Council charges ahead with Master Plan

By Edward Freundl
Staff Writer

As expected, the Chelsea City Council gave its blessing last week to an updated Master Plan as well as an $11 million plan to expand its sewer treatment plant.

The Master Plan is meant to be a tool to guide almost every aspect of future growth and development within the city.

The city Planning Commission first held a public hearing on a draft of the plan on Dec. 18.

Hanifan

The draft was also distributed to neighboring communities and county and regional agencies for their input.

After months of debate and review, the Planning Commission adopted the plan on May 20 and forwarded it to the City Council for adoption.

The Wastewater Treatment Plant (WWTP) expansion was necessitated by higher demand from residential and commercial customers as well as a demand from the state for stricter limits on the discharge into Letts Creek.

The council vote on July 22 is not the actual go-ahead for the project to begin, City Manager John Hanifan stressed.

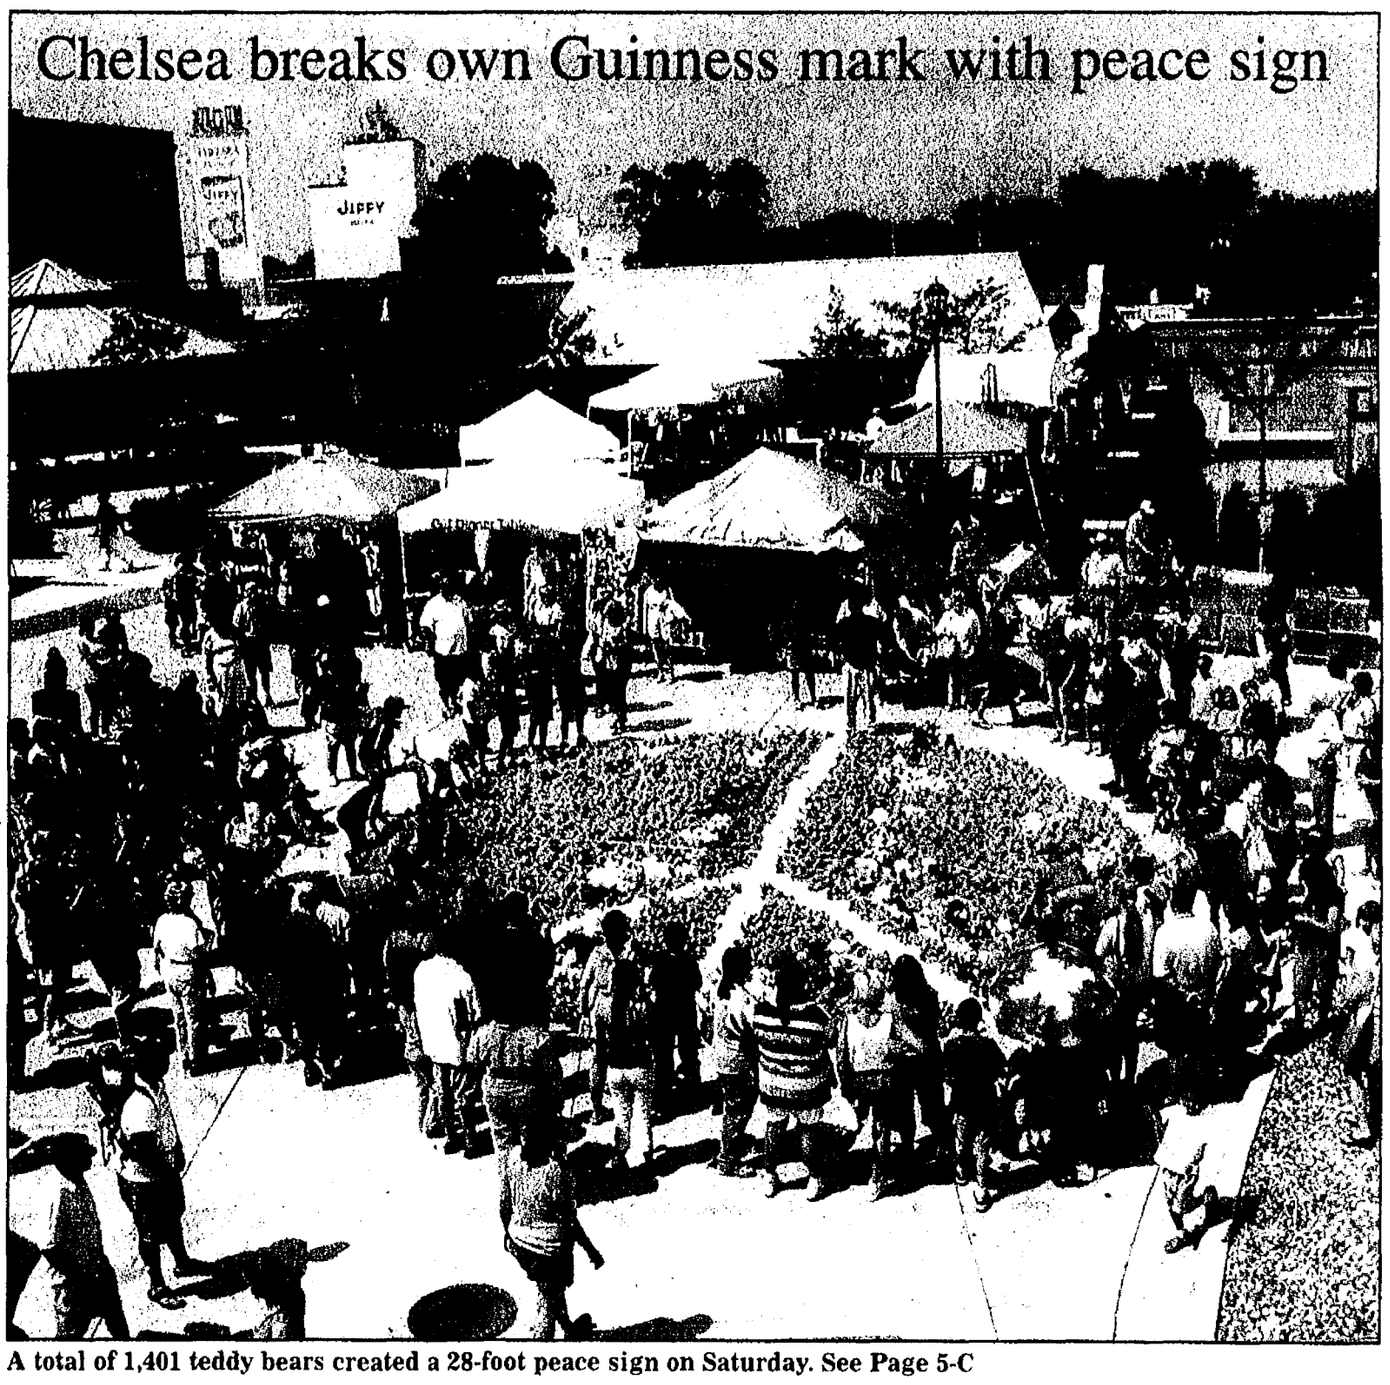

"Adoption of the bond ordinance is necessary to continue the bond approval process," Hanifan explained in his summary of the agenda item.

The state Department of Environmental Quality will have final say on the exact

The Fusilier Family Farm packs a large selection into their large end spot three times a week at the Grand River Farm Market in downtown Jackson.

Producing profits at the produce markets

Kathy Fusilier races to unload the truck and trailer packed with produce picked that morning at the family farm outside town.

It's 3:15 p.m. on Thursday, and even though the market doesn't officially open until 4, customers are already beginning to gather on Adrian Street to eyeball the selection.

"The market opens at 4 and is open until 7, but like all markets people come early," Kathy said.

"They block off the street at 3 p.m. to set up, and as soon as we set things out people are ready to buy."

It's only one day a week, and only one of a dozen community farm markets within a 75-mile radius that carry the Fusilier Family Farm's fresh produce.

"This is the third year for the Manchester market, and we've been here since the beginning," Kathy said.

"It's a small market but it's close to home and we don't have to spend a lot of fuel to get here - and it supports the community."

Because it is so close to the Herman Road farm, Kathy said she usually works this one, along with an assistant.

The other markets during the week are staffed by

Schools, farmers benefit from push to 'buy local'

By Jackie Smith
Special Writer

The movement for consumers to buy produce from local farms has extended far into today's communities, feeding even the youngest of buyers in neighborhood schools.

The Chelsea School District has been piloting a farm-to-school project over the past year with full anticipation of its continuation this fall, said Food Service Director Karen Carty.

"We have found that utilizing local foods not only helps the food budget, but also provides us with fresher-tasting, more nutritious products overall," Carty said. "We are proud to support our local farmers and have this partnership to be very beneficial."

Besides settling kids' appetites in a healthy way, Chelsea schools also offers a program for free or reduced-priced lunches to students whose families are not financially able to purchase meals regularly.

"Currently less than 5 percent of Chelsea students have taken advantage of this program," Carty said. "We continually urge families who are

Family, friends 'overwhelmed'

By Crystal Hayduk

The Chelsea Fairgrounds was the hottest ticket in town on July 15 as hundreds of people turned out to support the Jim and Julie Coleman family.

After multiple health problems, job loss, the resultant financial difficulties, and Jim Coleman's death from kidney cancer in June; the family was drowning in bills, without health insurance, and at risk of losing their home.

Family friend Liza Gray summarized the evening this way:

"It was fantastic; just phenomenal the number of people who came," said Gray. "It makes me so proud to live in Chelsea and to know that in a time of need people will pull together to help out."

Several members of the Chelsea House Orchestra shared their musical talents.

Individuals and businesses continued to come forward with donations of

New orthodontist sinks her teeth into Chelsea practice

By Edward Freundl
Staff Writer

Patients of a well-known Chelsea orthodontist are now seeing another smiling face when they come in for some work on their own smiles.

Dr. Ray Howe has welcomed Dr. Amber Burgess as a partner in his practice at 515 S. Main in Chelsea.

"She actually sent me a letter saying she was graduating and was interested in job opportunities, so I followed up on that," Howe said. "She officially started July 21."

Burgess described the hiring process from her point of view.

"I was literally contacting every orthodontist in the area," she said. "I asked other people about his reputation and they were telling me he was a really good, solid person, which gave me confidence in deciding to work with him."

Burgess, a native of Westchester, N.Y., graduated from dental school in Connecticut in 2006, and finished her orthodontic residency at University of Detroit-Mercy in June.

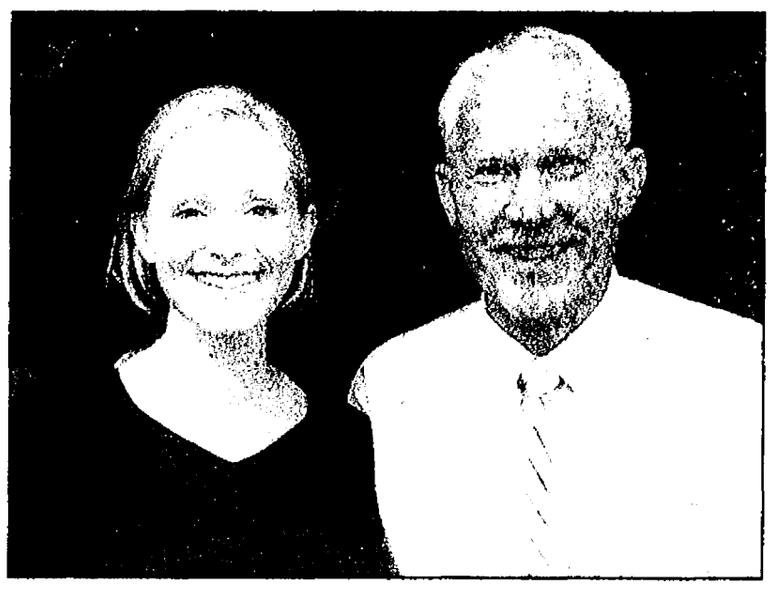

"I met Ray Howe and discovered we had very similar treatment philosophies," Burgess said. "We've gotten along very well; it was a very good fit."

Burgess described her philosophy:

"I really just want to give people the absolute best care I can," she said.

Howe countered with his: "We strive to serve our patients with loving kindness, compassion and respect. That's how we try to conduct our relationships with our patients."

Howe said he believes Burgess will make an exceptional business partner.

Dr. Amber Burgess (left) just joined the orthodontic practice of Dr. Ray Howe in Chelsea. Burgess recently finished her residency at University of Detroit-Mercy.

"I'd been looking for a partner for 10 years, but never found anybody whose personality would mesh with mine and the needs of our patients," Howe said.

"She's the brightest graduate student I've ever met. She was first in her class in dental school."

The hiring decision was not his alone, Howe noted.

"Its not so much 'I'm the boss and they are the workers,' as it is a family of coworkers," he said.

"My staff has a big say in hiring employees, and they also offer suggestions on treatment ideas for patients. My coworkers sometimes come up with better ideas than mine."

That staff currently numbers 14.

"About two-thirds are chairside and the rest are front desk, but there's some overlap there too," Howe said.

He started his practice in 1978 on North Territorial Road, moved to Chelsea in 1985, and opened an office in Saline in 1995.

"My practice had grown to the point where I needed help to serve all my patients," he said.

Orthodontics is the area of dentistry that focuses on prevention and correction of tooth irregularities.

Howe is a leader in this region in innovative new techniques for straightening teeth with unprecedented speed and without unnecessary discomfort for patients.

The first, Damon Braces, are devices that, instead of traditional rubber band ties that introduce a lot of friction in the system, use wires inside a stainless steel tube to eliminate a lot of friction and speed the process.

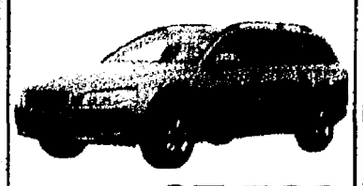

"It results in much faster tooth movement and much less discomfort," Howe said.

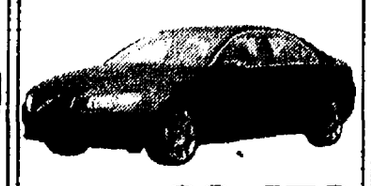

The second, temporary implants, were approved by the federal Food & Drug Administration two years ago.

"I've installed more than 200 of them," Howe said. "There are very few others doing these procedures on the scale I'm doing them now."

items for the silent auction almost right up to the day of the fund-raiser, she added.

Monetary donations can still be sent to a special fund at TCF Bank. Checks can be made out to Julie Coleman, and mailed to Nancy Neff, 13200 Noah Road, Gregory, MI 48137.

Although exact figures were not released, the money raised has relieved the Coleman family of immediate financial stress by greatly reducing outstanding medical bills and keeping their home out of foreclosure for now.

"Words alone can't express how we feel. My children and I are completely overwhelmed with the generosity that has been shown to us," Julie said.

"We are amazed and touched with the outpouring of love from so many people."

amount once construction bids are received, but in any case the amount of the bond is not to exceed $11 million.

The money will come from the state's low-interest Sewer Revolving Fund (SRF), which currently charges only 2.5 percent interest on the 20-year note. Bond obligations will be repaid by monthly user fees.

Much of the remainder of the meeting concerned the availability and cost of electrical power to the city's residents and its electric department.

Council members approved a 13-page "risk policy" and the purchase of up to 2.5 megawatts at a price of $64 per megawatt/hour as baseload capacity for calendar years 2009 through 2011.

Hanifan pointed out that "doing nothing is not an option for us," and buying power at this contract price will protect against fluctuations in the volatile energy market.

"The policy authorizes the city manager to purchase that power for our target rate," Hanifan said.

"It's not a commitment to purchase, just to authorize buying when it gets to a desirable level," he added, much like a standing "buy" order on the stock market.

"It's base load power, we have to purchase it," Hanifan said. "If we roll the dice too long we'd have to buy it on the open market."

Council approved a second energy-related item, participation in a renewable energy project with other Michigan Public Power Association member communities.

"It's almost a certainty that public power will have to meet renewable energy standards, and this will help us meet that legislative mandate," Hanifan said.

Eleven other cities scattered throughout the state have signed up as partners with the MPPA on the project with the Granger Company to develop and operate systems to produce renewable energy.

The methodology being considered would be extraction of methane and other gases from landfills, operating generators that would burn such gases, and using or selling the electricity produced.

The cost of such renewable power is approximately 15 percent more than current rates, but MPPA members said this was a "reasonable price."

While part of the project could be ready to go as early as next year, "it won't be available for another couple years," Hanifan noted.

CCH ranks in top 3 percent

Chelsea Community Hospital ranked in the top 3 percent nationally for patient satisfaction in outpatient surgery, according to independent healthcare research organization Press Ganey.

In surveys covering hospital visits from April through June 2008, outpatient services ranked in the top 4 percent, as did the ER; and inpatient services ranked in the top 6 percent.

"These scores demonstrate how much care and attention to detail everyone at CCH exhibits. It makes us proud to serve this community at such a high level," said Jim Barb, Director of Quality Improvement.

Press Ganey measures patient satisfaction in outpatient services, outpatient surgery, inpatient services, and emergency services.

Golf & Glory

14th annual event raises money for St. Louis Center

The 14th annual Golf & Glory Outing for St. Louis Center added something new this year with a benefit Celebrity Dinner tacked on to the event the night before on Monday, June 23.

Sponsored by Paesano's of Ann Arbor and owners Michael and Bridget Roddy; the event far exceeded expectations with over 100 people in attendance. The entire dinner was donated for this event to benefit St. Louis Center, a residential care center for persons with developmental disabilities west of Chelsea. It is run by the Servants of Charity Congregation who are celebrating their 100th anniversary this year.

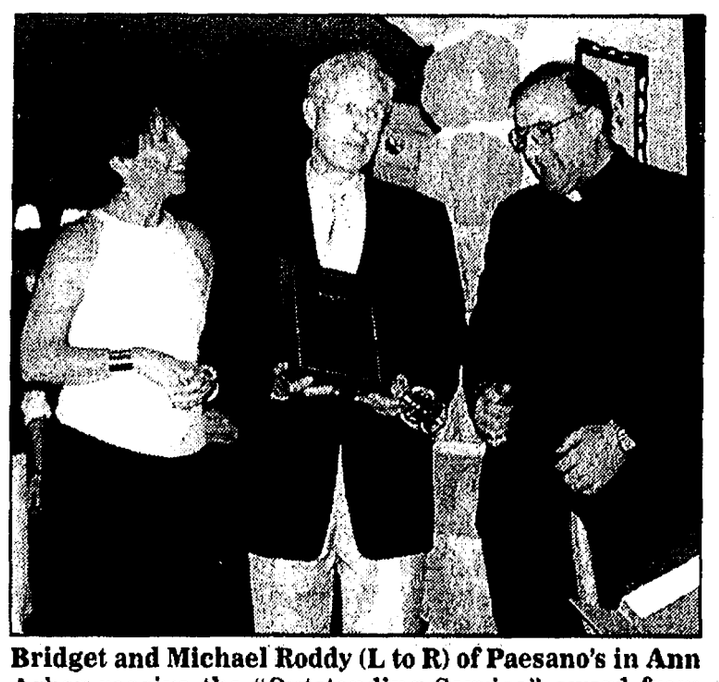

Celebrity servers from the community included Fr. Joseph Rinaldo, S.C., Fr. Enzo Addari, S.C., Chelsea Mayor Ann Feeney, St. Louis Center Board Members Paul Frisinger, Norm Neuman, Tom Nowatzke, Chairman - Ken Unterbrink, and Public Relations Director Joseph Yekulis.

Each server was asked to fill a table of 10, and Paesano's included the meal. Diners were treated to spaghetti with meatballs, salad, warm rolls, and a soft drink or a glass of wine. Strolling Italian musicians added to the atmosphere of the event, and the celebrity waiters were assisted by Paesano's professional wait staff. At the end of the event, the Roddy's were presented with an "Outstanding Community Service" award from Fr. Joseph and Fr. Enzo for all that they have contributed to the quality of life for the residents of St. Louis Center.

On Tuesday, June 24, the Golf and Glory Outing was held at the University of Michigan Golf Course in Ann Arbor, and was supported by 110 golfers. Many of these golfers were Detroit Lions Alumni, current and former referees from the professional and college ranks, and members of the broadcast media. Honorary Celebrity Chair George Blaha (Pistons/MSU) was on hand to help kick-off the dinner event, and Ken Kal, voice of the Detroit Red Wings, was in attendance for the first time.

Tom Nowatzke, Detroit Lions Alumni Chair, introduced the many guests for the day that included Darren Banks (Bruins), Dorne Dibble (Lions), Bill Dufek (U of M), Dick Honig (Big Ten Ref), Ken Kal (Red Wings), Ron Kramer (Packers-U of M), Dean Look (NFL Ref), John Panelli (Lions), Paul Seymour (Lions/Bills-U of M), Dave Smith (Steelers), Bob Waggoner (NFL Ref), Bill Wagner (Broncos), Tim Walton (Lions), Stanley Wilson (Lions-Active), Ron Winter (NFL Ref), and Dave Witvoet (Big Ten Ref).

Following 18 holes of golf, the players were treated to a steak dinner and a live auction of sports memorabilia conducted by local auctioneer David Helmer of Saline. Finally, the end of the evening was capped off by a tribute to St. Louis Center from Wayne County Executive Robert A. Ficano, delivered by a member of his executive staff from Detroit.

Bridget and Michael Roddy (L to R) of Paesano's in Ann Arbor receive the "Outstanding Service" award from Fr. Enzo Addari, S.C. of St. Louis Center. INSET: Honorary Celebrity Chairman George Blaha thanks golfers for their support of St. Louis Center.

The State Officers of the Michigan Knights of Columbus arrive to play in the Golf & Glory Outing. Ken Unterbrink – State Warden (L to R), Mike Malinowski – State Treasurer, Bob Moody – State Deputy, Tom Marcetti – State Secretary, and Bob Fox – State Advocate.

"I really do try to treat everybody as family, and I present options so that what we do is the best for that particular patient's circumstances,"

Dr. Paul Dobos

Dentist celebrates one-year anniversary in Stockbridge

By Edward Freundl
Staff Writer

Teeth can be a reasonable indicator of a person's age, and Dr. Paul Dobos and his staff are happy to have seen a year's worth of teeth in their Stockbridge office.

Dobos, a 1998 graduate of the University of Michigan School of Dentistry, moved his practice after providing dental care at Chelsea Family Dentistry for six and a half years and others for three years before that.

"I worked nine years with other dentists in Jackson, Manchester and Chelsea before assuming my own office. The associations with the other offices were great experiences," Dobos said.

"I'm now able to fold into my own dental practice the good things I've seen other doctors do and disregard those aspects that don't match my philosophy of patient care," he added.

Dobos said that philosophy is to provide the best dental care that he can while keeping fees as low as possible to keep it as accessible as possible.

"I really do try to treat everybody as family, and I present options so that what we do is the best for that particular patient's circumstances," he said.

"We are cognizant of the whole person, not just their teeth," he added.

"Our motto is, 'Exceptional dentistry for the entire family,' and that's really what we do."

Dobos said he enjoys providing quality care in an informal atmosphere.

The office, located on the north side of the village square at 120 E. Main St., has three updated treatment rooms, and the reception room has large framed artwork and wicker furniture.

In what Dobos calls the "Kids Corner," there is a frog kite "flying" from the ceiling as well as books and toys for children.

He pointed out that two of the dental rooms have new, top-of-the-line dental chairs that provide the ultimate in patient comfort, and new "delivery systems.

"On the surface, this doesn't sound like much; however, for patient health, the air, water and suction lines are new technology," he explained.

"They're 'biofilm-free,' which means bacteria cannot form in them."

Dobos cited having up-to-date instruments, materials and equipment as crucial to his delivery of dental care.

The small office requires only a small staff, consisting of Paulette Haibel at the front desk, dental assistant Judy Joseph, and part-time hygienists Lynne Williams and Shannon Davis

"It's easier to have everybody on board if you have a small staff," Dobos said. "We all have the same goal of providing dentistry we can be proud of."

Although it was tough to leave Chelsea, Dobos felt called to open his own practice.

"I've always wanted to be an owner because you can do things the way you want to. It was the next natural step," he said.

"I didn't want to move, I really loved the community of Chelsea."

However, opportunity knocked when the previous dentist in Stockbridge decided to retire, and Dobos knew the time had come.

"It already had a patient base, and it has been growing," he said. "I'm very pleased. I've had quite a few patients follow me here."

Dobos noted that his practice has been adding about 20 new patients per month over the past year for a total of more than 1,000.

For now, the practice is open from 8:30 a.m. to noon

"As the practice grows, we may very well modify the hours to be more accessible," Dobos said.

Although he has lived in the Waterloo Recreation Area since 1995, his roots go back to when he was a child.

He enjoyed the peacefulness of the community whenever he visited his grandparents on Sugarloaf Lake.

"I was raised in the Downriver Detroit suburbs; however, this rural area resonates with me and my family," Dobos said.

"My patients are farmers, young families, professionals, retirees, the whole gamut. And that is just how I like it. My patients are what make this profession so enjoyable," Dobos said.

When asked what has been most-rewarding in practicing dentistry, Dobos said that answer never changes.

"The most gratification comes when I treat a patient who has been away from regular dental care for many years, and I bring the patient back to dental health," he said.

"But it is more than that. The clincher is when I've actually 'reached' that person and they are now doing what is necessary to keep their mouth healthy.

"In this situation, I know I have profoundly helped."

AMBER

He described the implant procedure of moving teeth as "like two boats in the water – you throw me a rope and pull me, and it appears that both boats are moving."

The implant is like dropping an anchor by allowing one set of teeth to move without any unwanted effects on the other teeth.

"It's been revolutionary in my field," Howe said.

"It's my opinion it will be widely used in a short time because of the benefit to patients."

It is specifically for these procedures that Burgess decided to work with Howe.

"The great thing about Ray Howe is, he is into the temporary implants," she said. "Not a lot of people were doing that, and that really appealed to me."

Howe said that eagerness to learn was another point in Burgess' favor.

"Amber is an extraordinarily bright person but she doesn't come off as a know-it-all, she's excited about learning these things," he said.

"That fits really well with my personality."

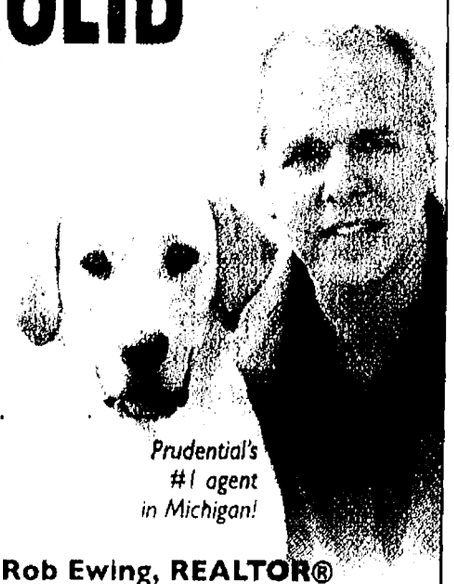

Although her experience with U of D Mercy gave her exposure to a lot of different real-world problems, Burgess said she is "excited" to come to Chelsea.

"It's very, very different from working in Detroit where I did my residency," she said.

"It's a beautiful area. I'm really excited to be here, because I've always lived in urban areas."

Bearclaw renovation creates training center in Chelsea

By Edward Freundl
Staff Writer

A popular local coffee shop chain has converted some extra floor space to brew up a national training center for its franchisees.

The Bearclaw Coffee Co. recently renovated its Chelsea corporate store on Old U.S. 12 by the I-94 Fletcher Road exit.

"We have turned a large space into our company's national training facility for new franchisees," said Casey Hurst, director of franchise operations for the company.

"We had open space in the back that was used pretty much as a supply room, so we put up a couple of walls and turned it into a training facility and a board room to hold meetings with franchisees."

All incoming franchisees will undergo an intensive, five-day seminar run out of the training facility, which can comfortably fit about eight people.

"You can think of it as a crash course," Hurst noted.

The company will also use the new boardroom to conduct all recurrent training and in-state and national vendor meetings, Hurst added.

"We're planning on sessions about every six weeks," Hurst said.

But here's the whipped cream on top of the latte:

"The big plan we want to roll out is to open up the boardroom for different organizations in Chelsea and Dexter," Hurst said.

"It's a nice little thing we'd like to offer the public."

The renovation was the next logical step in the extraordinarily rapid evolution of the company.

Owners Debi and Doug Scroggins opened the first Bearclaw in 2002, the drive-through at Dexter-Pinckney and North Territorial roads that remains one of their busiest locations.

They started franchising in 2003 and stayed within Southeast Michigan until fairly recently.

"But now we've branched out into the St. Joseph-South Haven area, and even opened a franchise in Fort Knox, Ky.," Hurst said.

"We figured it was time to actually build a franchisee training facility."

The company currently has about 25 franchisees, and the meeting room will be for any new, incoming franchisees.

The location also offers easy highway access to several of Bearclaw's other stores.

"We try to get out to the Jackson and Brooklyn stores, it shows them a little bit of Michigan and helps instill in them what Bearclaw is all about," Hurst said.

Coffee and sweets are an essential part of many corporate meetings, and with Bearclaw, those will be literally within arm's reach.

According to company literature, the new meeting room can provide full beverage service, wireless Internet, flexible hours - and it's free.

Call 734-395-3864 for more information or to book the new meeting room.

"We've already started booking meetings," Hurst said.

Merkel Gardens

The Chelsea Farmers' Market on Saturday mornings has been a huge hit this summer. One of the many "attractions" at this year's market is Merkel Gardens, which has been in business since 1981. George and his wife Nancy started the business and were joined by their daughter Margaret and her husband Bill Stech (right). Currently they operate three greenhouses and offer bedding plants and perennials in the spring and early summer. They also grow a wide variety of vegetables and specialize in Asian vegetables such as bittermelon, bokchoi, edible gourd and wintermelon. Merkel Gardens takes their products to the Ann Arbor and Chelsea Farmers' Markets and also sells from their house and greenhouse in Chelsea. Don't Fail Your Child Before School Starts

1 in 4 children has an undetected vision problem that can interfere with learning.

Schedule a Comprehensive Back to School Eye Exam

Almost 80% of what a child learns in school is presented visually. It stands to reason then, that good vision is essential to learning. Yet studies show that only 31% of children between the ages of 6 and 16 have an annual eye exam. And 70% of children under 6 years have never had an eye exam.

So it's not surprising that 20 million children will go back to school this year with a vision problem that may interfere with their ability to learn, contribute to disciplinary problems and put them at risk for vision loss.

But what about the "vision screenings" performed by a school nurse or a pediatrician? Won't they detect vision problems? Only partially. According to a study conducted by the National Institutes of Health, vision-screening methods detected only 40 - 65% of children with vision problems.

The answer is a comprehensive eye examination in our office. Even if your child has passed a vision screening, a comprehensive eye examination can reveal diseases or other conditions.

Vision is critical to learning. So make sure your child is really ready to go back to school. Schedule a comprehensive eye examination today.

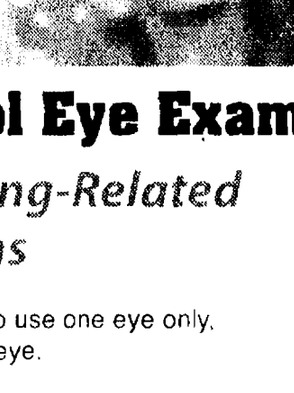

Signs of Learning-Related Vision Problems

- Turning or tilting the head to use one eye only, or closing or covering one eye.
- Placing the head close to the book or desk when reading or writing.
- Eyes that are crossed or turned in.
- Eyes that move independently of each other.
- Losing place while reading, or using a finger as a guide.

Brewer's folly costs Dems high court nominee

It would have been a humdinger of a race ....

The much-anticipated rematch between trial bar attorney Marietta "Marty" Robinson and the archenemy of the trial bar, state Supreme Court Justice Cliff Taylor, is caput.

Tim Skubick

Robinson, despite nudging, cajoling and maybe even a little arm-twisting from influential Democrats, has told them all to take a hike.

"I'm not running; period," she said.

Months ago, Robinson was "very strongly leaning toward running," to avenge her loss to Taylor last time out.

The feisty Robinson had the fire in the belly to unseat the sitting chief justice. And Democratic Party Chairman Mark Brewer was going around saying he had a candidate, but never announced it was Robinson.

Behind the scenes, Robinson had serious concerns about a third-party candidate getting into the contest because that person would siphon votes from her. Despite overtures asking the Libertarian Party to stay out of the contest, the party got in anyway, thus denying Robinson the one-on-one matchup she wanted.

Then the sea changed and upped her anxiety even more.

Out of nowhere came a statewide petition drive, the so-called Reform Michigan Government Now. Robinson and lots of other barristers from both political parties sat up and took notice.

The far-reaching plan sought to reinvent the state's court system under the guise of downsizing government.

It didn't take long for some to conclude this was really an effort by Brewer and the Democratic Party to delude the GOP influence on the courts and shift the balance of power to their side while taking down Taylor in the process.

The critics said that would also give the Democrats a huge advantage on redrawing voting district lines for the Legislature that could help the Democrats control that, too.

Note that Brewer has never conceded he had a role in drafting and promoting the ballot question, but the GOP in town has been beating that drum for weeks.

Democrat Robinson found herself in the uncomfortable position of siding with the Republicans in their opposition to the plan.

What Brewer will concede is that he wants Taylor out. When the so-called reform petitions were filed with the state to be certified for the November ballot, Brewer issued a news release suggesting Taylor might have a conflict of interest.

That's because the petition sought to reduce Taylor's salary and benefits along with all other judges, and Brewer wondered what Taylor would do if the legality of the petition drive ever got to the high court.

Then, Brewer turned the press release into a TV commercial, again linking Taylor to a potential conflict of interest even though no lawsuit existed before the justice.

By this time Robinson had seen enough. According to one source, she was unhappy with the petition drive and its impact on the courts and she knew the issue would drag on until the fall, making it tougher for her to make her case against Taylor.

"It would suck all the air out of the room," she reasoned.

So after a last-ditch effort by party big shots to convince her to run, Robinson said no thanks and bowed out of the race she never entered.

Tim Skubick is the host of the TV show "Off the Record" and blogs regularly at www.heritage.com.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor: The Chelsea Classic Cruisers car club would like to again thank all who helped put on the annual Summerfest car show last Friday, July 25.

Thanks to Mayor (Ann) Feeney and her staff, the Police Dept., Fire Dept., Merchants Association, DDA, DPW, and all other civic and governmental agencies who participated in making the show a huge success.

Including club member cars, there were over 280 specialty vehicles on display, and it was one of if not the largest show we have ever held. We want to express our appreciation to all the car owners who brought their beautiful vehicles for the enjoyment of residents and visitors alike.

As always, a very special thank you to the local residents who graciously allowed us to take over their neighborhood for a few hours. We hope no major inconvenience resulted and do appreciate your patience and understanding. Thanks also to everyone who participated in raffles and drawings. After expenses are deducted, we hope to have a modest profit which will be donated to various local charities as in the past.

Following is a list of winners: Mayor's Trophy to Gilbert & Rosemary Chestney of Chelsea for their 1955 Kaiser Manhattan Police Chief's Trophy to Larry & Liz Gonyer of Manchester for their 1957 Ford Skyliner

To the Editor: The Cobblestone Farms Horse Trails (July 12 - 13) was a blast for all of us in the Cobblestone community, boarders and homeowners alike.

We would like to give a special thanks to the trainer at Cobblestone, Cathy Henderson, who was not mentioned in the article. Without her expertise, humor and patience, few of us could have participated in this event. Cathy supports beginners through advanced level riders alike. Her ability to inspire and motivate us in a professional manner enables us all to succeed and achieve our personal riding goals. Cathy is an integral part of the Cobblestone family and was an important part of the horse trials' success.

Our take:

Legislature should rethink our 'blue laws'

Some laws are timeless, particularly those that speak to the basic morals of mankind. Murder, theft and various types of fraud have always been wrong and laws pertaining to them only make sense. But some laws, even though they initially seemed to pertain to moral behavior, have far outlived their usefulness.

A prime example is Michigan's "blue laws" that prohibit Sunday morning alcohol sales. The Sunday morning ban may have been appropriate during the days of Prohibition but not in 2008.

That's why state Sen. Gilda Jacobs, D-Huntington Woods, introduced Senate Bill 684, which would lift the ban on Sunday morning sales but retain the existing restriction of sales between 2 a.m. and 7 a.m. The Legislation would allow citizens to purchase alcohol after 7 a.m. on Sundays.

The bill will, however, allow any county, city, village or township to enact local prohibitions as approved by a majority of voters. The legislation also contains language to protect existing local prohibitions.

The legislation has been wallowing in the Senate Committee on Economic Development and Regulatory Reform for almost a year. It was introduced by Jacobs in August of 2007.

That is ridiculous for a number of reasons.

The bill doesn't just lift an archaic state regulation for the convenience of some people. There are strong economic reasons why the Senate should stop ignoring the bill and move it on. The main reason is that it would help businesses, something that would be a plus in any economic time period but that would be particularly helpful now as Michigan struggles with its depressed and faltering economy.

The current laws strain store operations. For many store owners, it's not profitable to open only for a few hours on Sunday afternoon. If they are going to open on Sunday, they must factor in the cost of payroll and overhead.

Conversely, if an owner is forced to close on Sunday for financial reasons, then customers will shop somewhere else. And the store owner now risks losing that customer for good. The owner loses and if his or her store goes out of business, then Michigan loses, as well.

Michigan's half-day Sunday ban is a rarity. Currently, 35 states have eliminated Sunday alcohol bans altogether, increasing opportunities for restaurant and entertainment business, as well as retail customer convenience.

Yes, there is a convenience factor. And, no, people don't need to have a glass of wine or a sweet cocktail with brunch. But if they're at a restaurant that has a license to serve those drinks, then why not let the business do so.

At the very least, the bills are ineffective. What positive consequence do they really have? Are they keeping people in church on Sunday morning? Are they keeping drunks from continuing their weekend binges until noon on Sunday?

The laws are just plain silly.

As Jacobs says: "The time has come for Michigan to revamp some of the old blue laws that were set up during the Prohibition.

"This (Bill 684) is one of the tools we could use to give to the communities to do more business and also for the people who want to do some shopping on Sunday.

"It's both an economic tool and a convenience tool."

We agree. Move the bill out of committee, pass it and sign it into law.

It's time to use the state's resources

Michigan must take advantage of its strengths. So, I say we should market Michigan as the place where the rest of the country can outsource domestically.

Tom Watkins

Don't ship your jobs overseas — we have a domestic alternative right here in the good old "arsenal of democracy." No, we do not have the wage structure of Bangalore or Beijing, but we do have other cost and natural benefits that we need to exploit to our advantage.

Let's send Jeff Daniels, the swooning voice of the Pure Michigan Economic Development campaign, to both coasts to tout the real advantage of below-average rent for professional office space, abundant factories with immediate occupancy, and significantly more bang-for-your-buck on housing stock from a starter home to a mega mansion on a Great Lake or recreational lake.

And let's not forget to mention a university and community college system that graduates more skilled workers than can be absorbed by our stagnant employment market at the moment.

Michigan is at a crossroad. Like a novice swimmer bobbing up from the bottom of the pool for the third time, we will either learn to adapt and change or will sink. We cannot lead and prosper in the 21st century without casting off the negative anchors of law, public policy and beliefs that bind us to the 20th century industrial model.

Our industrial might brought us to the dance, but it is not going to take us home. Change, innovation and talent will.

Change or perish

Lou Gerstner, former chief executive officer of IBM, has foreshadowed where Michigan has been careening when he said, "No institution will go through fundamental change unless it believes it is in deep trouble and needs to do something different to survive."

Our Chelsea History

Where was the first Baptist Church located in Chelsea?

A. At the corner of Orchard and Main streets.
B. In the Clock Tower building.
C. Where the Chelsea Retirement Community is today.

Answer A. One of Chelsea's earliest churches, the Baptist Church was dedicated in February 1870. In April of the same year Chelsea received a blow when a fire swept away the entire business portion on the west side of Main St. from Middle St. to the railroad. Most of the merchants in Chelsea at that time were set up in low wooden buildings with wood awnings. In place of sidewalks, well beaten paths led down the hillside from the homes located on S. Main and the old orchards and barns along Orchard Street. Wooden platforms were built in front of the small flat-roofed stores. A dwelling called the Godfrey House stood at the corner where Chelsea Market is today.

Stabenow, colleagues pass Housing Bill

U.S. Senator Debbie Stabenow (D-Michigan) announced this week House and Senate passage of the Housing and Economic Recovery Act of 2008. The act offers urgent assistance to families and communities devastated by the housing crisis throughout Michigan, which currently ranks fifth nationally in the number of foreclosures. The bill also includes a provision encouraging American manufacturers to invest in the economy, thereby creating jobs here at home.

"With unemployment and foreclosure rates rising and gas prices at record highs, families in Michigan and across our country are suffering," said Stabenow. "This housing bill is long overdue and is a good first step to assist families facing the loss of their homes and communities devastated by foreclosures – but we can and must do more. That's why I will continue my fight to create good-paying jobs across our state that will provide a true boost to our economy."

In a recent study, the Center for American Progress revealed that Michigan will potentially receive over $160 million in direct funding from the Senate neighborhood stabilization program alone, which would help create over 3,200 new jobs and help produce over $345 million in economic activity throughout the state.

Furthermore, a provision authored by Senator Stabenow allows companies most affected by the economic downturn to utilize tax credits to make critical investments in their businesses and workforce. The provision permits manufacturers to use alternative minimum tax (AMT) credits and research and development (R&D) tax credits to investment in and strengthen their businesses.

"It is important to support and encourage automakers, manufacturers, and other industries to develop new technology, create new jobs, and invest in Michigan," said Stabenow. "Companies that are hurt most by the current economic climate should get the same incentives for investment and job creation as other companies. These strategic investments are critical to stimulate the economy, and create quality, good-paying middle-class jobs here at home."

Walberg supports Energy Act

U.S. Congressman Tim Walberg (R-District 7) last week announced he is supporting the American Energy Act (H.R. 6566), comprehensive legislation to help reduce gas prices by harnessing new technologies, encouraging greater conservation and efficiency and increasing American energy production in an environmentally safe manner. The American Energy Act is the latest plan, among many, supported by Congressman Walberg as he pushes for an "all options included" American energy program that will bring down energy prices and wean America off of Middle East oil.

"There continues to be growing momentum in this Congress to increase American energy production," Walberg said. "The Michigan has been struggling to adapt to the disruptive, transformational global economy longer than any state. We must change or perish.

With entrepreneurialism, creativity, innovation and capitalism in our DNA, along with being surrounded by clean and abundant water, Michigan is the 21st century global warming wet spot.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency proclaims, "The Great Lakes are the largest surface freshwater system on the Earth. They contain about 84 percent of North America's surface fresh water and about 21 percent of the world's supply. Only the polar ice caps contain more fresh water."

Given the threat of global warming, perhaps some of the coastal cities will be tapping the polar ice water in the future, but not in the way they would like.

Similar to a stock that has hit bottom, perhaps now is the time to "buy Michigan at its low point." Sure, as with any stock purchase, timing is everything. Michigan might have a further downward spiral to go before it ticks up. Yet, I say we need to be hawking Michigan as the next "take-off state."

Michigan needs to stop acting like Willy Loman from "Death of a Salesman." What we have here in Michigan is worthy of investment from within the U.S. and abroad. We need to convince folks that they better get in on the "ground floor" before the state takes off. We are not going to thrash around at the bottom of the pool forever.

How about billboards on the East and West coasts extolling the virtues of the "North Coast," where the cost of living is lower; the roads are bumpier, but less congested; and cleaner air and abundant water are taken for granted. Trade in that high-priced fixer-upper in San Francisco, Los Angeles, Boston, Chicago, Seattle, Atlanta or Miami and get two-for-the-price-of-one here in Michigan — a principal residence such as an upscale loft development in Detroit or a suburban location, as well as a cottage "Up North."

We should be able to agree that as a state, while we are down, we can become the 21st century destination. And like a hot fishing hole, once discovered, it will be difficult to find room to get your line in the water.

Outsource to Michigan while you still have the opportunity.

American Energy Act is a comprehensive, 'all options included' energy plan that returns our energy production back to the United States and creates good paying, American jobs. This is another great bill expanding American energy production that House leadership refuses to allow a debate on." To increase the supply American-made energy in environmentally sound ways, the legislation will:

• Open energy-rich America's deep ocean resources, Arctic coastal plain, and Inter-Mountain West oil shale resources for more environmentally-safe oil and gas exploration, while removing bureaucratic red tape that hinders the construction of new refineries.

To improve energy conservation and efficiency, the legislation will:

• Provide incentives for businesses and families that improve their energy efficiency, including by purchasing more fuel efficient vehicles, while awarding a monetary prize to the first entrepreneur to develop an economically feasible, super-fuel-efficient vehicle (reaching 100 miles per gallon).

To promote alternative and renewable energy technologies, the legislation will spur the development of alternative fuels by:

• Establishing a renewable energy trust fund using revenues generated by exploration in the deep ocean and on the Arctic coastal plain;

• Eliminating barriers to the expansion of emission-free nuclear power production;

• Permanently extending the tax credit for alternative energy production, including wind, solar and hydrogen;

• Repealing the prohibition on government purchasing of alternative energy; and

• Promoting coal-to-liquids technology.

Democrats: Reforms needed for day care providers

House Democrats last week urged the Republican-controlled State Senate to pass a plan that would require extensive criminal history checks for day care aides and relative care providers upon enrollment in the state's Child Day Care service program.

State Rep. Pam Byrnes (D-Lyndon Township), a leading sponsor on the package, called for Senate action in light of a recently released state audit that revealed that hundreds of Michigan day care providers have criminal histories.

"It is imperative that the Senate pass this legislation to protect the thousands of children in the state's day care system," Byrnes said. "The recent audit of the state's day care program has shown us that some children may be at risk for abuse. The sooner that we require extensive criminal background checks for our day care providers, the better off our children will be."

FARM

Kathy's husband Mike, their parents, their kids or family friends.

Adam Colvia, who went to school with the Fusilier children, is lending a hand today as a refreshing change to working in the fields.

"It's fun dealing with the people," he said. "It gets me off the farm and gets me a few more hours a week."

Colvia, who is in his second year of working at the farm, also works the Dearborn market every Friday.

"I fill in at the other markets where I'm needed," he added.

The Fusiliers are just one of about a dozen vendors at the Manchester market, but they are by far the largest vegetable purveyors.

Even this early in the season they sell more than 20 varieties of fruits and vegetables.

The Fusiliers get the fruit from orchards elsewhere in Michigan, with three varieties of cherries from Old Mission Peninsula in the Traverse City area, and peaches and blueberries from Kent City, near Grand Rapids.

"The growers do a really nice job for us," Kathy noted.

The dark sweet cherries are a deep crimson-purple, almost black; the tarts are a bright red; and the third variety, Rainier, are in the middle in terms of both appearance and taste: yellowish-pink skin, not as sweet as the tart but not as tart as the sweet cherries.

Changing customers' minds

Adam and Kathy move nonstop from one end of the tables to the other, waiting on customers, making change, restocking the displays.

Kathy sees her role as educational as much as it is entrepreneurial.

"People are used to going to the grocery store for everything. They come to the market in May and ask, 'Where are the watermelons?' and we tell them we'll be planting them next week," she said. "A lot of what we do is educate them about how things really work."

Most people are three or four generations removed from farm life and no longer understand the concept of growing seasons, Kathy explained.

The progression of seasons also dictates the amount and variety of items they can bring to market, and gauging the right amount to bring can get a little tricky.

"You don't want to run out too quickly - when we started at Garden City we brought 25 dozen ears of sweet corn and sold out in an hour; next time we brought 50 dozen and it was gone in an hour and a half," Kathy recalled.

"We don't have as much available now, but when we have more we'll bring more, even though we might bring one or two things home."

Charles Coulter of Manchester was buying some sweet corn and other produce from the Fusilier booth.

"They've got better vegetables than anybody," he said. "I've gotten stuff from them ever since the market opened."

Customer traffic in Manchester was steady but, according to Kathy, their busiest market is in Ann Arbor on a Saturday during cherry season — "The kids go crazy," she said – yet during the fall that shifts to the Farmington market.

"It depends on what time of season it is, but Saturdays are always busier," she said.

Thank you for your support

Kathy Fusilier noted that the farmers markets are a business venture for the host communities as well as the vendors.

Rent for booth space can vary widely depending on the community, she said.

"This market (Manchester) charges $85 a spot for the whole season," she said.

"Some markets don't charge much, others, quite a bit: Dearborn only charges $25, but Jackson's is more than $800."

The Ann Arbor farmers market costs about $1,000, but includes parking fees and operates year-round.

It is also important that city leaders and Downtown Development Authority officials invest in the success of farmers markets because the markets bring people into town, Kathy said, but that support also varies by community.

"If you don't have the support of the city, you might as well kiss it goodbye," she said.

"Some cities do what they need to do to promote they farmers market because they understand that the city benefits from it, but not everyplace does that."

A successful market also astruggling to complete an application and return it to their school office."

Though the program requires most families to complete an application available online, she said families who receive food stamp assistance are automatically approved.

Like Chelsea, Dexter Schools also offers free or 40-cent meals to low-income families, depending on their individual financial situation. "I think a lot of parents have financial pressures this year," said Sara Simmerman, director of Food and Nutrition for Dexter schools. "I think some of that has been passed down to the kids."

Simmerman says the meal benefit program started nearly simultaneously with the lunch program itself, recalling it was available when she was in school in the 1960s.

While Dexter has been successful in some endeavors, attempts to bring healthy and less-expensive meals into school cafeterias though area farms have not been fulfilled.

"Right now I am trying to connect with local farmers to set up deliveries to Dexter High School, but I'm having very limited success," Simmerman said. "It is difficult to find anyone who can deliver to a small school system directly."

Formerly employed out-of-state, Simmerman recalled having a middleman bring local produce to schools, which is often key, but food services for Dexter are still familiar statewide.

"During the fall, I can buy Michigan produce from Gordon and Van Eerden food service companies," she said. "I couldn't tell you how local it is - most of it is from Grand Rapids."

Dexter's food-service staff strives to keep costs in line and meals affordable, Simmerman said, by keeping tabs on product waste.

Commitment to student health is proven, she said, because they are "implementing more whole grains, less sugar and sodium," and also through the avoidance of fried foods.

Dexter's established meal prices continue this fall. Older students can enjoy breakfast for $1.50 and lunch at $2.50. Specials like a salad and sandwich cost $3.25.

Chelsea's meal prices for this school year have not been finalized by the board of education, but last year breakfast prices were $1.30 for kindergarten through fourth grade and $1.40 for grades 5 through 12; lunches were $2.60 for K-4 and $2.85 for 5-12.

Mitch Ryder on stage belts out the lyrics to his chart topping hit "Sock It To Me Baby" before a packed house in Chelsea.

Mitch Ryder rocks downtown Chelsea

Mitch Ryder & his retooled Detroit Wheels rolled into downtown Chelsea last Thursday night for a benefit concert to raise money for Sounds & Sights. Soon after warm-up band the Witch Doctors got the huge crowded tent moving, Ryder and his band hit the stage for an extended set that shook the crowd out of their seats and on to the dance floor for an hour plus of thumping rockin' rhythm and blues.

An estimated 400 ticket holders sang and danced to Ryder's chart topping hits such as Little Latin Lupe Lu, Jenny Take A ride, Devil With The Blue Dress On, and Sock It To Me, along with more recent tunes such as It Must Be In Her Jeans. Another 200 or so on lookers enjoyed the show from beyond the reaches of the venue's fencing behind The Common Grill.

Dressed in his classic brimmed hat and black sunglasses, Ryder energized the large crowd, as his signature soulful gravely voice boomed as strong as ever. Neither he or his band ever missed a beat on this night.

Shortly after his final encore, Ryder reappeared to chat and sign autographs. It's been some time since Chelsea has experienced the energy that Ryder and his group brought here. It may be a while before it's seen again. Early ticket and beverage sales reflect a profit for the event and Sounds & Sights. Proceeds will provide seed money for operating expenses for next year.

"I think this show went as well we could have imagined," says event co-organizer, Craig Common. "Mitch came into our small community and put on a show that none of us will soon forget. It's a great tribute to Chelsea that we had such an enthusiastic turnout. The comments were all very positive, and the musicians were thrilled with the reception they received from our community. We could not be any happier."

The Sounds & Sights committee will be meeting again soon to begin discussing next year's concert.

"The bar was raised pretty high last Thursday night," says Bob Pierce, Sounds & Sights committee member and Chelsea chamber director. "We have become known as music and arts destination, so it's our mission to keep bringing great entertainment to Chelsea."

FARM

needs a variety of vendors, Kathy pointed out.

"You can't have too many farmers or none of them makes any money," she said.

"Like in Birmingham, they go by number of customers. They won't allow another farm stand until they get a certain number of customers to make it worthwhile. I'm not going to get up on a Sunday, load everything up and go all the way to Birmingham just to make $200."

Another day, another market

The Jackson market, located on the banks of to the Grand River on the north edge of the central business district downtown, is a larger space so the Fusiliers can offer a larger selection than in Manchester.

Run by Kathy's parents, Kay and Daryle Heselschwerdt of Napoleon, they were joined recently by granddaughters Abbey and Morgan Jacob of Batavia, Ohio.

"The cousins are best friends," Kay explained. "Everybody's hearts were broken when they had to move because of their father's job."

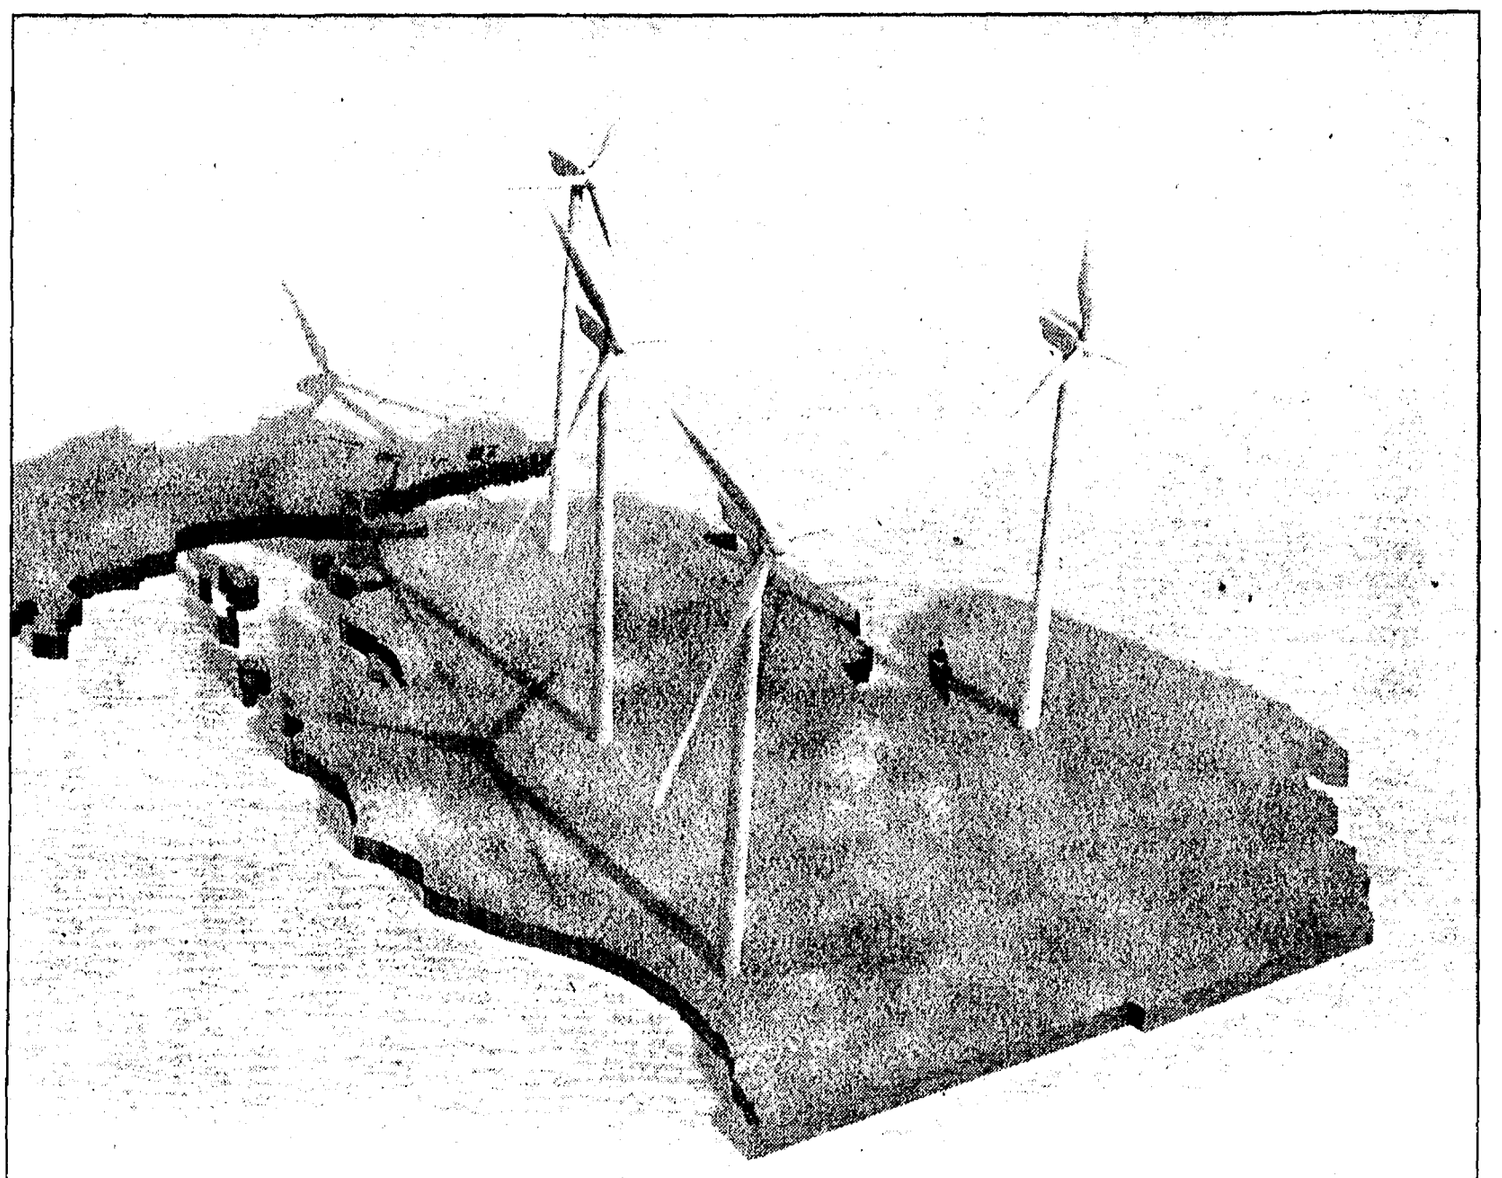

The girls were in town for a few days before a family reunion, and working the farm market gave them a chance to spend some "quality time" with their grandparents. "We're here until Sunday, and I'm always excited when we come here," older sister Abbey said. "My favorite part is working with the people – most of the time."

While Abbey liked the customer service aspect, Morgan had a different interest: "We always like to come to Grandma's," she said. "My favorite part is doing the math for handling the money."

The Heselschwerdts have been helping out with the family business for a number of years, and they know what makes their Jackson customers happy.

"We've been working with Kathy about 13 years," Kay said. "Everybody's always asking for corn, tomatoes and green beans - and strawberries. People go crazy for strawberries!"

Without realizing it, Kay repeated Kathy's assertion that there was an educational facet to the farm market.

Chalk Talk with Don Richter

Chelsea Standard / Dexter Leader Sports Editor Don Richter goes beyond the final scores.

I'm not afraid of a little rain

I hate to say it, but this summer is flying by. Someone, please, slow down the calendar.

Wasn't it just yesterday I was grumbling to myself as I shoveled my driveway for the umpteenth time?

Anyhow, for me, summer is always nearing its end when the Michigan High School Football Coaches Association East-West All-Star Game is completed. The game is the final athletic event for the Class of 2008.

The All-Star Game is a nice way to end the sports year for each class. At least, that's how I've always looked at it.

Each All-Star Game is memorable, but this year's contest was unique in its own right. Not only was Chelsea's Brad Bush and Grant Fanning coaching in the game, Bulldog Dean Roberts and Dexter's Chris Marsh were also playing in the event.

While that's worthy of memory, it's not what I'll remember most about this year's game. No, what I'll remember most is the rain and the effect it had on my fellow sports writers. I've written, and complained, often about how hot it always seems to be at the All-Star Game. I've suffered through my share of red necks and sunburns standing on the sidelines covering these games throughout the years.

This season's contest was different. The sun stayed away. The clouds rolled in and the skies parted drenching all those in attendance. It actually was a nice change of pace. Though my clothes were completely soaked and the ink on my notepad hopelessly smeared away, I found myself enjoying the moment.

The rain lasted the entire second half. After the game, I interviewed the local players and coaches on the field, despite the rain. My photographer Burrill Strong also stayed on the field the entire game, wrapping his camera in plastic to shield it from the downpour. We were the only newspaper people left out on the field.

As Burrill and I walked off the field, muddied and soaked to the bone, but satisfied with a job well done, I noticed a mob of people congregating in Spartan Stadium's tunnel. I wondered who all those people could be. As I drew closer, I noticed quite a few sports writer brethren scurrying to grab players as they walked to the locker room. Dry and squeaky clean, they

Local runners strain as they head up one of the many hills during last week's switchback 5K.

Runners conquer the switchbacks

By Don Richter
Sports Editor

They came.

They ran.

They conquered.

Last Saturday, under a scorching sun, with temperatures reaching a sizzling 81 degrees, 19 hardy souls participated in one of the area's most daunting physical challenges.

Running over dirt and rocks, up and down steep hills and twisting and turning their way through narrow, tree-lined paths, local athletes from throughout the area battled a torturous section of the Waterloo trails known simply as the switchbacks.

The unique 5K tests even the most experienced runners.

Winning the race was August Pappas with a clocking of 17:46. Pappas' time was the fastest in the event's history.

Started in the summer of 2007 by Chelsea boys' cross country and track and field coach Eric Swager, the race is held in both summer and winter. Originally a training exercise for Swager's teams, the unusual, yet difficult event proved popular. Soon Swager was hosting the race for the public.

Placing second overall was Teddy Eyster in 18:55, while Mark Smith was third in 20:18 and Nick Hewitt fourth in 22:08.

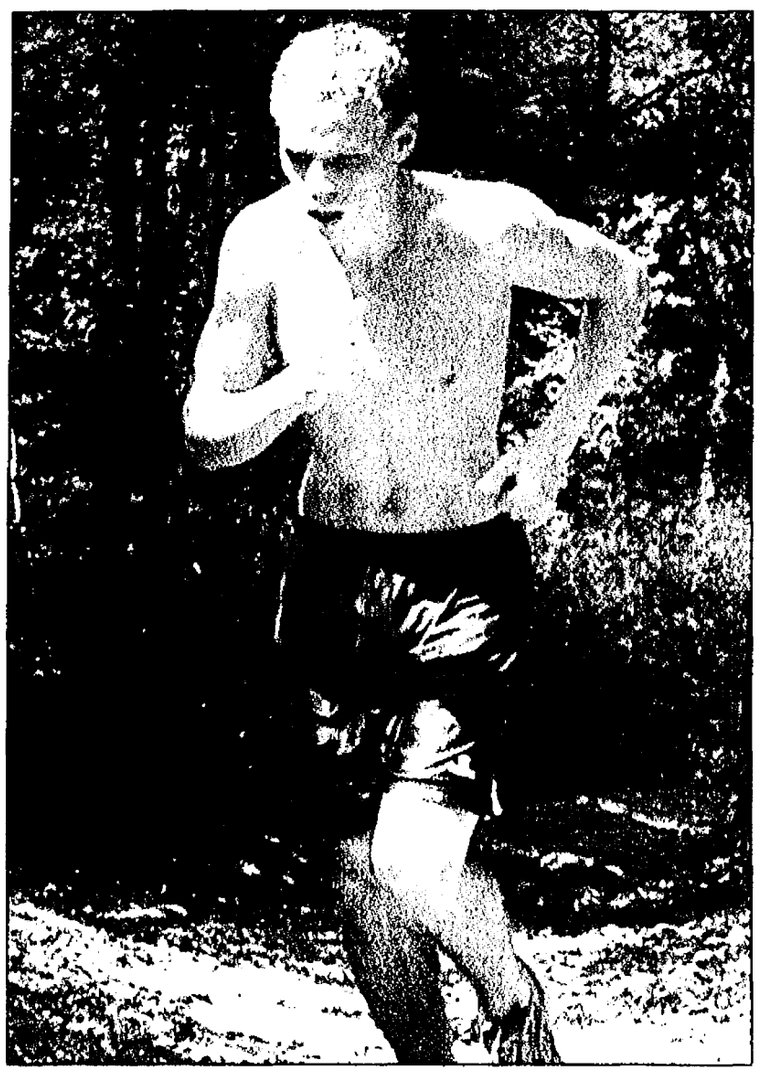

The women's overall winner was former Bulldog standout Alice Gauvin in 25:35.

Others participating in the race include Dion Bourque (27:45), Harold Eyster (24:49), Judy Gentz (31:18), Gary Hanalee (30:52), Martin Harris (27:00), Chet Hopp (24:55) and Andy Jerue (29:11).

Also taking on the switchbacks last Saturday were Jim Paul (26:15), Geoff Smith-Woollams (22:08), Jeff Squires (25:50), Jenny Squires (36:23), Swager (22:10), Jay Weesies (32:30) and Jim Zittel (31:05).

Proceeds from the race, which cost runners $5 to participate, go toward the local Chelsea Runners Club.

Sports Editor Don Richter can be reached at 475-1371 or at drichter@heritage.com.

Nick Hewitt finished fourth in 22:08 in last week's 5K run at the Waterloo trail switchbacks.

Heat injuries a concern

There are always concerns about physical activity in hot and humid conditions and with the beginning of pre-season practices less than two weeks away for high school sports teams across the state, the Michigan High School Athletic Association continues its role in providing its member schools educational information to assist them in minimizing the possibility of heat-related catastrophic injuries to student-athletes.

The topic of heat-related injuries receives a lot of attention at this time of year, especially when deaths at the professional, collegiate and interscholastic levels of sport occur. In football, data from the National Federation of State High School Associations shows that 25 high school football players have died from heat stroke since 1995.

Each spring, the MHSAA has provided information to its member schools to help them prepare for hot weather practice and game conditions in the late summer and early fall. Girls' golf practice begins at MHSAA Lower Peninsula member schools on Aug. 7, followed by all other fall sports on Aug. 11.

"Heat Stress & Athletic Participation" is information from the National Federation of State High School Associations that the MHSAA makes available on its Web site for use by all fall sports teams. The information points out that student-athletes are subject to a variety of maladies from heat cramps to heat strokes at this time of year.

Chelsea football players like Dakota Cooley will need plenty of water during summer practices to stave off heat-related injuries.

Preventative steps are outlined, including hydration guidelines about what to drink and what not to drink. A copy of the information is available on the MHSAA Web site - http://www.mhsaa.com/resources/fallsportsalert.pdf.

"It is an absolute necessity that water be available in unlimited quantities at all times during practices. The hydration of athletes is essential," said John R. Johnson, communications director for the MHSAA. "At the same time, coaching staffs need to be tuned into their student-athletes and be sure they are partaking of water. There is no excuse for any number of heat stroke deaths since they are all preventable with the proper precautions. If schools and their student-athletes follow these guidelines, then we minimize the risk for heat-related problems."

Johnson added that as student-athletes workout on their own individually or with a group of teammates in informal settings during the summer, it's important they also need to be aware of their hydration and drink plenty of fluids.

Chelsea football held its Wing-T camp last week. The Bulldogs finished 11-1 overall last year. The first day of practice for the 2008 season is Aug. 11.

brushed up against the wet and dirty players in the now cramped tunnel fumbling with tape recorders and notepads.

Burrill and I slowly made our way through the wall-to-wall packed tunnel. As we walked up the ramp and out of Spartan Stadium leaving the noisy throng behind, I thought to myself, 'Good luck, fellas trying to get your story. You should have braved the elements on the field. What's a little rain?'

At the top of the ramp, I shook Burrill's hand thanking him for staying out in the downpour with me. As I turned to leave, I glanced back one more time at the tunnel, looking more and more like frenzied bees in a hive and chuckled.

'Jaws' delights in tormenting people

By Jim Orr
Outdoors Writer

In the course of my wildlife rescue work I have handled everything from rattlesnakes to bobcats.

I enter a wolf pen every day to feed and care for a pack of full-grown wolves.

I have dealt with some of the largest and most ferocious raptors such as great horned owls and red-tailed hawks.

I have met a 300-pound Black bear alone in the dark and, all in all, consider myself fairly self-confident when dealing with wildlife.

That was before I met Jaws.

Jaws is a young male cardinal that has an abnormal affinity for my finger.

To look at him you would not consider him a threat to mankind but I find myself dreading my encounters with him every time I have to clean his cage or check his injuries.

Jaws, an injured male cardinal, certainly earned his name as he took great delight in biting and tormenting his caregiver, Jim Orr. The cardinal came to Orr with a broken wing.

Jaws was found on the highway with a broken wing. His mate was with him trying to protect him at the time he was rescued. Cardinals are one of the few birds that mate for life.

He has been with me almost two months and is in the process of rebuilding wing muscles so that he might fly again. His wing seems to have healed fairly well but it may take some time before I know if he can fly.

Birds have the ability to molt and grow new feathers to balance out some wing injuries, but like people, when their joints are immobilized for the lengthy healing process they get stiff and need rehabilitation to loosen up enough that they can fly (birds, not people).

As seed and nut eaters cardinals have incredible powerful beaks for breaking shells. Their beaks are short and triangular and leave quite a rosy mark on

Crash, boom, bang: Meet 'Noisy' the woodpecker

By Jim Orr
Outdoors Writer

We were taking one of the few breaks we get from feeding animals to watch a TV show when all heck broke loose. It sounded like the washing machine had broken a bearing and was about to bang itself to pieces.

I ran down stairs to discover the washing machine was not even running. The loud banging had stopped and I could not tell out where it had come from.

I figured it must have been our horse outside banging his gate to ask for a refill of his oat bucket. He seemed quiet and content when I looked in on him, but I gave him a handful of grain anyway in the hope I might get to see the end of the TV show.

I checked around to make sure all the other animals were OK and went back to watching what was left of the program.

About the time the climax of the story started to unfold an even louder banging started downstairs that sounded more like gun shorts or fireworks than a horse banging a gate.

I muted the television to try to pinpoint the ruckus, but of coarse it had stopped leaving my mind to guess its origin.

It is always dangerous to leave solving mysteries up to my mind. I was torn between paranormal activities and a shootout between neighbors when my wife suggested it might be the pileated woodpecker we had brought home from surgery the day before.

I must admit it made more sense than my solutions, but I could not imagine an injured bird with a body wrap of bandages making more noise than a horse.

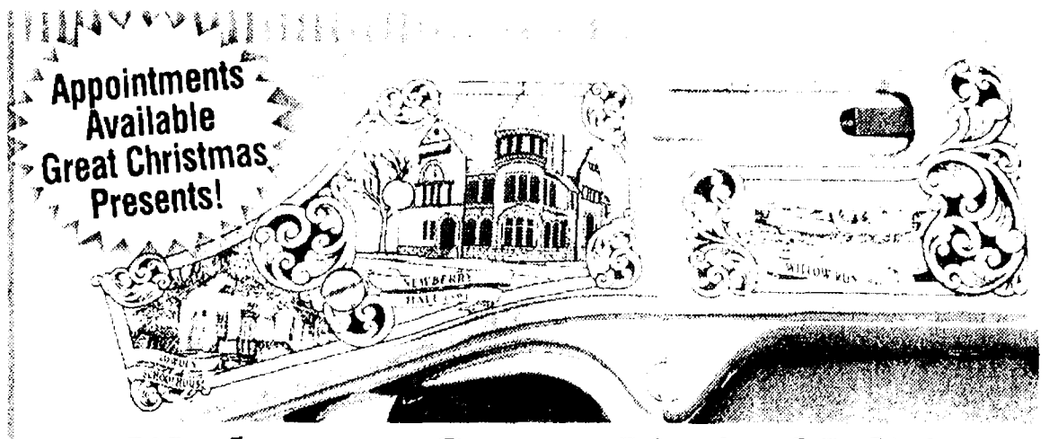

It turned out the bird that had not only learned to balance with his full body wrap but had discovered pecking a hard plastic pet porter made enough noise to wake the dead (I had to get the paranormal stuff in their somehow).

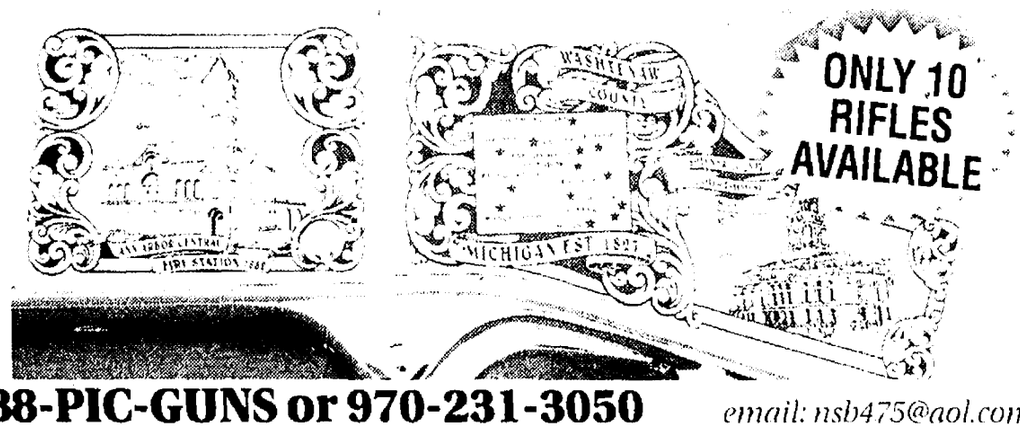

The pileated woodpecker is the largest woodpecker with the exception of the recently rediscovered ivory bill, which had been

Book Reviews: By Joan Elmouchi

Women take the lead in a series of mysteries

By Joan Elmouchi

Readers love to read series about familiar, comfortable characters that feel like old friends. Especially popular are light, gentle mysteries usually featuring a woman in the leading role. These books offer minimal mayhem, some smart detective work, a little humor, a bit of romance, and a satisfying ending that leaves the reader clambering for the next installment. Here are some suggested series:

Elmouchi

The most popular mystery writer on the planet is Mary Higgins Clark. While most of her novels stand alone, her "Alvirah and Willy" series includes six titles sure to please. Alvirah Meehan is a former cleaning lady who won millions in the New York lottery, and she and her husband Willy now have a fancy apartment near Central Park, and the time for Alvirah to put her superior sleuthing skills to work. First introduced in "Weep No More, My Lady", these swiftly moving, cozy tales are always entertaining.

Mary Higgins Clark's daughter Carol has established her own reputation as a best-selling author. Her single-word titled mysteries started with "Decked" in 1992, and continue with the 2008 entry, "Zapped."

They feature Los Angeles private eye Regan Reilly, first a single gal, and 11 titles later, married to NYPD cop Jack Reilly. That Reagan's husband has the same last name is typical of Clark's humor. The two Clarks have teamed up for several novels, and in "Deck the Halls," Reagan pairs with her mother's character Alvirah Meehan to solve the kidnapping of Reagan's father. These are light, humorous crime tales.

Lovely, funny and clever, the "Southern Sisters" series is sure to delight. Unfortunately, author Anne George has passed away, and the series ended with the 2001 title "Murder Boogies with Elvis." But there are eight wonderful titles to enjoy, including "Murder on a Bad Hair Day" and "Murder on a Girls' Night Out". The novels feature the narrator, petite Patricia Anne, and her statuesque, brazen sister Mary Alice. When Patricia Anne, nicknamed Mouse, retires after a long career as a high school teacher, bodies start popping up all over the place. Never actively sleuthing, somehow the two very different sisters always manage to get into the middle of the mystery. With old cats, lazy dogs, good-humored husbands and sisterly bickering, these tales are a delight.

The starchy, proper Miss Julia is the heroine of the "Miss Julia" books, another delightful Southern series. After the death of her miserable husband, Wesley Lloyd, Julia Springer finds herself a very wealthy widow and free for the first time in her life. But before she has time to enjoy her new life, there's a shocking development. Hazel Marie Puckett and her wan nine-year old son, Little Lloyd, appear on Julia's doorstep claiming to be Wesley Lloyd's long-time mistress and offspring. The resulting scandal shocks Miss Julia to the core, but she stiffens her spine and comes up with the perfect plan for revenge. The following nine titles follow the mild adventures of Miss Julia, Hazel Marie, Little Lloyd, and a host of wonderful characters, including a surprising romance. Crooked televangelists, car chases, evil uncles, and even a kidnapping appear in the stories, which are ruminations on small-town southern life with a smattering of mystery thrown in.

Author Alexander McCall Smith has a great love of his characters and of Africa, which shine through in the "No. 1 Ladies' Detective Agency" series. Precious Remotswe is the one and only lady detective in all of Botswana, and she and her prickly assistant, Grace Makutsi (known for her big, round glasses) use common sense and natural insight to expose cheating spouses, find missing relatives, and uncover sneaky thieves.

In the course of 10 titles, the most recent being 2008's "The Miracle at Speedy Motors," Mma Remotswe acquires a husband in the reliable mechanic Mr. J. L. B. Matekoni, and two foster children from the orphanage where Mr. Matekoni keeps the ancient machinery in working order. Even Grace Makutsi finds a suitor in a stuttering but prosperous furniture store owner. These warm and wise stories will put a smile on your face.

thought extinct until just recently spotted in Arkansas.

I suspect Woody Woodpecker was fashioned after a Pileated variety as they have a gorgeous pointed red head dress, stand 14- to 19-inches tall and can have a wingspan of over two feet.

Although they eat nuts, berries, and fruit their principle diet is bugs.

They have a long sticky bushy tongue that allows them to extract insects from deep crevices.

They are particularly fond of carpenter ants that they dig out of dead and dying trees with their powerful two-inch long beak.

Pileated woodpeckers are very shy birds that live in heavily forested areas. They do not socialize with other birds.

They live primarily in cavities they make themselves in pine trees. The holes are very large, three to four inches wide and up to 12 inches long.

The cleaver bird builder strips back several inches of bark around the hole to create a sticky sap ring that keeps snakes and predators out of nest cavity.

Pileated woodpeckers often have several roosting cavities they use at the same time and at least one new one under construction.

At one time they were considered endangered as a result of extensive timbering and loss of forestland in the 20s and 30s. They have recently made a comeback and although not endangered are rarely seen by the average person.

The male assists the female in incubating the eggs. He takes the night shift while she roosts nearby.

They feed the nestlings regurgitated food. The babies open their eyes in about 10 days, but do not leave the nest cavity until the 27th day.

By the 15th day, however, they like to peer out of the nest and announce the arrival of meals on wings with a soft "churring" call.

Our noisy houseguest had been found along the road apparently having been hit by a car.

He had a dislocated wing, a massive hematoma and some bleeding.

After a visit to the friendly bird doctor, a few stitches, antibiotics, and a bandage body wrap he apparently decided he disliked his accommodations or was enjoying his new found ability to exceed all sound ordinance decibel levels by playing the hard plastic cage.

I gave him a rotted log to work on, some worms, cat food and nuts. That kept him quiet until well after midnight.

You know what they say, "early bird gets the worm." Now you can add, "wildlife rehabilitators get no sleep".

DONATIONS NEEDED If you would like to help any donation amount it is greatly appreciated. Donations should be made out to Witter Wildlife Refuge and can be sent to P.O. Box 1118, Huntsville AR 72740.

ones finger if they decide to latch on.

Young male and female cardinals look very much the same. As they mature the males turn a vibrant red and the females are a much more subdued olive-orange.

In most species of birds the females are more camouflage than the males. This provides stealth protection for nest sitting making them very hard to spot.

The bright colors found on male birds have the opposite effect making them stand out against their natural settings.

This flamboyance is an important part of their mating ritual. Studies have shown many female birds prefer the brightest colored birds when selecting a mate.

These bright colors also play into territorial battles as the male will chase and fight intruders in his domain.

If I did not know better I might suspect the red color Jaws sports was his gang colors as he acts like a tough little inner city hoodlum at every opportunity.

As if its not bad enough to get a nip now and then, the little sucker seems to get diverse pleasure at hanging on as I squeal in pain trying to get him loose without causing him injury.

He is too small to wear the conventional bird gloves I use for the more powerful birds, so I have to tough it out with bare hands.

I guess you need to be tough to be a wild bird as less than 50 percent survive more than one year in the wild.

They teach you how to hold a bird without getting nailed in rehabilitation class, but Jaws apparently went to his own class on Houdini escapism as nothing seems to work with him.

All in all he is a beautiful bird and I hope he will be able to return to his mate one day soon.

A BEAR of a record

Bob Turner and the Chelsea Teddy Bear Co. are headed back into the Guinness Book of World Records – thanks to those who brought bears to SummerFest. According to Turner, a total of 1,401 teddy bears were used to create a peace symbol 28 feet in diameter, covering 615 square feet. Turner reports that 158 people brought their own bears to participate in Saturday's event. "We killed the previous world record, which we already had," Turner said.

Scholarship winners

Four $2,500 awards were presented to the recipients of the Willard H. Johnson Scholarships, who were selected from 21 eligible applications, based on their community/volunteer involvement, proven leadership abilities, and academic accomplishments. The Willard H. Johnson Scholarships were first presented in 1999, the year after Mr. Johnson retired from Chelsea Community Hospital. To be eligible for application, students must be dependents of Hospital employees, volunteers, or medical staff, and have a 3.0 GPA or higher. The 2008 Will Johnson Scholarships were awarded to four recipients, pictured (left to right) Nathan Magyar, Kelsey Johnson, Will Johnson, Tracy Steinbach, Emily Woolsey, Will Johnson's daughter Melissa, and his son Dan.

Dance studio takes last step

The board of directors of the Dance Gallery Foundation plans to close Dance Gallery Studio next month.

For the past two decades, Dance Gallery Foundation has provided a broad range of dance training and, through the Peter Sparling Dance Company, professional dance programming for students and audiences throughout southeastern Michigan.

The decision, according to a news release, is the result of a difficult economic environment in which fundraising and contributions have not been at the levels necessary to sustain the foundation's work.

"While we are saddened by the necessity of this action, we are proud of the contributions that the foundation and its studio have made to the performing arts in Ann Arbor," said Dance Gallery Foundation Board President Scott Berry.

Peter Sparling, artistic director of Dance Gallery Foundation, said, "This is a devastating moment for me. My creative spirit had really found a home at 815Wildt. A prominent arts supporter in our community once told me I'd need to choose what legacy I wanted to leave behind for Ann Arbor. In a sense, it was decided for me that it would not be in the form of a building.

"PSDC will continue to operate on a project-to-project basis. I believe we have done our loyal supporters proud by maintaining a professional company and studio for as long as we have. We gave it our best shot. I look forward to continuing to collaborate with artists and organizations throughout the region."

The Peter Sparling Dance Company will complete the videotaped production of a new work, "Climbing Sainte-Victoire," at the University of Michigan Duderstadt Center in September. The work is being considered for broadcast later this year.

Berry said the board of directors is particularly grateful to the staff, teachers, students, parents, community sponsors and donors who have allowed Dance Gallery Studio to flourish for nearly 20 years.

"Quality arts programming requires an immense amount of dedication from all kinds of people, and we have been fortunate indeed to be in a community that has shown such support," he said.

Auditions set

Ann Arbor Civic Theatre announces auditions for its Studio Series production of Eugene Ionesco's timely political drama, "Exit the King," directed by David Andrews.

Auditions will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. Aug. 15, 2 to 4 p.m. Aug. 16 and 4 to 6 p.m. Aug. 17. Actors need attend only one of the three audition dates. All auditions take place at the A2CT Rehearsal Studio, 322 W. Ann St.

In "Exit the King," King Berenger has been avoiding his own death for more than 300 years. But now planets are colliding and whole towns are being swallowed into the earth. His kingdom is collapsing, and it's definitely time for him to go — assisted by his two wives, and playwright Eugene Ionesco.

The play has roles for three to four women ages 20 through 70 and two to three men ages 20 through 90. Auditions consist of cold readings from the script. No pre-registration is required. Production dates are Oct. 10 through 18 at Ann Arbor Civic Theatre's Studio Theater at 322 W. Ann St.

For further information, visit the audition page of the Ann Arbor Civic Theatre Web site at www.a2ct.org or call 971-2228.

Suicide prevention walk

This fall, it's estimated that more than 2,000 people will participate in the Out of the Darkness Community Walks in Michigan. The fundraising walk benefits the American Foundation for Suicide Prevention by helping to support local and national suicide prevention and awareness programs.

The Michigan Out of the Darkness Walks join with nearly 200 Out of the Darkness Community Walks being held this fall nationwide, from August through November. The walks are expected to unite more than 30,000 walkers nationally and raise $3.5 million to support funding for new research, education and awareness programs.

Area residents may be interested in a walk set noon Sept. 14 at Pioneer High School in Ann Arbor.

Chelsea Community Fair

Candidates needed to apply for Fair Queen

By Crystal Hayduk
Special Writer

Animals, rides, parades, demolition derbies, elephant ears and candied apples ... but no fair queen?

Since 1950, the excitement of the contest and the anticipation of winning scholarship money helped to draw competitors for the Chelsea Community Fair Queen contest.

"But lately, the numbers have been dwindling and nobody seems to know exactly why," said Ron Stoffer, vice president of the Chelsea Fair Board.

"There are posters up at the schools, but the girls aren't volunteering to run like they used to."

Danielle Hale, Superintendent of the Chelsea Fair Queen Program, reported that in the last few days there are only two young women, both from Dexter, who finally expressed verbal intentions to run for Fair Queen.

Last year's winner, Jamie Innis of Dexter High School, said that running for Fair Queen helped her to gain self-confidence, take responsibility for the tasks she needed to accomplish, and learn time management skills.

Alyssa Rodgers, a senior at Chelsea High School, was a candidate last year who spoke enthusiastically about her experience.

"I entered about this time last year. It was busy, but a great time. You learn people skills because you are present at so many fair events," she said

"Last year one of the judges for the Miss Washtenaw County competition came to Chelsea and worked with us on interviewing skills and poise.

"I would definitely encourage anyone to enter. It's a lot of fun," Rodgers added.

Throughout Fair Week, Aug. 19 to 23, candidates ride a convertible in the Children's Parade, help at the livestock auction, participate in Ladies' Day, and decorate a float to ride for the Chelsea Fair Parade on Aug. 23.

The young women will compete on Aug. 22 for a scholarship worth $1,000. The prize for first runner-up is a $500 scholarship.

Aside from the potential to win scholarship money, Hale said, running for Fair Queen is a valuable experience and an opportunity to learn skills that the girls will have for the rest of their lives.

Any high school-age girl in the Chelsea or Dexter school districts interested in running or learning more about the fair queen program should contact Hale at 734-475-2270 by Monday.

2007 Chelsea Community Fair Queen candidates line up for the dedication of the Ron McCalla Memorial Pavilion. High school-age girls in the Chelsea and Dexter areas are needed to apply for this year's Fair Queen contest.

Tools for Schools.

Spelling without pencils. Math without calculators. Gym class with no shoes. Countless children in our area will go to school this fall without basic school supplies and clothing items. Unless we help.

In collaboration with the Lenawee, Monroe, and Washtenaw County homeless youth education programs, United Bank & Trust is pleased to sponsor its third annual "Tools for Schools" campaign — a community-wide collection drive of school supplies and clothing items for homeless and disadvantaged youth in grades K-12. This campaign will ensure that none of our area children go without these basic needs during the school year.

To make a donation, bring NEW school supplies or clothing items to any United Bank & Trust office through August 31.

Some suggested items include:
- Backpacks for all ages
- NEW clothing items — socks, shoes, underwear, coats
- Calculators — regular, solar-powered, scientific
- Binders, spiral notebooks, folders
- Protractors, rulers, compasses
- Glue and scissors
- Combination locks
- Gift cards — fast food, shoe and clothing stores

Kids.
Where would they be without you?
Thank you for your help.

Is being in debt of love a good thing?

By Jeff Crowder
Guest Writer

Debt.

A lot of people are diving deeper into debt via credit cards. Some may be voluntary. Some may be by necessity.

"People are having to charge basic items like food because it is the only way they can afford them."

This was a quote given by a person testifying in front of a government committee.

The news story went on to splash $8,247 (or some similar number) as the amount of money the average American household has accumulated in credit card debt.

I haven't researched the veracity of the number. And my memory may have moved the numbers around. But the point was clear: Americans have too much debt.

I thought of that story as I read Romans 8:8.

Let no debt remain outstanding, except the continuing debt to love one another, for the one who loves their neighbor has fulfilled the law.

My initial reaction was that the debt of love is different than financial debt.

I thought, "We like to pay off credit card debt. But we like to be loved."

Therefore, credit card debt equals bad.

Debt of love equals good.

And I suppose that's true. But ...

...do we enjoy being "in debt" for love?

Think about it:

When you've been wronged, do you want to act lovingly toward the other person?

When you've been wounded, do you want to make yourself vulnerable again?

When you've been burned, do you want to give that person another chance to burn you?

When you've been clear about your desire are you really ready to be ignored another time?

No. Such thoughts are foolishness. We have probably all heard Jesus' admonition to turn the other cheek or go the second mile. But really. C'mon. He didn't actually mean it, did he?!

Paul tells us he did. Paul tells us to let the debt of loving one another remain outstanding. Continue to owe love to other people. Always be acting, talking, and thinking lovingly towards people.

Then I had this crazy idea.

What if we did the opposite of trying to get out of debt? What if we intentionally went deeper into the debt of love? What if we decided that we'd never be out of the debt of love to other people?

What if we were so determined to love each other that love really did cover a multitude of sins?

What would our community look like if we forgave as we have been forgiven?

I'm guessing that the Chamber of Commerce wouldn't have to do any advertising. People would flock to the area. And not just for the Purple Rose, the Common Grill, or Jiffy Mix. But because there's a place where people would be patient, joyful and forgiving.

I'm guessing the realtors in

town would always have buyers and very few sellers. The value of your home and mine would go up. Who wouldn't want to live in a place where people were always seeking to pay forward the kindness and generosity of others?

Paul writes, "love is the fulfillment of the law" in Romans 8:10b. If everybody is being like Christ, what else would there be to say? Pastors and priests would spend a lot less time talking, teaching, and preaching. We would spend a lot more time doing, working side-by-side with parishioners and congregants who made paying the debt of love a way of life.

I wonder...

Does such a community exist?

Is there a place where people are actually going deeper into this kind of debt?

If you find it, let me know. I want to be a part of such a place.

ZONING BOARD OF APPEALS
NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

Pursuant to Michigan Public Act 110 of 2006, as amended, notice is hereby given that the Dexter Village Zoning Board of Appeals will hold a public hearing at 7:00 p.m., Monday, August 18, 2008 at the Dexter Senior Center, 7720 Ann Arbor Street, Dexter, Michigan, for the purpose of hearing public comment regarding the following variance application:

The applicant, Habitat for Humanity, is requesting a front yard setback variance from the following sections of the Village of Dexter Zoning Ordinance for 7956 Grand Street, HD-08-06-280-028 (Vacant):

1. Section 20.01, Schedule of Regulations for Front Yard Setbacks. The applicant is proposing to develop a 7 unit (2-2 unit and 1-3 unit buildings) multiple family housing project. Summerfest 2008 event a sizzling success

By Bob Pierce
Guest Writer

If our measurement for success is the smiles on the faces of attendees, Summerfest 2008 was a smashing success.

This year's version of what has become Chelsea's largest community party truly was one of our most successful events.

The weather was ideal, the Kidzone and Articipation areas were spectacular, and the Food and Entertainment court knocked one out of the park!

The Classic Car Show was one of the largest ever for Summerfest. More than 280 vehicles were registered for the event.

Saturday's Pet Parade has grown into one of the favorite events of the weekend, and this year's crop of critters kept the tradition going! This is such a fun event for kids ... and animals of all ages.

I don't know how to express our heartfelt thanks to the volunteers who spent many hours in preparation and execution of this event.

Our sponsors deserve a special tip of the hat this year for their generous support of our event.

Through their fantastic support and the expansion of our non-merchant vendor entries, the Summerfest committee did not have to solicit local merchants for additional cash contributions for the event.

It was one of our goals to keep solicitations to a minimum due to the challenging economic times for our retailers, and the goal that I am most proud of achieving this year.

Bob Pierce is executive director of the Chelsea Area Chamber of Commerce.

In 1918, we began our commitment to improving the health of our community with the opening of Foote Hospital. Nearly a century later, this single hospital has grown into a thriving health system, with more than 3,000 employees who lead our friends and neighbors to better health and well-being at every stage of life. As we embark on our tenth decade of service, we honor our past and celebrate our future by introducing a new name for our health system -- Allegiance Health. This new name reflects our growth and our renewed pledge to serve you as an independent, community-owned healthcare organization.

Karen Meyer-Bentley

Dexter Daze chairperson enjoys where she's sitting

Q & A

The following is a Q&A with Karen Meyer-Bentley, chairperson of the 2008 Dexter Daze committee.

Full name: Karen Meyer-Bentley
Age: Women never tell their age
Native of: Chelsea
Current hometown: Dexter (I know I went far)
Family: Husband David, daughter Ashley and son Grant
Education: World of Hard Knocks... (BA Human Resource Management)
Occupation: Owner of Dexter Wireless Giant, Dexter
Hobbies: Volunteering, gardening and entertaining when time permits.
When did you first get involved with Dexter Daze? 1997

What have been your past duties with the event? For the past 10 years I was the entertainment chair. I took over as Chair this year.

Why did you get involved and why have you stayed involved? I originally got involved through Carol Model (who has since passed away). She was the entertainment chair for years and became ill and asked me to step in for her. It is a great community event that brings all walks of life from every where. It's a nice reunion time for the Dexter alums.

Why is Dexter Daze important to the community? It showcases what our small town has to offer and the area businesses can give back to the community through a two-day festival celebration.

What are some of the popular events that are back this year? Of course the music and vendors in the park and the parade, which many look forward to. But the one that stands out for me this year is the tour of Gordon Hall. There has been a lot of progress completed in that area and a vast amount of history for all to learn about. It is a beautiful showcase.

What is new this year? Like Water Drum and Dance Jazz, Caribbean and West African Drum Group will be kicking off the event and closing the night is a new blues band RJ Spangler.

How long have you been with Wireless Giant?
We opened July 1, 2008...a really long time.

What kinds of services/products do you offer?
We sell cell phones, accessories and plans for Verizon, Sprint and Nextel. We also sell Dish TV and Direct TV.

Is there any new product or service you are excited about? They are all great products, but I am selling Boost Mobile which is a prepaid phone, no contract and you pay as you go, which is a nice product for a variety of reasons. Kids just starting out with their first cell phone allows the parents to test their level of responsibility or for the seniors who just want a phone for emergency purposes.

How has business been in this tough economy? One thing that is fortunate for us is that the cell phone industry has grown by 20 percent in the last few years, and while some do not deem a cell phone as a necessity, many do!

How do you juggle everything you are involved with? Some call me crazy! But I have a great support system, family and friends and a great committee that I can count on a lot, including the Chamber office.

Taking care of business

Event good for business

By Tina Ponder
Special Writer

With a parade, craft booths, rides for children, entertainment and plenty of good food, Dexter Daze helps bring people downtown. And that's good for business.

During Dexter Daze, many local businesses add to the fun by have something special planned.

Edna Middleton, owner of Rose Cottage, a home décor and gift shop, said that she will be offering a coupon in the Dexter Leader, sales tables and in-store discounts to help celebrate the annual event. However, Middleton's favorite part of Dexter Daze is all of the activities in town.

"It's nice to see so many people," said Middleton, "Rose Cottage is able to reach a wider audience with Dexter Daze and that's nice too."

Daisy Lake Art Gallery will be holding a special exhibit by Barbara Anderson for the event, which showcases watercolor art from New Mexico with a Southwest theme.

"It's a win-win for everybody," said Daisy Lake Art Gallery Owner Victoria Shoen, "Dexter Daze brings vitality to Dexter and people take pride in the community."

Dexter Pharmacy Owner Fred Schmidt said a huge garage sale may be in the works.

"It's important for people to come into town and get a look at what we have," he said. "It helps us out because it's a chance for people to see the stores."

Dexter Daze began 20 years ago as a sidewalk sale by downtown merchants. Now, the event is the oldest and largest hosted by the Chamber.

Shoen is eager for people to see the Daisy Lake Art Gallery during Dexter Daze.

"It helps people know that Dexter is alive and well," she said. "A lot of people love it here. I know I do!"

Dexter Daze is on Aug. 8-9 and booths will be open from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. For more information visit www.dexterchamber.org.

Dexter Daze offers something for everyone

This year will be the first year I'll miss Dexter Daze since I moved here. Our daughter chose that weekend to get married! When my face showed signs of being 'displeased', she commented that I could hardly expect her to change her wedding date for Dexter Daze! I must admit the thought crossed my mind!

Dexter Daze brings people home from everywhere. They get together at the 'social tent' (come on, it's the beer tent for heaven's sake), listen to great music, and catch up with people they haven't seen since last year in the same place at the same time!

The park is filled with vendors of all kinds. Last year, I bought an Elvis pillow case for our Elvis-fanatic, other daughter and saved it for Christmas. I got a henna tattoo too, finagling the teenage girls into a coveted spot in line!

The weather is always pleasant. Arden Shafer told me last year that in all the years he headed Dexter Daze, they were never rained out! This year, Karen Bentley takes over the reigns running the event. I have no doubt she'll do a great job. After all, she's missing the infamous wedding to do so! May the rain not fall on her parade either!

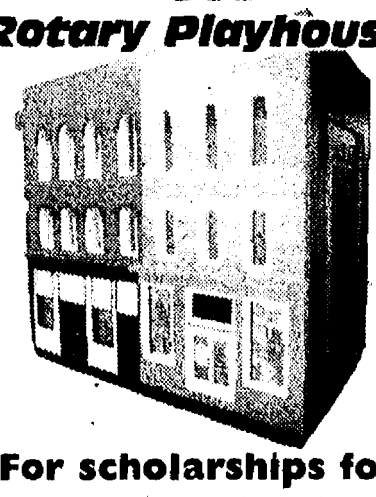

When I reflect on the eight years I've attended Dexter Daze now, I enjoy the parade best of all. Everyone shows up with their lawn chairs, family, and pets to witness a parade that is quintessential "Small Town", Midwest America! I park myself and my camera on top of a ladder on Main Street to get the best photographs with my birds-eye view. The highlights of the parade are many; but the collection of antique, John Deere tractors driven by several generations of the Doletsky family tops my list! The Parade Marshall who leads the start, always someone who has dedicated years, some longer to the community they grew up in and love. And who doesn't look for Colors the Clown? She's another icon in the parade with Piggy Sue by her side. The local fire department and police, the dance and sports teams, the scouts, the bands, the horses all decked out with their riders in their finest too, the classic cars...I love it all.

This all occurs smack dab in a grassy park filled with large trees that provide cool shade in the center of our little village. Our Civil War, stone soldier has been silently standing vigil over a century of parades and fairs there. Can you imagine the stories he might tell!

Playhouses reflect community

Rotary Club auction helps raise money for student scholarships

By Jackie Smith
Special Writer

The Dexter Rotary Club finished this year's playhouse last month. All that's left now is to give it away during their annual Dexter Daze raffle.

Club Treasurer Bill Stockwell said this year's playhouse is modeled after the building that houses the Dexter Bakery and Hackney Hardware. The end result will be a unique haven for kids and ultimately a scholarship for deserving Dexter High School graduates.

"The playhouses have varied a lot in shape and size," said founding Rotary Club member Sandy Hansen. "This year's playhouse is one of our biggest ones. There's a lot of detail in the buildings."

The 2008 house will not only stand out in size, but in detail. One of the members "even painted one of the murals on the back of Hackney Hardware."

In 2000, the very first house was a little blue cottage, but since then the playhouses have all represented the community of Dexter.

"After that first playhouse, I suggested that we use homes and other buildings in Dexter as the models for our future ones," Hansen said. "(It was) a way to really build community interest in our project each year."

Since the Litchfield House in 2001, the club's playhouses continue to reflect buildings throughout Dexter, and the Rotary Club continues to meet its goals.

"We were looking for a fundraising activity that would be fun, creative, related to the community, a social activity among members and generate funds to provide scholarships," Stockwell said.

"We have raised an average of $4,000 to $5,000 a year, and as a result have been able to provide four to six scholarships every May."

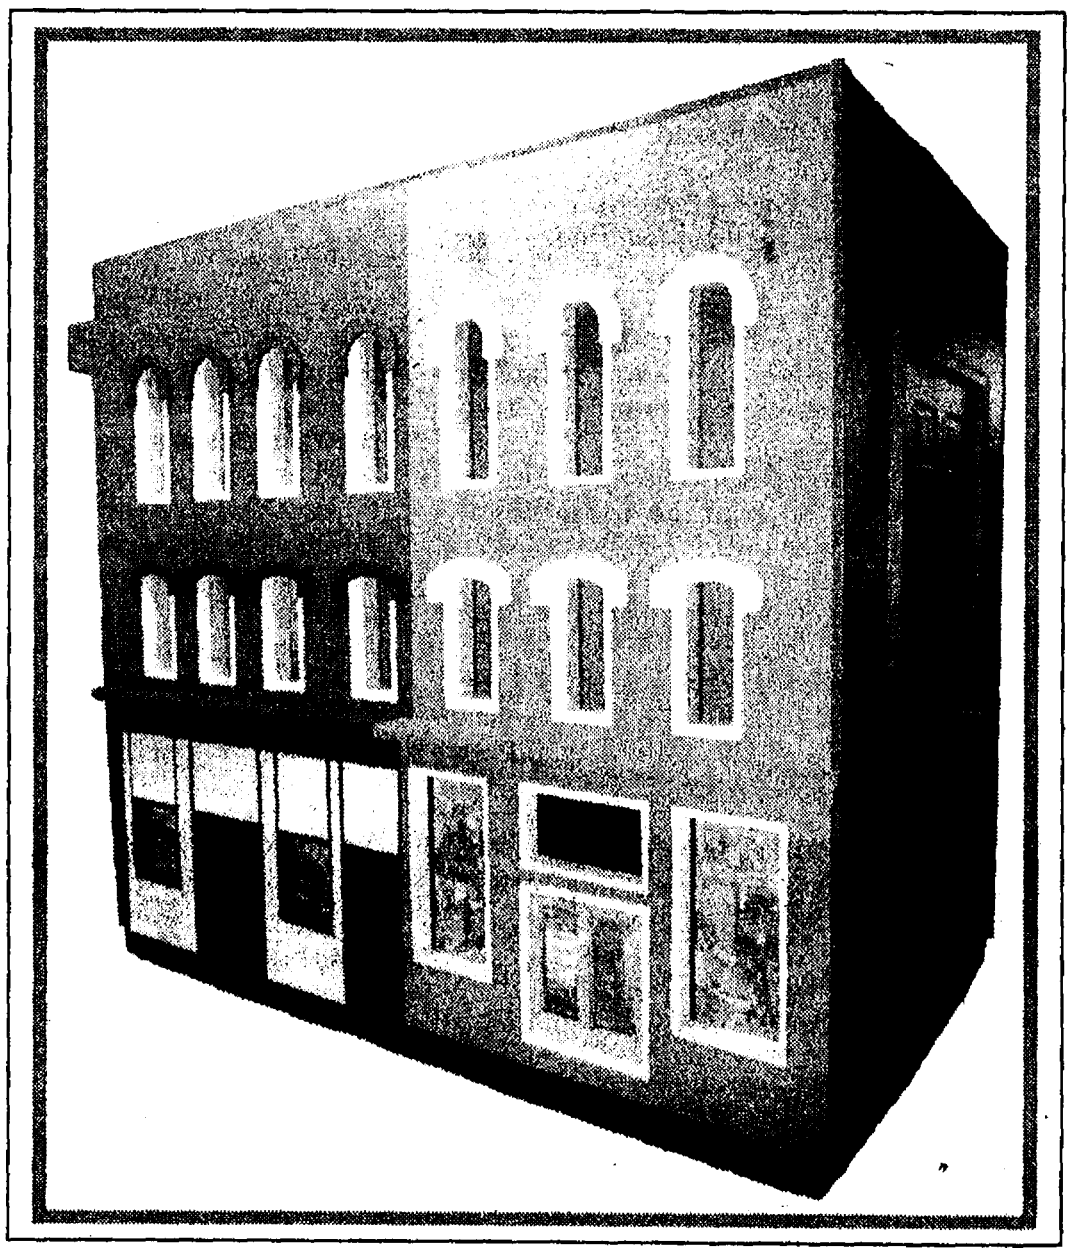

The playhouse also appears in the Memorial Day parade prior to its total completion every year, which has also helped spread interest in the raffle.

Each one takes three to four months to build beginning in late winter and is a good project for the club's 30 members to get involved with, Stockwell said.

"Most members work on the playhouse," Hansen added. "It's a wonderful project for us, both because of the dollars it generates...and as a way to build awareness of the Dexter Rotary Club in the community."

The 2008 playhouse was built in downtown Dexter and is on display in front of Busch's Market. Raffle tickets can be bought from most club members.

The cost is $5 for one ticket and $20 for five tickets.

LOVE

People have commented to me when I say I live in Dexter what a 'jewel' downtown Dexter is with its little park, gazebo, and well-kept historic buildings.

We forget that... until an event like Dexter Daze comes, and we all head downtown. We come together to visit, relax, and enjoy. We are reminded, once again, what 'community' means and how much we love living here.

So, although the wedding is Friday and will definitely keep me away, don't be surprised if you see me sneaking in with my ladder for the parade before the pre-planned, day-after-the-wedding picnic!

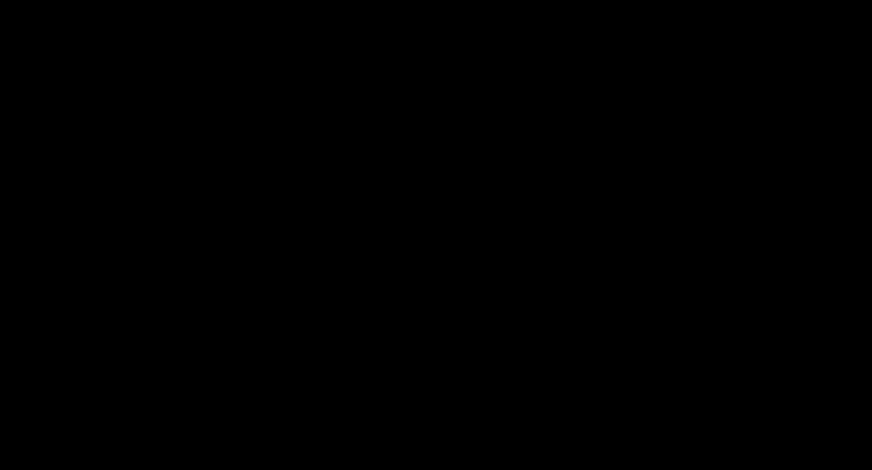

Our daughter will never know...

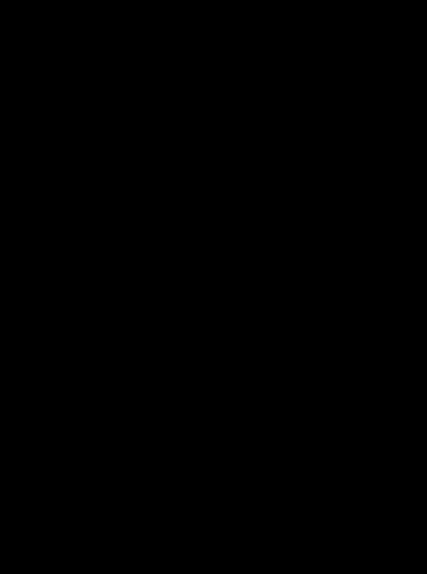

Jill Love is a local photographer and community volunteer.

'Dexter Daze is truly a community event and fun for the whole family'

By Shawn Keough, president of the Village of Dexter

By Shawn Keough

Welcome to Dexter!

I can hardly believe it...the much advertised 8.08.08 is right around the corner.

For those of you preparing for the start of the Olympics, I am excited about that as well. However in DEXTER, 8.08.08 means the start of DEXTER DAZE!

We are nearly one week away from one of my favorite weekends of the year. Yes, Dexter Daze begins on Friday, Aug. 8, 2008, but for all those volunteers that have put in countless hours planning this event, the parade and all the activities, the weekend marks the culmination of a lot of hard work and a time for some fun with family, friends, neighbors and/or people that you may only see once every year!

Thank you to everyone involved in planning this event that so many people in this community enjoy!

My first taste of Dexter Daze began six years ago when my kids were younger. For my wife and I with two kids under 5 years of age, Dexter Daze offered a simple opportunity to get the kids outside the house and enjoy our beautiful downtown on a summer weekend. We focused on simple activities designed for younger kids such as those that involved balloons, face painting or magic shows.

Now a few years later, my kids still enjoy those simple activities, but also run into their friends and classmates that they may not have seen as much over the summer. We always enjoy the music and activities that seem to go all day long at the gazebo in the heart of Monument Park.

Dexter Daze is truly a community event and fun for the whole family. Just last year, my daughter Megan got picked out of the crowd to stand up and participate in the animal magic show that typically takes place. Before I knew it, she was holding a really cute bunny and then a few minutes later a chicken! I don't know who was more surprised, Megan or the chicken! It was really funny and the rest of the kids (and some adults) were laughing the whole time.

The service clubs get involved and advertise their activities to recruit new members. Local vendors come in and provide a full display of arts and crafts booths with something for every shopper. The local businesses and restaurants offer an opportunity to get out of the sun if mother nature brings a hot August day or if you simply want to sit down for a cold drink or something to eat. It is fun to see kids of all ages and families having fun in the park or throughout the downtown.

Saturday morning begins with a fantastic parade that seems to have as many people in it

DEXTER DAZE: AUG. 8-9 History

Three dozen 'Dexter Daze' in the books: Scrambling to get the history straight

By Sean Dalton
Staff Writer

Last year I attempted to write a little historical piece about Dexter Daze in an article leading up to the event.

It didn't really go how I had planned. I spoke to many great community members who had been involved with it over a number of years – some for decades – but no one could really recall how it actually started.

Not for lack of trying, of course. Everyone I spoke to took time to think hard on the matter, and some even had to let me go and call me back later.

Little did any of us know that last year was the 35th annual occurrence of the event, which once was known as "Discover Dexter Days."

No wonder people had to get back to me!

Thanks to freelance writer Elaine Owsley for doing what she does so well in bringing out and presenting the correct historical perspective.

"Thirty-five years is a good long time for a celebration to be held annually," she wrote, and I don't believe there's any disagreement with that.

That's why I'm going to refer to this year's Dexter Daze as the "Three Dozenth Dexter Days," at least in my head. Feel free to join in.

Apparently until 1971 the Dexter community had "Sidewalk Days," which makes sense considering the makeup of a community whose business district hardly requires a bike to get around, yet packs so much shopping, eating and other opportunities for commerce into such a tight area.

Apparently Elaine was hired by the Chamber of Commerce after attending one of their meetings on the second floor of the Dexter Food Locker on behalf of The Dexter Leader and was asked to serve as its secretary.

We reporters are known for taking down notes all the time, which is a good habit for a secretary to be in, so I guess it makes sense.

"It was indicative of how small Dexter was that, in the week following my 'appointment,' letters addressed to the 'Secretary of the Dexter Chamber of Commerce' began appearing in my mailbox a mile and half out of town," she wrote.

Unfortunately I don't have the historical background and institutional knowledge that Elaine possesses, but I think Dexter Daze has come an amazingly long way after attending for the first time last year.

Elaine was apparently one of the folks who spurred the evolution that culminated in what I experienced during my first exposure to the event.

In the summer of 1972, Nancy McLeod, wife of Pat, who owned the drugstore that is today's Dexter Pharmacy, helped Elaine chair the first "Discover Dexter Days."

It took place Aug. 4 and 5 and included old-time movies, a pie-baking contest, square dancing in the Ann Arbor Bank parking lot led by Glen and Marian Geer, a parade, and many other events.

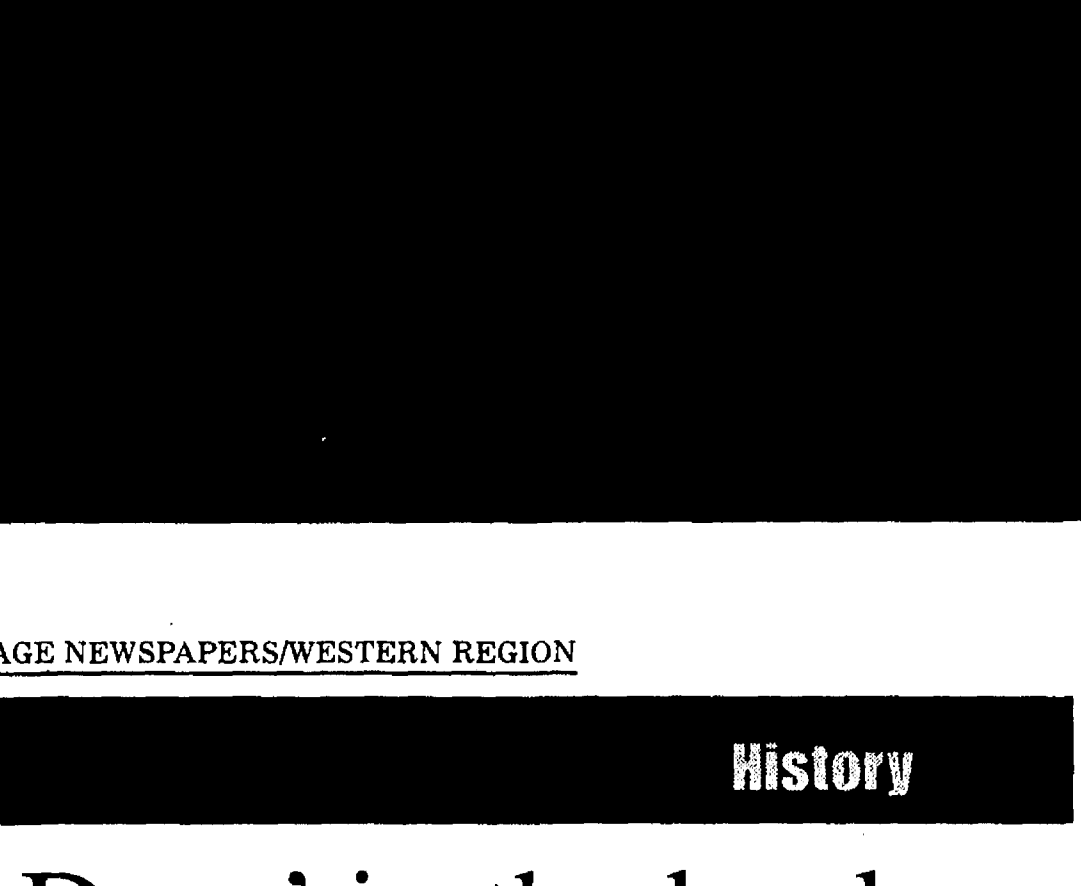

The following year, 1973, some additional events were added and the local IGA (later Busch's) advertised in the Aug. 2, 1973 Chelsea Standard that they had "Dexter Days" specials.

Local merchants were getting more involved, but many of them are now gone, according to Elaine.

The Arnolds operated a kind of dime store where Dexter Card and Gifts now stands; King's Bar was the predecessor of the Waters Pub and later Dexter's Pub. Penny's TV repair, Zeeb's Meat Market, the Goodyear's Outpost, the Sportsman's Bar, LaRosa's Confectionary/Soda Fountain/Bar, LaVallie's Drug Store, Weber's Furniture, the Needle Nook (in combination with the dry cleaners), the Coin Laundry, Dancer's, the Detroit Edison office, Hackney Hardware and several others made up Main Street Dexter and took part in the festivities, she wrote.

In 1974 Dexter's Sesquicentennial replaced Discover Dexter Days and enlarged greatly on the previous two years' events. That set the tone for the various "Days" or "Daze" that followed, Elaine recalled.

"There are still a number of us around who took active and founding parts in the original Discover Dexter Days and remember fondly those early efforts and the successful 35-year run they produced," she wrote.

I welcome those who have more of the story to contact us at The Dexter Leader for an interview. If my first failed historical article is any indication, we have to gather up the history of Dexter Daze before it is lost forever between the folds of time.

It is truly a special event and I'm looking forward to it again this year.

The art vendors were extremely friendly and personable, the food was great, and the raffle was a thrill (see "Dexter Daze has the right ticket - but I don't" from Aug. 16, 2007).

My personal favorites were the plucky little political booths and their dedicated attendants, all ready to inundate passersby with literature or speak freely of whom they like, whom they agree with or whom they simply don't understand having any business running for public office in the first place.

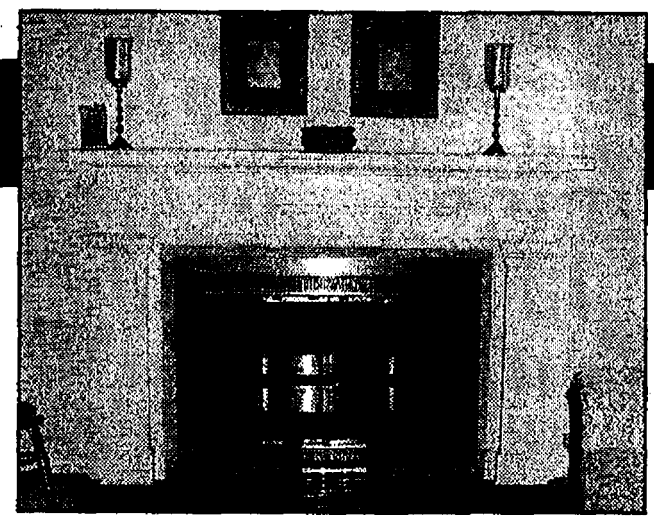

Whatever your interest, Dexter Daze has got something for you - and if it doesn't, then the village itself will.

These are the "daze" that Dexter truly shines!

DEXTER DAZE: AUG. 8-9

Gordon Hall

Walk through history on Gordon Hall tours

By Sean Dalton
Staff Writer

There's always going to be a lot of history to share with visitors to the historic Gordon Hall property and mansion, but there are also many new accomplishments thanks to community support.

The Dexter Area Historical Society has been working to restore more of the mansion over the past year and invite members of the community to include a tour on their list of Dexter Daze activities.

The Dexter Historical Museum will also be open with new exhibits from last year, according to DAHSM Event Coordinator Jennifer Colby.

"We will have the train running at the museum on Friday during that time," Colby said. "And we'll have our historical society and museum booth downtown as well."

Members of DAHSM say they are eager to share their progress and garner further support for Gordon Hall.

The society recently restored the porch, tearing up old decking and placing it with new boards. It was more than a fitting setting for the first wedding at the mansion in nearly a century that took place recently.

Much of the interior of the house has been filled with the comforts and adornments of a wonderful wedding venue, and DAHSM members believe it will be quite a sight to behold.

A new wrinkle in this year's Gordon Hall tours will be the uncovered historical background of a member of the Dexter family who lived in the mansion for a period during her life.

"We're including in the tour information about Catherine Dexter McCormick," Colby said.

Katherine Dexter was appropriately born in the village of Dexter and lived in Gordon Hall, her grandparents' mansion.

She would later move with her family to Chicago where her father, Wirt Dexter, was a prominent attorney. The family moved again when he died of a heart attack at 57 and Katherine was just 14 years old.

She and her mother Josephine moved to Boston in 1890, and four years later, her brother Samuel died of meningitis at age 25.

She married Stanley McCormick – heir to part of the McCormick family fortune - becoming Katherine Dexter McCormick, in 1904.

That year she became the second woman to graduate from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and the first woman to receive a science degree from MIT, a Bachelor of Science with major in biology.

There is much more to this remarkable woman than will be presented on the tour.

"We'll be sharing her history in the event room that we've renovated from the 'Rebuilding Together' program," Colby said.

"We renovated one apartment for events and that's kind of dedicated to Katherine Dexter McCormick."

Aside from the tour, it will also be an opportunity to participate in "Buy a Shingle, Buy a Square," which will pay for the new sheet metal roof that DASHM hopes to add to the list of renovations.

"You can buy a shingle for $30 or a square, a 10-foot section of shingles, for $3,100," said Paul Bishop.

Bishop can be contacted at 734-476-0515 for information on Gordon Hall or the fund-raising efforts.

each year as those lining the street to watch it. The parade begins promptly at 10 a.m. and typically lasts about an hour. It is a great way to start the second day of Dexter Daze. Come on out and enjoy it and bring a friend to share the experience (remember to put on your sun block)!

Following the parade on Saturday is another full day of events and activities in Monument Park. I believe this year there are a couple of magic shows and a ventriloquist to enjoy at the Gazebo from lunchtime into the early afternoon.

On Friday and Saturday evenings, a variety of bands begin playing music in the Gazebo. People gather in the social tent and on the lawn to hear everything from blues to bluegrass, rock to jazz, or some 1950's oldies. In the evenings, the social tent is a great place to meet your friends, responsibly share a cold adult beverage and enjoy the musicians in the park.

All in all, whether you are young or old, there is fun for everyone at Dexter Daze all day long. Please be safe in your travels as we have construction projects going on in the area. I welcome you to Dexter and hope you develop fond memories and stories that you can share in the years to come.

See you on 8.08.08 at Dexter Daze!

We're inviting people to come and see Saline and appreciate it for what it is. But, on the other hand, we're offering something that isn't ordinarily available — a chance for people to get together and celebrate summer," Trapp said.

For those interested in Saline's olden days, a historic trolley tour will be offered, carting residents to some of Saline's most famous historical sites, including Curtiss Mansion, the Bixby museum and the Saline Depot Museum. Members of Saline's historical society will be providing insightful commentary along the way.

"The Casino Night from last year was a big hit, and this year we're expanding it 50 percent just to meet demand," Trapp said. Proceeds of Casino Night will go to a charitable cause determined by the Rotary Club. The betting continues Saturday night with the blackjack challenge. The money betted will be fake, but the tournament is expected to be anything but.

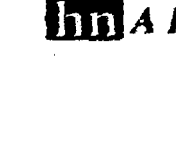

The automobile-inclined are in for a treat, as more than 125 vehicles will be rolling down North Ann Arbor Street as part of the Saline Street Machines event. Always a fan favorite and highlight of the Summerfest, restored vintage vehicles will be given awards such as Best of Show, Best Custom and Best

SUMMERFEST

Paint Job. The car show will take place from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday.

Those willing to get their toes tapping will surely get their fill listening to the five local and national musical groups scheduled to perform. The group 50 Amp Fuse, a high-energy cover band with more than 120 years of combined musical experience, will be returning Friday night after delighting the crowds last year.

"50 Amp Fuse was a huge hit last year and we're excited to have them back," Trapp said. "We also brought in Calling Marvin and we're hoping that they're a hit to and fit in with the flavor of the Summerfest."

Local music fans need not worry, as Saline's own Big Band and world-renown Saline Fiddlers also will be performing.

For kids, this year's festival offers no shortage of fun, with activities ranging from remote control car racing to face-painting. On the front lawn of Union School, a watermelon eating contest, sack races, balloon tosses, an inflatable moonwalk, and much more will be offered.

If squash and broccoli renditions of Sesame Street's "Bert and Ernie" sound intriguing, then you may want to consider entering in the vegetable art contest, sponsored by Saline's Two Twelve Arts Center. Prizes will be awarded for the most creative works of art crafted with only fruits and vegetables. Any child or adult is welcome to compete. For more information contact the Two-Twelve Arts Center at 944-2787.

Saline Summerfest offers fun for the entire family, from face painting and inflatable Moonwalk to Casino Night and live musical entertainment.

The art-hungry who didn't quite get their fill from Ann Arbor's massive art fair may be inclined to check out the more than 50 crafters stationed on South Ann Arbor Street. Additionally, local merchants and restaurants will be opening their doors to customers looking for sales and discounts.

"We're hoping people will come downtown and enjoy their city, see the merchants, participate in the activities and shop Saline," Trapp said.

Big hits from past Summerfests will be there, including the Street Machines, bands and the always-popular beer tent, Trapp said. But there are plenty of new additions to this year's festival, as well. New activities include a Saline Idol talent show from 4 to 6 p.m. Saturday inside Union School, an afternoon cover-all Bingo tournament from 1:30 to 3 p.m. and a chicken roast hosted by the Saline Fire Department.

With all that the Summerfest has to offer, Trapp hopes that the festival will continue to grow in size and participation.

"Participation has increased dramatically since we changed locations (three years ago from Mill Pond Park)," Trapp said. "We've got a combination of merchants, the Street Machines, the historical society and more. There's a lot of different organizations and people involved and a lot to do."

Trapp hopes that everyone who comes to the Summerfest finds something that suits them, whether they're a longtime Saline resident or just enjoying downtown for the first time.

"We've done a combination of both reaching out to our own community and inviting others in the surrounding Ann Arbor area to come to Saline and see what it's all about," Trapp said. "It's basically just a big community gathering at the end of the summer.

SALINE SUMMERFEST

Saline Fiddlers to perform for Summerfest crowd

The Saline Fiddlers recently returned from a tour of the East Coast with plans to entertain a local crowd from 5 to 6 p.m. Aug. 9 at the Saline Summerfest.

The fiddle group traveled from New York City to Boston to Montreal, Canada, racking up 2,200 miles while performing five gigs.

"We saw the declaration of independence proclaimed at the site of the Boston massacre," said Gina O'Brien. "It was amazing."

"Wall Street was awesome," said Desi O'Brien. "They had steel pillars protruding up and down the whole street so nobody could drive a car bomb in there. And they had security force guys in black body armor with big guns all over the place."

One of the events that captivated and awed the entire group was the fireworks in Boston on the Fourth of July.

"The fireworks were amazing," said Rachel Bonds, "the most fantastic display I have ever seen."

The group made stops at historic Bunker Hill, the house of Paul Revere, and North Church.

In New York City, they watched "The Phantom of the Opera" on Broadway, saw the Statue of Liberty, and walked the Brooklyn Bridge. In Boston, they viewed the USS Constitution, and visited Times Square.

Another memorable event for almost everyone in the group was a gig at an opera house in Booth Bay Harbor, Maine. The group played to an audience of only about 300, but the atmosphere was "absolutely electric," said Will Warner, Saline Fiddlers' general manager.

"The crowd just loved us. They got all excited, which got the kids excited and more motivated to play," he said.

In Booth Bay, the Fiddlers stayed at a hotel called the "Tug Boat Inn" and spent time on the beach and swimming in the ocean.

From Maine, members of the Saline Fiddlers went through Montreal, Canada, and then made their way home to Saline, where they will perform a hometown concert. Headliners at the festival are 50 Amp Fuse from 8 to 11 p.m. Friday and Callin Marvin from 8 to 11 p.m. Saturday. Other performers include Saline Twirlettes 6 p.m. Friday, Teboe's Karate Demonstration 6:30 p.m. Friday, Ann Arbor Dance Classics 7 p.m. Friday, Motor City Outlaws from 6 to 7 p.m. Saturday, and Loose Dogs Bite from 7 to 8 p.m. Saturday.

The fiddlers go on tour for about two weeks every summer.

For more information about the group's performance during Saline Summerfest, visit www.salinesummerfest.com.

Saline Idol

A new addition to the Saline Summerfest is the Saline Idol competition, which will spotlight the town's young talent.

The event will be held from 4 to 6 p.m. Aug. 9 at Historic Union School.

Saline's young performers are expected to wow the crowd with singing, dancing, comedy and in other ways.

Performers will compete in three age groups: kindergarten through fourth grade; fifth through eighth grades; and ninth through 12th grades. Prizes will be awarded to the top three performers in each category.

For more information, and to register online, visit www.greatlakeseducationalgroup.com.

For more information, call Brenda Said of Great Lakes Educational Group at 944-5658.
