Area couple plans to return to Africa to help care for victims of AIDS

By Edith Wiarda
Guest Writer

From the vantage point of Washtenaw County, it can be hard to grasp the devastation that AIDS has brought to Africa.

David and Darlene Schaffer of Sylvan Township have seen the problems firsthand. For the past two summers, this couple has spent time in Zambia, Kenya, and Uganda working with AIDS orphans through an organization called the Rafiki Foundation. Twenty-three times as many people have died from AIDS in these three countries together as have died in the United States.

While sobered with the magnitude of the losses, the Schaffers have found real hope in the Rafiki program. In fact, now that David has retired from his position with Ford Motor Co., they are preparing to embark in July for two years of full-time service with Rafiki in Africa.

The Rafiki Foundation is a Christian organization that currently operates in 10 African nations: Ethiopia, Ghana, Kenya, Liberia, Malawi, Nigeria, Rwanda, Tanzania, Uganda and Zambia. "Rafiki doesn't run traditional orphanages," explains Darlene. "They bond children into permanent families. Rafiki selects local women, usually widows, to be mothers for the orphans. They live in Rafiki villages that have a cottage for each family group, and they receive an education, healthcare and spiritual instruction."

"Rafiki takes in kids who are utterly alone," says David. "In these cultures, the tradition is for the extended family to take in children whenever possible. But AIDS has so decimated the parent-age population, that sometimes no extended family is left."

The Schaffers will serve as Rafiki Overseas Staff workers. David will be busy with construction work.

Republican proposal would be 'major hit'

By Terry Jacoby
Heritage Newspapers

While the Republican-led Senate rejected Gov. Jennifer Granholm's plan for a 2-percent sales tax on services, the governor fired right back on Friday saying she would never approve of the Senate's budget-cutting plan that would trim $377 million from the School Aid Fund and $255 million from the state general fund.

Lawmakers on both sides of the aisle say the end result will most likely be a combination of cuts and some kind of revenue enhancement plan.

School officials in both Chelsea and Dexter were glad to see the governor quickly dismiss cutting $377 million from the schools. The Senate Republican plan called for reducing funding to public schools by $34 per pupil from its current $7,085 minimum per student. The Republicans argued that the $34 is much less than other previous numbers recommended and that most districts have enough revenue to deal with the reduction without the cuts reaching the classrooms.

But school officials in both Chelsea and Dexter believe any cut at this point of the year would be a "major hit."

"A $34 per student cut for Chelsea would be about a $95,000 hit," said Teresa A. Zigman, executive director of business and operations for the Chelsea School District. "What concerns me is that from what I have read so far it sounds like the $34 per student is just one part of the equation. There is a $377 million cut required and the $34 per student only reflects $54 million of that total cut. I haven't seen anything yet on where the rest is coming from."

Zigman says the timing of the cut would be the biggest problem for most school districts.

"Any hit we take this year is a major hit because we are almost three quarters of the way through the school year

Water system report encouraging to council

By Edward Freundl
Heritage Newspapers

The results of a state-mandated water reliability study shows the city of Chelsea is well on its way to meeting state standards.

Andy McClure of Ann Arbor-based Stantec Consulting of Michigan presented the report's five-year and 20-year recommendations to the Chelsea City Council on March 13.

"The city is well-served, and you wouldn't have to make any substantial improvements," he told the council.

Water Department Superintendent Rob Jones said the last study was performed in 1999, and the city hired Stantec in April last year for $12,326.

"Public water supplies are required by the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality to submit a water system reliability study every five years," Jones said.

The information required by the reliability study include demands placed on the system both at present and estimated for the future.

The study looked at average and daily demand, maximum daily demand, maximum hourly demand and fire flow demand.

"The reliability study should also include a distributions system hydraulic analysis and prioritize necessary improvements," Jones said, quoting from MDEQ regulations. "The study is of benefit to the city when making long-range capital improvement plans."

McClure said the reliability study also looked at

Realtors blast service tax plan

By Terry Jacoby
Heritage Newspapers

Realtors in Chelsea, Dexter and throughout Michigan are screaming about a proposed 2-percent service. And they are apparently being heard in Lansing?

Gov. Jennifer Granholm's 2-percent sales tax on services has been "killed for good," according to Senate Majority Leader Mike Bishop after the Republican-led Senate voted down the proposal last Thursday.

The sales tax on services was proposed by Granholm in an effort to help the state find a way out of a $940 million budget shortfall.

But State Rep. Pam Byrnes (D-52nd District) isn't certain the bill is "killed for good."

"I haven't heard that," she said. "I believe it's still in the House Committee. Some people like the governor's idea and some don't. Realtors have expressed to me that they are concerned. I have heard from two veterinarians, one was for it and the other was against it."

State Sen. Liz Brater (D-District 18) sponsored the 2-percent bill.

"Our state is in a financial crisis," she said. "The two-penny tax is part of a multi-faceted plan proposed by the governor to fix our out-dated system. Political maneuvering on the part of the Republican Majority last week in the Senate separated this bill from the rest of the package and led to its defeat."

Brater said we need a comprehensive plan to restructure taxes in the state of Michigan.

"And that means cuts, reforms and new revenues that match the shape of the 21st century economy," she said. "We must be able to invest in the resources and the people of the state of Michigan to ensure that our businesses will thrive and that we will have a skilled workforce that attracts investment."

Byrnes said she hosted a town hall meeting in Saline and "99 percent were in favor of some kind of revenue enhancement." She believes the state's budget problems will be solved with a combination of cuts and revenue enhancements.

Tammy Lehman, a longtime realtor and the top producer with Edward Surovell Realtors office in Chelsea, hopes the

Hayley Ann Ray

The family has strong ties to the Manchester and Chelsea area.

Hayley's father, Christopher Ray, works at Chelsea Orthopedic Specialists at Chelsea Community Hospital, and her grandfather is Brad Roberts, Chelsea's wastewater treatment plant superintendent.

A fund in Hayley Ann Ray's name has been set up at United Bank & Trust to take donations from the public.

The cost of the dinner is a donation of any amount, and the silent auction will include Michigan State University, University of Michigan and Detroit Lions game tickets, Pampered Chef gift baskets, Silpada handmade jewelry and more.

To donate additional items for the silent auction or for more information, contact Katie Ray's sister, Kim Roberts, at (734) 320-4924.

alternatives to softening water other than the reverse osmosis system that has been the source of much contention over the past couple of years.

"The problem seems to be capacity to treat the concentrate coming off the RO units," McClure said. "I would recommend treating it at the wastewater treatment plant as needed, and not at the water plant."

The council has been struggling with those options the past several months.

"Water reliability here has been the biggest issue in the city for the last couple of years," said Interim City Manager John Hansen.

"My understanding is, we can make good water today but we are struggling with the reverse osmosis system."

The council is considering a multimillion-dollar revenue bond issue to finance the expansion of the wastewater treatment plant.

Hansen explained that revenue bonds are most often used for utility projects like water and sewer because fees for service are used the payments.

"There are two types of bonds: revenue bonds and general obligation bonds," he said. "A bond is a loan, and you have to pay it back somehow.

"If you take out a loan to build a new building, it doesn't pay itself back, so you have to go to the people for a millage," he added. "Revenue bonds are always associated with a stream of revenue that is already there, so it's not really a new cost."

Hansen said expansion of the wastewater plant is going to be a "pretty large" project, with the funds paid back over a number of years out of user-generated funds, with no new taxes and no new fees.

Although some citizens have speculated that the amount of the bond issue will be $12 million, Hansen said no firm decisions have been made yet to even issue the bonds, let alone the amount.

"Before we can format the bond, we have to have a design and a contractor's estimate to come up with a number," he said.

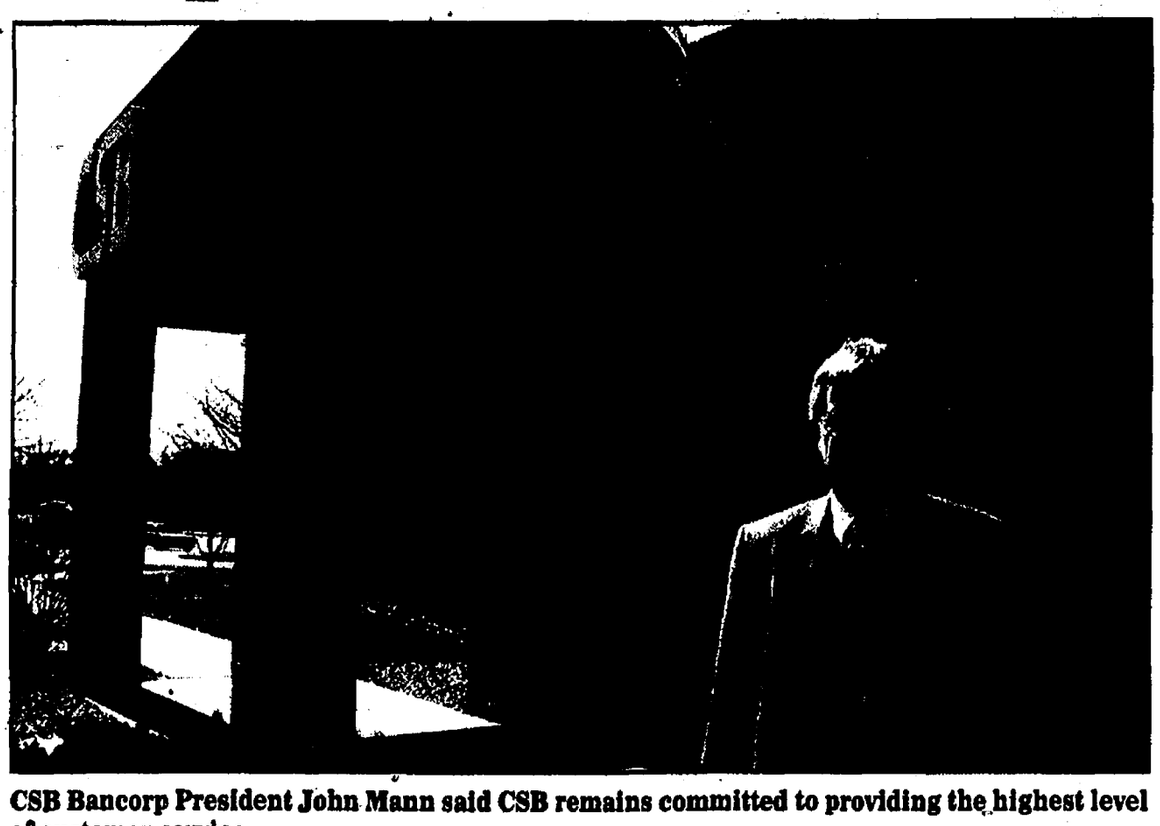
CSB Bancorp celebrates 110th anniversary



CSB Bancorp President John Mann said CSB remains committed to providing the highest level of customer service.

The Board of Directors of CSB Bancorp, Inc. has announced that it will pay a one-time special cash dividend of $75 per share. It will be paid in cash from the capital surplus of the bank on April 20, 2007 to shareholders of record as of April 10, 2007. Shareholders were notified by mail on March 13, 2007. The announcement was made by CSB Bancorp President, John Mann.

CSB Bancorp is a one-bank holding company that owns all of the stock of Chelsea State Bank. Its formation was approved by an affirmative vote of the shareholders of the bank in April 2005. There are currently 126,148 shares outstanding and approximately four hundred shareholders.

"The declaration and payment of this special dividend will have no effect on our customers," Mann said. "We remain committed to providing the highest level of customer service and very competitive interest rates on our loan and deposit products. And in no inconsequential way we are stimulating the local economy. I've already heard from one ecstatic shareholder who will be re-roofing her barns and another who is remodeling a bathroom. Every little bit helps."

CSB Bancorp traces its roots back to 1897 when a group of 21 Chelsea investors purchased a private bank from Reuben and Charles Kempf and incorporated as the Kempf Commercial and Savings Bank on Dec. 18, 1897 with a state banking charter. In 1908, after the failure of a separate, unrelated bank in Chelsea known as the Chelsea Savings Bank, a second bank was incorporated. It was named the Farmers and Merchants Bank of Chelsea and was formed by a diverse group of 56 individual investors. Paul G. Schaible, Sr. was one of the primary organizers. The Kempf Commercial Bank and the Farmers and Merchants Bank merged in 1934 to form the Chelsea State Bank.

"We are very pleased to provide this special dividend to our shareholders in the year of our 110th anniversary", Mann said. "We have been successful for a very long time and, quite honestly, the growth of our capital has outpaced the growth of the bank. This is all about capital management and providing a fair return to our shareholders."

The capital to asset ratio of the bank, a measure of its safety soundness, was 15.1 percent as of Dec. 31, 2006. The peer average for similarly sized banks in the U.S. was 9.8 percent, and for banks of all sizes 8.23 percent. The capital to asset ratio of the Chelsea State Bank after payment of the $75 dividend will exceed 11 percent and the bank will easily remain "well capitalized" by regulatory standards.

An arresting fundraiser

Debbie Conlin is the program coordinator for the MDA Lock-Up fundraiser, which came to town last week. She says the best part about the Lock-up campaign is that the "the money made here stays here."

"Convicts" were brought to the Chelsea Grill and held until they could pay their way out of jail. And pay they did.

"The final total for the Chelsea Lock-up was just under $15,000 thanks to the wonderful Chelsea community support," Conlin said.

Jailkeeper Jodi Kelly, also the manager at the Chelsea Grill, was proud to host the event.

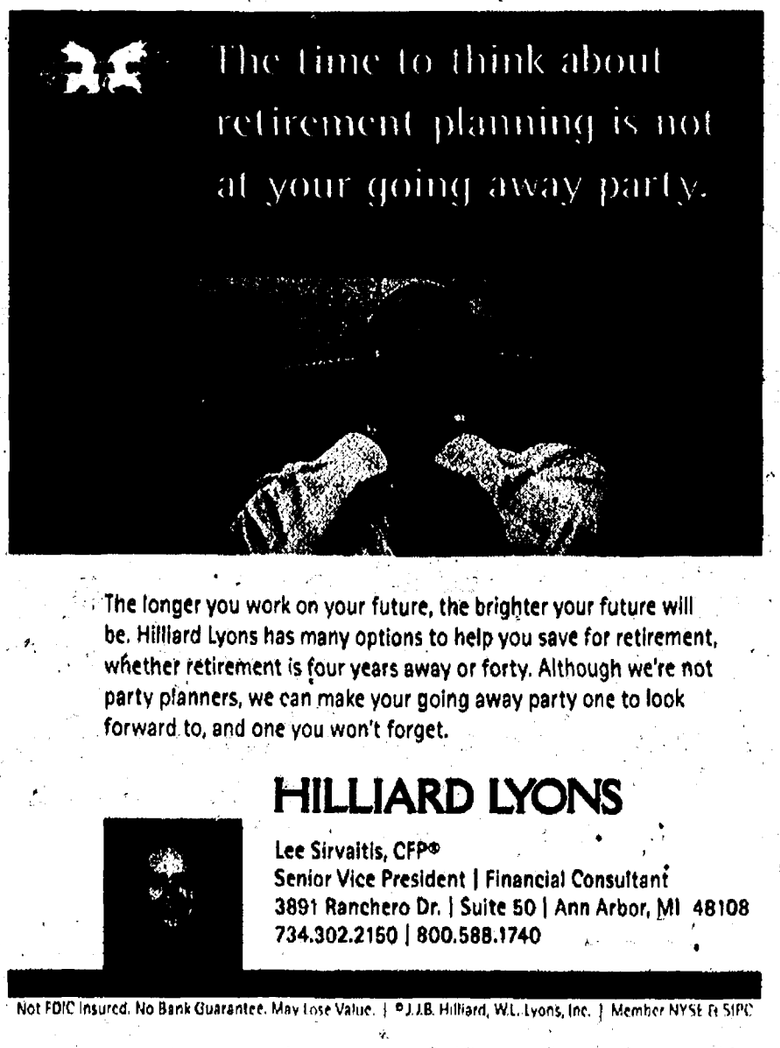
"It is great to help with our community," she said. "If we don't raise the funds it won't be there for people who need it."

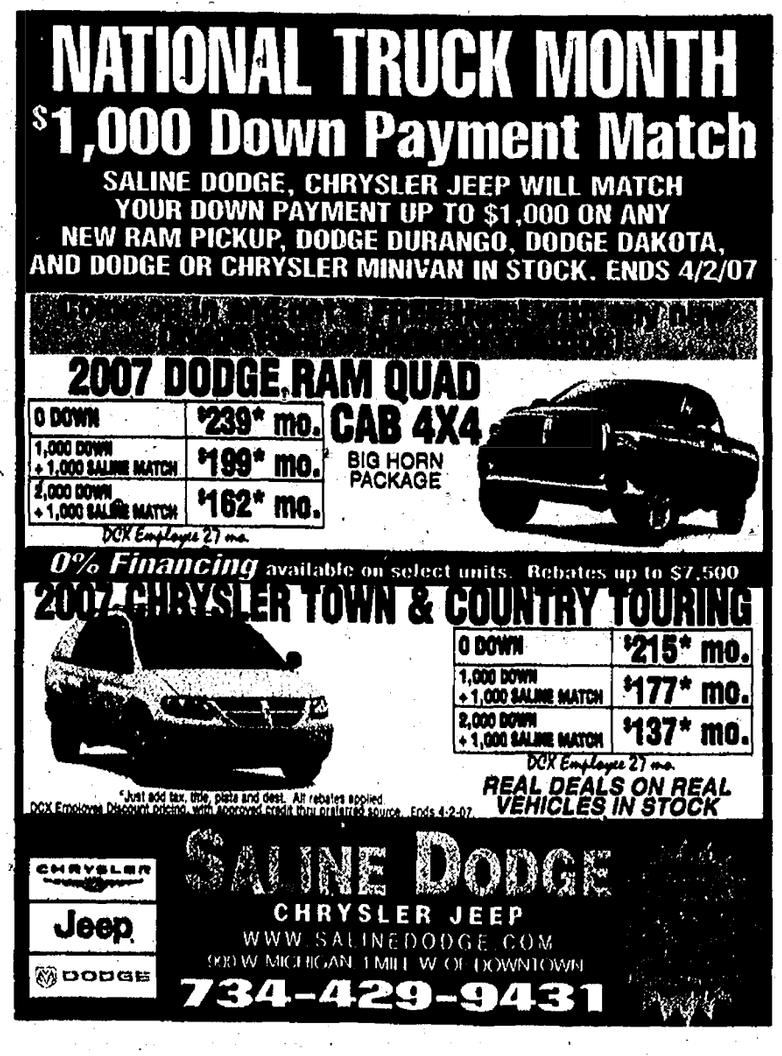
Jail food included a salad, pasta and dessert. The money raised benefits the local families served by the Muscular Dystrophy Association as well as the MDA's summer camp.

Chelsea's Kristi Misiak said: "The money goes for a good cause and I'm happy to help out."

Scio Township's Cheryl Latshaw added: "It is great and it is amazing how enthusiastic people are to raise money for MDA. It is a great cause."

Judge Debbie Conlin (upper left) tells Gary Reed, owner of Reed's Barbering in Chelsea, to behave himself and pay his bail. Kristi Misiak, Patrick Fielder and Cheryl Latshaw spend some worthwhile time behind bars at the Chelsea Grill "lockup."

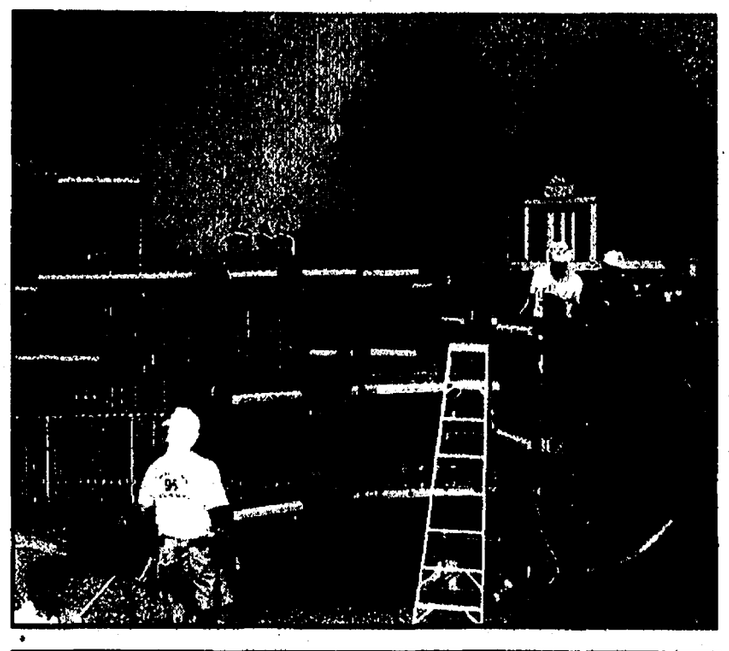




Rebuilding Timber Town

Residents can help fundraising efforts by buying T-shirts and tote bags which feature the Timber Town image painted by Amy Mitchell's father John W. Mitchell Sr. They are on sale at Mission Marketplace, The Chelsea TreeHouse, GiGi's Flowers, Cranesbill Books, and Chelsea Recreation Offices at the Washington Street Education Center.

Over the past decade, about half a million kids have enjoyed playing in Timber Town – the 12,000-square-foot wooden play structure of swings, towers, slides, sandboxes and rope ladders located at Sibley Road and M-52, at the north end of Chelsea. Timber Town – in 1996 one of the largest play structures of its kind in the state – was created with the help of more than 2,500 volunteers and hundreds of thousands of dollars in financial support and community-wide donations. The group also hopes to have about 75 to 100 volunteers on May 26, and also needs project managers to help coordinate the event. For more information about volunteering or to make a donation of money or tools, contact Amy Mitchell at 475-4401. Information can also be found at www.thingstodoinchelsea.com/timbertown.html.



Chelsea's Serveny honored

More than 400 youth leaders from high schools throughout southeastern Michigan will meet today to discuss their achievements at the Leadership in the New Center (LINC) Connections Conference at the Ford Motor Co. Conference and Event Center in Dearborn. LINC is a youth diversity leadership program of the Michigan Roundtable for Diversity and Inclusion.

A number of awards also will be passed out including one to Chelsea's Ann Serveny, who is one of three students in the state to receive the LINC Youth Award.

"This is a special time of the year that we celebrate the work of our Ambassadors and reflect on the positive outcomes from the LINC Leadership Academy Retreats," explained Deborah Williamson, Director of the Michigan Roundtable's Youth Diversity Programs. "Students will come together to discuss what it means to be an "ally" for others, and how to take "action" for diversity and inclusion in their school. These activities provide the foundation for creating a positive youth culture, leading to a more inclusive society."

The conference will be highlighted by the LINC Hall of Fame luncheon recognizing the work of schools that have participated in the LINC Academy Retreat Project and youth and adults who have demonstrated leadership for diversity and inclusion in their schools. Awards will be given to Youth Leaders, Teacher of the Year and Administrator of the Year.

The Ambassador program, sponsored by the Comcast Foundation, places specially trained and experienced youth leaders with new student leadership groups to provide peer mentoring. Two of the major activities include providing workshops on topics such as "Bias & Stereotypes," "Being an Ally for Oppressed Students," "Self Image," "Disability Inclusion" and "Team Building;" and working with individual student teams on diversity awareness and action planning.

The Michigan Roundtable for Diversity & Inclusion is a non-profit, human relations organization that seeks to eliminate discrimination and racism by working proactively across racial, religious, ethnic and cultural boundaries. The Michigan Roundtable assists in building more inclusive communities, businesses and institutions through diversity training, advocacy, conflict resolution, interfaith collaboration, youth leadership training and community dialogue. Chelsea's Day wins essay contest

Ellen Day, an eighth-grader at Beach Middle School in Chelsea, recently won the 38th annual "American & Me Essay Contest," sponsored by Farm Bureau Insurance. Jennifer Snyder took second and Emily Shrosbree was third. Day's first-place essay now advances to the state level competition. Below is Day's award-winning essay:

Perfect and Beautiful

By Ellen Day

No matter what I do, she will always love me. No matter what I say, she will always love me. She is perfect and beautiful, she is my Mother...my American hero.

Every morning she goes to work, trying to make it possible for me to have things she never did. Every night she comes home and cooks dinner while asking me about everything I did that day. She listens intently a smile on her face, even though I am sure she's tired. She drops me off in front of my school every morning and I don't care who sees.

I see her putting others before herself; holding the door for the old women behind us and helping the little boy find his mom. I see her stay late nights at the office and doing bills. In seeing this I push myself to get better grades, to study longer and to practice one more time. She makes me believe that I am better, that I am smarter and that my goals can never be set too high. She has taught me perseverance, strength, and that when you fall no matter how hard, you get right back up again. She is my supporter, my coach and my best friend.

No matter what she does, I will always love her. No matter what she says I will always love her. She is perfect and beautiful, she is my mother...my American hero.

Visit is worth remembering

I'll remember. I'll always remember.

In the moment, they were just glances. In the end, those glances are etched in stone.

Walking down a busy hallway with a predetermined destination. A turn here to another hallway. Down an elevator to another long corridor and on the journey went.

With every step another glance. And another reason to look down and avoid the eyes. I did everything I could to avoid the eyes, but I couldn't look away at what I was seeing – or trying not to see. These brave heroes all have stories to tell that I will never hear, even though I knew just from a glance how their story ends.

The first thing I discovered during my visit to the VA Hospital in Ann Arbor is that the facility has different floor tiles. Different floors seem to have different tile. For example, the tile in the lobby isn't the same as the tile downstairs. I learned this because I was constantly looking down, even finding it difficult to talk with the person accompanying me.

It was all I could do to avoid the eyes.

After greeting my friend near the front desk in the lobby we began to walk. As I looked up for a moment I saw a man sitting in a wheelchair. He had a jacket on and a baseball cap and his beard was thick. What he didn't have were legs. As he began to look up, my eyes quickly darted away - and then I was past him.

But I'll remember him. I'll always remember him.

Off to our left we came upon a waiting room. It was crowded. In fact, I didn't see an empty seat. Some sitting there were young enough to be my brother; others old enough to be my grandfather. Many wore blank looks, just staring straight ahead with no emotion at all. I have sat in waiting rooms before, even hospital emergency rooms, but this was different.

This time, no one seemed interested in looking into my eyes – and then I was past them.

But I'll remember them. I'll always remember them.

The long hall finally ended in an auditorium filled with people. Very special people. This was a meeting for prisoners of war, from as far back as World War II. As soon as we walked in, an older gentleman raced to get us a chair and make us feel welcomed. I sat in the back, listening to the speaker but soon discovered that this wasn't about listening. It was about seeing.

I looked around the room at the faces. I even looked in the eyes. And they looked back into mine. There was no reason to look down. No reason to feel like I didn't belong.

When the meeting was over an older gentleman introduced himself, and I asked him if he had a few minutes to chat. He just smiled and sat down with me.

Archie never let me take my eyes off of his. I couldn't look away. I didn't dare let my attention stray. Our eyes were locked and he seemed more interested that I look into his eyes than hear his words.

But his words were powerful. Captivating. Enlightening.

"We were shot down on July 11, 1944. It was my 22nd mission. Had I gotten to 30 I would have been sent home," Archie said. At 86 years old, Archie's memory wasn't what it used to be, but when it came to details of his duty overseas and how he was captured, it might as well have been yesterday.

Archie was a radio operator on a B-24. After dropping their bombs on Munich, the pilot believed their plane had been heavily hit and would have never made it back.

"The pilot told us that we could bail out right here, but we would probably be greeted by some people pretty mad at us down there," Archie said. "He said he was going to ride this plane as far away from this area as he could. The plane was out of control and we had to crash land the plane."

Archie's plane "crash landed" in a cow field at 200 miles per hour. While the plane was still moving, Archie and his engineer jumped out. Archie fell out on top of him.

"We knew we had to get away from that plane as fast as we possibly could," Archie said. "I grabbed him and started to pull him along. We were trying to get to a tree line for cover where we thought we might be safe. While I was pulling him along, he touched my head and showed me his hand and it was covered in my blood. Somewhere along the way I must have hit my head."

Before they got to the tree line they were greeted by four soldiers holding their rifles in "port position."

"At first I thought they were there to help us, but then they started kicking us and stomping on us," Archie said. "They may have hit us with their guns too." It was clear they weren't there to help.

Archie was just 21 years old at the time. I think back to what I was doing at 21 years old as I continue staring in his eyes. And something tells me he was thinking the same thing.

From July through December Archie was a "guest" of the Nazis. This is where Archie stops talking.

"I really don't want to talk about that experience," he says. But his eyes want to keep going. In fact, I can hear them loud and clear. So I press on, hoping to get some description of what Archie went through – but it's not easy. He's a proud man and like many World War II veterans, he doesn't believe what he went through was anything special or heroic.

"A lot more people had more interesting experiences than I did," he said. "I just don't want to get into it now. It's a story I don't like telling and have only told a few people."

But his eyes are still talking. I know he wants to tell me, despite what his words are saying. Suddenly, he reaches into his pocket and takes out his wallet. "I'll show you what I am talking about," he says, as he pulls out a card from his wallet.

It's a card indicating that Archie is a member of the American Escape Committee.

After I read it out loud I look up at Archie and he's smiling. I don't need to hear the story now. He just told me in a way better than words could ever describe. I will never forget that smile or the eyes smiling back at me.

I'll remember. I'll always remember.

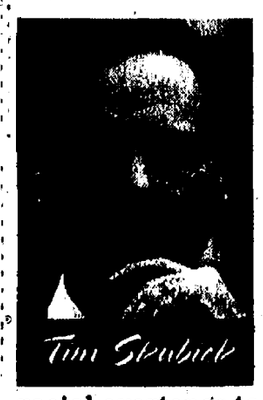
About the VA hospital

The VA Ann Arbor Healthcare System (VAAAHS) provides high quality, cost effective tertiary care to veterans residing in lower Michigan and northwestern Ohio. Primary and secondary care is provided at the Ann Arbor facility and its community-based outpatient clinics (CBOC) in Toledo, Jackson and Flint. VAAAHS treats nearly 40,000 veterans; approximately one-third of veterans treated reside in Ann Arbor's primary service area, and the other two-thirds come for specialty care from outlying counties.

During 2005, approximately 277,800 outpatient visits were provided. VAAAHS operates 98 acute beds, 45 extended care beds and 12 hemodialysis stations. Affiliated with the University of Michigan School of Medicine, all VAAAHS physicians hold joint faculty appointments at the university. An extensive research program is ongoing in clinical, basic science, health services and rehabilitation, with an annual research budget of approximately $10.6 million.

Education obvious road

It's the right thing to do, but that doesn't mean they'll do it. In fact this concept could die a slow and agonizing legislative death because it sounds way too radical, too expensive and has racial overtones to boot.



House Democrats recently embraced a way to improve the education of our children. In a nutshell, it involves getting them into the classroom before age 5. The concept has been bouncing around for years but remains just that — a concept.

Researchers tell us that by age 5 the educational die already is cast for most kids. Teachers can tell right away which kindergarten kids have been prepped at home and which have not.

The notion is if you force kids into preschool around age 3 or 3 1/2 and then bump the starting age for kindergarten to age 4, you would increase the chances kids would graduate, get a good job and become productive members of society.

This is especially critical for children on the bottom rung of the socioeconomic ladder.

When teachers ask, "Let's have a show of hands of who knows their ABCs," the hands staying down painfully reveal which children have not had help at home.

The sorry fact is some kids don't have parents at home, or if they do, maybe the parents have trouble reading, or they are so busy trying to make ends meet, there's little time to play preschool with their children.

While the concept of earlier schooling clearly has merit, everybody in town knows that pumping change into the state's education bureaucracy is easier said than done. After all, "we've always started kindergarten at age 5," the status-quo lobby will argue.

And then the next line will be, "We need more money to do this — and where will it come from?"

On top of that, you'll hear some non-urban lawmakers whisper that they can't spend more money because most of it would end up in Detroit, Flint, Saginaw and Lansing, and that could cost those non-city lawmakers their jobs.

It would be unfortunate if this debate degenerated into the haves vs. the have-

Each village needs not only the family group cottages, but also schools and a clinic. In addition, he will teach construction skills to older children. "All kids who are 13 to 18 are taught a trade as well as getting regular schooling," says David.

Darlene, an occupational therapist who has worked in several school districts and at Chelsea Community Hospital, is looking forward to being a teacher and administrator at the village preschool.

"It's so moving to see how these kids respond to the stability and love the Rafiki village provides," she says. She recalls a proud group of 3-year-olds who asked if she would like to hear a song they had just learned. "They gave me three verses of 'Immortal, Invisible, God Only Wise,'" she says with a smile.

Rafiki's ambitious plans have also impressed the Schaffers.

"Each of the 10 original villages is called a training village," says Darlene. "The plan is to extend the model by building 10 more satellite villages in each of their 10 countries." U.S. and African churches will sponsor the satellite villages.

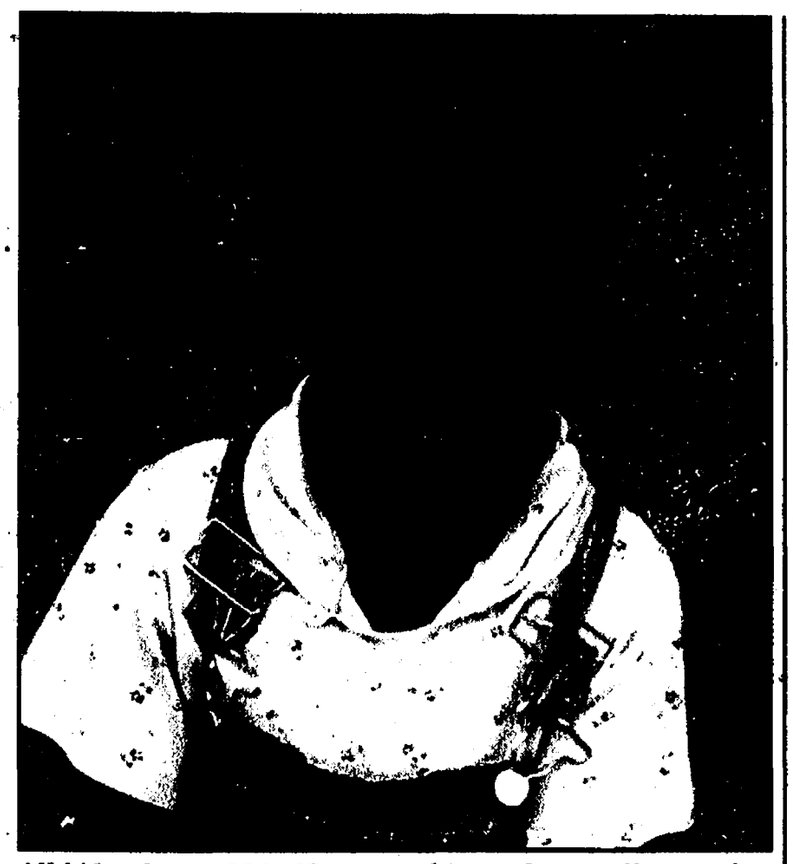
David stresses that Rafiki draws on the strengths of the indigenous cultures.

"The mothers are local women, and they bring rich traditions to childrearing," he said. "Many of the teachers also are Africans, and Rafiki works hard to improve their training and skills.

"We have to recognize that the 10 Rafiki countries are mostly majority Christian nations. There is a need in the local cultures for places to raise orphans in a Christian setting."

The Schaffers look forward to returning to Africa.

"We know that for many people, it seems far away and a hardship," says Darlene. "But for us, Africa now seems just around the corner and a privilege."



All kids who are 13 to 18 are taught a trade as well as getting regular schooling.

Simple stories of the children dominate their memories.

"While we were in Uganda each family got a kite," David said. "No one had seen a kite before, so we got to help with the explanations. The mother encouraged the kids. The older ones, who were all of six years old, made sure everyone got a turn to run with the kite and that no damage was done when it floated back to earth. They had so much fun with such a simple toy."

Rafiki places large fundraising responsibilities on its volunteers, in part to broaden its base of support. "We are allowed to contribute no more than 25 percent of our own costs," says Darlene. Thus their July departure date is tentative, pending the needed funds being either given or pledged by that time.

Many Chelsea-area individuals and groups are stepping up to help. The Schaffer's own congregation, Chelsea First United Methodist, is hosting an event called "Rafiki... A Heart for Africa" at 7 p.m. on April 19. This event will feature an elegant hors d'oeuvres supper catered by Daryl's Downtown, a dessert bar, a silent auction, and a presentation by the Schaffers.

Tickets are $35 each, and are available at Chelsea First United Methodist at 128 Park St. (475-8119), or at Mission Marketplace at 117 S. Main St. Tickets must be purchased in advance. Donations on behalf of the Schaffers can also be made directly to the Rafiki Foundation.

Information is available at www.rafiki-foundation.org, and at Chelsea First United Methodist Church.

The Schaffers are humbled and inspired by the response they have seen from their neighbors.

"As we talk about this, people get excited," says David. "We've already had three Chelsea people, including a physician, make serious inquiries into becoming Rafiki volunteers."

Darlene points out, "Chelsea has the capacity to make a huge difference. Who knows where this might lead?"

Calling all gardeners

Garden Walk planners need your help

Enthusiasm is growing for Chelsea Garden Club's newest project – a Garden Walk to be held on Saturday, June 23. The organizing committee hopes to recruit six to 10 homeowners and gardeners within walking distance of the downtown area to open their gardens from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

"Many of our members have lovely gardens but only a few are located near downtown," said Judy Smith, Garden Club president.

People who volunteer their gardens will be assisted on the day of the event by Garden Club members who will welcome visitors and sell tickets.

"We have wanted to do a garden walk for a long time but were unable to handle the logistics or necessary insurance," said Smith. "Then Trinh Pifer, owner of The Garden Mill, brought the idea to our board and pledged her support."

Pifer said: "We think this Garden Walk will be good for the whole community. Our town has a reputation as a great spot to visit. Our neighborhoods are picturesque, our shops are inviting and we have wonderful places to eat."

Members of the committee are Nancy Harris, Debbie Hubbard, Neta Mills, Susan Moore, Trinh Pifer, Denise Peyser, Mary Randolph and Janet Walmbodt.

For more information, call Smith at 475-9768 or Pifer at 475-3539.

Chelsea Garden Club meets the second Monday of each month at noon for lunch and information sharing at the Chelsea First United Methodist Church, 128 Park St.

In April, club members will meet at 10 a.m. at the Chelsea Post Office to clean up the flower beds in preparation for summer planting.

News in Brief

Washtenaw County MSU Extension offices in cooperation with area retailers are coordinating the annual spring soil testing program. Area retailers will host the program for four Saturdays, March 31, April 7, 14 and 21. Master Gardeners will be on hand at each location to answer questions regarding soils, use of fertilizers and procedures for taking a soil sample.

Soil samples will be tested for essential nutrients, pH and organic matter at the MSU Soil Testing laboratory in East Lansing. Test results provide information on fertilizers that best match your plant needs. An evaluation of your soils will be mailed to you along with fertilizer recommendations.

For a minimal fee of $15, this program allows residents to take positive action to care for their plants, while protecting our water resources.

For more information visit the Washtenaw County Web page at extension.ewashtenaw.org or call the MSUE office at 734-997-1678.

I heard the spam filter on your work e-mail isn't working.

Yes. It's been very frustrating. But they told me it should be fixed soon. I will be with you in a minute. I need to delete all of these.

OK. Wait, what is that one?

Not sure. The subject though is "get happy." Who wouldn't want to "get happy."

Click on it!

It's for an on-line discount pharmacy. I can buy Viagra for only $2 per pill and valium for $2 per pill. So for $4 I can "get happy" for quite awhile. I'm not sure what phentermine is but it's $4.17 per pill...I can't afford that kind of happiness.

That one says your loan was approved. I didn't know you applied for a loan.

Neither did I but this e-mail clearly states in the subject line "thank you for your loan request."

How much did you "request?"

I don't know. Let's take a look. "We'd like to inform you that we are accepting your application. We are ready to give you a $272,000 loan (approved refinance) for a low monthly payment. Approval process will take only 1 minute."

Wow! Congratulations!

Thank you. But if they think I am going to sit around for 1 minute to process this they're nuts. I have better things to do with my time. Maybe if it only took 30 seconds I could wait for the $272,000.

Here's one with an interesting subject line, "Hey, loser." What does it say?

I would rather not read this one. I should have never given my dad my work e-mail address.

Hey, an e-mail from Caroline!

I don't know a Caroline. But I'm game. Let's find out who she is. "Hi, I am here sitting in the internet caffe. Found your email and decided to write."

Where is the internet caffe?

I don't even know where the internet café is let alone the internet caffe.

Well, what else did she say?

"I am 25 y.o. girl. I have a picture if you want. No need to reply here as this is not may email."

It's "not may e-mail?"

I think she "may" be too young for me. I am a 43 y.o. boy. So there is no need for her to reply either. I was really hoping it was "Sweet Caroline ... good times never seemed so good ... I've been inclined to believe they never would."

OK, Neil. What's next?

Here is a diet e-mail that promises to improve the "quality of your life by making you eat less and giving you better cheer." Well, we could all use better cheer. But who wants to eat less. I want to eat more. That would improve the quality of my life and provide me "better cheer."

Oh, no. A system warning. This can't be good.

"Your mailbox has exceeded one or more size limits set by your administrator." I think all of these Viagra e-mails have something to do with me "exceeding my size limit."

Oh, no. A "notification from billing department." And if that last comment didn't get you in trouble, then this certainly will.

I have no idea what this is. But I'm still game. "We recently noticed one or more attempts to log in to your PayPal account from a foreign IP address."

Do you have a PayPal account?

No.

Do you know what foreign IP address means?

I guess it means someone in France is trying to log into my non-existent PayPal account.

What else does it say?

"If you recently accessed your account while traveling, the unusual log in attempts may have been initiated by you."

Have you been traveling?

Only on this internet highway.

There is someone knocking on the door. Who is it?

Oh, it's the FedEx guy. My on-line prescriptions are here. Gotta go. Time to "get happy."

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor: I was astounded when I read in last weeks paper of the effort underway to recall Lyndon Township Supervisor Maryann Noah. I have rarely met a public servant with more dedication, knowledge and enthusiasm than what Maryann Noah brings to her position.

The first time I met her she spoke to me at length on a number of issues facing Lyndon Township and I was overwhelmed by her breadth of knowledge regarding the wide variety of concerns the Township faced, and by her efforts to utilize state-of-the-art brain power available within the greater Chelsea and western Washtenaw communities to benefit the residents of Lyndon Township. After meeting the Township Supervisor, I understood why so many of my "born and raised" Lyndon Township neighbors spoke so highly of her and I thereafter decided to lend my time as well to work on behalf of the community.

As a practical matter, I cannot fathom why anyone would think it appropriate to undertake a recall with an election already scheduled to be held in 2008. Why use your neighbor's tax dollars to further a personal agenda instead of simply running for office next year? As it is, the township will have to incur the expense of this recall, and if successful, an election. That is not what I pay taxes for and I take to task the person who started this recall at the expense of the rest of us. I can only hope that the agitators fail to gather the 319 signatures needed thereby allowing the township to meet its scheduled fiscal obligations.

To the Editor: Thank you for the recent article in regards to the Governor's plan to cut funding to the Soil Conservation Districts and the Forestry Service. The Governor and her staff have already created a 1930's depression out of Michigan's economy, why not create a 1930's dust bowl out of Michigan's farmland. After all, we can always import our food from China or Mexico. All the Democrats will have to do is to raise taxes on the survivors.

To the Editor: An editorial in last week's edition ("Our take") blames a prospective increase in insurance rates on prospective jurors after a prospective change in the law. Sorry "our take," those generous jurors are not us.

The proposed new law does not change the requirement that injured victims of bad drivers' negligence must be seriously impaired in order to recover anything for their injuries. The law simply restates that the law is the law.

Restoring the law is needed only because two years ago Michigan's supreme court, including such insurance industry henchmen as the former chief counsel for AAA, Robert Young, Jr., decided to be activist judges. They were not satisfied with serious impairment qualifying injured victims to recover.

They wrote into the law some extra words about the injury warping the "trajectory of the injured person's life." Those new words simply were not in the law as written.

All the judges under our supreme insurance court, that is to say all other Michigan judges, know that this trajectory wording means that they are supposed to throw out all impairment cases before they get to jurors. Word filters down and even cases that go to us jurors rarely survive.

"Our take" gets it all wrong. Only insurance profits went up in the past two years. When all those

Our take:

Election Day holiday won't solve apathy

America does not need another federally mandated holiday to boost voter turnout.

Sen. Hillary Clinton, D-New York, and a handful of her colleagues in the House have reintroduced the Count Every Vote Act, claiming the legislation is necessary to restore confidence in elections and to attract greater numbers of voters.

There is no guarantee that giving people the day off will result in the greater likelihood that they will vote, just as a day off for Labor Day doesn't mean they will march in a parade, or will honor veterans on Memorial Day.

If this bill passes, Election Day will simply become another day off with pay, one that will cost American businesses untold millions of dollars in salary and lost productivity, and make us even more uncompetitive in the global economy.

The bill has some merits, among them a demand for a paper trail for every ballot cast, and a demand that paper ballot records are the sole documents used in recounts. The act also would require uniform national standards for provisional ballots. Provisional ballots are often used when there are challenges to the qualifications of voters at precincts.

But those worthy issues stand separate from declaring Election Day a federal holiday. Making the first Tuesday in November a federal holiday is neither an inducement nor an enticement to voting. It would simply be, in effect, another holiday, another day off with pay.

Polls are open 13 hours on Election Day. Voters can cast their ballots before work, after work or during lunch hours. Americans intent on voting have plenty of opportunity to do so. Those who don't participate in the process won't change their practice simply because they have the day off with pay. We do not need to create another day off under the unproved premise that doing so will increase voter turnout.

The proposed act contains two other potential flaws that

Michigan History

Remembering Gerald Ford

In 1999, President Clinton awarded former President Gerald Ford the Presidential Medal of Freedom for his role in easing the country through Watergate. In making the presentation, President Clinton noted, because of Ford's leadership, "America was stronger, calmer and more self-confident. America was, in other words, more like President Ford himself."

In the March/April 2007 issue, Michigan History Magazine offers extensive coverage of our state's only U.S. president. In the first of two articles, Pulitzer-Prize winning author Sheryl James chronicles the life and times of the man from Grand Rapids who ascended to the White House after the 1974 resignation of President Richard Nixon.

In her second article, James traveled to Grand Rapids on Jan. 3, 2007, to observe how Michigan said farewell to the man who once said, "When I can't sleep, I often think of Grand Rapids." Both articles are heavily illustrated with historic photos and images from Ford's funeral.

Also in this issue, readers learn about the Upper Peninsula's only train robbery; a Michigan town that is closer to three other state capitals than to Lansing; and a writer's successful effort to discover the missing letter written by a dying sailor.

For more information or to order a subscription to Michigan History call (800) 366-3703 or visit www.michiganhistory-magazine.com. Individual copies can be purchased at Barnes & Noble, B. Dalton and Borders bookstores throughout the state. Michigan History is published by the Michigan Historical Center.

cases got tossed, our rates did not go down. If the law changes back and some "lucky" injury victim's claim survives to recovery, there's so much "play" in the rates that insurers still have no reason to pass any rate hike along to us profit-plundered consumers.

Maybe for a change it's time for us consumers to start getting some coverage for our insurance dollar?

To the Editor: This letter is not intended as an attack on our mayor and council, nor is it my intent to diminish their community service, but our city government is failing.

On top of our already high taxes and fees, Chelsea still needs a new city hall, a new police station, a new fire station, our water system has become a financial disaster, and the sewer plant needs expansion (a harbinger of our next financial crisis.) Not to mention the structural administrative problems that created this mess.

Despite all these problems and the failures of our past administration, our current city leadership wants to continue a policy of closed city government. Any input that doesn't fit the party line is squelched, all other pubic information is whitewashed. Our City Government TV channel provided by Comcast and $60,000 annual fee they pay the city are being misdirected.

We can and must change the system for the better by demanding that all city public meetings be put on our community TV channel. The daylight would improve the professionalism of our city officials. It would provide easy access to accurate city information for taxpayers & voters, and it would give a public voice to constructive dissent, a cornerstone of good government. We really cannot afford not to televise city meetings. If we don't start paying attention to how our city is spending our money our tax burden will eventually diminish our quality of life and damage our property values.

could exacerbate the very problems Clinton and supporters claim they want to fix. States would be required to adopt early voting. They would have to allow voting in the same fashion as at polls on Election Day up to 15 days before an election. That means communities would have to staff polling stations a minimum of four hours a day for two weeks before an election.

The act does not address the added costs that communities would be saddled with running two-week-long elections. That many ballots floating around for as long as 15 days before Election Day — and the act allows for a longer "early voting" period if a state chooses to adopt one — could wreak havoc with the integrity of elections.

The act also mandates that states enact "no excuse" absentee balloting. That would allow any voter to request an absentee ballot without supplying a reason. This provision would enhance the opportunity for the manipulation of ballots simply by increasing the number of ballots in circulation before an election.

America does not need another holiday in which to hold elections. It needs more Americans studying the issues and investigating the candidates before casting ballots.

WCC combines fun and education for Earth Day

What can the earth teach us? Learn the answer to this question as Washtenaw Community College celebrates its sixth annual Earth Day Thursday from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. April 19 on the first floor of the Student Center Building.

More than 30 local and national nature and environmental groups will be on hand to answer questions, pique interest, and educate the public on topics such as land conservation, recycling, and global warming with exhibits, free information and live animals to illustrate the various important issues.

The entire day will focus on environmental issues with representatives on hand from groups such as U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, the Sierra Club, The Southeast Michigan Council of Governments, the Ann Arbor Transit Authority and many more. Hybrid cars from Ann Arbor Toyota and Howard Cooper will be available.

"We are sponsoring this festival so that our students and the rest of the community can learn from the many groups they hear so much about," said David Thomas, geology instructor at WCC. "This is a great place to meet people who share a concern and admiration for our natural resources."

All events are free and open to the public. For more information, call 734-973-3519.

Emotional abuse harder to recognize

Over the next 12 months, there is something that will be reported on more than 2 million times and result in roughly 1,500 deaths. While those figures suggest this is certainly not a silent problem, for many victims it is.

Despite the millions of reported cases each year, child abuse and neglect often goes overlooked. While physical scars are difficult to look past, emotional abuse can be just as scarring, yet far more difficult to recognize.

Part of the problem with child abuse and neglect is its prevalence. Consider the state of Missouri, which the Child Abuse Prevention Association (CAPA) reports has approximately 10,000 children in its child protection system that have suffered abuse or neglect. Combine that with dwindling state budgets, and many cases of abuse can go unrecognized or overlooked.

In addition to writing local legislators and demanding more resources be allotted to abuse and neglect prevention agencies, those concerned about children and their well-being can take a more active role simply by becoming more informed about child abuse, particularly emotional abuse, which even clinicians admit is far more difficult to recognize than physical abuse.

Prevent Child Abuse America, an organization dedicated to building awareness of child abuse through education, notes the difficulty in recognizing emotional abuse, in part because the abuse is not always noticeable to the naked eye, like bruises or physical scars might be. Oftentimes, clinicians use a revised version of the Child Abuse and Trauma Scale (CATS), which measures degrees of child abuse. Many times, emotional child abuse exhibits itself through a child's behavior and personality.

- Loyalty: Despite the abuse, children are often extremely loyal to their abuser, particularly if that abuser is a parent. That's because children suffering from abuse grow to believe one of two things (or both): that abuse is a normal part of life; or they will be severely punished if they report or indicate any signs of abuse.
- Maturity level: This can go one of two ways according to Prevent Child Abuse America. A child can either act overly mature for his or her age or begin to exhibit immature behavior that is inappropriate at that age.
- Dramatic shift in behavior: This is among the most noticeable indicators of emotional abuse, and can include disruption of activities, clinging or compulsive behavior with respect to seeking affection or attention. Aggressiveness and an unwillingness to cooperate are also indicators.
- Antisocial behavior: Another of the more recognizable indicators is when children act sad and withdrawn from their peers. Abuse and neglect often result in poor self-confidence, which in turn makes it difficult for children to connect and have relationships with their peers.
- Unnatural fears for kids their age: Most children grow out of certain fears, such as the fear of being left alone or a fear of certain objects. Children suffering from emotional abuse either revert back to these fears or never grow out of them at all, and often are fearful of going home.

Of course, any of these indicators can be exhibited by children who aren't suffering from abuse. However, when typical behavior patterns change into any of the above-mentioned behaviors, that does strongly indicate emotional abuse.

Part of what makes emotional abuse challenging is the seemingly ample amount of triggers. Parents are not the only ones who can trigger emotional abuse. In fact, any adult, whether intended or not, can perpetrate emotional abuse in a child. Common triggers include:

- Chastising a child in public, be it blaming or belittling.
- Always assuming the child is at fault when something goes wrong.
- Putting unrealistic expectations on a child.
- Admitting to feelings of disdain or even hatred for the child.
- Threatening severe punishment.
- Withdrawing comfort in an effort to discipline a child.
- Being emotionally cold, distant or unsupportive.
- Exhibiting a violent temper.

nots. But given the behavior by previous legislators, it's a real possibility.

But what about the kids?

Ever since term limits started, the new crop of lawmakers have had difficulty thinking much beyond their collective noses. Long-term thinking and planning is pretty much a joke and this early childhood education stuff demands both.

It's hackneyed but true. The state can spend "X" amount of dollars at the beginning of life to educate all of our children, or we can spend 10 times "X" when we send them to prison after they have failed.

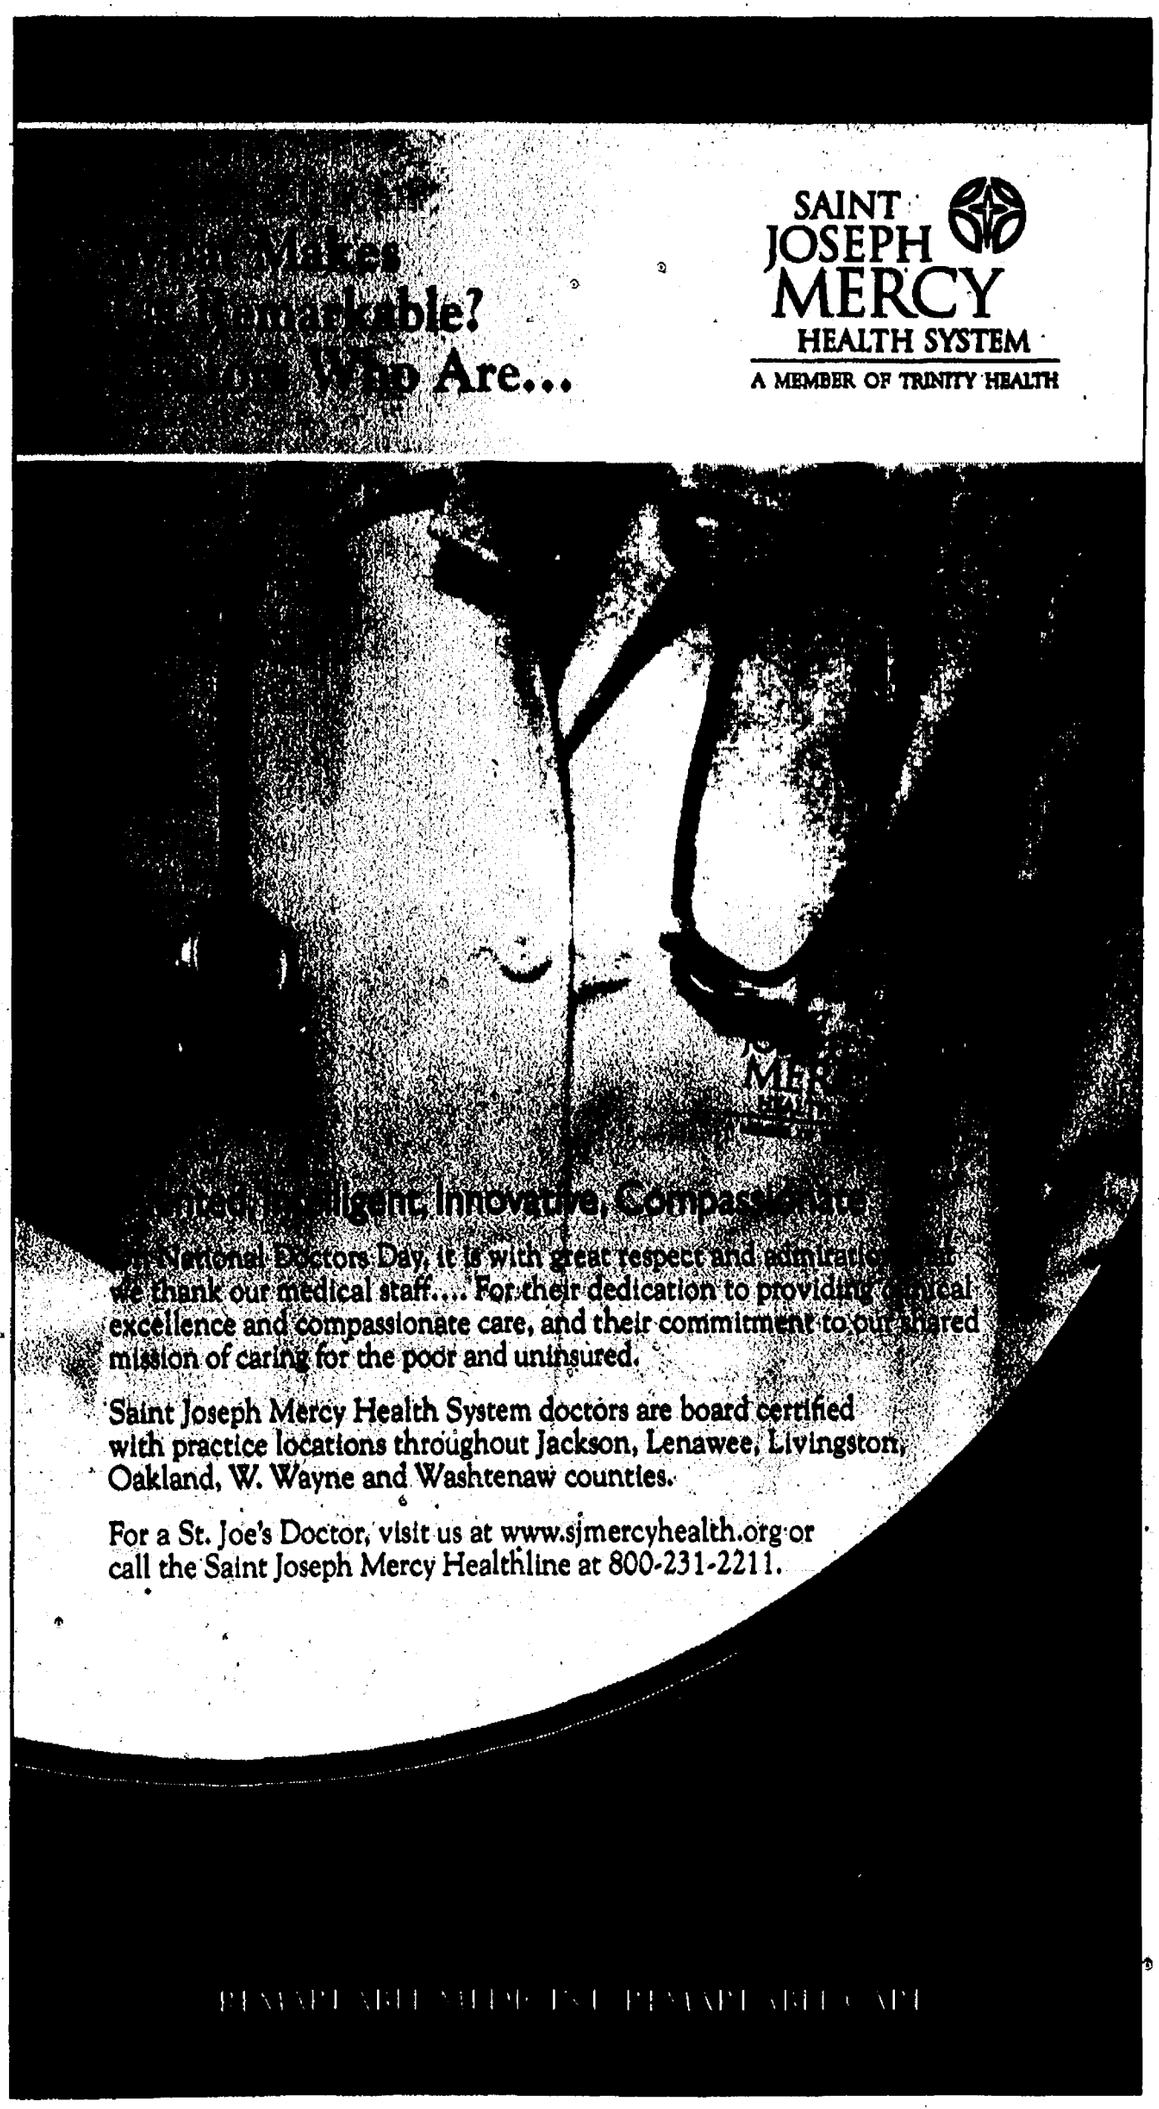
This is not a tough choice, but it's not a gimme, either.

"This will not be easy," confesses state Rep. Tim Melton, a Democrat who is leading the charge for change.

The governor is fond of saying that we are all in this thing together, which reflects her religious convictions that we are the keepers of all our brothers and sisters.

Moving up the mandatory starting age for education will put that notion to the test. It would be nice if lawmakers didn't flunk it.

Tim Skubick is the host of the TV show "Off the Record."



Technology

Don't let gadgets take control

This is a gadget-crazed society where many households are filled with more MP3 players, PDAs, handheld video games, and mobile phones than people. With these electronics come a barrage of accessories and of course, power cords, which can quickly turn an organized space into one overrun with clutter.

This season, a good home-improvement project to undertake is one in which you gain control over the home electronics that just may be taking over your household. From recharging centers to concealment tips, here are some ways to get organized.

1. Catalog your inventory: A little organizational work up front could do wonders for helping you to avoid aggravation later on. A simple labeling gun or tags printed off of your home computer can help keep tabs on your gadgets. Come up with a cataloging system for your stuff. Label each gadget, power cord, recharging dock, remote control, etc., with a coordinating name, color or other code. For example, "Jim's MP3." Do not think that you'll be able to match up the charger to the device later on - those plugs all start looking deceptively similar as your collection grows. Having them clearly labeled will definitely eliminate confusion.

2. Create a central charging station: The majority of the devices in your life revenue enhancements don't include the 2-percent tax on services.

Lehman, like many in her profession, are doing the best they can in a slow economy that has greatly effected the real estate market in Southeastern Michigan. While she understands it's not the government's role to help her business thrive, she does understand that it's also not the government's role to make matters worse. And she believes Michigan Gov. Jennifer Granholm is about to do exactly that.

"I am self-employed and Gov. Granholm's House bill 4368 would greatly impact my ability to continue to do business as a realtor in Michigan," Lehman said. "This tax will not only hurt every realtor in Michigan, but also every service provider, your lawn service company, accountant, barber, etc."

Lehman recently wrote a letter to State Rep. Pam Byrnes (D-District 52) urging her to oppose Gov. Granholm's 2 percent tax on services and vote no on House Bill 4368.

"As one of the 32,000 realtors in Michigan, I can confidently say that additional taxes, without real government reform, in an already struggling state economy will further depress the real estate market," Lehman said. "Gov. Granholm has billed her 2-percent tax on services as a solution to Michigan's recurring structural deficit. In reality, it is nothing more than a way to pay for her 17 new governmental programs at an estimated cost of an additional $1 billion."

Lehman believes "structural budget problems are solved through real reform, not one-time fixes such as choosing when to pay retirement benefits."

"Gov. Granholm's 2 percent service tax is a total reversal from her statement during the 2006 gubernatorial campaign, when she stated that she would not support raising the sales tax on Michigan citizens," Lehman said.

"Property ownership is part of the American dream and it should be possible for everyone. Realtors provide vital, professional guidance and assistance through this complex transaction that most cannot undertake themselves. Our service is not a luxury, but a way for people to protect their families, homes and businesses. When combined with other core services such as appraisals, insurance, and title work, the increased cost of purchasing property will force many buyers out of the market."

Lehman went on to say that someone trying to survive in an extremely competitive industry, she will have little choice but to absorb the 2 percent tax on services in order to remain viable.

"In effect, this proposal would raise my income tax by 50 percent without accounting for compliance costs," she said. "This tax will be one more harmful step towards Michigan's economic downfall."

Laura Kennedy of Real Estate One in Dexter couldn't agree more with Lehman.

"Every business, especially independent contractors, has no choice but to alter their operations to take into account income reduction," Kennedy said. "However, I am not hearing that the state government is doing the same thing. I have to admit, I'd rather hear from our elected officials that they are taking a pay cut first, before they ask me to do so."

Kennedy also says she is frustrated over the threat that school, police and fire protection funding will be cut.

"These benefits to the people are supposed to be provided to us, over all else, and the government is supposed to be held accountable to providing these benefits by our elected officials," she said. "Instead, I see those very elected officials holding us, the people, emotionally hostage by using threats to cut budgets for these two basic needs. This is abhorrent."

There is little doubt that taxing services will further affect home sellers in today's already weak economy.

"Consumers are already realizing a loss of equity in their home due to market conditions," Kennedy said. "Now add to that additional cost for selling their homes. I don't think less people will use realtors, since it is harder to sell a home today than it has been in a long time. Homeowners need real estate agents more than they ever did to get their homes exposed to potential buyers. That exposure costs a great deal of money, most of which are fixed monthly expenses for agents, regardless of the number of listings we hold. These marketing dollars are also expended up front, before being paid, since we are not paid unless a home sells."

Kennedy says agents are already realizing a pay cut because home values have come down and commissions are based on sale price.

"What most people may not realize is that we are subcontractors to a brokerage," Kennedy said. "As subcontractors, we do not get social security benefits paid in for us, nor do we get other 'standard' employee benefits such as health care and retirement funds. Our budget must include line items to cover these expenses."

According to research released this week by the Mackinac Center for Public Policy, Gov. Granholm's proposed 2 percent excise tax on most services could result in the loss of up to 19,000 Michigan jobs in just its first 16 months.

Authored by economists at the Beacon Hill Institute in Massachusetts at the request of the Mackinac Center, the study shows that official revenue estimates fail to include the dynamic impact of hiking taxes on Michigan residents and job providers.

In order to measure the impact of the governor's primary tax proposal, the Mackinac Center asked the Beacon Hill Institute to measure the impact that its most prominent component — a 2 percent excise tax on services — would have on the Michigan economy, all other things being equal.

"One of the fundamental tenets of economics is that when prices go up, quantity demanded goes down," said Michael D. LaFaive, director of fiscal policy for the Center. "Raising the price of anything — business services, for instance — means less of that service will be sold. Since this tax will raise the cost of everything from legal services to bowling, the impact will ripple through the economy, causing job losses and lower-than-expected revenue to the treasury."

and there no longer is an option to actually put a plan in place to offset this loss," she said. "Right now Chelsea has adopted a budget that has us about break-even and we have a great staff that focuses on the needs of the building, so we usually have budget funds returned to us at the end of the year."

Zigman admits that, depending on a few variables including utility costs, the district could have enough to offset the hit without eliminating any programs. "But only time will tell," she said. "Planning is basically thrown out the window and we are looking for some luck now."

Chelsea had a general fund balance of $4,573,152 last school year and general expenditures of $25,667,773 for its 2,799 students.

Evelynn Shirk, superintendent for Dexter Community Schools, agrees that the proposed cuts would cause serious problems for most school districts. She said the proposal was a "call to action."

"Any money taken away mid-year is a problem," she said. "Because the school year is almost over, the money will probably come from reserves. This is a call to action. We must all contact our legislators and let them know that they need to fix the structural problem which exists in school funding.

"If education really is a top priority, it needs to be provided adequate and stable funding."

A $34 cut in Dexter's budget in 2006-07 would translate into a $121,000 cut this school year for the district's 3,596 students, according to Sharon Raschke, executive director of finance and business for Dexter Community Schools.

"That would be retroactive to the entire 06-07 fiscal year that started July 1, 2006," she said. "Any amount of proration is a cut for a budget that began eight months ago."

State Rep. Pam Byrnes (D-District 52) said the Republican's plan would have drastically hurt Michigan schools.

"It's just not realistic," she said. "It would have hurt our cities, our schools and our public safety. The cuts would have been devastating."

The plan would have meant a $4 million hit for Detroit schools and a $568,884 hit for Ann Arbor schools.

Granholm and the Legislature are close to an agreement on trimming only the first $310 million of the $940 million needed to be cut from the current fiscal year budget.

Labels offer guide to changing world

By Elaine Owsley
Special Writer

Need a lesson in modern geography? Fold clothes.

This course of study can be done with friends at the laundromat, or alone, in the comfort of your own home.

If you are under 50, you may require an atlas. If you are over 50, you will need two – one from your school days and a new one, or at least one less than 10 years old. Out of shear boredom with the job at hand, I began looking at labels as I folded clothes one day a couple of years ago. Underwear works best for this course of study.

At first, the countries of "hecho", a Spanish word which seems to have replaced "manufactured" along with "made", were familiar, if surprising. Mexico appears frequently, along with half of Central America – Honduras, Guatemala, El Salvador, the Dominican Republic, Nicaragua, Costa Rica, Jamaica, etc. Then I hit "Lesotho" and had to call the Ann Arbor Public Library Research Desk for that one.

Part of the problem, geographically speaking, is that I have not had any serious contact with the subject since the '50's. The last atlas that came into our house was probably published in the late 50's, or perhaps '60's. In the interim, the British Empire dissolved and the various Crown Colonies went their own way, which included changing their names from what they were called under British rule, to something more "homey" to the people who lived there.

Where in the world is Bombay? Courtney Feazel, a clerk at Dexter Pharmacy, views Bombay in the same way younger folks might view Peiking duck. Could it be Mumbai gin or Beijing duck in the future?

In the course of doing this, the old names were abandoned and those of us who were taught those names for various countries have been left without such places as Ceylon, Burma, Malaya, and even Bombay. How are we going to explain the tea, the road or the shave, and the gin, for instance, without the place?

Not all underwear and sleepwear – the usual suspects – comes from Latin American or even Lesotho – which, by the way, my computer recognizes, even if I do not.

The world tour includes Turkey, India, Thailand, China, Indonesia, Egypt, South Africa, Hong Kong, Korea, Malaysia, Sri Lanka and Canada – yes, Canada.

The really strange ones include Pakistan, Bangladesh, Nepal, Macau; and the really, really far out- (putting it mildly) ones include the Northern Mariana Islands, Mauritius, Mongolia and the Sultanate of Oman – and of course, Lesotho.

Several of these tags, and it is amazing how much information they can pack onto those little things, along with washing instructions in three languages, claim that the items were made from fabric from the United States.

Someone needs to explain to me how you can process cotton, and it is usually cotton, into fabric in the US, ship it to Mongolia where it is sewn into garments and still be able to purchase three pairs of men's briefs, with their packaging, for under $8!

Fair Trade isn't being fair to someone, and I suspect it's the folks who do the sewing or "hecho-ing," wherever that takes place.

There was a time when this country was known for its production of things made out of cotton. The cotton mills of the South were busy turning out clothing and household textiles – think Springmaid and Pepperill mills.

During the Civil War, those mills kept churning, but, unfortunately for the Southern Armies, the woolen mills, which made the uniform fabric, were up in New England out of reach. Cotton uniforms may be helpful in the desert, but they don't cut it in a cold or even temperate climate.

These days, you don't hear a lot about southern textile mills and even the northern mills have declined. Where once it was a luxury to have fabrics from foreign lands – silk, for instance – it now seems that is the norm – at least in the clothing trade.

A few underwear makers still proudly display the Made in the USA designation on their labels – Hanes and Fruit of the Loom, and Jockey, for instance. And JC Penney's labels show Made in USA fairly often. My research has not exposed me to everyone's underwear production, but enough to see we are going far a-field to cover the basics.

Oh, yes. Lesotho. It used to be Basutoland (which I also don't recall), but it is home to the Zulus, and is entirely surrounded by South Africa. Perhaps we knew it as "Zululand." Half of Africa has changed names. Even Stanley and Livingstone couldn't find their old haunts, but they could probably buy underwear there

U-M forum tackles cancer

One day, you may be able to go into a doctor's office and get a simple test that will tell you if you are at high risk for developing cancer.

Or, if you have already been diagnosed, another painless test will guide doctors in predicting which individualized treatment plan will work best on you, cutting down on needless rounds of drugs or chemotherapy.

The future of cancer prevention and early detection is happening right now in our nation's leading cancer centers such as the University of Michigan. However, without collaboration from across disciplines - from policy to technology - the promising future cannot be fully realized.

The University of Michigan Comprehensive Cancer Center and Friends of Cancer Research, a cancer non-profit dedicated to addressing barriers and opportunities in cancer research and cancer policy, will host a special town hall event from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. Wednesday, April 11, at the Biomedical Science Research Building on the U-M medical campus in Ann Arbor.

The event will provide an interactive and in-depth look at promising areas in prevention and early detection from an expert panel of our nation's leaders in various fields connected to cancer research.

Panelists include U.S. Rep. John Dingell (D-Mich.), Andrew von Eschenbach, M.D., commissioner of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration; John Niederhuber, M.D., director of the National Cancer Institute; Max Wicha, M.D., director of the U-M Comprehensive Cancer Center; and other top researchers in the area of cancer prevention.

Timeless snowmen

Snowmen come in all different shapes and sizes. They also are created by "kids" of all ages. Grace Adkins, a 92-year-old resident of Chelsea Retirement Communities, enjoyed one of the last winter days of 2007 by fulfilling a lifelong wish: to build a snowman. Adkins, who had never built a snowman, shared this dream with CRC staff earlier this year, and the perfect snowfall on March 16 enabled them to help her achieve her goal. Four-year-old Ethan Litzinger also got outside and created his own snowman. Ethan is the grandson of Dennis and Becky Morse of Chelsea.

GADGETS

likely run on rechargeable batteries. Unless you desire a kitchen counter overflowing with gadgets, it is wise to find an out-of-the way place where you can handle charging up.

A garage, workshop or basement area can be a good place to set up a central charging station. A countertop, deck or shelf can be equipped with a multi-outlet power strip designated specifically for gadget charging. Encourage family members to keep the charging docks and power cords in the same spot to contain the clutter and make it easy to locate plugs when needed.

3. Reign in remotes: From ceiling fans to plasma televisions, many of today's electronics come with remote controls. Just like power cords, it can be difficult to remember which remote powers which device, so labeling is key. Also, enlist the help of remote caddies or create your own cubbies or storage systems for housing remotes in particular rooms. While universal remote controls can help reduce the number of remotes you'll need, not all of them will work for the dozens of functions the actual device remote control will.

If the idea of a multitude of remotes seriously irks you, you can hire a home-electronics specialist to come in and master wire your home to a programming center that will run many of the devices from one control panel.

4. Go wireless: If cords have taken over, consider upgrading home computers and other electronics to wireless systems. From wireless routers to wireless keyboards and mice to a plethora of other technology, you can considerably cut down on the amount of cords you'll need. Where wireless is not possible, think about running cords inside of walls or under carpeting to create a clean look.

Thin speaker wires from surround-sound systems can be easily concealed under carpeting by cutting a thin groove into the foam padding to house the wire. If you don't like the idea of doing the work yourself, there are professionals who specialize in setting up home-theater systems.

The 'Lost Tomb of Jesus'?

Ministerial Message

By Pastor Mark Porinsky
Faith Lutheran Church

Earlier this month the Discovery Channel aired a documentary on 10 ossuaries, or stone caskets, discovered in 1980 in a Jerusalem suburb. It is argued that two of these might have contained the remains of Jesus and His alleged wife, Mary Magdalene, and that the others might have held the bones of His family. One of the caskets is believed to indicate the title, "Judah, son of Jesus."

The first question that comes to my mind: Jesus came from a poor family from up north in Nazareth. Why would He and other family members be buried in middle- to upper-class tombs outside Jerusalem? If the ossuaries were found in Nazareth there might be a reason to take a closer look at them.

Even then, though, there is good reason to believe that Jesus' mother Mary actually died in Ephesus, on the west coast of what is now Turkey.

Besides that, the notion that Jesus and Mary Magdalene were ever involved in a marital relation might have provided some interesting fiction for Dan Brown when he wrote The Da Vinci Code. But it is no more than fiction, and it's amazing that anyone would take it as fact.

Most importantly, the idea that Jesus even had His bones in an ossuary contradicts the Bible's account that Jesus rose physically from the dead and ascended into heaven.

The physical resurrection of Jesus Christ has always been at the heart of the Christian faith. St. Paul wrote in 1 Corinthians 15:14, "If Christ has not been raised, our preaching is useless and so is your faith"; and a few verses later, "If Christ has not been raised, your faith is futile; you are still in your sins. Then those also who have fallen asleep in Christ are lost" (verses 17 & 18).

He was not talking about a "spiritual" resurrection, as many modern scholars insist, but about a physical resurrection of Jesus' body from the grave. The Bible is clear that Jesus' body did not stay in the grave. His bones were never put into an ossuary. If anyone would ever come across Jesus' bones, it would prove that the Christian faith is a fraud.

But no one ever will, because Christ has risen, with His body. Would Jesus' followers have been willing to die for faith in His resurrection, if, as the documentary suggests, they knew His bones were buried in an ossuary and His resurrection was a lie?

Furthermore, these ossuaries were discovered over 25 years ago. Why didn't they make an impact then?

The filmmakers claim that, although all of the individual names on the ossuaries were quite common, statisticians calculated a high improbability of finding a group of ossuaries with this particular cluster of names. I'm not sure about that. But I do know that the probability of someone rising physically from the dead is far less; it's safe to say, that probability is zero.

Either Jesus did or He didn't.

If He did – if His body and bones came out of the grave on Easter Sunday morning – then everything the Bible says about Him is true, and then every human being on this earth is going to have to face Him someday. Then He truly is our God and Savior, the Resurrection and the Life (John 11:25), and He is the only way we can experience immortality and the resurrection of our bodies. This is what Christians will celebrate, without reservation, on Easter Sunday.

Mark Porinsky is the pastor at Faith Lutheran Church, 9575 North Territorial Road, in Dexter.

Chelsea hockey finished its season with a 16-8-2 overall record. The Bulldogs lost to Dexter in the Division III state pre-regional final.

Earlier this month, Chelsea held its end-of-season banquet. Receiving the Brett Poupard Award for hustle and motivation was junior forward Kyle George.

Presented the Most Improved Award was senior defenseman Austin Feeney.

Named the Rookie-of-the-Year for the Bulldogs was freshman forward Drew Brown.

"From top to bottom, this team has been fun to be around," said Chelsea coach Don Wright. "It was a good group. We had a lot of good, young players that contributed."

Individually, senior forward Schyler Williams led the Bulldogs with 28 goals and 22 assists for 50 points.

Senior forward David Maveal had 20 goals and 20 assists for 40 points, while senior defenseman Jake Vaughan had six goals and 23 assists for 29 points.

Bulldogs celebrate successful season

Chelsea's boys' basketball team held its end-of-season banquet earlier this week, capping one of the Bulldogs' most successful years in school history.

The Bulldogs finished the season with an overall record of 23-2. The team's 23 wins are a school record. Chelsea made a school record 139 three-pointers this year, while defensively the Bulldogs held opponents to 45.9 points per game, second all-time to last year's club which held foes to 45.2 points per contest.

Chelsea defeated opponents by a margin of 16.9 points per outing, second all-time to the 2002-03 squad which beat teams by a gap of 17.6 points per game.

The Bulldogs, who won their first 19 games of the year and were ranked as high as No. 2 in the state Class B rankings, captured a Southeastern Conference White Division title and a Class B district championship this season before losing to Detroit Southwestern in the regional final.

Coach Robin Raymond said this season's Chelsea team, which included All-State performers from three different sports, was an athletic, hard-working group.

"We certainly didn't have great size, but we used our quickness to our advantage," he said. "This team played with an air of confidence that very few teams do. They always played with intensity."

Raymond said the Bulldogs passed the ball well all season long.

"The teamwork displayed by this group was unique," he said. "They played with togetherness. They played as a team and used each other's strengths. They were a fun group of kids to work with. This was a special team."

Individually, Nate Schwarze was named MVP of this season's squad. The 5-foot-11 senior point guard, who also earned All-State honors as a wide receiver in football, averaged 15.2 points per game this year. His 46 three-pointers this season are second all-time behind 61 by Sean Davis in 1999-00. His 101 career triples is second only to Davis and his 118

Sweet finish for Chelsea's Mann

By Don Richter
Sports Editor

For relatively small towns, Chelsea and Dexter athletes continue to make their marks on the collegiate and national levels.

At Bowling Green State University, Chelsea's Ali Mann scored 15 points and had four rebounds in the Falcons' 67-49 loss to Arizona State in the NCAA women's basketball tournament Sweet 16 last week at Greensboro, N.C. Behind Mann, a 6-foot-1 forward, BGSU (31-4) is the first Mid-American Conference women's basketball team to reach the Sweet 16.

On March 20, Mann scored 10 points, including a triple with 55 seconds left to seal the Falcons' 59-56 win over No. 2 seeded Vanderbilt in a second round NCAA game in East Lansing.

To begin the tournament, BGSU beat Oklahoma State 70-66 at East Lansing. Mann led the Falcons with a double-double of 16 points and 13 rebounds. The double-double was Mann's 31st of the season. With the win, the Falcons became the first MAC women's team to win 30 games in a season.

For her efforts this year, Mann was named the MAC's co-Player of the Year with Western Michigan's Carrie Moore.

At the University of Michigan, Dexter's Lindsey Smith and Hannah Smith sparked the Wolverines' women's swimming and diving team to a ninth-place finish at the NCAA Championships in Minneapolis March 8 through 10.

Behind the Smith sisters, Michigan earned its first top 10 national finish since 1999.

Individually, Lindsey Smith received All-American honors in five events. The senior finished sixth in the country in the 100 freestyle in 48.93 and seventh in the nation in the 200 freestyle with a time of 1:45.97. She teamed with Hannah Smith to help U-M's 200 freestyle relay placed third in 1:28.80 and 12th in the 800 freestyle relay in 7:11.93. She also anchored the Wolverines' eighth-place 200 medley relay (1:39.37) and the 12th place 400 medley relay (3:38.91).

Chelsea's Ali Mann helped lead Bowling Green's women's basketball team to the Sweet 16.

Hannah Smith earned All-American accolades in two events for U-M. The sophomore standout finished 23rd in the 200 backstroke in 1:58.05, 33rd in the 100 backstroke in 55.15 and 60th in the 50 freestyle in 23.39.

Last month, Lindsey Smith was named Swimmer of the Championships at the Big Ten meet in Minneapolis. She won Big Ten individual titles in the 100 freestyle in 49.04 and the 200 freestyle in 1:46.21. She teamed with Hannah Smith to win Big Ten crowns in the 200 freestyle relay in 1:29.88 and the 400 freestyle relay in 3:20.32. The Wolverines placed second overall with 562 points.

At Hope College, seniors Jacob Holton and Andre Bravo and freshman Jacob Heydlauff helped lead the Flying Dutchmen men's swimming and diving team to a second-place finish in the Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association with a 4-1 record this past season.

Holton was part of Hope's 200 freestyle relay which clocked a season best 1:23.41, placing 10th in the nation at the NCAA Division III meet. Holton was also part of the Dutch 400 freestyle relay which finished 13th at the NCAA final with a season best time of 3:04.76.

As a team, Hope placed 21st in the nation.

Dexter freshman guard Jenny Cowen (5-9) earned a letter as a member of the Flying Dutchmen's women's basketball team this past year. Hope placed second in the MIAA.

Dexter freshman Emily Huddleston is a member of Michigan State University's Novice women's rowing team this spring. A walk-on to the Big Ten squad, Huddleston had never rowed competitively before this season.

At Alma College, Chelsea's Missy Morcom cranked her third home run of the season helping the Scots defeat visiting Defiance College 7-0, 12-0 in a softball doubleheader last Saturday. Alma is 11-7 overall and 2-0 in the MIAA.

At the University of Michigan, Dexter's Lindsay Davis tied for 81st shooting a 247 (75-81-91) at the SunTrust Lady Gator Invitational in Gainesville, Fla. March 11 through 12. A junior, Davis helped lead the Wolverines' women's golf team to a 12th-place finish with a score of 938.

On March 4, Davis finished a team-best sixth with a 150 (77-73) at the Red Rock Invitational in Sedona, Ariz. Behind Davis, U-M placed third in the tournament with a team score of 609.

Also competing on the nine-person Michigan women's golf team is Chelsea senior Julie Inwood.

treys. He averaged 6.7 assists and only 1.8 turnovers per contest. Schwarze's 160 assists this season set a school record, breaking the old mark of 146 set in the 1999-00 season by Tony Scheffler, now in his second year as a tight end with the NFL's Denver Broncos.

Schwarze also set the school record for assists in a game with 12 against Temperance Bedford. His 351 career assists broke a school record set by Jeff Dils (346, 1977-81) that had stood for over 25 years. He had a team-high 64 steals, shot 79 percent from the free throw line and led the squad with 15 charges taken.

"He had a great career," Raymond said. "We brought him up to varsity two-thirds of the way through his freshman season. He's made improvement every year. He truly was a coach on the floor. He understands our system as well as any player we've ever had."

Raymond said Schwarze's strengths were in making his teammates better.

"That's a sign of a good point guard," he said. "He knows what needs to be done and when it needs to be done on the court. We've been spoiled having Nate at the point the past three years."

Earning the Coaches Award for Chelsea was Mike Sauers. The 6-2 senior forward averaged 7.1 points, 3.9 rebounds and 2.2 assists per game. A three-year varsity performer, Sauers, also an All-State soccer player, was a strong inside-outside player for the Bulldogs.

"He has a tremendous work ethic," Raymond said. "He was nonstop in practice and in games."

Named Chelsea's Defensive Player of the Year was Adam Connell. The 5-11 senior guard, also All-State in baseball, averaged 9.1 points per game this season and used his outstanding quickness to force 58 steals. He earned the team's Hatchet Award with 54 fouls. He also received the team's Oil Can Award.

Benny Johnson, a 6-2 post player, was named Most Improved Player.

"That award (Oil Can) goes to the guy that keeps the team loose," Raymond said. "Adam is a fun-loving guy. He has a humorous side to him. He's a unique young man. We will miss his personality."

Receiving the Bulldogs' Most Improved Player Award was Benny Johnson. The 6-2 post player led Chelsea shooting 52 percent from the field this year. He averaged 2.7 points and 2.0 rebounds per game this season.

"He was selected Most Improved by his teammates," Raymond said. "He put in the time to make himself a better player. His off-season work really paid off. He provided toughness and was one of our hardest workers."

While Johnson was one of the Bulldogs' toughest players, Micah Johnson was arguably Chelsea's best all around performer. The 6-2 senior swing player finished the year tied with Schwarze for the team lead in scoring with 15.2 points per game. He also led the Bulldogs with 7.8 rebounds per outing and had 3.2 assists per contest. He led the squad with 379 total points and 193 rebounds this year.

Despite only playing two years for Chelsea after transferring from Jackson Christian, Micah Hudson is third all-time in three-pointers made with 45 and third all-time in career treys with 87.

"He's made tremendous adjustments since coming to Chelsea," Raymond said. "He was a scorer at Jackson Christian. He played the wing position (for Chelsea) and has become a complete basketball player. He's a good defensive player, rebounder and very aggressive on the backboards. He even played in the middle for us this year.

"Our team was better because of the sacrifices Micah made to help the team."

The team's final senior was Jon Seelbach. The 5-10 guard, who was also the Bulldogs' starting quarterback, missed the entire year because of a leg injury suffered during football season.

"Despite his injury, he was there every day at practice," Raymond said. "He was still a very integral part of our team."

Junior forward Greg Rebudela (6-3) finished the season as the squad's blocked shots leader with 26.

Rounding out Chelsea's regular season roster were juniors guard Elliot Marshall (5-5), guard Matt Schwarze (5-9), guard Jeff Adams (5-9) and center Dean Roberts (6-3) and sophomore center Michael Stratman (6-6).

Take steps toward your first run

The following is the first of a five-part series to get you in shape to run your first race. Randy Step, owner of Running Fit in Ann Arbor, will help prepare you for the race. The articles will appear weekly and help get you ready for The Run Fit 5K on May 2 in Novi (see below for more details). So grab your running shoes and start getting in shape for the big run. Send any questions for Randy (or let us know you're joining us) at tjacoby@heritage.com.

By Randy Step

Me, run a race? Are you kidding?

Runners. You see them everywhere. Out there in public – in broad daylight, cruising down the streets, all ages, shapes and sizes. Think you could never be one yourself? Think again!

The major stumbling block to becoming a runner is time. Not in finding time to run, but rather the amount of time that it takes to realize the results of your efforts. It takes about a month for most people to become self-motivated; oftentimes, people give up after a couple weeks because the results come slow. Another problem that many new runners have is that they try to do too much too soon, and end up limping away from the sport.

But, with a specific plan and determination, you can get there. I'll give you the tricks; you give it a month.

Running is an easy entry sport: All you need is a watch and a good pair of shoes. The watch is necessary because time, distance and speed are key to becoming a passionate (or at least, self-motivated) runner. The watch should have a chronograph (stopwatch). These days, even cheap watches have one. The trick there is learning how to work it – don't leave the store until you can start, stop and reset it.

The shoes you should get at your local running shop so they will look at your feet, ask you about your goals and put you in shoes that will keep you injury free. The average price of a great pair of running shoes is around $90, give or take $20.

What should you wear? As a beginning runner you won't be out there long, so you can get away with old sweats and a windbreaker. Just head out into the wind on the way out and even if you get wet and cold you will have a tail wind to get you home. Once you are running longer, you'll want more technical clothing.

So, now it's time for you to start training. Perhaps you waddle a bit on the treadmill already – if so, then good for you! But today, you will start on a more organized training plan. I'll give you a schedule to follow so that each day, you will know exactly what to do in order to be ready on race day. Race day? Yikes!

Many race runners don't actually run the whole way. They run, then walk, then run, then walk ... then walk. They enter races on the weekend just to get out and enjoy the air, and to challenge themselves. Some runners will enter local fun runs and then walk the whole way; others will run and average anywhere from 5 to 20 minutes per mile. Did you know that the average fun-run participant is in the 45-55 age group? Sure, there are some teenagers, but there are plenty more who qualify for that senior discount!

You will fit in, and you won't be last – promise!

Your homework for this week: Run/walk (alternating as needed) for 20 minutes every other day, at least three days this week. Yes, you can run on a treadmill or indoor track, but make sure you get outdoors at least once.

Mom didn't always have the facts

By Bradley C. Barr
Anytime Fitness

Now we all know that getting motivated is one of the first steps to a healthy lifestyle. What's next? How about nutrition and eating habits most of us were taught (by mom) that we need three square meals a day, and they all have to be from the food pyramid.

Now I really don't want to make mom mad, but we need to change that way of thinking. Your body is one of the most complex highly evolved pieces of equipment ever created. So why do we try and run it on junk!

In order to keep your body working at its best, fuel it up five to six times a day (every 2.5 – 3 hours) for most of us, but eat nominal portions. These meals should be made up of the proper balance of fats, carbohydrates and protein depending on your training goals. Try and stay focused on the whole grains, fruits, vegetables and fish or chicken – a licensed dietitian is your best bet here.

Create a diet you can live with, or better yet, one that lives with you, and stick to it. Make sure you drink plenty of water to keep hydrated and help in the digestion process.

I will give you one more great piece of advice: there are no magic pills or special drinks that can melt it off and give you that sought after six pack of abs while you sleep. The only way is to eat right and get at least 30 minutes of physical activity a day on top of your normal activity.

No matter what your goal, whether it's weight loss, massive biceps or just getting more energy for life, check your bad eating habits at the door.

How to deal with a sprained ankle

A sprained ankle is one of the most common joint injuries. It can happen to athletes and non-athletes, adults and adolescents. Sprains happen when the foot twists and the ankle "rolls" beyond its limits stretching ligaments beyond their normal length.

With a greater force applied the ligaments may tear. Resultant pain and swelling occurs. Early treatment of ice, bracing and strengthening is needed for a quick recovery and return to activity.

When an ankle sprain first occurs it is important to discontinue activity and be evaluated by a health care professional, most commonly on site by a certified athletic trainer. The certified athletic trainer can assess the severity of the sprain and recommend seeing your physician for a complete diagnosis of ankle injury (X-ray, MRI, etc.) if necessary.

There are three grades of ankle sprains. Grade 1 is slight stretching and damage to fibers of the ligament. Grade 2 is partial tearing of the ligament (increased laxity on exam). And Grade 3 is complete tearing of the ligament (gross laxity evident on exam).

Symptoms range depending on severity of damage to the ankle structures. Swelling and pain will last 48-72 hours. The principle of R-I-C-E (rest, ice, compression, and elevation) is the most widely used treatment for the Grade 1 ankle sprain. It should be used in the first three days and through out the duration of the sprain. In addition, Nonsteroidal anti-inflammatory drugs (NSAIDS) such as Advil or Motrin, may be used to control the inflammation.

Physical therapy is used to help decrease pain and swelling and prevent chronic problems. Use of modalities such as Ultrasound, electrical stimulation and therapeutic exercises help facilitate the healing process. Rehabilitation consists of range of motion exercises, Aqua therapy and land-based strengthening exercises. Endurance and balance exercises are added to tolerance. When the ankle is pain free, agility, functional and activity specific exercises are added.

To reduce the risk of an ankle sprains, engage in prevention through strengthening, muscle balance, proprioception and flexibility of the ankle and lower leg. Also, an increased awareness of surfaces, proper footwear, proper warm up, and sensing the body's warning signs will aide in reduction of ankle sprains and chronic occurrences. As with any acute injury, it is recommended that a physician do a complete exam as needed.

R-I-C-E

The principle of R-I-C-E (rest, ice, compression, and elevation) is the most widely used treatment for the Grade 1 ankle sprain.

Rest: Non-weight bearing. Use crutches for 1-3 days.

Ice: Applied immediately to reduce swelling and pain. Ice 20 minutes three to four times daily.

Compression: Elastic bandages or Ace-wraps to immobilize and support the ankle.

Elevate: Ankle above the level of the heart in conjunction with ice and compression.

Prom dress exchange

By Sheila Pursglove
Special Writer

Every girl wants to look beautiful for Prom Night – and with the help of the Chelsea District Library, this year's Prom beauties will be stunning!

The library is hosting two hours of teen fashion fun in a "Prom Dress Exchange & Style Night," 6 to 8 p.m., April 19, in the McKune Room of the library, 221 S. Main St. in Chelsea.

"Moms and teens have been talking about having one of these for ages," said Shawn Personke, the library's community relations and development coordinator. "This idea has been talked about for so long, so we're excited to give it a try.

"It's not just for Prom either. If it's a success, we'd like to hold it again in the fall for Homecoming and in January for Winter Carnival.

"We'll have chocolates, cheese and crackers and juice – sparkling to match all the gorgeous dresses. Formals can be very expensive and that's why it's great that they can have a second outing."

The library will have dressing rooms set up with full-length mirrors for the fashion turnout. Teens will have the chance to switch satin for silk, beige for burgundy, and much more.

"All types of formal dresses can be dropped off anytime in the next few weeks, preferably by April 17," Personke said. "We're having a couple donated by the department stores and we're starting to get a nice selection of beaded dresses, short dress, long dresses, pastels and other colors.

"It's just a great way to give those beautiful dresses another wearing and a great opportunity to donate some of those beautiful formals that are taking up valuable closet space, too.

"While the ideal situation is that 'you bring one – you take one home' for free, if girls need a dress but don't necessarily have one to swap that will be OK, too."

Mike Jackson from Vogel's and Foster's will bring a couple of tuxes and have his complete catalog there for people to peruse.

Nancy Benjamin, a senior consultant for Mary Kay, will do makeup demonstrations, give tips and have free samples. The Body Shop at Home will be on hand with all the latest hand and nail tips and products.

Sandy Redmond and Theresa Broderick from Gemini Hair Salon will bring Chelsea High School "models" with stylish "Updo's" already done, and will style hair for more girls during the dress exchange.

In addition, there will be a raffle with products donated by Gemini, including hair care products, body lotion and make-up, and a gift card for a May 5 60-minute spa pedicure, 30-minute French manicure, 60-minute scalp massage followed by a prom updo, and a 30-minute make-up application. Gemini is also donating a gift card for the lucky winner's prom date to receive a free haircut and style.

Broderick said she and her twin sister Lisa Preston love the fact that community organizations and groups ask Gemini to participate.

"Lisa and I, along with our wonderful staff, share in the passion to give back to our community and the surrounding communities," Broderick said.

"We love the new library and all that it is doing for the community. This is a great idea for parents and high school kids."

Chelsea High School student Kelly Maveal is working with the library to help organize the event.

"I think it's great that the library is thinking about us. I hope a lot of girls take advantage of being able to get a free dress," Kelly said. "Even if you already have a dress, it will be fun to have someone there with ideas and samples on make-up, hair styles, and nails."

For more information, call the library at 475-8732.

Education

Preparation key to SAT success

For high school students preparing for college, the SAT is undoubtedly the most important test they will take.

"America's colleges regard the test as the most researched and respected test in the admissions process. All college-bound students should take the SAT because it increases your chances of getting into, and could even help you gain acceptance into colleges you previously would not have considered or qualified for," said Jim Montoya, Vice President of Higher Education Assessments at the College Board, a not-for-profit association that administers the test. "It opens the door to more options and opportunities."

With a seemingly endless array of test preparation information available, students can feel bombarded with options. But preparation doesn't have to be a hassle.

Montoya says students should prepare for the test as early as possible and take the preliminary SAT, known as the PSAT/NMSQT, during their sophomore or junior year. Students should also familiarize themselves with the test by taking practice tests. The College Board SAT Readiness Program offers free or low-cost materials to students preparing for the exam, including actual test questions from previous years. The program even offers a free SAT question each day for practice.

"I practiced on all the old official SATs, so when test day came, I was so comfortable, it was like second-nature to me," said Darlene Roygulchareon, a high school senior who was accepted to her first choice, The University of Maryland.

The College Board SAT Readiness program provides test-taking suggestions like answering easier questions first and not rushing to answer every question. Since wrong answers in the multiple choice sections lower your score, a better strategy is to omit questions that you don't know the answer to.

Being mentally ready for the test is also important. A good night's sleep, knowing the best route to the test center and having all your materials ready the day before can make test day run smoothly.

While the SAT is important, students need to keep the test in perspective, which is what colleges do.

"Colleges look at your overall record - high school grades, extracurricular activities, teacher recommendations, essays and other materials you submit in the application process, so don't put too much undue pressure on yourself with the SAT," Montoya said.

Be sure to check registration dates and register on time at www.collegeboard.com.

The Arts

Help wanted

Chelsea Center for the Arts seeks your help

Are you interested in sharing your ideas on how Chelsea's arts and cultural community could better serve you or your child? Are you an artist interested in training on trends in promotion or the opportunity to meet with other artists to discuss shared issues? Or do you represent an arts and cultural organization that could use technical assistance or would benefit from collaboration and partnerships? Are you a business owner interested in talking with others about how the arts can attract new customers? If you answered yes to any of these questions the Chelsea Center for the Arts (CCA) wants your input.

The CCA has announced a community arts and culture planning project that kicks off in April 2007 to help the organization evaluate its mission and priorities for the arts and music programs that it offers to the Chelsea community and surrounding area.

"In these challenging economic times, it is ever more critical that we carefully listen to the people that we serve and seek to serve," said Jennifer Goulet, CCA Executive Director. "We're seeking constructive input – both negative and positive – to help us direct our limited resources toward programs and services in a way that maximizes benefits to our community."

The project encompasses two components: an online survey and a series of focus groups to be held in mid-April. Information and feedback compiled during this phase of the project will be compiled for consideration by the CCA Board of Directors and staff at a planning retreat this summer. The information will guide the Center in its process of re-evaluating its mission, goals and priorities as part of a strategic plan update for the next three to five years.

The Center hopes that community members will take a few minutes to share their thoughts by taking an online survey – a process that should only take 15 minutes to complete. There are three versions of the survey including one for the general community, one for individual artists, and one for representatives of arts and cultural organizations. All responses will be kept strictly anonymous but will offer the Center valuable information to help shape its future programs and services. The online survey is available via a link from the CCA's website at www.chelseacenterforthearts.org or copies may be obtained by calling the Center at 734-433-2787. The deadline for submission of survey responses is April 30, 2007.

Focus groups

The CCA also will host a series of community focus groups on Monday, April 16 through Wednesday, April 18 in an effort to provide key stakeholder groups in the community with an opportunity to share more detailed perspectives, ideas and insights into the role of the CCA in Chelsea. The focus groups sessions will be facilitated by an objective outside consultant, Alison Loveday, Program Coordinator for ArtServe Michigan, a non-profit arts and cultural organization offering leadership, education and advocacy services for communities, artists and arts and cultural groups across the state.

The focus groups will be held at the Chelsea Center for the Arts (400 Congdon Street) and at the McKune Memorial Library – McKune Room (221 N. Main Street). Registration is not required and the sessions are free and open to the public. The focus group schedule is as follows:

Monday, April 16: General public 7 to 9 p.m., Chelsea Center for the Arts

Tuesday, April 17: Students/parents, 8:30 to 10 a.m. McKune Room; Arts and cultural organizations, 10:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., McKune Room; Public and institutional , 1 to 2:30 p.m., McKune Room; Individual artists, 3 to 5 p.m., McKune Room; General public, 7 to 9 p.m., Chelsea Center for the Arts

Wednesday, April 18: Business, 8:30 to 10 a.m., McKune Room; Individual artists, 10:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., McKune Room; Arts and cultural organizations, 1 to 3 p.m., McKune Room; Students and parents, 3:30 to 5 p.m., McKune Room.

This project is supported in part by a $19,000 Local Arts Agency Services grant from the Michigan Council for the Arts and Cultural Affairs for 2007. An important part of this project is to gain input from individual artists and arts and cultural organizations on whether there is a role for the CCA in providing supportive services for the artistic community.

"With the ever-tightening economy, the timing is right to explore whether there is an appropriate role for the Center in serving and nurturing the local creative community – through shared communication, technical assistance, education, collaborative ventures such as promotion or fundraising, or other services geared to strengthen local artists and arts/cultural groups," Goulet said. "But it's important that we take the time to listen to these constituents to confirm that such services and outreach would be relevant," Goulet added.

The project also complements a countywide cultural planning initiative that will be led by the Arts Alliance of the Ann Arbor Area for Washtenaw County. Insights gained in the Chelsea project will provide important information for the Arts Alliance as it works to develop a long-range cultural plan for the County. While the Chelsea project focuses on the future role of the CCA, valuable information will be collected on local arts and cultural trends and needs.

"We are committed to sharing the results of our community survey and dialogue with the Arts Alliance in support of their effort to develop a plan of action to connect and strengthen the County's rich cultural resources," Goulet said.

Goulet also noted, that input from constituents in the communities that surround Chelsea also is critical to the success of the project.

"We hope that people in Dexter, Manchester, Saline, Ann Arbor, Jackson, Stockbridge, Grass Lake and other neighboring communities will share their ideas, too," Goulet said. "We are interested in feedback from artists, arts and cultural groups and the general public in the region so that we can evaluate our future goals and priorities within a regional context."

Special incentive

As a special incentive to encourage people to participate in this project, the CCA will be offering free tickets to upcoming Music Celebration concert events. Names of persons participating in focus groups or the online survey will also be entered into a drawing to receive two free tickets to the May 18th concert featuring Josh White, Jr. and Ron Coden – a Raven Gallery reunion and for the June 23rd concert featuring pianist Lester Castellana and vocalist Lisa Hinz-Johnson.

For more information on this project and how you can be involved, contact the Chelsea Center for the Arts at 734-433-2787 or by email at info@chelseacenterforthearts.org. Or visit the Center's website at www.chelseacenterforthearts.org for links to the online survey. Take part for the arts!

MAJOR WEIGHT LOSS BREAKTHROUGH

Rare vegetable reduces the pot belly, waist, hips, BMI, and weight without changing your diet or physical activity

By Jennifer Kennedy, Media Services

BioTech Research® has announced a new food supplement made from a rare vegetable which is brand named Bio SpeedSLIM™.

Bio SpeedSLIM™ provides weight loss without changing your diet or physical activity. It significantly reduces the pot belly, waist, hips, BMI (Body Mass Index) and weight.

Unlike old style weight loss methods, you will not experience hunger, hunger pangs, cravings, and headaches. And, unlike diet pills which can contain strong stimulants, you will not get the jitters or have problems sleeping.

Clinical studies show you do not have to change your eating habits or activity to lose weight with Bio SpeedSLIM™. Bio SpeedSLIM™ is not a diet pill. It is a natural food supplement. Unlike diet pills, Bio SpeedSLIM™ works 4 ways to help you lose weight.

Bio SpeedSLIM™ automatically controls overeating without you even knowing it. Food still tastes great and you will thoroughly enjoy eating meals. And you eat until you're full and satisfied. But Bio SpeedSLIM™ will automatically stop you from overeating by helping control overeating control mechanisms in the body. You don't have to go through the work and pain of a calorie counting diet. And you don't have to go through the work and pain of doing a new strenuous physical activity.

Bio SpeedSLIM™ also helps reduce the formation of excess fat in the body and promotes the burning of excess fat. It also helps the body build lean body mass. Muscle is what burns most of the calories in your body. The more muscle you have, the more calories you will burn, and the faster you will lose weight.

Bio SpeedSLIM™ is all-natural and safe. The active ingredients come from a remarkable rare vegetable. People in Asia have been using it for hundreds of years to improve health and relieve pain. It was recently found in scientific studies to produce weight loss without diet or activity change.

For more details on the remarkable new ultimate food supplement capsule, Bio SpeedSLIM™, here is my interview with Chief of Research and Development for BioTech Research, John Whitakre.

Q. How was Bio SpeedSLIM™ developed?

A. There is a rare vegetable called caralluma fimbriata which grows in Asia. It has very powerful health benefits. But, it was recently discovered that it also had powerful weight loss benefits.

Clinical studies conducted on caralluma fimbriata showed that it controlled overeating without hunger, hunger pangs, and cravings, and also did 3 other things to promote fast weight loss.

The caralluma fimbriata does not contain any stimulants that can leave you jittery or cause sleep problems. You also fully enjoy your food when you eat and food tastes great. And, you eat until you are full and satisfied.

Natives of Asia say that caralluma fimbriata helps relieve their ailments, provides them with much better health, and helps relieve pain. Future clinical studies are being planned to verify these benefits.

Natives of Asia call the caralluma fimbriata plant "a gift from God."

Q. Is it similar to hoodia?

A. No, it is totally different than hoodia.

Q. Can anyone take Bio SpeedSLIM™ and can they take it if they are on prescription drugs?

A. Yes, anyone, no matter what your physical condition or what prescription drug you are on, can take Bio SpeedSLIM™ safely without bad side effects. It is a food from a healthy vegetable.

Q. How did you get a bulky vegetable into a capsule?

A. There are a number of active ingredients in the caralluma fimbriata vegetable. Natives of Asia usually eat about 100 grams (about 3 ounces) of the vegetable to get results. However, it was found in chemical analysis that the active ingredients only constitute 1 gram of the 100 grams.

Therefore, a patented method was developed to extract the active ingredients. The caralluma fimbriata extract (CFE) was then subjected to chemical analysis and clinical studies to show effectiveness. These analysis and studies showed that CFE affected weight loss in four different ways.

1. It controls overeating without hunger, hunger pangs, and cravings;
2. It inhibited the formation of excess body fat;
3. It promoted the burning of stored excess body fat; and
4. It promoted gain in lean body mass.

Q. What kind of results were obtained from the clinical studies?

A. There have been a number of clinical studies done on both the safety and effectiveness of CFE. The clinical studies on the safety of CFE showed no adverse side effects. Actually, the best safety study was done by Asian natives for hundreds of years which showed not only no adverse side effects, but, actual health improvements.

The most remarkable clinical studies showed that 83.3% of the people who did not change their diet or physical activity in any way reduced their waist, hips, BMI, and weight in significant amounts over the placebo group. Case studies were also conducted. In the case study results, 89.5% of the test subjects reduced their pot belly, waist, hips, BMI and weight.

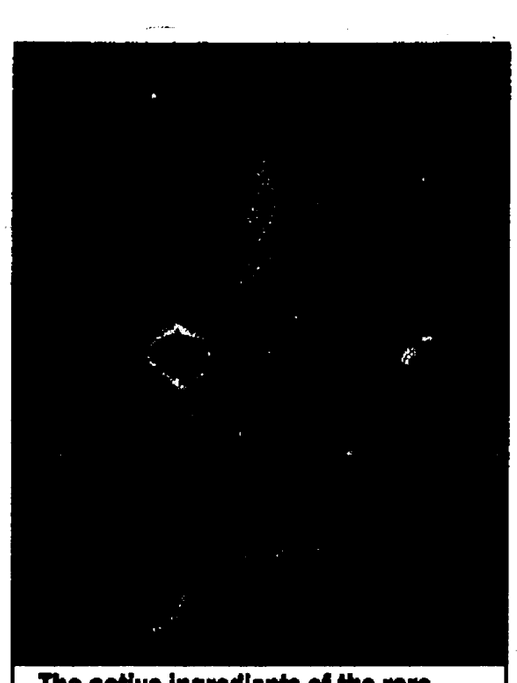
The clinical and case study test subjects who took the CFE reported no hunger, no hunger pangs, no cravings, and they said they had much more energy, and never felt better in their lives.

Q. How can readers get Bio SpeedSLIM™?

A. The vegetable and the extraction process are very expensive. And, right now it is in limited supply, so there is not enough inventory to stock store shelves across the country. Presently readers can order from BioTech Research. And readers who order within the next 10 days can get a major discount.

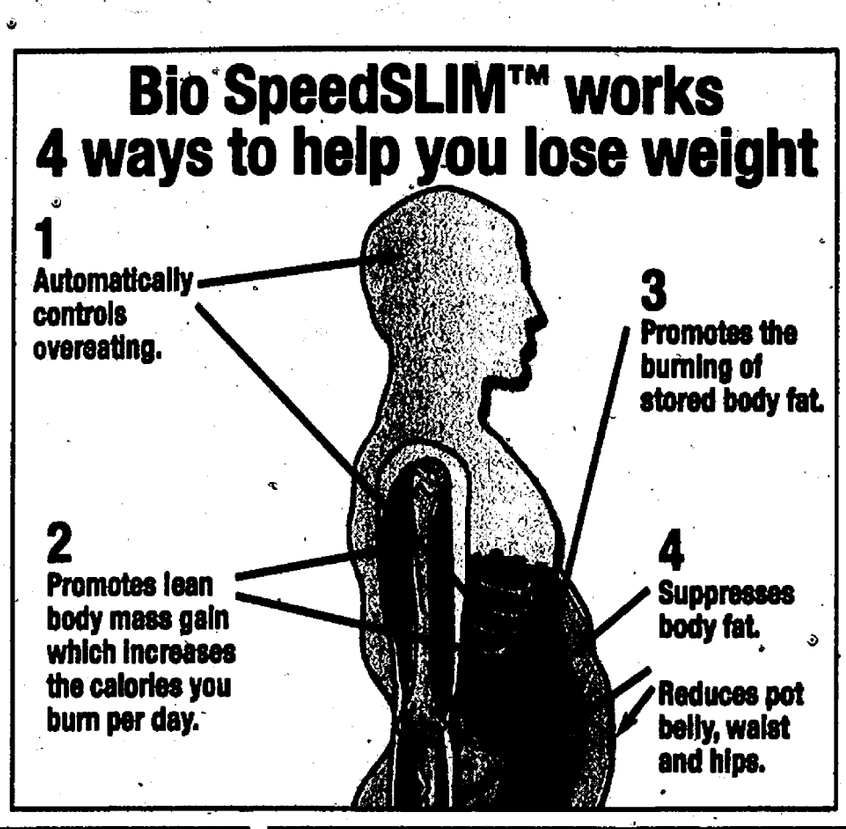
End of interview.

For readers who want to obtain a 30-day supply of Bio SpeedSLIM™ at a $10 discount plus free shipping and handling if they order in 2 days, please see the Special Reader's Discount Coupon on this page.

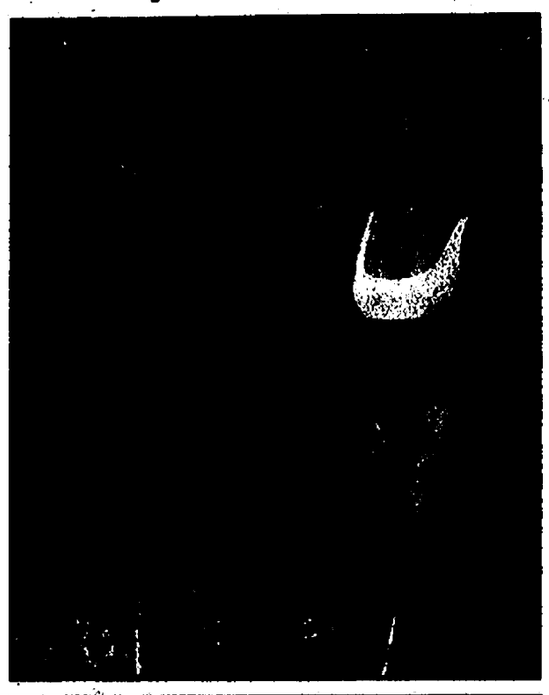


The active ingredients of the rare vegetable caralluma fimbriata were put into a food supplement capsule Bio SpeedSLIM™.

Bio SpeedSLIM™ works 4 ways to help you lose weight



The end result is a flat belly and slim body that is firm and toned.



CASE STUDIES

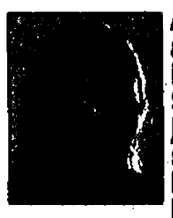
Conducted by Fitness RX in Canton, OH

Case studies were conducted for 4 weeks. Some subjects continued on their own after 4 weeks. There were a total of 19 case study test subjects. Case study subjects were instructed not to change their diet or physical activity in any way. Summary results: 89.5% of the subjects reduced their pot belly, waist, hips, BMI and weight. The range of BMI decrease was 2.5 to 0 with an average of .9107. The range of inches lost in the hips was 3.14" to .397" with an average loss of 1.799". The range of inches lost in the waist was 5" to +.39" with an average of 1.59". The range of weight loss was 20 lbs. to 1 lb. with an average weight loss of 7.97 lbs.

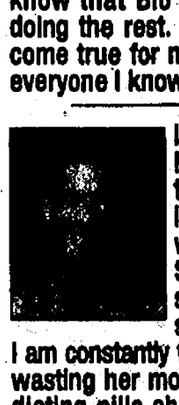
Personal testimonies of four of the case study subjects are provided below.

I used Bio SpeedSLIM™ in a case study. I wanted to say thank you and to let you know that I am having great success with this product. I lost 15 lbs. in 6 weeks. I continued 2 weeks after the case study. I was kind of skeptical of everything Bio SpeedSLIM™ could do for me but I wanted to try it anyway. I did not go on a diet. I just continued with my days as normal, eating what I normally eat. I noticed a change in my body the first week. I knew Bio SpeedSLIM™ was working when I put my tight jeans on right out of the dryer and they were loose. This is the magic capsule I have been waiting for. I made absolutely no changes in my diet. It's incredible. I have no desire to eat out of control and I have no hunger pangs. Thanks again! Tanya Engle

My husband and I took Bio SpeedSLIM™ in a case study for 4 weeks and continued for 2 months. We are so happy with the results we are having. Together we have lost 40 lbs. and reduced our pot belly, waist and hips. We really had no great expectations because we have tried so many diet pills and didn't lose the weight they promised we would. We also have 3 young children so dieting in our home is not something we do. My husband and I did not diet at all and we found that Bio SpeedSLIM™ really was working. We are so amazed. Our friends ask us what diet we are on and we tell them we're not on any diet. We are just taking Bio SpeedSLIM™. They couldn't believe it. So they ordered Bio SpeedSLIM™ and are also having great results. I will speak for myself and my husband and say this is the greatest product we have ever taken and thank you so much. Sincerely, Jennifer Mears



About 4 weeks ago I started taking Bio SpeedSLIM™ as a subject in a case study. I LOVE IT! I have lost 3 inches off my waist without doing a crazy diet. I eat when I want to and eat whatever I want to and I'm losing inches in my waist and hips. It doesn't make my heart race like other diet plans and I can take it at night. With Bio SpeedSLIM™ I'm no longer struggling. I can eat whatever I want and know that Bio SpeedSLIM™ is doing the rest. This is a dream come true for me. I want to tell everyone I know! Julie Jones



I am 40 years old. My wife told me that she was having great results with Bio SpeedSLIM™ as a case study subject and suggested I try it. I am constantly telling her she is wasting her money on all of the dieting pills she has tried over the past few years. She explained why Bio SpeedSLIM™ is not a diet pill and how it worked. I was skeptical but I did start taking Bio SpeedSLIM™ as part of the case study for 4 weeks and continued for 8 weeks. Within the first week of taking Bio SpeedSLIM™ I noticed I wasn't having cravings throughout the day anymore. I was full and satisfied when I ate. I eat the same foods I always have. I don't have cravings or hunger any more. I have lost 18 pounds in just under two months. I lost my pot belly and I'm down to a 33 waist from a 38. I have more energy throughout the day and now I feel like age 40 is just the beginning. I am very appreciative of your product. Sincere gratitude, Devin Christopher

Clinical Trial By Dr. Ronald Lawrence, Western Geriatric Research Institute

Encino, California

Active compound was Caralluma Fimbriata extract, the active ingredient in Bio SpeedSLIM®.

This study was conducted for four weeks. Patients were instructed not to change their daily activity pattern (exercise), or their food intake. They were told not to change their diet in any way from the preceding four weeks before they began taking the substance.

RESULTS AND SUMMARY

The study was conducted with 26 patients. Nineteen patients were on the active compound and 7 were on placebo. One patient from each category did not show up for the final visit. Almost every patient taking the active ingredient lost significant weight. There was almost no weight loss observed in patients on placebo.

Out of 18 patients, 15 patients (83.33%) lost weight. Eleven patients (61.11%) lost about six pounds. The highest loss was nine pounds. Four patients lost one to two pounds, and two patients maintained their starting weight. One patient gained 17 pounds. This patient was found not to comply with the regimen that was requested, and indeed increased caloric consumption over the four weeks.

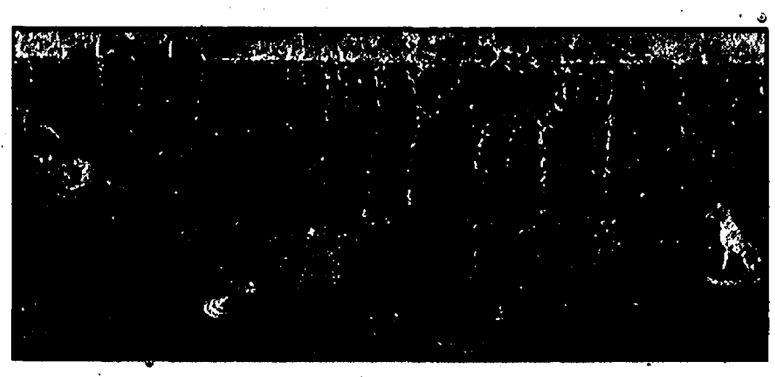
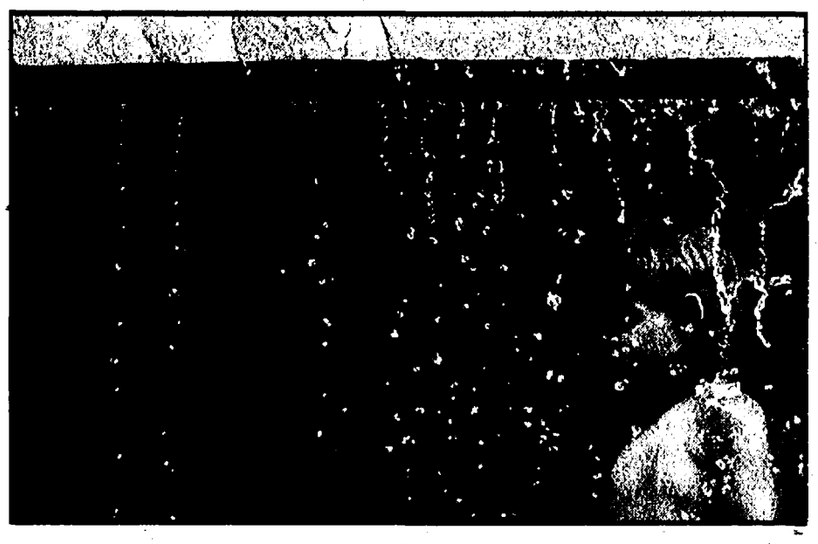
Ann Arbor Women Artists

Margaret Davis will be the program speaker at 7:30 p.m. on April 16 for Ann Arbor Women Artists at the Ann Arbor Art Center, 117 W. Liberty, Ann Arbor. Davis is an associate professor of painting at Eastern Michigan University and is represented by the River Gallery in Chelsea. This program is free and open to the public. Attendees should enter from the Ashley Street parking lot rear door. The program is on the second floor.





New WCC exhibition focuses on environmental destruction

The third in the installation series at GalleryOne at Washtenaw Community College raises issues surrounding environmental destruction. Artist Ann Savageau has created "At the Crossroads," which runs through April 27 in GalleryOne, first floor of the Student Center Building.

"All of us are deeply implicated in global warming and the environmental destruction that accelerates every year. As we go about our daily lives, our choices have global consequences that we may not even realize. This installation is my attempt at making a difference by raising awareness of these vital issues," says Savageau.

Some of the elements of the exhibition are "footprints," which are represented by the shoe soles, which themselves require a great many resources to make, and then are discarded in a relatively short time. The tire shards, collected from a California landfill, some of their components eventually leach out into the surrounding soil and underground water supply. Tires also represent the very heavy ecological footprint of the automobile on our planet.

The tumbleweed has long been an icon for the American West, yet surprisingly, they are an invasive species that is native to Russia. They are prolific seed spreaders, and they crowd out native plants. Other resources used are bones from livestock and humans, and cotton, which use 25 percent of the world's pesticides.

The exhibition culminates with images of frogs. Environmentalists use frogs as a bell, wether species, understanding that their health is a barometer of the general health of our environment. Frog populations around the world have been plummeting.

Savageau earned a Master of Fine Arts in textiles at Wayne State University. She taught studio art in 2-D Design, Fibers, Mixed Media, Sculpture and Visual Thinking and Creativity at the Residential College, University of Michigan from 1978 to 2002.

GalleryOne is free and open to the public. The hours are: Monday and Tuesday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., Wednesday and Thursday 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. and Friday 10 a.m. to Noon. For more information please call (734) 477-8512 or visit www.wccnet.edu/galleryone.

Ways to fool your friends on April 1

Every April, the world's pranksters revel in a day that is especially set aside for their antics. Class clowns rejoice and practical jokers sit up and take notice because April Fool's Day was made for the homespun comedian ... or was it?

There is no definitive date when April Fool's Day, sometimes referred to as All Fool's Day, was first observed. Some historians believe that it was a day that collectively caught on by word of mouth, having been indirectly celebrated throughout Europe.

April Fools is perhaps best linked to original celebrations of the new year. In the past, the new year was celebrated on or about April 1st, or as spring ushered in a season of rebirth. However, when the calendar was reformed and the Gregorian calendar was introduced, it was decided that the new year would be marked on January 1st instead of during the spring.

During this time, well before the advent of the Internet, Federal Express or telephones, messages traveled quite slowly on foot, and some people were unaware of the calendar shift for several years, continuing to celebrate the new year in the spring. Other stubborn people simply refused to adopt the new calendar and chose to still celebrate on April 1st. The masses labeled these people "fools" and they were often ridiculed. Some were sent on "fools errands" or invited to fetes that weren't actually taking place.

Over time this mean-spirited harassment evolved into a tradition of light-hearted prank-playing among the general populace. Some believe April Fool's Day originated in England and Scotland, with each having their own spin on the practical jokes. Eventually the "holiday" was brought over to America with early settlers. Thereafter, April Fool's Day expanded to become an international day of revelry and fun. Different nations have branded their own sense of humor on the day.

Classic Foolery

If you need some fun, family-friendly ideas for pranks, look no further. These are guaranteed to get a laugh, courtesy of family fun:

1. Serious Spill

- disposable coffee cup or ceramic mug
- glue
- brown puff paint
- waxed paper

If you are using a disposable cup with a lid, glue the lid on the cup and have the pour spout open.

Mix equal parts of the glue and puff paint until the color is the desired shade for coffee, hot chocolate or melted ice cream.

Pour about a tablespoon of the mixture onto waxed paper, set the tipped-over cup into it, and then pour another one to two tablespoons on and in front of the mug's lip or cup's sipping hole.

Let it dry (up to a week) and then peel off the waxed paper. Leave the cup on a computer keyboard, on the floor, or wherever you think it will get a reaction.

2. Dastardly Dandruff

To have Mom, Dad or friends grossed out, pour regular table salt on your head and complain of an itchy scalp. Upon inspection, people will be in horror to find a head full of "dandruff." Expect a trip to take a shower afterward.

3. Dessert Dinner

Kids often scoff at eating vegetables, but by arranging peanut butter log candies (to look like chicken nuggets), peas and carrots candies (to look like the real thing) and a scoop of vanilla ice cream with butterscotch sauce (to mimic mashed potatoes and gravy), the family will certainly be in for a sweet surprise.

4. No-Cake Cupcakes

Don't mistakenly serve these faux cupcakes to vegetarians!

Use this recipe or your favorite to make a meat loaf mix.

Meat Loaf
1 pound lean ground beef
1/2 cup seasoned bread crumbs
1 cup grated Monterey Jack cheese
3 tablespoons ketchup
1 egg
1/2 teaspoon celery salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
Potato Frosting
3 cups mashed potatoes
Food coloring

Heat the oven to 375 F. Line 12 muffin tin cups with foil bake cups.

In a large bowl, mix together all of the meat loaf ingredients until well combined. Divide the mixture evenly among the lined cups (the liners should be about three quarters full).

Place the filled muffin tins on cookie sheets and bake the cupcakes for about 15 minutes or until cooked through. Divide the mashed potatoes among three small bowls and stir a few drops of food coloring into each batch to create blue, yellow, and pink pastel frostings. Spread a generous dollop on each "cupcake."

HRWC program a fun way to learn

The HRWC (Huron River Watershed Council) offers a unique program on April 21.

A "searcher" trained in the ways of the river will lead guests to find rare river macroinvertebrates, also known as bugs. The "searcher" handles the stream work, so everyone else stays dry.

Register before April 9 and be placed on a team in HRWC's annual River Roundup.

You help a study of nature because the aquatic macroinvertebrates are sensitive to environmental conditions and tell us about problems in the river and its streams.

No previous experience necessary and children are welcome if accompanied by an adult.

The program takes about six hours and you may choose from two starting times on April 21: 9 or 10:30 a.m. To register contact Joan Martin jmartin@hrwc.org or call 1-734-769-5123 (ext. 11).

The Huron River Watershed Council is the first and oldest river protection group in Michigan. Founded in 1965 as a public, non-profit organization, the Council is a coalition of Huron Valley residents, businesses and local governments established under Michigan's Local River Management Act. Since its formation, the Council has grown to be a respected voice for protection of the Huron River and its tributary streams, lakes wetlands and groundwater.

Create 'Egg'ceptional Easter eggs

Easter egg coloring is one of the well-known traditions associated with the holiday. Coloring eggs can be fun for children and adults alike.

As with many Christian holidays, some of the traditions associated with Easter are rooted in prior Pagan rituals or are influenced by European settlers to North America. Easter is a spring holiday, and spring is synonymous with fertility and new life. Eggs are thus linked to the festivities because of their connection to fertility.

What's more, according to History.com, German settlers in America are said to have brought over the tradition of a bunny named "Oschter Haws" who would visit houses on Easter eve, leaving colored eggs for children.

Easter eggs were painted different colors to represent the sunlight of spring. Christians later used eggs to symbolize the rebirth of Christ.

For those who will be incorporating the magic of colored eggs in their festivities this year, there are several ways to adorn the eggs that go above and beyond the traditional coloring kits. Here are a few ideas to consider.

1. The well-known Paas coloring kit still remains a classic favorite, replete with dipping spoons and colored packets. Many companies have put their own spins on the coloring kit to include a brighter array of colors and even stickers and other embellishments.

2. There are shrink-wrap kits that feature plastic rings that shrink into place when the eggs are boiled. The rings are imprinted with an Easter design.

3. You can make your own egg dye with the following recipe: Combine 1/2 to 1 tablespoon of food coloring with 2 teaspoons white vinegar in a cup that can accommodate an egg. Add water to about the half-way point. Dip in the eggs with a spoon to color.

4. Tie-dye eggs can be created by wrapping rubber bands around eggs before dipping them into the dye. Remove the rubber bands after the dye has dried and see the designs that have resulted.

5. A similar technique can be achieved by using wax crayons and dye. Color designs onto the egg with the crayons, such as dots, lines or squiggles. When the eggs are dipped in the dye, the crayon will repel the dye and leave the designs in place.

Those who don't want to use dye with very young children can simply color in the eggs with the crayons.

6. 'Egg'stra special designs can be made by using craft supplies to adorn the eggs. Make cute egg people or animals to display. How about an Easter bunny complete with cotton ball tail? Scour the craft store for stick-on jiggle eyes, fuzzy noses and more.

7. You can use regular acrylic paint to brush or sponge on designs. For safety's sake, don't eat any eggs that use a dye other than a natural food coloring.

8. Food and beverages can be used to create natural dyes. Boil eggs with beets, spinach, tea, blueberries and more to create the colors desired.

9. Use your imagination and rely on just about anything to make eggs dazzling. Glitter, markers, paints, stickers and so much more can help you to create one-of-a-kind eggs.

Hard-boil know-how

Of course eggs need to be hard-boiled before decorating. Place your eggs in a pot filled with cold water, covering the eggs. On medium-high heat, bring the water to a boil. Reduce the heat and simmer the eggs for approximately 10 minutes. Place the boiled eggs in cold water to cool before coloring.

Kevin Hogan returns to staff of growing Milan dealership

By Mike Schaffer
Heritage Newspapers

MILAN — Kevin Hogan shares the same last name as legendary golfer Ben Hogan, so it isn't surprising to learn that he spent 15 years selling golf equipment all over the state.

However, for the last six years, Hogan has been hitting them straight down the fairway as an auto salesman. He recently joined Randy Wise Chevrolet Buick Pontiac dealership at 1250 Dexter St., but — like a good golfer — he knows the course, or dealership, layout very well since he spent his first three years as a salesman at the same dealership under a previous owner.

"I was persuaded with all the good things that are going on here to come back to this dealership," Hogan said. "This dealership offers Chevrolets, Buicks and Pontiacs, so that's another reason I came back here because now I can sell more than just Chevrolet products."

Hogan worked at the same dealership when it was owned by Phillips Automotive, so he has spent his entire six-year career selling General Motors' products. He said the current owners of the dealership are above par when it comes to customer service.

RANDY WISE CHEVROLET BUICK PONTIAC
1250 Dexter St.
Milan, MI 48160

- OWNER: Randy Wise
- EMPLOYEES: 35
- HOURS: 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Mondays and Thursdays; 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Fridays; 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturdays.
- INFO: Call 1-734-439-3500 or visit www.randywiseauto.com.

Hogan, one of seven experienced sales reps at Randy Wise Chevrolet Buick Pontiac, also credits GM for lowering its vehicle prices in January 2006 when it introduced value pricing to help dealerships, and the company, make a dramatic comeback.

"An Impala that was selling for $24,000 two years ago is now selling for $21,900," he said. "That's starting to kick in where people are understanding the pricing structure and you're getting more features for less money.

"The vehicles are really phenomenal now, so our challenge is standing out in the crowd because there are so many GM dealers. Once word spreads that people are being taken care of here at Randy Wise and are getting great deals here, it helps business."

The dealership is part of the Randy Wise Automotive Team, which allows it to help customers purchase vehicles from other Randy Wise locations, including Randy Wise Ford of Ortonville, Randy Wise Lincoln-Mercury-Hyundai of Flint, Randy Wise Buick GMC of Fenton and Randy Wise Chevrolet of Flint.

Hogan lives in Harper Woods and he has customers from throughout the region.

"In fact, I'm delivering a car to a lady from my church on Saturday," he said.

"This dealership really goes out of its way to have the personal touch and to take care of its customers. We make sure that people are treated fairly and honestly. Our service department goes way out of its way to make sure people are satisfied."

Kevin Hogan feels right at home in the Randy Wise Chevrolet Buick Pontiac showroom since he is beginning his second stint at the Milan dealership after being there for three years earlier in his career. However, the former golf equipment salesman says the dealership's current owners are way above par when it comes to customer service.

That type of attitude helps keep Randy Wise getting good marks on its customers' scorecards, Hogan said.

"There are actually a lot of similarities between selling cars and golf clubs," he added. "But for me, it has always come down to how you treat people.

"When you have a great product, like we do, it comes down to providing great service and a great price. I always try to treat the customer the way I would want to be treated or how I would treat my family and friends."

Introducing The 'Royal Paulownia'...

It's one of the most incredible sights in all of nature! A huge flowering shade tree that rockets forth so fast, and umbrellas itself so wide—you need a yardstick to measure its growth in feet from week to week! It's like growing 'instant shade'! And that's only half the magic. The real show-stopping, 'magazine cover' effect takes place when it smothers itself in massive bouquets of breathtaking lavender-blue blooms... like an entire flower garden growing in the sky.

GROWS IN VIRTUALLY ANY SOIL. NEEDS NO BABYING, NO SPECIAL CARE. HARDY TO 30° BELOW!

Best of all it's work free. Just a sprinkle a week sends it soaring from a sapling to a roof-high tree IN JUST ONE YEAR! Turns even the barest spot into shaded 'Garden of Eden'. BUT SUPPLIES ARE STILL EXTREMELY LIMITED—SO ACT NOW!

ANNOUNCING THE FIRST PRESIDENTIAL COIN COLLECTION IN U.S. HISTORY

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

The United States has started to issue a remarkable new series of official U.S. coinage: a collection honoring former U.S. Presidents.

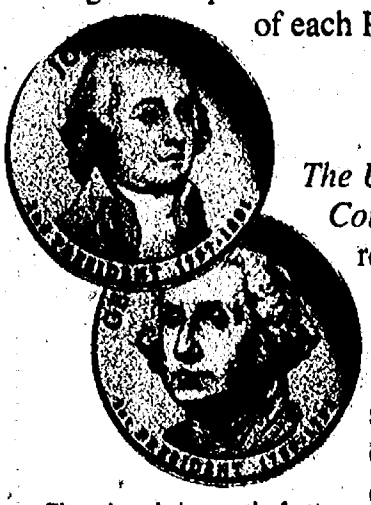
Authorized by Congress and signed into law by the President, an extraordinary new coin series is being issued to honor our U.S. Presidents. Each coin will feature the portrait of a different U.S. President on the front and the Statue of Liberty on the back.

The new coins will be issued in the sequence in which the Presidents served. Each design will be minted for a limited time. Therefore, collectors face an especially difficult challenge assembling a complete set of these new $1 coins.

COLLECTOR PANELS CAN BE RESERVED NOW.

In conjunction with this historic coin series, a special set of Collector Panels bearing these magnificent Presidential coins is being issued by PCS. This unique series will include one Panel for each honored President. Each coin will be protectively encased and viewable from either side.

Also displayed on each Panel will be two mint-condition U.S. stamps related to the featured President. A full-color portrait, biographical narrative, and a distinguished quote will enhance your appreciation of each President.



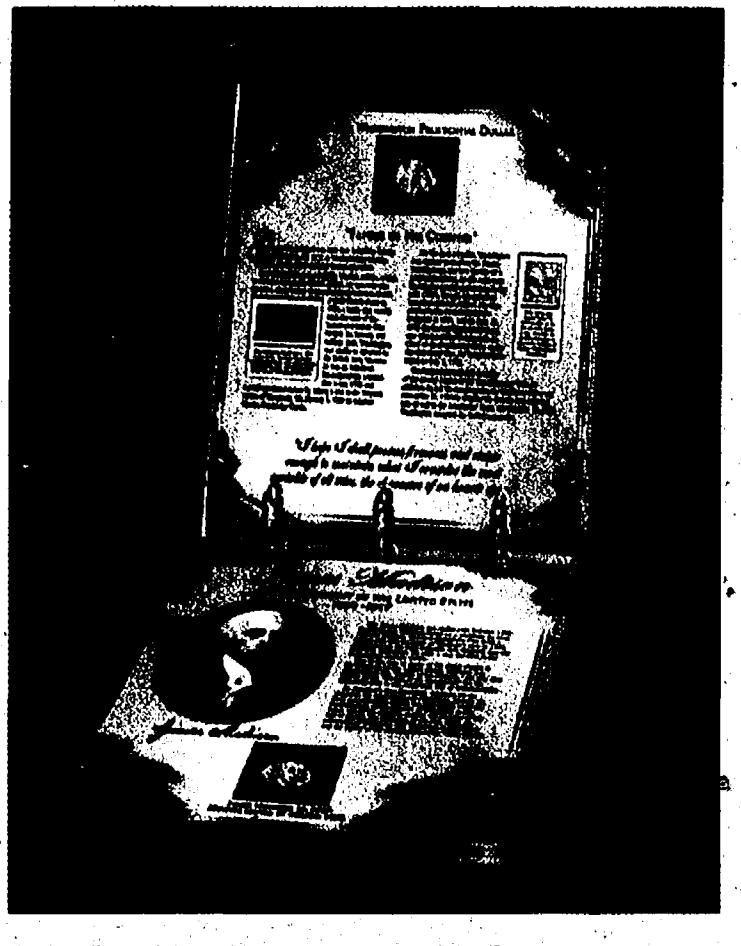
The unique designs on the front of the Presidential coins.

CONVENIENT TO ACQUIRE.

The United States Presidents Coin Collection can be reserved now for just $17.95 (plus $2 shipping and service) per Panel. A Panel will be sent to subscribers with the issuance of each new Presidential coin (approximately one every three months).

DELUXE COLLECTOR'S ALBUM AT NO EXTRA CHARGE; PROMPT ACTION RECOMMENDED.

Each subscriber will receive a deluxe Collector's Album at no additional charge. This album may be personalized, if desired.



This historic collection is available for a limited time only. The new Presidential coins are sure to be in high demand and to be hoarded by collectors. Subscriptions can be guaranteed only to those collectors whose reservations are received promptly. To avoid disappointment, return the attached Subscription Reservation today!

Common design on the back of each coin.

Coins shown larger than actual size of 1" in diameter.
