bulldogs' football game against Adrian. Welton has taught, coached and served as Chelsea athletic director for 28 years.

Welton receives MHSAA Allen W. Bush Award

By Don Richter
Sports Editor

Chelsea's Wayne Welton and Comstock Park's Janet Gillette have each been honored as recipients of the Michigan High School Athletic Association's Allen W. Bush Award for 2006.

Returning home to perform labors of love as teachers, coaches and administrators at their high school alma maters, Gillette and Welton share the attributes that make them worthy recipients of the award.

Each has served as teacher, coach and administrator during their tenures, with Welton serving Chelsea for 28 years and Gillette at Comstock Park for 23 years.

Al Bush served as executive director of the MHSAA for 10 years. The award honors individuals for past and continuing service to prep athletics as a coach, administrator, official, trainer, doctor or member of the media.

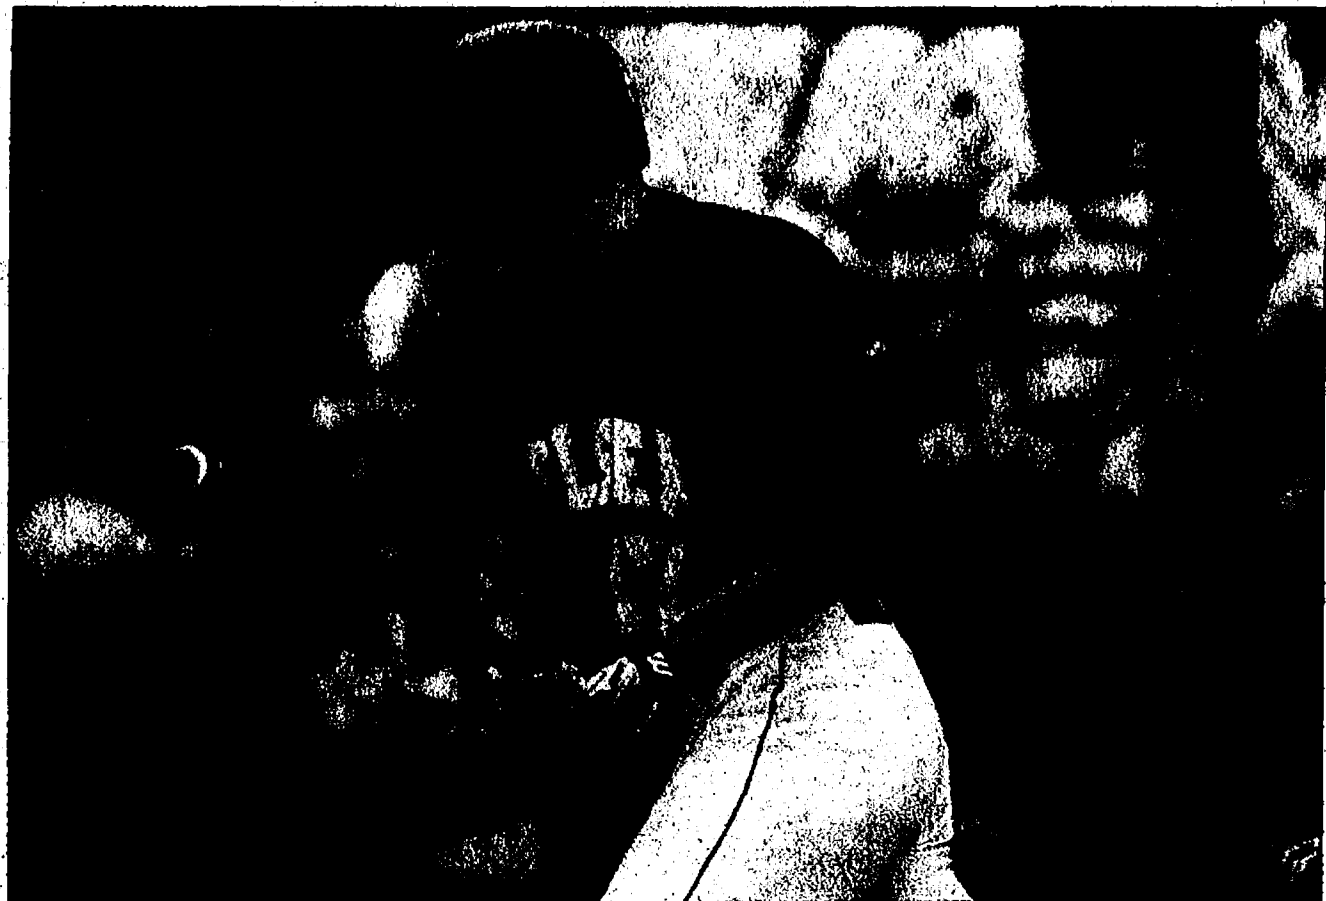

The award was developed to bring recognition to men and women who are giving and serving without a lot of attention.

This is the 15th year of the award, with the selections being made by the MHSAA's Representative Council.

"So many in education return to their alma mater, making their mark in adulthood as leaders at their old schools and in their communities after high school days where they were leaders as students and student-athletes. And this year's Bush Award recipients are models for all to emulate," John "Jack" Roberts, executive director of the MHSAA, said in a written statement.

"Janet Gillette and Wayne Welton have made their high school days the best days of their lives as students and servant-leaders of students. We congratulate them on this award and wish them well in their further service to educational athletics."

Welton will receive his award Sept. 15 during halftime of Chelsea's football home opener against Adrian. Kickoff is at 7 p.m.

"It's humbling," Welton said of receiving the award. "The award represents service. That's the best part for me. That's what we ought to be in schools. To be able to come back and serve a community that has been so good to me and continues to be so is wonderful."

Welton, Chelsea's athletic director and baseball coach, said he's most proud of the people he's been able to work with over the years.

"From an AD perspective, the personnel we continue to employ at Chelsea, from administrators, to teachers, to coaches, those personnel decisions have allowed Chelsea to be a special place."

"The community attracts great people. And the people influence the kids the most. I'm proud of the people we've brought here (to Chelsea)."

Welton also said he was pleased with Chelsea's improved athletic facilities.

Bulldog gridders host scrimmage

Defending Division 3 state runner-up Haslett to play in game

By Don Richter

Chelsea football will host a four-team preseason scrimmage today at renovated Jerry Niehaus Field.

The freshman and JV squads will square off at 4 p.m., followed by the varsity teams at 6:30 p.m.

There is no cost to attend the scrimmage.

Besides the Bulldogs, other schools participating in the scrimmage include defending Division 3 state runner-up Haslett, Pinckney and Monroe Jefferson.

Last season, Chelsea lost to Haslett in the first round of the state playoffs 22-14.

A year ago, the Bulldogs finished 5-5 overall and were champions of the Southeastern Conference White Division with a perfect 3-0 mark.

All four regular season losses last year for Chelsea came against playoff-bound teams, including last minute setbacks to Novi and Saline.

Besides catching an early glimpse of the 2006 Chelsea squad, spectators will get a preview of renovated Jerry Niehaus Field. New home and visitor grandstands have been added, along with a new stadium entrance and parking lot, to name a few of the improvements.

During renovations, the grass surrounding the track and other areas in and around the stadium had to be dug up. Fans attending today's scrimmage are asked to travel on the hardened surfaces already in place.

"Please stay off the freshly seeded areas," said Chelsea Athletic Director Wayne Welton.

With additional seating now available at Jerry Niehaus Field, Welton said starting this season spectators would not be allowed to save seats with blankets, as had been the case for years.

"If so, they'll (blankets) be removed," he said. "There are plenty of seats now."

Chelsea opens the regular season 8 p.m. Aug. 26 against Novi at Eastern Michigan University's Rynearson Stadium in the Big Game Prep Showdown II.

Last year, the Bulldogs lost to the Wildcats on a last-minute touchdown pass 14-7.

EMU to host cager finals

The Convocation Center on the campus of Eastern Michigan University in Ypsilanti will become the home to the Michigan High School Athletic Association's girls' basketball semifinals and finals for a minimum of two years beginning with the 2007 tournament.

The Convocation Center opened in 1998 and has seating available for 8,824 spectators. The building is the home to Eastern Michigan University basketball teams, and located adjacent to Rynearson Stadium, the school's football and track and field facility.

There are approximately 1,000 parking spaces next to the building and additional spots across the street. The building has previously served as a quarterfinal venue for the MHSAA girls' volleyball tournament.

The girls' basketball semifinals and finals will finish a three-year run this fall at the Breslin Student Events Center on the campus of Michigan State University in East Lansing. Following the 2006 event, the Breslin Center's schedule conflicts with the tournament schedule, necessitating the need for a new venue.

In relocating to the Convocation Center, MHSAA Executive Director John "Jack" Roberts says the association has found a wonderful home.

"People will find the Convocation Center to be a perfect fit for our finals," he said in a written statement. "It's the right size. It's classy. It's primarily a basketball arena with an intimate atmosphere and great sightlines."

"The building has all of the features to accommodate the needs of the tournament behind the scenes, and fans will enjoy easy access to the facility."

EMU President John Fallon said the university is excited to have the event at its venue.

"Being a basketball fan, I look forward to seeing the best teams in the state play ball here," he said.

The Convocation Center will become the ninth site to host all four games of the girls' basketball finals. In 1973, the first year of the MHSAA tournament, four separate high school sites were used in Grand Blanc, East Kentwood, Owosso and Alma. From 1974 to 1976, the site was East Kentwood High School.

The finals were then played from 1977 to 1980 at Jenison Field House on the MSU campus; in 1981 and 1982 at Calihan Hall on the campus of the University of Detroit-Mercy; from 1983 to 1985 at Read Field House at Western Michigan University; from 1986 to 1989 at the Grand Valley State University Field House in Allendale; Kellogg Arena in Battle Creek hosted the event from 1990 to 1996; and Rose Arena on the campus of Central Michigan University in Mount Pleasant was the venue from 1997 to 2003.

Chelsea senior-to-be Bridget Lynn brings the ball up the court against county rival Dexter last season. In 2007, the Michigan High School Athletic Association will hold its girls' basketball state final tournament at Eastern Michigan University. Because of scheduling conflicts, the tournament is being moved from Michigan State University's Breslin Center to EMU's Convocation Center.

Eastern Michigan University has hosted various MHSAA final tournaments over the years. As Michigan Normal College, the campus played host to some of the very first MHSAA finals in cross country, gymnastics and tennis.

In addition, EMU has hosted finals in baseball and track and field, and is now an annual venue for golf, as well as swimming and diving.

The MHSAA basketball tournament is the association's top spectator event for girls. In its experiences at Mount Pleasant and East Lansing, records have been set for overall, final day and semifinal attendance.

In 2004, the Breslin Center set the marks for overall (24,211), semifinal (13,751) attendance and single session records for double-headers during the finals (6,042 for the Class D-A session) and semifinals (3,972 for the Class A semis).

The single-day finals attendance record belongs to Rose Arena, which admitted 10,958 fans for the four final games in 1999.

The girls' basketball finals currently ranks as one of the top single-weekend amateur sporting events in the greater Lansing area, with a projected economic impact of more than $500,000 on the local economy.

SCHOLARSHIP WINNERS

Chelsea football players Robble Moffett (left), Cam Hawkins and Drew Wint were recipients of the Gene LaFave Scholarship Fund earlier this summer. Hawkins received $3,000, while Moffett and Wint each received $500. The event was held at the Polo Fields Golf Club.

WHO'S WATCHING THE CHILDREN?

The Orange County Register thought its readers might like to know about the criminal histories of workers in the state's day-care facilities. After all, the paper's readers were placing their own trust and their children's well-being in the hands of those workers.

But the state of California turned down a series of newspaper Freedom of Information requests to look at those histories, citing the privacy rights of the workers. It also refused access to its data base of offenses and other day-care center violations unless the newspaper paid $45,000 for the information.

In the end, the Register won its fight for access to documents—which were used to track down the criminals and public court records that revealed their histories. The newspaper also built its own data base from nearly 50,000 pages of inspection and complaint reports in Orange County. These efforts allowed the Register to unveil for the state's parents the uncomfortable truth. Throughout California, thousands of day-care workers had long criminal histories. The results of the data base analysis also showed pervasive problems of mistreatment, neglect, overcrowding and unsafe conditions.

If you lived in Orange County, or any other county with day care, wouldn't you like to know whether the adults your children come in contact with have committed crimes?

WELTON

the look on the faces of people when they come to Chelsea," he said. "We finally have facilities that match our programs. People marvel at our facilities."

A three-sport performer at Chelsea High School, Welton was the quarterback of the Bulldogs' 1971 football team that finished 9-0 and claimed a mythical Class B state title. He also played basketball and baseball.

Following college, Welton returned to Chelsea to begin a career in educational athletics that has spanned nearly three decades as a teacher, coach and administrator.

As a baseball coach, Welton's teams have won more than 850 games, compiled a .750 winning percentage, claimed 15 conference titles and an MHSAA Class B crown in 1991.

In his 18 years as the school's athletic director, he has been instrumental in the upgrading of Chelsea's athletic facilities to serve all students; authored one of the most comprehensive coaches handbooks in the state, and assembled a coaching staff composed of 95 percent faculty members.

"That's important," Welton said of having faculty members as coaches. "They know our kids."

Welton has been a leader in the area of sportsmanship initiatives, and has hosted Southeastern Conference Sportsmanship programs the past seven years. A true compliment to his leadership is that the Bulldogs have received no negative officials reports concerning Chelsea coaches during the past three years.

A past president of the Michigan High School Baseball Coaches Association, he was inducted into that organization's Hall of Fame in 2005, named a Regional Coach of the Year on six occasions and statewide Chelsea coach Wayne Welton addresses his squad after it was ousted from the Division II baseball state semifinals this past spring. Welton was inducted into the Michigan High School Baseball Coaches Association Hall of Fame in 2005.

Coach of the Year in 1991.

Welton is active in statewide and national athletic administrators associations, and in a variety of community activities.

He earned his bachelor's degree from Central Michigan University in 1977, and his master's degree from Eastern Michigan University in 1983.

"It has been a pleasure to have the opportunity to work with great kids over the years," Welton said. "It has been fun watching how we've competed in all sports. We have 23 varsity sports. Sixty-five percent of our kids participate in sports. I think kids play high school sports to have fun. That's always been our mission. I really believe in that."

Gillette is the other recipient of the Al Bush Award.

Since walking through the doors of Comstock Park High School as a student, she has been involved in the school's athletic program as an athlete, coach or athletic administrator. She played four sports in high school, and returned to the school to begin coaching the girls' tennis and softball teams while a junior in college.

Following college, Gillette became a teacher at Comstock Park in addition to her coaching duties, which also included volleyball and middle school basketball during her tenure, and became the school's full-time athletic director in 1990.

Under Gillette's leadership, Comstock Park has served as the host to numerous MHSAA postseason tournaments, including 10 Lower Peninsula track and field finals, and three girls competitive cheer finals.

She also has been active with the Michigan Interscholastic Athletic Administrators Association, serving as a presenter at numerous conferences and developing a coaches handbook.

She has been recognized as an inductee into the Comstock Park Athletic Hall of Fame; Regional Athletic Director of the Year by the MIAAA; Athletic Director of the Year by the Michigan Competitive Cheer Coaches Association and the West Michigan Basketball-Football Association, and the Comstock Park Employee of the Year in 2004.

In the community, Gillette has served as a coach in the Northwest Little League and has been active with the Alpine Baptist Church as a director and a Sunday school teacher.

Gillette earned an associate's degree from Grand Rapids Community College in 1976, where she also played basketball and softball, and a bachelor's degree in physical education from Grand Valley State University in 1978.

Reception to kick off public display

Starting Thursday, doors of all kinds will be surprising visitors to downtown Chelsea thanks to the Chelsea Center for the Arts and its 2006 community public art project "Opening Doors: A Community Celebration of McKune Memorial Library."

The project celebrates the grand re-opening of Chelsea's downtown library and brings artists and community together to creatively explore how libraries and learning spark creativity and imagination in people and communities.

New and recycled doors served as the canvases for artists and community to express the importance of libraries, reading and learning for people of all ages.

The public art project features 43 doors and one mural that will be displayed in downtown Chelsea, and at the Chelsea Center for the Arts, 400 Congdon St., and Chelsea District Library, 500 Washington St., through Sept. 30.

Exhibit brochures and maps are available at the CCA, library and various downtown businesses.

The project is funded in part with a $12,000 Community PARTners: Artists-in-Residence implementation grant from the Michigan Association of Community Arts Agencies in conjunction with the Michigan Council for the Arts and Cultural Affairs.

The program is designed to bring artists and communities together to explore local issues or celebrate milestones through the process of making art, said Jennifer Goulet, executive director of the CCA.

Community partners for the project include the Chelsea District Library, Chelsea Area Chamber of Commerce, Chelsea Gallery, Chelsea Print and Graphics, Dacio (left), Shaelynn and Amythyst Romero pose with the door they decorated for the One World One Family Task Force's entry for the "Opening Doors: A Community Celebration of McKune Memorial Library" exhibit. Forty-three doors and one mural will be displayed throughout downtown Chelsea and at the Chelsea District Library beginning Thursday and extending through Sept. 30.

city of Chelsea, Dixboro General Store, Holbrook Design, River Gallery, Sleeping Bear Press and the Ann Arbor Street Art Fair.

An opening reception will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. Thursday at the River Gallery, 120 S. Main St., in Chelsea. The reception will celebrate the creativity brought to the project by artists and community members, and provide an opportunity to recognize the project partners and sponsors, artists, groups and individuals.

"It will be incredible to see all 43 doors up in downtown Chelsea," Goulet said in a written statement. "Each door offers a unique perspective on the project theme and it has been fulfilling to see how artists and community groups have come together to celebrate our new library.

"We hope that the exhibit will bring new visitors to Chelsea to also support downtown and area businesses."

In all, 16 artists and 17 community groups and individuals have been involved in creating doors for the project. Artists selected to create door art were Cathy Barry, Susan Craig, Rick DeTroyer, Christine Kelly-Bentgen, Sandy Knapp, Heidi Kraepel-Griffith, Diana Jellinek, Eva Leventer, Lynnette Michalik-Stafford, Leah Newman, Penny Olsen, ribeth Hammer, Candace Pappas, Marsi Parker Darwin, John Schwarz and Allison Warren.

Community groups and individuals participating in the project include the Adult Learners Institute, Chelsea Area Garden Club, Cardiac and Pulmonary Artists, Chelsea District Library, Chelsea First United Methodist Church, South Meadows

Elementary School, Chelsea Painters, Chelsea Senior Center, Faith In Action, Nancy Feldkamp, Shimon Newman, One World One Family, Jenica Rutherford, Chelsea Children's Cooperative Preschool and the CCA.

Chelsea publisher Sleeping Bear Press, a sponsor of the doors project, and one of its illustrators, Gijbert "Nick" van Frankenhuyzen, created a door for the exhibition featuring images from the "Michigan Legends" series and "Hazel Ridge Farm" series.

Frankenhuyzen's door will be on display in the front window of the Common Grill, 112 S. Main St., during the exhibition.

"We hope that the exhibit will bring new visitors to Chelsea to also support downtown and area businesses."

The Alliance for a Healthier Generation is a partnership between the William J. Clinton Foundation and the American Heart Association.

Nickelodeon kicked off Let's Just Play in 2003 in an effort to get kids more physically active and encourage more positive, healthy and playful lifestyles.

"We're glad for the opportunity to host this event at our facility," Diane Wilson, general manager of the Ann Arbor Ice Cube, said in

FREEDOM TOWNSHIP

Area man certified peer visitor for amputees

Tom Roberts first in southeastern Michigan

By Marsha Johnson Chartrand
Heritage Newspapers

In the past six years, Tom Roberts has learned many lessons.

"I've learned to be last," he said with a chuckle, referring to the fact that although he might be the first passenger helped on to an airplane flight, he also will be the last one off.

Roberts learned to request help by asking people, "Have you done your good deed yet today?"

He has learned that he can do anything he sets his mind to.

And he's learned that he's not alone. Not a bad bunch of lessons to learn at age 70.

In early 2000, Roberts lost both of his legs to diabetic neuropathy.

"I had the good fortune that this happened pre-HIPAA," he said, referring to the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act, which took effect in early 2003. "The doctor was able to put me in contact with another patient in the Detroit area who had similar surgery."

"And seven minutes on the phone was worth more than all the help the doctors or the hospital could have given me."

Although doctors, social workers and therapists might have treated numerous amputees, it's difficult to understand what it is like to lose a limb unless they've experienced it themselves.

And that's what Roberts saw immediately when he attended a conference of the Amputee Coalition of America.

"Here I was in a room with 40 men and women who looked just like me," he said.

It's that been-there, done-that experience that Roberts is offering to others these days as an ACA-certified, volunteer peer visitor. He is the first certified peer visitor in the southeastern Michigan area, with the next closest one being in the Lansing area.

Seeing someone who has a similar amputation but is active and doing well in life can bring hope to a new amputee.

"Usually, an amputee wants to talk," Roberts said. "They want to see that there's life after surgery."

"My role is to be a pipeline for that information."

Unfortunately, he adds, there is a sort of illiteracy on the part of the medical profession about limb amputation — in part, simply because most of them have not experienced it personally and also because people are often uncomfortable talking about it.

Roberts has been there from both sides. In 1979, he was the worried parent when his then 7-year-old daughter, Jessica, lost an arm to cancer. It was Jessica, in turn, who referred her dad to the ACA several years ago after his amputation.

"I signed on for the magazine," Roberts said. "But I wish I'd gone to the conferences five years ago."

Although he has been a part of an amputee support group at St. Joseph Mercy Hospital for a few years, he attended his first ACA national conference in Minneapolis in June and shortly after was certified as a peer visitor.

"It's a terrific, upbeat group — the unifying factor is that of the 750 attendees, everyone was missing something, somewhere," he said.

Roberts wants to get the word out that he is available to visit with other amputees around the southeastern Michigan area.

Peer visitors can offer information, support, hope and encouragement to patients who are struggling to deal with loss of a limb or limb deficiency (defined as a congenital defect), in the home or the hospital.

A peer visitor is a veteran amputee who has successfully adjusted to life with limb loss and is trained and willing to help others do the same.

"There are a couple of hard parts of this job," Roberts said. "First, you have to go in accepting that you can't cure these people. You can't fix what is wrong with them. You go because you're invited, and you try to share some of the

Tom Roberts says that finding yourself an amputee gives you two choices: sit and be sour or get on with life. As a peer visitor, he helps others learn to "get on with life."

The Chelsea Community Hospital Health and Wellness Center hosted its fourth annual Kids in Motion picnic July 28 at Pierce Park. Even though it rained, many families and children turned out for the potluck. The event included food, games, prizes and face painting. DETROIT

Michigan State Fair to open Wednesday

The 2006 Michigan State Fair will open Wednesday and continue through Sept. 4.

The event will kick off with an official ribbon-cutting ceremony noon Wednesday at the Wall of Honor, across from the coliseum, followed by a parade winding its way around the fairgrounds.

Several new attractions are on tap, along with the classic favorites that have made the fair a Michigan summer staple. The Anastasi Circus and Elephant Encounter is new and will offer three shows daily. In addition, the Rowdy Rooster Puppet Show, featuring a speeding rooster cruising the fairgrounds in a hotrod roadster, singing songs, telling jokes and visiting folks, will be among the new attractions.

Other new events and activities will include the Fallen Giant, an interactive experience for all ages; a magic show by Jamahl Keyes; cheerleading and dance exhibitions and competitions; and The Walking Treeman.

Featured alongside these attractions will be the traditional favorites, such as the Contest Corner for children and adults, daily parades, The Miracle of Life Exhibit, The Michigan Mart and The Outdoor Zone. This year's fair also will include free headliner concerts in the Band Shell.

"Combining the classic favorites of the fair and adding multiple new attractions makes for a very exciting and highly anticipated 2006 Michigan State Fair," General Manager John Hertel said in a written statement. "This year, as always, the fair will continue to uphold the highest level of entertainment value to be found anywhere in the Midwest.

"Generations of fairgoers have made the Michigan State Fair a summer ritual for over a century and we know this year will continue that tradition."

Originally conceived to foster communication between rural and urban industry, the Michigan State Fair is America's first state fair, attracting thousands of fairgoers each year. First held in 1849, the Michigan State Fair has been at its current location in Detroit since 1905.

The fair will open from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily. The carnival rides will be operated from 11 a.m. to 11 p.m. weekdays and 11 a.m. to midnight weekends. Admission is $9 for adults and $4 for children 12 years and younger. Parking is $5.

The fairgrounds are located at the corner of Eight Mile Road and Woodward Avenue in Detroit.

For more information, call the Michigan State Fair office at 1-313-369-8250.

processes and pitfalls they will experience.

"You show them that life does go on after all of this and you can do whatever you set your mind to. You may do it differently than other people, but you can do it."

That's a lesson he learned 27 years ago from Jessica, who went on to play varsity basketball during her high school days at Greenhills in Ann Arbor and continued to play as a walk-on to the girls' basketball team at Tufts University in Boston.

Another difficult aspect of the job, he says, is being able to identify depression and suicidal behavior in the people he visits.

"You can develop a sort of gallows humor," he said, "and it can occasionally be hard to distinguish."

But Roberts emphasizes that it's important to have the support of someone else who knows exactly what you're going through.

"I'm an information provider, but I'm also a listener and a sounding board," he says. "You need a friend to swap war tales with or just crab about it a bit."

"I am lucky; I had time to try and process this before it happened; some people wake up in a hospital not expecting it ... either way, it's a whole new world and a good Anglo-Saxon vocabulary can be very useful as you learn to deal with it."

While Roberts has traditional prosthetic legs and is re-learning to walk with them, he finds them cumbersome and slow.

"I can't wear them all day," he said. "I'm not that good at balancing ... I wasn't too good on stilts when I was 7, and I'm not any better at 70."

So he was pleased to take delivery last week on a pair of "shorties," which will help him to start strengthening muscles that have been losing their tone from sitting in a wheelchair.

Even being in a wheelchair, however, hasn't kept Roberts from going on with his life much as he did before his surgery forced him to retire at 63 from running his own business.

During the recent Ann Arbor Art Fair, he helped park cars at the Theta Xi fraternity house on the University of Michigan campus, where he remains an active alumnus.

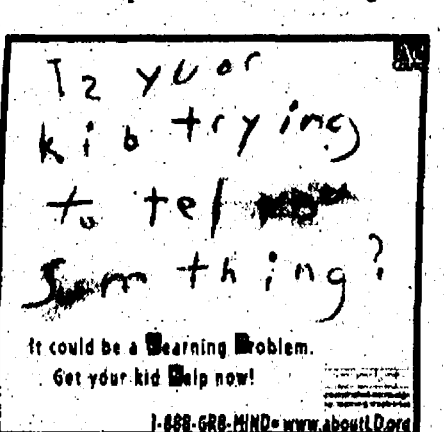

He drives his own vehicle, and doesn't hesitate to ask for help if he needs it. He knows that doing things takes longer these days, but he doesn't mind — he's got time.

His philosophy is simple:

"I figure you've got two choices," he said. "You can sit and be sour and be a pain in the neck, or you can get out there and get on with life."

It's obvious which path Tom Roberts has chosen.

ASK DR. CRANKSHAFT

Why is the air system humming?

Q: Do you know of any reason why my 2002 VW Beetle's (diesel) air-conditioning system would hum and vibrate in hot and humid weather? We think it's the air conditioning because it only happens when it's on. Any thoughts appreciated.

A: The VW/Mercedes/Audi compressors tend to hum and vibrate as they age. Some even do so when new, and the manufacturers actually have an "acceptable level" of noise and vibration, below which is considered normal.

Sometimes a hum or vibration can happen when a high-pressure line (the small diameter line off the compressor) is loose in its clamp on an engine bay panel, but you should be able to open the hood and see the line shaking.

If the condenser (the thin radiator in front of the engine's cooling radiator) is loose it can also cause the hum and vibration. Diesel engines tend to vibrate quite a bit and over time things get loose.

Q: I found that where the tail bolts to the front of my '98 Durango's transmission, there's a notch right on the bottom where the gasket is, and it leaks after it sits for awhile. I put some liquid steel on it every so often to keep it from leaking. If I run it normally, it doesn't leak; it only leaks after it's been sitting for awhile.

A: I appreciate the comment on this one. Obviously, if the Durango were in perfect condition it wouldn't be leaking, but there are sometimes flaws in the mating surfaces of components that cause chronic leaks.

Bad engineering also can be the cause of some of these problems, but there doesn't seem to be an "epidemic" of leaks in Durango models.

Q: I hear a funny ticking sound when I push in the clutch on my 2003 VW Beetle. It started out as a faint sound and then got worse as time went on. Now it's much louder, and along with the ticking is a weird sort of whining or whirring sound.

Could my transmission be failing or is something else wrong? There's no sound when the car is engaged in gear and driving along.

A: What you describe is noise from the throw-out bearing in your clutch system. These tend to wear out before the clutch plate itself, chiefly as a function of how often the clutch is used and whether you leave the pedal depressed when stopped at a light.

I'd guess that your VW has substantial mileage (probably in excess of 50,000) and the throw-out bearing is losing what's left of its lubricant. The bearing itself is either a ball bearing that's sealed with lubricant or a graphite-based flat bearing.

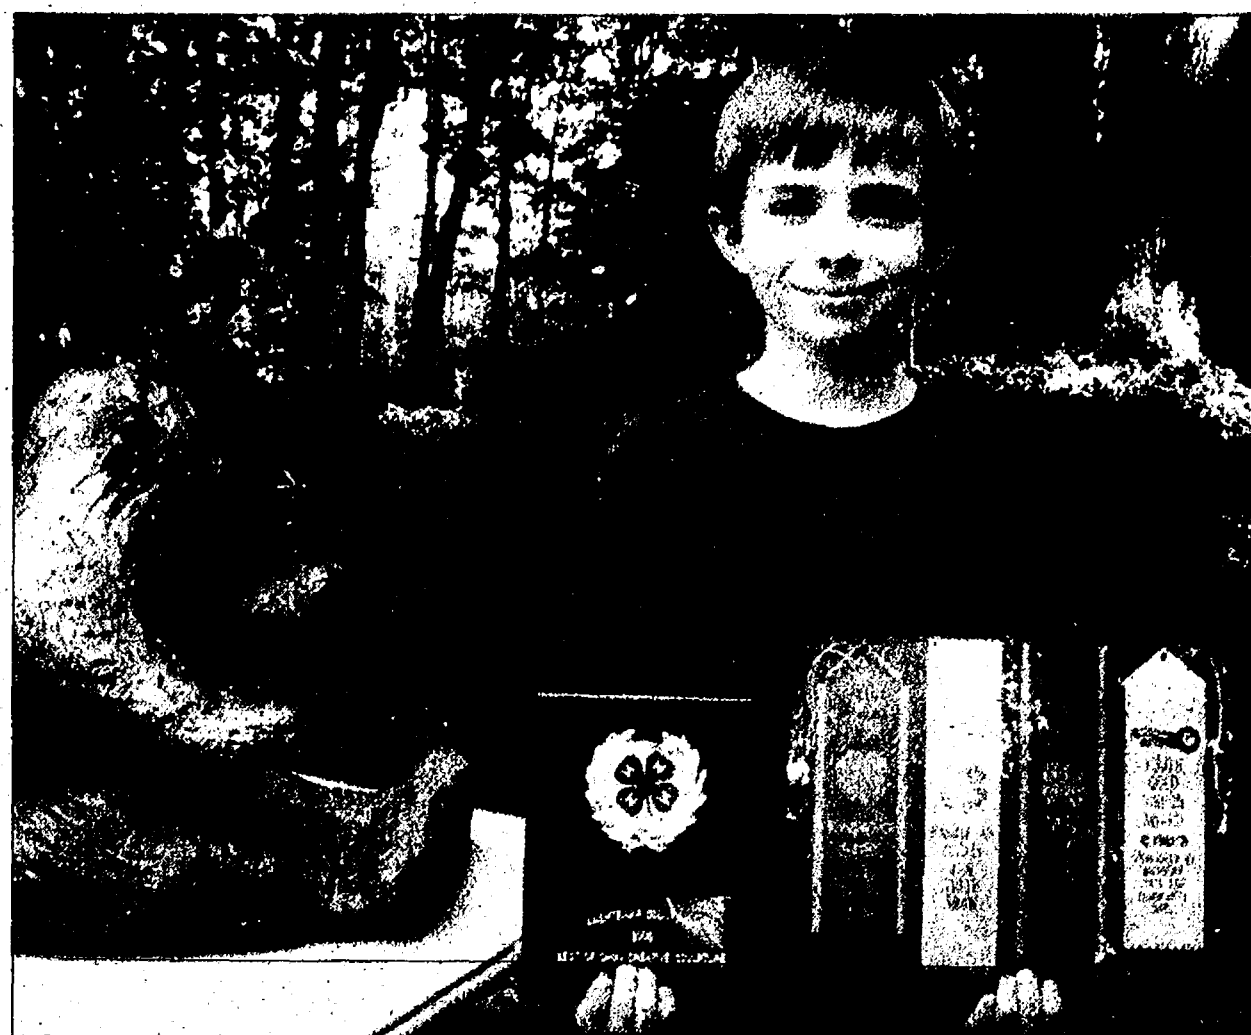

When you depress the clutch pedal, you push the bearing's surface onto the pressure plate's mating surface. As your leg pushes down, the throw-out bearing presses against powerful springs in the pressure plate, releasing its pressure against the clutch disc that's sandwiched between the inner pressure plate and fly-wheel surfaces.

The bad news is that the repair won't be cheap. The transmission has to be pulled away from the engine and the throw-out bearing disengaged from the input shaft of the transmission.

The bearing itself only costs about $40, but it would be foolhardy to replace it without also replacing the clutch disc and pressure plate. They're all probably equally worn and should be thought of as a "set."

All tax parcels identified as having a household or households located within the Townships of Bridgewater, Dexter, Lima, Lyndon, Manchester and Sylvan within Washtenaw County excluding those tax parcels located within the incorporated limits of the City of Chelsea and the Village of Manchester.

Each parcel identified above will be assessed twenty-six dollars ($26.00) per year for each household located on the parcel for a five-year period. A report describing the Project including program elements and cost estimates has been prepared and is on file with the Washtenaw County Director of Public Works. The report is available for public examination at the Washtenaw County Department of Planning & Environment, 705 N. Zeeb Road, Ann Arbor, MI 48103. An owner or a party in interest or his or her agent may (1) appear in person at the hearing to protest the special assessment or (2) file his or her appearance or protest by letter before the close of the hearing.

The Board of Public Works shall maintain a record of parties who appear to protest at the hearing. If the hearing is terminated or adjourned for the day before a party is provided the opportunity to be heard, a party whose appearance was recorded shall be considered to have protested the special assessment in person.

Fund-raiser set for Aug. 25

Rainbow House, a Habitat for Humanity project, is hosting a beer tasting, appetizers and Construction Olympics from 6 to 10 p.m. Aug. 25.

The fund-raiser will be held at the newly opened Corner Brewery, 720 Norris St. in Ypsilanti, and will include team or individual competitions such as Pink Flamingo Yard Decoration and Ladder Limbo.

Space is limited to 100 guests and tickets may be purchased for $25 by e-mailing chair@rainbowhouseproject.org.

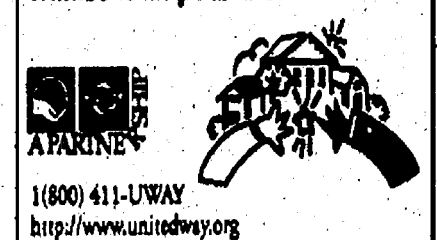

A total 5.1 million families in the United States pay more than half their income for housing, endure overcrowded conditions, and/or live in houses with severe physical deficiencies, according to a press release from Habitat for Humanity. The high cost of housing leaves low-income families little money for other basic necessities like food, clothing, or health care.

Habitat for Humanity homeowners each contribute at least 300 hours of labor on their homes, and then pay back on a 25-year, interest-free mortgage. The mortgage payments allow another Habitat for Humanity house to be built, enabling two families to become homeowners as a result of the project.

Fairgrounds see improvements in time for event

New bleachers, picnic-style pavilion among the additions

By Alison Marable
Special Writer

Visitors to this year's Chelsea Community Fair, set Aug. 22 through 26, are going to be the first group to enjoy major improvements to the grounds.

Fair board members and local volunteers will have many of the upgrades ready for this summer's fair, with some anticipated for next year.

The Chelsea Community Fair sign at the northeast corner of the grounds is noticeably different. The wooden sign, brightly painted and lit up, has new stonework and flowers. Local resident Diane Weid, a member of the Evening Primrose Garden Club, has become the caretaker of the small-but-lively garden surrounding the sign.

Weid was the visionary behind the enhanced garden dedicated in memory of late Chelsea Community Fair Board President Ken McCalla.

In addition to the decorative stone and more vibrant flowers, a new water line has been added to help with the watering process. Previously, a hose had to be dragged across the grounds making it a burdensome task.

Once inside the fairgrounds, it's hard to miss the updated service center area. New stonework, provided by the fair board, circles the building used as a resting and dining area for visitors during the fair.

The lush plantings, formerly supplied by Walt and Sandy Zeeb, are now being cared for by Karen Layher. Layher, along with her daughters Sarah and Erin, beautify the building with perennials and annuals in a tribute to the Zeebs.

"Our vision was to do something in honor of all the years that the Zeebs took care of the flowers," Layher said.

The trio started working on the garden area around the service center last fall. This spring, the decaying railroad ties were removed to make way for attractive stonework. Hardy perennials and colorful annuals were added along with mulch.

Layher and her daughters plan to continue in the role of caretakers as long as they are able.

Sarah Layher said she enjoys gardening and working side by side with her family. The twins attend the University of Michigan, but are home for the summer, which allows them the time to help their mother with the service center gardens.

Another visible sign of improvement is the addition of signage at the entrance to the barns. The new signs, which designate the contents of the barns, are the product of local resident and Scout John Skidmore.

Skidmore isn't the only Scout with a community project. Several more projects are in the works, including signage at the three entrances. The future entryway signs will show a "you are here" map, which will be color-coded.

Booths will be painted and adorned with flags in the same color as the coordinating sign for that entrance. The effort is meant to help children and families locate each other, as well as assist newcomers to the area.

The largest and most extensive improvement to the fairgrounds is the new bleachers in the derby area. The major project has increased the spectator capacity and is expected to last much longer. The seating expansion will allow for 2,800 additional spectators at the derby and truck-pulling contests, two of the most popular activities each year.

Except for one wooden section that will be replaced next year, the new bleachers are made of aluminum. Along with the safer and more durable seating, there is also a new press box, fencing and lighting.

The construction of the bleachers was performed by hired professionals, but all of the prep and final work was done by local volunteers. The cost of the materials and the labor was an expensive undertaking; however, the volunteers saved the fair board money by doing as much of the work as they could by themselves.

The cost of this year's improvements at the fairgrounds totaled $300,000, which required the fair board to acquire a bank loan. The admission fee, which wasn't raised this year, helps fund upgrades and activities at the Chelsea Community Fair.

"All of the entrance money at the gate goes directly back into the fair," said Tom Edman, president of the fair board.

Another addition to the fairgrounds will be a 40-by-40 picnic-style outdoor pavilion, which is expected to be constructed before the 2007 Chelsea Community Fair. Edman said the structure most likely will be erected south of the red barn near the hill and the restrooms.

Funds for the open-air dining and resting spot will come from local residents who donated money to the fair board in memory of McCalla, who spent many years dedicating his time to the fair.

ANN ARBOR

Hospice needs help

Arbor Hospice and Home Care is in need of volunteers to visit patients in their homes within its service area. There are also opportunities in The Residence to provide companionship, help feed patients and assist with other various activities and office duties.

Volunteer training is a series of five classes on Monday evenings beginning Sept. 18. Classes will be held from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. at The Residence of Arbor Hospice, 2366 Oak Valley Drive in Ann Arbor.

Volunteers must register prior to participating in the training class.

This training class is designed to educate volunteers in providing comfort and support to families facing end-of-life issues. Participants will gain valuable knowledge and expertise in many areas including gaining a basic understanding of hospice care, communication skills and end-of-life issues.

To volunteer or for more information, call Kappy Pennington, director of volunteer services, at 662-5999, ext. 143 or via e-mail at kpennington@arborhospice.org.
