NTSB report: Crash blamed on fuel

By Edward Freundl
Staff Writer

An inadequate pre-flight inspection led to the 2006 helicopter crash that took the lives of Chelsea's police chief and a fire captain, the final investigative report concluded.

The National Transportation Safety Board's final report of the April 13, 2006 crash also blames faulty fuel storage procedures at the home of Fire Capt. Matt Tuttle.

Tuttle, 28, and Police Chief Riley Scott Sumner, 43, were killed in the crash of Tuttle's private helicopter while pursuing a fugitive who had escaped on foot from a State Police traffic stop on I-94 near Dexter.

Sumner

Tuttle

Tuttle, who also was a reserve police officer, voluntteered his private helicopter for the search.

Witnesses at the scene said the helicopter appeared to lose power, as if it had run out of fuel, and crashed into a stand of trees near Jackson and Staebler roads.

The NTSB report, adopted July 25, pointed to water and sediment in Tuttle's fuel storage tank and in the carburetor of the helicopter's engine, rather than a malfunction of the engine or aircraft controls.

"Detailed analysis of the water and sediment found in the carburetor fuel indicated that the contamination was consistent with run-off from a building's roof," the report states.

"The helicopter engine was provided fresh fuel and operated successfully."

Chelsea Area Fire Authority Chief Jim Payeur was taken by surprise when told of the report's findings.

"As far as I know, none of the information was shared with us. This is the first time I've heard of it," Payeur said.

"That's too bad - Matt was extremely thorough in everything he did."

Messages left with Police Chief Ed Toth Jr. were not returned by press time.

School district goals give administrators, board a road map toward success

By Edward Freundl
Staff Writer

No organization can function effectively without clearly stated goals, and the Chelsea School District is no exception.

The district has adopted four main goals that guide the decisions that are made on behalf of students, teachers, parents and the taxpayers who finance the entire operation.

Killips

They involve academics, financial management, communication and school safety.

The school board determines the goals for the district, setting policies and giving overall direction for the district to reach them.

By necessity, those goals must be worded in a way to be applicable to a wide range of situations that may arise, and no one goal is more important than another.

"At the same time we're not involved in the day-to-day stuff, so we need to have something broad and encompassing," said Laurel McDevitt, president of the Chelsea School District board of education.

"We're trying to set a course for all our students, and we rely on our administration to come up with specific objectives."

The person who is in charge of those objectives is Andrew Ingall, Executive Director of Instruction and Community Services.

"The goals look very much like they did for the 2006-07 school year; in fact, the board of education has kept these same goals for a number of years," Ingall said.

"What changes each year are the strategies implemented to achieve the goals."

Goal 1: Increasing Individual Student Achievement

Ingall described several strategies being used to attain this goal:

Align professional development with district goals

Part 1

Over the next few weeks, The Chelsea Standard will take an in-depth look at each of the goals established by the Chelsea School District, and how it proposes to reach them.

"Simply stated," Ingall said, "if the professional development doesn't go toward directly increasing student achievement, we shouldn't be doing it."

Evaluate programs

Over the course of the year, administrators and staff examine programs implemented during past years under similar goals.

"Two key programs we will be evaluating are the reading intervention program at North Creek Elementary and the Instructional Consultation Team programs at Pierce Lake and South Meadows," he said.

"Also being evaluated is the impact of the sixth-grade laptop program at South Meadows."

Explore instructional delivery models

Two major potential initiatives presented at recent board meetings are trimesters at the high school and full-day, every-day kindergarten at North Creek.

"Both of these are currently being discussed at the board level and need board approval before implementation," Ingall said.

In addition, several programs continue to be implemented or are being monitored in their early phases.

"These include the teaming model at Beach Middle School and the Academic Learning Lab at Chelsea High School," Ingall said.

"ALL was a solution to the closing of Chelsea Alternative High School two years ago."

Local leaders praise state budget solution

By Edward Freundl
Staff Writer

The marathon negotiations leading to a temporary agreement on the state budget left this area's lawmakers holding their noses while voting to approve it.

"We reached an agreement that was the best under the circumstances, but I personally feel it might be a little insufficient," said Sen. Liz Brater, D-District 18.

Brater

Her counterpart in the House of Representatives said the process, while arduous, will have been worth it if it leads to lasting reforms.

"It was a long process, and that's what made it so difficult," said Rep. Pam Byrnes, D-District 52. "It prevents a lot of one-time fixes which we've been dealing with for the last several years."

The agreement between House and Senate leaders was reached just hours before a planned shutdown of state government services was to take effect on Monday, the beginning of the 2007-08 fiscal year.

The compromise includes a broad mix of revenue enhancements, further cuts to some programs, and reforms to how others are financed.

While the LaFontaine Automotive Group offers its customers "The Family Deal," the company also has in place the family plan, which includes a family member in each of their 13 locations in metro Detroit.

On Sept. 24 the LaFontaines welcomed another family member to the fold with the purchase of Saline Dodge, now called LaFontaine Chrysler Dodge Jeep, on Michigan Avenue in Saline. The dealership was previously owned by Gary Marl.

It's the automotive group's first expansion since it purchased the Chevrolet dealership on Dexter-Ann Arbor Road just west of Zeeb Road in Dexter in 2005.

Tempers flare at Sylvan board meeting

By Edward Freundl
Staff Writer

A report on Sylvan Township's finances quickly eroded into a display of strong emotions barely contained beneath the surface.

Township Supervisor Michael Williams reported on a "completely unacceptable" audit report delivered by Pfeffer Hanniford & Palka of Brighton.

"In my preliminary look at it, I was disturbed enough to call John Pfeffer," Williams said, noting that the auditor suggested the township had acted contrary to the law.

"The water and sewer fund paid out $203,000 to the general fund earlier this year; there is a $75,000 transfer to the sewer authority that is still listed in the general fund," Williams said.

"We got handed a final audit with no recognition of how this board has acted over the past year."

Trustee David Solo reminded Williams that the audit was not official until the board voted to approve it.

"I told Pfeffer this is not going to stand," Williams said. "Given what he knows about this township's finances and he did not even talk to me (before submitting the audit) – that will not happen again."

Solo chided Williams for not sharing the audit information with the board prior to airing his frustration in an open meeting.

"Why didn't you tell us so we could understand this and support you in this?" Solo asked.

The supervisor's response indicated a widening rift between the five board members.

"Why is it I'm the only one accused of not acting collegially?" Williams replied.

Solo repeated his appeal for Williams to be more forthcoming.

"I don't see anybody who wants to do anything but the right thing," Solo said.

"I don't understand why you didn't tell us this guy's not doing his job. You have a board behind you; do you disagree with that?"

Williams said quietly: "Indeed I do."

"If you're not talking to us, how the hell are we supposed to change that?" Solo replied.

Williams, a former chief financial officer in the private sector, again referred to his ongoing frustration with the way township business is done.

"I guess I'm reacting to the political climate in Sylvan Township," Williams said. "When I see $75,000 in receivables in the wrong place, it concerns me."

Township Clerk LuAnn Koch recommended that more than one board member meet with the auditor to explain his findings.

"I'd like this to be done properly," she told Williams. "You've already accused me of fraud, and this board needs to be involved (in the audit discussions.)"

Solo agreed.

"Having more than one person there is beneficial," Solo said. "We're willing to accept your leadership on this, Mike, but we want to be involved."

The Sylvan board agreed to schedule a work session with Pfeffer for 11 a.m. Wednesday to discuss the audit.

Report findings

The text of the NTSB final report on the crash, adopted July 25, 2007, is reprinted below:

"A private pilot was operating the helicopter as a local personal flight when it collided with trees and terrain during a forced landing.

"Witnesses related that the helicopter appeared to lose power, as if it ran out of gas, and that it came down fast, toward a road. The helicopter subsequently struck trees and terrain.

"An on-scene inspection disclosed no evidence of any pre-impact mechanical anomalies with either the flight controls or engine.

"Fuel samples were collected from the helicopter's carburetor and fuel tanks. Analysis disclosed water in the carburetor fuel, but none in the fuel tanks.

"A fuel sample was also taken from the pilot's storage tank at his residence, which was under a building without rain gutters.

"The fuel from the storage tank had a layer of water and sediment.

"Detailed analysis of the water and sediment found in the carburetor fuel indicated that the contamination was consistent with run-off from a building's roof.

"The helicopter engine was provided fresh fuel and operated successfully.

"During the investigation, an aviation mechanic related that about two weeks before the accident, the pilot had lost one of the helicopter's fuel caps, and had obtained a replacement cap.

"The National Transportation Safety Board determines the probable cause(s) of this accident as follows:

"The pilot's inadequate preflight inspection of the helicopter that failed to discover water in the fuel, resulting in a loss of engine power while maneuvering, and an in-flight collision with trees and terrain.

"Factors associated with the accident were inadequate fuel storage, and the low altitude of the helicopter."

City Council OKs police computer upgrade

By Edward Freundl
Staff Writer

The Chelsea Police Department will soon be able to increase its crime-fighting capabilities with the addition of modern computer technology.

Police Chief Ed Toth Jr. presented a proposal to the City Council on Sept. 25 to enter into a three-year contract with the county for a major hardware and software upgrade, as well as technical support.

Under the contract, the Washtenaw County Information and Technology Department will provide six new desktop computers, two new laptops with docking stations and printers, plus IT support for three years at a price of $24,920, or a little more than $8,306 per year.

"I looked at what our capabilities were, and we just had to have upgraded computers and the technical support for the department," Toth said.

Many of the department's machines are six to seven years old, Toth said, and operated on a variety of software that made them incompatible with each other.

The contract also gives police access to the county's vast array of professional development courses at no additional cost.

"They have a number of different courses on different topics, and that comes with it free," Toth said.

The chief said the current computer system was so outdated it did not allow for instant access to information from other police agencies, and would not even let him send e-mail to all offices within his building.

City Manager John Hanifan said the professional development component made it more than a simple lease.

"It is a professional services contract for three years," Hanifan said. "It's the hardware and software, but it also includes the professional development opportunities for training."

Hanifan said the purchase was included in this year's budget for technology upgrades.

"This is a great way to get us up to speed in a short timeframe at a very reasonable price," Hanifan said.

According to Toth, the new computers should arrive by the end of the month.

In other business, the City Council decided to take a look at establishing a formal purchasing policy.

The proposed policy calls for seeking three written quotes for purchases between $5,000 and $14,999; and competitive bidding for purchases exceeding $15,000.

The city manager would have the authority to make purchases or approve change orders up to $5,000.

That limit can be exceeded in cases of emergency, as long as the City Council is notified by its next regular meeting.

Hanifan described the differences between soliciting quotes and competitive bidding, other than the dollar amounts.

"The three quotes is more of an informal process by making phone calls or having them fill out a spec sheet or bid sheet," Hanifan said.

"Competitive bidding is a more formal process, in which companies submit sealed proposals."

The council will vote on the draft policy at its Oct. 9 meeting.

In celebration of National Senior Center Week in September, the Chelsea Senior Center honored Gladys Buck as its Senior Citizen of the Year with a special presentation and luncheon Sept. 12.

Senior Center officials said Buck has been "instrumental" in the growth of the center.

She served not only on the original advisory committee that recommended the center's formation, but on the center's board of directors since, including two years as president.

"She has been instrumental in creating and building many of the programs, including helping the Senior Center secure its current location at the Washington Street Education Center," said Executive Director Tina Patterson.

"Her boundless energy and belief in this program is an inspiration to everyone who knows her," Patterson added.

Buck said she was surprised by the award.

"It was a complete surprise — I have been very humbled by it; I am so very honored," Buck said.

"There are so many people who I feel worked just as hard. I didn't do any of this alone."

More than 60 people came out to honor Buck at the luncheon, which featured musical entertainment by Tune-In.

John Bohlender, president of the Senior Center board, presented Buck with an engraved glass plaque during the presentation.

Part of the engraving on the award reads, "You Are The Wind Beneath Our Wings," which signified the group's love and respect for Buck.

"Gladys has been an integral part of the Senior Center for many years and is one of the primary reasons that it is the successful operation that it is today," Bohlender said.

"She is very, very passionate about doing what is right. She frequently states how deeply she feels about the work that is being done at the Senior Center and how it affects senior citizens in a positive way."

Chuck Schauer has served with Buck on the Senior Center Board for eight years.

"Gladys has always been a bundle of energy. She works tirelessly for the center, and her main concern has always been for the members" Schauer said.

"She has always been fair and honest with everyone, and her integrity is second to none. Gladys deserves the honor of being selected as Senior of The Year."

Buck mentioned a couple of her favorite projects, including the road trips and the center's annual dinner.

"We go on about 24 trips a year, and that takes a lot of planning," she said, because between 30 and 50 people sign up.

The next trip is to the Grand Hotel on Mackinac Island in two weeks, and excursions to Vermont and Australia are in the works for next year.

"Then we have our annual dinner coming up on Nov. 15 to celebrate us and the achievements we've made."

Patterson said the center was "fortunate to have her as our biggest cheerleader," and Buck was not shy in sharing her feelings about the center.

"What an asset we are to the community," Buck said. "We have fantastic programs and an excellent administrator. We are growing by leaps and bounds."

Trimester meeting

A "Reorganization Forum" on trimesters will be held at 7 p.m. on Tuesday, Oct. 23 in the CHS Media Center.

Have you wondered how your child is supposed to take electives with the new graduation requirements? Have you wondered why a child has to wait until next year to make up a failed class? Have you wondered what has been gained by adding 28 minutes to the school day over the past few years? Have you heard of other schools being "on the block" or going to "trimesters?"

The Oct. 23 meeting will focus on these and other topics, including the benefits of reorganizing from Chelsea's traditional six-period day to a trimester or other structure.

Finances take another hit

By Daniel Lai
Heritage Newspapers

Michigan schools throughout Washtenaw County received another blow for state funding as many recorded a decrease in enrollment numbers this year.

On Sept. 26, districts across the state completed their annual September head count, an important task since schools generally receive $7,085 per pupil from the state. State funded school aid is based 75 percent on attendance on the fourth Wednesday in September and 25 percent on attendance on a date in February.

According to unofficial numbers released by area school districts, all with few exceptions, lost students.

Manchester Community Schools Superintendent Shawn Lewis-Lakin said the district reported a net loss of 18 students which brings the district's total enrollment to 1,309 compared to 1,319 last year.

Lewis-Lakin said based on last year's state funding, the district can expect a decline of $130,000.

"In planning our budget this summer, we estimated a flat enrollment," he said. "We expected enrollment numbers to be the same as last year's."

Lewis-Lakin said in the summer, the Board of Education budgeted for a deficit of $230,000 in the district. With the loss of 18 students, it will now have to work with a $360,000 deficit.

"Our commitment is to provide an excellent education to our students and we will continue to have that commitment," he said.

Chelsea School District, Manchester's neighbors to the north, reported an unofficial net loss of 111 students. Theresa Zigman, executive director of business and operations, said she contributes the loss to the number of students graduating versus the number of students enrolling.

"We're graduating much larger senior classes than we are bringing in students at the kindergarten level," she said.

Zigman said she thinks schools across the state are struggling with enrollment because of several factors.

"The economy has a lot to do with it," she said. "The job market is down and parents are struggling to make ends meet so we're seeing more parents have less and less children."

In Ann Arbor, school officials reported a loss of 219 students from last year.

"It mostly had to do with families moving out of the district," Superintendent Todd Roberts said. "Our largest losses are in the northeast area of the district."

The district had budgeted for a loss of 200 students this year.

"This really won't impact the budget," Roberts said. "We'd like to have the $190,000, but we have additional unbudgeted increases in some revenue and some other savings in this budget that will offset this."

Grass Lake School District reported an increase of 35 students this year. The district's current enrollment sits at 1,244 students.

According to the superintendent's office, the district has seen an enrollment increase every year.

Districts still have through October to finalize their numbers and audited numbers aren't expected until the spring.

Analyze data to focus improvement strategies

For the past several years the primary tool for assessing student achievement was the Michigan Educational Assessment Program, or MEAP, a battery of standardized tests in math, science, social studies and English language arts.

However, the MEAP became the target of widespread criticism over the years and it became clear another mechanism was needed to gauge student academic achievement.

The Chelsea School District settled on the Northwest Evaluation Association Measure of Academic Progress, or NWEA MAP.

While MEAP looks at entire grade-level populations of students, NWEA MAP provides more individual information.

Chelsea Schools Superintendent David Killips said the district and the news media used to rely heavily on MEAP scores.

"The fallacy of that is, obviously they're different children with different dynamics from year to year, so it's not a true comparison," Killips said.

"We wanted to demonstrate to parents and educators a way to show individual progress, and we'll have a better handle on our strengths and weaknesses as well."

Ingall said MEAP data will continue to be used, but NWEA MAP provides individual information about students to teachers within the first four weeks of the school year and also keeps a longitudinal record of students' growth.

Align curriculum with state and national standards

According to Ingall, this includes a continuous curriculum review cycle and keeping up to date in the benchmarks being updated and released by the state.

At the K-7 level, these are known as Grade Level Content Expectations, and High School Content Expectations for grades 8-12.

"Currently we are waiting for the GLCE for science," Ingall said. "This will allow us to do an audit of our science curriculum to determine any necessary changes."

How to hit a moving target

These goals are lofty and large, Ingall said, but each administrator has taken responsibility for various strategies in an effort to see that they are accomplished.

"It is appropriate to note that these goals are likely never fully achievable," Ingall said.

"There is no shortage of work within the Chelsea Schools this year."

Brater calls for action on DEQ and DNR funding

Michigan's clean water supply and land will face contamination issues if there are further reductions in funding to the Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ) and the Department of Natural Resources (DNR), according to a report issued recently by the Michigan League for Conservation Voters.

State Sen. Liz Brater, (D-Ann Arbor), the ranking Democrat on the Senate Appropriations DEQ and DNR subcommittees, said that the report is accurate in its assessment of the severity of the health and safety concerns associated with the state budget.

"This report shows the real and immediate health and safety effects of the lack of a budget solution," Brater said. "There will be severe consequences to human health if we don't find new revenue to prevent such long-term environmental damage."

The MLCV report, "Losing A Legacy," outlined the various DEQ enforcement and clean-up programs that will go unfunded if the state does not reach a budget solution that includes new resources for both the DEQ and DNR.

"If the DEQ does not have funding for enforcement, those who contaminate the water supply will not be required to clean up after themselves," explained Brater. "Our health and economy depend on clean land and water."

A copy of the report is available at: http://www.michiganlcvedfund.org/LosingaLegacy.pdf

A 'victory for consumers'

U.S. Senator Debbie Stabenow (D-Michigan) recently announced final passage of her bipartisan provision that would put an end to frivolous petitions used by brand drug companies to delay the entrance of generic drugs into the marketplace, robbing consumers and businesses of affordable choices.

The delayed access to lower priced generics costs employers, health insurance providers, government health programs and consumers hundreds of millions of dollars.

The provision was part of the larger Food and Drug Administration Authorization Bill and will now go to the President for his signature.

"This legislation is a victory for consumers and employers," said Stabenow. "These real health care savings are a critical component in staying competitive in a global economy and protecting American jobs. This is a critical step in the fight to make prescription drugs more affordable for all Americans."

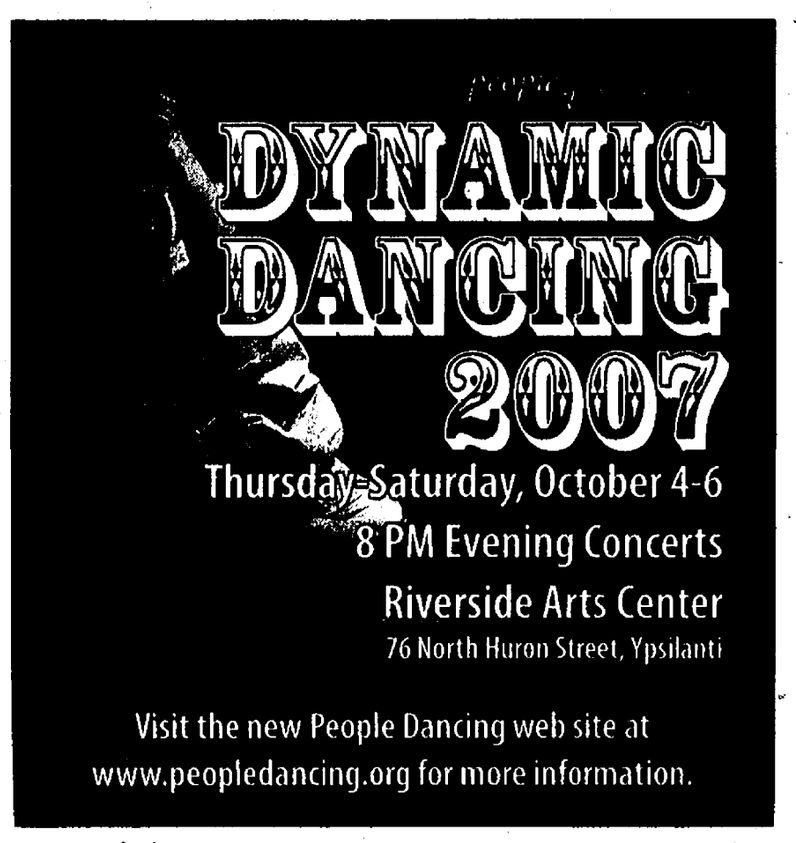

Between the passage of the Medicare Modernization Act in late 2003 and April 30, 2006, the FDA ruled on 25 petitions filed by brand drug companies requesting delay – or outright denial – of approval of a competing generic drug. Twenty-three of these petitions were found to be frivolous, but still served to restrict competition from lower cost drugs, for days, weeks, months and in some cases years.

A delay of even a few days meant an increased cost of $4 million to consumers and businesses in the case of one drug. Drugs that have been delayed for months, have meant an increased cost of $50 million and more.

State Budget 2007

BUDGET

The deal also bought them a little time: it includes a 30-day extension of the budget deadline, during which legislative conference committees will further refine the individual budget line items.

Legislators are expected to enact nearly $440 million in budget cuts, including cutting lawmakers' salaries, eliminating free lifetime health-care benefits for lawmakers, changes to state prison food services, a 1.1 percent rate cut for Medicaid providers, a reduction in day care hours, citizenship requirements for new Medicaid patients, shifting foster children's health care to an HMO, and eliminating funding increases for the state's community colleges and universities.

A series of government reforms will include significant changes to the teacher health care system, a graded premium requirement for public school employees, and an end to "double-dipping," which allowed retired public employees to return to the state payroll in a different job.

The Legislature also created a Government Efficiency Committee to identify additional reforms, an item that both Byrnes and Brater announced their opposition to recently.

The one thing most likely to cause the loudest public outcry is an increase in income and sales taxes.

Legislators voted to increase the state's personal income tax rate from 3.9 percent to 4.35 percent for four years and to expand the state's 6 percent sales tax to a number of high-end discretionary services, including interior design, landscaping, and personal care services such as massages and manicures.

"This budget agreement is the right solution for Michigan," said Gov. Jennifer Granholm, who could be seen in legislative chambers making last-minute appeals to reticent lawmakers.

"We prevented massive cuts to public education, health care and public safety, while also making extensive government reforms and passing new revenue," she added.

"With the state back on solid financial footing, we can turn our focus to the critical task of jumpstarting our economy and creating new jobs."

Although her personal concern was to raise enough revenue to cover public education, public safety, health care, environmental protection and human services, Brater said, that focus on the future appealed to her.

"It's very important for the state to have the ability to invest in the future," said Brater, who sits on the Senate Appropriations Committee.

"In order to diversity our economy for the 21st century, education is probably the top priority that we have."

Restoring declining funding to public education is one of Byrnes' priorities as well.

"It so much depends upon what the actual revenue will be next year," said Byrnes, who is on the Appropriations Committee in the House.

"We may have to make budget adjustments mid-year, and that's why we had to make those god-awful cuts to education last year.

"We plan to reimburse those cuts, and hopefully add more money to their operating budgets."

Brater said there is still much work to do to return the state to the prosperity it enjoyed in the 1990s, and expressed doubts that the temporary income tax increase would be the right way to achieve it as Michigan shifts to a service-based economy.

"After years of cutting programs and cutting services, it's not really enough to get back to the place where we were 10 or 15 years ago," Brater said.

"We're just going to be able to maintain the status quo, which is unfortunate. The income tax is slated to be rolled back again in 2011, and we'll be right back at square one."

Construction underway on Old US-12

Alleviating a sore spot for many motorists on one of Chelsea's busiest streets, Old US-12 between Main Street (M-52) and Gene Drive began receiving a much-needed facelift this week.

One lane of traffic will be maintained in each direction during construction activities, with intermittent traffic delays occurring.

According to project engineers, the lane restrictions will remain in place throughout the 45-day project, which has a scheduled completion date of Nov. 15, weather permitting.

The contractor chosen for the $218,800 project is Aggregate Industries of Mason.

The work will entail milling off the top 3 inches of existing roadway and laying down a new surface.

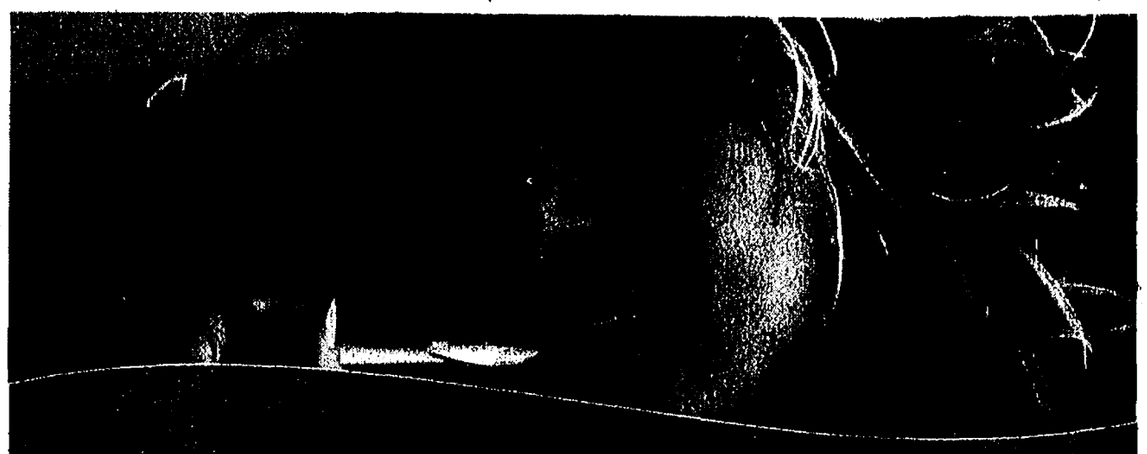

Access for residents and business owners within the construction zone will be maintained.

Selected sections of curb and gutter will be replaced, which may affect some driveways.

Road Commission personnel are contacting affected residents and business owners this week regarding limited driveway access.

To maintain the safety of road crews, motorists are reminded to drive cautiously through the work zone.

EDITORIAL

Our policy
It is our policy to run all local letters to the editor that deal with local issues and are not personal attacks.

What's got you riled?

In a recent batch of essays from the wonderful eighth-grade students at Mill Creek in Dexter there were articles on how carbon is ruining the planet, how Led Zeppelin is the greatest band ever and that school uniforms are a good idea.

What are we teaching our kids? Our teachers continue to brainwash our kids with their radical views and I am sick and tired of it. Enough is enough. I am taking a stand, eighth grader or not.

Led Zeppelin better than the Beatles? You have to be kidding me, kid.

The Beatles are the best-selling musical act of all time in the United States. In the United Kingdom, the Beatles released more than 40 different singles, albums and EPs that reached No. 1. EMI records estimated that by 1985 they had sold over one billion discs and tapes worldwide.

What's staggering to remember is that the Beatles were together for only six years and released 12 albums in that short amount of time. Consider this my young friend: In 1964, the Beatles released Meet the Beatles, The Beatles Second Album, A Hard Days Night, Something New and Beatles 65 – all in one year. They also toured and made a movie. In 1965, they released Beatles VI, Help and Rubber Soul while touring and making a movie.

At 10 a.m. on Feb. 11, 1964, the Beatles began recording their debut album. Less than 10 hours later they were done. Ten hours to record an album? It spent 30 weeks at No. 1.

Led Zeppelin was together for 10 years and managed eight albums – all very good, but they didn't change the world. The Beatles will go down in history alongside Bach and Mozart. From haircuts to boots to music to movies, the Beatles were the most influential rock musical group of all time.

A better comparison for Led Zeppelin would be the Who (I will take the Who, by the way, but I would understand the Zep argument). A better comparison for the Beatles would be Elvis. But even the king would come up short, especially considering he didn't write his own songs or play his own instruments – two pretty big strikes.

Anything confuse you this week?

While picking up my daughter, her friend's mother greeted me at the door with an enthusiastic, "Hi. How are you doing?" She then went outside to do something. After a few minutes my daughter was ready to go and we walked out the door where the mom was walking up the driveway. She gave me another enthusiastic, "Hi. How are you doing?"

What did you say?

I contemplated my response. We already said hello about two minutes earlier. Do I say hello again? Do I tell her we already did this at the door? Do I ignore her?

Well, what did you do?

I thanked her for watching my daughter and suggested she give decaf a try. Then I told my daughter it's the last time she's going over there without adult supervision.

How are you feeling?

I'm feeling better now.

Why now.

Well, I have been running every day in a park near where I live and have been quite sore recently. This body isn't what it used to be.

That's not saying much.

True. But I have to say after Friday morning I don't feel as sore.

What happened? Did you get a full-body massage, make a trip to the doctor or take a full bottle of extra-strength Tylenol? Or all of the above?

Actually, none of the above. I met Robert "Pops" Hutchinson, an 84-year-old inspiration from Dexter. He was over at the Arctic Coliseum in Chelsea and had just finished an hour on the ice. He wasn't complaining about being sore or tired or out of shape.

Instead, he had a giant smile on his face and looked eager and ready to take on the rest of his day. Meanwhile, here I am moaning with pain as I stand up from the bench after our conversation.

He should have hit you over the head with his hockey stick.

Trust me. He knocked plenty of sense into my head just by talking to me. No need for violence.

What should people try this week?

Give Aleko's a call. The new take-out restaurant in Chelsea has some great food and a good variety on the menu.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor: I waited until school started to address this issue hoping to better catch the ear of parents.

Late last spring, my son, a Beach eighth grader, lost his Nintendo DS on the playground during the lunch hour. By the end of the day it was not to be found. I called the school and Mr. Ingal took my request and announced the loss and my offer of a $10 reward. My son came home telling me that kids laughed at him and the meagerness of the reward. The next week, against my own better judgment, I increased the reward to $50 if the game system was returned intact with the game. With the game, the Nintendo DS is worth about $175.

The offer was still laughed at. My son was told that if we offered $100, they'd tell where it was. He was told that the stickers were seen at the nature pond across the school. One of the office staff verified this. My reply was that by taking off the identifying stickers, someone was trying to cover the theft. Imagine my surprise to be told by one of the school personnel that this act was not "exactly stealing."

This lack of ethics on the part of the thief, while not condoned, could be chalked up to adolescence: but the adult remark was totally out of line. Certainly not the way I was raised, but perhaps reflective of modern ideology.

I put up bright green signs at Polly's and ACO. The Polly's signs disappeared.

I cannot imagine a parent seeing their child with this game and not questioning its source. Maybe "finders, keepers" has become the new morality to teach our children.

To the Editor: I wanted to respond to a few of the recent comments regarding my column on whether women should preach the Gospel. I do want people to have the freedom to choose their own beliefs, but I also want people to think about why they believe what they believe. And if the article caused some to check their beliefs and their Bibles (and it did) then I say, "glory be to God."

The statement that women ought to be "ashamed of themselves" was referring to what Paul wrote (which I quoted in the article) that it is a shame for women to speak in the church (I Cor. 14:34-35). If it is a 'shame' then it would follow that, according to the apostle, they ought to be ashamed. That's all that was meant by the statement.

Also, when I said that a woman who claims to be sent by God to preach is a liar, I was not speaking out of harmony with the Scriptures. If my position on women preachers is right (which I obviously believe it is) then they would be lying when they make that claim.

Chris Dawson
Minister, Chelsea
Church of Christ

To the Editor: Please eliminate the ministerial message from the Standard. The so-called "message" from Pastor Dawson made me wonder why the Chelsea Standard feels compelled to provide a forum for ministerial messages at all.

I subscribe to get the local news. It would seem from some of the letters written last week, you have other subscribers who do also. Now, you might say, "But some of our subscribers enjoy the Ministerial Message." I would point out, however, that Chelsea does not suffer from the lack of churches. Those seeking "ministerial messages" are free, courtesy of the U.S. Constitution, to go to a church of their choosing. People can request free newsletters from any church. One can probably get sermons on tape, CD and DVD by now. The Standard should not provide a soap box for any philosophical or spiritual view.

But, with all due respect, if you insist on providing a section for Christian ministers; liberal, fundamental or otherwise; then it is nothing other than biased that you do not allocate equal space for alternative viewpoints and there are many. You should offer for our consideration messages from atheists, agnostics, human secularists, Buddhists, Muslims, and all the others as well.

A much better use for this section of the paper would be a weekly reprinting of this Nation's Bill of Rights.

Pamela Parkinson
Chelsea

(Editor's note: The Chelsea Standard provides a "forum" for all views and beliefs unless they are deemed as hurtful, harmful or personal attacks on an individual. The argument that there are so many churches in the area supports our belief that a large percentage of our readership welcomes these kinds of columns. However, we have never turned down a signed letter to the editor or guest column since this current management team has been in place. We welcome all opinions and viewpoints as long as they are signed. Reprinting the Bill of Rights is an excellent idea, though. We must stay vigilant, today and tomorrow.)

To the Editor: I appreciated your editorial in the Sept. 27 Dexter Leader and Chelsea Standard. It was a carefully considered response to this hot topic.

I was so shocked by Pastor Dawson's initial article; it seemed so belittling of anyone who didn't see things his way. The letters last week were good, but I really felt your editorial, Pastor Crowder's guest column, and the article on Sarah Groesser were wonderful, thoughtful responses, without being hurtful or attacking in return.

To the Editor: In the fall of 2005, a small group of Chelsea residents visited Ele's Place, a healing center for grieving children in Lansing. They shared the many tragedies this community has faced through the years, affecting so many children and teens, and asked for help in starting an Ele's Place.

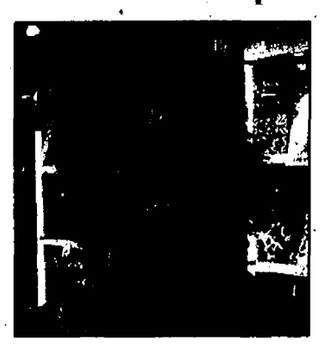

In May 2007, Ele's Place opened its doors in Washtenaw County and has already supported over 20 families from Chelsea, Saline, Manchester, Dexter, Ann Arbor, Brighton and other communities. Each week, children and teens coping with the death of a loved one come to Ele's Place and meet with others their age who are grieving. Through creative, age-appropriate activities, they share their feelings and memories with each other and learn how to cope.

The need is overwhelming as we continue to send enrollment forms to new families each week. We would like to thank the Chelsea

Our Chelsea History

What buildings stood on the cement foundations between Thompson's Pizzeria and Wolverine Food & Spirits?

A. Merkel Brothers horse and cattle auction barns

B. An inn, livery and two houses at the 1830's Pierceville hamlet.

C. Klager Hatchery followed by a lumber yard.

Answer: C. After 1935 a garage became Klager Hatchery incubating eggs and selling young chicks. Martin Steinbach and his wife, Alene, owned Finkbeiner's Lumber Co. in buildings from 1949 to 1969. Liebach and Monthi of Detroit bought the buildings in 1969 and used the yard for selling wrecked car parts from the Chrysler Proving Grounds. Roberts Paint and Body Shop set up business there for several years. Then Merkel's had a carpeting warehouse on the property which burned in the 1980s. The foundations are currently used for parking spots on the way to buy pizzas.

World War I display

The World War I display at the Chelsea Historical Museum is now open.

The display includes many items collected from George Lindauer of Chelsea, who served in France and Germany from 1917-1919. He was a wagon driver and his job was to deliver supplies, such as food, to the men on the front lines – an often dangerous task.

In one instance, a bridge exploded in front of him and he collected the shrapnel that landed around him.

The display items were loaned to the museum by George Lindauer's children, Art Lindauer and Loretta Lindauer Eder.

The museum is located inside the Gourmet Chocolate Café. For more information, call 475-1071.

To the Editor: In response to the last Dumb & Dumber commentary:

So, let's look at Dr. Singer. He might have a lot of degrees hanging on the wall, but he's also the guy who did research for some tobacco companies and insisted that second hand smoke isn't a problem. Ya gotta wonder where he's coming from. There are enough experts to support any spin you want to put on nearly anything. But, as far as "global warming" goes, what we know is that:

* Our weather is changing.
* A lot of ice is melting.
* We are rapidly creating CO2.
* We are depleting our sources of O2.
* We're running out of polar bears.
* A lot of people are starving.
* We're at war over resources.

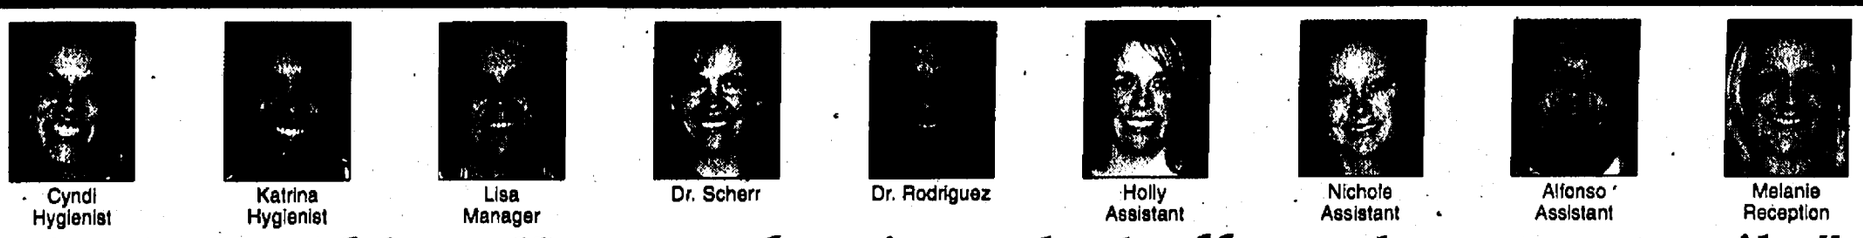

Given just those circumstances, don't you think we ought to make a serious effort to treat our planet with more respect? Don't you think we ought to conserve more and consume less? At least until we grow gills?

UNITED WEALTH MANAGEMENT GROUP

Sherry and Jeff Arnett own CornerStone Fitness.

New business is working out

By Sean Dalton
Staff Writer

Jeff Arnett came to town with the intention of competing with Outback Gym, but he didn't originally intend on taking over and carrying on the tradition of his would-be competitors.

"(The owners) just had their attention elsewhere," Arnett said. "They had another business in Ann Arbor that they wanted to focus on, but they wanted someone who would keep the gym here."

Sean, Marvin and Lynn Rivers, owners and operators of Outback Gym for 18 years, decided that Arnett was the man for the job.

Cornerstone Fitness was born last month, when Jeff and his wife, Sherry, moved in.

"(Sean Rivers) knew I was the guy to take it on and run it," he said. "It's a great gym that has been run really well, and it has a very dedicated group of regulars. I feel very lucky. We were one of four parties making offers for the gym."

Jeff Arnett isn't averse to hard work. He has been a mechanical engineer for the past eight years. He earned his design degree from Schoolcraft Community College in Livonia in 1985. For the last five years of his career he has been working in Dexter at Variety Dye and Stamping.

First contact with the Dexter downtown area and community sold the Stockbridge resident on furthering his involvement in the area.

"It's been on my heart for a long time now to do this," he said. "Now that it's Arnett's Gym, we plan on putting this location back on the map."

While Jeff has a background in personal weight training, sports and hunting, Sherry plans to put her 15 years of expertise as a physical therapist to work at the gym.

She is specifically a contingent physical therapist who graduated in 1991 from Anoka Ramsey Vocation College, in Minnesota.

In fact, that's how Jeff and Sherry met, as caregiver and patient.

"I tore a rotator cuff and saw her for rehab," Jeff said. "We just had our five year anniversary in March. We were married down in the Florida Keys."

Naturally Sherry wants to personalize certain aspects of the business to her profession.

"We're hoping to expand some space for classes, such as aerobics," she said. "It would depend on if the studio next door takes a smaller space. I could expand and create an aerobics studio."

Sherry would also like to get seniors in classes and activities that promote general health and wellbeing, as opposed to focusing on appearance and strength.

"I really would like to get more of the seniors involved in exercise," she said. "I like to help people gain more functional control and work with people that aren't necessarily body builders. I'd rather people work on core strength rather that just what you can see in the mirror.

"I used to go to the gym for results, but now with just being older your priorities change and your goals change. I want to tell people to use it or lose it. If you don't go for walks you will lose the ability to walk."

Classes would not require an additional charge and would be built into membership fees, according to Jeff and Sherry. The current standard membership fee is $310.

Jeff will also be there for the guy looking for a little more muscle or performance.

Although he didn't play college sports, Jeff played in local football leagues until he was 38 years old. He lifts weights four times a week, and plays softball for his church's team.

"We just won second place in our league," he said. "I play catcher, fourth and as a cleanup batter for Place of Refuge in Fowlerville."

Jeff and Sherry's goal is to keep the gym from becoming a monotonous thing and keep it fresh for the active community of people that are already established regulars.

"It's a nice place for people to socialize – especially seniors," Jeff said. "We want this to be a place where people can come to build a network of support. If you miss a day here I want other people to say, 'Hey. Where were you yesterday?'"

Some other things that visitors to Cornerstone Fitness can look forward to over the next couple of years is a daycare service with an on staff babysitter for busy body-conscious moms and a weekend fellowship program for young members to talk, exercise and talk openly about scripture in a gym setting, while listening to Christian music play over the gym's sound system.

"I want to give kids something positive to do that isn't video games or TV," Jeff said.

As business picks up, Arnett's Gym will be seeking personal trainers and expanding equipment.

"This place has always had a good reputation and we intend to keep it that way," Sherry said.

AN EAGLE EYE VIEW

Eagles Have Strong Showing in the Fall Season

By Bruce Cunningham
EMU head men's golf coach

Paid Advertisement

Bruce Cunningham

The Eastern Michigan University men's golf team has enjoyed a strong showing this fall with two events remaining.

Due to our Mid-American Conference title in 2007, along with a solid showing at the NCAA East Regional last year, we have been able to upgrade our schedule into one with more national scope which will improve our strength of schedule, allow us to play better teams, and hopefully help raise our national ranking. We are looking to improve on our overall record last year of 111-71 and 36-8 against other MAC golf programs.

So far we are 30-11 on the fall season. We opened the fall with a fifth-place finish in the 18-team St. Mary's Intercollegiate at the world famous Poppy Hills Golf Course in Pebble Beach, Calif.

We followed that with another fine performance at South Alabama where the Eagles finished fourth out of 15 teams.

The third outing of the fall took us to Indiana where Indiana University hosted the Wolf Run Intercollegiate at Wolf Run Golf Course in Zionsville, Ind. We finished a respectable fifth out of 15 teams at that tournament to boost our current record to 30-11 and 116-11 against other top 100 golf programs.

With our past success, and ability to play a strong schedule, we have now lowered our NCAA National GolfWeek ranking to 66th out of 264 Division I programs. That will be significant because NCAA Division I golf has made a few changes to our sport this year.

First, there will be no regional rankings or allocation to the NCAA Regional. It will simply be based on your national ranking. After the automatic bids for the conference champions are awarded, the selection process will be based solely on your national ranking.

Secondly, to qualify for the NCAA postseason tournament, you must have at least a .500 record. This has put a premium on not only finding a great schedule, but one that is both challenging and can provide enough wins to reach a winning record.

We have most of our championship team returning, and with our incoming freshmen and redshirts from last year, we have the depth and experience to repeat as MAC champions in the spring of 2008. We also play a strong enough schedule that if we play well enough we could receive an NCAA bid before the conference championship even takes place.

We are excited about the 2007-08 golf year. Keep an eye on the Eagles!

FAMILY

the new Saline location.

"The Family Deal is an attitude, a motto, which all employees of the company encompass. Our customers become part of the LaFontaine family."

LaFontaine said the group is excited to add Saline to the household.

"It's a beautiful facility and the showroom is gorgeous," said LaFontaine, who has been running the Dexter location since it first opened.

"This is a brand-new facility and it offers our customers three franchises we didn't already have. And Chrysler couldn't be in a better spot right now with product and their leadership and what they have going on, so we're excited about the brand too."

Considering how well the Dexter location has done, a move down the road in Washtenaw County made perfect sense.

"Saline appealed to us in the same way Dexter did," LaFontaine said. "It's a close-knit community that's growing with phenomenal schools, and it was just picked as one of the best places to live in the country. And the advantage of having two locations so close allows us to share expenses and in turn offer customers better prices and better service.

"The more cost-sharing we can do among the stores, the better prices we can offer our customers."

Having the other LaFontaine locations just a click away will be a big plus for car buyers in Saline. That used car lot on Michigan Avenue now has more than 500 cars because it includes all the makes and models parked at the other 12 dealerships.

"If you lived in Saline and came in here and said you wanted to buy a certain make and model used car I would go on our Web site and search the vehicles on all of our lots," LaFontaine said. "Instantly, we get plugged into over 500 used cars."

LaFontaine plans on "plugging into" the Saline community, something he believes is very important. "We wouldn't be close to where we're at in Dexter if we weren't involved in the community," said LaFontaine, who also is the president of the Dexter Area Chamber of Commerce.

"We've been involved in the schools and the people there have gotten to know us. We're a neighbor. So in Saline we have already contacted the schools and joined the chamber and are doing what we can to be a part of this community.

"We aren't just some big car family with no ties to the area that doesn't care about the community. It took us a few months to show people that in Dexter, and now we are looked at as a big part of the community."

Like gasoline for a car, that commitment to community and family help make LaFontaine run. "One of the reasons we have been successful is because we're one big family and we have a family member in every store," LaFontaine said. "This isn't magic and we keep it pretty simple. We have good people working here and offer fair deals."

Customer service also has been a key to the winning formula. The Dexter location has been rated the No. 1 dealer for customer satisfaction in the metro Detroit area.

"We hope to repeat that same accomplishment here," LaFontaine said. "Our top priority coming into Dexter was to make sure that we got the customer satisfaction up to a level we wanted it. Nationally, our stores are all ranked in the upper 5 percent in customer satisfaction, and that's our expectation here."

While the family approach and friendly attitude is a big part of their success, the other part has to do with just being big. And that can mean big savings for the customer. "We can offer higher trade-in value because we have places to put the cars," LaFontaine says. "My buying power with the banks is better so I can offer a better interest rate. The banks look at me and see we are selling close to 10,000 cars a year, and it's going to be a better scenario for the customer. So with higher trade-in values and better interest rates, customers get a better deal by coming here."

LaFontaine likes to look at it from the other direction when describing the choices facing the consumer. "Why wouldn't I want to come here?" he asks. "We offer a $9.95 oil change, great customer satisfaction, nice people. Why wouldn't I want to buy from here? We don't need to beat people up with crazy advertising and slogans. We are super-competitive and provide a nice environment without the pressure sales people."

The $9.95 oil change, LaFontaine says, is popular at all of the locations and has already begun in Saline.

"It's a classic example of why would you go anywhere else for service," he said. "We also do a complete safety inspection on every car we do an oil change on, and we do that for free. "We are creating an environment for people to come in here and see that this is a friendly place and they are treated well. So when the time comes to buy a car they will know what to expect if they come here. And they will ask themselves why not go there.

"The Family Deal includes that we are a family run operation, we have a family of franchises and a family of employees. We hope that people are going to enjoy their experience here and that's how you're going to grow. That's how we've grown in Dexter. People want someone they can depend on and a place where they're going to feel comfortable."

LaFontaine believes the 23 new employees in Saline are going to like their new boss.

"It's important to treat your employees well because you want them to be passionate about working here," he says.

"If the customers see how passionate the employees are working here they are going to be more comfortable coming here."

Local groups partnered with Faith in Action to supply 112 filled backpack for Dexter and Chelsea students.

Faith in Action helps send students back*pack* to school

Local organizations and families partnered with Faith in Action (FIA) to fill 112 new backpacks with school supplies for Dexter and Chelsea students who returned to school in early September.

Thanks to this effort, those students returned to school this fall with grade-specific essentials such as notebooks, binders, pens, pencils, art supplies, calculators and more. Each student also received a $25 gift card to Target to help with the purchase of other back-to-school essentials.

Broad-based participation from 85 local adopting organizations, like Dexter Family Services, individual families, churches, and businesses made this year's program a big success. Participating individuals or groups received shopping lists for each student, purchased supplies or entire backpacks, and delivered them to FIA-coordinated locations.

For many local families, children shopped with their parents and choose just the right supplies to donate—items that they would be proud to take to school themselves.

"Adopt a Student is a great program for families to do together," said FIA Director Nancy Paul. "Kids go to school, and they understand school; so while they might not comprehend someone's utility bill being shut off, they can certainly understand how their classmates feel when they come to school without the things they need."

Residents at Silver Maples boarded their van and went shopping as a group. Towsley Center's resident council not only purchased supplies but collected them from visitors, as well. Towsley's Leann Seto will expand resident participation next year as a component of a schooldays reminiscence experience through the center's patient counseling program.

Groups like Cub Scout Pack 435 gathered to fill backpacks and deliver them to FIA in time for families to pick them up before the first day of school.

Pack 435 committee chair Kathy Carter said, "We explained to the scouts what we were doing and why we were doing it. We passed the backpacks assembly-line style and had the boys fill them. In this process, they came to better understand the fact that a child just like them wouldn't have these school supplies if we didn't help."

"This level of participation builds a sense of giving and community at a very young age," Paul said.

As part of the program, FIA used funds to purchase 34 computers for families in need. Chelsea High School Robotics Club and A2Sales of Chelsea refurbished many computers with new hard drives and supplied entire systems, complete with Windows XP and the software students will need to complete their homework, for about $45 each.

FIA's Adopt a Student program began in 2006 with a launch grant from TCF bank. It its first year, 83 students received filled backpacks. Paul was pleased to see that number grow to 112 this year because she has seen firsthand the difficulties many local families have been having lately.

FIA notifies families with school-aged children of the program by mail each year and welcomes many new families each year who hear of the program from churches, friend, and neighbors.

"We want to make sure that the people who really need and want help have access to it," Paul said.

Adopt a Student runs with little administrative overhead thanks to email distribution of student shopping lists and even email recruitment of adopters. Dedication of Mt. Calvary set for Oct. 28

By Joseph Yekulis
Special Writer

The Pious Union of St. Joseph, run by the Servants of Charity, will be dedicating the newest addition to the Shrine of St. Joseph in Grass Lake, on Sunday, Oct. 28. Ceremonies will begin with a 10 a.m. Mass concelebrated by the Most Rev. Bishop Carl Mengeling of the Diocese of Lansing.

The Servants of Charity are a worldwide order of Roman Catholic priests founded in 1908 in Como, Italy, through the vision of Blessed Fr. Louis Guanella (1842-1915). Fr. Guanella saw a great deal of poverty in his time before Italy became a sovereign state, and made it his life's mission to care for the "poorest of the poor." He provided food, housing, and faith for persons with disabilities and the senior elderly in Italy who were abandoned by family members unable to provide for their care.

The Servants of Charity are well known for their years of work in caring for persons with disabilities at St. Louis Center in Chelsea, and in 1986, they purchased a 30 acre farm on the eastern edge of Grass Lake to start an agricultural program for their residents. When implementing this program became too difficult, the property sat idle until the arrival of Fr. Germano Pegoraro, who came from Pennsylvania during a snowstorm on Jan. 7, 1994, to establish the Pious Union of St. Joseph in Grass Lake.

The Pious Union of St. Joseph for the Suffering and Dying is a worldwide confraternity of prayer founded by Blessed Fr. Guanella in 1913, with a mission of spreading devotion to St. Joseph, and binding together the faithful in a "Crusade of Prayer" for their mercy and benefit. The late Bishop, Most Rev. Kenneth Povish, added his desire that this center would eventually become the "National Shrine of St. Joseph, Patron of the Dying."

The "Seven Holy Stairs" leading up to the cross will bear the words Christ spoke during His crucifixion, and a granite altar will be installed for future outdoor Masses.

Fr. Germano led the efforts to convert the large white barn on the property into a beautiful chapel, and the historic Greek revival home in front became the first official office for the Pious Union in the United States. Fr. Germano remained the director of the Pious Union for 10 years, until his health required him to return to Italy in early 2005. By that time, Fr. Paul Oggioni had arrived from the Philippines and became the new director of operations for the Pious Union in the fall of 2004.

Fr. Oggioni's arrival stimulated a renewed sense of purpose for the Shrine complex, and he led the construction of a new Grotto of Our Lady of Lourdes that was dedicated in November 2005. In 2006, the Servants of Charity acquired the house on the west side of their property at 953 E. Michigan Ave. and converted it into new office space, making the Greek revival home their "Holy Family Pastoral Center."

In 2007, Fr. Oggioni's plans for "Mt. Calvary" were approved by the Servants of Charity, and construction began on the project in June.

Mt. Calvary represents the place where Christ was crucified during his Passion, and for Christians the cross is a powerful symbol representing the redeeming presence of Christ in their everyday lives. Within the next two weeks, the corpus or body of Christ will appear on the cross, landscaping will be completed, and the outdoor altar will be installed.

The "Seven Holy Stairs" leading up to the cross will bear the words Christ spoke during His crucifixion, and a granite altar will be installed for future outdoor Masses. Water will also begin flowing from the Lourdes Grotto for the first time, as the water and electrical lines have now been extended to that location.

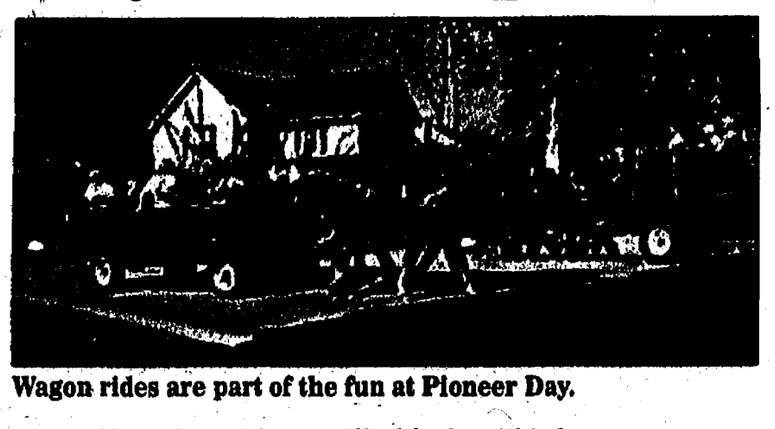

As the Calvary Project nears completion, the Servants of Charity would like to invite the community to the dedication of this newest addition of the Shrine on Oct. 28. Two Knights of Columbus 4th Degree Color Corp teams from Jackson and Washtenaw Counties have been invited to participate, and a large community gathering is expected.

For more information, please call the Pious Union of St. Joseph at 1-517-522-8017. The Pious Union of St. Joseph is located at 953 E. Michigan Ave., Grass Lake, MI 49240.

Pioneer Day is a step back in time

Brilliant blue skies, falling leaves and goldenrod are reminders that Pioneer Day at the Waterloo Farm Museum and Dewey School will soon be here. Step back to harvest time in the 1880's from noon to 5 p.m. on Sunday, Oct. 14, to renew your acquaintance with the way of life familiar to the pioneer Michigan farmer.

Now in its fifth decade, Pioneer Day is the premier event on the Waterloo Area Historical Society's calendar. The festivities include tours and activities at both of the Society's locations: the Farm Museum, at 9998 Waterloo-Munith Road, and the Dewey School Museum, at the intersection of Territorial and Parks Roads.

Wagon rides are part of the fun at Pioneer Day.

At the heart of a visit to the Farm Museum is a tour of the Farmhouse, where the delicious aroma of Sunday dinner being prepared in the kitchen greets guests. Costumed docents interpret each room of the home, which is furnished with 19th century utensils, furniture, clothing and other household items. Although the original owners would have limited guests to the dining and family rooms, our modern-day visitors will see the private rooms — the formal parlor, "Mary's Room," the attic, and even the bedrooms — that would have been strictly off-limits to earlier generations.

The Farm Museum grounds and outbuildings come alive with demonstrations of all manner of crafts, vocations and diversions of a bygone era. The pioneer farmer was "jack of all trades," and it takes dozens of volunteer demonstrators to show the many skills he brought to bear, from building and maintaining his own home and outbuildings, to planting and harvesting crops by hand, tending livestock, and making his own tools and furnishings at the blacksmith's forge.

Visitors to Pioneer Day will also have the opportunity to hear live music and try out stilt-walking or other outdoor games. Seven local musical groups will be on hand to entertain. Children will enjoy crafting bonnets and vests to wear and making candles to take home. Adults can have their heads examined by the itinerant Phrenologist, who will set up shop in the parlor. Horse-drawn wagon rides provide an opportunity to relax and enjoy the serenity of the Waterloo Recreation Area.

Visitors can watch the preparation of meals and if they get hungry, savor some Waterloo Bean Soup, then pick up a jar with the traditional recipe attached to try at home or give as a gift.

The Museum Gift Shop will be open and stocked with items reminiscent of bygone days—along with books to refresh memories of that time and souvenirs of the farm. Mother will enjoy visiting the big barn where she will find a wonderful selection of dried flowers and fall arrangements.

Representatives of several Civil War regiments will be on hand to reminisce about the "War Between the States," and the Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War will be on hand with records of local Union soldiers for the genealogical-minded.

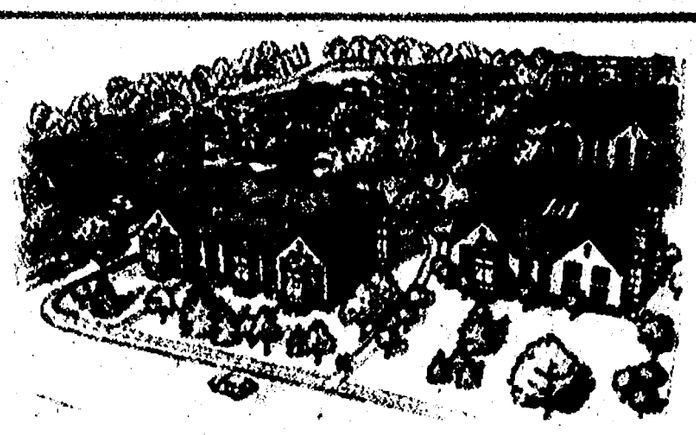

Admission to this event ($3 for adults, $2 for seniors and $2 for children ages 5 to 17) includes access to the grounds as well as guided tours of the 10-room farmhouse and one-room Dewey School. For additional information on Pioneer Day and directions to the Waterloo Farm Museum, go to http://www.waterloofarmmuseum.org.

Bulldogs pass the spirit

Chelsea High students got into the spirit of Homecoming Week by dressing in a variety of costumes for Jungle Day on Tuesday. The students played different games each day during lunch hour, with Tuesday's game being "Pass the Banana."

An annual tradition has been going strong the past few days at Chelsea High School, with students and teachers getting into the spirit of Homecoming Week.

Each day this week is a different theme, and students were allowed to bend the dress code and wear costumes reflecting that day's theme.

Monday was Pajama Day, Tuesday was Jungle Day, Wednesday was Retro Day, today is Camouflage Day, and Friday will be Spirit Day, when kids will dress in the school colors of blue and gold.

The fun continued during the lunch periods, with students taking part in different games each day.

Dressing up for all the excitement of homecoming

Phoebe Conybeare is a senior at Chelsea High School and the editor of the award-winning Chelsea Bleu Print school newspaper. Phoebe will contribute regular columns for the Chelsea Standard throughout the school year.

A sea of blue and gold.

The student section cheers wildly, silly string going everywhere and brown paper bags being popped at each touchdown. The student section taunting our rivals while they warm up. Face paint.

Senior girls dressed to the nines in the front row, knowing everyone behind them is watching. Dancing to the marching band during pre-game and half time. Extremely salty popcorn, water bottles, and cold pizza. Varsity jackets, player's practice jersey's on most of the girls, and the one kid that doesn't wear anything that represent Chelsea. Gang of little boys tossing a football around on the hill. Parents with last names on the back, representing their sons on the field. Frigid girls in long dresses. Tension, excitement, and the expectation to win in the air. It finally smells like fall.

The week of Homecoming is all this to me and more. When I was younger, it was the anticipation of getting dressed up in a way you wouldn't even look for a wedding. This week, it happens to be my senior year, and I'm being told to "Live it up! It's your second to last spirit week!"(There is another spirit week before winter carnival.)

However, I don't have the same excitement built up that I have had in past years. Maybe it's that with two swim meets, practices, and endless homework this week, homecoming seems the furthest thing from my mind.

Despite how busy I am, I still take the time to appreciate how much fun this week is. For those in the community unaware of what happens during the week before homecoming, I'll explain:

Student Council decides on the days that will be the "dress up days" of the week. For example, Monday is always pajama day, and Friday is always spirit day. The days in between vary each year.

During a certain hour, teachers count how many students in whichever grades they teach are dressed up.

Each class competes to see who will win spirit week. The tallies are totaled up for the class with the most school spirit, and whoever wins is announced at the pep rally on Friday afternoon.

During lunch each class has students that participate in lunch time games. We've had the "Chubby Bunny" competition, where you squeeze as many marshmallows into your mouth and try to say "chubby bunny" into the microphone. Every new day brings a different game, and games also count for points in the competition to win spirit week.

I love the character that the week of homecoming, and winter carnival both bring to CHS. Senior Kathryn Brieland-Shoultz agrees, "I love seeing everyone decked out in their outfits for the dress-up days during spirit week. It is a lot of fun!" Senior Kelly Whitley is in agreement, "It's good to see everyone showing spirit and not minding going out of their comfort zone to show a little school support."

Homecoming is more than just Friday's football game

By Jessica Tchoryk
Guest Columnist

It's that time of year again. Living in the tight-knit community of Chelsea, people are probably well aware that Chelsea High School's homecoming game is tomorrow, with the Homecoming Dance the following night.

Tchoryk

But homecoming is more than just another chance for the Chelsea High School football team to play against their "rival" Dexter. It's a time when the students can come together and be united through their school spirit.

Most Chelsea High School students take pride in their school spirit. Each day of the week has a theme to dress up to and celebrate. This year the themes are as follows: pajama day, jungle day, retro day, camouflage day, and of course on Friday, school spirit day.

Most students have a lot of fun and get really wild dressing up. By dressing to a theme each day, it lightens the pressures of school work. That's not to say students (and teachers) don't do the same amount of work each day during spirit week, but at least they get to have a little fun with it.

Friday is pep-rally day. We have a shortened class schedule to make room for an assembly in which each class competes to see which one has more school spirit. The winners of the games during the pep assembly, the numbers of students in each grade to have dressed up throughout the week, as well as winners of the games organized during lunch periods throughout the week, are all contributing factors to which class wins.

Of course, the court and their escorts for Homecoming Queen (for seniors) and Homecoming Princesses (for the other classes) are introduced and participate in the events as well.

The week's events help build up for the football game on Friday. The week of homecoming is filled with fun activities to get students involved and to unite them through school spirit.

In focus: Interact Club

'It's about doing good things'

By Terry Jacoby
The Chelsea Standard

When members of the Chelsea High School sponsored Interact Club dress up for Halloween later this month, it won't be for a trick or treat.

The Interact Club, a project of the Rotary Club International, works all year to serve the community, whether it's the local community or the world community. The group will be dressing up in Halloween costumes and going trick-or-treating in the downtown area to collect money for the United Nations' Children's Fund.

"Right now we have about 30 to 40 members," said Michael Sullivan, the group's student president. "We meet every Wednesday morning at 7:30 in (Laura) Lutz's room at the high school. The club does volunteer work and fundraising for charitable causes. It's fun and stress free, which is what Interact is all about. It's about doing good things, not because you have to, but because you want to."

As part of the Halloween fund-raiser, the group also will be setting up a stand outside of the First Congregational Church of Chelsea on Middle Street for community members who live outside the downtown area who'd like to drop by and make a donation.

Meet the president

Name: Michael Joseph Patrick Sullivan
Age: 17
Grade: Senior
School leadership: President of the CHS Interact Club
Future plans: College. "I'm currently applying to the University of Michigan and American University. I'm also considering applying to Warren Wilson College, Dennison University, Kalamazoo College and Loyola University of Chicago. In college I hope to study a social science, possibly political science, public policy or international relations."
Dreams or goals: Travel outside of the US.
Hobbies: Interact, reading, listening to music, hanging out with friends, and watching Newsies.

Sullivan first got involved as a sophomore because "some of my friends were in it and it really sounded like a worthwhile club."

Every year the club does things such as Crop Walk, Trick or Treat for UNICEF, bell ringing for the Salvation Army, volunteer work at the Jackson soup kitchen, helping out at the Alpha house, making Christmas cards for the residents of Silver Maples, and sleeping outside the school in boxes for Box-O-Rama to raise money and awareness about homelessness.

"We also help out with other things throughout the year," Sullivan said. "This year we are looking at working with Christmas in April, visiting residents at Silver Maples and Chelsea Retirement Community, sponsoring a child, helping out with Relay for Life, volunteering with Food Gatherers, sending cards to soldiers and more."

Sullivan has his "favorite" ways to help.

"Box-O-Rama is my favorite thing," he says. "It's at the end of the year and we get to decompress and hang out one last time before the seniors leave while we're acting in solidarity with literally millions of homeless people around the world. It's really cool to wake up in the morning and watch as a lot the students and parents drive into the school and see you sitting next to box city."

Meet the teacher: Toni Kinsey, South Meadows

Toni KINSEY Q&A

'Students should learn to accept differences'

Name: Toni Kinsey
Age: 44
Family: Husband Rich, an Ann Arbor police detective sergeant; Sons Rick, 18 and a freshman at Olivet College where he is on the swim team and Pete, 15 who is a sophomore at CHS and also swims on the team.

Also living in Chelsea are my mother, my mother and father-in-law, sister and brother- in-law, niece and nephew.

Education: Michigan State University (MSU) Bachelor's Degree in Elementary Education with a major in social studies and Master's degree in reading in the content area grades 6 – 12 from Walden University.

Native of: Plymouth, Mich.

Teaching experience: I first taught as a long-term substitute teacher in Saline, then in Chelsea for two years and was hired in Chelsea as a full time teacher four years ago.

School you teach: South Meadows

Grade/subject you teach: Sixth grade social studies, a course called global studies

Favorite subject in school: I really enjoyed my high school philosophy course and will always remember my teacher, Steve Williams who still teaches in Plymouth. I also liked my James Madison College courses in political science at MSU.

Least favorite subject in school: Typewriting

Something people would be surprised to know about you: My father owned a Standard bred race horse breeding farm and as a teenager I worked as a groom and exercised horses on the track for the drivers. I also showed hunter-jumpers as a child and all through college. I drove the horse carriages for hire in Ann Arbor during the summer. Immediately following college I worked as an Ann Arbor police officer until my first son was born.

Most influential person in your life: I am moved by and admire many people in history, yet the most influential people in my life were first my parents and siblings who led by example and always had confidence in me and now, it is my husband who is amazing in many ways. Each helps me believe that I can do anything. I hope that every one of my students have people in their own lives that do the same.

Quote to live by: I am quoting my friend Ann Brill, a Chelsea resident and Dexter school teacher, she wrote it down after reading it on a wall in a classroom out east.

"Mounds of compliments cannot replace one insult."

Although it is not terribly profound, and is written using a candy bar wrapper for the first word, it is very important to my teaching and I think about the truth in those words daily. It is especially true in teaching. Developmentally, children receive sarcasm as cruel criticism.

What do you like most about teaching? I like my students. Simply put, I feel that my job is more than teaching a subject matter. I am passionate about teaching each child.

I love students' differences and learning about their interests. I am amazed by their patience and kindness toward each other at times and enjoy helping them find tolerance and understanding in other moments. I miss them terribly when they move on at the end of the year.

I have been positively affected by each student. I have every note given to me by a student and keep them in my desk drawer. I read them again at the start of each school year. It is nice to know that at one brief moment in one students' life, I "rocked," and that one student said, "you are very nice and yet you still get us to do are work . . ." It is fun to read students words like, "I hope you remember me on my good days if you do remember me." Trust me, I will remember them.

What do you like least about teaching? I do not enjoy the perception that grades are one of the most important indicators of how a student is doing. Grades do matter in life and I will continue to assign them as objectively as I am able. However, I want students to meet my standards and those required of the task while doing the best that they can. In some cases a student may work harder than ever before and have had done their best work on a project yet the grade might be a "C" or "B" based upon the criteria on which the grade is assigned. This is still a success, the student has learned and his or her classmates have benefited from the effort.

The problem lies in people looking at a B or C and not seeing the whole picture or amount that was truly accomplished. I keep in my mind that later in life people will not ask my students what their sixth grade social studies grade was, yet their work ethic, knowledge, perseverance and ability to relate to others will be displayed daily.

What is the most challenging part of teaching? It is a constant challenge to meet the diverse needs of each of my students yet it is one of the most important aspects of teaching.

What are some of the goals you set for students? Ask questions and work to find the answers. Learn about others and accept differences. Develop a base framework of knowledge that includes the physical world, political world and history so that as they get older, and learn more, the ideas will fit nicely together to make sense. Work to meet goals.

How do you handle a disruptive student? If I have a student who falls apart in class I talk privately to him or her to get through the rough spot without causing the student further embarrassment. If necessary we step outside in the hall to talk privately and to regain composure. Later, I work together with the student with the goal of becoming aware of triggers, areas of frustration and techniques to deal with emotions.

The goal is to help him or her improve classroom etiquette and work habits. Often I take time to think about behavior issues or problems and confer with my principal, Lisa Nickel prior to developing an individual plan.

How do you handle a student who doesn't focus well? I constantly walk around the room and stand near students. Gentle reminders and breaking tasks down into smaller parts really helps. I redirect students individually and work with groups to stay on task.

What do you tell parents about being involved in their children's education? My main message is let me be the bad guy. I will check homework, help students meet my standards and improve the quality of work. I ask that parents check the homework page on the South School Web site and be aware of the work their child is doing. Talk about topics they are learning. Tell their children how smart they are and that they did not learn such things until they were much older. Make them feel incredibly competent.

Ask to see assignments, remind students to place them in their binders and backpacks but do not criticize the work. By checking for completion only parents can avoid teary nights with children redoing assignments.

Most parents remember their college or high school days and work habits. They do not remember sixth grade studies. Remember that the teacher will tell make contact if there is a problem or if parents need to do more than checking for completion.

Are students feeling more pressure to succeed today? Every generation has childhood stress and pressure. This may come from different areas but growing up is not any more difficult now then in the past. Ironically the most pressure students feel comes from their peers. I believe adults can help children treat each other better to help decrease this stressor.

Walk us through a typical day for you? I start out with my first hour class who are always excited and open to discussion. We talk before the bell and start class after hearing the morning announcements. I teach four groups of students global studies then go to lunch in the teacher's lounge. During lunch the sixth grade teachers generally eat together. Next I teach a course called "skills" during which students reading and practice strategies to learn. Two days a week I teach keyboarding as well.

How has your job changed over the years? I am still relatively new and don't see that it has changed since I started teaching in 2001.

What do you like most about teaching in Chelsea? The Chelsea community has made it obvious that they celebrate the success of children. Whether it is music, arts, academics or athletics the community publicly commends the work of children. The many functions in town are child friendly and the atmosphere is supportive to children. The school district is both professional and personal.

The administration is organized and frugal and makes decisions thoughtfully and with a focus on what is best for the students in the district. I am happy to be working at South with a principal who has created a welcoming school environment and supports staff, students and families.

Chelsea history: The thrill of discovery

By George Sparrow
Guest writer

When I was given the 1878 diary by Tom Diab, president of the Chelsea Area Historical Society, his words were, "See if you can figure out who wrote this." Little would I realize that a needed clue was contained in the first few entries of a 200 page diary.

My task, as I saw it, was to make note of all proper nouns, streets, businesses and relationships, compiling a list for any future researcher to use. Tom suspected that it was written by a Pierce family member, but which one he hoped I could discover. The use of first names in the diary indicated to me that those mentioned were family or close friends.

Quickly, it became clear that this person was based in Chelsea as names such as Palmer and Congdon were appearing and streets such as Race and churches such as the Congregational. Names such as Peter, Mrs. Beebee, Brother Tallman were unfamiliar to me but gradually certain references occurred identifying relationships. The biggest problem was the ink used was a sepia tone that made certain passages impossible to read and taxed my eyes deeply.

This lady (another assumption based on her day to day activities of washing, ironing and making meals) slowly began to reveal herself. She had a sister named Phebe (an unusual spelling), who was married to a Peter Mulvany, and they lived in Marengo, east of Jackson. Phebe was apparently very ill as there must be 10 references to her condition leading up to her death. She (our unidentified lady) lived with another Peter, either her husband or cousin.

She must have run a boarding house of some kind based on her daily activities. She had siblings named Mowry, Phebe and Adeline: a cousin named Clark and an Uncle John was 79 years old on Jan. 21, 1878. This lady's birthday was Oct. 27, 1830, according to her diary.

At this point (a month into the research) I had not even identified her as a Pierce, much less found her last name. It occurred to me that perhaps the Pierce cemetery in town might contain some information that could be useful. Upon entering the plot I looked at the grave markers and found little I could use. I then went to the pyramid placed prominently and examined the West side of the marker. It contained the names of the mother and father Pierce but little else. Proceeding to the South side (I still get chills as I write this) there appeared the name " Phebe S., wife of Peter Mulvany" along with the rest of the Pierce children. Our lady was a Pierce, but which one?

The answer was fairly simple. There were four sisters, Phebe, who died, Adeline and Emily who were mentioned in the diary leaving us with only one - Amy A Pierce, whose birthday entry confirmed our deduction. Further genealogical research conducted by the Chelsea Historical Society confirmed that the diary indeed belonged to Amy A. Pierce, wife of Peter Hoag and they had no children. The diary was passed down to her brother Hiram Pierce, then to his son Paul Pierce and finally to his daughter Lois Pierce Lantis. Lois was very generous to donate the diary to the museum.

It is a special diary for Chelsea because it is written by the daughter of town founder, Nathan Pierce.

Chalk Talk

Chelsea Standard / Dexter Leader Sports Editor Don Richter goes beyond the final scores.

Rivalry games always important

I don't think I have to remind anyone who follows high school football in these parts, but Chelsea and Dexter are getting together this Friday to play a football game at Jerry Niehaus Field.

Kickoff is scheduled for 7 p.m.

The Dreadnaughts (3-3), which haven't beaten the Bulldogs (6-0) in years look to finish what they couldn't last year. For those of you who've forgotten, Dexter appeared to have last year's game sewed up. Just like this season, last year Chelsea was ranked in the state's top five in Division 3. The Dreadnaughts entered last season's rivalry tussle with the same record they have this year, 3-3.

With nine seconds left in the game, Chelsea All-State receiver Nate Schwarze (yes, he's graduated Dexter fans), caught a 20-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Jeff Adams (he's still around) for a wild, come-from-behind 33-29 win at Al Ritt Field.

To say the Dreads have a score to settle is an understatement. Can they do it Friday? Come out to the game and find out. It should be interesting.

Games like last year's heartbreaking loss or exhilarating victory, depending on which side you're on, are moments that will always be remembered.

I should know.

Though I didn't score the game-winning touchdown (it's kind of hard when you're sitting on the bench), I did actually play in my high school's big rivalry game.

I was a sophomore wing back and my high school's rival was and will always be Wayne Memorial. The Zebras (is that really their nickname?) were Westland John Glenn's rival mainly because most of the kids on both teams knew each other growing up. In fact, a lot of the players went to the same junior high (that's what they were called back in the day) before being split up as high school started.

One of my best friends from junior high was a defensive back on Wayne's team. We had always joked about playing against each other someday. Anyhow, to make a long story short, I carried the ball and broke free for a run. My buddy stood between me and a potential touchdown. I wish I could say I juked him and scored, but, to my chagrin, he knocked me on Chelsea senior Donny Riedel scored on a 38-yard touchdown run in the Bulldogs' 40-28 victory over Saline last Friday.

Football

Chelsea remains perfect

By Don Richter
Sports Editor

Like the Nebraska and Oklahoma teams of old, Chelsea football is simply running opponents into the ground this season.

Last Friday, in front of a overflow crowd at Jerry Niehaus Field, the Bulldogs (6-0) defeated Southeastern Conference foe Saline (4-2) 40-28.

"You knew Saline would compete to the end," said Chelsea coach Brad Bush. "That's the kind of program they have and the kind of kids they have. But we hung in there. The good thing was we never lost the lead. Our ability to get stops (on defense) was huge."

With the win, Chelsea qualified for the state playoffs for the 10th consecutive season. To advance to the state playoffs, a team needs six wins during the regular season.

The Bulldogs, who run a wide open, spread offense, geared more to the pass, chewed up 339 yards on the ground against the Hornets.

Individually, sophomore running back Nick Hill (5-foot-9, 175) ran for 212 yards on 30 carries, scoring four touchdowns to lead Chelsea.

"Our team was outstanding tonight," said Hill. "Our offense kept driving down the field. Our offensive line kept pushing forward. They had some great blocks and allowed me to get in the open field and run the ball."

The Bulldogs opened the scoring on their first drive of

Youth soccer begins season

The Chelsea Youth Soccer U-14 Bulldog boys' team tied Livonia 1-1 Sept. 17. On Sept. 16, the local club lost to Downriver 4-1. On Sept. 9, Chelsea defeated Taylor 6-2.

The Chelsea U-11 Bulldog boys' team defeated the Canton Tornadoes 8-0 last Saturday.

Leading the Bulldogs was Kyle Borton with three goals for a hat trick. He also had two assists.

Also scoring for Chelsea was David Trimas, Dennis Spaulding, Tanner Day and Jonah Bogarin.

Playing well in the midfield for the Bulldogs were Alex Keyes, Zach Trester, Nicholas Kaminski, Campbell Fahle and Noah Ruffin.

Also last month, Chelsea defeated the Redford Rockets 4-3.

Scoring for the Bulldogs were Zachary McKinley, Borton, Fahle and Spaulding.

Chelsea defeated the Huron New Bedford Chiefs 3-2 last month.

McKinley, Day and Spaulding scored goals for the Bulldogs.

McKinley picked up the win in net for Chelsea.

Also playing well defensively for the Bulldogs were Noah Ruffin, Zachary Trester, Ethan French, Tommie Vincent and Kaminski.

Chelsea blanked the Livonia Chargers 7-0 last month.

Defensively, Keyes, Trimas and McKinley played well in net for the Bulldogs combining for the shutout.

Chelsea is 4-0 on the young season. The Bulldogs are playing their first season with an off side rule and their first year with an 8-vs.-8 larger field.

Schwarze aims for state final

By Dan Ording
Special Writer

Competing as a junior in one of the toughest conferences in the state, Chelsea's Krystin Schwarze certainly has a lot of pressure to handle. However, this junior golfer has become the leader of her team and one of the best golfers in Chelsea's history.

The Bulldogs only have three seniors this year and all have less than a year of experience. Schwarze has stepped up, taking charge of the team with both her play and words.

"It's really been a great experience," Schwarze said. "It's funny how seniors listen to what I have to say here. It's completely different on the basketball court."

She finished first in the SEC White Division All-Conference standings, with a six stroke over par average. That puts her on pace to become one of the best scoring juniors in Chelsea girls' golf history.

"She has the ability to stay focused and not get down on herself for a bad shot or a bad hole," Chelsea coach Andrea Bareis said. "She is so strong mentally whereas many other golfers are not. She always has a sense of urgency to become better and do what it takes to improve."

With her team holding only a 9-8 record, Schwarze remains humble about her success.

"We've played pretty well with a young team," Schwarze said. "But, we're not where we want to be. I've played better than last year, but I'm not striking the ball as well."

More impressive than her success in 2007, Schwarze has been consistently improving throughout her Bulldog career. As a freshman, she won the school's most valuable freshman award and had the third best average as a freshman in school history. She followed that up her sophomore year with a 7.7 stroke improvement to earn the best ever sophomore average (45.1) in the team's history and made the all-conference team.

"She has put herself up there with the great golfers in our program who have all played or are playing Division I golf," Bareis said. "It's exciting to think where she'll be as a senior."

Perhaps motivated by missing last year's state finals by one stroke, Schwarze spent the off-season working with PGA Pro Paul Haase and playing on the Adams Junior Tour.

"Paul has been really great," Schwarze said. "He helps to fix my swing and get me back on track. The tour gives me experience

Chelsea spikes rival

By Don Richter
Sports Editor

Chelsea volleyball participated in the Ypsilanti Invitational last Saturday. The Bulldogs finished 3-2 overall for the tournament.

Chelsea (13-8-2) defeated the host Braves, Livonia Franklin and Ypsilanti Willow Run. The Bulldogs lost to Dearborn and Dexter.

On Sept. 25, Chelsea defeated host Dexter in a five-game marathon match.

The Bulldogs lost the first two matches before rallying for three straight wins earning the victory.

Chelsea coach Laura Cleveland said the contest against the Dreadnaughts was an unforgettable match.

"It was one of the best league matches I have ever been a part of," she said. "I was very excited for the team."

Cleveland said her squad played evenly with Dexter in the first two games until it was 16-16 in Game 2.

"We then experienced some problems with our passing efficiencies that affected our ability to attack aggressively," she said.

Though losing the first two matches, Cleveland said the Bulldogs never quit.

"The team showed a lot of character and determination and a positive attitude that they could still win the match," she said. "The passing of our serve-receivers improved and was much more consistent as we were able to side out and gain control of Game 3."

Cleveland said in Game 4, Chelsea's defense rose to the occasion.

"Especially in our front row as our blockers were able to alter and effect their offensive attack," she said. "As a result, we were able to effectively transition our attack and keep the pressure on Dexter and maintain the momentum."

In the match-deciding Game 5, the Bulldogs built an early 5-1 lead.

"Though we gave up the lead, I felt as though we were playing well," Cleveland said. "Our defense was the highlight as the team was determined and played the best defense we played all season up to that point."

Cleveland said the final match was exciting.

"Last year's game went to five games as well," she said. "It was exciting to also win that match at our opponent's place. The girls maintained their composure and worked together as a unit. They were really able to stay steady as a group and took the match play by play."

Chelsea next hosts Ann Arbor Pioneer Tuesday at 7 p.m.

On Oct. 13, the Bulldogs travel to Madonna University to participate in its invitational at 8:30 a.m.

Schwarze will be looking to redeem herself from last season's narrow miss next week at the Division II state golf regionals in Mason. She has already clinched the lowest stroke average in the SEC. All that is left now would be a place in the state finals.

RIVALRY

my butt stopping my attempt at gridiron glory.

Fast forward to last year. I reconnected with my friend, who I hadn't spoken to since high school. He went off and became a Navy jet pilot and now owns his own company flying bigwigs around the country. One of the first words out of his mouth when we talked was, "Sorry about beating you in football. And I still remember knocking you on your..." You get the picture.

Like the saying, "Songs remember when," so do rivalries. Unfortunately for me, they never forget.

Hockey

Coliseum offers programs

The Chelsea Hockey Association is starting its fall season of Learn to Play hockey. The program offers kids, three- to 15-years-old, the opportunity to learn the sport of hockey in a fun and exciting atmosphere.

The classes for this program are divided by age. For kids three- to five-years-old, the program offers its Snow Cubs class. This class is designed to teach younger kids the basics of skating and develop a comfort with being on the ice.

For kids six- to 15-years-old, the Learn to Play program offers its Hockey 1 and Hockey 2 classes. Hockey 1 teaches the basics of hockey skating, including forward and backward skating, edges and balance. Also stressed is puck handling.

Hockey 2 is designed for skaters with basic hockey skills. The program highlights team play, offensive and defensive skills and themed small area games.

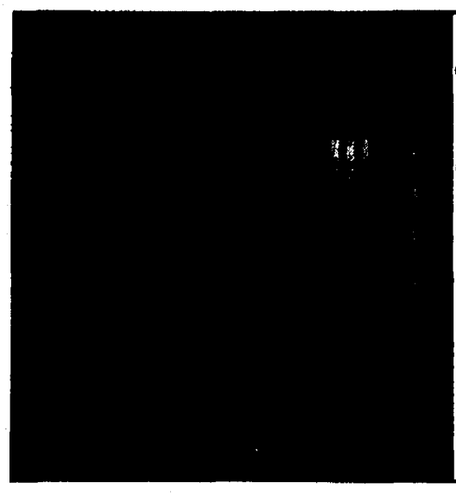

Each player is prepared to play on a Chelsea Hockey Association team.

The program runs from Oct. 3 through Dec. 19, every Wednesday afternoon and Saturday morning.

The Arctic Coliseum also offers an adult Learn to Play program. The class is available for adults of all ages who would like to hone their skills or learn the basics. The program focuses on getting participants comfortable skating, controlling the puck and learning the game of hockey.

The program, which started Aug. 30, will continue until Oct. 18. Those interested can still register for the class or drop in for a session.

For additional information, call the Arctic Coliseum at 433-4444.

WHO'S WATCHING THE CHILDREN?

The Orange County Register thought its readers might like to know about the criminal histories of workers in the state's day-care facilities. After all, the paper's readers were placing their own trust and their children's well-being in the hands of those workers.

But the state of California turned down a series of newspaper Freedom of Information requests to look at those histories, citing the privacy rights of the workers. It also refused access to its data base of offenses and other day-care center violations unless the newspaper paid $45,000 for the information.

In the end, the Register won its fight for access to documents–which were used to track down the criminals and public court records that revealed their histories. The newspaper also built its own data base from nearly 50,000 pages of inspection and complaint reports in Orange County. These efforts allowed the Register to unveil for the state's parents the uncomfortable truth. Throughout California, thousands of day-care workers had long criminal histories. The results of the data base analysis also showed pervasive problems of mistreatment, neglect, overcrowding and unsafe conditions.

If you lived in Orange County, or any other county with day care, wouldn't you like to know whether the adults your children come in contact with have committed crimes?

Cross Country

Bulldogs run to second place

By Don Richter
Sports Editor

Chelsea's boys' cross country team finished second at its own invitational last Saturday at Hudson Mills Metropark.

The Bulldogs ended up with 27 points.

Winning the 13-team meet was five-time defending Division II state champion Dexter with seven points.

Placing third was Lake Odessa Lakewood with 40 points.

"This is one of our favorite meets," said Chelsea coach Eric Swager. "The unique format, in addition to the fact that we host it, provides a fun, competitive morning for our runners. And compete we did. Six runners turned in lifetime bests."

The meet is split into a Junior/Senior race and a Freshman/Sophomore event.

In the Junior/Senior meet, Teddy Eyster paced Chelsea finishing eighth overall with a time of 17:11.

Right on Eyster's heels was teammate Nick Hewitt who crossed the line ninth with a personal best clocking of 17:16.

Peter Wilke finished 10th in 17:22, while Mark Smith was 18th in 17:50 and Dominic Conybeare 24th in a personal best 18:15 for the Bulldogs.

Jared Gentz ended up 29th in 18:32, while Justin McGrath was 51st in 19:20, Evan Carpenter 55th in 19:52 and Dan Case 58th in 19:59 for Chelsea.

Ryan Patrick was 60th in a personal best 20:06, while Klaus Haegelstorpe was 70th in 20:59, Jack Herman 73rd in 21:07, Josh Golec 75th in 21:23 and Noah Herman 87th in 23:04 for the Bulldogs.

In the Freshman/Sophomore race, Chelsea placed third overall with 38 points.

Capturing the 12-team meet was Whitmore Lake with 12 points.

Tecumseh was runner-up with 30 points.

Leading the Bulldogs was freshman August Pappas with a time of 16:59.

Geoff Smith-Woolams was fourth in 17:47, while Aaron Deaton was 32nd in a personal best 19:51 for Chelsea. For his efforts, Deaton was named the Bulldogs' Runner of the Week.

Nick Hewitt placed ninth at last Saturday's Chelsea invite with a personal best clocking of 17:16.

"Aaron knocked more than 15 seconds off of his PR (personal record)," Swager said. "He passed 20-plus runners in the tough second half of the course."

Sean Owsley placed 53rd in a personal best clocking of 21:12, while teammate Josh Hovater was 57th in 21:35 for Chelsea.

"This is a cross country reunion of sorts," Swager said. "Many former runners stop by for well-wishing and camaraderie. The freshman and sophomores enjoy the opportunity to not get trounced by the older kids again. The second half of the season awaits. We will start getting serious about our varsity goals again next week."

The Bulldogs next travel to Portage to participate in its invitational Saturday at 9 a.m.

On Oct. 13, Chelsea will compete in the Ann Arbor Gabriel Richard Invitational at Hudson Mills Metropark at 9 a.m.

Soccer

Dawgs fall to Marshall

By Don Richter
Sports Editor

Chelsea's boys' soccer team lost to visiting Marshall 7-1 last Saturday.

"This was not one of our better games," said Chelsea coach Dave Pieske.

The Bulldogs (1-11-3) opened the scoring as Tim Koch beat the Vikings' keeper for a 1-0 Chelsea lead three minutes into the game. Assisting on the goal for the Bulldogs was Sam Parkanzky.

"After the goal was scored things changed," Pieske said. "Marshall picked up their level of play and we seemed to let down. As the game went on, things got worse."

On Sept. 27, host Chelsea lost to county rival and defending Division II state champion Dexter 5-1.

"We played an awesome first half," Pieske said.

The Bulldogs scored first as Koch blasted a rocket shot into the upper corner of the net for a goal and a 1-0 Chelsea lead early in the first half.

Twelve minutes later, the Dreadnaughts tied the game at 1-1 with a goal as the two teams entered the break.

In the second half, Dexter scored four unanswered goals for the day's final margin.

"In the second half, we played well, but Dexter showed why they are the defending Division II state champions. We played strong against them. We are hoping to accept the challenge of playing them again to try and win districts."

On Sept. 25, Chelsea tied visiting Saline 1-1.

Keeper Nathan Vicek led the Bulldogs with 13 saves in net.

"We played great, especially Nathan (Vicek)," Pieske said.

Scoring for Chelsea was Ben Sauers on a backwards header tying the game with five minutes left to play. Keifer Forsch picked up an assist on the goal for the Bulldogs.

Chelsea next hosts Adrian Thursday at 5:30 p.m.

On Monday, the Bulldogs host Milan at 5:30 p.m.

On Tuesday, Chelsea travels to Ypsilanti Lincoln for a contest at 5:30 p.m.

On Oct. 11, the Bulldogs host Ann Arbor Huron at 5:30 p.m.

JV Soccer

Chelsea's JV boys' soccer team tied visiting Saline 1-1 Sept. 25.

Trailing 1-0 at halftime, Nate Branham scored 30 seconds into the second half, converting a pass from Chris Stewart for the day's final margin.

"That was a designed play that we had worked on," said Chelsea coach Matt Pedlow. "It couldn't have worked better. Chris was able to maneuver through the Saline midfield before finding Nate who put a beautiful shot past their goalie."

Chelsea's Tim Koch (left) battles Dexter's Kurt Miller during the Bulldogs' rivalry game against the Division II defending state champion Dreadnaughts last week.

Preserving the tie in goal for Chelsea was keeper John Zinc, who made 16 saves.

Also playing well defensively for the Bulldogs were Luke Riley, Jacob Lotz, Colin Scott, Greg Cornwell and Bobby Beneteau.

The Bulldogs next host Adrian Thursday at 4 p.m.

On Monday, Chelsea hosts Milan at 4 p.m.

On Tuesday, the Bulldogs travel to Ypsilanti Lincoln for a match at 4 p.m.

On Oct. 11, Chelsea hosts Ann Arbor Huron at 4 p.m.

the game as senior quarterback Jeff Adams scampered around left end for a six-yard touchdown keeper. With junior Michael Roberts' point after touchdown kick, Chelsea led 7-0 with 9:59 left in the first quarter.

Saline answered as talented senior receiver Sam Burchyett (6-3, 185) hauled in a 39-yard TD pass from junior signal-caller Nick Moeller. Junior Tyler Vander Meulen's PAT was good and the score was tied at 7-7 with 5:00 remaining in the first quarter.

On the Bulldogs' following possession, Hill scored on a 35-yard burst up the middle. With Roberts' kick, Chelsea led 14-7 with 2:48 left in the first quarter.

Two plays into the second quarter, senior Donny Riedel sprinted 38 yards up the gut for a touchdown and a 20-7 Bulldog advantage.

After a Hornet three and out punt, Hill scored on a five-yard run, breaking a tackle and increasing Chelsea's lead to 26-7 with 7:25 remaining in the second quarter.

An interception by Saline junior defensive back Marcus Johnson gave the Hornets the ball at Chelsea's 42-yard line. Nine plays later, Saline senior Chris King appeared headed for the end zone and a Hornet score, but Bulldog junior defensive back Scott Rhodes forced the ball loose at the goal line, recovering the fumble.

After a Chelsea three and out punt from its own end zone, Saline regained possession at the Bulldog 22-yard line with 10 seconds left in the first half. One play later, King caught a 22-yard touchdown pass from Moeller over the middle for a score. The two-point conversion pass from Moeller to senior Reid Tornquist was good, trimming Chelsea's lead to 26-15 at the first half ended.

Early in the third quarter, the Hornets maintained their momentum, as Burchyett ran back a Bulldog punt untouched down the left sideline 73 yards for a score. With Vander Meulen's PAT, Saline cut Chelsea's advantage to 26-22 with 6:35 left in the third quarter.

As they have all season, the Bulldogs executed when they needed it most, scoring on their next drive as Hill barreled in from six yards away. Roberts split the uprights and Chelsea upped its lead to 33-22 with 4:21 remaining in the third quarter.

Bulldog senior receiver runs away from Saline defenders in last Friday's 40-28 win over the Hornets.

Saline, however, wouldn't go away. On their following possession, the Hornets scored on Moeller's nine-yard pass to Burchyett at the back of the end zone. The Bulldog sacked Moeller on the two-point passing attempt keeping Chelsea ahead 33-28 with 11:53 left in the fourth quarter.

After consecutive fumbles by both clubs, including a 47-yard fumble recovery for a TD by Bulldog sophomore Cody Adams which was called back because of a penalty, Chelsea put the finishing touches on its victory as Hill scored on a six-yard run over right tackle. With Roberts' PAT, the Bulldogs led 40-28 with 5:37 left in the game for the night's final margin.

"We're young," said Saline coach Mike Glennie. "But we're a good football team. When we play another good football team, we don't trust ourselves. We had a sluggish start. The first quarter killed us."

Jeff Adams finished 5-of-11 for 80 yards passing with one interception.

"They played a good, physical game," Adams said. "We played tough, hung in there and made some plays. That helped us control the game."

Moeller was 8-of-22 for 127 yards and three touchdowns.

Besides Hill's 212 yards rushing, Jeff Adams added 72 yards on 12 carries and Riedel 58 yards on six attempts.

Junior Travis Owens paced Saline with 70 yards on 15 carries.

Hill finished with two catches for 14 yards, while senior Chris Schmelz had one catch for 29 yards, senior Jason Kolokithas one catch for 25 yards and senior Jake Galarowic one reception for 12 yards.

Burchyett led the Hornets with four catches for 60 yards.

Chelsea finished with 419 yards of total offense. Saline had 256 total yards.

Rhodes led the Bulldog defense with seven tackles. Senior linebackers Stu Mann (6-2, 215) and Taylor Hopkins (5-10, 200) each had six stops, while senior defensive tackle Dean Roberts (6-3, 265) had five tackles.

Standout junior linebacker Matt Price (6-3, 220) led Saline with eight tackles.

Chelsea next hosts county rival Dexter (3-3) Friday at 7 p.m. The Bulldogs will be celebrating homecoming.

Freshman Football

Chelsea's freshman football team lost to host Saline 48-27 last Thursday.

Chris Ballow had two touchdowns, while Mark Borders and Andrew Koch each scored one TD for the Bulldogs (2-3-1). Ben Avila and Tyler Frank threw touchdown passes for Chelsea.

"This game was pretty simple," said Chelsea coach Dennis Strzyzewski. "Saline blocked and tackled better than we did. We need to coach those techniques more effectively."

The Bulldogs next visit rival Dexter for a game Thursday at 4:30 p.m.

Bush elevates Bulldogs

By Burrill Strong
Guest Writer

Ten years ago, Brad Bush arrived in Chelsea to take over as head coach of the Chelsea High School football team. In the 10 full seasons under Bush, Bulldog football has amassed some impressive numbers.

Under Bush, Chelsea has an overall record of 78-27 (.742), with an average of nearly eight wins per season.

The Bulldogs have four seasons of 10 wins or more (11-1 in 2000; 10-1 in 2001; 10-1 in 2004; 10-2 in 2006) during Bush's time on the Chelsea sideline. Included in those wins have been seven Southeastern Conference White Division championships.

The Bulldogs have eight consecutive playoff appearances (1999 through 2006) with Bush at the helm.

Chelsea has had only two non-winning seasons with Bush leading the way. In Bush's first season (1997), the Bulldogs were 3-6, while the 2005 team was 5-5.

The consistency of the past decade has brought a strong culture of success to Chelsea football, and we here in Chelsea have become accustomed to this prolonged success. And while this decade of success has been remarkable, it does make us more prone to devaluing victory.

The coaching staff is well aware of this danger. Last fall, when the football team gathered to learn its first-round playoff opponent, Bush delivered a clear message to the gathered crowd.

Chelsea football under head coach Brad Bush has been a consistent winner. Despite all the success, wins should never be taken for granted.

He said to never take victories and playoff appearances for granted. It's easy to become comfortable with winning and to assume there will be another winning season and another playoff berth next year, but that is never guaranteed; enjoy every victory and every trip to the postseason, because no one can say for certain when the next one will occur.

That message is just as necessary for us fans as it is for the athletes. When the team takes the field for a game, we fill the stands to support our athletes and, obviously, to root for victories we have come to expect over the last decade. But no matter how many games the Bulldogs win, we should never take any win for granted; we should celebrate every success we are privileged to enjoy.

To that end, we fans must temper our natural expectation of success with an awareness of an uncertain reality in sports. Because Bush has built a strong program, we have good reason to believe the Bulldogs will again post a winning record and continue to the playoffs, but we must never rest on the program's laurels; we must never assume future success.

Winning is an accomplishment born of great effort, but it is fleeting; next Friday cares nothing for the results of this Friday, and next season cares nothing for the results of this season. As the University of Michigan has demonstrated this season, even the strongest programs can tumble at any time.

So, as we approach the rest of this Chelsea football season, let's continue to be excited when we watch our team experience success, and let's make a point never to take victories for granted.

The aroma of love

'The Poetry of Pizza' premieres this week at Purple Rose

By Terry Jacoby
Heritage Newspapers

While it might smell like pizza, love is in the air at the Purple Rose Theatre.

In a new romantic comedy opening this week at the Purple Rose, Professor Sarah Middleton arrives at the University of Copenhagen as a visiting poetry scholar, only to find her life irrevocably altered when she stops by a local pizzeria one night.

She falls suddenly and unexpectedly in love with Soran Saleen, who wins her heart with his unconventional pizzas. Across a huge cultural divide, their unlikely courtship arouses the passions of everyone around them, setting in motion a rash of culinary courtships and a chaotic comedy of errors.

"The Poetry of Pizza" was written by Deborah Brevoort and is being directed by Guy Sanville.

"We're all fools when it comes to love," says Michelle Mountain, who returns to the Purple Rose to play Middleton. "It celebrates love and there is such great joy in it."

While Mountain is a fixture at the Purple Rose, starring in such plays as "The Subject was Roses," "The Glass Menagerie," and "Norma & Wanda," her co-star in the play, Qarie Marshall, is making his Purple Rose debut. Trained at The Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts in London and performing mostly in England, Marshall made a pit stop in Chelsea.

"I love it here," he says. "I never want to leave."

Not only is Marshall taken by the theatre and the cast that goes with it, he's excited about playing Soran Saleen in "The Poetry of Pizza."

"It's really good writing," he says. "(Brevoort) has managed to cut out all the fat and the only things that are necessary are there and it allows you to go other places with it."

Sanville is the longtime artistic director at the Purple Rose and has directed many of the theatre's classic plays. This one, though, he says is "special."

"This is a love story about two people who have no reason to get together," he says. "The countries were and are at war. These two people are not supposed to get together, and they both have their friends trying to convince them of this.

"One of the actors calls it a 'delicious dream.' It's drenched in romance. It's a story about forbidden love."

And forbidden love can happen anywhere and at anytime and with anyone.

"They just know from the moment they see each other," Sanville says. "If you believe in love at first sight, and all the drama, and all the humor and all the tragedy that goes along with it, you will like this play."

While there is plenty of romance, "The Poetry of Pizza" also is topped with other equally appetizing elements.

"In the classic sense of the word, this actually is a farce," Sanville says. "The audience shares certain secrets with the actors that other actors aren't aware of. It's a really, really funny play. It's a full-blown comedy.

"It's like Romeo and Juliet surrounded by clowns. There is something for everyone here."

Sanville, who recently celebrated his 12th year as artistic director of The Purple Rose, said part of the reason he is excited about this play is because of the "amazing" cast they have assembled.

"The cast is a group of beautiful, smart, funny, talented and gracious people," he said. "My prayer is to just not screw this up. It's all right there and we just have to execute it. This really is a special one."

Like Sanville, Mountain has worked with a lot of actors at the Purple Rose.

"All of the casts I have worked with here are great, but there really is something special about this cast," she said. "There are some amazingly funny people in this play.

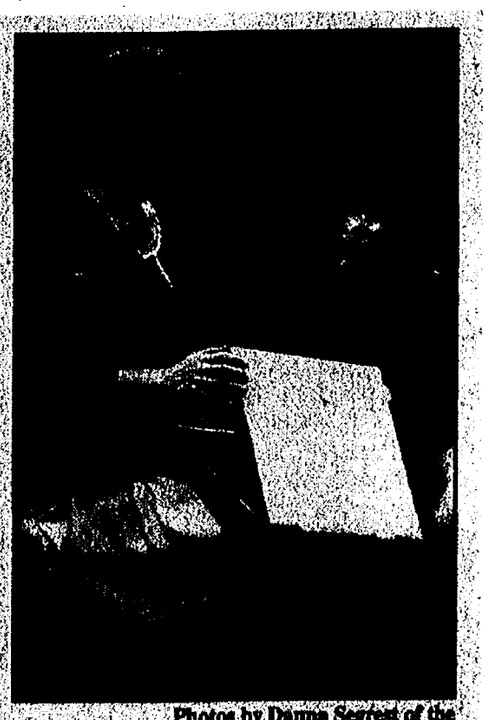

"And what I really like about it is that every character in this play is a fully realized human being. Everybody has a problem, a hope, a dream, a wish and a fear. You catch major chunks of everyone's story which I think is awesome."

The play also stars Sarah Benoit, PRTC Resident Artist Sandra Birch ("Sea of Fools," "Norma & Wanda"), Ruth Crawford, David Daoust ("Born Yesterday," "Across The Way"), PRTC Resident Artist Grant R. Krause ("The Subject Was Roses") and Hugh Maguire.

Despite the huge cultural divide, Sanville says the play has no political message. But he does say that it "shows us that people can overcome their differences."

World-premier opera has local connection

By Terry Jacoby
Heritage Newspapers

Torrance Blaisdell was born in Allentown, Penn. and currently lives in Manhattan, but he's certainly getting to know I-94 quite well. During a recent phone conversation, the opera singer took a break to question the judgement of some of Michigan's drivers.

Driving almost daily for weeks from his in-laws house in Chelsea to the Detroit Opera House, Blaisdell has spent time not only learning three roles for a brand new opera, but he's also learned a few things about life in metro Detroit. And while the skills of some drivers have come into question, there is no question he loves the new opera, the Detroit Opera House and his new adopted hometown of Chelsea.

His wife, Gayla (Bauer) Blaisdell, is a Chelsea native whose family has long been involved in the arts in the Chelsea area.

"We got married in 1994 and now have two kids, Tristan (10 years old) and Lydia (3)," Blaisdell says. "Whenever we are in Michigan we always stay in Chelsea. And we spend a lot of time here so it's like home for us. My wife and kids stay here all summer, but our kids go to school in New York."

The two met in graduate school in the opera program at the New England Conservatory in Boston. Gayla is currently finishing her PHD in vocal performance at New York University. "She's kind of the thinking singer and I'm more just the singer."

Torrance has spent the last few years working with the Michigan Opera Theatre. In fact, his daughter was born at the University of Michigan hospital while he was here performing in "Madam Butterfly." And being part of that production helped him land his current job.

"While I was doing 'Madam Butterfly,' Dr. David DiChiera (company founder and general director of the Michigan Opera House) asked me if I could sing some of the music he was composing," Blaisdell says. "So I sat down with him and we sang through some stuff and it was really a lot of fun. I didn't think much about it at the time.

"Then a year or two later I had an audition for a new Cyrano and I thought it was for the Opera Company of Philadelphia, who also is doing Cyrano. But this was for Dr. DiChiera's Cyrano. And I showed up at the audition and there he was, which was a nice surprise."

Blaisdell was hired to do the workshop last summer.

"Then they hired me on to do a couple of roles and a cover in the actual production," he said. "Because this is a new opera and if somebody gets sick, they just can't call up New York and get someone to do one of the parts because no one else knows it. So they cover every role in the opera and it's mostly by people who have other roles in the opera."

And this isn't just someone who knows the material. They need to find people who you would be just as happy if they sang the role.

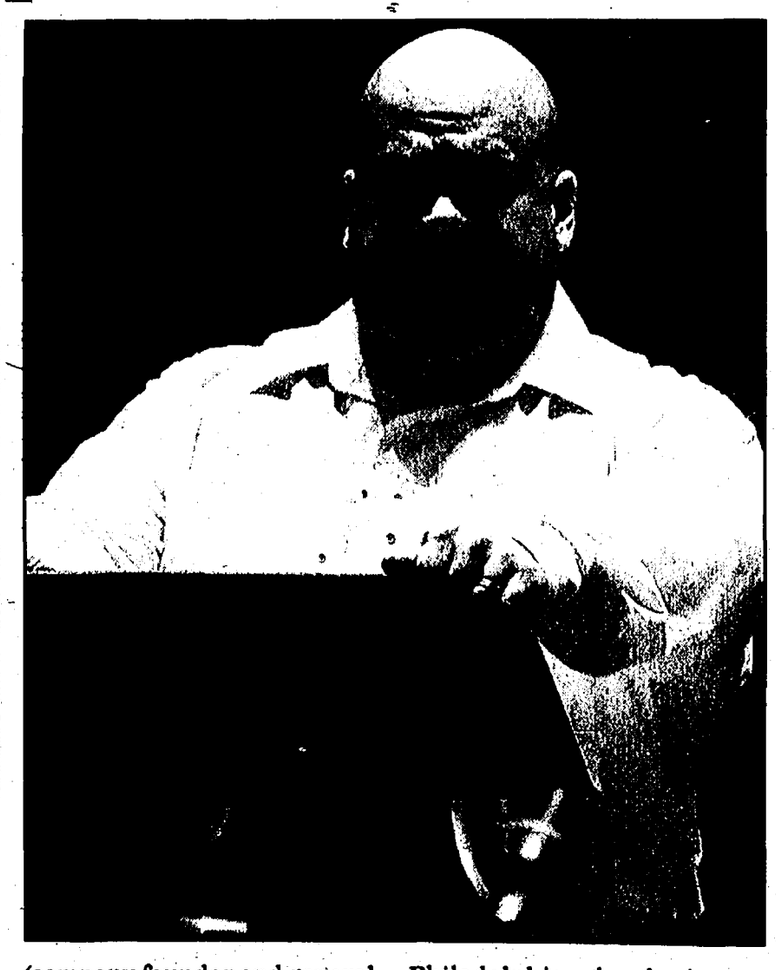

This three-act opera is based on Edmond Rostand's celebrated play of 1897, Cyrano de Bergerac, a romantic tragedy. Over eight years in the making, Cyrano represents DiChiera in his debut as an opera composer, reuniting him with long-time colleague Uzan and a host of creative team members.

For more than 36 years, DiChiera has produced opera and musical theatre productions, in addition to salvaging the Detroit Music Hall in 1971, founding Michigan Opera Theatre, and establishing the Detroit Opera House in 1996. His enormous and well-documented contributions to the cultural life of Detroit have earned him a special place within the rarified world of the performing arts.

Building the right team is important to success

As I sit here, I am reminded how critical a good team is to have when you run your own business. I have spent the greater portion of my day, and much of my productive mind, working on fixing an error made by my former business accountant from 2004. I have made it a point to pay to have things like taxes and legal items handled by the professionals so I don't need to spend my time doing them, as time spent on those items is less time spent on developing my business.

Unfortunately, sometimes it takes more time (and money via penalties and interest) to resolve them when they are done incorrectly. This week's column is not meant to be a whining session, rather it is to communicate how and why the RIGHT team is as critical as bringing in new business.

The Right Team will make your life easy. They will protect you legally and provide you the strategic insight that is so important in business. The Wrong Team will complicate it ten fold.

The Right Team will save you lots of money. The Wrong Team will cost you lots of money. Even if their hourly rate they charge is cheaper, you may likely end up paying a lot more to either have someone redo the work they have done, pay fines and penalties or worse yet, pay legal bills due to a lack of protection to begin with.

The Right Team can help you succeed. They can provide you with objective and professional insight to help you choose the right path for you. The Wrong Team can help you fail by leading you in the wrong direction.

Who should you have on your team?

At the very least, you will need a Smart Business Accountant, a savvy attorney and my personal favorite, a Great Business Coach. You may also need a board of directors, a good bookkeeper, a financial advisor and an insurance specialist, depending on the size and direction of your business.

How do you create the Right Team?

As with most services, the best way to find someone who is good is through word of mouth. We all know that word of mouth is the golden way to grow our business (I can spend plenty of time in a future column giving your tips on how to do this). It is also the best way to grow our business team.

The only true way to know if someone is good and ethical, besides trial and error, is by asking those you know who they would recommend and WHY they would recommend them. Take the time to interview a few of them to be sure they understand the unique needs of your business. For example, your friend's attorney may know the in's and out's of Real Estate Law, but that doesn't necessarily mean that they know what is necessary to protect your dog walking service. In the end, a glowing recommendation from a close friend or colleague is much better than looking up 'Attorney' in the phone book.

Bottom Line: Take the time and spend the money building a strong team around you. It'll make your job of growing your business much easier and more fulfilling.

Time is running out for IRA transfers to charities

Last year, the Pension Protection Act of 2006 drew a lot of attention for its efforts to strengthen the private pension system. But this legislation contained a number of other provisions - one of which, in particular, may be of great interest to you if you are over 70-1/2 and you'd like to make a sizable contribution to a charity.

Specifically, the Pension Protection Act allows you to transfer money from your traditional or Roth IRA to a charitable organization. You can donate up to $100,000 per year, and the IRA distribution will be tax-free. (If you are married, and your spouse also has an IRA, the two of you can contribute up to $200,000.) However, if you're interested in making this move, you'd better act fast, because the ability to make these transfers expires at the end of 2007.

Apart from providing you with a tax-advantaged way to make sizable charitable contributions, the IRA provision of the new pension laws gives you some added flexibility in another area: required minimum distributions (RMDs). As you may know, once you turn 70-1/2, you have to start taking distributions from your traditional IRA - whether you need the money or not. And these distributions will be taxable. (The required minimum distribution rule does not apply to Roth IRAs.)

But the provision allowing you to transfer IRA distributions to charities can help you meet the RMD requirement. For example, if you are required to withdraw 5 percent from your IRA for 2007, you can send the entire amount to a charity to satisfy the RMD requirement - and your distribution will be tax-free.

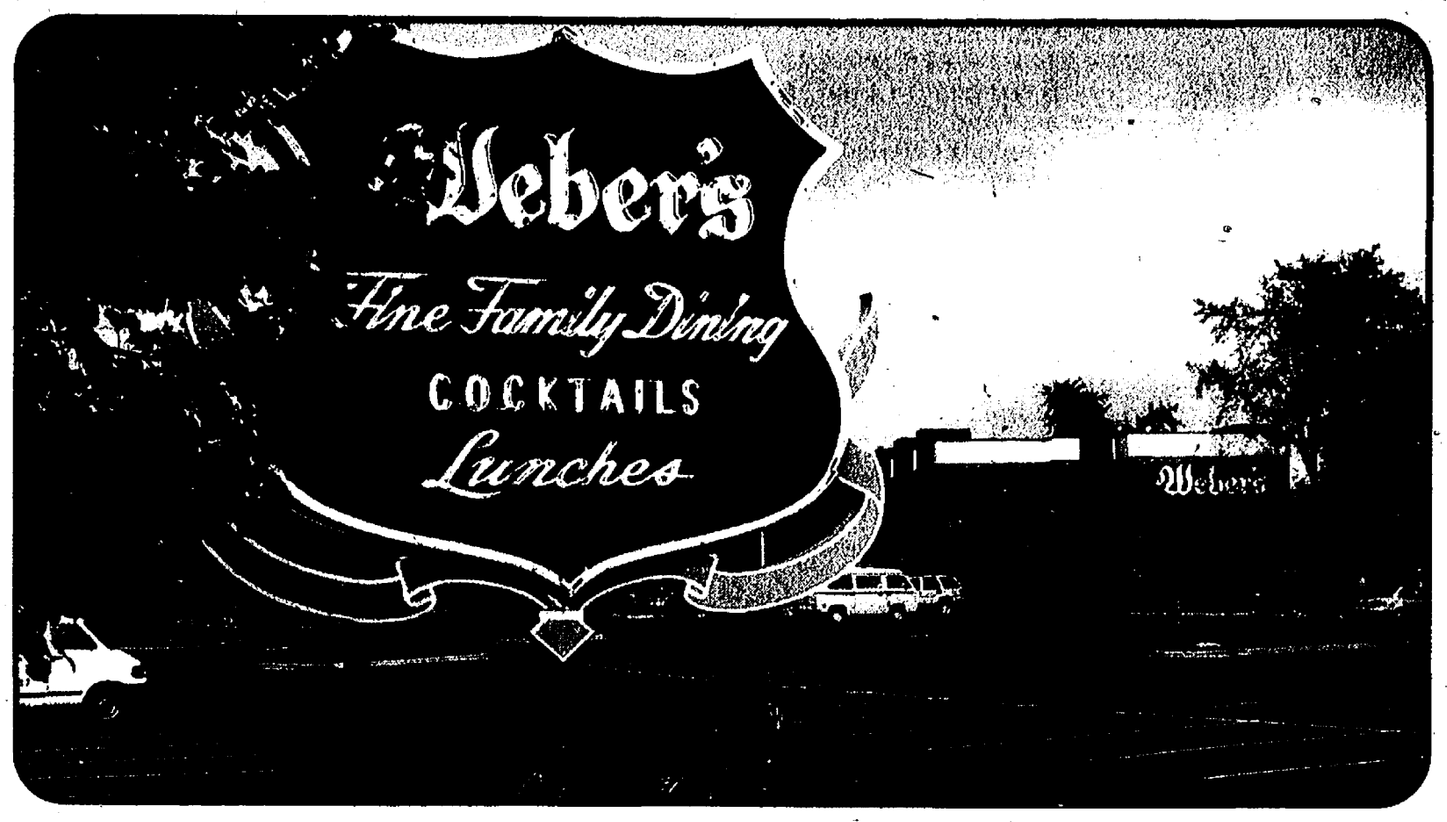

The IRA-to-charity provision may also benefit you if you aren't planning to itemize deductions on your tax returns. That's because your IRA distribution will eliminate the need to claim a charitable deduction. On the other hand, if you are close to "maxing out" on your income tax deductions because you are bumping up against the rule limiting deductions to 50 percent of your adjusted gross income, you might find that the IRA transfer rule can help you give more to charities than you would otherwise be able to make.

Review Retirement Income Before Taking Action

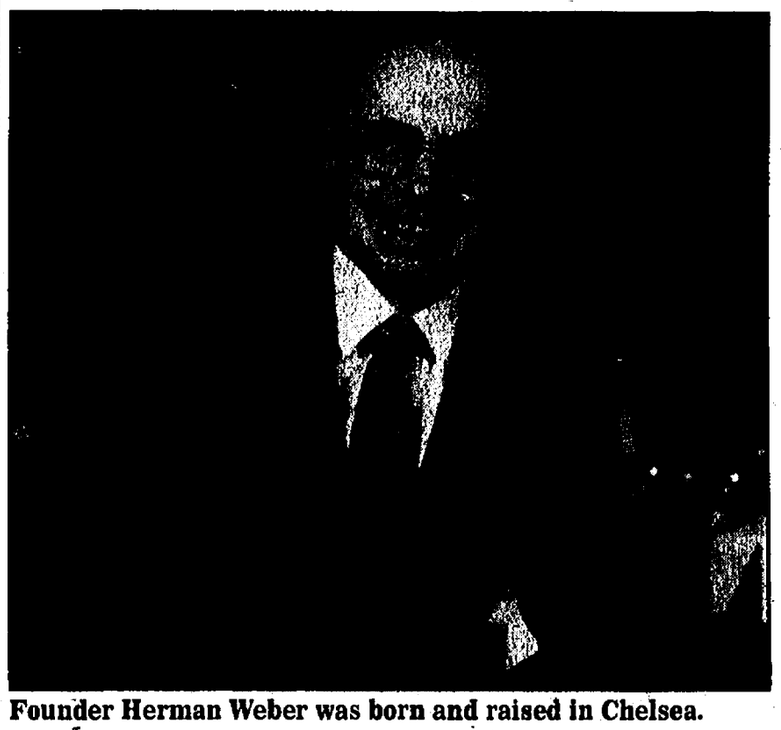

Clearly, the IRA-to-charity transfer can benefit you as far as making tax-advantaged contributions to support the charitable organizations of your choice. But before you decide to send your IRA distributions to a charity, make absolutely sure you won't need the money to help support your retirement lifestyle. Your financial advisor can help you review your income needs and the various sources of income you can count on.

Weber's has Chelsea, Scio connection

Founder Herman Weber was born and raised in Chelsea.

The pine-paneled bar at Weber's Supreme Club.

Weber's Restaurant on Jackson Road, which opened in 1939. The building was 32 feet wide and 40 feet long.

By Terry Jacoby

Weber's Inn has been a landmark just inside Ann Arbor on Jackson Road since opening its doors in 1962.

But even though it might seem like it, Weber's Inn hasn't been there forever. In fact, Weber's celebrated 70 years of serving customers last month and actually had two previous locations before becoming a staple just off exit 172 on I-94.

The origins of the family-run business go back even further. And in Chelsea, of all places.

"My dad was raised on the family farm in Chelsea," said Ken Weber, son of Weber's Inn founder, Herman Weber. "(My grandparents) were simple farmers and my dad went to school in the little schoolhouse there in Chelsea.

"He says there was a bull in a field that was fenced off and if you went through the field you could take a shortcut to school instead of having to go all the way around so sometimes he would do that."

Yes, Herman Weber was daring even at an early age.

Not only is Herman still around, but at 93 he's still very active in running his restaurant and hotel. He comes in several times a week to help his son Ken, who is now the president of the operation.

"This is his life and he still enjoys coming here to see the customers and employees," Ken said. "And he's still sharp and still coming up with new ideas to help the business."

But it was on the family farm in Chelsea where the idea for Weber's Inn was first "hatched."

"The family grew chickens on the farm and my dad would take the chickens and sell them to Metzger's Restaurant in Ann Arbor," Ken said. "Then the season would end and there would be no more chickens. He told them that this was going to be his last delivery because they were out of chickens, and the owner, Bud Metzger, asked him if he wanted to work there. And my dad said yes."

Herman went from delivering chickens to washing dishes at Metzgers. But it would still be a few years before he was cleaning up in the restaurant business and actually competing with his old boss.

Herman not only worked at Metzgers, but also lived there.

"There was a small apartment above the restaurant and he rented that out so he lived there and worked there for years," Ken said.

Meet Boss! Boss has special needs (he has only 3 legs and about half his tail) who was abandoned when his owners were evicted. Boss was a bit scared when he came in, but he's figured out there are people who care about him--just look at his pics! He's been though a lot for such a young dog!

Meet CODY This is one handsome guy! Cody is a 7-year-old gray-and-white guy with very interesting markings. He came to HSHV as a stray and is hoping to find a forever home. Cody has an old injury that causes him to limp and that's why we call him a "Diamond in the Ruff". Cody gets around just fine so don't worry about that little limp. Cody is litter trained and ready to go home with you today!

OPERA

"I had always been interested in composing an opera, but never found the right subject or had the time," said DiChiera. "Bernard approached me with the idea of setting Cyrano, and I was immediately struck by the dual aspects of Cyrano's personality, a powerful struggle between his overwhelming external bravado and the inner sadness and anguish of his internal persona. When you add Roxane to the mix, you have a tale similar to Romeo and Juliet—a great love story."

Cyrano de Bergerac, Rostand's most popular work, blends nostalgia for 17th century French life with swashbuckling heroism, romance and lyrical verse. Cyrano, a nobleman with a larger than life personality, skilled in both the sword and the pen, is physically plain with a rather large nose. Despite his overwhelming love for the beautiful Roxane, Cyrano agrees to help his younger rival, the handsome Christian, to win her heart. From the renowned balcony scene to the moving climax, the triumph of the spiritual over the corporal is ultimately achieved. Cyrano, similar to Don Quixote and Don Juan, has become one of the world's most enduring and popular literary figures.

Blaisdell is performing in the roles of "Capucin" and "Marquis de Cuigy."

Two roles make it doubly difficult for Blaisdell, but he is rising to the challenge that comes with a brand new opera, a very rare event. It takes hundreds, even thousands of hours of work for new sets, costumes, music and lyrics.

"It's a lot of rehearsing," Blaisdell says. "They try to keep us to six hours a day but it doesn't always work out that way."

The production period is four weeks long.

"We have three weeks of rehearsals and coaching and getting to know our parts," Blaisdell says. "The fourth week is production week which means we are in the theatre with the sets and the costumes and getting used to how everything feels. We also are rehearsing with the orchestra at that point. During our rehearsals we don't have the orchestra, so there are some adjustments that need to be made when the orchestra comes in."

Being a first-time performance, Blaisdell says there are plenty of things to get used to.

"I do a lot of 'Madam Butterfly' and I do a lot of 'Marriage of 'Figaro' so a lot of us are used to those, but this is everyone's first time," said Blaisdell, who has only been in one previous first-time opera. "It's one thing if a few in the cast are experiencing their first time with an opera, but it's another thing when the whole cast, and this is a big cast, is learning it for the first time."

DiChiera began work on Cyrano in 1999, and through the years composed the opera in a variety of locations including Detroit, California, New York and Scotland. "The more I read Rostand's play, it became clear to me that I wanted to further explore the beauty of the French language," he said. "His words lent themselves to music, and for me, simply needed to be sung."

Casting for Michigan Opera Theatre's presentation of Cyrano features a roster of talented artists, including: Peter Volpe as De Guiche, Eric Johnston as Ragueneau, Gloria Parker as La Duegne, and Gaetan Laperriere as Le Bret. And, of course, Blaisdell in his dual roles.

"I think people are really going to like this," Blaisdell says. "Even those who have never been to an opera will enjoy this. It's a beautiful story and it's also very exciting."

It's also exciting for Blaisdell to be back in his adopted hometown.

"I don't mind the hour drive each way because I like being in Chelsea every chance I get," he says. "Two of my nephews are on the high school football team so I get to go to the games on Friday nights. It really gives me something I don't get when I am in New York. It's really a breath of fresh air in a lot of ways."

"That was a top restaurant back then and he learned a lot working there."

Taking ownership

Herman Weber knew he didn't want to wash dishes for a living, so he saved his money and went into business for himself in 1937.

But he had no idea that his endeavor would grow into one of Ann Arbor's most enduring and renowned dining establishments.

"There was a gas station-diner that had gone out of business and was up for lease and my dad had saved enough money to be able to lease it," Ken said.

Located at the corner of Washtenaw and Platt in east Ann Arbor, Herman's first establishment was a single-room hamburger joint and gas station called the "Hi-Speed Inn."

Herman was its first cook, busboy, gas pumper, accountant and janitor. The first hand-lettered menu was posted on the wall and featured "Hamburgers - 15¢; 12 oz. of Fresh Beer - 10¢."

"They pumped gasoline and the gas station owned the building and there was a small diner inside," Ken said. "He pumped the gas and served the burgers. And they had a beer license so he served Lowenbrau beer.

They had a pinball machine in there and he used to set it as loose as it could be and he said he made enough money off the pinball machine to pay the rent."

Herman also had a pretty good business going inside the diner.

"They were building the bombers over at Willow Run so there was a lot of people who were working at that time because of the war," Ken said. "The workers from the bomber plant would come over and eat."

After a few years Herman moved the operation to Jackson Road in Scio Township. He took over the Oak Grove Tavern in the winter of 1939. Favorite menu items included prime rib and broiled whitefish, identical to entrees on today's menu and requested by many regular customers – then and now.

"He leased this building, which was sort of a tavern, and they also had six cabins that they were renting out as rooms back then," Ken said.

"The building ended up getting sold and the new owner thought he could run it so my dad had to move on."

If you build it ...

In 1940, Herman Weber decided to build, moving to Jackson Road, a mile west of today's location, changing the name to Weber's Supper Club and adding seven motel rooms: Herman and his brother, Rheinhold, dug the footings for the buildings themselves.

Through the project's stonemason, Herman met and eventually married Sonja, who worked the same long hours as her husband to make the restaurant a success.

"She's retired but still involved in running the business," says Ken of his mother. "My dad always says he could have never taken it to the next level without her, because she was always in front with the customers while he was in the back doing the other things."

Weber's Supper Club was located in Scio Township, where Toyota now is located.

"Jackson Road was the main road there and he was doing a good business," Ken says. "Then they built I-94 and Ann Arbor went wet and Scio Township stayed dry. He knew he had to have liquor if he was going to be viable. That's when he made his final move."

In 1961 Herman purchased land and moved to his present location just inside Ann Arbor's city limits, opening in 1962.

"Few people know that the inn was built well after the restaurant – in 1970," said Ken, who graduated from Michigan State University and joined the family business in 1978.

"With the addition of 126 guest rooms and an indoor recreation area with pool and sauna, Weber's became a true hotel/conference complex."

In 1986 the hotel's south wing was added, with 35 new rooms and seven luxury suites, each with a private poolside balcony.

All in the family

Ken, 52, decided to make this his life's work after practically growing up inside the walls of Weber's Inn.

"Mom would always work the evening shift and we would have babysitters," Ken says.

"I remember Sundays were always long days because they both worked from 12 to 9. When mom had to go to work she would

Critics call them novels of psychological suspense. Readers call them thrillers or page-turners. In any case, they are books that will keep you guessing until the last page is turned, and book-lovers can't get enough of them. These are some of my favorites:

Award-winning mystery author Laura Lippman's newest novel, "What the Dead Know", tells the story of two sisters, Sunny and Heather Bethany, who disappear from a Baltimore mall in 1975, never to be seen again in spite of an intense search. Years later, a middle-aged woman recovering from a car accident hints to police that she's the missing Heather. As the narrative shifts between past and present, subtle clues keep the reader guessing until the final surprising, satisfying page.

First time novelist Gillian Flynn impresses with "Sharp Objects," the tale of emotionally fragile Camille Preaker, a reporter with a second-rate newspaper who returns to her hometown to cover a series of baffling murders. A reformed "cutter" who is riddled with hidden scars, Camille reluctantly moves back home with her icy mother, remote stepfather, and overly precocious teen half-sister. As Camille slowly uncovers more facts about the murders, the story becomes increasingly twisted, chilling, and personal.

The brilliant Dennis Lehane has a tour de force with 2003's "Shutter Island." Two U.S. Marshals, Teddy Daniels and Chuck Aule, come to a hospital for the criminally insane on an isolated island near Boston in 1954 to investigate the seemingly impossible disappearance of a patient. There are mysteries within mysteries in this crackerjack novel, wrapped up with one of the best endings ever.

The reliable Michael Connelly's gripping 2002's "Chasing the Dime" tells of chemist Henry Pierce, whose new phone number attracts dozens of messages for someone named Lilly. As Henry comes to learn, Lilly is a prostitute, and she seems to be missing. Haunted by his own sister's murder, Henry finds himself compelled to search for the provocative Lilly, and is soon in over his head, deep into a seedy world of pornography, gangsters and thugs. Surprising twists and non-stop action make this one hard to put down.

One of the most intense, ingeniously plotted thrillers I've ever read is Scott Smith's 1993 debut, "A Simple Plan." Three friends stumble upon a downed plan deep in the woods, along with a sack full of cash. Assuming that it's illicit drug money, the three have no compunctions about taking the loot, and concoct a plan to hide the money for a year, tell no one, and then divvy it up. But human nature insures that the plan will go horribly wrong, and what follows is a spiral of deception, betrayal and murder that makes you want to hide your eyes, even as you can't wait to turn the page. The novel was made into an equally suspenseful movie in 1998 starring Billy Bob Thornton, Bill Paxton, and Bridget Fonda.

drive me over there and then dad would take me home. Then the babysitter would come and he would go back for the night shift. I was just a young boy and everyone was very kind to me."

Ken, who ran the restaurant for years with his sister Linda before she retired, has three sons and two of them are attending the hotel and restaurant school at MSU. Ken said he learned equal parts from MSU and his parents. "It's different learning," he says. "One learning is right there and the other is more of an academic type of learning.

You need to understand how a balance sheet and an income statement work and a little bit about finance and the theory that goes with it. They complemented each other well. You need both."

The first thing Ken wanted to do coming out of college was change the menu and remodel the place. He's glad more experienced heads prevailed.

"You learn things have to be measured," he said. "You don't want to turn a successful place upside down. My dad taught me that you can't be successful unless the staff wants you to be successful. The staff has to believe in what you're doing and share in the success.

"The main reason my dad has been successful is because he worked hard and was right there with everybody else doing what had to be done, and the staff wanted the place to grow and prosper. His personality and work ethic rubbed off on everyone.

"My dad is friendly, hard-working, fair and cares about everyone who works there."

The future

Weber's is now considered one of the best inns in Michigan and the restaurant continues to thrive with its popular menu and featured items including prime rib and whitefish.

"We found out that about 30 percent of all our hotel business comes from people in Washtenaw County," Ken said. "Sometimes coming here for one night away from home can feel like a three-night vacation. We try to keep it affordable. We have the swimming pool that families really like.

We also have a lot of people who enjoy dancing and we have dancing almost every night of the week."

Ken said the business must continue to walk that fine line between traditional and modern to keep the customers coming back.

"Everything is changing and we have to stay competitive," Ken says. "We have a great location in a great area, but at the same time we have to reinvest in the place and put in what people want today.

We are putting in high definition, flat-screen TVs in all the hotel rooms. We offer wireless, high-speed internet. So there is a lot of technology guests today are going to expect from hotels.".

Customers already have high expectations when arriving at Weber's Inn. With 70 years and 15 million customers on the balance sheet, it's easy to see they've matched those expectations.

And just think. It all started with Herman Weber delivering chickens from his family farm in Chelsea.

FAITH: Ministerial Message

The Golden Rule is a universal law

By Sandra Peterson
Secretary of the Baha'i Group of Chelsea

Many years ago, a little boy was looking at the black and white National Geographic photos of far-away native peoples in scanty dress. "Grandpa," he asked, "are these people going to heaven? They don't have a church."

Grandpa thought carefully. "Yes," he answered. "God is a just God. He will take care of those who haven't heard about Jesus."

The little boy remembered, but Grandpa forgot, and by the time he died, he believed that not even all the people in his own little Lutheran congregation would join him in paradise.

In fact, Grandpa had been right. God does take care of all and has spoken to all peoples throughout history.

Christians know that when Christ went up to the mountain and spoke to the multitudes, he gave us what we call "The Golden Rule:" "Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them; for this is the law and the prophets" (Matthew, 7:12).

The Golden Rule has been a guiding light to Christians through the centuries. Mother Theresa, Jimmy Carter, and our own neighbors today have tried to live by these words. They make life richer and better for all who practice them.

Who we are

In the Baha'i Faith, there is no clergy. Baha'u'llah, the Prophet-Founder of the Baha'i Faith, revealed many tablets and prayers. Baha'is the world over read and study His words in groups and in private. The Chelsea Baha'is meet in homes or travel to the Baha'i Center of Washtenaw County in Ypsilanti Township.

Christ, in fact, spoke a very ancient truth which is also expressed in the Old Testament book of Leviticus (19:18) as "Love thy neighbor as thyself." And again, in the Jewish Talmud it is written "What is hateful to you, do not do to your fellowman. This is the entire Law; all the rest is commentary."

All over the world, in every major religion, children are learning this mighty law. The Golden Rule has proceeded from that one great Source of Light which is known by many names: Jehovah, Yahweh, God, Dios, Allah, and the one unknowable Creator of the universe. It has been given to all peoples.

Muslim children learn that "No one of you is a believer until he desires for his brother that which he desires for himself" (Sunnah). For over 3,500 years, millions of Hindu children have been taught that "This is the sum of duty; do naught onto others what you would not have them do to you" (Mahabharata 5, 1517).

Grandpa was right, all right! He allowed himself to see, if only for a moment, that God watches over all and guides all. The eternal truths of loving one's neighbor and asking and giving forgiveness are found across the centuries and in all cultures and religions.

Today Baha'u'llah, the Prophet-Founder of the Baha'i Faith, calls all people to "Consort with the followers of all religions in a spirit of friendliness and fellowship" (Gleanings from the Writings of Baha'u'llah, p. 95). He again issues the ancient call of the Golden Rule: "Blessed is he who preferreth his brother before himself" (Tablets of Baha'u'llah, p. 71).

All of us...Christian, Jew, Muslim, Buddhist, Hindu, Baha'i, or another faith... need to heed these great and ancient words in our daily life. How can we live the Golden Rule? And if we all did that across the globe, what a magnificent world we would create!

Starting at home, think about your day. What about that parking space? Do you rush into it ahead of someone who has been waiting for it? Do you let the man with only a few items in his shopping cart get into line ahead of you at Polly's? Do you say please and thank-you at every single opportunity? What a nice day you might make for someone!

We all get our feelings hurt or get our egos stepped on occasionally. It's so easy to react with anger. Yet we, ourselves, would like to be understood and forgiven for any thoughtless remark we might make that hurts another person. The timeless Golden Rule asks us to show the same understanding and forgiveness to others that we want for ourselves.

Perhaps some of the most valuable gifts we can receive... and give... in any day are a sincere smile and friendly hello. This is true all over the world, in every culture and religion. Warmth and kindness are expressions of love, which each of us would like to receive, and so we must also give them.

The Golden Rule speaks of action: it's not about words alone. "Do unto others..." When we meet a stranger in town, we can speak to him as a friend and try to be of service in some way. We can try to make him or her feel welcome in our community, just as we would like to be welcomed.

Try spending 15 minutes to think about how you would like to be treated by others in your family. How would you like to be treated at school or work? What would your day look like if your family, co-workers and even strangers could peek into your mind and then treat you so well that your day would be wonderful? Then go forth into your next day and see if you can't do some of those thoughtful things for others you meet. You may "Make their day!" and improve your own day as well.

The Golden Rule has been given to all of the world. It is ours to use to make the entire earth a better place for everyone's children. Baha'u'llah affirms, "Let your vision be world embracing, rather than confined to your own self" (Gleanings from the Writings of Baha'u'llah, p. 94). By our actions and our determination to live the Golden Rule in our private and public lives we can move the world toward a more peaceful time for all.

Celebrating the Clocktower

By Edward Freundl
Staff Writer

Frank Glazier, a visionary in his own time more than a century ago, likely would be proud of what his modern-day counterpart, Ronald Weiser, has created at Glazier's former industrial complex.

Now known as the Clocktower Commons, the collection of retail, commercial and office space on North Main Street is anchored by the historic clocktower.

Completed in 1907, the tower went on to become Chelsea's most enduring and familiar landmark.

Saturday the history of that landmark and the economic significance of the subsequent $15 million development undertaken by Weiser and McKinley Associates was celebrated in speeches, proclamations, music and magic.

The six-hour centennial celebration got under way at noon, and was punctuated by free walking tours of the complex led by volunteers with the Chelsea Area Historical Society.

A small crowd gathered at the gazebo at midafternoon to hear remarks by several local dignitaries.

"We are grateful Frank Glazier chose this place to operate his business," Chelsea Mayor Ann Feeney said, then read a proclamation from the City Council celebrating "Chelsea Clocktower Day" and expressing appreciation to Glazier, Ambassador Weiser and McKinley.

She presented the proclamation to Trey Caswell, McKinley's executive vice president of commercial operations.

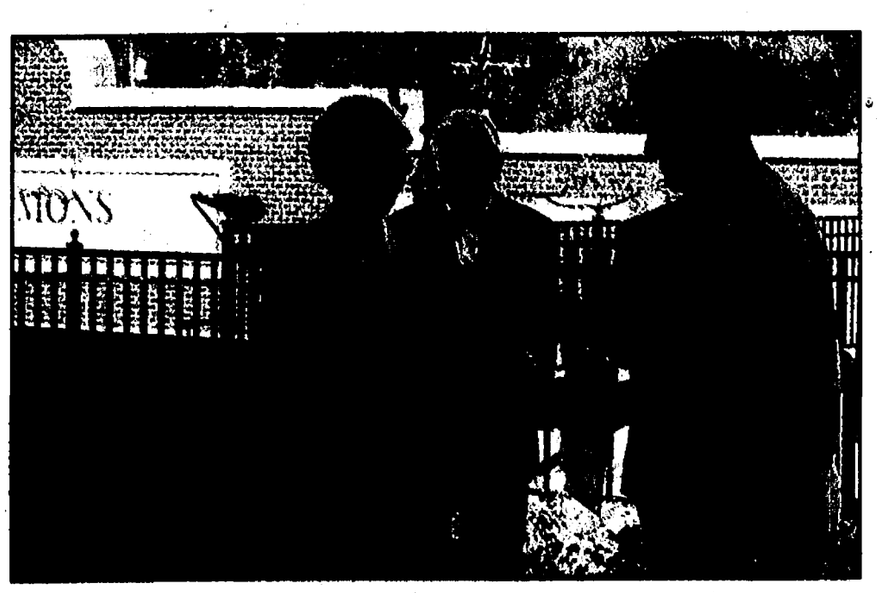

Caswell was the recipient of congratulations and similar proclamations from the county, state and Congressional level as well.

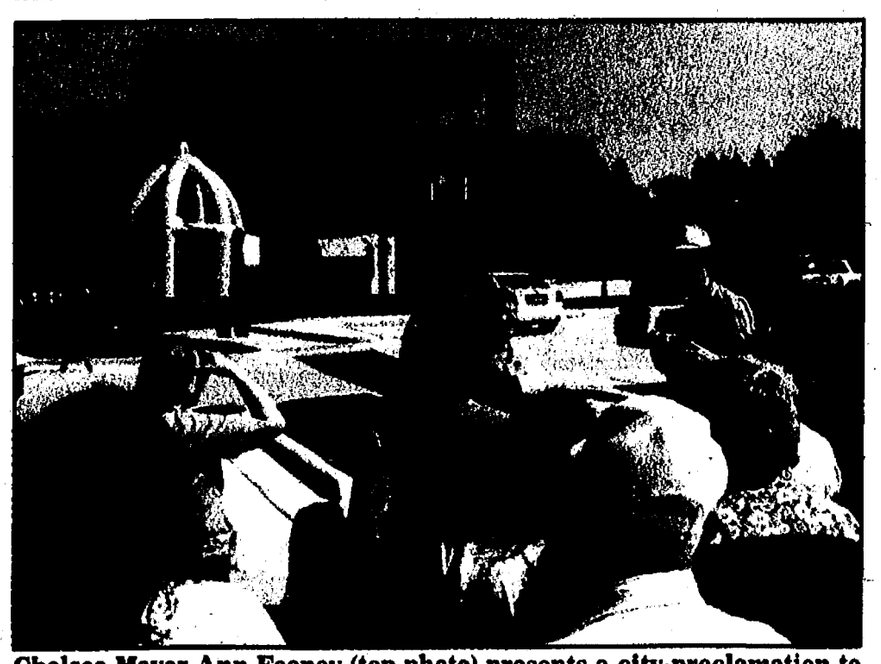

Other speakers included Washtenaw County Commissioner Mark Ouimet, R-District 1; Kent Brown, husband of state Rep. Pam Byrnes, D-District 52, who was unable to attend due to legislative priorities at the state Capitol; and U.S. Rep. Tim Walberg, R-District 7.

"We will put all these proclamations up in the Clocktower lobby," Caswell said, then read statements from Weiser and McKinley CEO Albert Berriz, who were unable to attend.

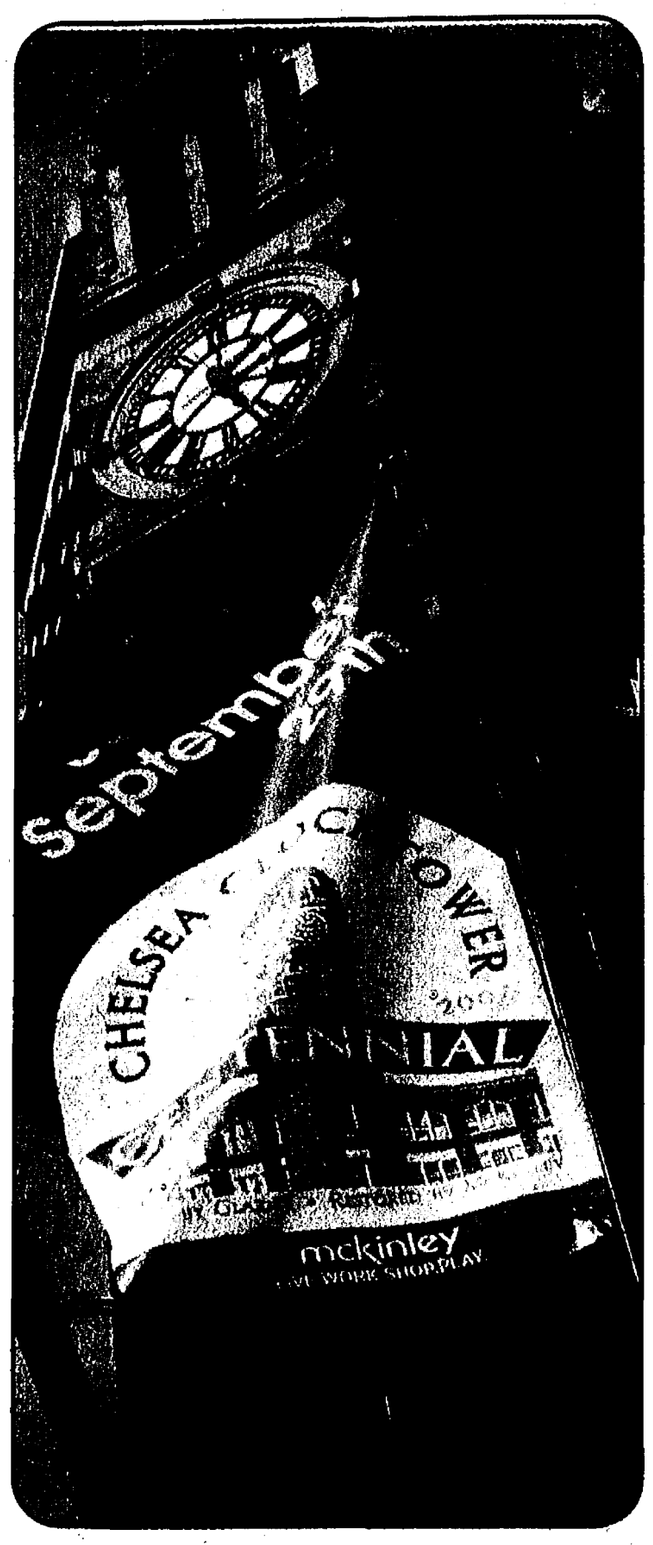

Walberg congratulated Chelsea and McKinley for an "entrepreneurial spirit" that "wants to go against the flow of the rest of Michigan."

"This is a community that decided years ago that it's going to succeed and become a place you can enjoy living in, not just make money in," Walberg said. "If we in this state could make it easier for entrepreneurs to create businesses like this here ... (on the federal level) I want to make sure we keep in place the things that can make that happen."

Road trip takes Chelsea artists west

Part II

By Marsi Parker Darwin

It was cool and sunny when we left Michigan the 13th of September, and the weather stayed beautiful throughout our trip. When it clouded up and threatened rain as we headed home ten days later, we thought perhaps Colorado was as sad to see us leave as we were to go. I'd missed my home state for years, and my friend Lauren Kingsley, an avid fly-fisher, had never fished the Colorado Rockies. Her company, The Painted Trout, markets my glasswork as well, so when the opportunity to do the Fly-Fishing Retailers Show in Denver came along, we took it.

We breezed through the south side of Chicago before noon, taking I-94 to 80, and had lunch at a diner in western Illinois. When we crossed the Mississippi River, I was further west than I'd been in 14 years, and I had a knot of excitement in my stomach. We took turns driving across farmland, through towns like Belle Plaine and What Cheer, noting that all the barns in Iowa are painted white.

Lauren Kingsley (left) and Marsi Parker Darwin spent time recently at a retailers show in Denver. The two got to see the depot in Council Bluffs, Iowa and the Blue Bear sculpture at the Colorado Convention Center.

Reaching Council Bluffs, Iowa, shortly before dusk, we had driven for about 10 hours and called it a day. Council Bluffs was named for an 1803 meeting between Lewis and Clark and the Otoe tribe, and settled in the 1830's by the Pottawatomi, who were removed from what became Chicago.

The next morning we eagerly crossed the Missouri River to Omaha and through Nebraska, following the Platte River. How the covered wagons ever made it across the prairies is beyond me - thank goodness for an 80 mile an hour speed limit now. Michigan has a slower speed limit for trucks, but out there they hurtle past at disconcerting speeds, although traffic thinned the further west we drove.

We reached the Colorado state line and I began searching the horizon for mountain ranges, but we didn't see much until we were almost in Denver - total driving time just short of 19 hours. We found our hotel in the heart of downtown, unloaded our luggage in our 7th floor room, and took off for the house where Lauren had stored her inventory after a gift show in Denver a month earlier.

Bill Carlson owns that house and is a friend of K.C. Groves, member of the internationally known band Uncle Earl, and K.C. is an old friend of Lauren's husband Jack. Bill has attended almost every bluegrass festival in Telluride, Colorado, and has posters all over his walls. We took him out for dinner to thank him for the storage space, eating outdoors at the Pearl Street Grill, where I had a steak salad to die for.

Normally I'm not a big meat eater, but this trip I seemed to hunger for it, and my salad really hit the spot with its chili-dredged grilled steak, fresh greens, perfectly ripe avocado slices, crumbled bleu cheese, and cilantro lime dressing on the side. Afterward we loaded Lauren's truck with her inventory, drove back to the hotel, and crashed.

Early the next morning, we walked two blocks to the Colorado Convention Center,where we spent the entire day setting up our booth for the trade show. I've done a lot of art shows in the past sixteen years, but this was intense. First of all, the space is huge - 584,000 square feet of exhibit space within 4 ? acres of glass walls. There were two full-size casting ponds inside the hall, for heaven's sake. (When we broke down the show a few days later, I saw that they were constructed with PVC pipe held in place with cement blocks; gigantic sheets of black plastic draped over the pipe, then filled with a few inches of water.)

Convention goers could practice casting, try out the many fly rods for sale, and participate in competitions for distance and accuracy.

We were amused at the soft laughing sounds beneath our feet when we stepped onto the escalators at the center. We were not amused at the cost of food - $4 for a small bottle of juice, $8 for a small salad.

We had dinner Saturday night with a college friend in Lakewood, first making a loop through Golden, where Coors beer is brewed and Buffalo Bill is buried. We sat on the deck looking out over the lights of Denver, and my friend relayed a story of a mountain lion attack on a deer across the street from them last year, the first of several cougar encounters we'd hear about on our trip. Mountain Standard is two hours behind Michigan time, so we turned in, exhausted, at around 9 p.m. MST.

The next three days were spent meeting other entrepreneurs, retailers, and manufacturers from all over the world. Lauren kept a book of business cards from contacts and handed out catalogs and price lists. We both pitched our creations - Lauren's scarves, bandanas, t-shirts, aprons, and boxer shorts and my coasters, ornaments, and panels, all with a fly-fishing theme. Lauren licensed her bandana fishing motif, for the royalties, to a company called Fishpond, who promised they'd be in a thousand stores within a year, including Orvis, Cabela's, and Bass Pro Shops.

I spoke to a man who seemed interested in my ornaments with hand-tied flies encased in watery glass. He asked if I could produce them in quantity and I told him it depended, then asked where he was from. "Oh, a little company out east," he said, "called L. L. Bean." I'm sure my jaw dropped. He sent others to look at my work over the course of the show, so I have my fingers crossed.

We met two interesting women, a fish-carver from New England and a Louisiana lady who designed fishing vests for women, but it was mainly a man's world.

There were meetings going on in other areas of the building, too, including a recycling convention, with an appearance by former president Bill Clinton one morning (we didn't see him.) I attended a seminar Sunday where my friend Becky Winkler, who works for Zingerman's Zing-Train, spoke on merchandising. She was surprised to see me, and I was very inspired by her talk.

We attended a couple of networking parties in the evening – one at the Wynkoop Brewery, and another on the roof of the Denver Athletic Club. It featured live music, a buffet, and some rousing games of washers (a lot like horseshoes) in the moonlight.

Downtown Denver boasts an amazing public transportation system, including a free shuttle. I did some exploring Monday, visiting Union Station (where I've come in on the train many times) and Coors Field, home of the Colorado Rockies, and the 16th Street Mall, a mile-long outdoor pedestrian corridor of shops and restaurants.

Tuesday afternoon we packed up our booth, checked out of the hotel, and headed at last for Lyons, a small town north of Boulder. Then the fun really began!

Burn wood

A renewable, efficient, clean energy source

With colder temperatures on the way, many people are considering more efficient and more economic ways to heat their homes. The roller coaster of energy prices combined with the strain on the planet's energy sources and the increased pollution can leave you feeling cold.

Tapping into renewable energy sources is an important step toward reducing our dependence on petroleum and minimizing pollution levels.

"One of the best renewable energy sources is wood," says Tom Morrissey, president of Woodstock Soapstone Company, Inc. Increased interest in renewable energy has brought about a revival in wood burning for home heating. In the 1970s wood burning got a bad rap from the pollution associated with it but new technology lends itself to cleaner, more efficient and environmentally conscious ways to heat your home.

The EPA regulated and approved of wood burning stoves in 1990. If the stove is EPA certified, or, a clean combustion stove, it is considered carbon neutral and a good alternative source of heat. What does carbon neutral mean? It means that no more carbon dioxide is released into the atmosphere than if it were decomposing on the forest floor.

"Woodstock Soapstone Company was founded in 1978 in response to the first energy crisis," remarks Morrissey. "Our wood stoves meet the new EPA regulations for clean burning — which means you can barely see any smoke coming out of the chimney."

The modern wood stoves made by Woodstock Soapstone Company are exceptionally clean burning. Using catalytic combustors, which burn the smoke so fewer particles are released

'Tis almost the season

Give your kitchen a new look for the holidays

During the upcoming holiday season, the kitchen will be the most frequently used room in the house. You'll be spending countless hours there preparing holiday meals and doing dishes; friends and family will gather there to socialize.

Want to make the room where you're going to be spending so much time more enjoyable? How about giving yourself the gift of a mini-kitchen makeover in time for the holidays?

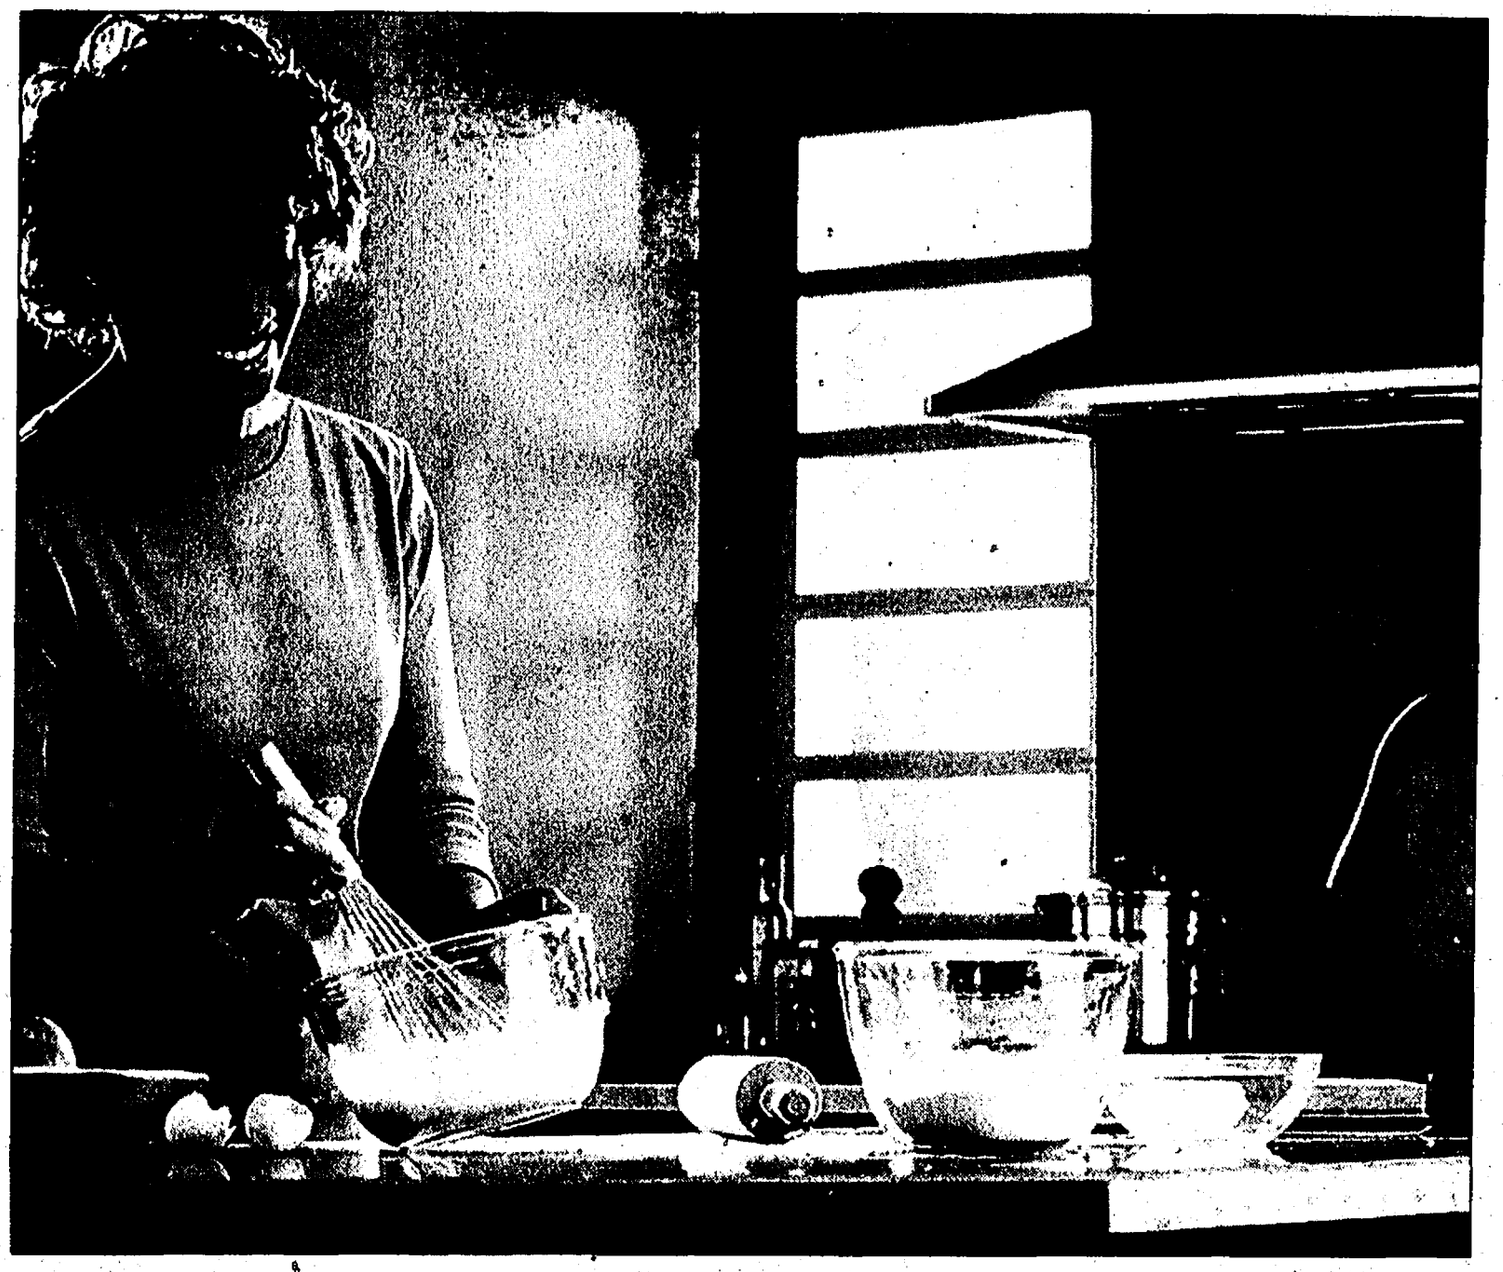

"When people hear the word makeover, they usually think that means replacing the cabinets, countertops and appliances, which can be an expensive venture, not to mention inconvenient. With all the stress you'll soon be under, why not start small with some dramatic changes that can be made by a do-it-yourselfer in a day or two?" asks Dan Auer, of Decorative Product Source, a leading online retailer of decorative home products.

Among the projects he recommends you consider: painting the walls, updating the lighting fixtures and getting a new kitchen sink and faucet. Not sure what you want to do? Pick up some home magazines, or visit a couple of model homes in your area to get some ideas.

When you're ready to shop for materials, don't waste a lot of time running from store to store. Log on to www.faucet.com. The site offers more than 50,000 different kitchen products, so chances are good you'll find exactly what you want. You can shop by style, finish, brand or price range for sinks, faucets and accessories.

If you're looking to modernize your kitchen, for example, you'll want to shop by style. A good place to start is by getting a look at your options for faucets. They come in a wide variety of shapes, styles, designs and finishes. Some of the options include the very common two handle and single handle faucets, pull-out spray faucets, wall mount faucets and pot filler faucets, which are installed on the wall or counter next to the stove to provide easy filling of pots on the stove.

When it comes to the kitchen sink, you'll find a range of single, double and triple bowl as well as specialty sinks that are available with the option of being self-rimming or under mounted. They are available in a wide variety of materials such as stainless steel, composite and cast iron. If you need help deciding which sink is best for you, check out Faucet.com's Kitchen Sink Buying Guide, which is prominently featured on the site's Info Center.

While browsing, you'll also find a variety of accessories designed to save time, eliminate counter clutter and help keep areas clean and usable, such as soap dispensers, drain strainers, rinse baskets and pot racks. Cabinet hardware is also available. So are garbage disposals and hot water dispensers.

"We've tried to think of everything you'd need to make the kitchen sink not just functional, but fun to use," says Auer.

what appears to be more like steam than wood fire smoke. You will burn less wood with a catalytic combustor, with efficiency increased by 25 percent. (If you burned four cords of wood before, you would only burn three cords with an efficient catalytic stove.)

Soapstone stoves are made of nature's perfect material for radiant warmth. Soapstone has a vast heat retention capacity that enables it to absorb and retain heat from the fire, then radiate the heat evenly for many hours after the fire has cooled. It withstands fluctuations in temperature with little expansion or contraction, so it won't crack and stove fittings stay tight.

"The stone is very dense. It holds two times more heat per pound than steel or cast iron and it's really beautiful — in grays, blues and greens; all with grain that varies with each palette," continues Morrissey. "Soapstone has been quarried right here in New Hampshire since 1797. Some of the first stoves made from soapstone are still in service today."

And there is another bonus: Heat from a wood stove is comfortable, radiant warmth. The ambiance of a beautiful fire is unsurpassed and the radiant warmth eliminates cold spots and dust from blowing air.

Why Wood is Good

* Wood can be grown and harvested sustainably. Selective harvesting of mature or poorer quality trees enhances woodlot quality. A new tree can be planted every time one is harvested.

* Wood provides local energy. If purchased from local growers it has fewer "energy miles" or, the energy consumed to transport the fuel to you.

* Burning wood in an EPA approved wood stove means you have some of the lowest particulate emissions in the industry.

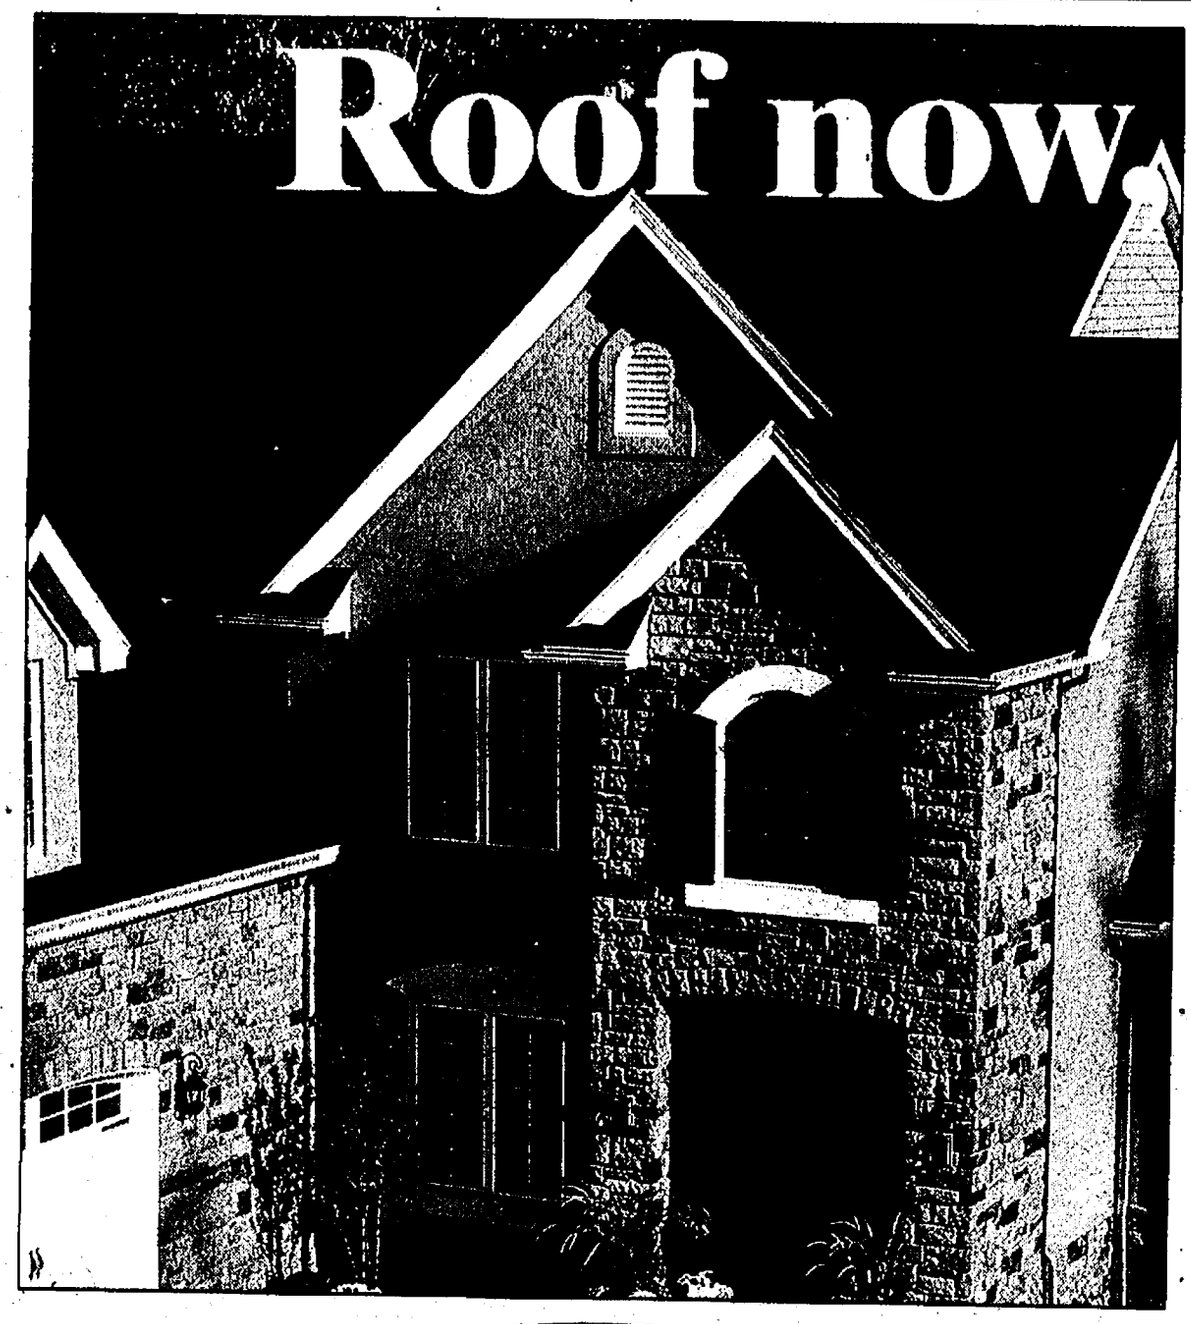

* Burning carbon neutral fuels reduces greenhouses gases.

* Wood heat is one of the least expensive ways to heat your home. The cost to heat a 2,000 square-foot home with 64.5 million BTUs of heat would be an average of $682 for a wood stove and $1,941 for electric, according to a 2007 survey of fuel suppliers by the United States Department of Energy.

* Wood stoves work in a power outage. You can even cook on the surface of a Soapstone wood stove.

Take advantage of home equity lines of credit

Anyone who owns a car knows that sooner or later you're going to have to replace certain parts. Tires go bald, brake pads wear thin and air filters get clogged. Likewise, your home has certain parts that occasionally need replacing. But rather than shelling out $30 here and $200 there, replacement projects on a home can run into the thousands of dollars — not something you can save for by skipping the lattes or having another garage sale.

Because your roof protects the rest of your home, keeping it functioning properly should be a top priority. And although proper venting and regular maintenance will help it last as long as possible, roof shingles have a finite lifespan and sooner or later will need to be replaced.

According to Remodeling Magazine's annual Cost vs. Value study, the average cost of replacing a roof is $14,276. But just because you don't have that in your rainy day fund doesn't mean you must ignore the dripping ceiling in your kitchen or the unsightly shingles that are the talk of the neighborhood association. Fortunately, homeowners have a number of financing options that won't require tapping into the kids' college funds.

In the past few years, many homeowners have taken advantage of home equity lines of credit (HELOC) issued by banks. These work much like credit cards. After being approved, the lender issues a credit card or checkbook that is used to borrow money against the equity you have in your home. The advantages of a HELOC are that interest rates are usually lower than those of a typical credit card and credit limits are higher. The disadvantages are that your home is used as

Eeeeck, squeaks

Get ready to fix that floor

As you delicately try to tiptoe past that familiar creak in the floor, your foot is inevitably drawn right to it and that terrible squeak is heard, loud as ever, throughout the house. It's happened to everybody, and at times it wakes up the newborn (or anyone else who is asleep); interrupts home-office calls, and lets everyone in the house know about your midnight snack run to the fridge.

Sound familiar? If so, you probably assumed a squeaky floor was something you'd have to live with. Contrary to popular belief, however, a squeak in the floor is relatively easy to repair. One product that makes this home improvement so simple is Squeeeeek No More; a squeaky floor elimination kit that works on carpeted, vinyl and hardwood floors.

It used to be that home improvement experts advised only going underneath a floor to fix a creaky floorboard. However, second floors cannot be repaired this way, due to the first floor ceiling. Your grandparents probably advised using talcum powder, liquid wax or powdered soap between the floorboards of that hardwood floor to stop it from squeaking.

With new products like Squeeeeek No more, all of these old-fashioned remedies can be forgotten. There is no need to lift up any carpet or floorboards and the task can be performed on top of the flooring. All it takes is a power drill and the provided hardware from the kit.

Squeaks occur when shrinks and gaps develop around different flooring elements. For example, in most creaky floors, a nail that was used to fasten the floor has become loose and a squeak happens as a result of the nail rubbing on the sub floor. Or it's a possibility that wooden planks have loosened from the joist below them and are rubbing against one another.

Squeeeeek No More works on carpeted floors by using a tool that will find the location of the floor joists from above the floor. After locating the joists, an alignment and depth control fixture allows you to drill through the carpet with one of the provided screws into the joist where the squeak exists. The screw will tighten the floor planks back onto the joist without ruining the

Made in the shade

Certified vinyl siding keeps its color vibrant

Want to cover your home in the latest shade of barn red or hunter green? Put away your paintbrush! Smart homeowners are finding that the easiest way to get — and keep — today's fresh colors is with certified vinyl siding.

Whether you're building the home of your dreams or remodeling the home you love, you want a cladding with distinct color and curb appeal. But if your siding requires constant maintenance to keep up its appearance, your dream can become an expensive nightmare. To ensure that your vinyl siding is made to last, make sure it's backed by a third-party certification program for quality, which the Vinyl Siding Institute has had in place for a decade.

VSI's Vinyl Siding Product Certification Program was launched in 1998 as a way for manufacturers to certify, through independent testing and verification, that their products meet or exceed the quality requirements of the ASTM D3679 standard. Certified vinyl siding is subjected to a dozen different performance measurements and tests simulating wind, weather and even the impact of a hard-hitting hammer.

Products certified through VSI's program pass this battery of tests and submit to twice yearly unannounced plant inspections. They also meet the International Building Code requirements for siding to be certified by an independent quality control agency.

There are more than 1,000 different vinyl siding products currently certified through VSI's program. What's more, nearly 300 different colors of these products have been certified for color retention. In addition to passing the quality requirements of ASTM D3679, each color must undergo a two-year, outdoor weathering study, to ensure that it meets the rigorous requirements of ASTM D6864, the color retention standard for vinyl siding.

"Sunshine, rain, or winds of more than 100 miles per hour won't weather certified vinyl siding noticeably," says Jery Y. Huntley, VSI's president.

Modern materials ease homeowners into fall deck building

The end of summer no longer means the end of deck building season. Homeowners considering expanding their living space outdoors now have more choices than ever to build decks that look great and keep their families comfortable for longer periods of the year.

Building a long-lasting deck has never been easier. Decking material manufacturers have kept pace with modern materials and accessories that are not only easy to work with and durable, but that suit today's busy lifestyles, and allow homeowners to build and use their decks well into the autumn months.

Engineered Materials

In a recent study by the National Association of Home Builders, low maintenance exteriors ranked among the top three features that will be important in the average home in the next 10 years. Building material manufacturers have responded to this rising demand by creating more options for attractive low maintenance exterior products, including engineered decking materials with high workability that also resist harsh climate conditions.

An increasingly popular engineered decking material is composite decking, such as Weyerhaeuser ChoiceDek decking, which consists of recovered wood fibers encapsulated in recycled polyethylene plastic. This combination of recycled materials creates a decking material that resists decay and splintering. Homeowners who build with composite decking enjoy an easy-to-maintain deck, as composites do not need staining or sealing, saving time and money on deck upkeep. What's more, composite decking withstands weather extremes and is slip-resistant, making it a smart choice for three- and four-season outdoor living.

Do-it-yourself Friendly

For homeowners building their own decks, materials that are easy to work with are an appealing option.

Composite decking materials, while strong, are simple to install using standard hand and power tools. Installation of a composite deck can be done with typical and widely available tools such as a hammer, circular saw, level, tape measure, rasp and a chalk line. Carbide-tipped saw blades with fewer than 20 teeth are recommended for best results. When properly installed, homeowners can expect a sturdy composite deck for years to come.

More Options and Accessories

Now that homeowners are building and using decks beyond the summer months, they can also add decking accessories that help make decks more comfortable for longer periods of the year.

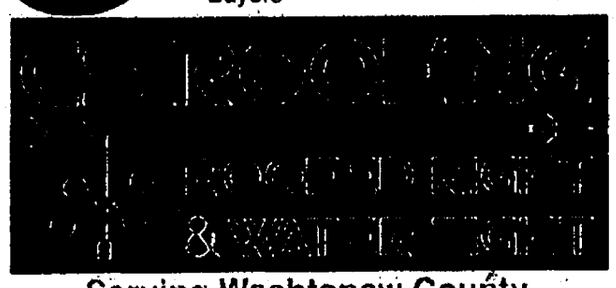

Composite decking product lines now include matching decorative railing options with convenient features. For example, the ChoiceDek product line includes posts, post caps, balusters, handrails, and trim, giving homeowners more design flexibility. ChoiceDek posts are hollow to allow for installation of outdoor lights, making it easier to spend time outdoors on fall evenings, when shorter days call for extra lighting.

Homeowners now have expanded options for creating modern, durable decks. Today's engineered decking products and accessories are allowing homeowners to build decks designed to withstand Mother Nature and that allow families to enjoy outdoor living through the autumn months with less worry and more comfort.

To learn more about the low maintenance of Weyerhaeuser ChoiceDek composite decking and railing products that combine modern durability with the classic appearance of wood, visit www.choicedek.com or your local Lowe's Home Improvement Warehouse. In the United States, call (800) 951-5117 to speak with a Weyerhaeuser representative.

"Vinyl siding hues certified for color retention have been tested in a variety of climates to resist major color changes over the course of time. That means simple, periodic washing can keep your siding looking as beautiful as the day it was installed."

floor or having to go underneath it.

The alignment fixture has a screw gripper on one side that will snap off the screw head. The screw will break off below the surface of the floor, leaving no visible hardware. The squeak is gone and there are no dangerous nails or screws sticking out of the carpet.

Squeeeeek No More will also work on stairs and thick carpet, and is safe to use in new homes where new builders are constantly called back to remedy creaky floors. Doing away with creaky floors can also be a big aid when it comes time to sell a home. There is nothing more unattractive to prospective homebuyers than noisy squeaks and creaks coming from the floor.

Squeeeeek No More is a good choice for nurseries and bedrooms. Parents with babies or small children will appreciate giving their little ones a good night's rest, free from loud creaks. More importantly, hungry members of the household will finally be able to reach the refrigerator at midnight without waking up the entire household!

collateral, and you may not qualify if you do not have enough equity.

Another option is one that doesn't require you to borrow money against your home. Some major roofing shingle manufacturers provide financing programs to their most loyal customers that allow homeowners to replace their roof now and make monthly payments to pay it off. It works like this: you select the brand of roofing material and one of the brand's contractor affiliates to install it. When the roof is completed, you pay back the contractor in monthly installments.

"These credit packages offer one-stop shopping. Customers don't have to deal with the bank and decisions are often made within 24 hours," says Suzanne Mitchell, contractor marketing manager for Owens Corning, the nation's most recognized roofing brand. "Best of all, homeowners get a new roof now — when they need it — rather than waiting while more damage occurs."

Owens Corning's financing partner GE Consumer Finance offers several options that can be tailored to fit the homeowner's needs. Mitchell says GE Consumer Finance provides competitive rates and flexible payment schedules, which allows homeowners who select Owens Corning roofing products to have greater buying power and low minimum payments.

There's even a program specifically for credit-challenged customers. HomePlus Finance helps homeowners secure credit that most other lenders would turn down. Terms are available up to 240 months and, again, credit decisions can be made within 24 hours.

Replacing a roof, like many other home improvements, should be thought of as an investment. The Cost vs. Value study showed that 74 percent — nearly three fourths — of the cost of a new roof can be recouped due to higher resale value of the home. Mitchell says Owens Corning's own research has shown that homes with new roofs have a higher perceived value than those with an older roof and homes with premium shingles have an even higher curb appeal.

"Some home improvements make a home more comfortable or more beautiful. A new roof does all that and is going to protect your most valuable investment for years to come," says Mitchell.

Subtle changes

Little differences can make home envy of others

With the housing market in flux, more and more people are looking at the potential beauty of their current home. Changes can be as simple as redecorating and updating your home's style. Some of the season's most popular trends are producing surprisingly luxurious results that are much easier to implement than you might think.

"You no longer need to move or even do a heavy remodel to breathe fresh life into your home's decor," comments Ken Locicero, a Divisional Merchandise Manager for ShopNBC. "Subtle changes such as adding a touch of color or focal piece of furniture can really give your home some personality."

Color

When deciding on color, it's easy to stay in the safety zone and stick with standard neutral tones. But in reality, more people are using colors that pop. "What's really popular right now is to shed the boring colors that can seem drab and try spicy colors," adds Locicero.

Chili-pepper red is the trend for this fall and into the holiday season. Look for this color on everything from wall decorations to pillow accents to glassware. Even red lighting is becoming a popular decorating accent. Try combining other zesty colors such as rich yellows, organic greens and fiery oranges to achieve a look that is sure to get attention.

Decor

"It's really amazing what a few accents in a home can do to an entire room," says Locicero. "Adding a throw and some pillows, along with perhaps a vase and wall hanging can transform a room to have a vintage country influence, a modern feel or even have Asian-infused design elements."

One piece of decor that is really popular for all design types is the mirror. Hang a large mirror in a room as a focal point that not only opens up the space, but distributes the light beautifully. Or, for something different, hang a wall with several smaller mirrors for an interesting decorative element that draws in the eye. Shapes, sizes and frames come in an infinite amount of styles so they can coordinate with your overall theme.

Bedroom

In the bedroom the trend is luxury. Homeowners are realizing the value in investing in this room and making it a sanctuary for the senses. "Silk and high thread count sheets are hugely popular for the ultimate sleeping experience," comments Locicero. "Bedroom pieces, such as pillows and curtains, are being accented with crystals and tassels for a lavish and indulgent look."

Dining Room

The dining room is often overlooked as a place for decoration between holiday occasions. But the newest trend in home decor is decorating your tabletop throughout the year. Guests are sure to comment on tabletops because they are used to only seeing it during special occasions.

"Filling a large vase with flowers or filling a crystal bowl with seasonal fruit are both very easy ways to decorate the table and project a very affluent decor in your dining room," says Ken Locicero. "You could even choose a variety of candles and place in a circular design. Have some fun with it! Tabletop decorations no longer need to be holiday-specific so you can project a little bit of your own personality into your home's style."

ONE CALL DOES IT ALL!!!

Touch-free faucets go green, get beautiful

The green movement has turned on the tap of creativity for many manufacturers of bathroom fixtures and accessories. With homeowners increasingly demanding products that are good for the environment, promote healthier lifestyles and complement their interior décor, innovations are flowing into the market place.

The best example of the bathroom's transformation may just be the evolution of the faucet from lowly water delivery product to lofty conservation tool and design statement, says Amadou Diallo of Fontaine Faucets. While faucets that combine beautiful form with efficient function have been available for some time, the hottest new trend puts a high-tech update on an existing technology: hands-free operation.

There's no arguing the hygienic advantages of a bathroom fixture that doesn't require you to touch it in order to operate it. Airports and other high-traffic public places have used the technology for years. But if you've ever stood in front of one of these infrared faucets, vainly waiving your hands to elicit a stream of water, you know why the technology hasn't made its way into home baths – until now.

"We now have the ability to create a faucet that works automatically whenever your hands are anywhere near it," says Diallo. "That means no more hunting for the beam that infrared sensors use to trigger the flow of water."

Fontaine has recently begun marketing a conversion kit that allows do-it-yourselfers to turn their traditional Fontaine faucet into a hands-free one. Homeowners looking to replace an existing faucet can purchase a new Fontaine product that comes equipped with the Sensa Field technology.

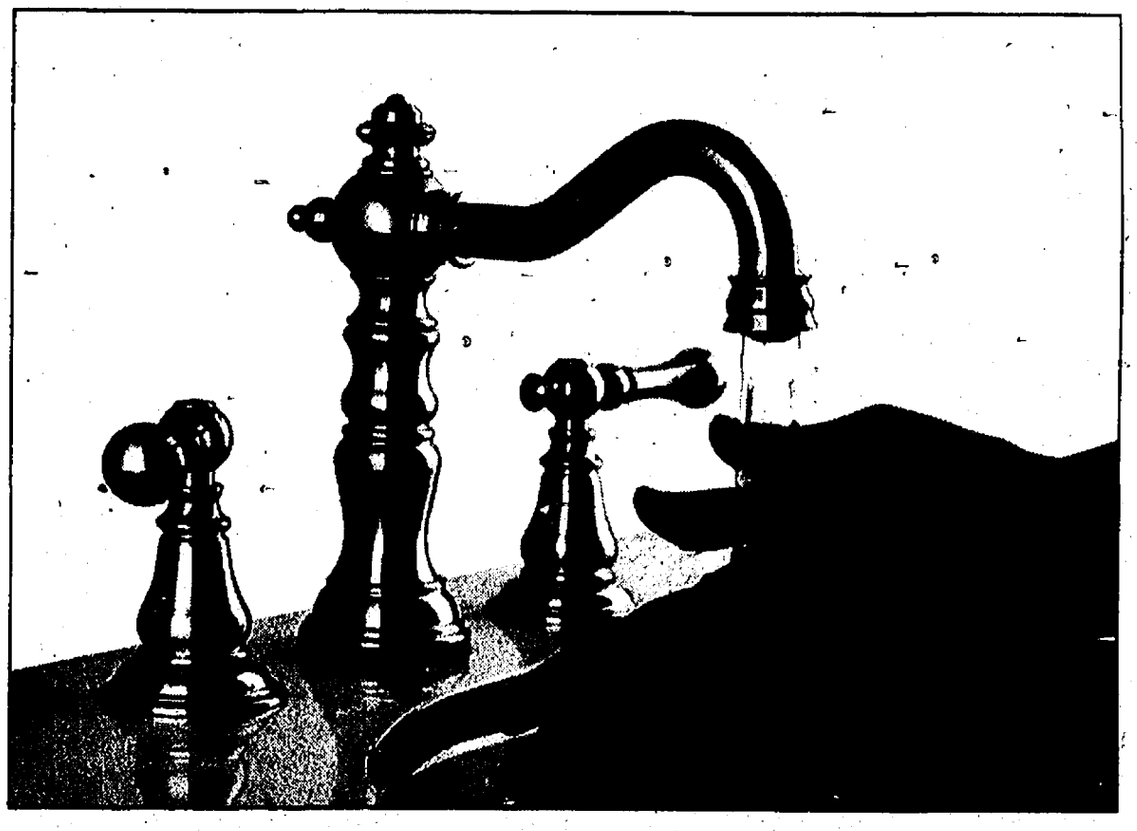

The next generation of touch-free faucets offers homeowners a myriad of advantages:

• Reliable operation is now a reality. Fontaine's Sensa Field technology senses a user from any angle. The sensing zone surrounds the entire spout, ensuring activation every time a user's hands approach.

• Elimination of a major source of germ transmission.

• Encourages effective hand-washing, a top way to prevent the spread of disease.

• Easy to install and easy to use, the new faucets leave behind the unattractive, utilitarian look that characterizes infrared touch-free faucets. Designs emphasize elegance and draw inspiration from popular models to ensure compatibility with virtually any interior décor.

• The technology enhances conservation efforts by doing away with unnecessary and unattended water flow. This can save homeowners up to 70 percent on water costs.

"Homeowners have long understood the value of touch-free function," says Diallo. "But until now, that value wasn't available in a reliable, attractive form. Touch-free faucets that leave infrared behind are the next hot thing in baths, and may soon become the standard in quality new home construction."

STAR MAKER

5 lbs chicken (pieces)
salt and freshly ground pepper
3 Tbsps STAR Extra Virgin Olive Oil
1 large onion, chopped
4 cloves garlic, minced
2 Tbsps all-purpose flour
1 1/2 cups chicken broth
1/4 cup STAR Balsamic Vinegar
1 bay leaf
pinch saffron strands
1/2 cup slivered almonds
3 Tbsps minced parsley
2 hard-cooked eggs, chopped
2 Tbsps STAR Capers

Sprinkle chicken with salt and pepper to taste. Heat olive oil in 1 very large or 2 medium skillets over medium-high heat. Add chicken and brown all sides, about 3-5 minutes per side. Remove chicken and set aside. Pour off all but 2 Tbsps of pan drippings. In same pan, sauté onion and half of garlic until soft. Stir in flour to blend, then slowly stir in 1 cup broth, vinegar, bay leaf and saffron. Return chicken to pan, cover and simmer over medium-low heat 30 minutes. Meanwhile, in blender combine almonds, 2 Tbsps parsley, remaining garlic and broth. Process until almonds are finely ground. With tongs, transfer chicken to platter. Turn heat to high and stir almond mixture into pan liquids. Bring to boil and boil 1-2 minutes, or until slightly thick. Pour sauce over chicken and sprinkle with eggs, capers and remaining parsley.

P.S. Just Wanted To Say...

"I love you." "Happy Valentine's Day." "Thinking of you." Send a heartfelt message to someone close to you with a Snowbabies™ sculpture created by Department 56®, and presented by Lenox.

P.S. Just Wanted To Say... depicts two Snowbabies™ sharing a special moment. One peeks over a sculpted heart to brighten the other's day.

What makes this such a unique gift is your personal message, which will be inscribed in red lettering. One half of your message will appear on the left side of the heart, the other on the right, up to 15 characters per side.

This imported bisque porcelain sculpture is entirely hand painted and available at just $27.50 each, including personalization. Place your order today.
