SYLVAN TOWNSHIP

Board, couple at odds over regulations

Township supervisor says hands tied on zoning matter

By Edward Freundl
Special Writer

A Sylvan Township property owner finds herself tangled in a maze of zoning and building regulations in her effort to rebuild a house on Cavanaugh Lake.

H.K. Leonard intends to demolish and replace her late parents' Glazier Road home that she inherited, but while in the process of drawing up new plans, the vacant structure came under the township edict for connecting to the sanitary sewer system.

Leonard now faces court action for missing the mandatory connection deadline because the site plan for the new house has since been rejected by zoning officials, who also will not issue a permit for demolition.

Leonard's husband, Greg Raye, appealed to the Sylvan Township Board Sept. 5, asking for a solution to the dilemma.

"We're just asking for permission not to hook up the sewer to a house that will be torn down," he said.

Raye said the Zoning Board of Appeals rejected the site plan because the house did not meet the minimum setback of 20 feet from the property line, even though the existing house is only 4 feet away and the plan called for a 12-foot setback.

Not only would the sewer line have to be connected, electrical service for the sewer grinder pump would have to be installed, as well, requiring another permit and fee.

Leonard and Raye objected to the expenses they were being required to bear, including $175 for a demolition permit and $550 for each ZBA meeting, particularly since they would have to pay electrical and sewer connection fees again on the new house.

"If you demolish the house without getting permission from the ZBA to rebuild, you won't be able to," said Township Zoning Officer Bob Lange.

Although sympathetic to their plight, Supervisor Michael Williams said there was little the Township Board could do to help without establishing an untenable precedent.

"The board doesn't want to get involved in exceptions and doesn't want to be involved in monitoring individual compliance," Williams said. "I empathize with you, but there are several others in similar circumstances, and we really can't be stopping by various cottages to see if the electricity and sewer is being used or not."

Raye told the board that he had hoped to demolish the house sometime this fall and begin construction of the replacement during the winter, which may actually help to provide a partial solution to the problem.

Lesser retires after 30 years

Longtime post office employee will be missed by many

By Alison Marable
Special Writer

Sue Lesser can say that not only has she worked for the same company for more than three decades, but she will actually miss it.

On Sept. 1, the Lima Township resident worked her last day before celebrating 30 years and four days of service at the Chelsea Post Office.

Her co-workers held a potluck in her honor and the U.S. Postal Service gave her a 30-year service pin, an engraved clock and a certificate for her retirement. On Sept. 9 her friends and co-workers held a karaoke party at the Chelsea Comfort Inn.

Mary Lou Koszegi, Lesser's longtime friend and former Chelsea Post Office employee, first introduced her to the post office. Lesser began her career as a substitute carrier, which is now called a rural carrier associate.

Fab Four in focus

Library to present program on The Beatles

By Sheila Pursglove
Special Writer

Many baby boomers loved them, yeah, yeah, yeah — and still do, even though John and George are both long gone and Paul and Ringo are gray-haired grandfathers.

The Beatles — the music group from Liverpool who took Britain by storm in the early '60s and then invaded these shores — still live on in the hearts and minds of music lovers.

The Chelsea District Library will capture some of that Beatles magic with a two-part program about the Fab Four, presented by Detroit poet M.L. Liebler, an English professor at Wayne State University.

"Meet The Beatles" is set for 6 p.m. Wednesday at the library, 500 Washington St., in Chelsea. Part 2, "The Beatles: Long and Winding Road," will be held 7 p.m. Oct. 25. Registration is required.

Liebler will look at all aspects of The Beatles — songs, films, album concepts, fiction, poetry, theater, essays and cartoons — and discuss the history, myths, legends, secrets, lies and the reality of The Beatles. He also will supply rare essays and writings of The Beatles, in addition to seldom-seen video footage.

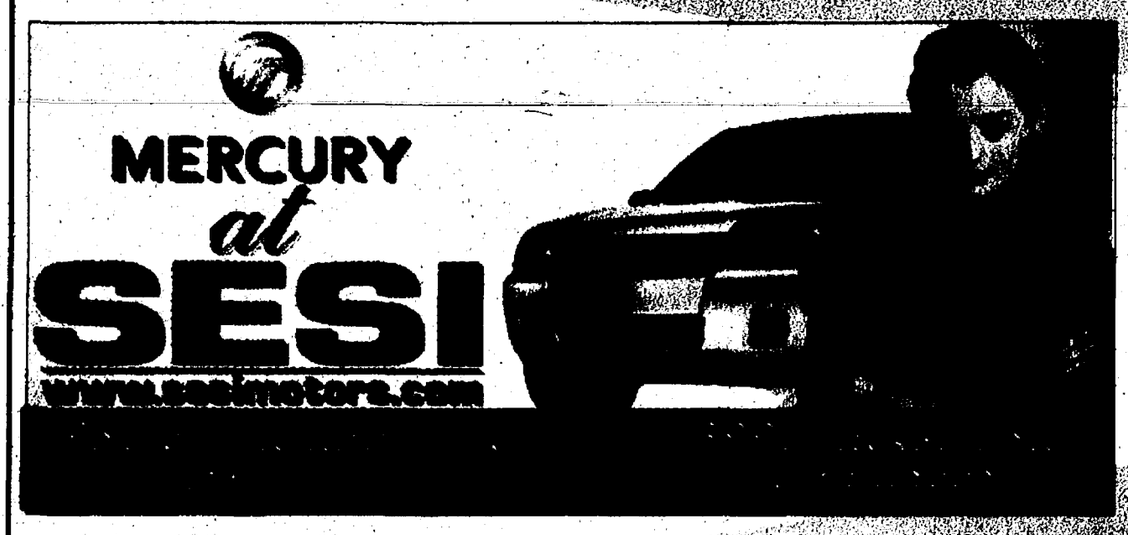
Sesi – 60 years in business and counting

Tradition of service, honesty, integrity and caring continues

Sesi Lincoln Mercury Volvo, located in a brand-new facility at 3990 Jackson Road, between Wagner and Zeeb roads, may be a relatively new dealership, but it is backed by a 60-year tradition of service, honesty, integrity and caring.

Sesi Lincoln Mercury Volvo has been in business for 5 years but the Sesi family's successful business experience dates back to 1946 at its Ypsilanti location.

Now serving its third generation of customers and still treating them like honored members of the family, Sesi's Ypsilanti Lincoln-Mercury-Mazda dealership, located at 950 E. Michigan Ave., is in the top 25 in the nation for vehicle sales among all Lincoln Mercury dealerships and is also among the fastest-growing Mazda dealerships in the nation.



The customer-friendly environment allows Sesi to offer better service to their customers and keeps them coming back for future purchases. More than 75 percent of Sesi's business comes from repeat customers or those referred by other Sesi customers.

"Our reputation, our employees, and our customers are our biggest assets," Sesi says.

Chris Conley, general manager at Sesi's Jackson Road location, is enthusiastic about the new facility and the fantastic opportunity for service it provides.

"Our service and parts departments have doubled in size," he says. "Even though we're a relatively new dealership, it's important for people to know that we operate under the Sesi family's tradition. Our employees are committed to honesty, integrity and caring for people."

Providing free loaners to customers who need transportation during warranty-related service appointments, helps customers to have a pleasant experience even when their car needs service.

"We have a great team of highly qualified and experienced mechanics who have the same commitment to outstanding customer service as our sales group," Sesi says.

Sesi is also one of the top used car dealers in the state. With a large inventory of quality low-mileage used cars, trucks and vans, Sesi says the used car selection is second to none.

"They're safety-checked, cleaned, polished and priced right with no confusion. If there's a problem, we fix it." The Certified Pre-Owned vehicles have been well-maintained by their customers. Backed by a warranty up to 72 months or 100,000 miles, the Certified Pre-Owned vehicle offers the customer greater peace of mind.

Now that Sesi is selling cars to the children and grandchildren of its original customers, they rely on the trust they have established with generations of clientele.

"Our customers trust us because we don't let them down," Sesi says. "Our reputation depends on it."

The new Ann Arbor location is well on its way to establishing a tradition of its own. With true 21st-century style, Sesi hopes to become the benchmark by which all other dealerships are measured.

Sesi has also integrated all of their websites under a single homepage, www.sesimotors.com. Both Sesi locations are open on Saturday for sales, service and parts.

Hospital launches new imaging system

New system allows for better patient care, improved efficiency

By Sheila Pursglove
Special Writer

Chelsea Community Hospital has a new tool to better service patients — a Picture Archiving and Communication System in the X-ray/Imaging Department.

"It's a pretty big deal for a hospital our size," said John Gonda, the hospital's director of marketing and planning.

"Basically, PACS allows all sorts of imaging scans to be transmitted and read digitally, as opposed to the old way of reading films. It was a significant financial investment for our hospital, and really will improve our efficiency and processes of providing patient care."

It's important for a hospital to remain as technologically advanced as possible, for patient care purposes, as well as employee retention and recruitment, since healthcare employees want to work in advanced facilities with cutting-edge technology, said Kathy Raymond, director, X-ray/Imaging.

"I'm very proud of the infrastructure we have in place at Chelsea Community Hospital. We have put a lot of effort into preparing ourselves to be able to continually provide quality services to our patients."
Sherry Brown
Chelsea hospital

The department offers bone density testing, CT scans, general radiology, mammography, MRI scans, nuclear medicine and ultrasound.

"Film has been the standard for medical imaging for many years" Raymond said. "Digital imaging will now save our hospital the expense of film and its processing, as well as allow physicians to have instant access to important test results, which allows them to deliver quality care to the patient sooner."

Sherry Brown, vice president and chief information officer, said the new system also will offer increased security of a patient's medical images.

"In order to access the system, you must have a designated username and secure password," she said. "PACS is also a critical system that we must have in place to move toward the electronic medical record."

"I'm very proud of the infrastructure we have in place at Chelsea Community Hospital. We have put a lot of effort into preparing ourselves to be able to continually provide quality services to our patients. Two years ago, we built a state-of-the-art data center on our campus and we are always evaluating and pursuing efforts that will enhance the healthcare experiences of our patients and our physicians."

Benefits of the new system include the elimination of hard copy filming and of medical imaging paper documents, as well as the problem of lost films, Gonda said. The system allows for rapid interpretation of exams by radiologists and improves radiologist and technologist productivity.

In addition, film storage and retrieval costs are reduced, as are supply costs, and service to referring physicians and patients is improved.

"The projected savings to our facility is more than $5 million over five years," Gonda said.

"Chelsea Community Hospital has always valued the loyalty and support of our local community and we are glad to be able to continually provide our patients with some of the best available care and technology."

"The wheels of government move slowly," Williams told Raye. "You are already in violation of a court order, so the sooner you start, the better."

Raye and Leonard vented their dissatisfaction as they left the meeting.

"It's a 'Catch-22'," Raye said. "We're just extremely frustrated with the township and all their boards at this point."

Williams again expressed regret over the situation.

"It's unfortunate," he said. "It does seem like they are beating their heads against a wall in trying to comply."

On another subject, the board voted to add attorney Fred Lucas to the township's list of approved vendors.

Williams said Lucas has been called on for real estate development work, but would not handle all the township's legal affairs.

"He would not be the township's attorney of record," Williams said. "Putting him on the vendor list just means that if we get a bill from him, we could pay it."

Clerk LuAnn Koch reminded the board that Lucas is also the attorney for a land developer in the township, which could create a conflict.

"If they file a suit, we would lose him as our insurance attorney," she said.

The vote was 3-2, with Koch and Treasurer Arlene Grau dissenting.

In other business, Corinne Sikorski of the Western Washtenaw Recycling Authority reported that based on increased demand, extra recycling bins will be installed at the most popular sites in Chelsea, Dexter and Manchester.

She also said new recycling authority manager Colin Fisher is considering an increase to a six-day pick-up schedule.

M.L. Liebler, an English professor at Wayne State University, will present a program on The Beatles 6 p.m. Wednesday at the Chelsea District Library.

PROGRAM

"Almost 45 years ago, there was an eruption in the music scene in the United Kingdom and soon the world," Liebler said. "Parents and society at large, at the time, thought this new phenomena would be as short-lived as music acts nowadays like New Kids On the Block, N' Sync or Britney Spears, but they were wrong.

"The Beatles have proven themselves to be true innovators and revolutionaries in the field of music, art and culture. They are just as popular today, or perhaps even more so, than back in the day."

Beatles CDs still sell millions annually, Paul McCartney Tour tickets are the most highly sought after concert tickets in the 21st century, and their CD "Number One" stayed at No. 1 on the Billboard Charts for almost two years straight, Liebler said.

"In addition, hundreds of scholarly and biographical books on every aspect of Beatlemania have been published with at least five to seven new book titles just in 2006," he said.

"In my talk, we'll attempt to explore the group that has left a significant mark upon and who have forever changed world culture, art and society."

Bill Harmer, the library's head of adult services, is organizing the event.

"Aside from being multi-talented and the best-known poet in Detroit, M.L. Liebler has traveled all over the globe teaching about The Beatles, including in England, Germany and Russia," Harmer said. "All I know is that I want his job.

"Most of us know the story of The Beatles, but Professor Liebler will help us discover why this phenomenon ever happened in the first place and what value it may have in our lives today.

"The bottom line is that we will have fun. We want our community of users to understand that the library isn't just warehouses for books, but a place where they can come and enjoy themselves. So come on out and see for yourself."

Dexter Township resident Jennifer Kundak is well known around town as a huge Beatles fan.

"Chelsea's many Beatles fans, young and old, will be treated to a 'groovedelic' experience when Mr. Liebler shares his Fab Four knowledge with us," she said.

"As a lifelong fan, Ringo-obsessed for the past 44 years, I expect to learn and have fun. The Beatles magic of music, culture and their universal messages have made an inspiring and strong impact through my life, and it is impressive that the library will have such a qualified speaker come to Chelsea."

The program will bring back memories for Chelsea resident Kathleen Brigham, who saw The Beatles in 1964 at Shea Stadium in New York, when she was 11 years old.

Her father was a manager for American Airlines, the carrier The Beatles used for their tour of the United States that trip, and was able to get box seats almost on the field. Brigham's oldest sister took her to the show, along with two younger brothers.

"I remember there were so many people there and all the police, and all the screaming," Brigham said. "I remember just looking around at it all and feeling like I was in a dream of some kind. And all the screaming, almost the whole time.

"Once in awhile, you could catch a bit of some music or their words when they spoke, but otherwise it was the screaming girls.

"I, of course, was just thrilled to be in the same place as the Beatles were at that moment. In the words of our day, 'It was awesome.'"

American Airlines gave a dinner reception for The Beatles when they arrived in New York to which their top executives were invited.

"AA was presenting The Beatles with a plaque showing their tour cities, the dates and the total number of miles they would actually be flying on their tour around the country," Brigham said.

"There were a few paper copies of this plaque produced and The Beatles were going to be asked if they would sign them for the top execs. My father asked his boss to have one signed for me. So, I had a copy of that plaque that said 'For Kathleen' signed by all four of The Beatles.

"There is a sad ending, though. I had the plaque at home all the time I was there, but when I grew up and started moving from place to place in my younger years, it got lost in all the boxing, moving and storing."

For more information about the program, call the library at 475-8732.

LESSER

An auxiliary route was later created out of areas taken off of other routes that had grown too large as a result of development. After four years, Lesser became a full-time rural carrier and has worked on various routes in the Chelsea area ever since.

Although she drove a vehicle to deliver the mail, Lesser often met people when she had packages or certified mail that required a trip to the door. She said she met many special people along the way.

"It was fun watching people's kids grow up," she said.

Delivering mail on a rural route brought some interesting memories with it. She recalled one day when she ran over a Realtor's sign and had just finished fixing the flat tire when she noticed another one was flat. A customer, who was in labor at the time, let her wait in her home for two hours for the tow truck to arrive.

The North Lake Store was on her route and Lesser said she enjoyed treating herself to lunch there once a week.

"Every Thursday, I got their fantastic pizza," she said.

On Lesser's last day of work, the employees gave her some pizza on the house as thanks for her service.

Lesser considers her co-workers to be a tight-knit group that often celebrated each other's family milestones. The office held many potlucks and sometimes met each other for karaoke or backyard barbecues.

It had been a tradition for Lesser and two co-workers to walk each morning from 7:30 to 8 a.m., just before their shift began. On Fridays, the group shopped at garage sales and on Saturdays their walks occasionally took them to McDonald's for breakfast.

"It was fun watching people's kids grow up."

Sue Lesser
Lima Township

Lesser plans to continue meeting her friends for the morning walk, but also looks forward to some free time to exercise more often at the Chelsea Health and Wellness Center. She's also interested in finding a part-time job to keep her busy and hopes to attend more weekend festivals.

Her retirement will allow more time for family. Lesser is eagerly anticipating visits to her daughter's new home in North Carolina. Lesser's daughter, Angela Nagel, is a Chelsea High School graduate and pilot with Jet Blue. She was married Sept. 6 in Hawaii.

Lesser is married to David Lesser, a supervisor in the mixing department at Chelsea Milling Co., and has two stepsons who both reside in Ypsilanti.

Throughout the years, she has seen significant changes to the post office. Prior to the rapid growth in Chelsea, the building seemed roomier and the docks were more accessible.

"We are so crowded in the office we can't turn around," she said.

Lesser also has seen the postal system go from hand-sorting to automated machines with the plus-four ZIP code system. Their jobs have changed to include carrying higher quantities of mail and sorting less, she said.

Cindy Baert, supervisor at the Chelsea Post Office, has worked with Lesser since 1996. She describes her as customer service oriented and says she never received any complaints about her.

"Her customers all loved her," Baert said.

As supervisor, she recalls receiving nothing but praise from residents on Lesser's routes.

"She always went above and beyond by doing special things for her customers," Baert said.

Lesser was a union steward on the Quality of Worklife program for years. The program and its members work toward improving the work environment for postal employees. Baert said Lesser interacted well with co-workers and was a mentor to new hires.

Our partnership makes it all possible...

Teacher pens new book

Himle pens book about first-day-of-school jitters kids' experience

By Sandi Kasha
Staff Writer

Author and teacher Lisa Himle stands in front of her classroom at Cornerstone Elementary School. She plans to use her book, "Hands as Warm as Toast," as part of her class curriculum.

Sometimes art imitates life.

Lisa Himle, a second-grade teacher at Cornerstone Elementary School, has found inspiration from many students throughout her 22-year career, 11 of which has been spent in Dexter schools.

One student in particular inspired Himle's new children's book, "Hands as Warm as Toast."

Need to Know

Lisa Himle will appear 2 p.m. Sept. 23 at Cranesbill Books, 108 Middle St. in Chelsea, for a book signing of "Hands as Warm as Toast."

"There was a little girl who was terrified to come into the classroom," Himle, 44, said of her muse. "She was hiding behind her mother's skirt."

Himle said she's always had cold hands and devised a plan that would get the girl to feel more comfortable.

"I held her hands and felt how warm they were, and I asked her to help me keep my hands warm," she said.

The girl, Olivia, is now a high school freshman and Himle has sent her a copy of the book.

The premise for "Hands as Warm as Toast" centers on a girl's first-day-of-school jitters and how holding her teacher's cold hands boost her confidence.

"It's a true embellished story," Himle said. "It's about separation anxiety from parents and coping with anxiety."

The story was just an idea until Joe, Himle's husband of 22 years, convinced her to consider writing the story. It came to fruition shortly after her family passed by some Christmas trees.

"I thought about how sad it would be if a tree didn't get picked to be a Christmas tree," she said. "My husband and I started talking about story ideas."

Himle was motivated when she opened the newspaper to find author Colleen Monroe talking about her latest book, "A Wish to be a Christmas Tree."

"My husband and I thought it was hilarious," Himle said. "I just knew that my ideas could turn into books."

So, Himle got to work and started writing, but she needed help with the editing.

"I wrote it and really needed somebody to edit it," she said.

Himle met with editor and author Cynthia Furlong Reynolds of Scio Township, who lent a hand.

"Cindy really wanted me to send my story in," Himle said. "She really believed it was a good story."

Himle also read the story to her students and received positive feedback.

When the manuscript was edited and polished to Himle's satisfaction, she sent it to the Ann Arbor Media Group for consideration. A week later, she received a call from editor Lynne Johnson.

"A lot had to be edited out," Himle said. "It has to fit 32 pages and shouldn't be to long so the little one could finish reading it."

Himle submitted the manuscript with about 2,000 words and ended up chopping about 900.

"I'm very pleased with the finished product," she said. "I plan on reading it the first week of school."

Himle has made a teacher's guide for "Hands as Warm as Toast" to provided interactive activities that would go hand-in-hand with the book.

"There are a variety of activities, such as math, spelling and reading comprehension," she said. "The whole point of reading is to take the text and apply it to your life. With children, the major goal of reading is for them to understand what they're reading."

The book is targeted for children age's four to seven.

"Hands as Warm as Toast" is published by Mitten Press and can be found at Barnes and Noble and Borders. It sells for $17.95.

District goes keyless

School board approves $68,116 in upgrades to key card system

By Rita Fischer
Special Writer

The Chelsea Board of Education voted Aug. 28 to move forward with improvements to the district's card key access system for all of its buildings.

The school district received bids for additions and modifications to the system July 25. School officials hope to have the system in place by November. The total cost is $68,116.80.

Ron Livengood, director of operations for the school district, is pleased with the new system

"The card key access system will allow us to monitor and control who comes and goes from the buildings at any time when the door is in the locked position," he said. "Also, the system will allow us to void lost cards or cards that are not returned by former employees at a much lower cost than re-keying all the locks."

The new system makes keys obsolete and the technology gives the district the capability to know who enters the buildings at all times when the doors are locked.

Superintendent Dave Killips said the system will provide an extra safety measure for the schools.

"The card system will improve safety and will tell us who was last in the building if it's after hours," he said. "This is a good security measure to be put in place."

The keyless system will give staff access to the doors that they need to use throughout the day, while allowing the district to keep all doors, other than the main entry at each school, locked.

The system also allows for lockdown with the flip of a switch in the main office at each school. School employees will have the ability to lock all doors and make all card readers inoperable from the outside of the building in case of an emergency. Even if someone had a card key that was authorized, it would not open doors after and administrator inside the building had placed the door locking system in a lockdown mode.

Local business gives back to community

Big Boy known for buying grand champion steer at Chelsea fair

By Alison Marable
Special Writer

Zakhour and Androulla Youssef, owners of the Chelsea Big Boy restaurant, have a long history of supporting the Chelsea community in a variety of ways.

The husband and wife team started with the Big Boy chain in 1974 and bought the Chelsea location in 1990. Since then, they have been actively involved in local events and organizations, most notably buying the grand champion steer at the Chelsea Community Fair.

"The support of local businesses for this program (Brass Pass) has been outstanding and we appreciate the more than 10 years of this tradition..."
Julie Deppner
Assistant Principal

Zakhour, a retired professor of psychology at Eastern Michigan University, holds a doctorate in clinical psychology and still sees a few patients in his private practice. He retired three years ago after more than 40 years of teaching, and the couple sold the restaurant at that time. They bought it back in March.

Androulla spends most days at the restaurant because she likes to have a hands-on approach with the business. She said customers have taken notice.

Since 1991, the restaurant owners have been purchasing the grand champion steer at the Chelsea Community Fair as a way of giving back to the community that has supported them for many years.

"We like to help the kids. They get up early, take care of the animals and go to school," Androulla said.

Following the winning bid, the Youssefs divide up the meat and offer it to employees.

"They are waiting for it," Androulla said.

Tom Edman, president of the Chelsea Community Fair Board, said the community supported the livestock auction this summer by bidding approximately $100,000. There were more than 100 registered buyers that evening, including Chelsea Big Boy restaurant. The Youssefs paid $6.25 per pound for this year's grand champion steer.

The auction not only allows kids to afford activities that they might not otherwise be able to participate in, but it also takes the fair back to its roots, Edman said. He said the livestock auction celebrates the agricultural and livestock heritage of Chelsea passed down by the generations.

"Big Boy goes all the way back," he said.

Edman recalls that the restaurant owners bought his own daughter's fair animals years ago.

The couple has been supportive of the Chelsea School District, as well. Each year, the restaurant offers a Celebrity Server Night, with local individuals acting as wait staff for customers. The tips and a portion of the proceeds are donated to charities such as the Drug Abuse Resistance Education program. This year's Celebrity Server Night will occur sometime in October and the couple expects the profits to be donated to local schools.

Chelsea Big Boy is also a sponsor of the Brass Pass, a card issued by Chelsea High School to a student who earns at least a 3.5 grade point average or significantly raises their GPA between marking periods. Local businesses then grant the student a discount on purchases when the card is presented.

Julie Deppner, assistant principal at Chelsea High School, describes the program as both an award and incentive for students who strive for academic achievement and who work hard at improving their grades.

"The support of local businesses for this program has been outstanding and we appreciate the more than 10 years of this tradition for students at Chelsea High School," Deppner said.

Chelsea High School students, as well as students from surrounding communities such as Dexter, Manchester, Grass Lake and Stockbridge, are often hired at the Chelsea Big Boy restaurant. The Youssefs schedule the teens' shifts around their high school classes and activities.

In addition, the pair hires disabled individuals from the St. Louis Center and other organizations as employees. A special environment is created for them, and Zakhour describes them as "invariably wonderful people."

The Chelsea Big Boy restaurant also donates food or cash to local Boy Scout troops, nursery schools and other local organizations. Each summer, the Youssefs donate a portion of the meal served to cancer survivors during the Chelsea Relay for Life and once a year senior citizens receive a free breakfast on Senior Appreciation Day.

The Youssefs have a daughter living in Ann Arbor who is a pediatrician and a son who is the chief financial officer of Capitol Records in Los Angeles. Zakhour and Androulla have two granddaughters in Ann Arbor and are expecting a third grandchild in Los Angeles next March.

Zakhour Youssef, who owns Chelsea Big Boy with his wife, Androulla, has a long history of supporting the Chelsea community. Most notably, they purchase the grand champion steer every year at the Chelsea Community Fair. Youssef is pictured with Carla Rudloph, the restaurant's manager.

POLICE BLOTTER

Chelsea

Larceny

A 21-year-old Grass Lake man reported to Chelsea police that his car had been broken into while he was at work at Taco Bell, 1590 S. Main St.

At 7:45 a.m. July 30, the victim reported to Chelsea Police Officer John Dettling that he had parked his car outside the restaurant to report for work at 4 p.m. July 29. When he came out at 7:30 p.m., he discovered that a new JVC compact disc player, valued at $393 and containing a CD, had been removed from the dashboard. Also missing from the vehicle was a 12-inch dagger valued at $80.

According to the police report, the victim said he had locked the car, but there was no sign of forced entry.

There are no suspects in the theft and the restaurant has no parking lot surveillance camera.

Drunken Driving

While on patrol at 1:39 a.m. July 30, Chelsea police officers Mark Pulford and Thomas Unger were traveling southbound on Freer Road near Old US-12 when an approaching Jeep convertible failed to dim its headlights.

The officers followed the vehicle and saw it swerve across a double yellow line, stop at a traffic light at Old 12, but then proceed northbound before the signal was green.

During the traffic stop, Pulford noticed the driver, a 29-year-old Chelsea man, smelled of intoxicants. According to the police report, the driver and passenger, also a 29-year-old Chelsea man, said they had been to a friend's party and had a couple of drinks.

The driver's speech was noticeably slurred, his movements were labored, he seemed unable to focus, kept dropping items on the ground and failed several field sobriety tests, according to a police report.

The driver was issued a civil infraction for refusing to take a preliminary breath test, was arrested for operating while impaired and taken to the Chelsea Police Department.

Police then drove him to Chelsea Community Hospital for a blood draw to determine his blood-alcohol content, and the sample was sent to the Michigan State Police Crime Laboratory in Lansing for analysis.

Pulford transported the driver to the Washtenaw County Jail, where he was lodged until sober enough to be released. Because he had a prior conviction for operating while intoxicated, his driver's license was confiscated and will be destroyed on receipt of blood test results, according to the report.

Suspicious Situation

At 12:45 a.m. July 30, a woman in the 100 block of West Summit Street reported that someone was shining a flashlight in her front yard. When Chelsea police officers Mark Pulford and Thomas Unger arrived, the resident said she found an open can of beer on the porch when she returned home that evening, and from an upstairs window saw someone in the shadows shining a flashlight, but could not give a description.

She also told the officers that a person had been harassing her by telephone.

Officers told her they would make extra patrols in the neighborhood, and for her to try to get a description if she sees anything else and call police.

Felony Warrant Arrest

On July 28, Chelsea police officers Jason McVittie and Steve Piatt received a "be on the lookout" for Brandon J. Jarrel, 18, of Jackson County, who was wanted on an outstanding felony warrant for uttering and publishing and check forgery.

While on patrol at 4:20 p.m. that day, the officers found Jarrel walking on Washington Street east of Flanders Street. The warrant was confirmed, and Jarrel was arrested and taken to the Washtenaw County Jail.

Open Intoxicants

While Chelsea Police Officer Shane Sumner was talking to a group of people on the sidewalk at Main and Middle streets at 1:12 a.m. July 26, a red Ford Escort pulled up near him, screeched its tires, then drove off.

Sumner pursued in his patrol car, but was unable to locate the vehicle, so he returned to the group of pedestrians to question witnesses to the event. One said he saw the vehicle turn toward the parking lot at Chelsea Milling Co.

Sumner responded to the lot assisted by Officer Tom Cargill. Two men and one woman were located outside a vehicle. The driver admitted driving by Sumner, but said his back-seat passenger, a 42-year-old Gregory man, pulled on the emergency brake to squeal the tires.

The Gregory man was noticeably intoxicated, according to a police report, and officers found an open can of beer on the floor of the back seat. The man was issued a misdemeanor citation for open intoxicants in a motor vehicle and a civil infraction for interfering with the driver's control of the vehicle.

Misdemeanor Warrant Arrest

At 1:07 p.m. July 25, while on patrol southbound on South Main Street near Orchard Street, Chelsea Police Officer L.E. McDougall made a traffic stop on a vehicle with expired license plates.

The driver told McDougall he carried no driver's license because it had been suspended. According to a police report, when the officer asked the man, a Chelsea resident, if there were any warrants outstanding on him, he replied, "There probably was."

A misdemeanor warrant from 14A-1 District Court in Ann Arbor was confirmed and he was arrested and taken to the Chelsea Police Department. He posted a $270 bond and was released.

Minor in Possession

While on patrol along M-52 near Old US-12 at 4:12 a.m. July 25, Chelsea Police Officer Shane Sumner observed an older-model Ford Ranger pickup pull into the former Polly's shopping center and park near the Dollar Arena store.

As Sumner pulled into the lot, the vehicle drove past him and sped up across the parking lot. During the traffic stop, Sumner smelled an odor of alcohol and noticed the driver's eyes were glassy.

According to the police report, the driver, an 18-year-old Chelsea man, was unsteady on his feet and had slurred speech. He also told Sumner he was on probation for misdemeanor possession of marijuana.

The suspect was given a preliminary breath test with a result of 0.16 percent blood-alcohol level, double Michigan's legal limit of 0.08 percent for adults and violating the zero-tolerance law for minors.

He was arrested, issued a misdemeanor citation for minor in possession of alcohol, and transported home.

Scio Township

Breaking and Entering

Police were dispatched Aug. 26 to Brown & Deline Salon and Spa, 5245 Jackson Road, for a breaking and entering alarm. The front door glass was broken when police arrived and a light in the front office area was on.

A locked cash drawer safe was lying on the floor behind the front counter and it appeared to police that nothing else was disturbed within the business.

Approximately $250 was taken from the cash drawer and damage to the door is estimated at $750.

Police have two suspects based on a surveillance video installed in the salon.

This is a second break-in at the business, according to a police report.

Changes to intersection are an improvement

I read the article "Neighbors concerned about intersection" Sept. 7 regarding the new M-52 and Werkner Road intersection improvement with interest. Though I am sympathetic to Claudia Bahm's concerns, I was surprised that she would suggest that the new turning lane might make the intersection more dangerous.

It's finally possible to see northbound M-52 traffic and to know whether or not that traffic will turn onto northbound Werkner Road.

For some years, I have considered what the best solution for the M-52 and Werkner Road intersection might be. A traffic light was the obvious answer, but seemed more problematic than helpful.

My personal interest was to make the intersection safer for those of us wanting to turn south from southbound Werkner. However, the improvement for Werkner motorists did not seem to outweigh the problems a traffic light would have caused those who use M-52.

A traffic light would create concentrations of vehicles on M-52. In turn, this would cause new safety problems.

Going north, vehicle concentrations would cause more passing to occur on a meandering two-lane highway, all the way up to Interstate 96. Going south, there would have been increased congestion in downtown Chelsea.

So, though a traffic light would have best answered my personal concerns, it would have introduced problems for other motorists.

The Michigan Department of Transportation studied a difficult problem and arrived at a reasonable solution. The solution was a compromise and thus I did not get everything I wanted; however, my interests needed to be weighed against the interests of others.

Part of living in a society, such as ours, is the need to accept compromise when the best solution to our own personal needs negatively affects others. Solutions to problems, such as this bad intersection, must be solutions that best serve the greatest number of people.

The revised M-52 and Werkner Road intersection is a great improvement to what previously existed. From my personal point of view, it may not be perfect, but then few things are.

"HOW MUCH DID YOUR KIDS' BACK-TO-SCHOOL SHOPPING SET YOU BACK?"

OTHER VOICES

Don't fall for the right-wing spin

ROY SCHMIDT

Last week, another damning piece of evidence came in — not that we need any more. We haven't needed any for the last couple of years.

The Senate report on pre-war intelligence on Iraq concluded there is no evidence Saddam Hussein had a relationship with al-Qaida before the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001.

Of course, the Democrats went up in a balloon. The report further undercuts President George W. Bush's justification for going to war. But they've been up in that balloon 50 times now. When are they going to bring us back to Kansas? This November, I hope, and you should, too.

I'll say it one more time, and only one more time, so listen well. Read my lips: "There was no connect between Iraq and 9/11." And there is no connection between the invasion we are carrying out in Iraq and the so-called War on Terror.

What we really need is a War on Disinformation.

I honestly hope you did not take time to watch the fictional ABC drama, "The Path to 9/11," over the weekend. The show was put together by right-wing writers, one of whom was confronted two weeks ago by 9/11 Commission member Richard Ben-Veniste after he watched the first half of the film. Among the inaccuracies:

Richard Clarke, the counterterrorism czar for the Clinton administration, described a key scene as "180 degrees from what happened." In the scene, a CIA field agent places a phone call to get the go-ahead to kill Osama bin Laden, then in his gun sights, only to have senior White House administration officials refuse.

Sandy Berger, President Bill Clinton's national security adviser, called the same scene "a total fabrication." Roger Cressey, a top Bush and Clinton counterterrorism official, said it was "something straight out of Disney and fantasyland. It's factually wrong. And that's shameful."

The former National Security Council head of counterterrorism says that Clinton "approved every request made of him by the CIA and the U.S. military involving using force against bin Laden," and the 9/11 report says the CIA had full authority from Clinton to strike bin Laden.

Yet the script, by Cyrus Nowrasteh, a friend of Rush Limbaugh, claims Clinton had "frequent opportunities in the '90s to stop bin Laden in his tracks, but lacked the will to do so."

ABC asked only the Republican co-chair of the 9/11 Commission to advise the makers of the film. The producers optioned two books, one written by a Bush appointee, as the basis of the screenplay, yet billed the miniseries as "based on the 9/11 Commission Report."

This is a conservative attempt to rewrite the history of 9/11 to blame Democrats, just in time for the election. ABC is trying to use the free airwaves to sell a slanderous, irresponsible fraud to the American people.

ABC has enlisted Scholastic Inc. to send 100,000 letters to high school teachers, urging them to show students the movie. Scholastic also has created a discussion guide for teachers to use to encourage students and their families to watch this irresponsible fraud and then discuss it in school.

The discussion guide does not point out the concerns and criticisms that have been raised about the validity and accuracy of the film.

Is it appropriate to ask someone to use examples from a docudrama to support assertions about actual events? A docudrama can help us imagine what might have happened in situations when we don't know what truly happened, such as "Flight 93" or "Richard III." But the filmmakers assert that it is based on the 9/11 Commission Report and yet make up situations that are not described there, and that people actually deny having happened.

Carol Knox, a concerned parent of fourth- and seventh-graders in Chelsea, reviewed the Scholastic material and is ready to ask some questions of the school board.

"Can you imagine the tension felt by children with family in the armed services who have no say in whether they fight or not?

Let the public debate Michigan Civil Rights Initiative

Opponents of the Michigan Civil Rights Initiative continue to miss their only real opportunity to defeat the ballot proposal in November.

Those wanting to maintain affirmative action in college entrance and hiring practices in Michigan have lost yet another round in their judge shopping for a jurist to bring an injunction against the proposal. On Aug. 29, U.S. District Judge Arthur Tarnow rejected a request to remove the MCRI from the ballot.

MCRI opponents, namely a group called By Any Means Necessary, Detroit Mayor Kwame Kilpatrick and Operation King's Dream, are wasting time in their attempts to derail the ballot issue via the courts. They lost another two months by pinning hopes on this latest unsuccessful appeal, and seem willing to do so again.

After Tarnow's decision, MCRI challengers said they would appeal to the U.S. 6th Circuit Court of Appeals. That will only waste more valuable time for their cause. Instead, they should use the next two months to educate the public, rationally, about why they believe this initiative would be bad for Michigan and its residents.

Tarnow did criticize the signature-gathering effort to place the question on the ballot, claiming some supporters told some voters they were signing petitions in support of affirmative action.

But, as Michigan Supreme Court Justice Stephen Markman said when rejecting a similar request in July, the signers of the petitions "did not sign the oral representations made to them by circulators; rather they signed written petitions that contained the actual (ballot) language. ... 'We the people' of Michigan are responsible for our own actions."

The question over affirmative action will make it to the ballot eventually — if not this November, on a future ballot — and will ultimately be decided by the people of Michigan. Continuing to challenge the mechanics involved instead of arguing the merits of affirmative action only delays the inevitable.

Representatives of By Any Means Necessary and others who oppose the Michigan Civil Rights Initiative must educate the public on their

Sept. 1. I am convinced that driver had time to stop and/or avoid the dog. There was no oncoming traffic and no one immediately behind the car.

I was not more than 20 yards away when it happened and the driver looked right at me after hitting the dog and kept going, dragging the dog for about 60 feet. The marks from his collar are still etched in the asphalt.

Blissfully, the dog gave in to the shock and his pain went away. He lived for several minutes, though.

I carried him halfway up the 800-foot driveway, but couldn't carry him farther. I laid him down and told him he would be OK as I ran to get my car. I was thinking if he had any hope to survive, I needed to get him to the animal hospital quickly. Unfortunately, he passed away before I could get him in my car.

Nobody stopped to see if I needed help or blocked traffic to ensure that I got him off the road safely.

His name was Elvis, a typical tail-wagging, dopey basset hound. He often came across the road to visit our farm. I guess he liked the ducks, chickens, pheasants, rabbits, horses and our dogs.

The driver didn't have to explain to the two children who considered Elvis family that someone callously killed their beloved dog on the road. That person didn't have to see their pain and tears, and hear the shock and grief in the voices.

Is the driver completely to blame? The answer is no. All dogs should be contained in some way if they cannot be completely supervised without distractions. Living in the "country" is all the more reason to do so.

Chelsea is fortunate to have Silver Maples

My mother moved from Dearborn to Silver Maples in June 2005. In April, she moved to assisted living there. We are blessed to have such a wonderful facility nearby.

I cannot say enough about the outstanding care my dear mother has gotten. There is a great peace of mind for her daughters to know what warm and loving care she is receiving. The entire staff is so very pleasant.

Chelsea is blessed to have so much to offer the senior community. I hope soon Dexter will be able to follow suit.

AT&T should pull offensive TV ad

The other night I watched a TV ad for SBC DSL services that depicted a parent being awakened at an early morning hour with a disturbing phone call. It would appear that the man in the ad is quite distressed and his wife is in the background confused and not knowing what is going on.

The very first thing that comes to any parent's mind is that his child has been badly injured or killed in an automobile accident, and that his world is crashing to an end.

The reality of it is that the man goes to his home computer to find out that a football player has sustained an injury and he tell his friend that it was good that he called him.

I had to wonder, who screened this ad before it was placed on the airways, and how could they think it would be perceived as humorous?

Perhaps none of them have ever received that wake-up call in the wee morning hours. Perhaps they think it's funny to watch this poor man's wife, who for a few startling moments, has to believe the worst. Perhaps, they just don't have a clue.

I called AT&T/SBC to voice a complaint about this ad and was placed on a telephone merry-go-round. A call to the toll-free number sent me to a business number (my dime), who attempted to send me back to the toll-free number, who was tongue lashed into giving me the corporate number that put me in touch with the secretary of the president of AT&T. She had no idea about this ad, and informed me, "AT&T does not have a customer complaint/comment program in place."

I was then placed on hold for more than nine minutes and handed over to a gentleman who actually handles real state and acquisitions, who told me that he would attempt to find out who does their advertising and let them know of my concerns. He also let me know that I was not the only person offended by this ad.

In total, I spent more than 30 minutes on the phone attempting to contact someone at AT&T who cares.

If you have ever been a parent who had to make that mad dash to the emergency room for a child, a parent, a friend who was badly injured or worse, I would encourage you to contact AT&T/SBC and tell the company how insulting and offensive this type of advertising is to many.

Send a letter with your next bill, contact them on line, or drop your service. A company as big as AT&T/SBC still owes us a certain level of respect.

Why do students have to dissect animals?

Animal dissection, which was first used in classrooms in the early part of the last century, is still being used in some classrooms.

In recent years, dissection has been increasingly scrutinized. Experts have re-evaluated the educational worth and morality of cutting up animals just to "see how they work."

Compassionate students want to study biology without dissecting animals. Sophisticated computer simulations, videodiscs and models have been developed to meet the needs of these students.

All the studies of this issue show that students who use alternatives perform as well or better than students who use dissection.

Biology is the study of life and should teach respect for life, not devalue it by treating living beings as disposable objects.

By using humane teaching methods, instructors can teach science and ethics simultaneously.

It's time to reform the criminal justice system

Our nation imprisons a greater percentage of its citizens than any other nation in the world — more than China, Russia and South Africa. Of nine million prisoners in the world, a staggering two million are in the United States.

Prisoners can now expect to serve twice as long a prison term as those sentenced in 1984.

Is this progress?

From 1982 to 2001, our total "justice" expenditures, including court and prison costs, increased 366 percent to $167 billion.

Talk about budget problems, can we start cutting here?

More than 80 percent of the world's executions occur in the United States.

What does the rest of the world think of us?

Once rehabilitation was the goal of our treatment for offenders. Rates and terms of incarceration remained stable during this time. Then politicians, eager to gain votes with a "tough on crime policy," initiated measures that have resulted in courts being mired in more red tape and overcrowded and inhumane prison systems.

Let's encourage our leaders to consider reforming our criminal justice system by making offenders and not offenses the subject of sentencing. Ask that court sentences take into account the offender's current risk to public safety, reserving prison sentences for violent or repeat felons, with short sentences for non-violent offenders.

Let's do the following:

- Encourage more rehabilitation and treatment.
- Support the Michigan Parole Re-Entry Initiative.
- Repeal mandatory minimum requirements.
- Improve and monitor conditions within jails and prisons.
- Abolish the death penalty, which is inhumane, does not deter crime, and ties up our courts in costly appeals procedures.

Education costs out of control

I don't understand the drive of universities in Michigan and the rest of the country to be No. 1. I watch with amazement how each different college, university and community college is spending huge sums of money to attract what they call the "smarter" kids.

Just this year, Ohio State opened up a new student center that cost more than $164 million and offers a rock climbing wall and a hot tub that will seat more than 50 at a time. Why?

They claim the top students in America will go elsewhere if they don't offer these types of services. I am completely dumbfounded by that thinking.

The University of Michigan, Michigan State and all the other seats of so-called higher education seem to be doing the same thing or planning on doing it. Why the sudden rush to make sure they offer the most on campus perks for students?

Like almost everything else in our society, the drive to be the best, or offer the best, has taken over good thinking and practical planning.

I wasn't aware that any universities or colleges were having trouble filling their dorms or classrooms. I bet if U of M or MSU said they would only take Michigan students first, they would have no trouble filling their classes. I'm willing to bet if these centers of higher education told all those professors who want to be the highest paid to go somewhere else, they would have no trouble filling those positions either with persons just as smart and dedicated and for a lot less money.

A lot of professors are earning large sums of money every year to teach a maximum of 20 hours. Many of those classes are then taught by graduate assistants. Where can the average American citizen get a job that says; "You only have to work 20 hours, prepare for one class, have assistants that teach most of those, and work less than an average of seven months a year, and get paid a lot of money?"

I wonder what it would look like to have professors teach 40 hours each week and for their focus to be on educating students, instead of research or perks.

The majority of research can be done elsewhere, cheaper and with better results. Most research being done at these institutions, according to the latest government reports, is neither Earth shattering, new or necessary. They are spending millions to do what has already been done.

So, it begs the question of why? Why can't students in Michigan and the other states get an education without going far into debt? Why can't universities and colleges hire good teachers for a reasonable price who will give students a good education and allow the majority of students to attend at an affordable price?

Maybe all the perks being offered to students, the research and the need to have the top recognized faculty in the United States is part of the reason most students can't afford to go to go to in-state institutions now.

Perhaps if we just focused on letting Michigan students go to Michigan universities

Take precautions to keep your kids safe

The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission is reminding parents to take precautions to keep children safe as they head back to school.

One hazard to watch for is drawstrings on children's clothing. This hidden hazard can lead to deaths and injuries because drawstrings can catch on such items as playground equipment.

In the last 20 years, the commission has received reports of 23 deaths and 64 nonfatal incidents involving the entanglement of children's clothing drawstrings.

The commission recommends that parents or caregivers only buy upper outerwear without hood and neck drawstrings. If you find children's clothing with drawstrings in your home, completely remove the hood and neck drawstrings from all children's upper outerwear, including jackets and sweatshirts, size 2T through size 12.

Rather than ride the bus, many children ride bikes, scooters and skateboards to school. To reduce the risk of serious head injury or death, children should wear a helmet – and it's important to wear the appropriate helmet for your sport.

About 800 people, approximately 180 children, died in bicycle-related incidents in a recent year. More than half of the 500,000 bicycle-related emergency room-treated injuries in 2005 involved children younger than 15. Wearing a helmet can reduce the risk of a head injury by up to 85 percent.

Look for a label inside the bicycle helmet indicating it meets the CPSC standard. Other sport helmets, including those for skateboarders and football players, have labeling certifying compliance with other standards.

CPSC has a new publication titled "Which Helmet for Which Activity." This brochure is a useful guide to parents and includes helmet information on sports kids play at every age level.

Be aware of local laws pertaining to the use of pocket bikes and scooters, and do not ride on streets or in driveways. Many cities and communities have specific areas where scooters are permissible. Other communities prohibit entirely the riding of pocket bikes or motorized scooters.

YPlaygrounds: Each year, more than 200,000 children are taken to hospital emergency rooms because of playground-related injuries. Most injuries occur when a child falls onto the playground surface.

There should be a layer of safe, shock-absorbing surface material, consisting of wood chips, mulch, sand, pea gravel, or mats made of safety-tested rubber or fiber material around playground equipment.

Make sure there is no exposed hardware to catch clothing and no free-hanging ropes attached to the equipment, which could cause strangulation.

For more information on playground safety, see CPSC's Handbook for Public Playground Safety.

YSoccer Goal Posts: Movable soccer goal posts can fall over and kill or injure children who climb on them or hang from the crossbar. In the last 25 years, CPSC has reports of at least 28 deaths associated with soccer goals.

Make sure soccer goals are securely anchored when in use.

Never allow children to climb on the soccer net or goal framework.

When not in use, anchor goals or chain them to a nearby fence post or sturdy framework.

YArt Supplies: CPSC has recalled a variety of art materials over the years due to sharp tools; accessible lead in crayons, chalk and paint; and other hazards.

Only buy art materials that contain the statement, "CONFORMS TO ASTM D-4236."

Parents should talk to school officials to make sure the school's equipment complies with all federal, state and local standards and requirements.

In addition, CPSC urges parents and schools to check for recalled products or report a dangerous product or a product-related injury by calling CPSC's hotline at 1-800-638-2772 or visit www.cpsc.gov.

Larceny

Police investigated a larceny at the Jim Bradley GMC dealership, 3500 Jackson Road, Sept. 4. The sales manager told police that a navigation radio system was missing from a black 2007 GMC Denali.

The window on the rear door was smashed out to gain entry. The system is valued at $3,839.

A detective from Ypsilanti Township has possible suspects and told police that he would follow up with an investigation.

A 33-year-old Scio Township woman contacted police Sept. 6 to complain that her 2004 Ford truck had been broken into while parked in the 2800 block of Zeeb Road. The vehicle's radio had been removed, but the woman said the doors were locked.

Malicious Destruction of Property

A 27-year-old Scio Township man contacted police Sept. 6 to report all four tires on his 1996 Jeep had been flattened by knife cuts while parked at his home in the 2000 block of Charlton. He told police he had a problem with his 26-year-old cousin who also lives in the township.

According to a police report, the victim said that his cousin left him a message on his answering machine accusing him of eating his onion rings and admitted to slashing his tires.

The victim told police he believes his cousin to be jealous of him and he acted out. Police advised the victim to change his phone number so the suspect can't leave him anymore messages. He also was told to get an estimate the damages.

Police went over to the suspect's home, but no one answered the door.

Domestic Violence

Police were dispatched to a local home Sept. 2 to investigate a complaint of domestic violence. A 37-year-old man said his 31-year-old wife of eight years slapped him. He said there had been previous complaints filed in Waterford.

The man told police his wife assaulted him over personal problems and that they simply don't get along.

The woman admitted to slapping her husband, saying her husband is "not a nice person," according to a police report.

The woman was arrested for domestic violence and taken to the Washtenaw County Jail.

Police were dispatched to a home on Jackson Road Sept. 5 to investigate domestic violence. A 39-year-old woman told police her 44-year-old boyfriend, whom she has been living with for 13 years, had been fighting with her about going to the hospital for her injuries.

The woman's nose had a cut on the bridge. She told police that she tried to kick her boyfriend and missed, hitting her own nose instead.

According to police reports, there have been assaults in the past between the couple and the man was convicted of domestic violence in 2002.

The man told police that he was trying to get his girlfriend help for her drinking problem when a fight erupted. He said his girlfriend kicked him and he punched her in the nose.

The man was arrested for domestic violence.

Strong Arm Robbery

Police were dispatched to the TA Truck Stop, 200 Baker Road, Aug. 30 to investigate a robbery. A 56-year-old truck driver told police that he parked his semi-truck on the north side of the truck stop near the fuel station. He was then approached by a man who said a man he knew won the lottery. The victim said the suspect seemed nervous and talked really fast.

The suspect told the victim that the man who won the lottery was giving people money to show up and look at some trucks he owned. The victim went with the suspect to the east side back row of the parking lot and observed a group of 15 people gathered between two semi-trucks.

According to a police report, there appeared to be a game of cards in progess and that the people were betting. The victim told police that about $2,600 was taken from him as two guys held him.

Children with parents that teach that war is wrong, children whose parents support the War on Terror or children with no discussion of this at home at all?

"Politics, just like religion, should be left out of the schools, especially with an electorate this divided. It puts children in a position to have to defend the beliefs, if any, taught at home.

"By opening this discussion, a teacher is forcing a family to bring this drivel into the living room. It may be cause for discussion in some houses, but it's just for ratings and profits, as far as ABC is concerned. Oh, and influencing voters in the upcoming election."

I hope you didn't watch it, and, if you did, your discussion focuses on how this was a movie, and not a documentary, and many parts were made up to influence people politically.

views. Recent polls show that Michigan voters don't overwhelmingly support the initiative. Opponents should use the little time they have left to leverage that split and talk to the people of Michigan — not judges — about the issues concerning the Michigan Civil Rights Initiative.

Open debate and a public vote are bedrocks of the nation. MCRI opponents may be causing more harm to their cause. Voters, who should decide this issue, may be convinced to vote in favor of the initiative because of continued court hopping, which could be viewed as an attempt to stifle the public voice.

and colleges that were staffed with good teachers these institutions would be able to offer programs that were at least affordable to most students.

The drive to be No. 1 has gotten out of hand and is unnecessary. Regular educators teaching 40 hours a week and schools that focus on education instead of perks for students or research facilities would make education a lot more affordable for the majority of people at every level.

Let's get rid of tenure, as well. If teachers knew their jobs were on the line every year, they might worry more about educating all students, instead of their own job perks. There can and should be job security, but not at the expense of education itself.

There are a lot of wonderful teachers out there who work very hard to educate every student they have. Having said that, we all know there are also a lot of really poor teachers who continue to work because firing them is simply too hard and too expensive for the majority of schools.

SURVIVING Suicide

Walk to call attention to suicide prevention

By Sandi Kasha
Staff Writer

For Tammy Landry, 36, turning grief into something that would make a difference was a way for her to cope following her father's suicide. Now she serves as the Michigan area director for the American Foundation for Suicide Prevention and is helping to organize this year's Out of the Darkness walks on Sunday.

The local event, which is aimed at calling attention to suicide prevention, will be held noon at Pioneer High School in Ann Arbor.

Landry started the state chapter five months following her father's death.

TAKING ACTION

Landry, a Commerce Township resident, said she was numb for six weeks following her father's death in March 2001. Her father, Rick Irvin, was a detective with the Indiana State Police.

"I wasn't educated back then to see the signs, but looking back, he did hint at what he was planning on doing," she said.

Irvin would talk to his daughter about his will and what she should do following his death.

"At that time, I didn't think much of it," she said. "I just thought it was a father talking to a daughter and that it was nothing out of the ordinary."

Irvin, who was 56 at the time, had plans that would affect Landry for the rest of her life. He was home alone and contacted an officer he worked with and asked him to stop by, Landry said.

The officer found Irvin dead in the backyard, where he shot himself behind his ear. Looking back, Landry could see that her father was mentally ill, but he didn't seek any therapy or treatment.

"I really think he was bipolar, but was never diagnosed," she said. "He suffered from mood swings and was happy and energetic one minute, and then he would shift to another emotion soon after. He was hard to live with."

It's estimated that close to 1 million Americans make a suicide attempt, more than 30,000 die by suicide and 20 million suffer from depression each year, according to the American Foundation for Suicide Prevention.

It's this country's 11th leading cause of death, and is often characterized as a response to a single event or set of circumstances.

Landry said she believes her father never sought help for his instability because of his career in law enforcement.

"He was proud and was one of those people who believed that mental illness and depression is all in your head," Landry said. "I really believed that he would still be here had he gotten help."

Landry dislikes the stigma that follows a suicide.

"It's serious issue and something that needs to be addressed," she said. "Education is key to prevention."

Landry said that two weeks following her father's death, she had suffered a miscarriage. Her loss and grief eventually had her seeking therapy, and she was put on an anti-depressant.

"It became too much and I didn't want to ignore the sadness," she said. "I didn't want to end up making the same decision my father made. I want to live and I want to have a life."

Landry found strength and healing by joining AFSP and educating herself about mental illness and suicide prevention.

"Nobody's ridiculed for having cancer and you shouldn't be ridiculed for having a mental illness," she said.

Landry hopes she could educate and make people aware that mental illness should be treated as a serious disease.

"Suicide can happen to anyone," she said. "It doesn't discriminate. I never thought it would happen to me. We were a normal, happy family and something like that could never happen to us."

An abrupt act took her father away, but Landry said she is intent on trying to save as many people as possible.

Landry added that if she could save people and families from going through her grief because of a suicide then it makes her crusade worth it.

A MOTHER'S PAIN

Sally Darrow misses her son Justin. Ever since Justin took his own life on Halloween 2002, his mother has questions and tries to find answers by just living her life.

Justin Crawford-Lucas, 14 at the time, was staying at his father's home in Chelsea when he took his life with a shotgun.

"My ex-husband called me to tell me what happened and I was passing out candy to the kids," Darrow said. "I went into denial for about two hours and then went into shock. You suddenly feel removed from life and you disconnect."

SUICIDE

Darrow, who comes from a tight-knit family and said she's pretty close to her mother and sisters, leaned on Oliver, her husband of 14 years, and her children Michael, 20; Emily, 12, and Byron, 8.

"People have different ways of grieving," she said. "I decided to use my experience as a way to educate people."

Darrow wrestled whether to have an open-casket funeral for her son and in the end decided it was the best way to show the finality of his decision.

"I wanted the kids to see that this was a decision Justin made and it couldn't be taken back," Darrow said. "In the end, I got calls and e-mails, and a lot of kids I knew got help and really thought about the impact and repercussions suicide does to those you love."

Darrow said she wanted to turn a negative circumstance into a positive situation that would save other kids from her son's fate.

"I'm not ashamed of what Justin did nor am I ashamed of anything he's ever done," she said. "I'm really sad that my son died."

Darrow said Justin never showed any signs that he was contemplating suicide. She says he was popular and well liked at Chelsea High School.

"I can't recall any erratic behavior, and he never really expressed wanting to die," she said. "What I really believe happened was that Justin was reacting rather than thinking. I don't believe this was planned out. It was just the heat of the moment."

Darrow said she's spiritual and believes Justin's still with her. She said she will come in contact with him in the afterlife.

For now, she copes by attending Compassionate Friends, a group supporting parents who've lost children to suicide.

"I would be doing him a disservice if I curled up in bed and cried," she said. "I'm focusing on my life, my children and educating people on the matter."

LOSING JAKE

Lisa Johnson was vacationing in Zanzibar, Africa, with husband, Frank, in February when she received news that her 16-year-old son, Jake Kaidan, was found dead from a self-inflicted gunshot.

Lisa said Jake had driven to his father's home in Tipton and spent the night there. He went out to get breakfast that cold morning and returned to his father's garage, where he took his own life.

"You go through shock," she said of her initial response. "You have denial and there's such a range of emotions, from shock to numbness and then back to denial again."

Lisa said she didn't see Jake's body or visit the scene.

"I wanted to at first, but then I didn't want to," she said. "Now I wish I would have. Not seeing his body left me in denial. I thought maybe he didn't really do this and that he really ran away. I didn't want to believe it would happen."

Frank said Jake was a very good student at Saline High School, loved to snowboard, was artistic and very popular at school.

"He was helpful and very mature for his age," Frank said. "He was wise beyond his years and very well-rounded."

"He was a joy to have around," Lisa said. "I just didn't see this coming."

Frank and Lisa both said they didn't notice any symptoms of depression or anything out of the ordinary.

"He didn't allow us to see what he was really feeling," Lisa said. "I didn't think much of it because I always reasoned that it was typical teenage behavior."

Lisa feels strongly that Jake had his death planned.

"He spent a night at his father's before taking his life the next day," she said. "He had time to think about what he was going to do next."

Following the funeral and enormous support from family and friends, Lisa and Frank coped by setting up a memorial fund that would benefit Saline High School's Snow Sports Club, providing money for kids who want to take ski trips.

Lisa and Frank said that they are educating themselves through the University of Michigan's Survivors of Suicide group.

Taking part in the Out of the Darkness walk helps them cope, as well.

"I think it's very important to educate people on the matter," Lisa said. "Suicide is something serious. Wanting to end your life isn't normal and people have to be made aware that mental illness is a serious disease."

PROFESSIONAL ASSESSMENT

Dr. David Knesper of the University of Michigan Department of Psychiatry has been assessing and studying suicide for some 13 years. He said about 90 percent of suicide victims suffer from mental illness.

Teenagers are more difficult to read because they tend to be less willing to communicate their feelings, he said. Young adults, ages 16 to 22, are more susceptible to committing suicide since it's a time they're making big transitions.

"Children are a breed apart from adults," he said. "They are more susceptible to humiliation than adults. When they are failing or having problems with a situation, they don't really know how to open up or cope."

Knesper said there are clues that teens may be suicidal.

"There are all kind of clues that people just miss," he said. "Is there a history of mental illness in the family? Is there a history of substance abuse? Pressure to succeed due to parental expectations? Are they leaving friends and family behind? Are they going to be ending a relationship?"

Knesper said parents should look for a dramatic change of behavior such as their child experimenting with drugs, participating in dangerous behavior like reckless driving, breaking house rules, poor grades or hanging out with the "wrong crowd."

Suicidal thoughts, he said, don't happen overnight.

"I don't think people commit suicide because they woke up on the wrong side of the pillow and think, 'I want to die,'" he said.

Knesper added that suicide is a disease of accumulation and when teens accumulate troubles, they don't often seek help from parents.

"Teens are susceptible to all kinds of vulnerability," he said. "They generally view things as black and white."

Knesper said boys are the least likely to admit that there's something wrong, while girls tend to become very moody and display a more identifiable form of depression.

For many teens, suicide is seen as a problem solver and a way to get out of situations rather than dealing with them.

"Suicide is a selfish act because it's all about you," Knesper said. "You don't tend to think about how your family will feel and how your action would affect them."

A majority of suicides are committed with some sort of firearm, Knesper said. He advises parents to make sure firearms are inaccessible in the home.

"Teens obtain firearms by generally looking in their own home," he said.

Following a suicide, it may take a while for a family to make sense of things.

"Parents have to deal with an enormous amount of guilt or that they did something wrong," he said. "All they can think about is what they could have done to prevent it."

Knesper advises parents to stop beating themselves up that they've done anything to contribute to the suicide and to think about how to lessen the burden of guilt or remorse.

"The bottom line is that it's not your fault," he said. "In our society, we tend to believe that we could have done something to prevent it, but it's not always that simple."

To participate in Sunday's walk and help raise awareness about suicide and suicide prevention, call Landry at 1-248-669-1898.

FOOTBALL

Campaign under way to replace Chelsea grass field

A volunteer group of Chelsea residents has formed a committee to solicit private funds to replace the current football field.

The Chelsea Stadium Drive committee's initial goal is to raise $660,000 through private donations from local businesses and individuals.

The current grass field would be replaced with a synthetic turf in time for the 2007 school year.

A brick campaign will be launched at the first home varsity football game 7 p.m. Friday against Adrian. There will be three levels of personalized bricks for sale throughout the fall season.

Work was recently completed on bond-financed improvements to the Chelsea stadium, including new seating for more than 4,000 people, a new ticket booth and additional restrooms.

However, no funds were allocated for improvements to the field surface. These improvements, coupled with new turf, will make Chelsea's stadium one of the finest facilities in the state, and a true source of pride for the community for generations to come, volunteers say.

Chelsea's football field has been plagued with problems for decades, severely limiting use of the field. Several attempts have been made to improve the surface, including new sod, new drainage, and new irrigation.

The high school maintenance and grounds staff has kept the field playable. However, the deteriorating conditions limit the use of the field beyond home football games, volunteers with the campaign drive said.

Experts in turf management have not been able to solve the recurring problems at the field.

"We need a multi-use field that can be used 200 or 300 times a year, instead of the dozen or so times it's used now," said Committee Chairman John Mann. "We want the field available for football at all levels, band competitions and community events.

"Our committee has done extensive research into field turf companies, the costs of a new surface and the safety to our student athletes. Based on our research and the feasibility study that The Breton Group performed, we feel very confident that the Chelsea community will support this ambitious effort to upgrade our facilities."

ProGrass Turf, based in Pittsburgh, has been selected to install the surface. If fund-raising efforts go as planned, site work is scheduled to begin this fall after the football season ends.

The new surface would provide Chelsea's marching band the opportunity to practice, perform and compete on the field, something not possible with the current field, Mann said.

"What a wonderful thing it would be to practice on the field every day and know that we can play at all home games, regardless of weather," said Chelsea Band Director Rick Catherman.

"We currently practice in the school parking lot, which has many downfalls and is very hard on the kids' feet. Practicing on the new turf every day would allow us to do so much more. And, we could hold regional band competitions, events, and more. It's very exciting to the band community."

Three levels of personalized bricks are available as Bulldog Brick for $100, Bandstand Brick for $250 and Kickoff Brick for $500. All bricks will be personally inscribed and permanently placed near the main entrance at the stadium.

Bricks may be purchased at the home games by check, cash or credit card.

"Everyone needs to see the new stadium complex," Mann said. "We want a playing surface that will match the splendor of the new grandstands. Our committee wants to give everyone the opportunity to support this project.

"To date, we have raised nearly 80 percent of our campaign goal through donations and pledges. Donors have been very receptive and extremely generous. We believe the brick campaign will get us to our goal by the end of this year."

Brick forms will be available at all home football games and at other locations around town, including Chelsea State Bank, or by calling the bank at 475-1355.

All brick purchases are tax-deductible to the extent allowable by law. The committee is still accepting private and corporate donations or pledges. Donations of $1,000 or more will be recognized on permanent plaques at the stadium.

For more information, call Mann at 475-4210 or Dennis Bauer at 475-9120.

The Chelsea girls' basketball team defeated visiting Southeastern Conference Red Division foe Temperance Bedford 56-46 last Thursday.

The Bulldogs (2-1, 1-0 SEC) jumped out to a 12-7 first-quarter lead.

In the second quarter, the Mules battled back, tying the game 26-26 at halftime.

After the break, Chelsea came out and played well, outscoring Bedford 17-10 in the third quarter and taking a 43-36 lead into the fourth frame.

In the fourth quarter, the Bulldogs netted 13 points, while limiting the Mules to 10 points for the night's final margin.

Senior forward Rachel Fitzsimmons led Chelsea with 18 points, including 6-of-7 from the free throw line. She also grabbed five rebounds for the Bulldogs.

Junior guard Annie Hollandsworth added eight points, including one three-pointer, two assists and two steals for Chelsea. Senior point guard Leah Morrison finished with seven points, a team-high eight assists, six rebounds and a team-high four steals.

Junior center Brogan Darwin (6-foot) had six points, four boards and a team-high two blocks, while junior guard Emily Rabbitt had five points and two assists for the Bulldogs.

Seniors guard Hannah Guenther, forward Paige Denison and swing player Kate Shrosbree each netted four points for Chelsea. Denison hauled down a team-high eight rebounds, while Guenther had five boards.

Overall, the Bulldogs dominated the glass, out-rebounding Bedford 36-24.

Defensively, Chelsea's pressure and intensity created 10 steals and 16 Mules' turnovers.

On Sept. 5, the visiting Bulldogs defeated Pinckney 49-39.

As opposed to Bedford, Chelsea started slowly against the Pirates, taking a 6-4 lead after one quarter of play.

In the second stanza, the Bulldogs heated up offensively, outscoring Pinckney 16-11, entering the break with a 22-15 advantage.

Heading into the fourth quarter, Chelsea increased its lead to 33-25.

In the fourth frame, the Bulldogs closed out the game, outscoring the Pirates 16-14 to secure their victory.

Once again, Chelsea was strong on the boards, out-rebounding Pinckney 25-20 for the contest.

Senior guard Bridget Lynn and Fitzsimmons led the Bulldogs, each scoring 10 points. Lynn added two steals, while Fitzsimmons had seven rebounds and three steals.

Rabbitt added eight points and three rebounds, while Morrison had six points, four rebounds and six assists, and Denison and Darwin four points each. Denison also had four steals.

Hollandsworth chipped in three points and four assists, while junior Nellie Daniels and Shrosbree each had two points for Chelsea.

Bulldog coach Todd Blomquist said his squad, after dropping their opener, played well last week.

"The last two games we really controlled our turnovers compared to the Ann Arbor Huron game," he said. "We have also been getting good contributions from a lot of girls."

Chelsea next travels to SEC Red Division opponent Adrian Thursday for a game at 7 p.m.

On Tuesday, the Bulldogs host Haslett at 7 p.m.

On Sept. 21, Chelsea hosts SEC Red Division foe Saline at 7 p.m.

AN EAGLE EYE VIEW

Paid Advertisement

Derrick Gragg
EMU Director of Athletics

My name is Derrick Gragg and I would like to welcome everyone to the first Eagle Eye View column that will appear weekly here in Heritage Newspapers during the 2006-07 season. The column will be dedicated to expressing the views of Eastern Michigan University's athletic staff and will feature a different coach or athletic employee each week.

It has been five months since I came on board as the director of athletics at Eastern Michigan University and while the days and nights have been filled with meeting people and promoting our athletic programs, I have enjoyed the opportunity to share the excitement about our athletic programs, our outstanding coaches, and our high-achieving student athletes. I am continually impressed with the efforts of those groups and the many positive outcomes of their hard work.

One of the major accomplishments of our student athletes is not only their success on the field but also in the classroom. The EMU athletic program finished second overall in the Mid-American Conference with an average GPA of 3.073 in 2005-06, a fantastic achievement, and a testament to the commitment of our players, coaches and athletic department staff. Now it is a new year, and we must be prepared for the challenges ahead in 2006-07.

In particular, we are coordinating an all-out marketing blitz to promote our football team this year. As you may know, due to NCAA regulations, we must average 15,000 in attendance for our home games this year in order to maintain our Division I status. It's going to take a real team effort to accomplish this goal and I hope that the exciting product that head coach Jeff Genyk and his staff puts on the field will attract a record number of fans.

As part of our outreach to gain more fan support the athletics department will partner with the Vision Office in McKenny Union to assist Habitat for Humanity of Huron Valley in 2006-07 through the EMU Habitat for Humanity Eagles Nest Project.

We are very honored and excited to be part of such a great community activity as that project. Our entire staff, coaches, and student-athletes have done a great job on community service in the past and we encourage all of them to continue to give something back to the community and to this latest effort. The project is an historic campus-wide effort to build a Habitat for Humanity home in the Ypsilanti community. The entire operation will include a combination of fund-raising, marketing, volunteer recruiting and ultimately, the construction of a house from ground to roof.

The EMU athletics department will provide $1 from each student ticket redeemed for 2006 home football games to the project. Anyone interested in contributing can contact Michael Haynes the EMU student coordinator of the Eagles Nest Project. He can be reached at 21 McKenny Union (734.487.3045) or by email at vis_h4h@emich.edu.

On the athletic front, competition has already kicked off with women's volleyball and women's soccer in action while football, men's and women's cross country and men's and women's golf set to begin soon.

We invite everyone to join the Eastern Michigan University athletic department at all of our home events this fall. We have four home football games in Rynearson Stadium this fall; Saturday, Sept. 23, against Central Michigan, Saturday, Oct. 21, versus Toledo, Saturday, Nov. 4, against Ohio and Friday, Nov. 24, versus Northern Illinois. In addition, we have an exciting non-conference game set for Saturday, Nov. 11, at Ford Field in Detroit against the U.S. Naval Academy.

Make sure to check out www.emueagles.com for all of the information on EMU athletics.

SWIMMING AND DIVING

Chelsea to open against Saline

Depth to be a strength for Bulldog tankers this season

By Don Richter
Sports Editor

Chelsea's Kaitlin Cottrell will be a key member of this year's Bulldog girls' swimming and diving squad. The junior should be one of the Southeastern Conference's top distance swimmers this season.

The Chelsea girls' swimming and diving team opens its home season hosting Saline 6:30 p.m. Thursday.

The Bulldogs are coming off an impressive year in which they finished 14th overall in the state with an 8-5 record.

"Our first test will be (Thursday) as we take on the Hornets," said Chelsea coach Dave Jolly. "A 10-3 record and a top 10 (state) finish would be realistic and quite rewarding."

Jolly said this season's squad does not have any single goal in 2006.

"This team is such an unknown with talent at all levels, it's really dependent on how hard they train and what they will do as a team," he said. "They should be in contention for the SEC (Southeastern Conference) White (title) with Dexter's graduations from last season."

Returning to lead No. 10-ranked Chelsea this season is senior team captain diver Jillian Drow.

"In one-meter diving, she's a candidate to take the whole show at this year's state meet," Jolly said. "She is coming off a great off-season of training and is looking fantastic."

Senior captain Erika Purdy also returns for the Bulldogs.

"She is our best all-around swimmer," Jolly said. "In her three seasons with the Bulldogs, she has competed in the 50, 100 and 200 freestyle events. She has also been very strong in the IM (individual medley), along with her backstroke."

Senior Ayla Detroyer and junior Claire Stephens also look to be key contributors this season.

"Ayla is the sprint expert on our team," Jolly said. "She will be the leading force behind the success of the relays this season.

"Claire is probably our best swimmer. She placed 14th in the 100 freestyle at last year's state meet. She will be a force to deal with in the 50, 100 and 200 freestyle events, along with the 100 butterfly."

Other top returnees for Chelsea include senior Tori Salas, and juniors Phoebe Conybeare and Kaitlin Cottrell.

"Tori is a great all-around swimmer," Jolly said. "She is another young lady that can swim a wide range of events when she puts her mind to it. Phoebe has the potential to really make a mark this season. She will help a tremendous amount in the butterfly, along with the 100 freestyle.

"Kaitlin's power is in the distance events. Her ability to hold pace will be her strength. She will be one of the top distance swimmers in the SEC and should do extremely well at this year's state championships."

Other strong performers for Chelsea this year include junior Anna Rowland in the butterfly and middle distance events; junior Meghan Bean in the breaststroke; and sophomore Kristin Angelocci in middle distance events and the backstroke.

Newcomers looking to make a splash this year include freshmen Michelle Kellogg and Olivia Detroyer.

After the Saline meet, Chelsea hosts St. Joseph 11 a.m. Saturday.

On Sept. 21, the Bulldogs travel to Adrian for a meet at 6:30 p.m.

Sports Editor Don Richter can be reached at 475-1371 or at drichter@heritage.com.

teammate Katelyn Ciaccio was 27th in 20:50.

Freshman Courtney Maher crossed the line 43rd with a time of 21:47.

"Courtney had an outstanding first varsity race," Clarke said. "She ran 45 seconds faster than her personal best."

Liz Gunden placed 44th in 21:52, while Joy Wilke was 46th in 21:56 and Amy Glover 65th in 23:03 for the Bulldogs.

JV Race

In the JV race, Chelsea placed fourth out of 16 teams.

The Bulldogs ended up with 114 points.

Julie Beaumont paced Chelsea finishing 11th overall with a personal best time of 21:58.

Cassie Coffman was 18th in 22:17, while Jenny Squires was 27th in 22:41 and Nicole Hopp 33rd in 22:54 for the Bulldogs.

Christina Coffman placed 46th in 23:20, while Nikki Laeder was 50th in 23:32, Katie Lindauer 51st in 23:35 and Stephanie Becker 56th in a personal best 23:42 for Chelsea. Becker's time was over two minutes faster than her previous top mark.

Jessica Farley ended up 57th in 23:43, while Katy Martin was 132nd in 25:42, Amanda Abdon 152nd in 26:39 and Kathryn Brieland-Shoultz 166th in 27:29 for the Bulldogs.

"We continue to improve and we are getting stronger with each meet," Clarke said. "Hopefully, this trend will continue as the season progresses."

Chelsea next travels to Ann Arbor Pioneer Tuesday to participate in the Southeastern Conference Jamboree No. 1 at 4:30 p.m.

On Saturday, the Bulldogs visit New Boston Huron to compete in its invitational at 8:30 a.m.

On Sept. 21, Chelsea travels to Mason to take part in its invitational at 4:30 p.m.

scored for the game's final margin. Sauers picked up an assist on the goal for the Bulldogs.

Zink earned the win in net for Chelsea, making six saves.

To open the season, the Bulldogs defeated host DeWitt 4-1.

"We came out strong taking over right from the start," Pieske said.

Hammer began the scoring with a goal 2:17 into the game. Sauers assisted on the play for Chelsea.

Sauers scored on a penalty kick at the 18:40 mark of the first half, giving the Bulldogs a 2-0 lead.

The Panthers cut Chelsea's lead to 2-1 scoring on a penalty kick.

In the second half, Sauers scored off an assist from sophomore midfielder Travis Johnson for a 3-1 Bulldog advantage.

With eight minutes remaining in the contest, Sauers scored his third goal of the day for a hat trick, beating the DeWitt keeper on a penalty kick.

Zink picked up the win in net for the Bulldogs, stopping three shots.

Chelsea next hosts Tecumseh 4 p.m. Thursday. On Tuesday, the Bulldogs host Temperance Bedford at 4 p.m. On Sept. 21, Chelsea travels to Ann Arbor Pioneer for a game at 4 p.m.

Freshman Soccer

Chelsea's freshman boys' soccer team tied Ann Arbor Pioneer 1-1 last Monday.

Chris Stewart scored for the Bulldogs.

Preserving the tie in net for Chelsea was keeper Cameron Beatty.

VICTORY

"Chris gives us the hard, tough yards," he said. "He's been critical to our success."

Receiving-wise, Schwarze had three receptions for 41 yards for Chelsea. McClendon ended up with two catches for 31 yards, while senior tight end Dan Augustine had two receptions for 21 yards and Tapping one catch for 20 yards.

As a team, Chelsea finished with 349 total yards of offense. Tecumseh ended up with 324 total yards.

Defensively, senior linebacker Chris Hopkins led the Bulldogs with six tackles and one interception. Senior defensive back Danny Ngo also picked off a pass for Chelsea.

Jeff Adams recorded six tackles for the Bulldogs, while James Connelly, Zach Leszczynski and Jesse Stewart each had four stops, Alex Stephens, Zach Push and Kyle Bucholz each had three tackles for Chelsea.

Bush said despite his squad being state-ranked and unbeaten, there still was room for improvement.

"We put the ball on the ground three times," he said. "And the last two weeks we've struggled to get pressure on the quarterback."

It's that last area where Chelsea will have to get better quickly. The Bulldogs next face one of the state's best quarterbacks in Adrian senior Steve Threet (6-5, 225).

"He's for real," Bush said of Threet, who'll play next season at Georgia Tech University. "He's very good. We will need to get pressure on him defensively."

Bush said to beat Adrian (3-0) and No. 4 in Division II, his squad would have to focus on ball control.

"The best defense is a good offense," he said. "Last year, we struggled to move the ball with any consistency. With their quarterback, we need to keep the ball out of his hands."

Kickoff for Friday's home opener is 7 p.m. The game also will give the public a chance to check out the extensive stadium renovations at Jerry Neihaus Field.

JV Football

Last Thursday, Chelsea defeated visiting Tecumseh 51-12.

"Our defense really dominated the entire night," said Chelsea coach Chris Orlandi. "We had a couple breakdowns, but we really shut them down."

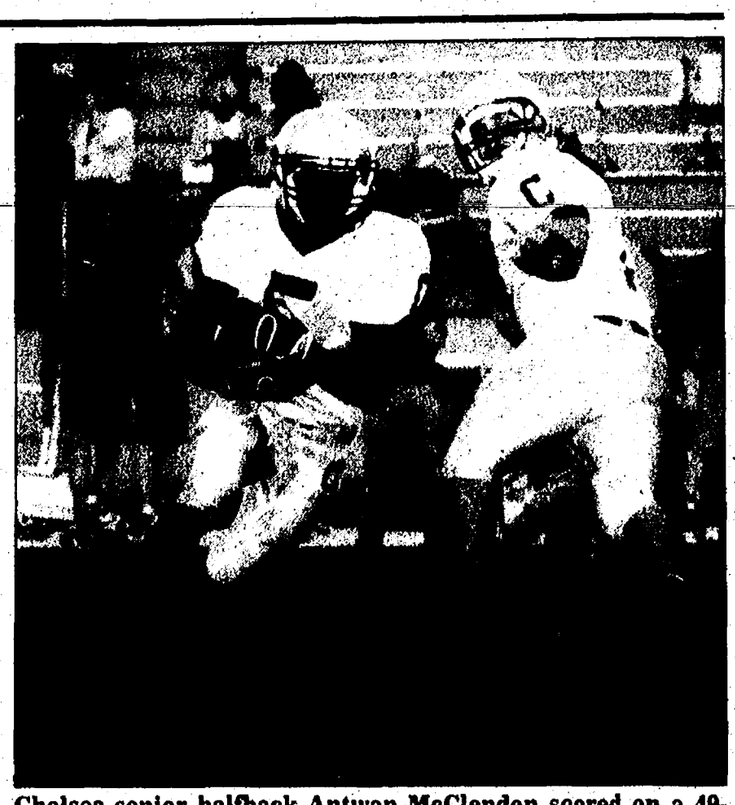
Offensively, the Bulldogs (3-0) also excelled.

Quarterback Randy Cox finished 9-of-22 for 118 yards and two touchdowns for the Bulldogs. On the ground, he rushed for one touchdown and one two-point conversion.

Riley Feeney ended up with 135 yards rushing on 23 carries with two touchdowns.

Michael Lenneman had three receptions for 33 yards and one TD for Chelsea.

Michael Roberts kicked a 42-yard field goal for the Bulldogs.



Chelsea senior halfback Antwan McClendon scored on a 49-yard touchdown run helping the Bulldogs defeat Tecumseh 41-20 last Friday.

"It's very exciting to be 3-0 against three teams that beat these guys as freshmen," Orlandi said. "We're looking forward to Adrian."

Chelsea next travels to Adrian for a game 7 p.m. Thursday.

Freshman Football

Chelsea's freshman football team defeated visiting Tecumseh 38-20 last Thursday.

"The kids are improving every week," said Chelsea coach Dennis Strzyzewski. "They are playing more physically and they seem to understand the system on both sides of the ball more. We have a lot to learn, but we are making great progress."

Cody Adams led the Bulldogs (1-2) with over 350 yards of total offense, including a 78-yard kickoff return for a touchdown and three rushing TDs.

Chelsea next visits Adrian Thursday for a game at 4:30 p.m.

TALES FROM ABROAD

There's lots to see in Costa Rica

Editor's Note: Julia, Doug, Heather and Robin Jackson of Dexter embarked on a trip around the world June 23 and will return home June 17, 2007. They plan to write periodically, sharing stories from their travels.

San Jose and Escazu, Costa Rica
July 23 through 25

We stayed in a nice bed and breakfast, Costa Verde, for a few days in a suburb of San Jose, Escazu, and said the words "I'm cold" for the first time on this big trip with nights down to 60 degrees.

We spent time exploring downtown San Jose, including the Banco Nacional Gold and Currency Museum and the National Theatre. We learned that the theater is in the exact center of the town that is in the exact center of the Americas.

We also visited the INBio Park, a fascinating botanical park with indigenous plants and animals, which explains Costa Rica's awesome biodiversity.

In our explorations, we walked by what appeared to be a funeral service in a cemetery. There was beautiful music with singers, guitars, trumpets, and a lot of people were gathered outside the gates to listen.

DOUG JACKSON

Monte Verde and Santa Elena
July 26 through 28

We left San Jose at 6:30 a.m. on a five-hour bus ride to Monte Verde. The last hour was along a windy, narrow, rocky mountain road. Santa Elena is a small unglamorous tourist town in the middle of rain forest reserves. While here, we hired a guide for a night wildlife tour and a bird watching trip with an expert birder.

We saw a lot of wonderful wildlife: sloths, white-faced monkeys, agoutis, porcupines, a tarantula, toucans, hummingbirds, parrots, and much more. We also participated in a canopy walk in a cloud forest and visited a Ranario to see indigenous frogs and a Serpentarium to see Costa Rica snakes and turtles.

Heather and Robin were thrilled to hold turtles, a big toad, and a baby boa constrictor.

La Fortuna
July 29 through 31

We took a Jeep-boat-Jeep ride out of Santa Elena to La Fortuna. On the bumpy Jeep ride, we got to know gals in their 20s from Australia, New Zealand and the United Kingdom in the Toyota mini bus. This was a pretty ride past scenic hills with coffee plantations and grazing cows.

At Arenal Lake, we took a little boat across to a waiting bus that took us directly to our hotel in La Fortuna. Our hotel had a great view of one of Costa Rica's active volcanoes.

One of our most adventuresome moments in La Fortuna was riding in the small bus on a tour to the volcano. It had been raining heavily for an hour or so when we left, and the road out of town had turned into raging torrents and rivers in spots. Our driver had experience with these conditions and felt safe driving through them.

On this afternoon tour, our driver explained flora and fauna as we hiked an hour in the rain up to a viewpoint where, as the clouds cleared and it got darker, we watched orange lava and magma rocks tumbling down the cinder cone. The tour concluded with several relaxing hours that evening, getting rained on while soaking in various temperature pools at Baldi Hot Springs Resort.

On the next day, we took the Caño Negro tour, a wildlife viewing boat tour on the Rio Frio near the Nicaraguan border. We saw fascinating wildlife, including an albino howler monkey, two Jabiru storks, a field with 100 white birds limpkin, tropical cormorants, anhingas, jacannas, caiman, basilisk lizards and a tree full of green iguanas.

Tortuguero
Aug 1 through 4

We stayed in Moin one night and then took a three-hour boat tour up a series of rivers and canals along the Caribbean coast to Tortuguero National Park. While on the boat tour, we saw two-fingered and three-fingered sloths, howler monkeys, white-faced mon-

MANCHESTER

Oktoberfest set Saturday

Event to feature children's activities, music and duck race

By Marsha Johnson Chartrand
Heritage Newspapers

Manchester will host its third annual Oktoberfest Saturday.

The event will include a cruise-format car show from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Adrian Street. In addition, downtown businesses will participate in sidewalk sales all day.

A children's bike race will be held at 10 a.m. as part of the festivities. Registration forms are available online, at the DVD Revolution and will be available the day of the festival.

In addition, at noon Main Street will close for an obstacle-course bed race from Clinton Street to the river. Applications may be picked up at Premier Contracting, Village Gifts or downloaded from the Manchester Area Chamber of Commerce Web site at www.48158.com.

"Last year's bed race was hilarious and a lot of fun," said Chris Fegan of Village Gifts, who heads up the downtown merchants' organization.

The race is not a straight heat, but an obstacle-type race. Beds will race two at a time down Main Street, starting at Clinton Street and ending just over the bridge.

Tasks such as bed making, sheet changing and other capers will be performed at stations set up along the course.

Immediately following the bed race, the Rubber Duck Derby will be held on the Main Street Bridge over the River Raisin. A thousand little duckies will take a tumble from the bridge and over the dam, with the first duck to arrive at the Duncan Street Bridge earning a prize of $500. Prizes also will be awarded to the next 24 lucky ducks.

Chalk on the Walk on Adrian Street, from Ockrow to Duncan streets, will be another new attraction this year, using three-dimensional chalk to draw on the sidewalk in front of the new Elements art gallery.

Special events throughout the day also will include old-fashioned carnival games at the Edward Jones parking lot. All proceeds will be donated to help build a new play structure at Carr Park.

A live band will highlight the Village Tap's Oktoberfest at the corner of Main Street and M-52 starting in the late afternoon.

keys, Rosette spoonbill ibis, crocodiles, long nose bats, a water snake, many kinds of herons, king fishers and shorebirds.

We took another wildlife boat tour and a private hiking tour with a guide on Tortuguero Hill. We saw a lot of birds, caiman, frogs, monkeys, and learned a lot about the plants in the forest.

It rained at times during every day or night, so the trail, in spots, was thick mud.

Aviarios Sloth Rehab Center
Cahuita
Aug. 5 through 7

We left Tortuguero in a water taxi back along the canals. Despite the rain, we saw green McCaws, more Rosetta spoonbills and many crocodiles.

A taxi took us from Limon to Aviarios. The road was plagued with giant potholes everywhere. The cars, trucks and buses were swerving and zig-zagging all over the roads. Fortunately, traffic is light on these roads.

Aviarios, a beautiful spot near the Caribbean Sea, is a bed and breakfast turned bed and breakfast/sloth rehab center as of 1992. The owners, Luis and Judy Arroyo, originally from Alaska, have a fascinating history to their lives and rehab center.

Julia and Doug also took a guided canoe tour one morning on the river running through the property. There was great birding.

Chimuri and Puerto Viejo
Aug 7 through 10

Author Rachel Crandell personally reviewed our Belize, Mayan sites and Costa Rica plans, and recommended a beach guesthouse to us. Owned and operated by Mauricio, a native Bri Bri Indian, and his Austrian wife, Chimuri offers a few little Caribbean-Indian-style cabins by the Caribbean Sea.

At first glance, the accommodations seemed Bohemian at best. The wooden cabin was mostly open air and the beds had mosquito netting over them. But over the three-day stay, we found the place to be quite accommodating and comfortable for us, especially the spacious open air porch-living-dining area, a great place for our family to spread out and relax.

Our family enjoyed time at the Caribbean beach, just a few steps from our cabin. Mauricio's Belgian Shepherd, Coco, also enjoyed time with us at the beach. Julia and Doug took an early morning hike along a nearby road that Mauricio recommended, and saw many different birds, including a Trogon, puff bird and a long-tailed tyrant.

Boquete
Aug. 14 through 18

A charming alpine town in the beautiful northern province of Chiriqui, Boquete was a favorite of ours. From Boquete, one sees great views of Panama's only volcano, Baru, rising to about 10,500 feet. No lava or smoke, it's been inactive for a long time. No snow on it either, at 9 degrees north. Even at more than 10,000 feet, there are lush cloud forests growing.

We decided to try camping for the first time on this venture. It worked well, and took a little time adjusting to figure out the logistics for camping on this trip. We loved this little town, not only for its scenery and lovely people, but the great prices, as well.

We hired a local guide who took us on a four-hour hike up into the cloud forests of the Volcano Baru National Park, a place called Alto Chicquero. On this hike, we saw two Indian vaqueros roping their steers to treat them for vampire bat bites. The Kndian women and girls wear colorful full-length dresses.

On another day, our guide took us to some nearby hot springs. These were on a private farm and we had the pools to ourselves. We dipped in three of them, ranging from 103 to 113 degrees and also dipped into the Chiriqui River.

Playa Santa Clara
Aug 19 through 21

We rode on a double-decker bus from David to Santa Clara on the Pan-American Highway. We got to the Santa Clara area after dark and were informed that it was dangerous to walk down to the beach after dark. A taxi driver patiently took us around until we found a safe place to stay.

Santa Clara has one of the most beautiful stretches of Pacific beach front in Panamá, and the waves were relatively calm.

Panamá City
Aug 22 through 24

We stayed in an inexpensive, yet nice, hotel in town. Julia and Doug took a 6:30 a.m. bird-watching walk with a local guide they hired into Park National Metropolitan. The bird watching was phenomenal. We saw so many kinds of birds, including a Capped Heron that flew in for a rare visit, a black-hooded Trogon, many Tanagers, yellow-backed Orioles, blue-black Grossbeak, toucans and parakeets.

We met a taxi driver who spoke a little English. He wanted to be our driver whenever we needed him. He gave us a nice tour of the ruins of Old Panamá on the way to the airport.

Doug's observations

Costa Rica wasn't as I had pictured it. It wasn't all covered in thick rain forests, hot and sticky, and primitive. Rather, three quarters of it is developed land, mostly cleared as agricultural areas. But there is still the fragmented one quarter of it that remains a rain forest preserve.

Getting around Costa Rica can be easy or challenging, depending on your choice of transportation. Places do not have address numbers with street names. Some of the roads are in good shape, but many are plagued with crater-sized potholes. On these roads, you will see cars, trucks and buses weaving back and forth across the roads avoiding holes and each other.

Drivers travel at whatever speed suits them, sharing the roads with bicycles, horses and pedestrians. Drivers will also stop or park in the middle of the road, if they feel so inclined. Road signs are scarce, and, of course, they're all in Spanish. Public transportation is abundant, easy, affordable and sometimes exciting.

People here are friendly and many, but not most, speak English to some degree. Accommodations are very affordable.

My favorite part of Costa Rica is the wildlife — plenty of it, especially the great monkey watching.

NATION

A call for daily recess

— NATIONAL RECESS WEEK —

On the heels of nationwide attention for the successful Rescuing Recess campaign, Cartoon Network has announced National Recess Week, set for Sept. 18 through 22.

In partnership with leading child advocacy groups, including the National Parent Teacher Association, the National Education Association, Hands on Network and the National Association for Sport and Physical Education, the goal of National Recess Week is to kick off the school year by encouraging schools to support and celebrate recess.

Parents and the community are invited to participate in local recess rallies, and parents, kids and teachers can learn how to enhance and/or save recess in their schools.

Launched in March as part of Cartoon Network's Get Animated healthy lifestyles program, Rescuing Recess is a campaign that champions the benefits and importance of daily recess for kids and works to protect and revitalize it in schools across the country.

During National Recess Week, schools across the country also will be encouraged to host on-site recess rallies to raise awareness for the issue.

The week will culminate Sept. 22 with the 7 p.m. airing of an all-new episode of Cartoon Network's hit original animated series "Codename: Kids Next Door," titled "Operation: R.E.C.E.S.S."

To sign up your elementary school to receive a free Rescuing Recess kit — each kit will contain a variety of activity ideas, games and playground equipment such as red rubber balls, street chalk, whistles and jump ropes, plus instructions and suggestions on how to hold a recess rally — and information about starting a local volunteer recess monitor program, visit the Web site www.RescuingRecess.com.

Currently, 16 percent of the nation's children are overweight, a result of poor nutritional habits and a lack of physical activity. An increasing number of children are developing cardiovascular risk factors and type 2 diabetes.

Daily physical activity is an important part of the solution to these health issues. National recommendations state that school-aged children and youth should participate in at least 60 minutes per day of moderate to vigorous physical activity.

Participation in a regularly scheduled recess period can make an important contribution toward meeting this recommendation. In addition, extended periods of inactivity are discouraged for elementary-age children.

The National Association for Sport and Physical Education, concerned that 7 percent of elementary schools are not offering daily recess, have urged parents and principals to provide at least one daily 20-minute period of recess because recess is an integral component of a child's physical, social and academic development.

NASPE says that recess provides children with discretionary time to engage in physical activity that helps them develop healthy bodies. It also allows children the opportunity to practice life skills such as cooperation, taking turns, following rules, sharing, communications, negotiation, problem solving and conflict resolution.

Participation in physical activity may improve attention, focus, behavior and learning in the classroom.

NASPE recommends that:

• All children in elementary schools should engage in at least one daily period of recess for at least 20 minutes per period.

• Recess does not replace physical education classes. Physical education provides sequential instruction to enhance the development of motor skills, movement concepts and physical fitness. Recess provides unstructured play opportunities that allow children to engage in physical activity.

• Recess is not viewed as a reward but as a necessary educational support component for all children. Thus students should not be denied recess as a means of punishment or to complete class work.

• Adequate and safe spaces and facilities are provided for all students to be physically active at the same time. Outdoor spaces are used whenever the weather allows.

• Adequate, safe and developmentally appropriate equipment is provided for students to engage in enjoyable physical activity.

• Physical education and classroom teachers teach children positive personal and social skills, such as cooperation and conflict resolution, for use during recess.

• Safety rules are taught and enforced.

• Recess is properly supervised by qualified adults.

• Bullying or aggressive behavior is not tolerated.

• Adults intervene when a child's physical or emotional safety is an issue.

• Recess is not scheduled immediately before or after physical education class.

• Recess does not interfere with physical education classes that are taking place in a common environment.

NASPE believes quality physical education and daily recess are components of the elementary school educational experience that enable students to develop physical competence, health-related fitness, personal and social responsibility, and enjoyment of physical activity so that they will be physically active for a lifetime.

Consider family health when weatherizing home

Every fall the federal government recommends that Americans weatherize their homes in order to reduce the amount of energy needed for heating and cooling. What we often neglect during this process, however, are the steps we should also take to minimize the dangers from pollution sources inside our homes.

In the last several years, a growing body of scientific evidence has indicated that the air within homes can be more seriously polluted than the outdoor air in even the largest and most industrialized cities. According to the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) people spend approximately 90 percent of their time indoors, especially during the cold winter months. Thus, for many people, the risks to health may be greater due to exposure to air pollution indoors than outdoors.

Measures such as installing storm windows, weather stripping, caulking and blown-in wall insulation can reduce the amount of outdoor air infiltrating into a home. Consequently, after winterizing, concentrations of indoor air pollutants from sources inside the home can increase.

According to Gerry Gagnon, product & market manager for Venmar Ventilation, first clues of poor indoor air in your home are the signs of inadequate ventilation, such as stuffy air, moisture condensation on cold surfaces, or mold and mildew growth. "It's crucial that additional weatherization measures should not be undertaken until these problems have been corrected," he advised.

In most cases, homes have an overly humid basement that breeds molds and other unhealthy micro-organisms.

Most homes have more than one source that contributes to indoor air pollution. Some of these sources can include smoke, dust, pet dander, radon, mold and other pollutants which can pose serious health risks and contribute to respiratory disease, asthma and even lung cancer.

Fortunately, there are steps that you can take both to reduce the risk from these existing sources and to prevent new problems from occurring. Here are some tips to consider:

· Operate bathroom fans, if present, to remove moisture from showers (these fans should be ducted to the outside of the home).

· When a wood fire is present, a window should always be kept open - especially in a tightly sealed, energy efficient house.

· Invest in a quality range hood that will offer high-performance ventilation to effectively eliminate pollution, excess moisture and gas emissions in the kitchen from every day cooking.

· Install a carbon monoxide detector on every floor of the house.

· Make sure a home's roof and windows are in good shape. Water leaks, condensation and elevated levels of humidity may not be visible, but moisture in interior wall spaces can encourage mold growth and structural degradation.

· For optimal air quality, Gagnon recommends you invest in an air exchanger system that will both filter out harmful pollutants and distribute fresh tempered air throughout the home, such as the air exchanger system from Venmar. It combines heat recovery ventilation and HEPA filtration. The HEPA filter works to trap airborne allergens and assists in distributing fresh air throughout the home. More details on the benefits of ventilation and filtration are available at www.venmar.ca.

There are many safety issues a homeowner must consider when weatherizing.

Save time with easy painting pointers

The walls and ceilings throughout a home usually form the backdrop for room furnishings, drapes and other decorations. Choosing a color can be hard enough, but choosing the right kind of paint can be just as important. At a home center, it's easy to get overwhelmed by aisle after aisle of paints and equipment. Following are some hints for navigating your way through the paint options.

TYPES OF PAINT

No matter how many different varieties there are, they all fit into a number of broad categories.

· Flat latex paint is water-based and has a dull, matte finish. It remains one of the more popular options because it's user-friendly - easy to work with and low odor. Flat latex is suitable for all walls and ceilings, especially those freshly plastered, since it allows the plaster to dry out thoroughly.

· Vinyl flat latex is water-based, but it's easier to clean than traditional flat latex paint; it dries to a wipeable-matte finish. It's also more durable - suitable for all walls - since the paint's matte properties help to conceal many surface imperfections.

· Vinyl gloss latex paint is water-based and quick-drying. It dries to high sheen. The gloss finish makes washing easy, and makes the paint a good choice for kitchens and bathrooms. It also can be used for all walls and ceilings.

· Semigloss paint is oil-based and dries to a medium sheen. Although many brands are available, some have less of an odor, and are more user-friendly than others. This paint particularly is suitable for high-wear areas.

MEASURE TWICE

Accuracy when estimating the amount you need will save you money and reduce waste. Calculate the surface areas of walls by multiplying the height of a room from the ceiling to the floor (or baseboard) by the entire length of the perimeter of the floor. Use the same dimensions to calculate the surface area of the ceiling. Do not subtract the areas of doors, windows and extras like molding, wall or window recesses, pillars and covered beams from your calculations. This way, you can be sure that you will have paint left over for any necessary touch ups later on. Also, remember that most walls will require two coats of paint.

SAFETY FIRST

As with any home-improvement project, safety always should be the one of your first and foremost concerns. Here are some safety pointers to consider.

· Prevent injury - be sure to store painting materials and tools away from children and pets.

· Follow instructions - read all manufacturers' guidelines with regard to proper use of materials and equipment before you begin your project.

· Climb safely - inspect all ladders and stepladders to make sure they are safe to use and show no serious signs of wear.

Weather barriers to protect your home

The storm devastation that has spread across the U.S. over the past few years has brought with it an alarming reminder: Preparation is key to minimizing damage from harsh weather. While severe storms like hurricanes can wreak havoc on a home, even routine storms may cause damage if a home is not properly protected. The smart homeowner is one who takes extra measures to do so and understands that not all building products provide the same level of protection.

For example, Grace offers a family of residential weather barrier products that are proven to be resistant to hurricane-force winds and driving rains. The company offers these tips for protecting your home.

· Start at the top: A roof is constantly exposed to the elements and may be the most critical part of your house to protect from water infiltration. Have your roof checked by a professional if you suspect it's past its prime. Doing so can help prevent leaks and further damage as early as possible. Using weather-resistant roofing underlayments, such as Grace Ice & Water Shield® and Grace Tri-Flex 30®, adds extra waterproofing and leak protection under roof coverings (shingles, tile, metal); while using Grace Roof Detail Membrane® can do the same around skylights, dormers and chimneys.

· Watch windows and doors: Drafts pass through gaps in window and door openings. So does water and moisture, which can end up in walls and cause mold. Properly flashing windows with a self-adhered product can close these gaps and prevent water, air and moisture infiltration. It also helps make a home better able to withstand severe weather and can make it more energy efficient. Grace Vycor® Plus is an example of a self-adhered flashing. It is designed for severe winter climates, milder climates and where wind-driven rain is common. For high temperature climates, Grace offers Grace Vycor® Butyl. And for spots most prone to leaks - corners of windows and doors - Grace VYCORnersTM can offer added protection.

· Don't overlook the yard: Homes aren't the only structures susceptible to weather. Decks, fences and other wood products can be damaged from wind, rain and snow. Routinely weatherproof and clean these structures to maximize their useful life. Grace offers Grace Vycor® Deck Protector® products to help protect decks by preventing joist rot and decay and decreasing the corrosion rate of connectors and fasteners.

Is your home ready for indoor entertaining?

As the warm, outdoor seasons fade away, it's time to take a look at the inside of your home: is it ready for the indoor entertaining of the fall and winter? Chances are it could use a few updates. Brad Staggs of HGTV and the DIY Network suggests five do-it-yourself projects to make any home a showplace for entertaining.

"Consider paneling your family room. The charm and distinctive look of Southern Pine beadboard paneling adds a custom touch to any room," says Brad. There are several different installation choices: three feet up the wall and topped with a chair rail is the most popular option. But you can also run it 3/4 of the way up a wall and top it with a plate rack or a picture for a truly dramatic touch. Paint it the same color as your wall for added depth and texture, or paint it an accent color to really spice up your room.

Southern Pine V-groove paneling is another option: install it vertically or on an angle for a dramatic conversation starter. Both paneling products are available at your local lumber dealer and are easy to install.

According to Brad Staggs of HGTV and the DIY Network, adding Southern Pine flooring to any room in your house can "take it from drab to fab!"

According to Staggs, a fresh coat of paint can change the look of a room, if not your entire house. "If your house is a mish-mash of colors and textures, consider creating an entire color palette to update your home. Rooms painted from the same palette flow together, creating the feeling of a bigger house" adds Staggs. Check out your favorite shelter magazines or visit a paint store for the latest in colors and trends.

Look down. Is it time for your carpet to take a permanent vacation? Brad says, "Southern Pine flooring can take a room from drab to fab. I've used it in my own home and the results are stunning!"

The rich golden color of the floor coupled with the distinctive grain of Southern Pine combine to create a gorgeous addition to any style of home.

Create the warm, indoor look of fall by rotating your artwork - or even furniture! - and indoor plants. If your paintings and flowers are bright, sunny summer colors, consider switching them out. From Brad's experience, "Warm, deep tones set the stage for the indoor season. Choose plants and flowers with darker blossoms and deeper leaf tones. Change out the beach scene painting with one featuring warmer paint tones. Change up the layout of your furniture for a seasonal new look. These are very easy and inexpensive ways to completely change the look of a room in one day!"

Advanced heating techniques for home

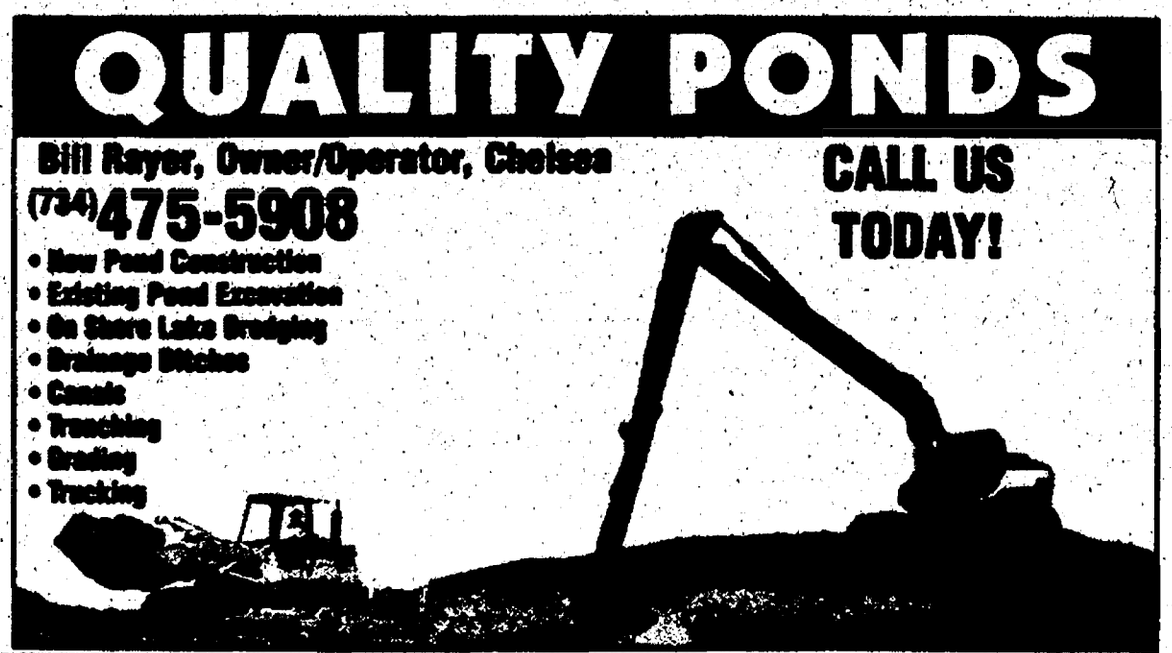
A quiet revolution in home heating is sweeping America, and a growing number of savvy homeowners are at the forefront.

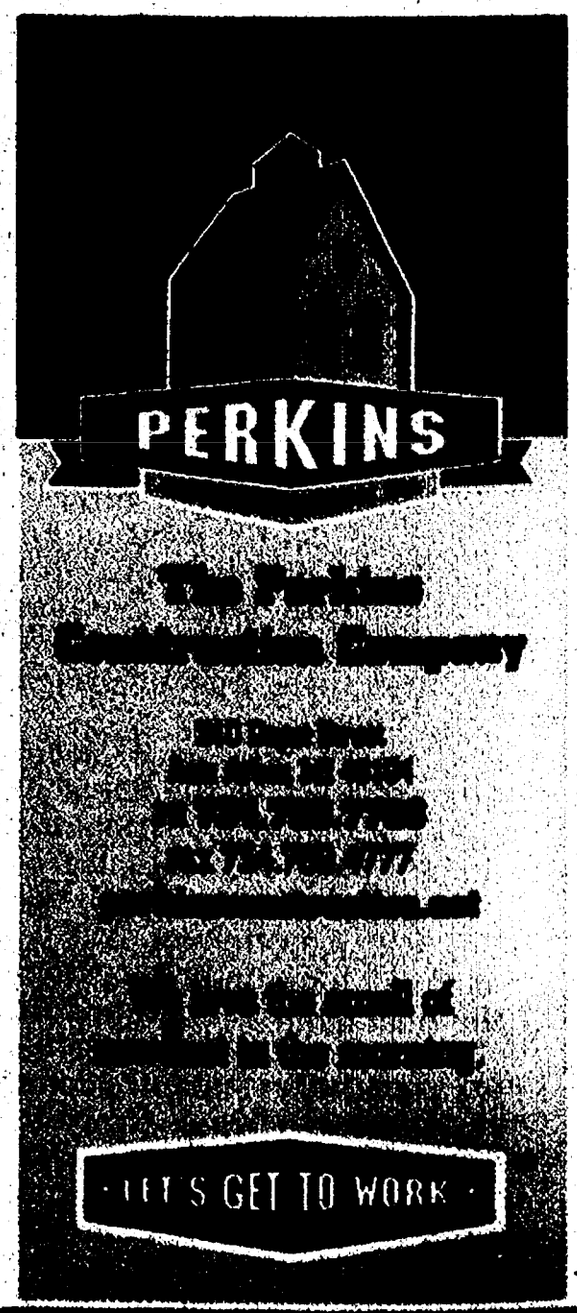
More and more, people are turning to what many consider the most comfortable heating solution, hydronic heating, which utilizes water instead of or in addition to air as the heat transfer medium. Homeowners are learning from their coworkers, friends, neighbors, and relatives that today's hydronic heat is draft-free, quiet, clean, efficient and, above all, comfortable.

Hydronic heating systems circulate hot water through plastic tubing, baseboards, or radiators to provide gentle, silent, and clean heat. Many homeowners live with rooms that are too hot or too cold. To maximize comfort, each room in a hydronically heated home can be zoned separately allowing each room or area to be controlled individually. Furthermore, hydronic heating systems are extremely efficient because of design advances in boilers and the nature of the heating system.

Hydronic applications include room heating with radiators, baseboards, or under-floor tubing; swimming pool and whirlpool heating; snow and ice melting for sidewalks and driveways; and towel rack warming. The heat for these applications is provided by a centrally located boiler.

For example, the advent of extremely durable plastic tubing, which is designed to last over 200 years, has made it possible to hydronically heat floors, walls, sidewalks, driveways, and swimming pools. Plastic tubing is flexible, so it is easy to install and service, making it more economical to use than other types of piping materials. This tubing can deliver constant, draft-free warmth to walls, floors, and baseboards.





HOME GARDENING

End of season lawn and garden restoration

There are fewer pleasures greater than a beautiful garden, especially during the months when you can almost live outside. The investment in garden plants, tools, furniture, ornaments and pots is considerable, but worth it.

However, by summer's end, heat, humidity and wear and tear from constant usage have taken their toll, and you are faced with cracks, leaks and other damage to your backyard utopia.

The good news is that you may not have to replace everything. Most of the problems can be solved quickly and easily with an inexpensive tube of adhesives. The key to success is to use the correct adhesive for the material to be repaired.

Dr. Omar Tiba, product and development leader for Eclectic Products, Inc. a manufacturer of adhesive products, shares these tips for choosing the right adhesive for your lawn and garden repair projects:

1. Any materials, like canvas umbrellas or rubber hoses which are not rigid, need an adhesive that remains flexible after drying or the adhesive will just crack or chip off.

2. Use an adhesive that can withstand contraction and expansion caused by temperature fluctuations - important when repairing ceramic pots, mosaic tile tables, and garden ornaments.

3. Use an adhesive that is waterproof and UV-resistant when repairing cracked hoses, plastic pools, or other outdoor objects exposed to the elements.

4. When joining two different substances together (like metal trowel to wooden handle), they may not have the same drying time. "Choose an adhesive that can allow for the variance of drying time between the two materials, or the bond may fail," says Dr. Tiba.

So don't throw away the casualties of summer fun. Save money by making a few simple repairs with the right adhesive for the job.

STUCK WITH DOZENS OF GLUES?

How do you choose the right adhesive from literally hundreds of types of glue? Some work well on only one or two materials, some won't withstand outdoor exposure, and some just won't permanently bond two different materials together.

Dr. Tiba suggests that your best bet for most repairs is a versatile, strong, one-part adhesive that dries to a rubbery, flexible, waterproof finish, like Amazing GOOP® by Eclectic Products.

Amazing GOOP® Lawn & Garden, like all of the Amazing GOOP adhesives, is one of the strongest one-part adhesives available. It will easily repair, mend, seal and permanently bond two different materials. There's nothing to mix, and it's easy to apply right out of the tube. This adhesive will not break or crack under pressure because it dries to a flexible, rubbery finish.

TIPS FOR FOOLPROOF REPAIRS

USING ONE-PART ADHESIVES

1. Read all directions, and use adhesive in a well-ventilated area.

2. Surface should be clean, dry and free of dirt. For best results, roughen surface before use. Best when used between 50 F and 90 F.

3. Apply the adhesive directly to each surface to be bonded or repaired. Important: Allow to partially cure, two to 10 minutes, before bringing surfaces together.

4. Allow the repair to dry for 24 to 72 hours.

So, don't empty your wallet; empty your fall fix-up jar by using Amazing GOOP Lawn & Garden adhesive or one of their nine other varieties of Amazing GOOP. It is an adhesive that "Glues whatever. Bonds Forever."

Weather and wear and tear can take a toll on your garden accessories, tools and furniture. But with the right adhesive, you may not have to replace everything.

Do it yourself: Project relaxation for backyard

With fuel prices on the rise, travel to far away places may not be an option for families this fall. A fun do-it-yourself project is to create a vacation spot or retreat right outside your back door. The size of the project does not have to be large, nor does the space the relaxation spot requires. Whether in a city rooftop garden or on a wooded back 40, your retreat can incorporate the sensation of floating on air, island breezes gently rocking you, or the shade of a giant umbrella palm covering you. But wait, this is your backyard, not Tahiti. How can those experiences become reality? It's easy when your project-materials list begins with a hammock. There are many styles and designs of hammocks as well as a long list of unique accessories that create the floating, swaying, or shade that will perfect your relaxation spot. But, it all starts with the hammock.

1. Choosing the Perfect Hammock for your project.

There are three general areas you need to consider before choosing a hammock: construction quality, styles and accessories, and care.

Hammock Construction - In a hammock, construction is the most important factor due to safety issues involved. Items to look for are weight and amount of rope in the bed of the hammock. The more rope, the stronger and the more comfortable the hammock will be.

Heavy-duty steel end hardware should accompany your hammock for hanging safely. This is the area at which most of the weight is placed on a hammock and the heavier the gauge steel, the longer the life in the outdoors. Durability in the outdoors is also a key factor in the safety of the hammock. Hardware that is plated for long life will provide a safer environment down the road as the elements are at work. Most hammocks are made for two-person lounging with a weight capacity in excess of 400 pounds. When hanging the hammock, make sure the structure from which you are hanging the hammock will hold the weight you plan to place in the hammock. Most hammocks will come with hooks for hanging from a tree or post, while a large variety of stands are available for those who do not have trees perfectly positioned.

Hammock Styles - Once you are satisfied with the manufacturer's construction, now is the time to look at all the styles to see what's available when constructing the perfect relaxation retreat. Three styles of hammocks are available; classic rope hammocks, quilted fabric hammocks, and quick dry comfort hammocks.

The classic rope hammock is hand-woven of either cotton or weather resistant DuraCord® rope. . The comfort of the rope hammock comes from its ability to contour to the user's body and provide a floating-on-air feel.

The fabric selection includes a large variety of colors and designs. Each hammock is quilted with a layer of polyester batting for greater comfort. This is a style preferred by those who often relax with a beloved pet or a small child.

The third and final style offers a combination of the open, cool-weave of a rope hammock and the full fabric bed of a quilted hammock. This is the quick dry comfort hammock. This weather resistant fabric is constructed for easy air-flow and long life in the out-of-doors.

Accessories - Your relaxation is enhanced with a long list of hammock accessories starting with hammock stands that eliminate the need for conveniently placed trees.

Hammock Care - Once you've constructed your relaxation retreat, maintaining it for years to come becomes your next do-it-yourself project. But, it is no project at all.

2. Where to Buy a Hammock - Hammocks are beginning to pop up everywhere. Today a hammock can be purchased through a variety of retail channels including the traditional outdoor or patio furniture store, pool and spa stores, gift shops, as well as such non-traditional outlets as grocery stores. Mail-order catalogs have been carrying hammocks for over 30 years, while the Internet is the fastest-growing way to obtain a hammock for your DIY Project Relaxation.

Over-wintering tips for fall gardens

To prepare and plant your garden for fall and winter means more than raking dead leaves and generally tidying up the yard.

"A few extra steps now can make a big difference in your garden for next year," says Jeff Howe, president of Fernlea a national flower and plant company and also the home of the famed Icicle Pansies.

"For example, during the last weeks of summer while you're cleaning up spent flowers and vines, try to leave seed pods and dried blooms. Birds will thank you, and your garden will have an opportunity to re-seed itself. Plus, you will create some winter interest."

Look for any leaves or branches that are diseased or contain pests and ensure that they are not put into the compost bin to spread disease. Also, if you've removed any such problem with pruners, be careful to clean them with a household disinfectant before using on a healthy plant or bush.

"Once your garden is ready to plant this fall's Icicle Pansies, be sure to choose an area with lots of sun, and minimal wind exposure for the best results," Howe explained. "This type of pansy is hardy and guaranteed to bloom in fall and again in the spring, whether you're in a snow belt or cool zone."

Pansies should be planted in moist soil, enriched with organic matter. Improve drainage by mounding up raised beds and adding mulch around the base of the plants. This will also insulate the roots. Avoiding road salt is critical to successful overwintering.

New fashion for fall flowers

Don't be dismayed if autumn is the time of empty flower containers, or bleak landscapes out of every window. One guarantee is that Icicle Pansies will bring you a variety of color, both now, in autumn and in spring.

"We offer the most hardy pansies every fall," says Fernlea's president Jeff Howe. "If they don't stand up to the Fall Bloom, Spring Bloom guarantee that we offer gardeners, we don't carry them."

For the sixth year since the inception of Icicle Pansies, Fernlea, a national gardening company, has introduced new colors to add to the popular line up. This fall's new fashion colors are:

· Harvest Mix which includes fire 'n ice, clear orange, rose and yellow pansies to herald the Thanksgiving season

· Halloween Mix comprises clear orange and black pansies to theme a garden or container for party time.

· Aurora is a beautiful, delicate lemon yellow pansy with a purple trim around its edges, developed by Farmen in Europe, and bred in the rich soil at the base of Mt. Vesuvius

· Skippy XL Red-Gold, and All American Selections winner, is a deep colored, purple pansy with a brilliant gold center.

"Gardeners often think of mums in the fall and forget that Icicle Pansies, a colorful, happy looking plant, are a great addition when the landscape starts looking brown," Howe said. "The added bonus is that they winter well, whether under snow, or in cool climates, and bounce back to join your tulips and daffodils in the spring as one of the first flowers to enjoy in early April or May."
