Adopt-A-Farm: The Series

Heritage Newspapers is partnering with the Washtenaw County Farm Bureau in a program known as "Adopt-A-Farm," which will focus on operations at one local farm, Huehl Acres.

We will follow brothers Jerry and Denny Huehl throughout the year to bring you in-depth stories to raise public awareness about the challenges faced by farmers in an increasingly technological society. The monthly series will focus on the challenges, goals and tasks the Huehls face throughout the year.

Next month: A look at the Huehls dairy operation.

Huehl Acres a family tradition

Hard work is a daily routine at local farm

By Edward Freundl
Staff Writer

Farming is hard work, and not everybody is cut out for it.

Not only is the amount of physical labor daunting, farmers are at the mercy of forces far beyond their control, such as weather conditions.

So it is notable when a family farm such as Huehl Acres in Freedom Township beats those odds and survives for five generations.

But if not for the perseverance of its current owners, it almost didn't make it.

Founded in 1839, the centennial farm on Fletcher Road has seen its share of adversity, according to Jerry and Denny Huehl, the two brothers who work the farm as a partnership.

"Our father, Earl, passed away in 1972 when I was in the eighth grade, and mom didn't feel we could handle milking all the cows so she got rid of them," older brother Jerry said.

"With our neighbor, Dennis Englebert, we worked it together over the next four years."

Farm chores often took precedence over activities most teenage boys take for granted.

"I milked cows and went to the prom," Jerry said. "My wife won't let me forget it."

The difficulties passed with the years, and now the Huehls have hundreds of acres under their control.

"We work more than 600 acres of corn and 400 acres of soybeans," Jerry said, as well as some red wheat.

They also raise about 80 head of dairy cattle, along with dozens of acres of alfalfa needed to feed them.

"We own 333 acres," he added. "The original farm was 195 acres and in 1979 we bought the farm north of here from Alfred Kuhl."

Looking for a summer job? Well, you better . . .

Start early, be flexible and get aggressive

Special Regional Report: Summer employment outlook

By Sue Collins
Staff Writer

Summer vacation can be quite expensive.

Consider this weekly summer budget for a teenager:

$ Pizza and a 2-liter for lunch with friends, $8.

$ Twenty new must-have songs from I-tunes, $19.80.

$ Madras shorts and a T-shirt for hanging out, from Old Navy, $39.

$ Jeans and a T-shirt for that party, from Abercrombie & Fitch, $69.

$ Non-fiction, strongly recommended by favorite teacher, $24.

$ Two On Demand movies, one rainy day, $8.

$ Water park, one sunny day, $14.

$ Day at Cedar Pointe, rain or shine, $60.

That's more than $200 for one week of keeping busy while maintaining some sort of social life during break from high school or college. Unless mom and dad are willing and able to bank roll the summer fun and games, it's time to hit the pavement. Or, as is the case today, the computer.

Among the summer jobs available for teenagers is scooping ice cream. Tori Walega (left) and Julie Morsfield, both 17, are back for their second year at Mickey's Dairy Twist in Saline. Also pictured are Alex Mepham, Kyle Mince, Molly Collins, Oliver Mepham, Patrick Collins and Toby Mepham.

Looking for a good summer job is a job in itself. Employers who hire seasonal help all agree to start early, be flexible, be aggressive, be ready to market yourself like a professional and become an excellent employee to keep your foot in the door for next year.

The competition for fewer available jobs is tough.

In Saline, 72 high school and college kids applied for 18 jobs at the Saline Recreation Center. An eager bunch of lifeguards, camp leaders and swim instructors returned from last year to fill another 26 summer jobs.

In Chelsea, only one in three were hired as counselors for the Parks and Rec's new camp, Caboji.

At Huron-Clinton Metroparks, some 500 seasonal jobs are up for grabs, though 400 are filled by returning employees.

The 100 jobs include toll booth operators, golf

City Council approves budget despite outcry

By Edward Freundl
Staff Writer

A public hearing on a proposed increase in the city's millage rates and 2007-08 budget brought several residents to Chelsea City Council chambers June 12 to voice their concerns.

The proposed increase of 1.25 mills — more than 10 percent — would bring the operating fund to 12.4994 mills.

The total tax rate would become 16.7490 for taxpayers within the Downtown Development Authority district and 15.0609 for other residents.

In presenting her report, City Administrative Services Director Kim Garland noted that the city is ending the current fiscal year in better shape than the previous one.

"Our general fund cash balance is improving," she said. "It's nice to be able to say we're not on a slippery slope, and we want to continue this trend."

At the new millage rate the projected balance would be an estimated $400,000, an increase of about $50,000 from the current year.

Still, that represents less than 10 percent of the total $4.3 million proposed budget, and one of the city's financial goals is to boost that to 15 or 20 percent to support ongoing capital improvements and have a cushion for emergencies.

> "I want to get a warm feeling about how my hard-earned tax dollars are spent. You are asking for additional revenue, which translates into a substantial tax burden, and there are going to be a number of people who will have trouble paying that burden."
> Ken Anderson, Chelsea resident

Projected general fund revenues will rise from $3.7 million to $4.3 million, while projected expenses will grow from $3.7 million to $4.2 million.

The resulting surplus of $117,132 would reverse last year's withdrawal of $151,681 to cover general operating expenses.

However, given the state's economy there is still reason for caution.

"We want to see a healthy city, physically and fiscally,

Byrnes puts teeth into new bill

By Sean Dalton
Staff Writer

The state legislature is one step closer to "putting some more teeth" into animal cruelty statutes, as Rep. Pam Byrnes, D-District 52, put it.

Byrnes originally introduced a bill that addressed the problem of intentional torture and maiming of animals during a 2006-07 session, but got together with Rep. John Espinoza, D-District 83, who was similarly working on legislation to stiffen penalties for those guilty of animal neglect.

"The penalty hasn't changed for the intentional action," Byrnes said. "We made the bar a little bit easier for the prosecutor and put in consecutive sentencing."

The penalty for each offense of intentionally injuring, harming or maiming an animal is $5,000 and a 4-year prison term.

House Bill 4550 passed the Michigan House of Representatives 102 votes to 4 last Thursday, and now must pass and go through a senate committee and a state senate floor vote.

Byrnes said that a string of brutal animal slayings in Superior Township last year that left dozens of house pets and canine-like wild animals alike decapitated and, in some cases, shot in the head was the impetus of the legislation. Not to mention the hundreds of pet-owners who were in fear for the lives of their pets.

"We were outraged here in Washtenaw County to hear about them," Byrnes said. "This legislation allows us to increase the penalty for the number of animals that are victims."

According to Byrnes, many such cases boil down to a charge of a single count or misdemeanor charges, even in cases that involve numerous victim animals, such as the Superior Township animal slayings.

Aside from sympathy for the victim animals in that case, Byrnes also owns a farm with one pygmy goat and 20 donkeys – a sort of political trademark of her democratic leanings – and house pets including three cats and three dogs.

"I don't want to see animals hurt

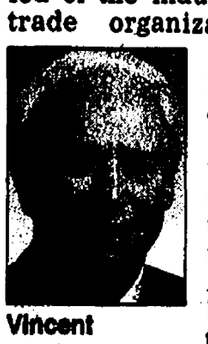
Robotics industry leader Vincent to retire

Donald A. Vincent of Gregory, who co-founded the Robotic Industries Association in 1974 and has led of the industry's largest trade organization since 1983, will retire on June 30.



Vincent

Vincent was instrumental in the evolution of the Ann Arbor-based industry advocacy group from a start-up with limited staff and resources to North America's leading robotics association representing more than 250 companies.

Trevor Jones, current RIA president and director of OEM Development at Thermo Fisher Scientific Inc., said that under Vincent's leadership, RIA has become the leading source for industrial robot statistics in North America; developed the American National Robot Safety Standard; and launched Robotics Online, the world's leading Web site for robotics information, and more.

"These are just some of the highlights of Don's career and don't begin to touch upon ... the role he has played in establishing the robotics industry as one of the critical technologies of the 21st century," Jones said.

In addition to RIA's success, Vincent was actively involved in establishing the Automated Imaging Association (AIA) and the Motion Control Association (MCA), trade groups that represent the machine vision and motion control industries.

AIA now represents 280 companies from 26 nations, and MCA has nearly 60 member companies.

Vincent said he is extremely gratified by the tremendous growth of RIA over the past two decades.

"When I became executive vice president in 1983, many people thought robotics was going to be the next industrial revolution. There were wild projections about how fast the industry would grow and the massive job losses that would result, projections that hurt the industry," Vincent said.

"Fortunately, over time, people came to understand that the reality of robotics is even more impressive than the hype. Companies around the world began having success with their robot implementations."

Vincent leaves the robotics field with confidence in the industry's future.

"New applications of robot technology continue to emerge, both inside and outside the factory; some I never would have dreamed of when RIA was founded back in 1974," he said. "It's really awe-inspiring to see an industrial robot used in surgical procedures or in an amusement park ride or as a bartender."

Chelsea News in Brief

Zion celebrates 140 years

The community is invited to a celebration Sunday, June 24, marking the 140th anniversary of historic Zion Lutheran Church, 3050 S. Fletcher Road.

A regular service will take place at 9:30 a.m., followed by a special worship service at 10:30.

It will be based on the traditional service and hymn book from 1930, complete with some spoken German.

The Rev. Bob Miller will preach at both services, marking the 50th anniversary of his first sermon at historic Zion.

A reception on the lawn will follow.

Railroad crossing work

The North Main Street (M-52) railroad crossing repair that was originally set for April is being tentatively rescheduled for June 30.

Norfolk Southern Railroad has received permission from the Michigan Department of Transportation to close the crossing the entire day for repairs, and detours will be posted.

Citizen of the Year

The Chelsea Area Chamber of Commerce and Chelsea Standard will be accepting nominations for the annual Chelsea Citizen of the Year Award and the Lifetime Achievement Award through July 20.

Candidates must either live, work or participate in Chelsea or one of the surrounding townships.

Nomination forms are available at the chamber office and at the Chelsea Standard. For more information, call 1-734-475-1145.

Garden Walk tickets

The Chelsea Area Garden Club will host an eight-site walking tour of Chelsea's historic downtown area and east of Main Street from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Saturday.

Garden Club members will be on hand to answer questions and people will be free to wander and enjoy the yard. They may even spy cardinals, bluebirds and redheaded woodpeckers that enjoy the many birdfeeders and houses Tom has installed for their benefit.

Tickets are $7 for the Garden Walk and are on sale at The Garden Mill, Chelsea Pharmacy and Gourmet Chocolate Café. On walk day tickets will be on sale at the McKune Memorial Library, 221 S. Main St., Clocktower Commons, Main Street north of the railroad tracks, and at each garden site.

A brochure with a map and list of gardens will be available at each site marked with hanging baskets and numbers.

Funds raised by the Garden Walk will benefit The Chelsea Senior Center and McKune Memorial Library.

For more information call Trinh Pifer at The Garden Mill, 1-734-475-3539.

Goulet making a bigger statement

She leaves CCA for position with state arts organization

By Edward Freundl
Staff Writer

Chelsea's arts community is losing one of its strongest supporters this week, but only because Jennifer Goulet is continuing her advocacy efforts on a statewide basis.

"This was a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity and I couldn't walk away," said Goulet, who has been executive director of the Chelsea Center for the Arts since October 2005.

She has accepted the position of director of development for ArtServe Michigan, a statewide organization that builds support for artistic and cultural activities.

"I see this as a way to support local organizations like the CCA on a state level," Goulet added.

Her first day with ArtServe will be Monday.

Carol Stygles, president of the CCA board of directors, said Goulet earned the opportunity through her leadership of the local organization.

"She has demonstrated exceptional leadership in her capacity as director of the center," Stygles said.

"We wish her well in this new venture and will miss her expertise, knowledge and ability to give above and beyond the parameters of duty."

Goulet said she has been an ArtServe board member, serving on a team that negotiated the merger of the former Southfield-based organization with the Michigan Association of Community Arts Agencies in Lansing.

"The position at ArtServe opened up in early May unexpectedly when the previous person announced her departure," Goulet said.

"When the opening came up it seemed a natural opportunity, both personally and professionally."

As director of development, she will be responsible for exploring new funding sources and strategies for the organization.

"We have strong support across the state (and) we'll be looking to strengthen and diversify our funding base," she said.

Goulet is not an artist by training, but it is a longtime interest.

Her professional background is in urban planning and downtown development, and was economic development director and Downtown Development Authority director for the city of Ypsilanti prior to coming to Chelsea.

"I've always had my heart in the arts and found a way to do it through my planning and economic development background," she said.

Stygles said the CCA board will start a search for a new director as soon as possible.

"We wish to let the community know that business will go on as usual with our very capable staff and board of directors," she said.

The announcement caught some CCA faculty by surprise.

"I've enjoyed working with her," said Don Fishel, a flute instructor with the CCA for the past three years. "We'll miss her, but the center will go on."

Goulet said her only regret is that she leaves behind a bit of unfinished business.

"I love what I'm doing here at the CCA, and quite frankly I don't think I've been here long enough," she said.

"We've got a lot of projects in the works. I hope I've been able to make a positive contribution in Chelsea."

Four injured, one seriously, in M-52 crash

By Edward Freundl
Staff Writer

Two Munith men were among four people injured in a two-car, head-on crash at about 10 a.m. June 14 on M-52 at North Territorial Road in Lyndon Township.

Michigan State Police Trooper Steven Temelko of the Sylvan Detachment said a Mercury Grand Marquis driven by Nicholas Bruss, 18, of the Munith area, attempted to make a left turn from southbound M-52 onto North Territorial and pulled into the path of a northbound Jeep Cherokee.

The Cherokee was driven by Robert Dillender, 54, of Ohio.

The passenger in the Bruss vehicle was identified as John Raine, also 18 of the Munith area; and Dillender's passenger was his wife, Beth Dillender.

The victims were transported to the University of Michigan Hospital in Ann Arbor.

Bruss slipped in and out of consciousness several times while rescuers from the Chelsea Area Fire Authority cut the top of the car off to extricate the 6-foot, 8-inch man, Temelko said.

A witness, who requested she only be identified as a physical therapist with Chelsea Home Health Care, said she was directly behind the Mercury when the crash occurred.

"The guy in the Mercury all of a sudden made a left turn right in front of the other car," she said.

"I couldn't believe it — he was like two feet from them. They didn't have time to brake."

The witness said she called 911 and assisted the injured occupants of the Cherokee while waiting for paramedics to arrive.

"They told me they were on their way to Oregon to visit their family," she said.

Debris was scattered up to 150 feet from the impact site, and M-52 was closed for about three hours while troopers investigated the incident.

Temelko said alcohol was not involved in the crash.

Air bags deployed in both vehicles, but it is not known if the victims were wearing seat belts.

Chelsea Area Fire Authority rescue personnel use power tools to cut the top off a car to extricate the driver, an 18-year-old Munith man, who sustained major injuries in a two-car collision June 14 at M-52 and North Territorial Road.

According to Temelko, Bruss and the Dillender couple remain hospitalized at U of M.

Bruss is receiving treatment in the trauma unit for a punctured lung, fractured sternum, broken ribs, two broken ankles and multiple leg fractures.

Bracelets for Africa: Heart to Heart

Chelsea moms make a link with Africa

By Crystal Hayduk
Guest writer

What do mothers in the Chelsea area have in common with mothers in Malawi, Africa? More than you might imagine, according to Darlene Schaffer.

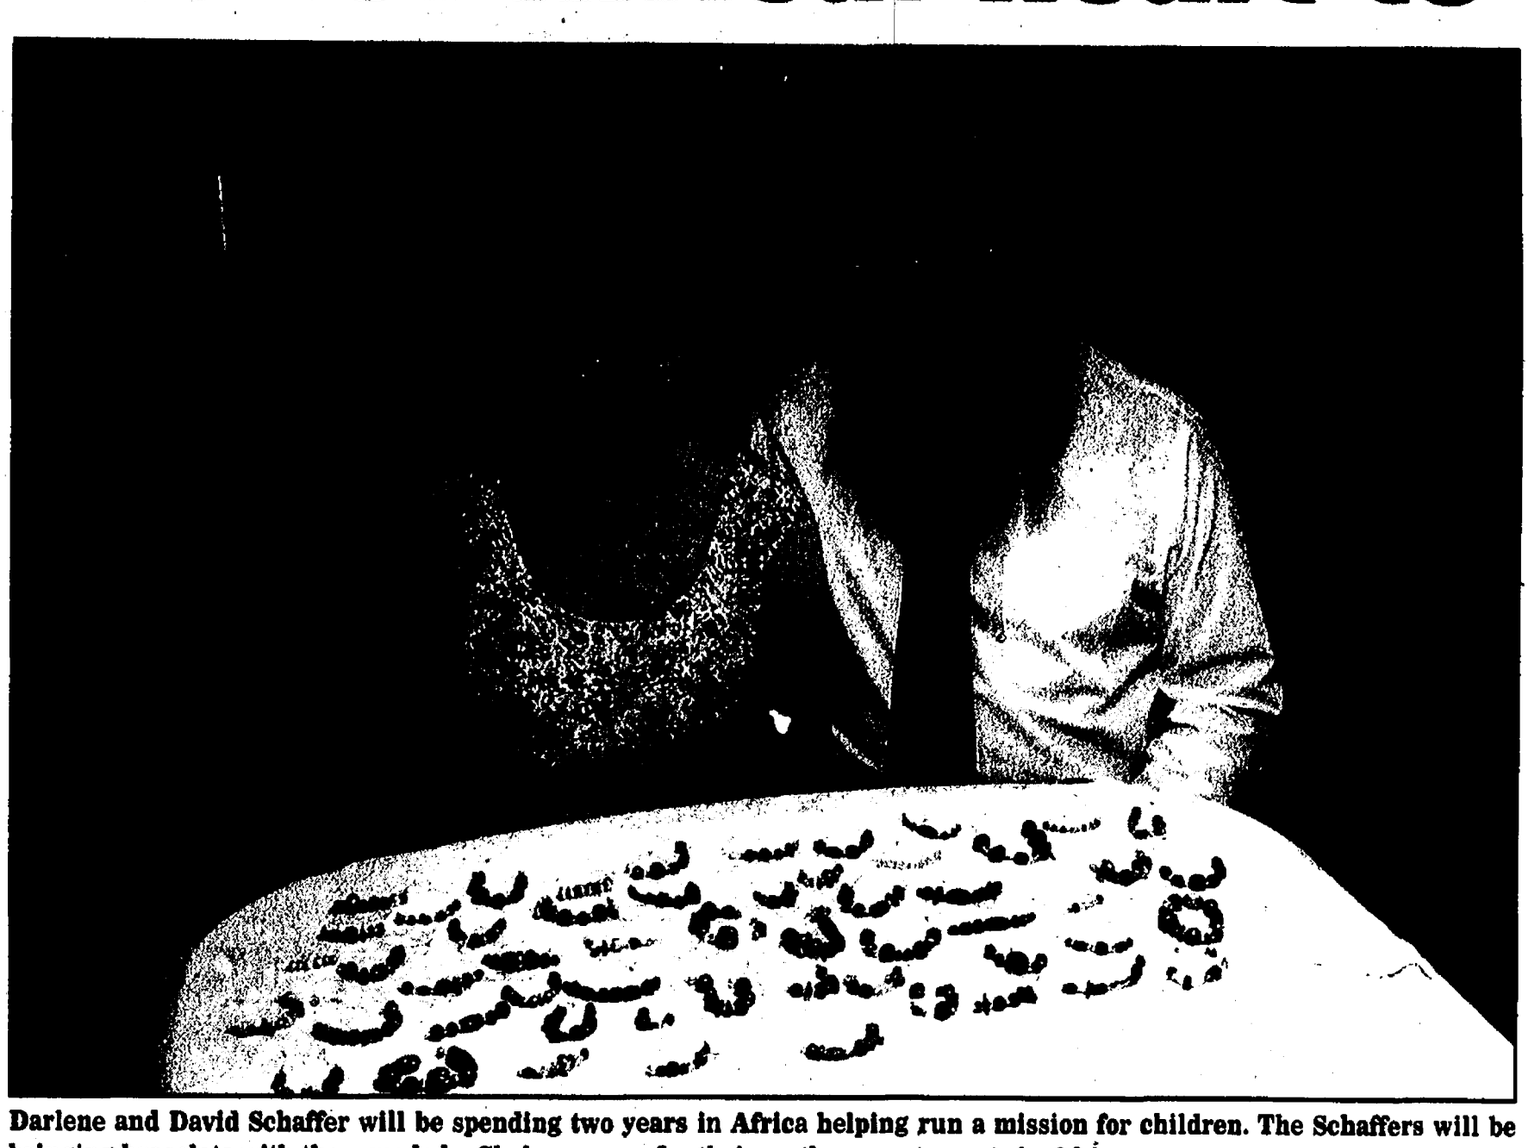
For the last three years, Schaffer has been a mentor for the Chelsea chapter of Mothers of Preschoolers (MOPS), an interdenominational Christian organization with more than 3,400 chapters that meet around the world.

Schaffer spent the last two summers in Africa, returning each time with passionate stories about the work of the Rafiki Foundation, whose mission is to turn helpless orphans into godly contributors in their society. Children are placed into a permanent home with a "mama," who can have up to 10 small children to love and care for. They are provided with food, clean water, an education and spiritual nurturing.

Schaffer and her husband David are leaving Chelsea next month to spend two years serving full-time with the Rafiki Foundation in Malawi. MOPS member Amy Mitchell came up with the idea of sending along handmade bracelets to the Rafiki mamas.

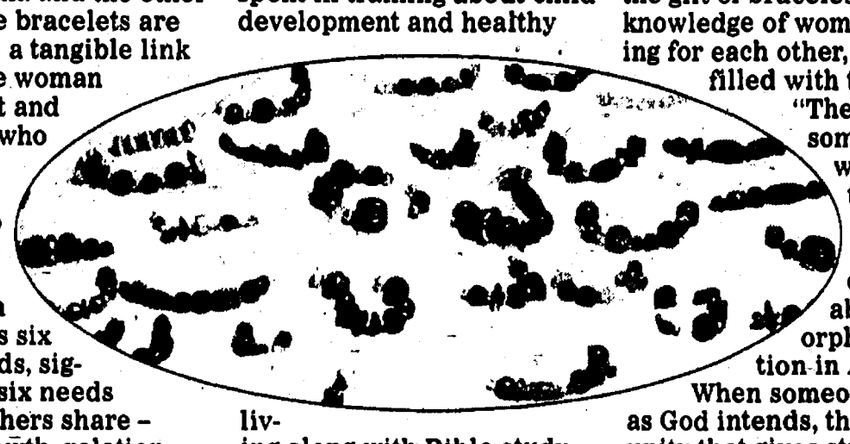
"I wanted to do something for Darlene to show her how much we appreciate the work that she does," Mitchell said. "I know that she would not want a gift for herself, but would rather have something for the Rafiki women."

Mitchell mentioned her idea to Allison Vanderspool, co-coordinator of MOPS, and plans for making the bracelets began to unfold. Both Juli Ratinaud and Janet Kuras were instrumental in organizing the work and obtaining supplies.



Darlene and David Schaffer will be spending two years in Africa helping run a mission for children. The Schaffers will be bringing bracelets with them made by Chelsea moms for their mother counterparts in Africa.

At the MOPS meeting on May 25, Schaffer was surprised to learn that the morning's activity involved each mother making two bracelets – one to send to an African mama and the other to keep. The bracelets are meant to be a tangible link between the woman who made it and the woman who wears it, as well as a reminder to pray for the African mama. Each bracelet has six special beads, signifying the six needs that all mothers share – identity, growth, relationship, help, perspective and hope.



Schaffer has learned firsthand the similarities between mothers in both cultures. The women in Africa need relationships. "They spend time together. After school it is common to see the families out playing together, like we would at a park.

"They get help from other moms. They have a need to grow. Time each week is spent in training about child development and healthy living along with Bible study. Often the women volunteer in an area of interest."

Schaffer expands upon the strong need for hope, saying, "in the midst of the country's poverty, corruption and huge health challenges due to AIDS, the faith that they have in the goodness and faithfulness of God and His promises to us, gives them a focus and strength to persevere with joy in the midst of it all."

When Schaffer was given the gift of bracelets and the knowledge of women praying for each other, her eyes filled with tears.

"The mothers sometimes wonder if the rest of the world knows or cares about the orphan situation in Africa. When someone loves as God intends, there is a unity that gives strength and peace. I know the MOPS mothers here in Chelsea understand the challenges the mothers have in Africa in a special way. I believe the mothers in the village will understand and pray for the mothers here in Chelsea. Once we are in Malawi, I hope to be able to share with the MOPS moms of Chelsea the specific prayer needs of the mothers in the Village. The beads are a concrete reminder to pray for the shared needs, mom to mom."

Many of the beads for this project were donated by L & L Designs. This home-based business is operated by the mother and daughter team of Laurie and Lauren Gravelyn.

"You can custom design your own earrings, necklaces, and bracelets; choosing from over 300 different beads," Laurie Gravelyn said. The Gravelyns also donate 10 percent of their profits directly to the Rafiki Foundation. More information can be obtained by emailing them at laurelgravelyn@hotmail.com.

Other beads and supplies were generously donated by Mrs. Marc Rafferty, owner of The Middle Bead, located at 115 West Middle Street.

For information on joining MOPS, call the office of the First United Methodist Church of Chelsea at 1-734-475-8119. To donate funds to help support the Schaffers on this mission trip, visit their web link at www.rafikifoundation.org/ros/schaffer/schaffer.html, or call 1-210-244-2600.

Rafiki is a 501c3 organization and a member of the Evangelical Council for Financial Accountability.

BUDGET

but state revenue sharing continues to be a challenge," Garland added.

She said revenue-sharing from the state likely will be cut again this year, to an estimated $300,000.

That money helps support critical services such as police, fire and infrastructure; and has dropped almost in half from the fiscal 2001-02 level of $566,835.

City resident Rod Anderson questioned a number of items in the draft budget.

"I want to understand what's behind this," Anderson said, looking at budget figures Garland prepared for council members and the public.

"Were there any ongoing estimates of population this year before salary increases were approved? It goes to a question of affordability."

Garland assured him that city staff had indeed looked at growth projections.

"There is also a question of accounting," Anderson continued. "The police budget for dispatch and clerical is $205,000, and it was zero last year."

That change was a request from Police Chief Ed Toth Jr., "to separate those employees from the officers in order to clearly track expenses related to them," Garland said.

The biggest concerns seemed to be why such a large increase was needed, especially during tough economic times.

"I want to get a warm feeling about how my hard-earned tax dollars are spent," Anderson said. "You are asking for additional revenue, which translates into a substantial tax burden, and there are going to be a number of people who will have trouble paying that burden."

The category of insurance and fringe benefits, at almost $1 million, had the largest increase over last year of more than a quarter-million dollars, but city officials said that was the result of a "severely underfunded" pension system.

"Pensions is one of our biggest issues," Garland said. "We are severely underfunded in our defined benefit plan, by about $3.1 million, and we absolutely have to fix that."

Mayor Ann Feeney said the city only recently discovered that they were in such a deep hole with pensions.

"We're playing catch-up," she said, "and we're so far behind it'll take us at least 10 years for us to catch up."

Councilman Frank Hammer told residents that budget decisions by past city and village councils involved a lot of "robbing Peter to pay Paul," which had to come to an end.

"(That) has gone on a lot longer than Kim's numbers show," Hammer said. "The council was stunned to find this out. Legally we're not allowed to be that low."

Councilman Joe Merkel defended the increase, even though he opposed it personally.

"I don't want to see an increase in millage, but we're near the bottom of the scale when you compare us to other local communities," he said.

Resident Brian Tucker reminded the council to be sure all avenues were explored for controlling benefit costs, particularly in health care.

"Make sure you're making the proper decisions," he cautioned. "Some of these are not easy, I know, but they have to be in the best interest of all the residents of the city."

Although Councilman Kent Martinez-Kratz renewed his stated opposition to the increase, the vote on the budget was included as one of nine "consent agenda" items that received blanket approval from the council.

Designer of Timber Town logo goes on to success in art world

By Edward Freundl
Staff Writer

It started with doodling on a restaurant tablecloth when he was 4 years old, and continued a few years later with designing the original Timber Town logo.

As an adult, Chelsea native Maris Turner is using his artistic talent to make a living as a professional artist, illustrator and graphic designer.

He recently graduated from Columbus (Ohio) College of Art & Design, capping his career there with an award from the prestigious Society of Illustrators in New York.

Now he has accepted a job with high-end clothier Abercrombie & Fitch in the women's department, designing graphics for sweatshirts and other clothing.

"Art is a hit-or-miss thing: You can't always get a job with it, even though you're passionate about it," Turner said last week from his home in Columbus.

"I feel very fortunate that I was able to get a job right out of school."

By his own recollection, Turner was in fifth grade at North Creek Elementary School when a contest invited local kids to create an artistic representation that would symbolize Timber Town, the then-new playground complex on Sibley Road.

He said he always knew at some level he wanted to be an artist, perhaps in part because his father, Dennis Turner, is an artist himself.

"I wasn't that good at math and science, but ever since I was a kid I had a feeling (art) is what I wanted to do," Turner said.

"I guess I was emulating my dad. He was a big influence because he does a lot of fine-art paintings."

Dennis Turner said it's "pretty exciting" to know that his son has followed in his footsteps.

"Dad's proud of his son," the elder Turner said.

"It's pretty exciting that he came from humble beginnings and now he's making a living at it."

Dennis Turner noted that his son received a lot of support for his talent from local groups.

"He's been supported by the local school system, and got scholarships from local businesses," he said.

Maris Turner said he enjoys working in a variety of art media.

"I'm up for anything except for three-dimensional stuff," he said. "I try to spread it evenly across the board.

Turner's work can be viewed at his own Web site, marisdotcom.com, and at gigposters.com.

If you're up for a trip to Jackson, he also has pieces displayed at the Art 634 Gallery at 634 N. Mechanic St.

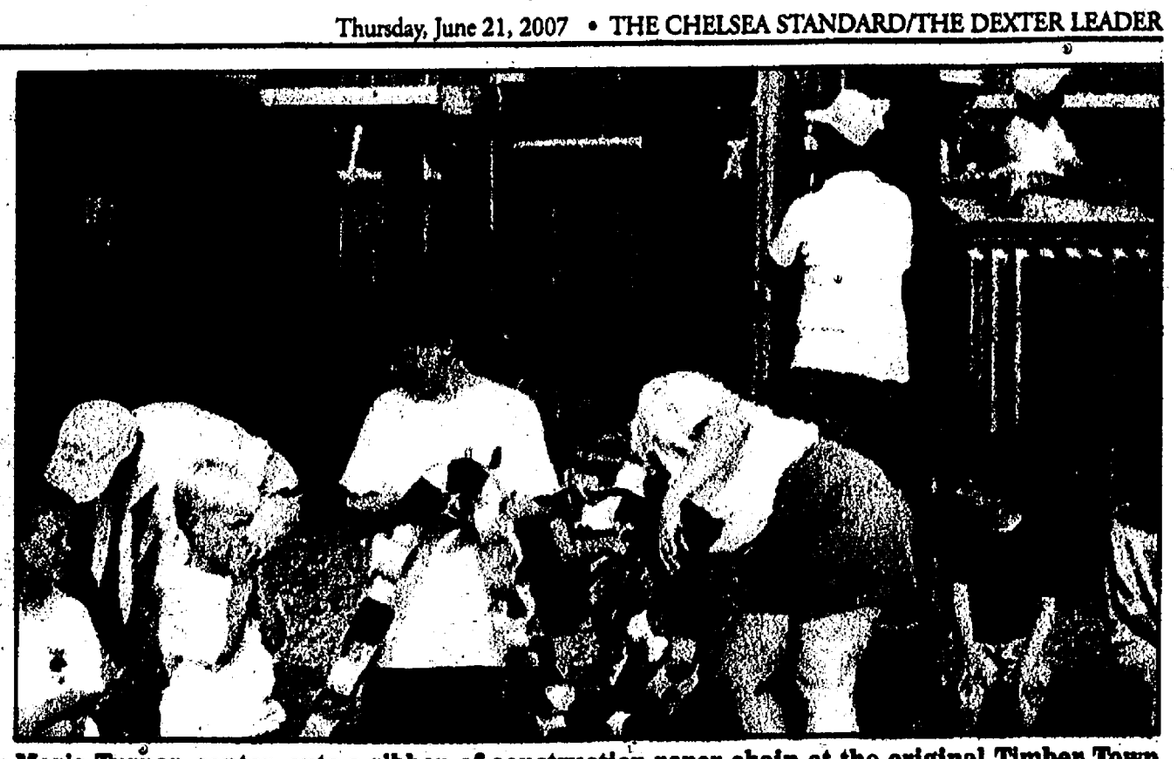
Sandra Turner said the family became aware of her son's talent at an early age.

"When he was about 4 years old, we were all eating at an Ann Arbor restaurant and he drew all over the paper tablecloth," she recalled.

"He got a lot of attention for that, and that's when the light bulb went off in his head."

Mrs. Turner, a guidance counselor at Chelsea High School, added that Maris resisted the traditional "rules" of art.

"He hated coloring books; he never colored between the lines," she said.



Maris Turner, center, cuts a ribbon of construction-paper chain at the original Timber Town dedication in August 1994. Turner created the Timber Town logo at the time, and he has gone on to a professional career in art and design.

FARM

They lease additional acreage from area residents, he added.

A family run operation

The brothers try to split up the workload, and each is responsible for different operations.

"Denny is more in charge of the crops; we sell Pioneer seed corn and Denny oversees that," Jerry said.

"I do more with the dairy part of it, and I do the financial bookwork for the farm."

As if that's not enough to do, Jerry is, at least for the moment, president of the Washtenaw County Farm Bureau, as well as holding a seat on the Freedom Township board of review and his church council.

"We're taking on more and more here, so it's time I step out of Farm Bureau," he said.

His wife Susan, a former nurse, works with computers at St. Joseph Mercy Hospital in Ann Arbor.

Their daughter Kate is a registered nurse who is getting married this summer.

Jerry said his son Robert has been working as an engineer with Toyota for two years. He will be moving to San Francisco, but left open the possibility of returning to farm work at some point.

"He has expressed a little interest in coming back to the farm," Jerry said.

Denny and his wife Carol have a daughter, Stephanie, who has a teaching certificate.

Their oldest son, Thomas, attends Eastern Michigan University, and wants to be a pilot.

Younger son Nicholas just graduated from Chelsea High School on June 3, and plans to attend college to study engineering.

"He's put in quite a lot of time after school around here," Jerry said.

Of all the brothers' children, Nicholas has probably done the most farm work, but is still limited by his age.

"It's all right, but it's a lot of work," said Nicholas, 18. "I don't plant corn or drill beans and I don't milk cows by myself," he added.

The Huehls' mother, Mildred Huehl, is retired from the farm and lives in Chelsea now.

The brothers also have help from one hired hand, Nelson Bollinger.

"I do all the morning milking seven days a week, and Nelson milks six nights a week," Jerry Huehl said.

"(Denny) and I trade off doing the chores so we get two days a month off."

Bollinger has spent 14 years with the Huehls, but his experience reaches much further back.

"If you grow up milking cows, there's something inside you that never leaves you," Bollinger said.

Making hay while the sun shines

Although the work of planting crops began in April, late May and early June are still a busy time on the farm.

"The last two weeks have been go-go-go," Jerry said. "We like to start cutting (alfalfa) hay by the end of May."

Because the farm grows almost all the feed necessary for its dairy herd, it's necessary to find a place to store it all.

The mowed alfalfa is piled into three enormous open-air structures lined by concrete on three sides.

When full, the silage can reach more than 30 feet wide and almost as tall.

"We put a plastic tarp on top of the silage pile to keep the rain off, and old tires hold down the plastic," Jerry said. "The more moisture in the alfalfa, the more spoilage you get, so we save the good silage for the cows and put the spoiled out on the crops; it acts like compost."

The cows don't just graze on any old grass, either. The alfalfa is cultivated and harvested several times during

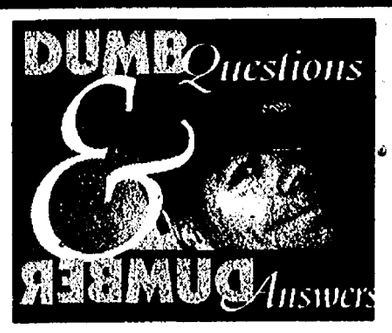
EDITORIAL

Our policy
It is our policy to run all local letters to the editor that deal with local issues and are not personal attacks.



What's the topic for this week?
Let's talk about sacrifice.

Do we have to? Sacrifice to you usually means giving up a hit to move the runner to third or sweeping out the garage on a weeknight or eating the last orange Popsicle in the freezer instead of the last ice cream sandwich.

You know you're right. I wonder if in every house in America the last Popsicle is always an orange one. My family has something against the orange Popsicle. The last one will sit in the freezer for months until someone gives in – or gives it to the dog.

That's terrible.

What can you do? Anyway, that's not the kind of sacrifice I'm talking about.

I can only imagine where we're going with this.

Actually, we're not going very far at all. One doesn't have to look far to find sacrifice. Just look around. Everywhere you look in the pages of this newspaper you will find it. It's thriving in our neighborhoods, churches and schools. It's everywhere.

Dexter is holding its inaugural Relay For Life this weekend. For 24 hours, people will be walking, raising money and sacrificing. Last month, Chelsea did the same thing.

Speaking of Chelsea, take a ride over to Timber Town. The good folks of this good community rebuilt one the town jewels. And this wasn't just a fresh coat of paint. This was commitment, pride, dedication – and sacrifice.

We have a group here in Chelsea of good-hearted people who spend part of their Sundays pointing out that peace should be more than an option for this country. They are sacrificing their time to be heard, putting their mouths where their hearts are.

Darlene Schaffer is taking sacrifice not only to another lev l, but to another continent. And another culture with real problems and real struggles. Schaffer is a mentor for the Chelsea chapter of Mothers of Preschoolers (MOPS), an interdenominational Christian organization with more than 3,400 chapters that meet around the world.

Schaffer is leaving Chelsea next month to spend two years serving full-time with the Rafiki Foundation in Malawi. Two years of sacrifice.

It seems every week we are writing about fund-raisers breaking records, despite a struggling economy. We are writing about people giving their time and talent to help others, whether they're neighbors or strangers. People giving back to the community. Giving back to their brothers and sisters.

This community continues to amaze me with its generosity, kindness and compassion. When one falls, two bend over to pick them up. When someone loses their voice, two scream out loud. When one goes hungry, two make them a meal.

Everyone struggles at some point in their lives. Even those with great riches and wealth suffer. Pain does not discriminate. It can be relentless, unforgiving, and shouldn't be experienced alone. In this community, it rarely ever is because so many sacrifice to help others.

It's a beautiful thing and something we should never take for granted.

So if you're driving around Dexter this weekend, stop over at the Relay For Life at Cornerstone school. Walk a lap or two. Shake some hands. Enjoy something to eat. Let the kids play a game or two. Go and experience the true soul of this community.

What was for lunch today?

What else but a Hot Pocket. I don't know about you, but I need to place a call to master chef Craig Common to see how to cook a Hot Pocket. It's either so hot that it burns a hole in my mouth or too cold that I can't my teeth through it. I need to find some "Common" ground with the Hot Pocket.

Have you ever had a salad?

Sure. Love the salads at the Chelsea Grill. Had one last week. And substituting almonds for walnuts wasn't a bad call at all.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor: Did you know that Chelsea is undertaxed? That's what the City Council thinks, anyway.

So they were quick to approve a 10-percent increase in millage on June 12. This will lead to an estimated 27 percent increase in real property tax revenues. Coupled with likely major state tax increases in the fall, city residents will soon be faced with much higher taxes.

What do we need this for? The answer is not clear. The principal cost driver seems to be an unspecified increase to support defined benefit pension obligations, but the exact need has not been published. The 07-08 police budget will be increasing 25 percent. Why?

Overhead accounts are increasing 15 percent at a time when most organizations are cutting them drastically. Is this good management? When one citizen asked about privatization of some city services, he was told that a study on privatizing trash services showed that private firms would cost nearly twice what the city costs. Is city management really this negative about privatization, a proven cost-cutting strategy?

But here's the key question: can we afford this large tax increase? We don't know because the council has not addressed our ability to pay. Statewide, per capita salary has decreased about 6 percent over the last year. What's the rate for Chelsea? Unknown, yet Council proceeded with the increase regardless.

Population changes? Also unknown. Influence of Pfizer closing? Don't know. But taxes are being raised just the same.

I fear that some young families, seniors on fixed incomes, and other struggling folks may be forced to leave, to the detriment of our city. I am very disappointed in Council's precipitous action in raising taxes without fully assessing the impact on the hard working taxpayers that make up this community.

A final note. Thanks to Councilman Kent Martinez-Kratz, who opposed the tax increase, even though he voted for it inadvertently.

To the Editor: To all members of the Chelsea community, thank you.

Our family relocated to Chelsea in early 2006 as a result of Pfizer layoffs in Kalamazoo, and it was the best thing that could have ever happened to us. This town gave us what we had always been looking for, and we fell in love with it instantly.

Now, we must move on again, and it is with a very sad voice that we must say goodbye, but we also want to say thank you for the best year that we have had. Chelsea is a great town, with great people, and we were blessed to have been here. Be proud of what you have, and never take it for granted. You really have it all, feel blessed.

An article with our family information was printed in the Ann Arbor News (recently) that depicts our situation in a very negative way. The article implies that our family took the Pfizer buyout and dumped our home at as low of a price as we can just to get out. It also implied that we knew what we were doing was wrong and apologized.

This could not have been further from the truth. I apologized to neighbors for any impact that our situation may have on them, since we have high morals.

We did the best we could in the time we had to get the most out of our home, but also had to take care of our family.

So again, thank you for a fantastic year. I hope that the town of Chelsea continues to grow and prosper, and we wish every one of you nothing but the best.

To the Editor: I just read that there is a new Farmers' Market forming at the Chelsea Community Hospital. So now, from what I've observed over the last few years, there are three separate Farmers' Markets that will be in the Chelsea area – the Saturday market downtown, the Thursday market at the fairgrounds and the new Chelsea Hospital farmers' market. Considering the population of Chelsea, these are too many opportunities for the farmers to be able to receive any major profits from their efforts.

Ann Arbor has one Farmers' Market site – open during the summer on Going forward means looking back

As Americans on this July 4, I wonder if we are ready to celebrate the lives of the revolutionaries who made our freedom possible?

Revolutionaries are radical folks. That means that they go to the root of things, speak their mind, and sometimes act like troublemakers. I'm sure a lot of folks living in colonial America wanted to keep a low profile around their British landlords. There would always be a Thomas Paine, Paul Revere or Samuel Adams shooting off his mouth and causing problems. Truthfully now, how would you like a person like that living next door to you?

I've been thinking lately about the radical revolutionary foundations of our two American parties: the Republicans and the Democrats. It started during the last election when I commuted each morning into Jackson. Everyday I passed the marker just outside town declaring "Welcome to Jackson, the birthplace of the Republican party." And everyday, I wondered how this piece of American history had occurred in this place.

So, I looked for and found the large rock that sits on the corner of Fourth and Franklin Streets where it declares that in 1856 at this spot, under the oaks, a group aligned with the Abolitionist's platform gathered to create the Republican party. "Abolitionists," I shouted inside as I read on, "these are my kind of people." I wondered how many of my Republican friends knew anything about this aspect of their heritage.

Now, there had to be something equally interesting about the Democrats. With the help of Google, I discovered that President Thomas Jefferson, author of the Declaration of Independence, is credited with creating the Democratic Republican party later shortened to the Democratic party. I knew Jefferson was a scientist and a farmer, but what I had forgotten from my high school poli-sci class were the facts about Jeffersonian Democracy.

Before and after he took office, Jefferson was engaged in a high pitched battle with men like Hamilton and Adams who were known as the Federalists. They believed

What was "haying" at local farms in early to mid 1900s.

A. Stacking hay bales around foundations each winter.

B. Hay used for bedding the animals in a barn.

C. Threshing hay from fields to make into bales.

D. Mowing hay, then piling it in stacks to dry.

Answer D. In 1991, Harry Grow from Turner Geriatric Center clarified old farm customs, "You thresh grain — grain is one thing. Hay is something else. With hay you cut it with maybe two horses with an old mowing machine. After it dries you pile it up by forks in those days. Later you threw hay onto the wagon, hauled it into the barn, then hoisted it up into the barn lofts. We eventually had slings, but in the old days we had to do it by hand." Local farmer Glenn Wiseman added, "In 1922 we got a hayloader. That was something new then."

Homeowner responsible for collapse of wall

By Edward Freundl
Staff Writer

When it rains, it pours; and trouble is raining down on a Lyndon Township couple after recent heavy rains caused a retaining wall outside their home to collapse.

As a result, trees, loose mud, timber and other debris blocked access on Guinan Road to several residences on Sugar Loaf Lake.

The home of Kenneth Herrst and Annette Cane sits some 70 feet above the road, within sight of Sugar Loaf Lake.

A steep embankment angled down to the road below, and a retaining wall filled with earth, stones, logs, timbers, railroad ties and telephone poles was overlaid with a layer of vegetation.

"It was beautiful," Herrst said. "It was covered in roses and hostas; you couldn't even see the road from up here."

That is, until June 3. Herrst said he and Cane were attending graduation ceremonies at Chelsea High School when torrential rains struck the area, and found the damage when they returned.

"One neighbor said we got seven inches, another said eight inches," he said. "The trees on the hill washed out, came down and got tangled up in power lines, and the whole thing came crashing down.

"My neighbors said the whole thing took about four seconds," he added. "I've lived here in Chelsea for over 50 years and I've never seen it rain so much, so fast."

Lyndon Township Supervisor Maryann Noah said Herrst is being held responsible for the mishap.

"The township has been concerned about it for some time," she said. "It was a disastrous collapse. The road commission worked for hours to clean up the road."

Noah added that township officials obtained a court order June 8 to enter the property. "We needed to determine if the house is safe for the residents and the public," she said.

This sport utility vehicle tumbled into the mud when a retaining wall next to Kenneth Herrst's home on Guinan Road collapsed following heavy rains on June 3. The earthen wall was supported by buried railroad ties, telephone poles and logs reaching 60 to 70 feet above the road, and created a mudslide that blocked the road for several days when it failed.

The Michigan Department of Environmental Quality also got involved when a plume of muddy water was reported flowing into the lake, some 200 yards from the site of the collapse.

Herrst said he built the wall himself, but professional engineers certified it. "It's going to cost me in excess of $25,000 to get it fixed, and I'm still waiting to hear from my insurance company," he said.

"The County Road Commission is suing us, Lyndon Township is suing us; it's enough to have the wall come down without everybody serving papers on me.

"I'm just glad nobody got hurt," he added.

The Washtenaw County Road Commission removed this pile of dirt, railroad ties, telephone poles and logs blocking Guinan Road when a retaining wall reaching far above the road collapsed after heavy rains on June 3.

Wednesdays and Saturdays, and an Artists' Market on Sundays – both in the same space. Everyone knows where to go to find the market. And that venue draws many more customers than the Chelsea area could ever expect.

But if we're hoping to draw any of those customers – or from other outer areas, then I don't understand what the Chelsea farm community is doing. If any of this makes sense, it would be to have all of the market options in the same site, so the community and its neighboring friends and guests know where to go to look for fresh homegrown or handmade items.

Having three separate sites makes absolutely no sense to me – particularly in such a small community. Can't we all work together to draw community members and friendly neighbors and visitors to the same place to find what we all have to offer as fresh, homegrown foods and handmade artistic efforts? Why separate this community?

Chelsea is too small to even hope that three different sites will draw enough customers to be worth the hours spent for local farmers to man those three sites.

I'm not suggesting (yet) combining the days, but I'm certainly suggesting combining the sites so non-Chelsea Standard readers know where to go whenever they want to shop for fresh, homegrown farm items and local artistic efforts.

Let's figure out how this can work to support all of the local farmers who are looking for a local market for their products.

To the Editor: A local Chelsea resident, Mark McDougall, contacted me about an article in (The Chelsea Standard). He sent me the article and I have just finished reading it.

I just wanted to thank you for the informative and interesting article by Kathy Clark in the June 7, 2007 edition of the Chelsea Standard. My great Uncle, Donald Bacon and his father Jabez Bacon, played key roles in the early development of Chelsea and the continuing role of the Clock Tower in Chelsea's history.

Jabez Bacon, my great grandfather, settled in to Chelsea with his new bride Eliza Hook Bacon, both from England, in the late 19th century, raised a large family there, owned a dry goods and hardware store, and played a major role in the politics and culture there during the latter part of the 19th and early part of the 20th century.

His son Donald began the Central Fiber Products Corporation in the complex housing the clock tower sometime in the 1930's and it was active in the automotive business until the 1970's at least. My brothers, cousins and I used to play in the building and the clock tower as children during family gatherings in Chelsea.

Recently we had a reunion of the descendants of Jabez Bacon (held in the old railroad station) and now have a family Web site with stories and photographs for the descendants and friends of Jabez Bacon.

in highly centralized government and Jefferson feared they had ambitions to restore a monarchy, allowing the aristocracy to rule. The Federalists had managed to pass the Alien and Sedition Acts, which among other things made it treasonous for a citizen to criticize the president or government. This came with a two-year prison term for breaking the law. I was surprised to find that parts of this law are still valid today.

Jefferson opposed this law on grounds of its unconstitutionality and held some other radical beliefs such as the government that governs the least governs the best He supported the Bill of Rights and above all the freedom of speech and the separation of church and state.

All of this research has made it a bit easier for me to drive by that marker outside of Jackson. I also discovered more facts about the early progressive causes of the Republican party. After the Civil War, they passed two Civil Rights bills and created three amendments to protect the rights of freed slaves. Later, Teddy Roosevelt campaigned for better labor conditions, food inspection, conservation of natural habitats, and the breakup of business Trusts in the business of controlling business.

Just imagine what it would be like to have Jeffersonian Democrats and Abolitionist Republicans acting in radical revolutionary ways today. Perhaps, we would see some constitutional rights restored to the average citizen. Perhaps, American Idol could no longer claim to have more folks voting for their candidates than citizens who voted in the last national election. Perhaps our news sources would provide us with real news rather than mere entertainment and the town hall meeting would once again allow citizens the opportunity of meeting with each other and sharing opinions on the news of the day.

course workers, food service attendants and maintenance workers. They are filled from online applications, said Bill Johnstone, Metroparks human resources officer.

Ypsilanti Township's Web site has a page dedicated to seasonal employment opportunities and includes an application.

There were 21 positions available for spring and summer jobs. Most are already filled.

"We start hiring in February, offer safety training and a thorough orientation for seasonal help. These are good jobs," said Regina Myree, human resources representative. "Plus, employees get the perk of free entry to any of the township parks."

The township also advertises at area colleges.

What sort of paycheck can these kids expect?

Day camp counselors, minimum age 16, make $8.50 an hour with the Ypsilanti Township programs and are expected to work about 40 hours a week with youngsters ages 5 through 12. Previous experience working in a recreation setting with children is preferred. The Chelsea camp pays the same, but only hires a few 17-year-olds and prefers people 18 or older to maintain a desired camper-to-counselor ratio.

Park rangers schedule staff, supervise attendants and patrol the parks and make $10.50 an hour, working 25 to 30 hours a week. These folks need a course in park administration or law enforcement to make the grade.

Scooping ice cream is sweet work at Mickey's Dairy Twist in Saline, where more than 50 teens applied for seven openings this summer. Ten more returned, for at least their second summer, to round out the scooping staff who each make a bit less than minimum wage, which is $7.15 an hour, and split the tips.

Cart personnel at Hickory Creek Golf Course make $6 an hour and get to play all the golf they can squeeze in April through September.

Employers do have to be careful hiring youth. The Fair Labor Standards Act sets wage, hours worked, and safety requirements for minors. The rules vary depending upon the particular age of the minor and the particular job involved.

Basically, the FLSA sets 14 as the minimum age for employment, and limits the number of hours worked by minors under the age of 16. Kids 13 and younger can babysit, deliver newspapers, caddy, referee youth athletic games or work as an actor or performer and get paid.

Once they are 14 or 15, teens can work in an office, grocery store, retail store, restaurant or movie theater, but must punch out by 9 p.m., or by 7 p.m. during the school year, and log no more than 18 hours in a school week or 40 hours in a non-school week.

Kids ages 16 and 17 can legally do just about anything, as long as the job doesn't affect their health or safety. They cannot work in hazardous jobs such as mining or roofing or operate dangerous equipment.

More information is available at www.youthrules.dol.gov.

Work permits are required for young employees ages 11 to 18. The Michigan Department of Labor and Economic Growth has authorized each school district to issue work permits for minors.

Eileen Owen works in the main office at Saline High School and issues work permits to students. Like other districts, she and her office staff colleagues have the authority from the state to review the information from the prospective employer, including wages and hours, and authorize a minor to work.

"We have to keep up on employment laws and often call the Department of Labor (and Economic Growth) for their help. We take a look at the job description and the hourly schedule to be sure everything is on the up and up," Owen said.

"We tell parents to read the back of the form because sometimes employers will try to take advantage of younger workers."

How are teenagers doing so far on the job? Check out some of their responses on the Heritage Web site. Log on at www.Heritage.com and click on video.

The human resources department at Work Skills Corp. in Ypsilanti also guards the rights of young workers. The company, founded by parents of high school students with disabilities, helps youth and young adults with barriers and disabilities find summer jobs.

The agency provides employment and training services, helps kids develop a resume and runs three factories where youth and the disabled can work.

"We've placed 800 people in seasonal or long-term temporary positions since January," said Roxane Kania, account supervisor for Action Associates, the staffing arm of Work Skills, where the average placed employee makes $8 to $12 an hour and works 40 hours a week.

For students ready to work, but unable to land a job so far this summer, don't run for the beach quite yet.

Some businesses hire interns who work for the experience and the opportunity to test the waters in a career that seems interesting, rather than pay.

Also, students may consider reaching out to their communities as a volunteer with a charity organization. Habitat for Humanity has offices in Monroe and Ann Arbor, where a dozen houses will be constructed this summer. General laborers and office helpers are always welcome.

SOS Family Services in Ypsilanti, a family crisis management program that helps families deal with unexpected homelessness, and the Girlstown Foundation in Belleville also are looking for volunteers. Aid in Milan helps feed needy families year round in the area and is throwing a Fourth of July party for seniors and the disabled. Youth volunteers are being sought there, as well.

Brater backs gas-pricing proposal

By Sean Dalton
Staff Writer

It doesn't take long to find someone who isn't happy with gas prices.

"I try not to think about it," said Julie Smith, of Chelsea. "I have to fill up once or twice a week. It's starting to be about $50-60 (per fill up)."

The price of gas at the station she was at was $3.29 per gallon.

Democrats in the Michigan Senate are just as unhappy with the current state of the oil industry and fuel pricing, although they have to think about it, and are.

Several of them are taking a hard stance on predatory gas prices and the issue of rising gas prices in general.

Sen. Liz Brater, D-District 18, said that she is a firm supporter of a recent proposal by Sen. Gretchen Whitmer, D-District 23.

"I'm always a big advocate of consumer protection," Brater said. "If there is price gouging going on we need to take action."

Whitmer called for Michigan Attorney General Mike Cox to "aggressively combat predatory gas pricing,", and also declared her intention to push for a number of initiatives that would protect fuel consumers.

Those measures include adding price gouging to the Consumer Protection Act, creating a Web site that shows retail vs. wholesale gas prices, eliminating the requirement for a declared emergency to allow the AG's office to investigate gas price fixing or gouging, and statutorily setting and enforcing fines for fuel pipeline safety violations.

Whitmer also called for state support of the Federal Price Gouging Protection Act, House Resolution 1252.

"We should be doing everything we can to help struggling consumers, including removing any roadblocks in the process," said Whitmer. "If consumers are being taken advantage of, we need to know and we need to act."

HR 1252, primarily sponsored by U.S. Rep. Bart Stupak, D-District 1, passed the U.S. House of Representatives on May 23 on a 241-141 vote. It must now pass the U.S. Senate and dodge a presidential veto to become law.

If passed, companies that the Federal Trade Commission perceives to be profiteering during crisis situations, such as a hurricane or other disaster, would face criminal charges and be fined.

In addition to levying the penalties, the act would expand the FTC's ability to probe distributors of fuel and other refined products.

The announcement came as a first move on May 25, prior to Memorial Day weekend, and officials said that they hope to make progress before Labor Day weekend.

Both are traditionally heavy travel weekends that are typically occasion for fuel prices to rise drastically with increased demand.

The national average gas price is hovering around $3.20 per gallon right now, with Michigan on the high end of the trend with prices that more often are 20 cents higher.

According to Whitmer, Grand Rapids, Lansing and Detroit are among the top 10 U.S. cities with the highest fuel prices.

Brater said that she has seen prices as high as $3.50 around Lansing and intends to support resolutions brought to the Senate floor that would bring some relief to consumers, and subsequently the state economy.

But she also said that the state can't solve the problem by itself.

"Frankly, a lot of these things that we're talking about need to be done at the federal level in terms of creative alternatives," she said. "But protecting consumers is something we can do right here."

Brater also said automakers need to do their part.

"Certainly the market is going to be driving the Michigan automakers towards more and more fuel efficient vehicles," she said. "I think the market is going to take them there, I hope."

She also highlighted E85, a fuel blend of 85 percent ethanol and 15 percent gasoline, other alternative fuels and general conservation efforts to ease demand for gasoline.

On the other side of the coin, urban sprawl and an atrophied public transportation system are also exacerbating the problem, as Michigan motorists are left with few alternatives to operating their own vehicle, according to Brater.

"It's a big hardship for people in Michigan, because you don't have a lot of alternative transportation," she said. "I think one long-term solution is public transportation."

She mentioned building rail systems that connect population centers, or even a north-south rail line between Ann Arbor and Howell, as an example close to her district.

Brater has served on Gov. Jennifer Granholm's land use council, which has given her perspective on future development.

She was an advocate of creating concentrations of development so that population centers would grow around them, and people could get to and from work more easily, she said.

There are other solutions out there, but the state budget is restricting what the Legislature does, according to Brater.

"We don't have much money flowing from the state to the local government right now," she said. "When we have money again, I think we should look at structured revenue sharing to reward communities that are taking measures to stop sprawl.

"It's time that we look at these options. If we don't do something here, then international forces are going to keep prices high."

the season.

"For dairy cows you want more alfalfa because it gives them more protein," Jerry said. "The earlier you cut it the better the feed value, and the animal gets more nutrition.

"It all gets balanced; it's very scientific these days."

Cutting the alfalfa, collecting it and storing it takes a team effort.

During the recent first cutting, Jerry worked the mower, Nicholas picked it up and Denny unloaded the 5-ton hay wagon and put it in the silage pile.

"We'll have about 600 tons when we're done (with this cutting), which is about half of what we need for the entire year," Denny said.

"This is the first cut, and hopefully we'll cut three more times this year if we get enough rain."

A monthly calendar

Jerry Huehl, a partner in the Huehl Acres farm with his brother Denny, described a number of things that must be attended to on a monthly basis in order for a farm to be successful.

January: "Hauling grain to the elevator, working on equipment, Denny takes seed orders from other farmers, we meet with the fertilizer supplier over the next couple of months to figure out what we need and lock in a price."

February: "Pretty much the same as January, but in addition we do the first of two yearly hoof-trimmings for the cows. I also meet with the tax person in early February to get the books ready."

March: "Working in the shop, bedding the animals, hauling grain, snow removal, inspect and clear the fields of branches and other debris so we don't get a surprise when we're tilling and damage the equipment."

April: "Finish getting the equipment ready to plant."

May: Planting corn, soybeans, and any new hay seedings; we try to get most everything done by the end of May."

June: "Chopping haylage, making dry hay, which we'll try to do every four weeks through September."

July: "Harvesting red wheat, baling straw, empty the liquid manure lagoons and spread it on the fields."

August: "Making more hay, plant a fall seeding of alfalfa."

September: "Chopping corn for silage in fields."

October: "Harvest soybeans and corn, putting high-moisture corn in silos to ferment, harvest remaining corn."

November: "Finish up fall chores."

December: "We're usually [illegible]"

The weather watchers

There is probably no more important single aspect to farming than rainfall.

A sufficient amount can guarantee a good harvest and a profitable; year for the farmer.

Not enough or too much, and weeks of hard work – or an entire crop - can be lost.

While other farm fields in the area languished under water following a devastating downpour on June 3, Denny said Huehl Acres was lucky.

"We were actually pretty fortunate here; we got about an inch and a quarter, we didn't get the 3 or 4 inches other places got," he said.

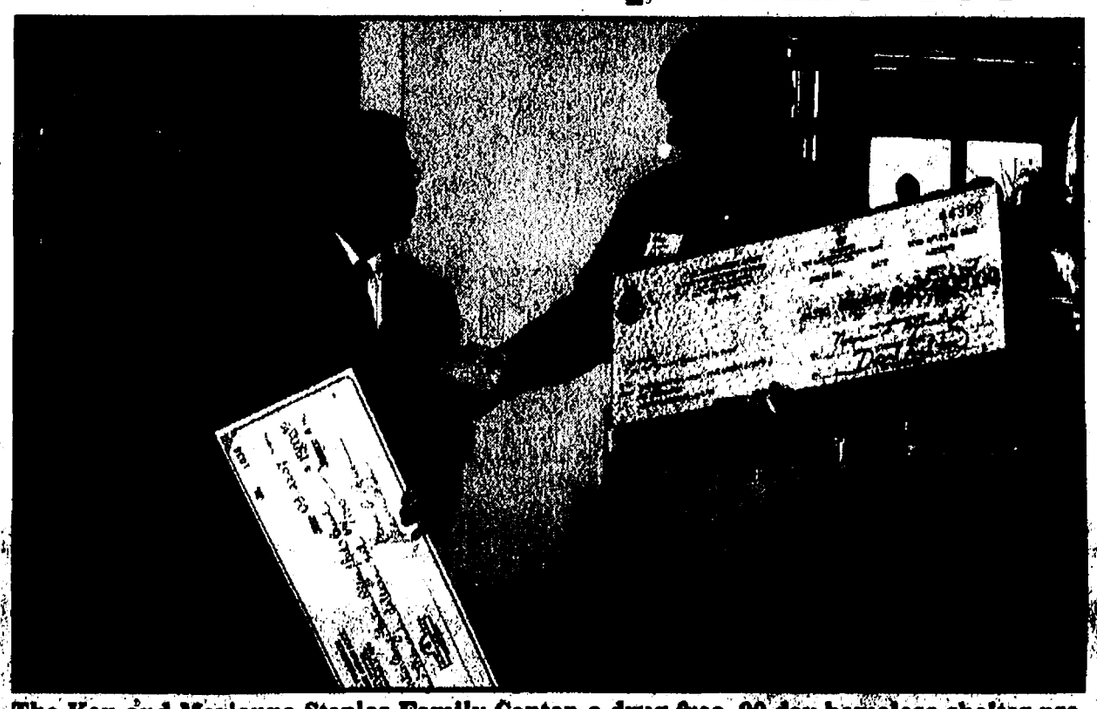
"There was a real narrow band where it was the worst. We dodged a bullet."

Once the first cutting of hay is done, the farm can settle into a routine that changes much from month to month, but little from year to year.

Farmers are certainly busy during planting and harvesting, but Jerry Huehl said there is still plenty to do every single day of the year, particularly for a dairy farm:

"Cows have to be milked and cared for every day; the feedlot has to be cleaned and scraped to dispose of the manure at least twice a week; and every two weeks a veterinarian comes to check the animals' health," he said.

Homebuilders help homeless



The Ken and Marianna Staples Family Center, a drug-free, 90-day homeless shelter program operated by The Salvation Army of Washtenaw County, recently received a $60,000 donation presented by the Washtenaw County Home Builders Association. The WCHBA provided Ken Staples, benefactor of the Staples Family Center, with an initial $15,000 donation. In turn, Staples and Allan Lutes, president of the WCHBA Foundation Board, presented the $15,000 to Dick Purtan, who then gave the group a 15 minute matching time during the 20th annual Dick Purtan Bed & Bread Radiothon on Feb. 23. WOMC radio personalities and Purtan's People Big Al and Rebecca Rhoades took live on-air phone donations, raising an additional $45,000, for a total of $60,000 for the Staples Family Center.

through intentional harming or neglect," she said. "They're harmless in a captive setting.

She also said that while this initiative appears to be only about animals, it's equally important as a safety measure for people too.

"There are a lot of studies done that say that an individual who commits these crimes on animals will commit the same types of violent crimes on humans, whether it's children or a spouse" Byrnes said. "We believe that by strengthening the penalty and the ability of the prosecutors to charge these perpetrators, we can go a long way to stopping similar abuse on humans."

Comparison between penalties for humans and animals is one of the hurdles that the legislation has to get over, she said.

"Some people were concerned that we don't do enough consecutive sentencing for humans, so why do it for animals?" Byrnes said. "But I think that's not a reason not to have it. It's just to provide the judge the tools. It would not be mandatory.

"For a long time people have been unaware that there haven't been stiff penalties for animal cruelty, and unfortunately the situation in Superior Township brought that to our attention, and it's our intention to remedy that problem."

Guest Editorial: Tim Walberg

All Americans will feel effects of tax increase

Tim Walberg, a Republican member of the U.S. House of Representatives from Michigan, recently wrote an op-ed piece for the Washington Times. He recently sent a copy to Heritage Newspapers to share with the communities he represents in Washington.

In his budget message to Congress in January 1963, President Kennedy wrote, "Lower rates of taxation will stimulate economic activity and so raise the levels of personal and corporate income as to yield within a few years an increased — not a reduced — flow of revenues to the federal government."

Unfortunately new leadership in the U.S. House of Representatives has chosen to ignore Kennedy's exemplary fiscal insight of years ago.

Democrats in Congress are discounting advancements made possible by the 2001 and 2003 tax cuts passed by Congress and are trying to slap U.S. taxpayers with a $400 billion tax increase that will slow our economy's current progress.

If Democrats follow through on their budget promises, the American people will face the following:

* A $500 per child tax increase.
* A 55 percent Death Tax.
* A 13 percent tax increase for many small businesses.
* A 33 percent tax increase on capital gains.
* A 164 percent tax increase on dividends.

I believe Republicans and Blue Dog Democrats in Congress must join together to ensure the American economy is not crippled by a massive tax increase. I recently introduced the Tax Increase Prevention Act, legislation that would make permanent tax relief passed in 2001 and 2003.

My bill simply takes away all the sunset provisions of the 2001 and 2003 tax relief packages that passed Congress and provides American families and job-creators the certainty to plan for the future.

If my bill becomes law, the American people will see none of the tax increases Democrats are proposing on things like marriage, childbirth, adoption, earning money, saving money, paying college loans and dying.

A recent Heritage Foundation study revealed the Democratic plan would raise taxes by $3,019 for each person in my south-central Michigan district. Also, the Heritage study revealed this tax increase would cause 2,272 job losses in south-central Michigan and cost my district's economy $207 million.

These numbers are not exclusive to my district, as 100 percent of Americans will feel the effects of this massive tax increase.

The critics say making tax relief permanent will eliminate large amounts of federal revenue, but tax revenue correlates with economic growth, not tax rates.

There is no reason not to make this tax relief permanent. The tax cuts of 2001 and 2003 are working, as evidenced by recent news that more than 40 states report higher tax revenue than expected this year.

I cannot even begin to imagine how bad the current fiscal crisis in my home state of Michigan would be had we not benefited from tax cuts in 2001 and 2003.

These very successful cuts have provided workers, entrepreneurs and investors needed relief to get the U.S. economy moving again. Congress needs to leave more resources with the hard-working people and small businesses that make our communities strong by accepting no more tax increases.

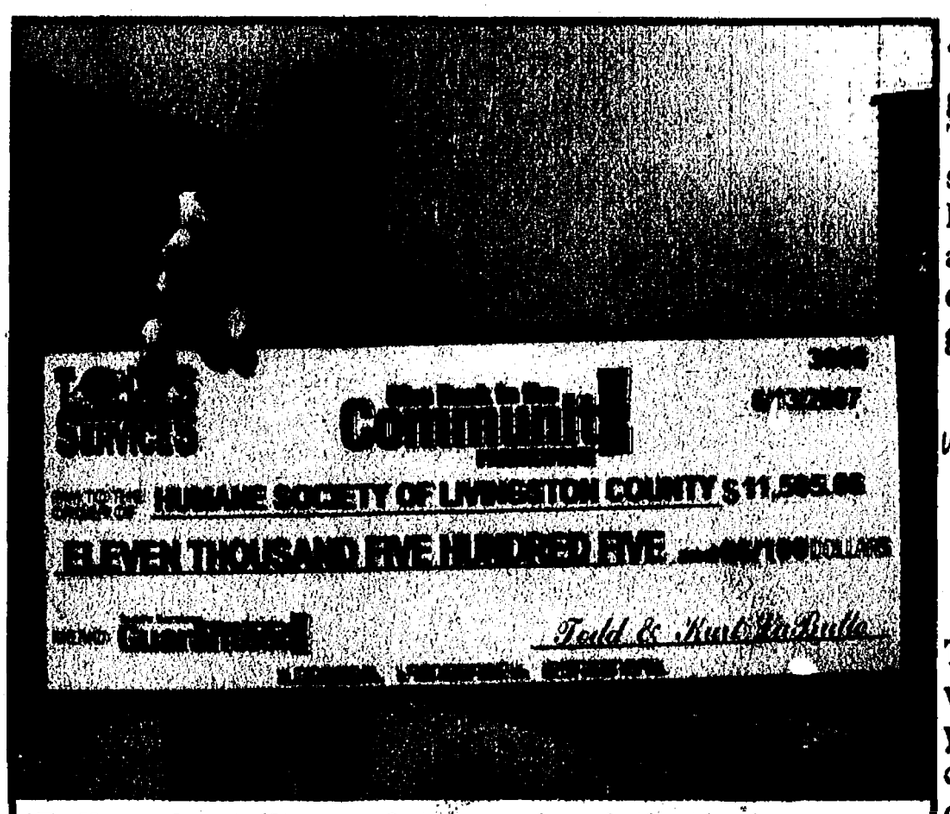
$1 MILLION DONATED!

Give Back Program Overcomes Economic Times



The Humane Society of Livingston County is one of many local, non-profit organizations benefitting from Todd's Services Give Back to the Community Program. Sarah Mews, operations manager and Billie Jean (an 8 week old puppy) receive a check for $11,505.66.

One-Million Dollars has been donated to local, non-profit organizations through Todd's Services Give Back to the Community Program. Several organizations have asked how long can they expect to receive donations, because the money is so pivotal in their operation. "The economy is tough right now and expenses are up, but we will do everything we can to keep the Give Back to the Community Program going," commented Todd LaButte, co-owner.

In July of 2005, Todd's Services Inc. (TSI), a family-owned landscaping company, located in Livingston County, initiated their Give Back to the Community Program as a way to say thank you for 29 years in business. Todd's Services makes a donation (up to $500) from each sale, big or small, to the customer's favorite local, non-profit organization. Kurt LaButte, co-owner stated, "We are so grateful to our customers. Without their support and patronage, we wouldn't be able to make these donations."

"We've been through these economic slow downs before, and it will get better! Michigan is a beautiful state with incredible natural resources, including its people. We do not have to contend with the worry of natural disasters such as hurricanes, earthquakes and drought. We get to enjoy all four seasons, and we have all the fresh water our state needs. Few states have all these things in common with Michigan."
Todd and Kurt LaButte, co-owners, Todd's Services.

Todd and Kurt attribute the success of the program to an increase in patronage from the community. "We're keeping our prices low and giving discounts to get the business. There are no opportunities for fuel surcharges in this economy," said Kurt. "Our customers realize they are getting the most for their money with TSI. As a matter of fact, we guarantee it."

Todd's Services Guarantees we will be your best value on landscape packages. If Todd's Services is not, we will give you 10% of our bid in cash.

The public has voted TSI their Favorite Landscaping Company– 7 years in a row. "This consumer confidence has allowed us to keep our heads above water in a tough economy, and continue to support the community," said Todd.

Acknowledging that many homeowners might be putting off landscaping this year for financial reasons, TSI decided to offer items such as mulch to the public - at their cost. This allows homeowners' to keep their landscaping looking good AND at the same time generate a donation for a local, non-profit organization. Mulch prices are as low as $24.00 per yard, free delivery included!

Josh Robinson, top salesperson commented on what's selling this year, "Stamped concrete patios with brick sitting walls and corner pillars. Many of my customers are also requesting a fire pit built into the patio. People are reinvesting in their homes. Our great financing programs have given my customers an affordable way to make landscaping improvements.

In order to help keep donations flowing, TSI is offering homeowners a free consultation with a landscape professional and a complimentary color landscape design for their home.

Letters from the Organizations

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Kaviany,

You recently had landscaping work done by Todd's Services, Inc. and you selected Kid's Wings as a recipient of the TSI Give Back to the Community Program. We recently received a check for $360.00.

These funds go towards our effort to help people in medical and financial need, especially children, get to or from their medical treatment facility. A six year old youngster from this area is being treated for a sinus tumor, and seems to be making progress. It is heart warming to be able to help by providing free transportation for the weekly round trip.

Sincerely,
Richard Lawarence

'We all need to be in the fight'

By Sean Dalton
Staff Writer

Gloria Leininger has been combating the physical, mental and emotional pain caused by cancer with a soothing touch for the past 13 years.

Leininger

Now she is bringing that touch to the first Dexter Relay For Life event for all to benefit from, in an effort to raise money for the American Cancer Society.

Leininger and a few volunteers will be offering chair and table massages, from 1 to 9 p.m. during the event, for a minimum $1 per minute – all of which will go to the ACS. Those who wish to pay more to benefit the cause or simply make a regular donation through her booth are welcome too.

She has been involved with Ann Arbor's Relay For Life for the past five years, as well as the Strides Against Breast Cancer Walk, the Susan G. Komen Race for the Cure and the Christy Fund: Community Care Center. She has also volunteered for massage services at Arbor Hospice.

"I have a good following of cancer patients who come to get a massage at my office, so my involvement has been pretty heavy with the cancer community," she said. "A lot more people than we know or realize are affected and we all need to be in the fight, so I'm trying to do my part."

Even though her practice doesn't restrict clientele acceptance to cancer patients – helping those who suffer from stress, sports injuries and other illnesses too – Leininger said that those touched by cancer hold a special place in her heart.

"You get close to these people and you kind of go through their treatment with them," she said. "I've probably lost four or five patients and it's been hard. I've (also) had a couple of aunts that had cancer. I lost a close friend of mine to (it)."

Leininger opened her Dexter office, Healing Arts Center for Massage & Wellness, at 8005 Main Street, in 2002 and just recently ended part-time employment with St. Joseph Mercy Hospital Cancer Care Center in Ann Arbor to focus full-time on her practice last January.

Her philosophy is that relaxation is integral to quality of life, and those that need such aid the most are often the most ill among us.

"That's one of my main goals," Leininger said. "When you're going through treatment, it's a lot of stress, not just emotionally, but physically as well.

"It gives (patients) something good during a difficult time in their lives. It gives patients hope. I try to encourage that in my patients."

Kids of the Bates Parents Relay Team help attract cars to the group's car wash. Co-Captains Lori Sarns and Regina Bell (right) help wash cars. Bates Parents Relay for Life Team hosted a benefit Car Wash/ Bake Sale at the United Bank and Trust, raising $578.18 for the American Cancer Society. Dexter's inaugural Relay kicks off Saturday at 10 a.m. at Cornerstone Elementary School. Stop by for an afternoon of activities and games for the whole family.

Cancer survivor: Karen Calhoun

Dexter's Karen Calhoun is one of many cancer survivors who will participate in this weekend's inaugural Relay For Life in Dexter. Karen shared some of her reasons for joining in to help beat cancer.

What type of cancer were you diagnosed with?

Ductal Carcinoma In Situ (breast cancer), in two areas on the right side and one area on the left side.

What was going on in your life when you were diagnosed?

I was diagnosed on May 18, 2004 and my oldest son David was graduating from Dexter High School and we also had an active 9-year old at that time. It was important to me that this did not take over our life and that David's graduation party went on as planned.

What treatments did you undergo?

I had bilateral mastectomy's and a tran flap for reconstructive surgery. A tran flap is when they use your own tissue to reconstruct the breasts. In my case they used my stomach tissue. I was in surgery for 12 1/2 hours.

How has cancer affected your family; then and now?

Our family does not take each other for granted anymore. We were always close, but the whole experience has made us much closer. Everyone was shaken by my diagnosis because cancer does not run in my family and I was only 42 at the time.

What is your advice to others going though treatment?

Act quickly, do your research and make sure the treatment you choose is the best one for you. It may not be the easiest decision you make, but it will be the most important one. Stay positive throughout the whole process. How you deal with it effects the ones you love.

Karen Calhoun with husband Eric and sons David and Ryan.

How has life been since your defeat of cancer?

I know it is hard to believe, but as devastating as the diagnosis was, it has brought me closer to my faith, strengthened the bond between me and my husband, and made me appreciate life much more. It was a very humbling experience.

Team game

Each team participating in the Relay For Life will have events going on during the event. For example, the Kings & Queens are offering nail-polish changes from 10 a.m. to noon on Saturday. Haircuts from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. by Great Clips and 1 to 4 p.m. on Saturday by Hair Loft. "We also are having a silent auction of some artwork as well as a used book sale," said Jill Love, one of the team leaders. "We are also going to offer 'creative cutting' of Relay t-shirts, a dip in the kiddie pool, and hair braiding by our volunteers. We are trying to put together some fun all-nighter games. We're going to do everything we can to raise that last $1,000 we're missing to reach our goal." Dexter Flowers is donating 300 (that's right 300) carnations for Kings & Queens to sell for donations the day of the relay.

Purple Rose Gala Premier Benefit set for June 29

In celebration of opening its 61st production, the world premiere "Sea of Fools," The Purple Rose Theatre Company will hold a Gala Premiere Benefit on Friday, June 29.

Hosted by Dawn and Jeff Williams, the Gala Premiere Benefit will begin at 7 p.m. with live music and hors d'oeuvres in the PRTC lobby, followed by a performance of Sea of Fools. When the curtain goes down, a full course dinner will be served for Gala guests at the award-winning Common Grill restaurant.

Tickets for the event are $200 ($125 is eligible for a tax deduction); purchase of two or more tickets qualifies the purchaser for advance donor ticket sales during the 2007-08 season.

The evening's guest of honor will be "Sea of Fools" writer and director Matt Letscher. The Michigan native actor is a graduate of the University of Michigan and appeared on the PRTC stage in the world premieres of Jeff Daniels' "Tropical Pickle" and Lanford Wilson's "Rain Dance."

Letscher also has appeared on Broadway in "The Rivals" at Lincoln Center and in the world premiere of Neil Simon's "Proposals" and in regional theatres across the country. His major film credits include "Identity," "Straight-Jacket," "Super Sucker," "Madison," "Gods And Generals," "The Mask Of Zorro," "Lovelife" and "Gettysburg."

The all-star cast of "Sea of Fools" includes Sandra Birch ("Norma & Wanda," "Blithe Spirit"), Grant R. Krause ("When The Lights Come On," "The Subject Was Roses"), John Lepard ("The Late Great Henry Boyle," "Bus Stop"), Janet Maylie ("Blithe Spirit," "Completing Dahlia"), Suzi Regan ("Rain Dance," "Criminal Genius"), John Seibert ("The Mystery of Irma Vep," "Escanaba in da Moonlight") and PRTC Artistic Director Guy Sanville ("Born Yesterday," "Boom Town").

This PRTC production is generously underwritten by The Glades Foundation.

Tickets for the Sea of Fools Gala Premiere Benefit are available by calling the PRTC administration office at 1-734-433-7782. Seating is limited and you must RSVP by June 25.

All proceeds benefit The Purple Rose Theatre Company.

'Escanaba In Love' moves on to the Gem Theatre

Jeff Daniels' immensely popular "Escanaba In Love" is hitting da road.

Daniels' prequel to the record-breaking "Escanaba in Da Moonlight" will open in previews at the Gem Theatre in Detroit on Sept. 12 with an official opening night on Sept. 19. Tickets for the original Purple Rose Theatre Company production go on sale July 6.

Escanaba In Love, Daniels' 11th new play, originally premiered at The Purple Rose Theatre in September 2006 and became its longest-running and most-attended show.

The Gem Theatre production, directed by Guy Sanville (who also directed the original production), will include the original Purple Rose Theatre Company cast.

Escanaba In Love brings a touching, romantic comedy element to the rugged hunter-humor of Michigan's favorite yooper family.

As deer hunting season arrives, the Soady men meet their biggest challenge; not a great buck, or a hunter's dream, but the camp's first female visitor, young Albert Soady Jr's impromptu bride Big Betty Balou. Daniels' hilarious humor kicks into high gear when the Soady men make their best attempts to grapple with their newest family member.

Tickets ($39.50, previews $19.75) go on sale at 11 a.m. Friday, July 6 for performances through Nov. 4 and will be available by calling 1-313-963-9800, TicketMaster Charge By Phone 1-248-645-6666, online at www.ticketmaster.com, and in person at the Gem Theatre box office and all TicketMaster locations.

Show times are Wednesday through Saturday at 8 p.m., Thursday afternoons at 2 p.m., Saturday afternoons at 3 p.m. and Sundays at 2 and 5:30 p.m.

The Gem Theatre is located at 333 Madison Ave. in Detroit.

'Lobby Hero' checks in at Kerrytown Concert House

Redbud Productions presents the local premiere of award-winning playwright Kenneth Lonergan's acclaimed comedy-drama "Lobby Hero," a Drama Desk, Olivier and Outer Critics Circle Award nominee for Outstanding Play. The reading will take place at 8 p.m. on July 25 at Kerrytown Concert House in Ann Arbor.

Nathaniel Fremuth is the confused security guard who stumbles onto a murder investigation while attempting to make the right choices in life in this acclaimed play – which also features Emily Rogers, Khurum Sheikh and Alex Thomas. Tim Grimes directs.

Set in a Manhattan high-rise apartment lobby, Jeff (Nathaniel Fremuth) is the graveyard shift lobby security guard trying to get his life together after being thrown out of the navy. Things seem to be going well, especially since his supervisor, William (Alex Thomas), has taken him under his wing.

At the same time, things are looking good for rookie cop Dawn (Emily Rogers), whom Jeff befriends. Her older and highly admired partner Bill (Khurum Sheikh) has taken a keen interest in her. But the lobby proves to be no sanctuary from the world. Jeff is drawn into a murder investigation involving William's troubled brother – and Dawn reveals to Bill that she knows he is having an affair. Each of these individuals must decide what the "right thing" is to do next.

Kerrytown Concert House is located at 415 North Fourth Avenue in Ann Arbor. Reservations may be made by calling 1-734-769-2999.

Waterloo hosts Education Weekend

The Waterloo Area Historical Society (WAHS) will host its annual Education Weekend on the grounds of the organization's Farm Museum. The event is scheduled for 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday and noon to 4 p.m. on Sunday.

Education Weekend honors the organization's mission "to foster an understanding and appreciation in children and adults of the pioneer farmers of Michigan, their family life and their children's schooling."

This year's event will feature more opportunities for children and adults to enjoy hands-on pioneer experiences. Spend the day in the Civil War Encampment or learn how to make socks on a 19th century sock machine. The baker will be busy in the bakehouse, the blacksmith in his shop, Mr. Realy in the barn, and Mrs. Realy in her garden.

The weekend culminates from noon to 5 p.m. on Sunday as guests join Michigan's statewide Log Cabin Day celebration. Guests can observe a young couple setting up housekeeping in their log house.

This two-day event is free to the public, and light refreshments will be available for purchase. The schedule begins at 11 a.m. on Saturday with the organization's traditional Blacksmith Festival. Area blacksmiths will demonstrate their craft in the Farm Museum's workshop, the place where pioneer farmers created and repaired their hand tools and implements. Some wrought items will be available for purchase.

WAHS's 10-room farmhouse will be open for tours as well, with admission of $3 for adults, $2.50 for seniors age 62 and above, and $1 ages 5-16. For additional information on Education Weekend, contact Event Coordinator Arlene Kaiser at 1-517-851-8788.

Game over

Chelsea falls to Orchard Lake St. Mary's in quarterfinals

By Don Richter
Sports Editor

Chelsea baseball lost to Orchard Lake St. Mary's 3-1 in a Division II state quarterfinal match up at Livonia Ladywood June 12.

The Eaglets (28-12) avenged a 5-0 loss to the Bulldogs (28-10-1) in last year's Division II state semifinals.

This season, St. Mary's advanced to the Division II state final before losing to Mt. Pleasant (39-1) 7-4.

Against the Eaglets last week, Chelsea had multiple opportunities to break the game open.

"We just couldn't get the big hit," said Chelsea coach Wayne Welton. "We couldn't get it done. That's the way the game goes. We were just one big hit away from winning. The breaks didn't go our way.

"St. Mary's was able to pitch out of trouble. They were able to hold us down."

The Eaglets scored early in the first inning taking a 1-0 lead.

In the third inning, St. Mary's increased its advantage to 2-0.

The Bulldogs answered in their half of the third inning, as senior Ben Bradburn forced a walk with the bases loaded, cutting the Eaglets' lead to 2-1.

Despite threatening in the fourth and fifth innings, Chelsea was unable to gain control of the game.

In the fourth frame, Bulldog seniors Dan Augustine and Chad Nielsen recorded consecutive singles putting runners at first and third base with no outs. As it had the entire game, Orchard Lake was able to wriggle out of trouble, pitching out of harm's way.

In the fifth inning, Chelsea loaded the bases with one out. Once again, the Eaglets pitched out of trouble, holding the Bulldogs scoreless.

Chelsea senior Dan Augustine hugs Bulldog coach Wayne Welton after last week's 3-1 season-ending loss to Orchard Lake St. Mary's in the Division II state quarterfinals.

In the sixth inning, St. Mary's added an insurance run for the contest's final margin.

Augustine started the game for Chelsea throwing the first three innings. Nielsen closed out the contest tossing the final four innings.

"They both pitched well enough to win," Welton said. "It was a very good performance."

Both clubs finished with seven hits apiece.

"We came up just a little short," Welton said.

Despite losing in the state quarterfinals, Welton remained upbeat.

"We had an outstanding season," he said. "We were SEC (Southeastern Conference White Division), district and regional champions. We were one hit away from going to Battle Creek (site of state semifinals and finals). This is a good group of guys who can play with anybody. We accomplished a lot with these guys.

"I'm very proud of the team. The seniors have been a special group. It's always sad to see it end."

Earning All-Southeastern Conference White Division this season for the Bulldogs were senior pitcher Dan Rhodes, senior shortstop Adam Connell, Augustine as a pitcher-outfielder and Nielsen as a pitcher-infielder.

Named All-SEC honorable mention for Chelsea were senior outfielder Travis Amburgey and senior pitcher Todd Elliott.

Selected All-District and All-Region were Rhodes, Amburgey, Nielsen and Connell.

Rhodes finished 9-1 overall on the mound, with a 1.05 earned run average.

Augustine finished with a .466 batting average, with 50 total hits. He also was 16-of-16 in stolen bases. As a pitcher he ended up 6-2 overall.

Connell batted .405, with 49 hits. In the past two seasons, he has over 100 hits. On the base paths, he finished with a school record 41 stolen bases this year. He shattered the old mark which was 30 stolen bases.

Nielsen finished with a .427 batting average, with 52 hits. He was 5-1 on the hill this season. For his career, he won 21 games, which puts him in the top five all-time at Chelsea.

Earning the Coaches Award for leadership, dedication and commitment to the Bulldog program throughout their career were Rhodes, Augustine, Connell and Nielsen.

"They're all outstanding leaders," Welton said. "They're all team players. They all have the right stuff."

Running

First ever Run for the Rolls ready to go

By Don Richter
Sports Editor

What started out as simple conversation at a Chelsea hair salon earlier this year, turned into something much bigger for Cindy Triveline.

So big, that Triveline's idea has turned into reality. Innocent salon chit-chat started in motion what will become on Aug. 25 Chelsea's first ever Run for the Rolls.

Run for the Rolls will be a one-mile run/walk throughout town just prior to this year's Chelsea Fair Parade. The run/walk, which will begin at 12:30 p.m., will follow the parade route through Chelsea. The overall first-place winner will receive Common Grill rolls, hence the name.

"Everyone can participate in Run for the Rolls," said Triveline, a hairstylist for 25 years at In Chelsea Hair Designs. "There is no age limit. We are accepting walking strollers in the back (of race group) so the whole family can participate. There will be enough time to do both the race and be in the fair parade."

Triveline, an accomplished athlete in her own right, who has run four marathons and two Olympic distance triathlons, said everyone is welcome to take part in the inaugural Run for the Rolls.

"There will be new runners/walkers and there will be accomplished runners," she said. "It will be a staggered start, so there will not be a faster runner behind you."

Triveline, who was a cheerleader at Hanover-Horton High School, as well as a member of the school's golf, volleyball and softball teams, said the idea for the Run for the Rolls occurred while she was styling hair.

"We were talking one day at the salon about how Chelsea needed another running race," she said. "It went from there. I thought, 'Why not?' Chelsea loves festivities and a run/walk is just that. It gets the whole community involved."

Triveline, 44 and a married mother of two (husband Don, Gabrielle, 12 and Dominic, 10) said she learned a lot about organizing an event like Run for the Rolls from the races she's competed in for the past 20 years.

Chelsea's Ginger Sissom (left) and Cindy Triveline hope this year's inaugural Run for the Rolls one-mile race/walk draws a cross-section of people including experienced runners, to families, to walkers pushing strollers. This summer's event will precede the Chelsea Fair Parade Aug. 25.

"You want as many people to participate as possible," she said. "During my years of talking with clients about running, a lot of people get intimidated with numbers being kilometers and miles. They cannot visualize start to finish, so this race needed to be simple, but very fun.

"My motivation for the race is to introduce a big race atmosphere at a small scale. I want the race to not be intimidating to anyone that is thinking about running. I want people to run with their family and friends and to be supported by the community. Families are going in so many directions with their children that it is difficult to have time together. Everyone comes home for the Chelsea Fair. It (run/walk) is a great opportunity for a family to do an event together and then watch the parade and go to the fair. It gives Chelsea another reason to get fit with the support of the community."

Triveline said she loves living in Chelsea.

"It reminds me of where I grew up," she said. "It's a friendly, caring community. Also, Chelsea has endless possibilities. Chelsea has everything in such a small area. You can live here with a good quality of life."

Enhancing part of Triveline's quality of life is her dedication to running and physical fitness.

"I love to run," she said. "I didn't run in (high) school, I thought it was too tiring, but when my mother, who was a runner, started collecting more trophies and medals than my siblings and I, we decided to check it out. It went from there.

"I saw how happy running made my mother and how many friends she made from it. I love running in the morning and watching Chelsea wake up. I get to plan my day and think about the race. I want to be a role model of health to my children like my mother was to me. They think I'm cool for doing the race."

Longtime community organizer Ginger Sissom said Triveline, who's lived in Chelsea for the past 14 years, is ready to tackle the challenge of planning and carrying out the Run for the Rolls.

"She has already done awesome things for the schools," she said. "She's ready for a larger community project. I've encouraged and supported her along the way. It's been a lot of fun watching her. I enjoy cheering her on."

Triveline, who's been involved in fund-raising for the past five years and who spearheaded the implementation and construction of the shade structure on the Pierce Lake Elementary School playground, comes from a family of volunteers.

Turning clay into art

Local artisan focuses on functional pieces

By Sheila Pursglove
Special Writer

Pottery can be two parts inspiration, one part frustration. Just ask local artisan Maureen Lochey, who's been throwing pottery on a wheel – and sometimes on the floor – for the past three decades.

She finds inspiration in everything and everyone.

"Because I make mostly functional pieces — plates, cups, bowls — on the wheel, I'm always thinking what could you use around the house, in the kitchen, bathroom, hung on the wall or maybe a garden piece, and make it attractive when being used.

"The enjoyment I get from creating pottery pieces is that you are taking a sticky, dirty, worthless — which it is at this stage — piece of clay and making it into a piece of art or a functional piece that will be enjoyed by others for years to come."

Sounds simple – but turning clay into art pieces is not easily attainable, she warns.

"My floor has been littered with the pieces of my failures, smashed in anger and frustration," she says. "I've yelled at my wheel and probably have thought I should just sell it at least a dozen times, and then maybe smashed a few more pots. Then you pick up the pieces and try one more time and usually there's some success.

"My love of clay has always drawn me back to create satisfying, pleasing to the eye, creations. I believe it gets in your blood."

Lochey is an Ann Arbor native who has called the Manchester area home since 1976, where she and her husband, Larry, raised their children and now enjoy their grandchildren.

The pottery studio in their Sharon Township home has a wheel in the garage and a slab roller for hand building, extruder and glazing tables in the basement – a set up that works well for her, she says.

Lochey was drawn to her craft after attending Ann Arbor art fairs from the first one to the present day.

"I bought pottery for years at the Ann Arbor Street Fair – a lot of it – and back in 1977 I could not afford to buy as much as I wanted, so I decided to learn how to make it myself," she says.

"I took a class or two, but I am basically self-taught."

Classes and workshops keep her trying new and different techniques as well as drawing support and inspiration from fellow potters.

One newly learned technique is hand-building, a method she now incorporates in her work.

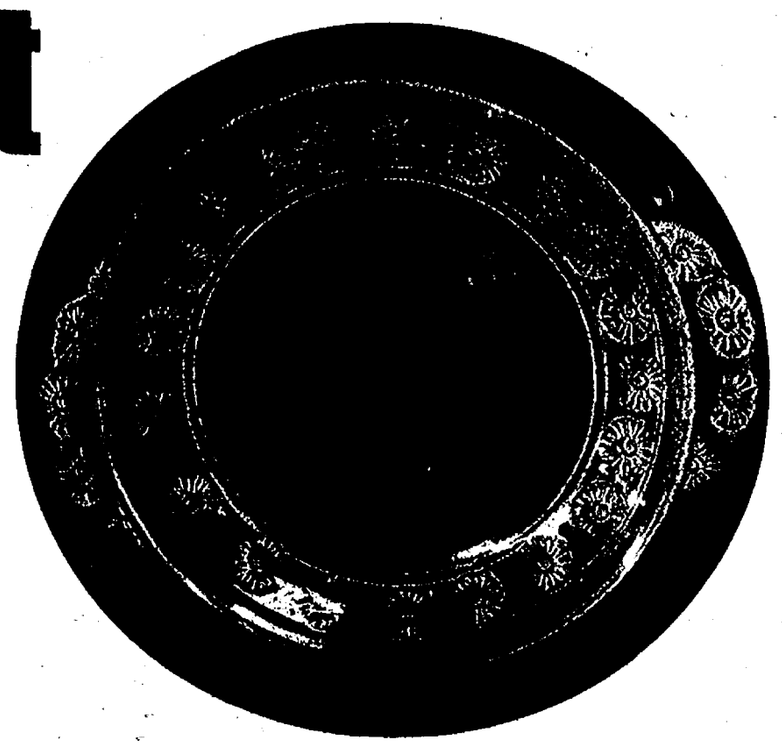
"I only started hand-building classes about three years ago," she says. "After seeing the benefits, I doubt I'd ever stop. It's just too much fun."

With wheelwork, the pottery is basically going to be round, and if you're experienced, repeatable, she explains. The shape can be altered somewhat, and design and texture can be added at the leather hard stage, right before it's completely dry when a potter can handle the piece, and work on it without losing its shape.

"This is a much faster way of creating pottery, if you've mastered the technique of wheel throwing," she says.

Handbuilding starts with a flat slab of clay that can be wrapped around a cylinder, cut out, or laid in a mold. It can be textured with lace, pinecones, coral or with leaves, Lochey's own favorite.

"Your piece can be anything your imagination will allow," she says. "No two pieces will ever be exactly alike. It's also a much longer process. Of the two, wheel work is what I enjoy the most. Hand building is a close second."



"My love of clay has always drawn me back to create satisfying, pleasing to the eye, creations. I believe it gets in your blood."

Lochey participates in 5-10 area shows each year and has exhibited and sold her "Country Hills Pottery" at the Ann Arbor Art Fair, the Dixboro Fair, Webster Fall Festival, Pioneer High Fall Show, Jackson Pottery and Clay Guild's Fall show, Ann Arbor Farmers Market, Clinton Fall Festival, RiverFolk, Art on the Farm, and many more.

She plans to host a "home show" at her studio this fall, for past patrons and collectors, featuring her complete line-up and one-of-a-kind offerings.

Family recipes have fascinating histories

By Sheila Pursglove
Special Writer

And you thought food was just for eating.

In fact, there's often a fascinating story behind those family recipes, as members of Friends of McKune Memorial Library in Chelsea are finding out.

The group plans to publish a community cookbook to commemorate the library's Smithsonian exhibit, "Key Ingredients: America By Food," a companion exhibit from Michigan State Uni-versity, "Michigan Foodways," and "Chelsea Foodways," the library's own local exhibit.

Local residents have until July 1 to turn in recipes so Friends can get the books published by December in time for holiday gifts.

The Friends Cookbook Committee – Daphne Hodder, Angela Berent, Jane Wilhelm, and Friends Vice President and Fund-raising Chair Sharon Pignanelli – has contacted previous Chelsea Community Fair Champion Homemakers and Champion Junior Homemakers to solicit recipes and stories.

"We hope we haven't missed anyone. If we have, we'd still love to have one from them," Pignanelli said. "We're now in the process of personally contacting Chelsea business leaders, many of whom have deep roots in the community.

"Our original goal remains the same, to produce a cookbook that reflects the history of food in our community as a whole. This is a chance to record for future generations the role foods played in your family's history."

Pignanelli is submitting her grandmother's recipe for Celery Seed Dressing.

"During the 1920s, my grandmother and great-grandmother ran a lunchroom in Detroit in order to generate money to pay for my mother's dancing lessons. They were both great cooks.

Key Ingredients: America By Food

"Later, four generations of us lived together for many years so I was a very willing taste tester for the wonderful dishes that came out of the kitchen. If only I had realized my good fortune and saved more of those great recipes!"

For cooks who are more comfortable with a whisk than with words, Pignanelli says "stories" are not mandatory, but are encouraged, and can be very brief – a few sentences will do, such as the story by Lori Campbell who submitted "Kadin Campbell's Apple Cobbler."

"It's a great example of the kind we are thrilled to get," Pignanelli said. "The story is what caught my eye. I could just see Lori's mother singing and dancing while getting ready to make that pie! And it is a multi-generational recipe that most likely will be passed down and modified for generations to come.

The apple cobbler is a multi-generational recipe, Campbell wrote.

"It started with my Grandma Byrdie's mix of spices. I don't remember a single family holiday where my sister Kelly and I didn't remind everyone that we HAD to have Grandma Byrdie's apple pie.

"I still laugh at my mother's made-up song listing the spices to help her remember what to pull out of the cupboard — nutmeg, allspice, cinnamon, vanilla — accompanied by a unique shimmy-shake. Grandma Byrdie is now great-grandma Byrdie. I created this cobbler-like recipe based off of her special combination of spices, and named it after my son."

Recipe submission forms are available at the Library, River Gallery, West of the Moon Gallery, Gourmet Chocolate, and Garden Mill. Completed forms should be returned to the library. Residents who can't get out to pick up a form can call Pignanelli at 1-734-475-5829 to arrange a pickup.

Two hurt in I-94 rollover crashes

By Edward Freundl
Staff Writer

A rollover crash on eastbound Interstate-94 at Kalmbach Road early Tuesday resulted in the driver and her passenger being hospitalized.

According to Trooper Steven Temelko, the driver, 41-year-old Kelly Sparks, a resident of the west side of the state, and her 9-year-old daughter were traveling to Detroit Metropolitan Airport when the crash occurred at about 6 a.m.

As Sparks entered the first curve, she lost control of the vehicle and rolled twice in the ditch on the right side of the highway.

Both were transported by Huron Valley Ambulance to the University of Michigan Hospital for minor to moderate injuries.

The right lane of I-94 was shut down for approximately an hour while the victims were cared for and the accident investigated.

Speed and wet road conditions are believed to have contributed to the crash, Temelko said.

This Ford sport utility vehicle was involved in a rollover crash last Thursday on I-94 at Pierce Road. It was struck by another vehicle trying to avoid a family of ducks in the roadway and lost control, sending both into the ditch. No one was injured.

Motorists are lucky ducks

In another I-94 rollover crash at about noon on June 14, a Jackson woman and a Tecumseh couple narrowly avoided serious injuries on westbound I-94 at Pierce Road.

According to Trooper Craig Ziecina of the Michigan State Police Ypsilanti Post, Linda Haddo, 46, of Jackson had slowed down in the passing lane to avoid a family of ducks crossing the roadway when she lost control of her vehicle.

The front and rear driver's-side tires dropped onto the left shoulder, causing Haddo's white Mitsubishi sedan to spin into the right lane and strike a Ford sport utility vehicle driven by Wilford Browty, 61, of Tecumseh.

This caused Browty to lose control of his vehicle and overturn several times in the right ditch, coming to rest in a thicket of brush about 100 feet off the highway, narrowly missing a stand of trees.

Haddo's car also came to rest in the right ditch near Browty's vehicle.

Both drivers and Browty's wife refused medical treatment at the scene.

Ziecina said the ducks and a poor driving decision are believed to be causes of the crash, and Haddo was cited for careless driving.

No ducks were harmed in the crash.

Women's Club celebrates with dessert, cards

The Woman's Club of Chelsea ended their Marathon Bridge Club year with a dessert and card party held at The Pines in Chelsea. After four rounds of bridge, prizes were awarded to the following high scorers in league one and two.

League One winners were Laurie Gravelin and Jane Shrosbree with a total of 20,580 points for the 2006-2007 season. Second place was taken by Donna Gaunt and Frances Lorenz with 17,680 points.

League Two, which plays in the fall and spring, was led by Michal Taylor and Lynn Dills with 9,580 points and in second place were Marjorie German and Shirley Chapman with 8,420 points.

The ladies were given an opportunity to sign up for next year. Anyone interested in playing or receiving more information should call Jinny Johnson at 1-734-433-9825.

The profits from this group are used to support the many charitable organizations which the club, along with it's newly formed Bunco Club, underwrite each year. The Bunco Club meets once a month at The Pines.

Farmers Market

The Chelsea Farmers Market runs every Saturday morning through October from 8 a.m. to noon.

Each month, the market has special activities. A Children's Booth series invites children to create a craft free of charge. The Chef's Series features chefs from area restaurants who prepare a special free sampling for market customers. Music, horse and buggy rides and a gift basket giveaway every month are donated by the vendors.

All crafters and artisans sell Michigan handmade arts and crafts. For more information on scheduled activities, log on to chelseafarmersmkt.org.

Final bell

Book reviews

Latest releases will keep young readers smiling

The Chelsea Standard and Dexter Leader introduce new titles from Sleeping Bear Press. The publishing company, located in Chelsea, publishes books for children. For more information on the company as well as it's growing catalog, log onto www.sleepingbearpress.com.

By Jennifer Sinkwitts
Special Writer

It is never too early to begin reading to your child; the earlier the better. Reading aids in story comprehension, letter recognition and is often an opportunity to snuggle up with your little one and wind down from the strains of the day.

"Reading is fun," exclaims my three-year-old son after our nightly reading routine. "Yes, it is," I reply as I close the book and in unison we chime "the end."

Reading takes you places you never imagined. How many times has a child, or an adult for that matter, flown in a hot air balloon or rode bare-back on our stripy friend found only in the wild or at the local zoo? Not often.

Reading is exercise for the mind. It strengthens the imagination. Through wild adventures or weepy sorrows we tag along, page after page, anticipating the next sentence.

This month, Chelsea's publishing company, The Sleeping Bear Press, has me surprised and thrilled with three new book releases.

"The Tsunami Quilt" By Anthony D. Fredericks and Illustrated by Tammy Yee

Anthony D. Fredericks takes us on a journey to the Pacific Tsunami Museum in Hilo, Hawaii. Through his storytelling we see a beautifully crafted quilt hanging on the wall. The colorful quilt is made up of 24 squares; each square has a person's name sewn inside. This quilt, which hangs today, commemorates the people who lost their lives during the April 1, 1946 tsunami.

The day's events are captured on paper and history is brought to life in his children's book 'The Tsunami Quilt."

It wasn't just another day in paradise when an enormous earthquake in the Northern Pacific generated the tsunami that took the lives of 24 students and teachers from the Laupahoehoe School.

This story tells the tragic event from the perspective of a young boy named Kimo. This sad tale is intended for an older reader, one who understands both history and tragedy.

The pictures alone could tell this story. On the cover, a young boy hides behind a tree, watching as an engulfing wave swallows the land.

It is this boy who, many years ago, lost his little brother in the Tsunami. And it is this little boy who has stolen the heart of his grandson, Kimo, today.

Through Tammy Yee's illustrations one can feel the love that is shared between a boy and his grandfather. We see them fishing together. We see them walking on the beach, hand-in-hand, together. We see Kimo looking up at his grandfather with big eyes and a serene grin, letting us know there is no place he would rather be. They are best friends.

Each April, Grandfather took Kimo to Laupahoehoe point. At this place, each year, Grandfather would place a plumeria lei on the monument stone. Peacefully, his grandfather would rest his weathered hand on the remembrance site and stare out at the sea. One day he told Kimo that when he was older he would "learn why this place is both a place of tragedy and a place of remembrance. For now, know that the ocean is both a friend and foe. It gives, but it also takes."

This book is about bringing history to life. It is about respecting and honoring those we lose. It is about coming together and dedicating something beautiful to the ones we love.

"Paul Bunyan's Sweetheart" By Marybeth Lorbiecki and Illustrated by Renée Graef

This sweet and innocent love story will capture your heart as you travel through the American wilderness, passing log homes and dairy farms on the way.

The theme "Americana" didn't get its name for nothing. The primary colors best used to describe this scene are used by Renée Graef without hesitation.

The pages are decorated with reds and blues and lots of gold in between; it is easy to imagine living in the frontier.

What is not easy to imagine is a giant-sized lumberjack that stands taller than the pine trees, and in his trail leaves behind footprints the size of small ponds after a spring rain.

This giant is not the typical giant that scares us out of our wits. This giant is sweet and tender and madly in love.

His love for Lucette Diana Kensack is not easily returned or not until he can prove there is more to him than a giant man who cuts down trees.

Lucette is an environmentalist. She wants to breathe fresh air and swim in clean lakes. She doesn't want to pick up after a lumberjack who spends his days cutting down trees. She preserves nature; her mate of choice will, too.

Lucette stands as tall as he. No one knows if it was the smallpox that took her parents, that made her grow or if she ate too many wild berries while being raised by a family of bears or, just maybe, she was meant for Paul Bunyan.

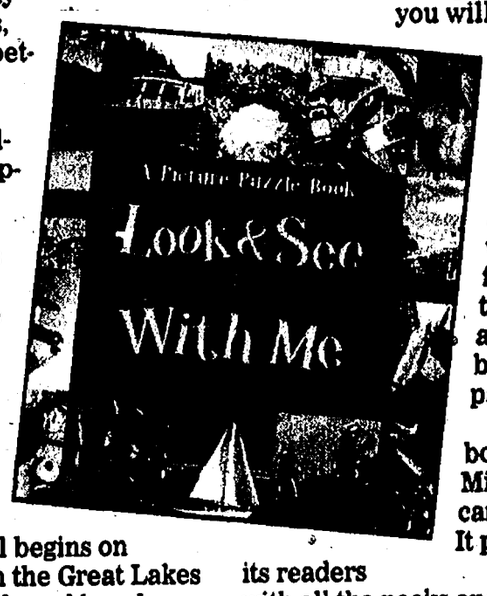
"Look and See Michigan with Me" By Kathy-jo and Ed Wargin

This picture puzzle book is a great addition to the family stash of treats to ease the long, tedious car ride up-north on a hot summer weekend. So, turn off the DVD player and put this in the hands of your child.

Flip the pages and you will see why the state-of-Michigan is one of the most-traveled states in the Midwest.

This husband-and-wife team Kathy-jo and Ed Wargin created this puzzle book as a tool for young and old readers alike to learn of Michigan's landmarks while focusing on duplicate pictures.

The readers are encouraged to study the pictures, using the poetic descriptions and hints provided in the captions, to determine the changes from one scene to the next. Each page indicates how many changes can be found.



Our travel begins on the beach in the Great Lakes State. Towels and beach balls line the water; 16 changes can be found, here.

More changes can be found as we trek through the book. We land on Mackinac Island where we will see boats, horses and beautiful mountain peaks. You can almost taste the fudge as you wander on to the next page.

Fishing along the way, we come to the Henry Ford Museum. Here, you will learn that the windmill is the oldest in the United States.

With the flip of each page, you will bike and hike and in-line skate. Through this book you will travel through the motor city, smelling tulips along the way and feeling the wind as sailboats pass.

This book is Michigan's candy store. It provides its readers with all the nooks and crannies found in the state of Michigan, while also leaving tidbits of history along the way.

"Look and See Michigan with Me" is the first of a delightful new series of books. Certainly, there is more to come.

Read about Mackinac Island's haunted side

Famous for fudge and a slow-paced resort lifestyle, Mackinac Island also has a somewhat dark and tragic history.

The island, and the waters around it, have seen a couple of wars, several deadly accidents and even a few murders. All of which have left behind more than mere pages in a history book. Yes, many have come to call Mackinac Island a haunted hotspot.

The ghosts that inhabit the island have provided a number of residents and tourists with the experience of a lifetime. In fact, the author of a new book "Haunts of Mackinac" believes that the island may be one of the most haunted locations in the world.

Author Todd Clements has written the first and only book on the subject of ghost stories, legends and tragic tales from Mackinac Island. Within the pages of his book, readers are taken on a tour of the Island's hair-raising history through 46 brief but informative stories. Clements also includes additional details such as a brief introduction to ghosts, maps, location addresses (first book from Mackinac Island to include them) and a haunting and ghostly activity scale. If you have been to Mackinac Island or have yet to visit, "Haunts of Mackinac" will both inform and entertain readers.

"Haunts of Mackinac" is the first book written by Clements, who has spent time on Mackinac Island almost every year since he was a young boy. On his trips to the island he has always had an avid interest in the strange and unexplained, making sure to note the tales he discovered.

Decisions at retirement

money WISE

By Cyril White

For many investors, retiring is a very challenging financial transition. Not only are you faced with a number of important lifestyle decisions, like where and how to live – you're also likely to be dealing with the most money you've ever had to manage.

Trying to manage employer retirement plans, Individual Retirement Accounts (IRAs), stock and mutual-fund investments, and estate planning for a rewarding retirement can be daunting. To avoid costly mistakes at retirement, here are a few suggestions that can help with planning.

Take an Inventory.

Before making any decisions, it's important to take a step back and assess all your assets — including savings and checking accounts, stocks, bonds, mutual funds, IRAs, employer retirement plans, Social Security, and in some cases your residence. Any debt you are carrying — mortgages and equity lines, car loans, credit-card debt and so on — should also be tallied and subtracted from your asset total. The difference is your net worth.

Knowing your net worth will help you create realistic financial objectives and a budget that can help improve your retirement readiness. This information is also useful in evaluating your asset allocation and planning an investment strategy that will enhance your golden years.

Asset Allocation

Finding a comfortable balance (or weighting) of stocks, bonds and cash for your portfolio during retirement will help you meet your financial needs and reduce the impact of market volatility.

For many years, experts agreed that upon retirement all assets should be shifted to low-risk fixed-income products like Treasury bonds and certificates of deposit (CDs). Regular income from these investments was often expected to cover day-to-day expenses through a short retirement. But thanks to improvements in medicine and technology, retirees are now living longer lives. Retired investors who use a fixed-income-only strategy today may be at serious risk of not being able to combat inflation and maintain their current standard of living.

To avoid financial hardship, you should plan for a retirement of as much as 30 years, depending on your age and health. In view of this considerable length of time, devoting a portion of your assets to equities, most of which are more aggressive investment vehicles than fixed-income products, is often recommended. A financial advisor can help you develop a plan that is tailored to your objectives, age, health and assets.

Employer Retirement Plans/IRAs

Just as each employer retirement plan has its own rules for participation, rules for distribution also vary. In most cases, a retiree can elect to receive a lump-sum payout, roll the amount over into a traditional IRA, or receive the money via periodic payments over a specified period of time.

Before you decide which distribution option is most advantageous, factors like your age, health, other savings, and current tax situation should be carefully evaluated, along with how much money you would receive from each option — after tax.

Another important decision facing retirees is what to do with assets in an IRA. If you are between 59? and 70?, you can withdraw as much or as little from your traditional IRA as you like, without penalty. The withdrawal will be subject to ordinary income tax, and the amount remaining in your IRA will continue to potentially grow tax-deferred.

By April 1 of the year after the year you reach age 70?, you must start taking required minimum distributions (RMDs) based on your life expectancy. If you fail to take the required amounts, an IRS penalty of 50 percent of the amount you should have taken is assessed.

Unlike a traditional IRA, the Roth IRA does not require minimum distributions at any age.

Estate Planning

If you don't already have a well-conceived estate plan at retirement, it's not too late. An estate plan is essential to ensuring that your wealth is passed along exactly as you intend — with minimal delay and erosion by federal and state taxes.

Because estate taxes can consume a significant portion of an inheritance, it's a good idea to work closely with a financial advisor, as well as your legal and tax advisors, when crafting an estate plan. Depending on your assets and tax situation, a number of different strategies, including gifts and trusts, can help reduce estate taxes.

This overview highlights some of the major financial decisions that must be faced at retirement. To learn more about managing your assets for a rewarding retirement, contact your financial advisor.

Girl Scouts and Boy Scouts from Dexter raised $715 in a bottle drive Saturday for Pride and Honor Flights of Dexter. The group raises money to take World War II veterans to Washington D.C. to see their memorial.

Volunteers needed for 'reading the river' program

Ever wanted to learn how to "read a river?" Now's your chance.

"Reading a river" is done by measuring the condition of the bed and the banks, measuring water flow and making other observations of the stream and surrounding habitat as part of a team. Following this training by the Huron River Watershed Council, teams of volunteers will schedule a time to make these measurements on one stream site in the Huron River watershed.

"The study will help to measure the impact of development on our streams," said Joan Martin of the Huron River Watershed. "As we add pavement and other impervious surface to the land, we send storm water rushing into our streams, which erodes the banks and destroys much of the habitat in the river. The measurements you will be making will help us understand where these impacts are taking place and assist in protecting these streams from further damage."

Martin says many of the sites are beautiful and the results are useful.

"We study each site every five years," she said. "Some sites have shown improvements in the physical conditions of several sites, such as less sediment in the bed, and some have degraded."

The free hands-on workshop will be from 2 to 5 p.m. on Sunday, July 22. No prior knowledge or experience is necessary. Register by contacting Martin at jmartin@hrwc.org or 1-734-769-5123 (ext. 11).

Some of the sites that need study this is summer include Boyden Creek at the golf course, Horseshoe Creek in Hamburg, Mill Creek at Jackson Road and Mill Creek at Warrior Park.

POTTERY

West of the Moon, an artists' cooperative gallery on W. Middle Street in Chelsea with about a dozen members.

"I've been a member for two months now and I love it," she says. "It's a wonderful venue for my pottery and all the art in the gallery are by local artists with one of a kind gifts.

"It's fun when a customer comes in and oooh's and ahhh's over all the art. Most customers find something to purchase and say they plan to come back."

Craft shows are similar, she says. "It's fun talking with people that come by and I'm still amazed to hear someone say, 'I bought a piece from you last year, love it, I want another one.' Besides saying thank you, I think to myself, 'Wow, how cool - they came for my pottery.'

"You do have to love what you do because craft shows are extremely hard work, usually long hours and unpredictable weather and sales."

Lochey enjoys sharing her passion for pottery, although her summer schedule of craft shows is has put teaching on the back burner for now.

"I've had only one student, a 12-year old neighbor," she says. "It's been fun to watch her progress. After only a few weeks of teaching she has started to work on her own and come up with some very creative ideas.

"I would rather teach kids because I feel they are so open suggestions and trying new things."

A Wedding parable

FAITH PAGE

Ministerial Message

By Pastor Mark Porinsky
Faith Lutheran Church

The guests arrived at the reception hall. It had been a fine wedding. The church was bright and cheerful, with just the right decorations. The music was joyful. The little flower girl and the ring bearer were just the right amount of cute, without being overly distracting. The bridesmaids and groomsmen all came up the aisle as planned. The preacher made some appropriate remarks, and managed to keep the service nice and short. And before the guests knew it, it was over and they were heading for the reception.

To their surprise, when they arrived, they found that the bride and groom had made it to the hall ahead of them. The guests had all assumed that the wedding couple had left the church in order to have photographs taken. But now as they entered the reception hall, there were the bride and groom...making a total mess of the place!

They had obviously been moving from table to table, sampling food and wine, dirtying as many plates, glasses, and pieces of silverware as they could. The tablecloths were all soiled. There were chunks taken out of the wedding cake. The punch bowl had been broken into. The floor was sticky from the bride and groom hurriedly running around with food and punch and slopping it all over the place. The guests just stood at the door in shock.

Everything I've said so far is so absurd that no one could imagine it ever happening. No bride or groom, no matter what their social background, would want to present their guests with such a messy reception hall.

The sad fact is, many a bride and groom present their guests with something far worse: They are very careful to make sure the outward details of the wedding are immaculate; but they have been sampling the married life long before the guests arrive at the wedding. They have already been cohabitating as husband and wife for months, or even years.

The difference, of course, is that they have been doing so without any real commitment to each other. Yet, on their "wedding" day, they pretend that something new and special is taking place. Why, there are couples who, after living together for years, still insist on the groom not seeing the bride before the ceremony on that day (can you say "hypocrisy"?)

Of course, not one of us can claim that our hearts are totally pure. And there have always been those who have given in to the temptation not to wait for the wedding day. But up until recently, even most of these did not flaunt it. It's also true that there are many these days who honestly don't know better, because they haven't been brought up according to God's moral standards. And many, especially women, feel forced into it because that's what their man wants, and they don't want to lose him.

There is a solution. No one can undo the past, but you can receive God's forgiveness for the past, and get a fresh start for the future. "The blood of Jesus His Son purifies us from every sin," the Bible says (1 John 1:7).

Whatever your significant other (who might now be your spouse) feels about this, please don't let your bad decisions of the past be an obstacle between you and your God. I would be glad to speak with you about this, and, upon your expression of repentance, to assure you of God's forgiveness, and to help you put your life in order as far as that can be done. So would any other clergyman with Biblical principles.

Explore Michigan's natural wonders

Have you ever been stumped by your child's questions while walking in the woods, or wondered aloud about the sights and sounds of the outdoors? Do you know that Michigan forests helped build cities such as Chicago and Detroit? Or that nearly 300,000 acres of sand dunes lie with two miles of our coastlines?

Do you know how big the Great Lakes are or why our hunting and fishing heritage is so important? Seven Natural Resource Visitor Centers at Michigan State Parks and Recreation Areas, the two Michigan Fisheries Visitor Centers at the Oden and Wolf Lake state fish hatcheries and the full-time interpretive program at Tahquamenon Falls State Park, answer these questions and challenge you to explore Michigan's natural wonders, including its wild animals, aquatic resources, history and unique physical features.

Park Interpreter Elizabeth Brockwell-Tillman leads a dune hike on Thursdays all summer long at Hoffmaster State Park near Muskegon. According to Brockwell-Tillman, "Little Creatures of the Dunes is a family favorite because the kids love discovering all the tiny insects and other creatures that make their home in the dunes."

Stop by any visitor center and you'll be greeted with an array of interactive displays, dramatic dioramas and spectacular multi-media presentations. But don't spoil the fun by telling the kids they will be learning something at these centers. They'll be too busy managing a forest, digging for a fossil or making music from the sounds of croaking frogs and chirping grasshoppers to notice.

But there also are a host of special events and other scheduled fun things that await you and your family this summer at one of the 10 locations where the Department of Natural Resources has a full-time interpretive program. Who said learning can't be fun?

For the rock hounds in the family a trip to the Eddy Discovery Center at Waterloo State Recreation Area offers an up-close view of how the Ice Age created Michigan's kettle lakes, bogs and marshes. Kids can see and hear the weather forecast from 10,000 years go, play interactive touch-screen games and watch a working bee hive from behind glass.

At the Gillette Sand Dune Visitor Center at Hoffmaster State Park near Muskegon, visitors pack the classroom each Saturday morning to witness the "Feeding Frenzy" program, which is feeding time for all the native Michigan fish and reptiles on display.

At the Wolf Lake Fish Hatchery Visitor Center, located near Kalamazoo, in addition to daily tours of the hatchery, visitors can enjoy a full schedule of free programs Tuesday-Friday, and children 5-16 can fish at the show pond each Saturday. Don't miss the center's annual Fish Fest, July 21-22, when children 5-16 can fish at the show pond and the entire family can enjoy more than 20 booths, each offering educational and fun activities.

At the Saginaw Bay Visitor Center in the Bay City Recreation Area, "Message from the Marsh," every Saturday at 7 p.m., features storytellers and musical performances by folk artists and historians who recount Michigan's history.

Near Grayling, stop by the Michigan Forest Visitor Center at Hartwick Pines State Park. In addition to a full schedule of daily activities, the center hosts three summer festivals.

Families also can step back in time at the Oden State Fish Hatchery Visitor Center by touring the restored Wolverine train car. This historic exhibit depicts how employees of the old Michigan Department of Conservation lived on the train while transporting and stocking fish across the state.

At the Carl T. Johnson Hunting and Fishing Center at Mitchell State Park in Cadillac the entire family can try their hand at catching "the big one" on the center's fishing simulator or tour the exhibit room where big game mammals are on display.

The Great Lakes Visitor Center at Ludington State Park holds a series of evening programs at its amphitheater. During the day, visitors can enjoy a guided hike to the site of a shipwreck. Along the way, youngsters will have fun looking for washed up "treasure."

Every day at beautiful Tahquamenon Falls State Park, campers and visitors for the day can take part in guided hikes, children's activities and all kinds of events that will make their visit more memorable. Stop at the interpretive station along the trail to the Upper Falls to learn more about the daily activities and special events planned for the summer.

If the western Upper Peninsula is your destination, be sure to visit the Wilderness Visitor Center in the Porcupine Mountains Wilderness State Park near Ontonagon. Interpretive activities, scheduled daily throughout the summer, include sunset hikes, historic mine tours, a hike to a bear den and, weather permitting, an astronomy program.

Restoration was a community effort

Chelsea is much more than a village - it is a community. Proof of this statement was evident last weekend as scores of volunteers descended on Timber Town for a much-needed renovation.

One of Chelsea's gems, Timber Town was built in 1996 through a project spearheaded by Gloria Mitchell and Julie Rutherford. The 12,000 foot playscape has been enjoyed by thousands of children and families in its ten year history. It seemed only natural that Amy Mitchell, daughter of founder, Gloria Mitchell, organize the restoration project and bring it to fruition. And that she did.

Amy Mitchell came together with other devoted citizens to form The Friends of Timber Town, comprised of Dennis Crawley, Jeff Dehring, Tracie Faupel, Jim McInnis and Michelle Mitchell. A good group of friends in deed. With the help of the community through fund-raising, donations and sheer muscle power, these folks ushered Timber Town to its original state of glory – with a few improvements. It was a long and arduous process, but for Amy Mitchell and the Friends of Timber Town, it was a labor of love.

After nearly a year of effort and anticipation, crowds of visitors cheered and children frolicked as Timber Town reopened for the first time since early May. With sweat still on their brows, volunteers joined friends and neighbors for a joyous celebration including live music by classic rock band FenderBender, and a concession stand operated by the Chelsea Kiwanis with proceeds benefiting future park maintenance.

The park, located off Sibley Road, boasts swings for all ages and abilities, sandboxes, towers and walls for climbing, and wooden replicas of local landmarks. Among the new additions this year are a wooden police car and a fire engine water feature. The police car and fire engine were included as a tribute to Scott Sumner and Matt Tuttle – Chelsea heroes whose lives were tragically lost last year.

The Friends of Timber Town hope the park will serve many generations to come. However, in a time in which similar structures are being demolished in other communities across the country, it will take more than hope to keep Timber Town standing tall. Not to worry, while the hammers were still swinging, Amy Mitchell and her crew were hatching plans for long-term maintenance. With such a dedicated community there are surely great things in store for the park.

For those wishing to invest in the future of Timber Town, contributions can be sent by check to: The City of Chelsea for Timber Town, 305 South Main Street, #100 Chelsea Mi., 48118.
