The hows and whys of bankruptcy

By Austen Smith
Heritage Newspapers

Since last year, Michigan has been near the top of a dubious list as the state has been consistently ranked in the top five in personal bankruptcy filings.

Starting in 2005, the state saw a sharp rise in bankruptcies as families have struggled mightily with auto and manufacturing job loss coupled with the nationwide sub-prime lending housing crisis.

State and federal lawmakers now are making strides to protect consumers in the long run, but that leaves Michigan families — who are desperately trying to avoid bankruptcy and foreclosure — asking, "What about us?"

Inside

What happened?

While bankruptcy attorneys and financial advisers can split hairs as to the reasons behind most personal bankruptcies, one thing is for certain — they are on the rise and have been for several years.

Michigan has seen a total of nearly 27,500 bankruptcy filings throughout the first two financial quarters of 2008. In 2007, the state suffered almost 45,000 personal bankruptcies and just more than 46,000 business filings, according to statistics gathered from the American Bankruptcy Institute.

Other states topping the list were California (69,110), Georgia (48,636),

Local galleries invite novices to come in and explore

By Sheila Pursglove
Special Writer

Do you love art but are intimidated at the thought of visiting a gallery?

Truth be told, Gary Galvin once felt the same way – until his wife Doris began bringing artwork back from business travels, and Galvin was hooked. The couple went on to open Chelsea Gallery in downtown Chelsea.

But Galvin still understands the trepidation some people feel at stepping into an art gallery.

That's why the Galvins put a lot of time and thought into designing Chelsea Gallery as a welcoming, friendly place filled with paintings in a variety of mediums and styles, forged iron, bronze sculptures, blown, fused and stained glass, pottery and handcrafted jewelry.

"It strikes a nice ambiance, a casual atmosphere but with a high level of quality," Galvin says.

The couple added an area for enjoying desserts and coffee – from a handmade Italian espresso machine – to make the gallery even more conducive to casual visits.

"People recognize here's a place they can go and relax and enjoy a coffee as well as see the art," Galvin says.

The Chelsea Gallery.

"We also host receptions, business meetings and private parties. Often someone who has attended an event will come back because they enjoyed what they saw here, and bring friends and family."

During the summer's Sounds & Sights on Thursday Nights program, the gallery threw open its doors, offering Galvin's special "I Scream" iced coffee, and a different Artist In Residence each week.

Prices are welcoming too — as little as $8 for a handmade lapel pin, mugs and pottery for $12, custom designed handmade jewelry from $15, all the way up to paintings for several thousand.

"It's one of our strong suits – we have very reasonably priced art with a high quality," Galvin says. "We achieve that by dealing with local artists. I make people aware our artwork is original and by local artists, with a story behind every piece – some more dramatic than others.

"Whether you collect art or bottle caps, if art speaks to you, collect whatever you are drawn to. Archival is important – will it look the same in 5, 10, 50 years."

Six tips for buying art

1. Ask questions. Any reputable art dealer should "know their stuff" and be happy to share information with you
2. Buy what you like. Unless you are a collector developing a body of work, your choices should be based on what you will enjoy.
3. When pricing, compare apples with apples. Artwork may look similar, but may actually be different media created in a different way that affects the value, longevity, etc.
4. Read a book or use the Internet to learn about different types of art.
5. Go out and see "the real thing." Visit museums, galleries, and attend local art shows for a first hand view of the differences between various types of art.
6. Have it framed properly to preserve the color and value of the art.

Victim of fatal crash remembered as 'honest-to-goodness nice kid'

By Edward Freundl
Staff Writer

The death of another young person has shaken the Chelsea community again, replaying a tragic scene that has repeated itself far too often over the past several years.

Rodgers

Ben Rodgers, 22, lost his life early Saturday in a single-car crash in Lima Township.

Michigan State Police troopers continue to investigate the crash, which occurred at about 1:30 a.m. Saturday on Fletcher Road just south of Jerusalem Road.

Benjamin Roy Rodgers was the son of Doug and Sue Rodgers of Chelsea, and older brother of Austin and Alyssa Rodgers.

Although he graduated from Chelsea High School four years ago, Ben's death had a profound and immediate impact on his former teachers and coaches.

"I've known Ben and his family for quite a few years through wrestling and football, and the one thing I can say about Ben is that for as much as he loved to lift weights, his heart was always his biggest muscle," said Adam French.

"In his senior year of wrestling Ben was one of the leaders of the team. He was a guy that everyone looked up to and counted on. He was a constant hard worker and never gave up.

French recalled Rodgers' pleasant personality.

"He was the kind of kid you liked to like. He always made me smile with his jokes and his goofy behavior. He was an honest-to-goodness, nice kid.

"I know I will miss him a great deal and my heart goes out to his family, who did an excellent job raising a lovable boy."

Wrestling coach Kerry Kargel said he, too, will remember Rodgers for his positive attitude and indomitable will to win.

"Ben was a good kid. He would do anything for you, he was just a really nice person," Kargel said.

"Before wrestling his opponent Ben would say, 'I know I can do it, coach.' I'll always remember that."

CHS Principal Julie Deppner said Monday that several CHS staff and students planned to attend Wednesday's funeral services at the Chelsea Fairgrounds.

"Ben was definitely a very well-liked student, an outstanding athlete in football and wrestling," Deppner said.

"He made an impact on many school students and teachers. Any students who have permission from their parents to attend, we would be supportive of them."

One year later: Montanges focused on the future

Chelsea's Ron Montange is a tough guy.

As he walks out behind the counter of his "Go Brew" coffeeshop in Stockbridge, he reaches out his hand and offers a firm handshake. His smile is that of an old friend.

TERRY JACOBY

Ron opens up a menu and offers his guest plenty of choices. He then opens up his heart and offers his guest a look inside what his family has been going through since his son Mike was seriously injured in Iraq last August.

Mike was serving his third tour of duty in Iraq when the Humvee he was riding in hit an improvised explosive device. He suffered serious injuries to his leg, hip and spinal cord.

After months at Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington D.C., he was transferred to the Hunter Holmes McGuire VA Medical Center in Richmond, Va.

As tough as Ron is and as strong as he appears, there are moments when emotion wins out. His voice will crack for a moment. Words will be tough to find. Tears will begin to show.

It happens when he stops briefly to realize that this is his son we are talking about. His boy that has been to hell and back, even if Mike doesn't see it that way.

Ron likes to talk about how tough Mike is and how "he's just looking ahead and looking forward to getting on with his life."

But sometimes Ron reverts to being a dad and feels his son's pain, even though he knows he can't imagine what Mike has gone through and is still going through.

That might be the hardest part of all this. The one-year anniversary of this attack on his son has come and gone, but Mike hasn't gone anywhere.

He's still fighting. Still coping. And still looking forward to "getting on with the rest of his life."

Mike, 29, was a staff sergeant in his 11th year in the Army. He had just re-enlisted to make it an even 20 years only a month before the incident.

Mike has now gone through 45 surgeries, with more still to come.

Honoring Mike

A special evening honoring Chelsea's Mike Montange, who was seriously injured in Iraq, will take place from 7 p.m. to 12 a.m. on Sept. 20 at the Dexter American Legion.

The evening will feature live music from several local bands. Tickets will be $10, and money raised will go to local veterans.

ART

If newcomers aren't sure what to ask, the Galvins and their staff can help select a suitable piece. Customers can even "test drive" art work on a trial basis, and Galvin will take several pieces to their home or office for an onsite trial to ensure the best "fit."

Art is not elitist

River Gallery, a traditional fine art gallery in Chelsea founded in 2000 by Patti Schwarz, has a similar Art on Approval policy, letting customers take artwork home to try out.

"Any gallery that wants to help people love, acquire and enjoy art will do this," says gallery director Deb Greer. "If you love it, keep it. If it doesn't work, you can bring it back."

It's an old-fashioned view that galleries are "snooty," says Greer, who visits many cities and art galleries each year. But should you walk into a gallery where staff members are not friendly and attentive, not informative, don't reach out and welcome you, then turn around and walk out, she says.

"Art is not elitist," she says. "It's fun and enjoyable.

"There's no way to discover what kind of art you like until you go looking. Go popping into galleries and enjoy yourself."

Michigan – and Washtenaw County in particular – have thousands of good artists, who display in local galleries, she says.

"So you're helping to support artisans in the Michigan economy, as well as getting something esthetically pleasing for your home or office.

"The art you buy is there for generations to come, even a piece that may only cost around $100 – it's cool, it's original, you share it with your children and grandchildren."

RIGHT: John Mitchell Sr. has owned the Downstairs Gallery at 105-1/2 S. Main St. since May 2007. He displays his own oil paintings, as well as work by local artists Janet Alford, Marsy Doan, Joan Kelley, Sue Craig, L&L Design and Chelsea Signs.

Customers should ask if the art is an original, one of a kind, or a reproduction. "Reproductions can be more affordable, some are good and some are not," Greer says.

Greer and Schwarz do a lot of corporate work but residential customers are their main buyers. Prices range from under $100 for a wood block print, or piece of glass art, all the way up to expensive paintings.

"If you choose a piece of art that reflects your sensibilities, it's going to work," Greer says. "For instance, if your house is woodsy, you'll most likely choose a landscape. If you have a modern house, you'll probably enjoy a contemporary piece.

"Art adds to interior design, when you bring it in the door it says something special. Buying art should tell a story – for example, you celebrated an anniversary by visiting a gallery and buying a piece, or a painting of China reminds you of your father who loved to read books about the Orient."

Develop your own taste

Victoria Schon, oil painter, art historian and owner of the Daisy Lake Art Gallery in Dexter, says the environment of a gallery should be warm and friendly, encouraging people to come in and browse and learn something new about art and artists.

Schon tries to create an experience similar to enjoying fine art in the home.

"My personal goal is to create an art presence here in Dexter," she says. "I'm looking for the very best local artists. I like to talk about the artists, what makes them unique, the mediums they use.

"It takes time for people to develop a sense of their own taste and esthetics, so it's important not to bombard them. Some customers come back a few times before making a choice, especially for a more expensive piece."

Daisy Lake has original items starting at around $60. "We have an amazing price range," Schon says. "Having a wide range is a good way to attract customers."

Explore the art

Mary Bowe, owner of the Side Door Gallery in Dexter, knows some people view art galleries as 'hoity-toity.'

"I can understand that, but people shouldn't feel intimidated by art – especially in this area, this isn't New York City! Visit galleries and enjoy them, explore the art," she says.

Chelsea Area Police Briefs

Credit card/ATM fraud

On Aug. 20 a 45-year-old Chelsea woman reported to police that her credit card had been stolen and used to withdraw cash at several ATMs.

According to a police report, the card was used June 24 in Hillsdale County to take $100 and in Grass Lake on July 4 and 5 to take $40 each time.

The victim contacted her credit union, which confirmed a total of about $700 in fraudulent activity. The victim told police she kept the card in a dresser and the last time she saw it was March 1. The PIN was written on a piece of paper and kept in another part of the room, and that was also missing.

The victim said her brother and girlfriend live with her, as does her teenage son and her older sister.

According to the report, the victim said she believed a family member took the card and number.

The credit union provided ATM surveillance video in order to identify suspects and the victim said she wanted to prosecute, the report stated.

The woman was also the victim of a similar incident in October 2006, but video was not available at the locations where the card was used.

Shoplifting arrest

A 47-year-old Dexter man was apprehended at 8:15 p.m. Aug. 21 by Polly's Country Market staff for trying to steal two bottles of vodka and a sirloin steak.

According to a police report, a stocker observed the suspect put the bottles in his pockets and notified a manager, who stopped the man on his way out the door.

After a search they recovered the vodka and steak with a total value of $21.61.

The suspect said he took the items because he had no money and initially told police he hitchhiked to the store from Dexter, but later told them he rode a bicycle.

The victim smelled of intoxicants and registered a .283 percent blood alcohol content on a preliminary breath test.

A records check showed he was wanted on a probation violation, so he was arrested and turned over to his probation officer.

Police also issued a trespass warning and told him if he returned to the store he would be arrested, the report stated.

Disorderly conduct

Police were called the Chelsea Community Hospital emergency room at 7 p.m. Aug. 23, where they found a 33-year-old Scio Township woman being combative, loud and belligerent.

According to a police report, the woman had tied to force her way into the psychiatric unit to see her husband, who had been committed earlier.

A doctor, several nurses and a security guard tried to subdue her and told her she could not see her husband because she was intoxicated.

Witnesses said they tried to calm her but she was being threatening and uncooperative, and disrupting other patients.

The woman wanted to be checked into the unit, but the doctor refused because the woman had already been discharged from the ER, the report stated.

She said she had no one to call and no way to get home, so an officer gave her a ride home to Scio Farms Estates.

Hospital staff requested that a report of the incident be forwarded to the prosecutor's office for review.

Occupational injury

At 11:03 a.m. Aug. 29 a 24-year-old Holly man sustained serious injury while trying to remove a flagpole at the Washington Street Education Center, between the Administration Building and the Chelsea Senior Center.

According to a police report, the man, working for a contractor hired to remove the pole, was in the bucket of a boom truck about 11 feet above the ground over the pole, which had been cut off to a height of about 2 feet.

A tow strap was attached to the bucket and the pole to pull it out of the ground but part of the bucket broke and the man fell, and the right side of his head struck the pole remnant before he hit the ground.

A co-worker said the man was advised to wear a safety harness but he did not.

He was transported to the University of Michigan for his injuries, where his spleen was removed, but a CT scan showed no further injury to his head.

Drunken driving arrest

At 4:28 p.m. Aug. 29 an officer on patrol was advised to watch for a possible reckless or drunken driver.

The officer saw the suspect vehicle pass by and he followed, and noticed it swerving.

After the vehicle veered into the other lane and almost struck an oncoming car, the officer made a traffic stop and the car hit the curb, according to a police report.

The officer noticed the odor of alcohol coming from the driver, a 72-year-old Hamburg Township woman.

The woman denied drinking, but failed several sobriety tests. She registered a.162 percent blood alcohol content, twice the legal limit for driving, the report stated.

The officer arrested the woman for Operating While Intoxicated-second offense, but did not handcuff her because she uses a walker, according to the report.

Breaking and entering

A homeowner in the 200 block of Buchanan Street notified police that his house had been broken into and his laptop computer stolen on Aug. 19.

According to a police report, the 30-year-old Chelsea man said he left at 1:45 p.m. and came home at 12:25 a.m. Aug. 20 to find the glass in the back door had been smashed to gain entry to the house.

The officers discovered blood on the broken glass and fingerprints on the medicine cabinet door, which was ajar, the report stated.

Chelsea High School

Which 'old high school' do you mean?

By Jan Bernath
Guest Writer

The last class to graduate from the 'old' Chelsea High School will gather for its 50th Class Reunion Sept 19-21 People often refer to the high school campus on Washington Street as the "old high school."

But the members of the Class of 1958 know better The class graduated on June 4,1958 from the high school previously locat ed on Harrison Street Although used as a junior high school after 1958, no other high school class graduated from the school buildings that occupied East Street between Park and Harrison streets

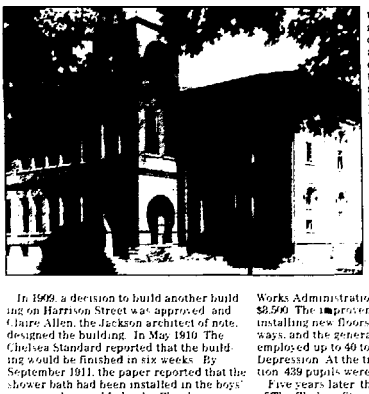
Apartments now stand on the property previously occupied by the Chelsea School District for over 100 years

Many of the classmates attended rural schools or the St. Mary Catholic Church School on Congdon Street through the sixth grade During the first year in the high school building on Harrison Street the sev enth graders who attended the elementary school located on the corner of Park and East streets welcomed their new classmates to become the Class of 1958.

Although sylvan School District first elected a Board in 1834, hired teachers and built several buildings in town at several locations, it was not until 1860 that the site on Park and East streets was donated to the school district

It was then that Elisha Congdon built the first school under contract, but it was demolished and replaced in 1873 with a structure that housed kindergarten through 12th grades This is the building where many of the Class of 1958 attended kinder garten through fifth grade

In 1909, a decision to build another build ing on Harrison Street was approved and Claire Allen, the Jackson architect of note, designed the building. In May 1910 The Chelsea Standard reported that the build ing would be finished in six weeks By September 1911, the paper reported that the shower bath had been installed in the boys' room made possible by the Flanders Company's donation of the fixtures. Superintendent Hendry bought eight large reproductions of famous paintings to deco rate the auditori um of the new school

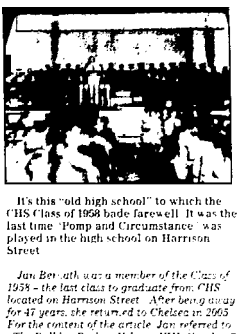


Time marched on until a special election in March 1926 narrowly approved the financing of a gym nasium – it passed by six votes The west wall of the high school build ing and the east side of the elemen tary school building were used when con structing the 51 x 101 feet gymnasium

A stage was built at the west end of the gymnasium so that it could be used as an auditorium. Folding chairs were placed on the gym floor for a seating capacity of 80 people. The rock found during the excavation for the building was placed in front of the gymnasium on the cor ner of East and Harrison streets Now the rock resides in Pierce Park with many coats of paint'

In March 1934, The Chelsea Standard reported that the buildings would be renovated as a Public Works Administration project costing $8,500 The improvements of replastering installing new floors, baseboards and stair ways, and the general rehabilitation employed up to 40 to 45 men during the Depression At the time of the rehabilita tion 439 pupils were enrolled

Five years later the Jan. 19, 1939 edition of The Chelsea Standard published a draw ing of a proposed addition to the Chelsea High School – immediately east of the build ing However, the Board decided not to sub mit the proposal to the voters due to tax limitation At the annual meeting six months later, people voted to transfer $5,600 from the general fund to the building and site fund as well as to add one mill extra for only one year With this creative solution the home economics and science section of the building was added. With immediate efficiency, the first classes were held in the new addition in January 1940.



It's this "old high school" to which the CHS Class of 1958 bade farewell It was the last time 'Pomp and Circumstance' was played in the high school on Harrison Street

Jan Bernath, was a member of the Class of 1958 – the last class to graduate from CHS located on Harrison Street After being away for 47 years, she returned to Chelsea in 2005 For the content of the article Jan referred to "The Bulldog Barks" Volume VIII, Number 7, published March 1959 All pictures are cour tesy of the Chelsea Area Historical Society.

Psychiatric patient escapes hospital

By Edward Freundl
Staff Writer

A man who escaped Sept. 2 from Chelsea Community Hospital while being evaluated for psychiatric problems was back in custody minutes later.

However, during those few minutes the Chelsea School District went into a lockdown of all buildings on the first full day of the new school year.

"We actually locked down the entire district," said School Superintendent David Killips.

"Police informed us that a patient walked away from psych unit at the hospital, but they located him 10 or 15 minutes later."

Killips added that the district has worked closely with the police department on a school safety plan.

"We work very hard to keep the schools safe," he said. "The chief called me immediately, and we were in constant contact."

Police Chief Ed Toth Jr. said officers quickly apprehended the man a short distance from the hospital.

"We were dispatched at 8:31 (a.m.), arrived at 8:32, and he was in custody at 8:40," Toth said. "Once we got our tracking dog out, he led us right to the guy."

The man was captured on Washington Street just east of Flanders, on the northwest side of the Washington Street Education Center.

The proximity of the situation to the schools and district offices led to the lockdown.

The man was taken to "another medical facility," Toth added.

Nancy Siegrist, Director of Behavioral Health Services at CCH, said the hospital takes "every possible precaution" to ensure the safety of patients.

"This includes having a secure psychiatric unit with well-trained and adequate staffing, as well as a thorough screening process to evaluate whether patients are an appropriate admission for our program," Siegrist said.

"We also work collaboratively with local law enforcement to assist us when needed. They have always been very responsive, and respectful to our patients and staff."

The chief confirmed that the subject was a Chelsea resident, but could not release his name or age due to medical privacy concerns.

"This guy wasn't a prisoner, he was there for observation; but he became violent and decided he didn't want to be there anymore," Toth said.

"He burst through a 6-foot by 4-foot, double-pane window. He's a big guy, and hit it so darn hard it took the frame right out of the wall."

The subject was in the psychiatric unit by his own choice, Toth added.

Killips expressed relief that the situation was brought under control so quickly, and their procedures proved adequate.

"It was very precautionary but that's OK; it worked out well for us this time," he said.

Jog-A-Thon

The annual "Jog-A-Thon" is between 9 a.m. and noon on Saturday, Sept 20. The event is put on by the PTO for the students at North Creek and Pierce Lake schools and is fun and helps the kids get out and exercise. The kids walk or jog as many laps around the track at the Chelsea football stadium.

All of the participants will receive a ribbon and the five students from each grade with the most laps will receive a medal and be announced at school. The class with the most participants will receive passes to a varsity football game. Aberdeen Bike & Fitness will be providing healthy snacks for participants and the event will go on rain or shine. The entire family is invited to attend.

CAFA, HAZMAT teams respond to illegal dumping incident

By Sean Dalton
Staff Writer

A report of three barrels of an unknown material dumped on state-owned land just east of M-52 prompted a response from the Chelsea Area Fire Authority and county HAZMAT teams.

"People were reporting an odor," CAFA Chief Jim Payeur said at the scene at about 4:30 p.m. Friday. "Our people arrived and conducted initial scene assessments, but we weren't able to determine what it was."

At Payeur's request, Washtenaw County and Ann Arbor Hazardous Waste and Materials (HAZMAT) teams arrived on the scene and were carrying out containers for the barrels while dressed in full environmental suits.

"They're going to go in, conduct a cleanup and then at that point the (Department of Natural Resources) is going to get us a cleanup company to come in and remove the ground soil," Payeur said.

First responders on the scene were immediately approached by people in the area and told of the odor.

"The people passing by that actually reported it to us saw the barrels and reported an odor and that's what started things," Payeur said.

Officials on the scene had no suspicions as to what the material may have been, although it was apparently a liquid substance.

The barrels were left along a small dirt path that winds back into the woods before curving back to Waterloo Road, according to Payeur.

"It looks like somebody just backed up and shoved everything off," he said. "There's a little spillage and then there's three barrels dumped."

Payeur said that such incidents are unfortunately not a rare occurrence.

"Stuff like this goes on all the time," he said. "But it's been awhile for us out here."

Washtenaw County HAZMAT officials were in the process of "over-backing" the material, or placing each of the three 55-gallon drums into large, sealed yellow containers called over-back drums.

After that they clean up the soil directly near the barrels and take samples for testing to determine exactly what the barrels contained.

On-scene lab kits showed that the substance was flammable; primarily a "paint material" with another substance the consistency of Bondo automobile body filler, Payeur said Friday.

Payeur said there are numerous environmental concerns, especially with residents in the area.

"There are sporadic houses right around here; that's actually state property, but we're concerned, obviously, with ground water contamination or any kind of leakage or runoff," he said.

Payeur said the perpetrators of such illegal dumping are rarely apprehended.

"Most of the time we never know who in the heck it is ... they come in and they dump and they leave.

"Unless somebody sees it (and) gets a license plate, we just don't know. Typically they'll go after secluded areas like this, where there's very little population, dump it and then leave. It happens quite frequently."

Payeur recommended that people who spot such activity do not conduct an investigation themselves.

"If you see something and you don't know what it is, don't touch it, don't get it on you and don't go up and smell it," he said.

"This is why we have these guys with gas masks going in and the protection that they have on. Some of this stuff can do physical harm (and) long-term injuries in a matter of seconds.

"Some of this stuff in very small quantities can kill you, and if nothing else it can have some long-term health effects, both to your respiratory system or some of this stuff, if it's corrosive, it can actually eat away at your skin."

County and Ann Arbor Hazardous Waste and Materials teams arrived on the scene.

MIKE

"He's going to lose his left leg," Ron says. "We knew this might happen so it's not a surprise. There is always a risk of infection so it's been tough. But Mike has been amazing."

Ron and his wife Nancy have visited Mike this summer and report that his spirits are still high.

"He e-mails me almost every day and sometimes several times a day," Ron says. "We talk on the phone all the time. He wants to get a place up north on a lake when he finally gets out. That's his dream now. And there is no reason why he can't do that."

Ron said Mike is a hit at the VA Med Center.

"He's the practical joker," Ron says, shaking his head and smiling. "He keeps the nurses and doctors on their toes. He gets around on a flat cart and drives with a joystick. He likes that he can get out of his room and have some fun."

Mike's spirits really got a lift when the Army changed his brother Jeff's orders and sent him to nearby Fort Belvoir in Virginia in order to help with his brother's recovery.

Jeff, who had been stationed in Alaska, was scheduled for another tour of Iraq earlier this year, but Ron and Nancy's perseverance paid off.

"We owe a lot to Rep. Tim Walberg," Ron said. "He won't take any credit, but he helped make this happen. And we are grateful. We knew Jeff being there would be a great help to Mike and his recovery. And that's exactly what's happened.

"Jeff spends two days a week with Mike and also visits with his family on the weekends. Mike really looks forward to them coming. And it helps Nancy and I knowing that Jeff is around to help him."

Not only has Jeff helped Mike in his recovery, but the brothers recently launched their own business.

"Mike and Jeff have launched a Web site for stock investors called Investment Nation.biz," Ron said. "They have been working on this since Jeff moved to Virginia with his family this past February. It's really a good idea and they know what they're doing."

The new business is based on Mike's philosophy of looking forward.

"Mike doesn't look back," Ron says. "He only talks about the future and how he's going to live his life and what he wants to do. He's very good on computers and is working on college courses on the Internet.

"The system is in place to help wounded soldiers financially. There are a lot of forms and there is a process to go through, but the process does exist and not everyone knows about it. Mike will be taken care of financially for the rest of his life but don't think he's going to be sitting around. He's not that type of kid."

Ron said Mike's unit recently returned from Iraq and many friends have stopped by to visit their "hero."

"They named a study hall building in Baghdad after Mike," Ron said, those emotions seeping out for a brief moment. "That tells you what they think of him."

Mike faces another six months in the hospital and then rehab will follow.

"Mike didn't shed a tear when they told him he might have to lose his leg," Ron said. "When he calls me or Nancy, he doesn't talk about what's going on with him. He wants to know about the shop and the family and the weather.

"Mike never had any fears growing up. He doesn't have any now. He's doing what he needs to do to get out of there and get on with his life. That's what he's focused on now."

Mike, who has two young children (April, 6; and Chase, 4), attended Chelsea High School through his junior year. Then he was home-schooled the final semester of his senior year so he could graduate sooner and join the Army when he was just 17 years old.

One day recently Mike received a special visitor. It was a U.S. Navy admiral. Before he left he asked Mike if there was anything he could get him or anything he wanted. Mike said a model of a submarine would be cool to have.

"He likes to build things," Ron said. "So he thought a model of a sub would be a cool thing to build."

A few days later a model of the USS Massachusetts, one of the Navy's latest high-tech submarines, was brought into his room.

"The guy who brought it in said it was from the admiral," Ron says. "They took the cover off and there was a finished scale model of the submarine under glass. He said there are only three of these in existence. One goes to the contractor who built it, one goes to the captain of the sub and one goes to you."

A special gift for a special person.

After distinguishing himself in the classroom and athletic field, Rodgers was continuing his family's farming tradition.

As a teenager he was active in 4H, the Steer Club and Lamb Club.

After graduating from Central Michigan University he farmed full-time with his grandfather, Bob Heller, partnered with him in selling seed corn for Midwest Seeds, and was active with the Washtenaw County Livestock and Dairy Council.

Off the farm, Rodgers also worked full-time for Sue McCalla and Ron Stoffer at McCalla Feeds for the past couple of years.

Stoffer said Rodgers is "surely going to be missed."

"He was a great kid, he was a pleasure to work with; he had a farming background so he understood it and was somebody I could talk to about it," Stoffer said.

"As a 22-year-old kid there's probably not many who had the responsibilities he did - helping his grandpa on the farm, then working here full-time.

"He was smart, friendly, happy-go-lucky; I can't say enough good about him."

Official information is hard to come by in fatal crashes. Because the crash will be under investigation for some time, police can release few details.

What is known is that state police, Chelsea Area Fire Authority and Huron Valley Ambulance arrived on the scene and found two male victims pinned inside a 1996 Dodge Intrepid.

Troopers believe the vehicle veered off the roadway before rolling over, partially ejecting the driver and striking a tree.

The passenger, whose identity has not been released, was removed from the vehicle by CAFA personnel and transported to the University of Michigan Hospital.

He was listed in stable condition, according to a police report released Monday.

Rodgers was pronounced dead at the scene, the report stated.

Troopers said neither occupant was wearing a seatbelt, and believe alcohol and speed were factors in the crash.

Police and rescue personnel are not immune to what they find when they come upon such a scene, particularly in a small town where so many people know each other, said CAFA Chief Jim Payeur.

"We respond on a lot of crashes, and it's always worse on emergency personnel," Payeur said.

"We hate to see young people who are injured or killed; it's hard on all the responding agencies."

Put real change into campaign

It is time for presidential candidates John McCain and Barack Obama to practice what they preach.

Mr. McCain claims he is a maverick and Mr. Obama claims this election "is not about me, but about you."

Tim Skubick

So prove it. They can do that by naming their key cabinet appointments before the election. That includes secretary of state, attorney general, secretary of defense and even chief of staff.

Given the performance of Donald Rumsfeld, who ran roughshod over the military and dragged the country into the war in Iraq, voters have a right to know who will sit in that secretary of defense seat.

The current administration has changed attorneys general so many times, it looks like Jim Leyland yanking pitchers left and right. The AG is the top law enforcement officer in the country. It's a disservice to the voters to keep the appointees secret.

Even the chief of staff should be announced now. Most folks don't know this person controls the flow of information. He or she makes decisions that can determine who is the last person to see the president before a critical decision is made.

Just because naming appointees is the right thing to do, it doesn't mean they will do it. Watch for lame excuses: If they claim "It's never been done before," that's a dodge. If they say they don't have the time to decide, that doesn't cut it, either.

If they admit they won't do it for fear it might cost them some votes, at least that would be an honest response.

Reform No. 2 would also be groundbreaking. The two men should set aside half an hour a week to talk to each other. No staff, no spouses — nobody. Just the two of them exchanging concerns on what they hear and see on the stump. It might lower the negative rhetoric from both camps if the candidates at the top decided that enough is enough.

In those private conversations, they could agree to help each other on some of the false impressions out there.

McCain is taking some heat for saying he doesn't know much about the economy. Be honest, who in the heck does?

However, in a recent survey, 55 percent of the voters said that they had a major problem with his admission.

His remark was simplistic and does not take into account that McCain could select some great economic advisers to complement his weaknesses.

(While we are at all of this, the chief economic advisers for both men should be revealed in advance, as well).

Obama could come to McCain's defense by saying, "Look it. I will denounce those economic attacks if you'll return the favor. You know that my tax increase is not across the board, even though your commercials leave that impression. Just tell everyone, the tax hike is on those making over $250,000 a year."

Yes, all of this is very unorthodox and, yes, all the campaign advisers would say the two are crazy for adopting these changes.

But if McCain is such a maverick and if Obama believes the election is about you, the voters, then they should just say, "Yes we can. And yes we will."

Guest Columnist:

Is it time for the 28th Amendment?

BY PENDA HAIR

Rarely, if ever, has an election captured global attention like this one. The race for the White House is a topic of conversation at dinner tables, in marketplaces and halls of worship and on news broadcasts around the world. Democracy is on display and the message is hopeful, forward-looking and bright.

Here at home, the historic nature of this election is inspiring a kind of democratic renaissance. Registration and turnout are expected to reach historic highs.

But behind this encouraging — and even inspiring — display, there is a more troubling reality. Instead of one democracy, we have closer to 13,000 separate sets of rules and regulations across the country about who can vote and how they do so.

The voting process is different state to state and county to county.

This year, millions of Americans will once again go to the polls believing that their legal right to vote is protected, but what you may find surprising is that it's not.

One of the most significant things we learned about our democracy in the Bush v. Gore contest of 2000 was the Supreme Court's insistence that Americans have "no federal constitutional right to vote." In other words, the court said that we (the people) have only the voting privileges our states choose to grant us.

Yes, our Constitution explicitly prohibits discrimination in granting the franchise based on a person's race, sex, or (adult) age in the 15th, 19th, and 26th amendments, but those protections are incomplete. States and other governments can and do disenfranchise individuals and groups of citizens, legally, as long they do it without provable bias.

The problem with our democracy, however, is not sensational. It is fundamental.

Photo identification requirements in Indiana kept 12 nuns in their 80s and 90s without driver's licenses from voting in the primary there this May.

In New York City, in 2004, Asian American voters were routinely asked for identification when trying to vote — even though city laws didn't require voters to have an ID.

In Florida, in 2004, election officials rejected thousands of voter registration applications because potential voters failed to check a box on the application that duplicated information that had already been asked.

We document instances like these in our new report: "In Pursuit of an Affirmative Right to Vote." The patchwork of registration and voting requirements and practices undermines the very vitality and security of our democracy. Advancement Project has fought to address these disparities for years in the courtroom and at state houses.

But the fight is exhausting: a new challenge seems to emerge after every victory is celebrated.

It is time to engage in serious constitutional politics on behalf of the right to vote. This is the only way to redeem the chaos of the 2000 presidential election and to begin to ensure that such an assault on democracy will never be repeated.

The vote is the bedrock of our democracy. No wonder the struggle to attain it has caused men and women to risk their lives - here and around the world. In 2008, an energized electorate is once again expected to turn out in large numbers in November. But we must be clear about the implications of living in a nation where federal law doesn't guarantee the right to vote to anyone — millions of eligible voters who cast votes may not get their votes counted because of the unnecessary rules in states throughout the country that impede the voting process.

It is time to rectify this patchwork of bizarre and erratic state customs. We need to put the right to vote in the Constitution.

This would establish full voting rights so all Americans can help decide all laws that govern them. The right to vote must become a right guaranteed to all American citizens and not a privilege controlled by a few. It is time for a 28th Amendment to the Constitution.

Penda Hair is co-director of Advancement Project, a national civil rights organization dedicated to the struggle for racial justice. "In Pursuit of an Affirmative Right to Vote," can be downloaded at www.advancementproject.org.

Our take: Primary results show rough road

The late Lyn Nofziger, former political director for President Reagan, said he believed that "once a year we should hang someone in government as an example to his fellows."

The late Tip O'Neill, the Massachusetts Democrat and former speaker of the U.S. House, once observed that "all politics are local."

If you take those two sentiments and combine them with the Aug. 5 primary election results, any baby-kissing, hand-shaking incumbent who's on the ballot in November should be shaking in his or her well-worn door-to-door shoes.

There's no question that voters are angry. Nationally, President Bush's approval rating hovers just under 30 percent. Congress, now controlled by Democrats, is viewed with approval by fewer than 20 percent.

Voter anger is especially notable in Michigan after years of job losses, a crumbling housing market and high unemployment exacerbated by partisan bickering in Lansing that has produced tax increases and no real substantial fixes.

Our state Legislature is collectively viewed as inept, and our charming photogenic governor is about as popular with the business community as a clown at a funeral.

Voters let their anger show in the Aug. 5 primary when it came time to pick their nominees for November for offices ranging from township trustee to Congress. Both parties had their incumbents challenged, and in some cases driven from nomination for another term at local and state levels.

That should be a wake-up call for anyone expecting re-election out of a sense of entitlement — Democrat or Republican.

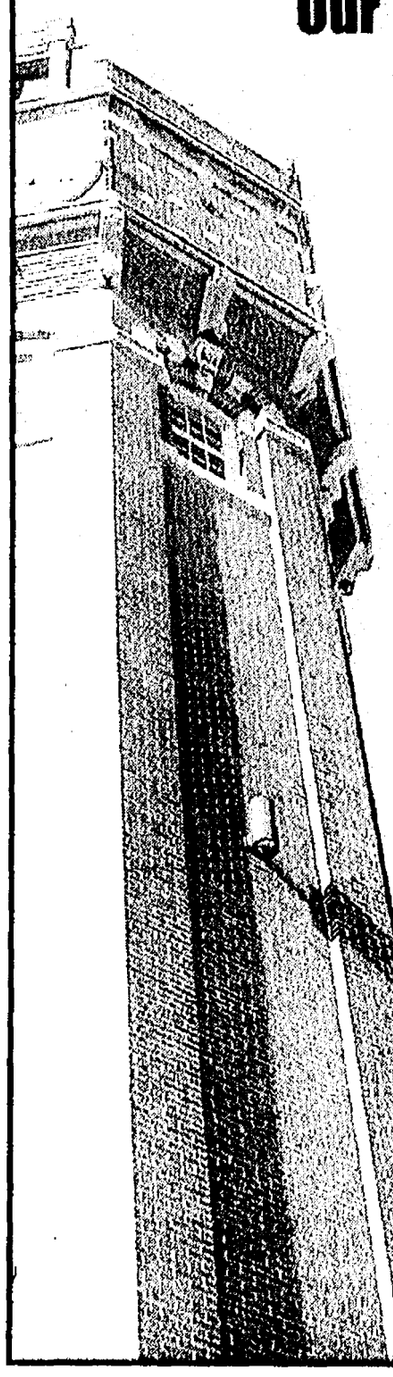
Our Chelsea History



Who was "Hooky" Brooks?

A. A left-handed Chelsea billiard player.
B. 1920s professional basketball player from Chelsea.
C. A World War I veteran who lost one hand.
D. A champion athlete, then dentist from University of Michigan.

Answers B and D. Glenn Brooks, graduated in 1920, was an all-around Chelsea high school athlete. He was a state champion in shot put and discus. He played pro basketball with the Polowsky Post in Detroit, before the Pistons, to help put himself through U of M dental school. Brooks became the president of the National Dental Association. After retirement, Brooks met, hunted and fished with a fellow named Ted Williams, the last baseball player to bat .400 in a major league.

Brooks' "Hooky" nickname did not come from perfecting a great hook shot, it is said the name came from asking his mother for a "cookie" at 16-months, pronouncing the request as a small child might.

BANKRUPTCY

Ohio (49,371) and Illinois (40,416).

The majority of the bankruptcy filings in 2007 were Chapter 7, in which all debt is discharged and exempt property such as $30,000 in equity for the debtor's home, vehicles up to $3,200, work tools up to $20,000 and more is protected.

There were 32,000 Chapter 7 filings in 2007, as compared to just more than 12,000 Chapter 13, where debt repayment is placed on a schedule over a three- to five-year period.

Stuart Gold, a Southfield bankruptcy attorney with more than 30 years experience, says Michigan is currently No. 1 across the country for Chapter 7 bankruptcy filings. He says the state of the economy and real estate market have consumers being "attacked from all sides."

"(Potential debtors) are not able to tap into the equity lines of their home any more," Gold said. "Or they are not able to pay back previous loans because of job losses or reduction of hours and income; or now they have to pay one-third more for food, and one-third more for gas."

Gold attributes the steady rise in personal bankruptcies to the seemingly perpetual downward slope of the Michigan housing market. Even though bankruptcy and foreclosure can be mutually exclusive for some families, he says it's often the home that becomes a potential filer's biggest liability as more and more families are finding themselves owing more money on their mortgage than what the home is now worth.

"I am seeing more clients coming into my office because they have a deficiency balance on their home," Gold says. "It used to be that it was very rare that would happen because the home — no matter what — typically was worth at least as much as the purchase price.

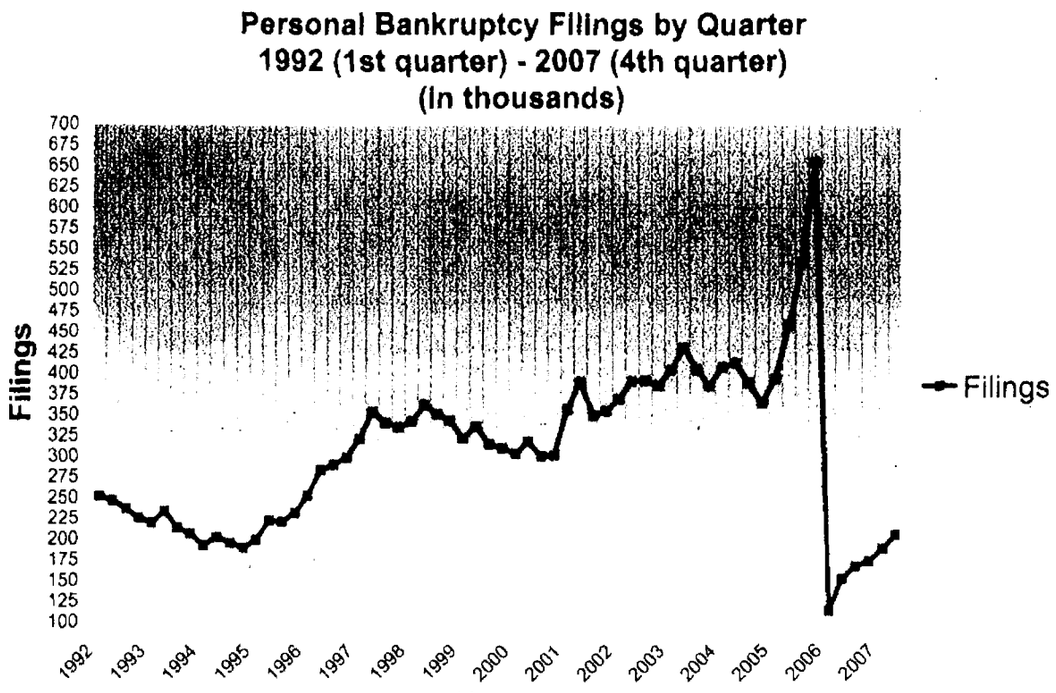
"But because of the home values that are constantly going down, they are now having deficiency. I see clients come in here who owe on a $150,000 mortgage, but the house is only worth $120,000."

A Sept. 5 article from the Associated Press reported that a record-breaking 9 percent, or more than 4 million, of Americans are now behind on their mortgage payments and are facing foreclosure. Michigan was among eight states listed where home foreclosures rose dramatically in the first quarter of 2008.

Gold also says that he has seen a disturbing increase in senior citizens filing bankruptcy, mostly because of medical costs.

A 2005 article written by bankruptcy expert and Harvard Law professor Elizabeth Warren indicated that a study showed almost half of all personal bankruptcy filings were medical related. In the article, Warren wrote the most disturbing part of the study, which was done on more than 1,750 Americans, actually had health insurance, but yet they were still getting crushed under the weigh of astronomical health-care costs.

"How did illness bankrupt middle-class Americans with health insurance? For some, high co-payments, deductibles, exclusions from coverage and other loopholes left them holding the bag for thousands of dollars in out-of-pocket costs when serious illness struck. But even families with Cadillac coverage were often bankrupted by medical problems," Warren wrote in 2005.



Gold says he isn't sure if that still holds true and that medical costs is just one of many reasons potential filers come to him for help.

Charles Drukis, an Ypsilanti-based bankruptcy attorney, says that families who have experienced job loss or reduction in hours and income is by far the primary reason he sees for bankruptcy. He says once a family that is living from paycheck to paycheck has that income reduced, it's very difficult to get back on track.

"The biggest number I'm seeing right now (for bankruptcy filers) is job cutbacks and cuts in rate of pay and hours," Drukis said. "You still have car payments, mortgage payments, and it is very easy to slip under."

In some cases, the primary bread-winner of the family will have suffered job loss or income reduction and accumulated massive amounts of credit card debt trying to keep the family living in the style they had become accustomed to.

Gold says he has talked to a number of clients in which that is the case.

"A lot of times, when the father gets into a substantial amount of credit card debt, the family is the last to know about it because he is trying to make them happy and continue in their comfortable lifestyle," Gold says.

Drukis echoed those comments, saying he has run into the same thing. "The people are at first optimistic that they will regain their job or income relatively soon, and they think they will be able pay off their credit card debt," he said.

Even more damaging than the financial implications, Gold says that filing bankruptcy has a serious psychological impact. When asked whether there is a stigma about people who are forced to file for bankruptcy, Gold says "absolutely."

"The vast majority of clients who come in to see me are just terrified at the prospect. They believe they are a failure; they are afraid of losing their home. It affects their health, as well. It takes a terrible toll on people," Gold says. "I try to remind clients that there is a reason why the law of bankruptcy exists.

"It's there to serve as a safety net before an individual hits rock bottom, loses all of his or her property and are thrown out on the street, becoming a ward of the state. I tell people that bankruptcy is a good thing. It can save people.

"Of course, you can beat yourself up a little bit because you're not at fault here, but I tell clients that it wasn't their fault that they experienced job loss, or poor health or any number of reasons."

How does it work?

While bankruptcy seems convoluted and messy, the process itself is relatively simple.

Drukis describes it as a basic process in which a bankruptcy trustee, appointed by the district court, gathers information that describes the debtor's assets, creditors and puts a basic number on how much they owe and to whom. Drukis says it's surprising how many people aren't aware of the amount of debt they are incurring and from where.

"A lot of the people don't have (their account) information," Drukis says. "That is stuff that the courts need to know in order to proceed in the case."

When a debtor is approved to file either Chapter 7 or 13, there are a number of assets protected up to a certain amount. Drukis says that is another misconception about bankruptcy, is that a lot of people think they will have absolutely nothing when it is all said and done.

Most debtors who file Chapter 7 are allowed to keep their home or a co-op or mobile home. Other exempt property items include the following:

- Life insurance payments or policy.
- Alimony, child support.
- Pensions and retirement benefits.
- Health aids.
- Jewelry.
- Lost earning payments.
- Vehicle up to $3,225 in value.
- Personal injury compensation payments up to $20,200 and other similar payments.
- Tools of the trade up to $20,200.
- A wild card exemption of up to $1,075 of any property, plus up to $10,125 of any amount of unused homestead exemption

On the flip side, bankruptcy doesn't protect against all debts incurred, including alimony and child support payments (for the payer), a debtor's most recent back taxes, large purchases of more than $550 made within 90 days of filing and government fines or penalties.

While Chapter 7 is generally thought to be the quickest and simplest form of bankruptcy, otherwise known as liquidation, because of the 2005 Bankruptcy Abuse and Protection Act there are more and more debtors filing Chapter 13.

The BAPCPA, which effected dramatic changes in the federal bankruptcy code, was enacted in order to protect against predatory lenders and guard against people being approved for loans that they couldn't afford. Potential filers are now asked to fill out a "means test," to determine eligibility for a Chapter 7 or 13. If income is below the median income for families in Michigan, based on Census Bureau stats, the debtor will be eligible.

With the BAPCPA in place, potential filers are encouraged to look into Chapter 13. A Chapter 13 filing sets in place a repayment plan over the next three to five years that will have the filer repaying a percentage of the debt incurred.

Drukis says in the long run, Chapter 13 filings will "hurt less" than Chapter 7. A debtor's credit will be less affected if he or she is making payments on a percentage of the debt incurred, but it's still a bankruptcy nonetheless.

Gold says the BAPCPA, despite its best intentions, has missed its primary goals.

"The BAPCPA hasn't really played out that way," Gold says. "That was the goal to make it harder (to get a loan) when that went into place in 2005. However, if you look at statistics most people (filing for bankruptcy) fall below the requirements of the means test anyway because it's based on median income for that area. If a family is looking at bankruptcy, it's because of troubles to their income."

After a debtor has filed, a court-appointed trustee gathers and sells all non-exempt property and uses the proceeds from the sale to pay creditors. Most Chapter 7 cases are "no asset" cases in which the debtor doesn't have any non-exempt property for the trustee to sell.

At that point, creditors are prevented from trying to collect on debts through what is called an "automatic stay." The stay is designed to preserve property and to give the debtor a break from litigation. Creditors who want to collect, must show the judge that there is cause to be allowed to continue with collection action.

The trustee then takes control of any property not kept. From the sale of the property, the trustee pays the expenses of administration of the case and then gives any remaining money to creditors with allowed claims, according to the priority of the claims. Any wages earned after the filing, the debtor gets to keep and is beyond the reach of the creditors.

Between 20 and 40 days after the filing, there will be what is called a 341 hearing, or the first meeting of creditors. The trustee can ask questions under oath about all property and creditors can ask questions too. After the 341 meeting, the debtor's involvement in the process is very limited. The individual's sole responsibility from then on is to meet the requests of the trustee assigned to the bankruptcy case.

A Chapter 13 filing, rather than wiping out debts immediately, allows a reorganization of the debt so there is more time afforded to make payments.

Many people who file for Chapter 13 have mortgages or other loans they would like to bring current so they do not lose the home or property, taxes, child support or student loans that can't be wiped out by Chapter 7.

Gold says another factor is that a lot of people have moral convictions that debts should be paid off no matter how long it takes.

The family or individual filing for Chapter 13 will be appointed a trustee from the court, like in Chapter 7, and he or she will review the proposed payment plan for accuracy and flexibility.

The proposed plan is then distributed to creditors who have the right to object to the plan if they think it's unreasonable. If the plan is approved, a debtor can keep all assets during the life of the plan.

Monthly payments are made to the bankruptcy trustee, who distributes the funds to the creditors according to the plan. If the plan is completed as approved, the unpaid debts are discharged.

What to do after filing?

One of the first questions Gold hears from clients when they plan on filing bankruptcy: When can I get back on track?

Whether a debtor is filing Chapter 7 or Chapter 13, a bankruptcy is certainly a blemish on credit that will stick around for quite some time after the process is completed.

Gold says, however, if a filer is making a steady income during the bankruptcy, than he or she could potentially buy a car the day after filing.

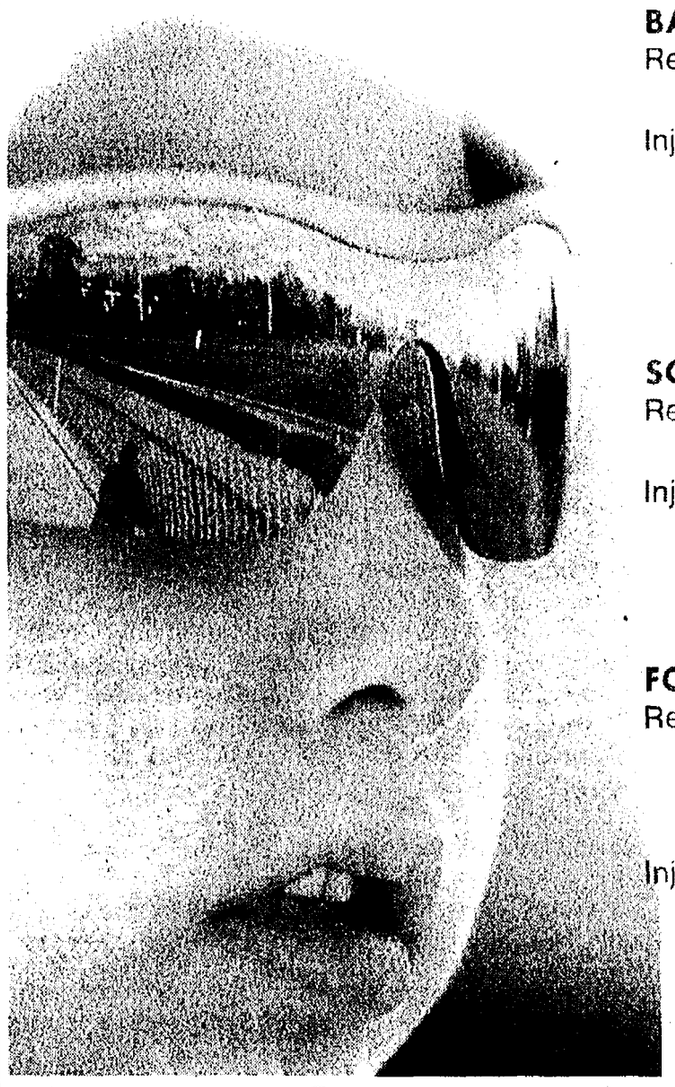
OUTFITTING YOUR EYES FOR SAFETY IN SPORTS

As any parent involved in youth sports can tell you, each sport has its own unique safety equipment: shin guards for soccer, shoulder pads for football, batting helmets for baseball or softball. This list goes on and on. Yet for most participants in sports, one of the most important parts of the body almost always goes unprotected: the eyes. As a consequence, every year more than 40,000 people suffer eye injuries while playing sports. Most of these could be avoided, according to Prevent Blindness America, by wearing proper eye protection. Here's a list, by sport, of recommended eye protection and the injuries they can prevent:



BASKETBALL

"Of course, they're not going to get the prime rate," Gold says. "What they will get is what I call the 'bankruptcy premium.' Instead of paying 5 to 7 percent on a purchase, they most likely would be paying something like 12 to 13 percent. But that starts to come down after 18 to 24 months after filing."

A recent study suggested that it is now taking longer and becoming a more difficult process for bankruptcy filers to get back on track and re-establish credit after filing, Gold says, but he adds that he doesn't necessarily agree with that.

"I tell people that if you are working and bringing in some kind of income, and you are able to maintain your bills after you file, then you can still buy some of the things you need without that much difficulty," he says.

Drukis says that more people are now realizing that there is life after bankruptcy.

"I'm not sure that anybody would be happy that they have to file bankruptcy," he says. "But nowadays, I think people have better understanding that they still may have something close to the life they had before, just with the bare minimum essentials."

What is the state doing?

The foreclosure and bankruptcy crisis here in Michigan has caused lawmakers to step up legislative efforts to protect consumers and help families avoid from hitting the bottom rung.

A piece of housing legislation introduced in August 2007, the Michigan Home Loan Protection Act, could be very helpful for consumers facing debt problems. House Bill 5305 adds more protection for consumers against predatory lenders, said state Rep. Pam Byrnes, D-52nd District, who is a co-sponsor.

"This law would provide for more protection against people who try to get consumers into loans that they can't afford," Byrnes said.

The bill would provide the following benefits for consumers:

• Ban predatory lending practices, such as making loans without requiring borrowers to prove their ability to repay the loan, encouraging borrowers to default, charging excessive late fees and charging fees for a payoff statement.

• Protect homeowners' equity by prohibiting home refinancing to generate fees for the lender unless there is a tangible net benefit to the borrower.

• Protect consumers from being steered toward high-cost loans when they would otherwise qualify for a traditional loan.

• Prohibit the financing of any points and fees that hide the true costs of the loan.

• Prohibit prepayment penalties.

!Require vulnerable borrowers to receive independent counseling from a certified third-party, non-profit counselor.

• Give injured and aggrieved homeowners legal recourse so they can independently enforce these consumer protections against unscrupulous lenders.

Byrnes, who recently had an experience with a friend who was forced to file bankruptcy, says there are other resources out there for consumers who are facing possible financial crisis. Programs under the Michigan State Housing Development's "Save the Dream" foreclosure protection provisions can help families dealing with loss of income or medical bills, and there are programs offered under the Michigan State University Extension course that can help consumers become more knowledgeable about their finances.

"The Housing Authority has a program that can help people depending on what stage of bankruptcy they are in," Byrnes says. "(MSHDA) can intercede. The sooner you get started in the program the more they can help."

As far as Washtenaw County is concerned, Byrnes says residents are better off than others throughout the state. She said Washtenaw County traditionally always has brought in steady business ventures because there are two universities, an eclectic and experienced work force, and solid health-care facilities in University of Michigan Hospital and St. Joseph Mercy Hosptial.

"I have not received as many calls as some of my colleagues have in other parts of the state," Byrnes said. "A lot of businesses look to the universities as well as the health-care system, and the level of education is a major factor in why businesses continue to come here."

For more information on MSHDA, visit the Web site www.michigan.gov/mshda, or call 1-517-373-8370.

Bankruptcy 101

The provision of allowing relief for individuals unable to pay debtors because of financial hardship was established in Article I, Section 8 of the Constitution that authorized Congress to enact the "uniform laws on the subject of bankruptcies."

Under this, the U.S. Congress in 1978 approved the bankruptcy code. It has been amended several times and the federal laws of bankruptcy changed dramatically in 2005 when President George W. Bush enacted into law the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act.

The BAPCPA was geared to limit abusive and fraudulent bankruptcy filing practices, thereby making it harder for individuals to discharge debt under Chapter 7 by requiring potential debtors to go through a bankruptcy "Means Test," and adding more requirements to be approved for bankruptcy relief.

More potential debtors were directed to Chapter 13, which sets a payment schedule plan over three to five years to pay back certain debts, whereas Chapter 7 discharges all debt, after the new bankruptcy law was enacted.

The process of filing bankruptcy is governed by the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure and local rules of each bankruptcy court district. In Michigan, bankruptcy courts are split into two districts; one for the greater metro-Detroit area, the U.S. Bankruptcy Court for the eastern district of the state, and for residents in the western part of the Lower Peninsula, or known as the Bankruptcy Court for the Western District.

There is a bankruptcy court for each judicial district in the country. There are 90 bankruptcy districts across the country.

The court official with decision-making power over federal bankruptcy cases is the U.S. bankruptcy judge, a judicial officer of the U.S. District Court. The bankruptcy judge may decide any matter connected with a bankruptcy case, such as eligibility to file or whether a debtor should receive a discharge of debts.

Much of the bankruptcy is administrative, however, and is conducted away from the courthouse. In the case of personal bankruptcy under Chapter 7 and 11, a trustee appointed by the bankruptcy court handles the administrative aspects of the case.

A debtor's involvement with the bankruptcy judge is usually very limited. A typical chapter 7 debtor will not appear in court and will not see the bankruptcy judge unless an objection is raised in the case. A Chapter 13 debtor may only have to appear before the bankruptcy judge at a planned confirmation hearing.

Usually,. the only formal proceeding at which a debtor must appear is the meeting of creditors, which is usually held at the offices of the U.S. trustee. This meeting is called a "341 meeting," because section 341 of the bankruptcy code requires that the debtor attend this meeting so that the creditors can question the debtor about debts and property.

A fundamental goal of the federal bankruptcy laws enacted by Congress is to give debtors a financial "fresh start" from burdensome debts.

"It's nice to go to art receptions and get a sense of the different mediums and what you like. Talk to the artists – you may find, especially with a new artist, he or she is even more nervous than you are! Artists are happy to talk about their work with you."

Receptions at the Side Door Gallery are casual and family-friendly, Bowe says. "It's great to expose kids to art. We recently had an exhibit by Dexter High School seniors and welcomed their parents and families."

An online presence is an important tool for an art gallery, Bowe says. Website visitors can view artwork, read about artists, and get a feel for the gallery before ever setting foot in it.

The Side Door Gallery is a room within Bowe's Dexter Picture Frame Co., housed in the former Elaine's Gallery. Bowe says customers often drift into the exhibition space after coming into the store for framing, gifts, cards, jewelry and more.

Chelsea's newest art gallery, the Downstairs Gallery, has a little something for everyone and any budget, says owner John Mitchell. The gallery offers painting, watercolors, pottery, beadwork, etched tiles, photography, glass jewelry and more.

And let's not forget the Center Gallery at the Chelsea Center for the Arts, showcasing fine art by instructors, students, and local artists, with paintings, photography, stoneware, sculpture, jewelry, art glass, textiles, and more.

Local Dems host annual 'Barn Bash'

By Rich Robinson
Guest Writer

With the election less than two months away, the Western Washtenaw Democrats will host its (almost) annual Barn Bash from 4 to 9 p.m. on Saturday, Sept. 27. The event will feature guest speakers, top-notch catered food, beer for those over 21 and live music by two of the area's most popular bands, Black Train and Coconut Radio.

"This is going to be a huge pep rally for the Democrats in Western Washtenaw," said WWDems Chairman Roy Schmidt. "We are getting down to the final weeks and it's time to rally the troops."

Schmidt said the Barn Bash is not only just a fund-raiser for the local political organization, it will also be an event to gather the local Party faithful and get them energized for the next few weeks leading up to Nov. 4.

"This is the time where the rubber hits the road," Schmidt said. "The Barn Bash is a fun way for all of us to get together, have some great food, a lot of fun, and really get ourselves fired up for the days and weeks to come."

Chelsea caterer Leslie Manning, whose "Catering by Leslie" company has been a hit with several of the WWDems events in the last couple of years, will prepare the food.

"We are so pleased that Leslie is back with us again to cater the event," Schmidt said. "It's going to be a great spread: roasted corn with peppers and limes; oven roasted potatoes; herb-rubbed grilled chicken and mixed berry cobbler for dessert... an All-American meal."

Handling the musical entertainment will be Black Train and Coconut Radio. Both bands recently played at Chelsea's "Sights and Sounds." Schmidt also will take the stage with his band, "The Kicking Donkeys," which features WWDems member Guerin Wilkinson, who will provide support with an opening set.

The Barn Bash 2008 will be at 12075 Island Lake Road in Dexter. The suggested donation for tickets is $20 for adults, $10 for those under 21 and free admission to kids under the age of 8.

"We are looking to have a family friendly event," Schmidt said. "This is a fund-raiser for our group, but we want parents to be comfortable with bringing the whole family."

The Barn Bash serves as the major fund-raiser for the WWDems education and outreach programs, such as the upcoming discussion, "Why Michigan Needs Factories," scheduled for Oct. 1.

For more information or to purchase tickets, call 1-734-904-9622, or visit the Western Washtenaw Democrats Web site at www.wwdems.org.

Chelsea's Marshall honored for charity work

Chelsea's Barbara Marshall (right photo) receives the "Local hero" award from Jamie Anderson, a representative of the Susan G. Komen headquarters in Texas. The event was held Sept. 2 at the BMW dealership in Ann Arbor.

Marshall raised $12,630 in donations last year to help fight breast cancer and her goal each year is to beat the previous year's donations. "I am asking for the wonderful people of the Chelsea community to help me achieve this," she said. Anyone interested in donating should write a check payable to "The American Cancer Society" and sending it to Barbara at 20625 Waldo Road, Chelsea, MI 48118. She will turn in all the checks at the "Making Strides Against Breast Cancer" walk on Oct. 18 at Gallup Park in Ann Arbor.

"Any size donation will be greatly appreciated," she said. Marshall has raised $3,380 so far.

There is a growing "throw-the-bums-out-of-office" attitude that's well-earned by legislative bodies nationally on down to the local level.

People are tired of divisive, partisan finger-pointing and really would like to see meaningful policy discussions at all levels on things such as taxes and regulation, health care, immigration, education, infrastructure and foreign relations.

We're not suggesting that people take Nofziger's sentiments literally and go buy ropes for nooses and march down to the local township, state or federal offices.

What we are suggesting is that perhaps it's time to send the strongest possible message to legislative bodies and the national and state parties who pull their strings that enough is enough.

Voters should consider casting an "ABI" ballot this November — Anybody But the Incumbent — and keep voting out incumbents in later elections until our legislative bodies get the message and collectively act responsibly.

In addition, senior tailback Terrence Blevins (Detroit, Mich.-Denby) turned in a career effort with 176 yards gained on 21 carries. The 6-foot-1, 238-pound Blevins also scored on touchdown runs of four and 61 yards in the game.

Sophomore tailback Dwayne Priest (Roanoke, Va.-William Fleming-Fork Union Military Academy) added touchdown runs of two and one yards while newcomer Joe Carithers (Dacula, Ga.-Dacula-Palomar (Calif.) J.C.) booted six PATs and had a 33-yard field goal in his first game as an Eagle.

Last weekend, Sept. 6, the Eagles traveled to East Lansing for a match-up with the Big Ten's Michigan State University Spartans. Eastern played evenly with MSU through the first three quarters before the Spartans took over in the final quarter for a 42-10 win over EMU.

Saturday's EMU-Toledo contest will be a special one for EMU football fans as a host of pre-game activities are planned. The Eagles' Landing fan area at the north end of Rynearson Stadium will be open three hours before the noon kickoff and will feature plenty of activities for families, including inflatable bouncies and a dunk tank. In addition, the first 1,500 fans at the game will receive a free Eagle Nation t-shirt.

A Day in the Life

From school teacher to historian to Paul McCartney, Tom Diab plays many roles

By Sheila Pursglove
Special Writer

Chelsea resident Tom Diab is a true Renaissance man – musician, teacher, entrepreneur, and history buff.

A member of the band Toppermost that plays variety and Beatles music, Diab was introduced to music at an early age.

"As a young child my home was constantly filled with music," he says. "My parents are Lebanese and the music was Arabic. It always consisted of full orchestras, the Oud – a type of guitar – and wonderful singing."

By the late 1970s, when Diab was about 10 years old, he was turned on to groups his oldest sister enjoyed, such as Queen, ELO and Foreigner.

"Then, on Dec. 8, 1980, my world turned upside down," he says. "My 14-year-old sister ran up and down the hallway screaming 'Oh my God! He's dead!'" Diab wasn't even familiar with the music of John Lennon – gunned down outside his New York City apartment – and the Beatles, but that was about to change.

"Soon after the death of the greatest songwriter in the world, radio stations began playing Sunday morning breakfast with The Beatles. That was it – they were it. I loved their music right away and never looked back."

At 14, Diab got his first guitar as a Christmas gift.

"Being a tight-budgeted family I began to cry when my 17-year-old brother Mike presented it to me," he says. "It was a shiny black acoustic guitar and I played it day and night. Yes, I even played it in the bathroom!

"My guitar was my girlfriend, my best friend, my everything."

As early as third grade, Diab knew he had a singing voice because he was always selected to sing in school functions and complimented on his vocal talents.

"So now, with my guitar, I was complete," he says.

He learned everything he could about playing the guitar, either by ear or with library books. He and a friend would listen to Beatles music. "I was particularly mesmerized by 'Strawberry Fields' — what an amazing song that was," he says. "I apprenticed from The Beatles and learned most of their songs from Beatles fake books."

In his junior year at high school, Diab started playing in a high school band, practicing weekly and playing at school events for two years.

Toppermost Tom
Who: Tom Diab
Where: Chelsea and Dexter
What: Performs as Paul McCartney in the Toppermost Beatles tribute band, a musical journey spanning the early days of Beatles performances in 1963 up until their last tour in 1966. The band plays parties, schools, churches, fundraisers, outdoor festivals, weddings, and more.
Other interests: High school teacher in Howell; owner of Gourmet Chocolate Café in Chelsea; president of the Chelsea Area Historical Society; entertainment chair for the Dexter Summer Music Series
Visit: www.toppermost.info

The genre was changing in the mid '80s, and one of Diab's band mates wanted to play music of bands like RATT, Motley Crue – music that didn't interest Diab. "It seemed fake to me and low on talent," he says.

As fate would have it, a skinny ninth-grader – Darren McCarty, later a star of the Detroit Red Wings – loved the Beatles and the two became fast friends.

"We would have Beatles discussions and talk about their songs," Diab says.

Music wasn't Diab's only interest. He was heavily involved in sports in high school, won the state volleyball championship in 1987, was captain of the basketball, volleyball and badminton teams, while working full-time in the summers and part-time during the school year.

But music was his first love. His first live solo show was at a bar at the University of Waterloo in Waterloo, Ontario.

"I packed up my small Toyota Tercel and performed for two hours," he says. "I was very nervous, but my vocals carried me through – however, I didn't do so well and learned that it takes even more practice and dedication to perform live."

Diab worked harder at his music, even while enrolled in the science curriculum at the University of Western Ontario, serving as editor of the science paper and continuing as an avid sports participant.

In 1989, after seeing a Beatles tribute group called "1964," he knew that playing a Beatle was what he wanted to do

Woodcarver building historic benches for McKune

By Sheila Pursglove
Special Writer

John Knapp has always loved working with wood – and after retiring from the Chrysler Proving Grounds 11 years ago, he was finally able to realize his dream of becoming a woodcarver and artisan.

Knapp's work is exhibited at the Chelsea Gallery, alongside paintings by his wife Sandy. The pair makes a great team at their Sharon Township home where Knapp creates hand-rubbed frames of cherry, Brazilian cherry and maple for many of his wife's paintings.

Knapp, who creates hand mirrors, jewelry boxes, large mirrors, sofa tables, end tables, and coffee tables out of birdseye maple, cherry, curly maple, red heart and more, also exhibits at the River Street Gallery in Manistee.

His current project is building six benches for McKune Memorial Library in Chelsea, from a walnut tree that had to be cut down when the historic structure was expanded.

"They had the walnut cut into slabs and have let it dry for several years," Knapp says. "It's now ready for transformation and will carry history with it.

"It's very satisfying to make the benches because it will become part of the library's history and will be providing benches for generations to come."

A self-taught artisan, Knapp learned his craft from woodworker's magazines and personalizes the designs.

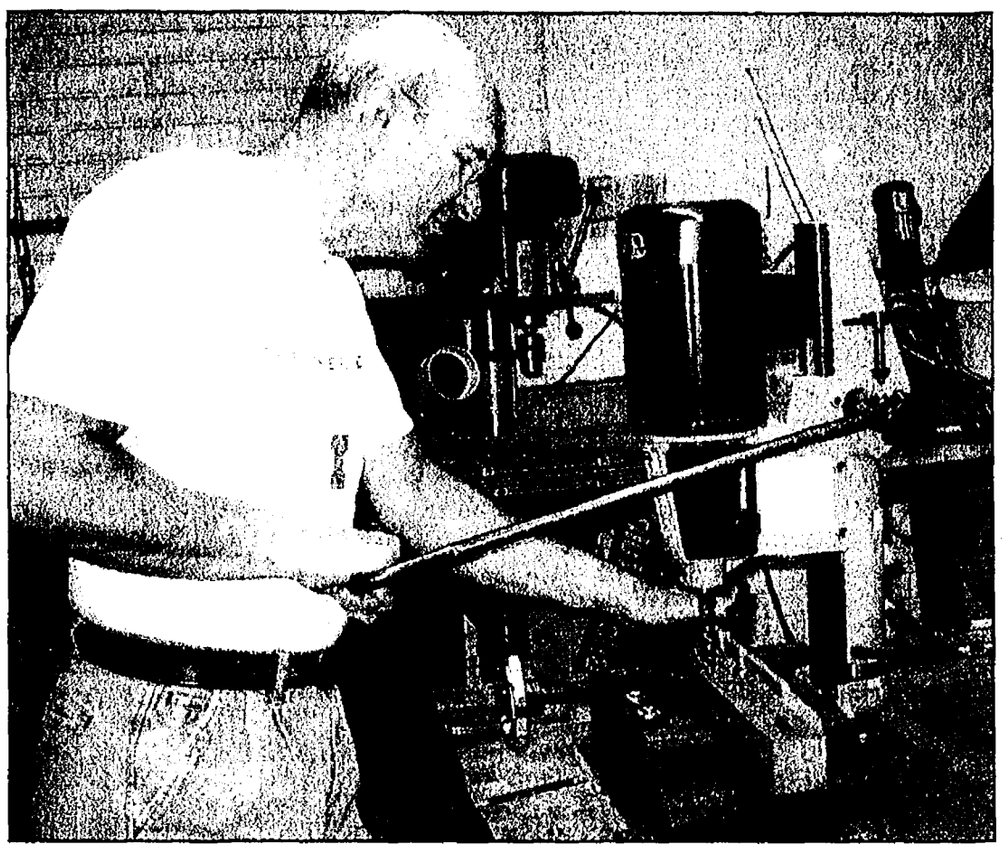
His love of woodwork stems from his childhood on a small farm in the Manchester area, where he spent much of his youth exploring and enjoying the surrounding woods.

His uncles, Chelsea residents Raymond and Roy Koch, were carpenters as was their father, Christian – Knapp's grandfather. Raymond and Roy would come out to the farm to hunt and talk about their jobs, providing much of Knapp's early inspiration although he had no experience with woodworking until he took shop class at Manchester High School. It quickly became his favorite class.

"Working with wood seemed to be ingrained in me from the beginning," he says. "I always had a curiosity about how everything works and making things run smoothly — projects were always something to be solved."

One of his first woodworking efforts was in the mid 1960s, when he made a toy chest for his son, Tom.

"It had a rounded top and looked like a treasure chest," he says. "My next project was a walnut salt and pepper mill, made it from a piece of firewood that I found."



John Knapp is building six benches for the McKune Memorial Library.

His next project was somewhat larger. "We lived in a small apartment on Jerusalem Road in Chelsea, but got permission from our landlords to use one room for me to build a pool table," he says.

Knapp buys wood rough sawn from Armstrong Millwork in Highland and L. L. Johnson Lumber Manufacturing in Charlotte, and mills it after transporting it home in his trailer.

"I enjoy the natural beauty of each species, and for that reason, I prefer natural finishes rather than staining," he says.

He transformed the garage into a workshop; since it's attached the house, he has easy year-round access. Before his retirement, he started buying equipment so he would be ready to swing into woodworking action.

"I made many jigs that are either templates or jigs that make certain jobs much easier," he says. "Some of the equipment includes a table saw, mortising machine, jointer, thickness planer, drum sander, belt sander, router table, cut-off saw, drill press, air compressor and dust collection system, not to mention about a zillion hand tools."

The Knapps love working together in the studio on their 13-acre property, drawing inspiration from the beautiful rural landscape.

"We work really well together and when John is helping me with framing, we just naturally have our specific jobs and anticipate the needs as we go," Sandy Knapp says. "It's a very comfortable relationship and we don't get into struggling with each other.

"We do many projects like that together without the stress of working together. I help John in the initial planning and brainstorming of his projects. We problem solve very well together."

Woodwork seems to run in the family. Not only was Sandy's grandfather a lumberjack in northern Michigan but their son works with lumber at Lowe's, and looks forward to the day when he will have more time to explore his woodworking skills.

Knapp, whose wife heads up the Chelsea Painters, is involved in the business end of the group's annual Art Fair at Chelsea Community Hospital, and assists the group throughout the year.

The couple is very involved with the Chelsea Center for the Arts, where Knapp made nine bookcases. The pair also helped to paint the mural project at the Chelsea library.

After the bench project for McKune, Knapp plans to make heirloom pieces for his family.

"I've made an entertainment center for our son, but look forward to leaving more of a woodworking legacy to hand down throughout the generations," he says.

"I want to keep the passion of bringing wood to life by letting the character of the wood itself come shining through. It's a wonderful thing to leave something of quality on this earth long after I'm here."

more than anything else.

During college he performed at coffee shops and campus bars, but music had to take a back seat once he entered grad school to study human physiology, and he played only for personal pleasure.

In 1996, after moving to Michigan and becoming a community college instructor, he began performing live again. Three years later, he hosted a Beatles open mic night at a Beatles themed restaurant in Ann Arbor.

"Dave Stanton came to perform that evening. Little did I know that Dave was as good as they got, performing with the likes of Seger, Alice Cooper and many of the famous Michigan acts of the 60s and 70s, but he loved the Beatles," Diab says.

"When he came on stage we performed together and he knew the smallest detail about Beatles songs and I was impressed because I thought that I was an expert. He had a great John voice and my Paul voice was perfectly complementary."

After that show, the pair hooked up to play a lot of coffee shops in the area and started making money. Their duo Toppermost evolved over the next few years into a three- or four-piece band that performed 125 shows in 2005.

Toppermost is Poppermost

Diab explains that Toppermost is Beatles slang John Lennon used in the band's early days when trying to convince his band mates to follow their dreams. "John would say 'Where are we going, guys?' The other three Beatles responded 'To the Toppermost of the Poppermost, Johnny.'"

In the last nine years, Toppermost has evolved into a British Invasion cover group but also performs hits from the 50s to the 80s including country, Motown and blues.

"Our vocal strength is what distinguishes us and continues to keep us employed in a very competitive market," Diab says.

"Last year I fulfilled my dream of being a Beatle and now perform as Paul McCartney in the Toppermost Beatles tribute band. Dave Stanton plays John and I found two other great dedicated guys to play George and Ringo. The Beatles tribute has taken off, we're being booked everywhere and find ourselves with fantastic opportunities."

Beyond music

In addition to his musical life, Diab teaches science full time at Howell high school. Before that, he was a sales rep for Pfizer for two years, taught high school biology at Saline High School for five years during which he was named University of Michigan Science Teacher of the Year, and was a community college instructor near Grand Rapids for two years.

He and his wife Tina opened the Gourmet Chocolate Cafe in Chelsea in 2004. The couple calls Dexter Township home, and their daughters are fifth-generation Dexter.

"I am a tremendously proud father of two beautiful girls, Ella and Julia," he says. "My parents taught me about hard work but I mostly cherish my family.

"Tina has a 12th-grade level of piano and we insist on having good music playing all the time for our girls. We sing with them and play instruments around them and they love it."

The Diabs love the Chelsea and Dexter communities, where he serves as entertainment chair for the Dexter Summer Music Series, and president of the Chelsea Area Historical Society.

"They are educated country towns," Diab says. "People wave as you walk by, the schools are tops, and arts and entertainment are appreciated."

His interest in history stems from only knowing one grandparent who died when he was 14. "Other than that, I don't have a family history beyond my parents and so my passion for history comes from the fact that I don't have much of one myself," he says.

"I fell in love with Chelsea's history because there are more than eight century-old businesses still operating and the downtown is beautiful. As I dug further, I discovered Chelsea has a history worthy of a TV series. I gave the historical society a home in my cafe because it was rarely open at its old location. Now it's available to the public seven days a week and I don't charge them a penny.

"I hope that my leading by example will open the hearts of the community to support our amazing heritage and the historical society."

The Bulldogs ended up with 194 points.

Winning the meet was Saline with 252 points.

"We were excited to finish second out of 11 teams," said Chelsea coach dave Jolly. "What was most impressive was the fact we were the smallest school at the meet."

In the 200 breaststroke relay, the Chelsea foursome of Michelle Kellogg, Katlin Connin, Becca Breeze and Kelly O'Keefe finished second with a time of 2:24.72.

Katlin Cottrell, Donna Prieskorn, Hannah Olsen and Claire Stephens placed fourth in the 400 freestyle relay in 3:53.30.

Lauren Rainer, Claudia Bravo, Olsen and Stephens touched fourth in the 200 butterfly relay with a clocking of 2:07.03.

In the one-meter diving competition, the Bulldog duo of Lauren Dark and Christina Coffman placed fifth with a combined score of 296. 65 points.

In the 200 backstroke relay, Jaclyn Murphy, Grace Benton, Sarah Daniel and Katlin Cottrell finished second in 2:06.20.

Bulldogs Sarah Daniel (left), Grace Benton, Jaclyn Murphy and Katlin Cottrell placed second in the 200 backstroke relay with a time of 2:06.20.

Katie McEachern, Abby Ingall, Rainer and Brezee placed sixth in the 800 freestyle relay in 9:27.79.

Kellogg, Bravo, Brezee and Murphy finished fourth in the 200 medley relay with a clocking of 2:04.89.

Stephens, Prieskorn, Cottrell and Olsen ended up third in the 200 freestyle relay with a time of 1:45.23.

Though not placing, Amanda Johnson, Kate Lewis-Lakin, Benton and Daniel stopped the clock in 1:59.53 in the 200 freestyle relay for the Bulldogs.

On Sept. 4, Chelsea opened its season defeating host Ann Arbor Skyline 135-47. The Bulldogs were the first team to ever swim in Skyline's new pool. This is Skyline's first year competing in athletics.

"Skyline is just starting their new program and with only freshmen on their team, their depth was a factor, but they show great promise as they build toward the future," Jolly said.

In the 200 medley relay, Murphy, Kellogg, Stephens and Olsen placed first in 1:59.40. Kristen Angelocci, Brezee, Bravo and Prieskorn finished second in 2:04.62.

Cottrell bested the field in the 200 freestyle with a time of 2:05.00. McEachern was second in 2:10.00, while Daniel was fourth in 2:23.70.

Stephens finished first in the 200 individual medley in 2:18.91. Kellogg was third in 2:27.40, while Bravo was fourth in 2:39.02.

Olsen touched first in the 50 freestyle in 26.39, while Prieskorn was second in 27.62 and Amanda Johnson fourth in 28.89.

Dark split the water first in the one-meter diving competition with a score of 182.50 points. Coffman was

Chelsea gridders beat Northville

By Don Richter
Sports Editor

Chelsea football used a balanced offensive attack and a stingy defense to defeat visiting Northville 27-20 last Friday in its home opener at Jerry Niehaus Field.

"Our defense played well," said Chelsea coach Brad Bush. "They forced two turnovers and made some big stops in the red zone."

The Mustangs (1-1), members of the Kensington Lakes Conference, struck first last Friday night scoring on a 2-yard run with 6:53 remaining in the first quarter. The five-play drive traveled 66 yards in 2:12.

Chelsea (2-0) answered later in the first quarter as senior quarterback Michael Roberts connected with senior tight end Jake Mantel (6-foot-4, 220 pounds) for a 25-yard touchdown pass. The point after touchdown kick by Roberts split the uprights tying the contest at 7-7 with 3:07 left in the opening frame.

Early in the second quarter, Northville scored on a 3-yard run, upping its advantage to 14-7 with 10:51 left in the first half. The Mustangs used 10 plays to move 57 yards in 4:09 for their TD.

The Bulldogs answered right back as junior speedster Cody Adams sprinted for a 23-yard touchdown run with 8:50 left in the second quarter. Roberts' PAT was good tying the score at 14-14.

Just before the half, Chelsea senior quarterback Randy Cox scored on a 1-yard dive with 3:20 remaining in the first half. With the TD, the Bulldogs led 20-14 entering the locker room.

In the second half, Chelsea increased its lead as Roberts hooked up with senior receiver Michael Lenneman for a 45-yard touchdown pass. With Roberts' successful kick, the Bulldogs led 27-14 with 5:50 left in the third quarter.

Chelsea's defense smothered the Mustangs' offensive attack the entire second half, until with 20 seconds remaining, Northville scored on a 6-yard TD pass for the night's final margin.

Though pleased with the victory, Bush said his team could play better.

"We struggled a little bit offensively," he said. "We didn't play as well as we could have. But, overall we played well enough to win."

Hurting Chelsea's offensive production was the loss of standout junior running back Nick Hill. Hill (5-8, 185), who's being recruited by Stanford and numerous Mid-American schools, was held out of the game because of a bruised knee suffered in Week One against Ann Arbor Huron.

"Nick practiced Thursday, participated in full warm-ups and was cleared to play," Bush said. "It (holding him out) was a precautionary measure. It just made sense to keep him out. He's okay."

As a team, Chelsea totaled 245 yards of offense.

Pappas places first at Bath invite

By Don Richter
Sports Editor

Chelsea's boys' cross country team placed fifth at the Bath Invitational last Saturday.

The Bulldogs recorded 119 points.

Winning the 12-team meet was Linden with 56 points.

Rockford finished second with 59 points, while Ann Arbor Huron was third with 102 points and Northville fourth with 109 points.

Individually for Chelsea, sophomore August Pappas finished first overall with a time of 16:16.

"Today's highlight was the overall victory by August Pappas," said Chelsea coach Eric Swager. "He had the fastest time of the day in any division."

Swager said Pappas followed the pre-race strategy to perfection.

"The plan was to relax the first mile, then attack the open portion of the course," he said. "He pulled away from several other fine runners to hold on and win."

While Pappas shone brightest last Saturday, Swager said the entire Chelsea team performed well.

"The team competed, once again, with the best in the state," he said. "Ann Arbor Huron was a top five Division 1 finisher last year and Linden may be the best team in any division right now."

Besides Pappas, other top runners for the Bulldogs included Peter Wilke who placed 19th in 17:10 and Nick Hewitt who finished 24th in 17:18.

Bryce Bradley ended up 30th in a lifetime best 17:30, while Jared Gentz was 45th in 18:02, Mark Smith 46th in 18:04 and Dominic Conybeare was 47th in 18:08 for Chelsea.

Pappas, Wilke, Hewitt and Bradley all earned medals for the Bulldogs.

"Our goal must be to reduce the nearly two minute spread between runners one through seven," Swager said.

In the JV meet, Geoff Smith-Woolams paced Chelsea stopping the clock in 18:08.

Joe Hewitt was 65th in a lifetime best 19:47, while Kevin Stockwell was 79th in a lifetime best 19:53 and Martin Harris 119th in a

Line-up adjustments key Whippets' success

By Don Richter
Sports Editor

The Washtenaw Whippets field hockey team opened its season losing 2-0 to Saline last week. The Whippets play in the state's Division 2.

"After the game with Saline, some line-up adjustments were made to better capitalize on individual player strengths and give the team more offensive power," said Washtenaw coach Roxy Block.

The line-up changes proved beneficial as the Whippets defeated Novi in their second game of the season 3-1.

Scoring for Washtenaw were Chelsea junior Aimee Mesko, Chelsea sophomore Dianna Uihlein and Dexter's Megan Flocken.

Last Monday, the Whippets lost to visiting Grosse Pointe South 2-0.

"We held Division 1 Grosse Pointe South to just two goals," Block said. "That's a big success given that GPS had a scoring average of seven goals a game in their first four games."

Carissa Flocken played well in net for Washtenaw, recording 18 saves and deflecting two of three penalty strokes. Also playing well for the Whippets were Casey Fry and Kate Brown.

"They controlled the center of the field, consistently feeding the ball up to the Whippet forwards," Block said.

JV Field Hockey

The Washtenaw Whippets JV field hockey team lost its season opening game to Saline 3-0 last week. The Whippets also fell to Novi 1-0 and Grosse Pointe South 3-0.

"All but two of the players are new to the game of field hockey," Block said. "They are showing great improvement with each game and practice."

Block said she was pleased with her JV team's effort.

"Enthusiasm and team spirit run high in the rookie team in spite of being defeated in their first three games," she said. "The players are quickly learning the skills and game sense that will lead to future successes on the game field."

Bulldogs second at quad

By Don Richter
Sports Editor

Chelsea's girls' golf team finished second at its own quad Aug. 27 at Reddeman Farms Golf Course.

The Bulldogs ended up with a 194.

Winning the quad was Dexter shooting a 189. Placing third was Tecumseh with a 202, while Ypsilanti Lincoln had a 221.

"This was a very disappointing loss for us on our home course," said Chelsea coach Andrea Bareis. "We really wanted to win this quad, but came up five strokes short."

Leading Chelsea individually was Krystin Schwarze with a 42. With her performance, Schwarze was crowned match medalist.

Stephanie Everard added a 46 for the Bulldogs.

"I was very pleased with Krystin's match-medalist performance and extremely pleased with Stephanie's season-best 46," Bareis said. "However, we were really hoping to have two other scores in the 40s though, which is what we'll need to win these (Southeastern Conference) White Division quad matches."

Hannah Harwood ended up with a 51, while Sarah Shrosbree had a 55, Cayla Redmond a 58 and Kelly Schmidt a 71 for Chelsea.

"Hannah harwood was on her way to having a career-best round when she got into trouble on No. 8 and took a 10," Bareis said. "She still shot a 51, but she could've had a terrific score had she not gotten into so much trouble there. She's ready to bounce back, though."

Bareis said the Bulldogs would continue to improve as the season goes along.

"We'll continue to work on our short games, hitting the fairway off the tee, hitting greens and avoiding penalty shots," she said. "It's always a work in progress."

In the JV match, Chelsea had a score of 239. The Bulldogs were the only squad to field a full JV team.

Emily Shrosbree led Chelsea with a 54.

Mackenzie Cole added a 56, while Allie Smith had a 64, Danielle Coleman and Esther Kim a 65 and Courtenay Ackley a 70 for the Bulldogs.

"I was very pleased with our JV team's performance," Bareis said. "They bettered their previous team score by 30 strokes. Five of the six girls had season-best performances. It was nice to see two girls in the 50s with a few others not too far behind.

"Overall, the girls had fewer putts and were hitting more consistent shots off the tee. It's exciting to see so much improvement from one week to the next."

The Bulldogs recorded a score of 407.

Winning the match was Temperance Bedford with a 400.

Individually for Chelsea, Schwarze placed fourth overall with a score of 88. Everard was eighth with a 98, while Harwood was 11th with a 99 and Schmidt shot a 122.

"Obviously, when a team score of 400 wins a tournament, the course is playing pretty tough," Bareis said. "The greens were extremely fast and they weren't holding any approach shots."

Chelsea next travels to Ann Arbor Pioneer to participate in its invitational Thursday at 9 a.m.

On Wednesday, the Bulldogs visit Ypsilanti Lincoln for a quad at 3 p.m.

The Bulldogs ended up with 199 points.

Winning the 17-team meet was DeWitt with 51 points.

Rounding out the top five were Williamston in second place with 68 points, Marshall third with 110 points and Goodrich fourth with 184 points.

"We placed fifth in a very strong field at Bath," said Chelsea coach Pat Clarke. "Six of the teams in the field were at last year's Division 2 state meet."

Leading Chelsea was sophomore Samantha Newbound who finished 29th individually with a time of 21:08.

"Samantha had an outstanding race running a fine time to earn a medal," Clarke said.

Erin Benjamin crossed the line 38th in 21:28, while Julie Beaumont was 39th in 21:29 and Courtney Maher 43rd in 21:46 for the Bulldogs.

Danielle Dahl ended up 50th in 22:01, while Jessi Battaglia was 74th stopping the clock in 22:46 and Nichole Hopp 82nd in 23:23 for Chelsea.

Katie Lindauer placed 60th in 24:09, while Jenny Squires was 79th in 24:47 for Chelsea.

Clarke said he was pleased with his squad's effort.

"We ran as a team and improved our times by an average of 40 seconds per girl," he said. "We continue to improve and we are getting stronger with each meet. Hopefully this trend will continue as the season progresses."

JV Football

Chelsea's JV football team defeated host Northville 10-7 last Thursday.

The Bulldogs (2-0) scored on a 23-yard field goal by Charlie Hess and on a 35-yard punt return for a touchdown by Spencer Mykala.

"I can't say I can remember too many victories in which we couldn't score an offensive touchdown," said Chelsea coach Chris Orlandi. "We were lucky to escape with a win in this one. It was an ugly win, but we'll take them any way we can get them."

Playing well defensively for the Bulldogs were Conor Tait, Logan Kelly, Charlie Kempf, Dylan Beckett, Andrew Nold, Nate Udell, Brian Paulsen and Mykala.

Chelsea next hosts Saline Thursday at 7 p.m.

Freshman Football

Chelsea's freshman football team defeated host Northville 28-14 last Thursday.

Scoring for the Bulldogs (2-0) were Andy Nelson, Cody Barber, Jack McDougal and Joe Cox.

Defensively, Truman Hadley had 15 tackles and Billy Collins an interception.

"The kids really played hard and they played for each other," said Chelsea coach Dennis Strzyzewski. "This group does not seem to have any selfishness. They just get the job done regardless of who gets the credit. I hope this attitude continues to grow."

Chelsea next hosts Saline Thursday at 4:30 p.m.

Auto dealership incentive will benefit local schools

By Edward Freundl
Staff Writer

A Chelsea automobile dealership says its new marketing idea aims to benefit local schools as well as its own bottom line.

"We hope to accomplish two things: to increase local business, and obviously, we're hoping to help with schools too," said Mike Kushmaul, General Manager of Palmer Ford-Mercury.

"Hopefully it benefits everybody."

For every new or used vehicle sold, the dealership will donate $50 to the school of the purchaser's choice.

Kushmaul said letters signed by dealership owner Suzie Palmer Weber explaining the program were mailed out to superintendents and principals in all schools in the Chelsea, Dexter and Manchester areas.

"I have kids in school, so I know schools are always asking for donations and fund-raisers," Kushmaul said.

"We realize that for a lot of families coming up with money to support the school isn't always there.

> "I have kids in school, so I know schools are always asking for donations and fund-raiser. We realize that for a lot of families coming up with money to support the school isn't always there."
> Mike Kushmaul, general manager of Palmer Ford-Mercury.

"The more cars we sell, the more money the school makes. It's another way to earn money to do the things they need to do."

Chelsea High School Principal said she is fully behind the program.

"I think we would pleased to accept the donations," she said.

"As a member of community the schools want to be supportive of other businesses, and we appreciate their support."

According to Kushmaul, the incentive donation to schools is exclusive to Palmer Ford.

"I haven't heard of any other dealership doing anything like this," he said.

"If (someone is) in the market for a new or used vehicle, it can be some incentive to purchase here."

Kushmaul noted that the $50 is applied to any vehicle the dealership sells, whether new or used and regardless of make or model.

Although the idea is to support local schools, Kushmaul pointed out, it really doesn't matter if the purchaser lives outside the three specified school districts.

"If we get someone in here from Saline and they want the money sent to their school, I'm not going to say no," he said.

"The whole idea is to send it to the school district and let them dole it out as they see fit."

Kushmaul said the dealership plans to continue the program at least through the end of the school year.

"If it is as big as we think it will be, we hope to continue it for a long time," he said.

"We'll see how it goes."

Inverness Inn 'reborn' to serve customers for another century

By Edward Freundl
Staff Writer

The building has stood there on North Territorial Road since 1907, on land deeded to its original owner by President Andrew Jackson before Michigan was even a state.

But once inside, visitors – especially patrons who haven't seen it in a while – will be struck by the comfortable new surroundings.

Scott Padden and his fiancée Penny Dec of Pinckney bought the Dexter Township landmark in December 2006 and have spent enormous amounts of time and money on the ultimate extreme makeover.

"The whole place has been redone, and we're pretty proud of it," Padden said.

"People really took to it; they really like what we've done to it."

That kind of reaction is immensely gratifying. Anyone who has done a remodeling job can understand the frustration involved, but Padden and Dec persevered for a year and a half

TOP: The Inverness Inn has stood on the same site near North Lake for more than 100 years, and recently underwent extensive renovations.
ABOVE: This magnificent moose head keeps an eye on customers in "Moose's log cabin," a room that was added to the Inverness Inn in 1920.

There were a lot of issues because the building had sat vacant for some time.

"It originally opened as a trading post in 1907, and closed in December 2004," Padden recalled.

"There's a lot of history here. I thought they were going to tear it down, and that would have been a real shame."

So they gutted the place, even replacing the floor joists; the bar was removed

Building a better foundation

John Scott, left, and Tony Byers work on replacing the bricks in the sidewalk along the west side of South Main Street on Monday morning. Scott said his firm, Alternate Paving Systems of Chelsea, was hired this summer to remove the ordinary sand used as a base during installed 12 years ago, replace it with slag sand and properly compact it to prevent the bricks from shifting and heaving again. The work, encompassing the entire downtown area, is about halfway complete.

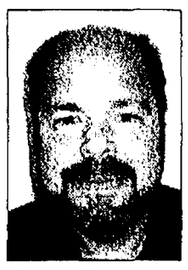
The Chelsea Standard's Ed Freundl honored by Michigan Farm Bureau

Edward Freundl, who covers the Chelsea community for The Chelsea Standard, was honored with Michigan Farm Bureau's 2008 Agricultural Communicator of the Year Award.

Freundl was nominated by the Washtenaw County Farm Bureau for his "outstanding work helping to tell the story of agriculture by informing and educating the non-farming public about the state's second-largest industry," according to a news release from the farm bureau.



Freundl

A native of Jackson, Freundl didn't come from an agriculture background, but has embraced the opportunities media work has afforded him to learn — and to educate others — about the state's food and fiber industry.

"It has been a real education for me, too," said Freundl, who started as a radio reporter in Jackson before shifting to newspapers, doing more and more farm reporting with each new position. "I've had this kind of beat in the last several jobs I've had," he said, referring to reporting and editing stints at newspapers in Parma, Marshall, Albion and Adrian.

Freundl has been on staff with Heritage for less than two years, writing for The Chelsea Standard, The Dexter Leader and The Manchester Enterprise. When he isn't busy writing about Chelsea's inner workings, he's likely to be found on a nearby farm.

"Agricultural reporting is just one facet of what I do, but probably the most enjoyable," said Freundl, who credits his editor, Terry Jacoby, with first hooking him into the local farming community.

With further help from Washtenaw County Farm Bureau communications volunteers, he was soon writing a series of articles profiling life on a nearby dairy farm, Huehl Acres. He praises the Huehl brothers, Jerry and Denny, for their openness in welcoming him behind the scenes.

"I really appreciated the opportunity to get into their lives and explain what they do to people who maybe don't understand," Freundl said.

Freundl embraces the educational role of his work, translating complex topics and issues for everyday readers, many of whom don't know much about agriculture.

"We all have our preconceived notions, but farming is no longer what it used to be," he said. "It's a big business now, and people need to understand how the marketplace has changed the family farm. What I've found most fascinating is how the global marketplace has an effect on the decisions these farmers are making.

Michigan Farm Bureau's other communicator picks were Kirsten Kelly and Anne de Mare, a film-making duo whose documentary, "Asparagus: Stalking the American Life," profiles Oceana County's asparagus industry and culture.

Freundl, Kelly and de Mare and will all be honored at Michigan Farm Bureau's 2008 State Annual Meeting Dec. 2 through 5 in Grand Rapids.

Harvest Festival to overtake Grass Lake area

By Edward Freundl
Staff Writer

It seems like no matter which way you turn, the Grass Lake area will be bursting with activity next weekend for the fourth annual Grass Lake Fall Harvest Festival.

Events are scheduled in more than a half-dozen locations in and around the village from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sept. 20.

"It's going to be an event around the whole community," said organizer Patti Lyons of Dale Fisher Galleries.

"We'll have the art show in the village, live entertainment, and at the gallery we have the photography program for almost 500 children from Stockbridge, Michigan Center and Grass Lake schools."

Last year Lyons was president of the Grass Lake Regional Chamber of Commerce, which sponsors the annual event. She went on to describe other scheduled events.

"There's the Halloween event at the (Apple Creek) campground, and the classic car show at the Federated Church," she said.

"And this year we're trying something new, a classic antique tractor show at Coppernoll's Hardware."

A business exposition featuring local merchants and organizations was moved from the high school to the Farmers State Bank at East Michigan Avenue and Norvell roads, and will have additional features.

"They'll have those big inflatables for kids, so it'll be kind of a carnival atmosphere," Lyons said.

"The idea was to incorporate as many things as possible."

An enormous project to replace water and sewer mains from one end of town to the other has virtually eliminated traffic on the village's main street all summer long, but Lyons said Michigan Avenue should be ready in time for the influx of visitors.

"They assured me that they were going to be done by the first of September, but they ran a little behind," she said.

Although the road will not be completely finished, at least two layers of asphalt will be down throughout the central business district.

"The new curbs are in, and a lot of the dust is gone from the downtown area," she said.

"They should be paving this week."

For an updated schedule of events, artist's listings and an arts and crafts exhibitor's application form, visit www.grasslakechamber.org or call the Grass Lake Regional Chamber of Commerce at and rebuilt, new wiring and plumbing were installed and - one of Padden's favorite points - the bathrooms are completely new.

INVERNESS

"I'm really proud of the new restrooms; they are much larger and very pleasant," he said.

"Before, you could hardly even turn around in there and they were in pretty bad shape; a lot of women would choose to go home rather than use the ladies room here."

Padden said the inn has "quite a bit of history."

For one thing, it was the first commercial building in Dexter Township.

The property was part of a land grant made by President Andrew Jackson to John Glenn in 1836.

Glenn's granddaughter, Mary Wright, established a trading post in the building in 1907.

Several photos on the walls show the changes the tavern has undergone over the years

A small side room is called "Moose's log cabin" because of the massive moose head that hangs above one of the doorways and the dark log cabin-style walls.

Added in the 1920s, it features a fieldstone fireplace and holds up to about a dozen comfortably.

The banquet room, added on in the 1970s, seats about 40 or so.

"The kids like coming in here; we put Nickelodeon on the big-screen TV," Padden explained.

And "big screen" is no joke - it measures 12 feet by 15 feet.

More than a dozen stools run the length of the brand-new bar, and there is a second stone fireplace in a seating area off the bar

Those are working fireplaces, Padden noted. "It'll be nice in the winter with those; it'll get pretty cozy in here."

A unique conversation starter is the grey-and-yellow painted, cast-iron device with a big wheel that is bolted to a table near the jukebox.

Turns out it is the original windmill-driven water pump that was in service until 2007.

But to avoid fading into history, the reputation of a bar and restaurant hinges on the quality of its food and drink.

Bryon and Teresa Wiley of Stockbridge were sitting at the bar last week enjoying lunch and a cold brew.

"We've been here several different times over the years," Bryon said. "The improvements they've made are awesome."

Teresa added: "The service is better at the old one we'd sometimes sit at a table for an hour before being served.

"It's not as dark and dingy as it used to be, it's outstanding," she added.

Both commented on the Inn's "friendly atmosphere" and recommend it to friends "all the time."

Over by the fireplace, Rob Ideson and Dave Speicher were discussing business over a leisurely lunch.

"The food was good, and the service was pleasant," said Speicher, who was visiting from out of town. "It's only the second time I've been here in 10 years."

FAITH

Jesus For You

By Rev. Charles Schulz

In the broad Christian tradition, there is a common understanding that "Jesus is for you." In the popular culture that boils down to a smiley face and the phrase, "Smile, Jesus loves you."

I'd venture to say that most people in the Christian tradition would go a step further to affirm the phrase, "Jesus died for you." While the phrase is not found exactly that way in the Bible, it's easy to deduce from passages like Romans 5:6 ("When we were still powerless, Christ died for the ungodly), Luke 22:20, and John 3:16.

While this little sentence might draw widespread nodding and affirmation, and even "Alleluias," the deeper question is, more precisely, what does this mean? After all, "Christ died for you" is a rather short-hand expression for a deeper truth which needs to be explained. Several theories have been brought forward over the course of Christian history. Only one of these meanings, I believe, shows how Jesus is the truly and fully "for you" as the Savior of the world.

The fourth and fifth century English monk Pelagius defined "Christ for you" by filling it out to mean, "Christ is (an example) for you to follow (and by so doing you will earn God's favor)." This description of the meaning of Christ has the advantage of making immediate sense and sounding obvious. Non-Christians can and do also affirm it. The life of Jesus appears as a beautiful example of kindness toward the oppressed, opposition to the corrupt, and the tireless pursuit of justice and mercy. His death shows the ultimate value of his principles. His would stand alongside the lives of so many other heroic persons of history who have also illustrated courageous virtue. Finally, St. Peter appears to give support for this position in his first letter, where he writes, "Christ suffered for you, leaving you an example, that you should follow in his steps" (2:21).

But that's not all Peter wrote or believed. All of the meaning of Jesus for us cannot be reduced to the question, "What Would Jesus Do?" and how I should live to be more like Him. The truth is that I have not been like Him and as a Christian I do not find myself to be more than a stumbling disciple in the wake of His awesome and magnificent footsteps. I need more than a beautiful model that tells me the kind of life that pleases God and serves humanity. I need a Savior.

Indeed, there are many other ways to fill out the phrase of "Jesus for you." Many options, however, sound to me as though Jesus died for me to do something. As a sinner who knows how much he is a sinner, it is exactly here that I falter. A Jesus who needs me to do something, anything, to save myself or to help myself does me no good. I am then left with my doubt about whether I have done the required thing or done it well enough.

So, to fill out the meaning of the death of Jesus, let us hear from the prophet Isaiah, who foretold of the work of the Savior with these words: "He was pierced for our transgressions,

Business

Are you in front or behind the curve?

Your Biz coach

By Lauren Eichner

Where do you stand when it comes to the technology curve? In working on our new site (RevenueBlitz.com), I am learning more then I ever have about today's technology and I haven't even scratched the surface. I used to pride myself on always be up on what is the latest and greatest in technology, but now I feel it is a full time job to even come close to staying in front of the curve.

Let's start with the internet: you have blogging, pinging, wiki-ing, dig-ing, hyperlinks, trading links and so on. And that is just pertaining to the blogosphere (yes, that is a new term as well). My 'web guy' as I like to call him – I think the official term is Webmaster, had to talk me through the list of how to promote our new site. It was an hour long conversation and I'm still trying to figure things out! The internet is the new wave of communication and if you are not riding the wave, it will wash you out!

You can also use technology to improve you and your team's efficiency. Alone, it can save you and your people hours every week (after you've figured it all out), and as we all know, time equals money. There are so many programs, applications and software not to simplify just about any task you might need to do. To make the task of staying ahead of the curve, I recommend that you commit to learning one new piece of technology per week that will simplify your life.

Technology has also made communicating much easier and faster. My husband is a big fan of texting, he says that it is a guys' best friend for communicating – it's quick and to the point. However, I also feel that technology has gotten in the way of real communication. Don't let email or texting get in the way of picking up the phone and touching base with your best clients. Nothing will ever take the place of a nice handwritten note with a real stamp, delivered by a real postman. If you really want to make someone's day, do it the old-fashioned way – your clients will remember it.

Lauren Eichner is the founder of Getting Results Coaching. Stay tuned for the release of a very special online coaching program coming soon and totally free. We will kick off the launch of the site with the 'Coach Across America' the national tour. You may preregister at: www.RevenueBlitz.com. Pastor installed at St. John's United Sunday, Sept. 7, was a very proud and happy day for the members of St. John's United Church of Christ, as their pastor, the Rev. Lynn Finkbeiner, was officially installed by the Covenant Association of the United Church of Christ.

Among the 80 people attending were covenant ministers, area ministers, friends and guests of St. John's.

The church was decorated for the occasion with candles and greens. Diane Haab played the organ, Leila Bauer was the song leader, and members participated with devotional readings.

After the service, the congregation enjoyed a dessert reception in the newly remodeled fellowship hall.

Guests are always welcomed to the 9:30 a.m. Sunday services in the country church, located on Waters Road between Chelsea and Manchester.

Please come and meet the new pastor. For further directions call Ruth Ann Steel at 475-2307 or Brenda Buss at 428-8138.

Chelsea Ward groundbreaking

Members of the Chelsea Ward of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints (above) held a groundbreaking recently. The church is located on 1330 N. Freer Road. The current building is being expanded. The first building on the site was constructed in 1984 and was expanded in 1990. The current addition will add a dedicated chapel and additional classroom space. The Chelsea Ward started with a handful of members and currently has membership of 300. Gladys Buck, one of the first members in the Chelsea area, Rick Adams, member of the Chelsea ward, and Allen Hicken, Bishop of the Chelsea Ward, were among those on hand to celebrate the event.

He was crushed for our iniquities; the punishment that brought us peace was upon Him, and by His wounds we are healed" (Isaiah 53:5). Jesus died to pay the price for our sins and to bring us peace with God. He took God's wrath in order to give us God's love. He did it so well that He left nothing else, no remainder, no outstanding action for us to do. He comes with the gift complete – it's the gift of the forgiveness of sins and life among His people and eternal life with God.

Jesus died for me – so now I don't have to worry about whether I am saved or what I must do to gain God's favor. It's done. For you, too.

CCA hosts annual 'Try-It Day'

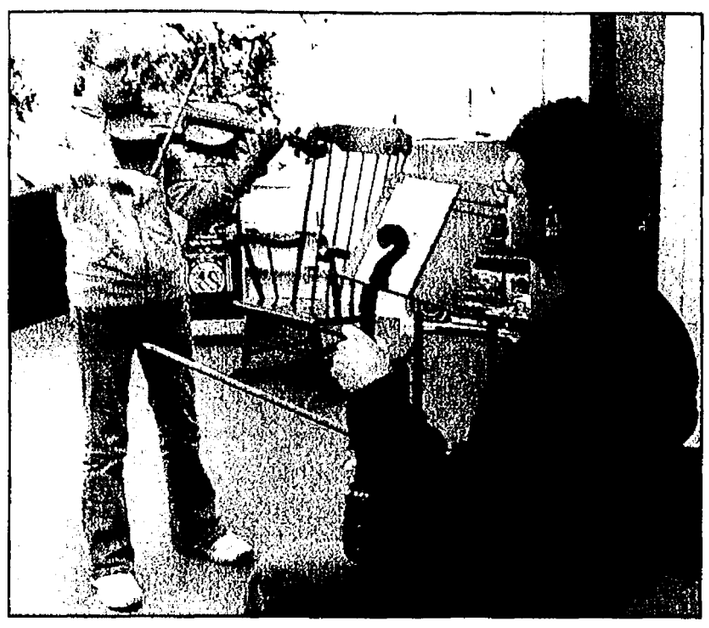
"Try-It Day" has become a much-anticipated annual event at Chelsea Center for the Arts, featuring free demonstrations and mini-lessons from all of the private music studios and group music classes.

Shar Music of Ann Arbor will host a string instrument "petting zoo" for children to experience first-hand instruments sized just for them. Held from 1 to 4 p.m. on Sunday at 400 Congdon Street, Chelsea Center for the Arts' Try-It Day will welcome children, teens and adults as the rooms are abuzz with musical activities.

With private studios in voice, piano, guitar, mandolin, flute, Suzuki Violin, violin, viola, cello, and bass, CCA is a one-stop shop for excellence in music training for all ages. Director of Music Lisa Hinz-Johnson points to the current success of the music programs at Chelsea Center for the Arts.

"Chelsea is a community that recognizes the value of the arts," she said. "We are a small town with a passion for the arts, and it shows in the way families value these arts opportunities. Our music student enrollment has grown by leaps and bounds over the last five years, despite an economy that could prove devastating to a non-profit arts organization such as ours."

Chelsea Center for the Arts has extra reason to celebrate this Try-It Day.



"The milestone 10-year anniversary of the generous gift of this building from Jeff and Kathleen Daniels gives us another excuse to shout hooray," Hinz-Johnson said. "It's fitting that during this celebration year we are implementing a dynamic scholarship plan to benefit even more students than have been served in the past."

The specific plans for scholarship assistance will be announced at the annual fund-raiser, "Autumn Jubilee," on Oct. 18.

Try-It Day highlights private music studios with CCA music instructors on hand to answer questions, hold mini lessons and help families connect to a music class or lessons.

"It's the perfect time to try out an instrument for the first time or the 101st time – this is an event for beginning to advanced musicians, young and old," Hinz-Johnson said. "If you've always wanted to play piano, for example, but never had the chance to study, stop on by and let one of our instructors inspire you."

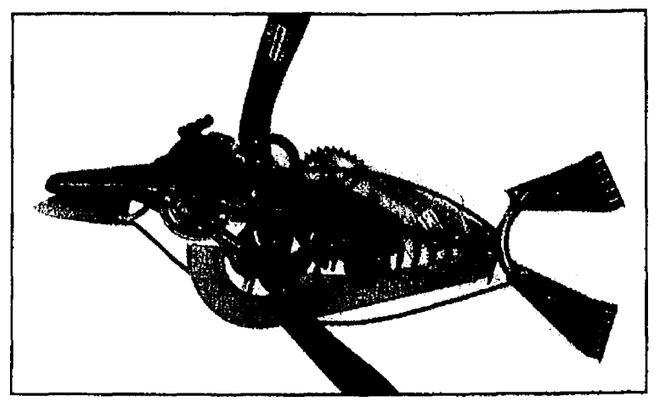
Besides the mini private lessons, Try-It Day also highlights group classes for the fall semester. Bella Voce returns by popular demand this fall. Led by Robin Woodard, this class is designed to help young singers discover their vocal talents and improve their music skills in a small group setting. Woodard will be on hand to meet with interested singers ages 7-12 and give them a taste of the popular voice class.

New for fall is Tara Vesprini's Beginning Strings, a dynamic program of private and group string lessons for true beginners in this Suzuki-based curriculum. Vesprini will also be launching a Music Together program at CCA this year. Music Together is a tremendously popular national program geared toward infants through preschoolers and their families.

"We are offering classes to meet the music needs of infants through adults," Hinz-Johnson said. "We're so proud to be bringing Music Together to Chelsea Center for the Arts. Tara Vesprini is an enthusiastic and phenomenal instructor who has a passion for bringing music to the youngest children. This is an outstanding program and will surely be a popular addition to our growing class list."

Other new fall offerings in music include an adult community chorus and Alex Anest's Jazz Ensemble class.

CCA's Try-It Day is free and open to the public. The doors are open from 1 to 4 p.m. and families are welcome to visit with the instructors, schedule lessons, and sign up for classes all afternoon. For additional information on Try-It Day or any of the upcoming Chelsea Center for the Arts events and classes, call (734) 433-2787, or visit CCA online at chelseacenterforthearts.org.



Chelsea artist featured in magazine

John Schwarz, a local Chelsea artist and high school art teacher, was recently given top billing in an international art publication.

This fall's "Sculptural Pursuit" magazine highlights Schwarz's recycled assemblage sculptures with a cover shot and a full article inside. Sculptural Pursuit, a quarterly art magazine that is distributed globally, runs a contest four times a year looking for up and coming artists of all medias. The winners of the contest get a cover shot of their recent work and a full photo layout and article inside.

John's wife Patti, who owns the River Gallery in Chelsea with business partner Deb Greer of Ann Arbor, entered his work in the contest.

"My wife really gets the credit for this because she entered me in the contest," Schwarz said. "I don't think I would have. I feel very honored to be recognized by Sculptural Pursuit."

In the article highlighting Schwarz's mechanical constructions, Sculptural Pursuit features many of his works from John's recent gallery exhibition. Schwarz had his first one-man show at the River Gallery last September that almost completely sold out.

"We were happy with the overall response to the sculptures," Patti said. "We really weren't sure how folks would react to them. Many pieces from the show were sold to local collectors including the Ross School of Business at the University of Michigan while others went to Florida and Tennessee."

John's new work has a similar look and whimsy to it, that was the common thread throughout his show last fall. Schwarz is continuously working on new mechanical sculptures that can be found at the River Gallery in Chelsea.

Consider options when choosing a veterinarian

When it comes to choosing a physician, it's often hit or miss. For some people, a doctor's bedside manner is extremely important, while others care more about a doctor's credentials than his compassion.

The same is often true for pet owners when it comes time to choose a veterinarian, though in many cases pet owners prefer a vet who has a gentle approach to their pet. Since a pet cannot speak for itself, it is important to find a vet who will be gentle with the animal, but several other factors should go into a pet owner's decision as well.

• Reputation: A vet's reputation is often his best reference. When looking for a vet, seek advice from family, friends or coworkers. When doing so, be sure to get a grasp of that person's approach to pet care.

Just like there are different breeds of dogs, there are different types of dog owners. Some take a more lax approach to pet care, only taking their dog to the vet when something's noticeably wrong. Such people might not be the best judge, since they likely have little experience with the vet. Find someone who has a conscientious approach to pet care and seek their advice on a vet.

If no one in your circle of family and friends can offer advice, visit a nearby dog park and ask for advice. Even if you don't own a dog, you're liable to get valuable insight.

• Facilities: A veterinarian's facilities should also be considered. The American Animal Hospital Association offers a voluntary membership that offers guidelines with respect to facilities, equipment and the quality of care. Those who volunteer for this membership must meet those guidelines, so pet owners who see that an animal hospital is a member of AAHA can be certain that the hospital is up to snuff.

• Specialty: Much like physicians, veterinarians can specialize in certain areas, and some even specialize in certain breeds. This could be something pet owners, particularly those who might own a purebred dog, would want. For some, however, this might not be of the utmost importance.

If possible, choose an animal hospital that has a specialist on staff, even if your individual vet is another doctor. This can make any unforeseen circumstance, such as emergency surgery, less difficult to deal with.

• Fees: While it is available, most pet owners don't have pet insurance. Therefore, fees should be considered before choosing a vet. Still, simply because a vet charges more for standard visits or consultations doesn't necessarily mean he's the best vet in town. It could simply mean that the town he practices in is more affluent, and his business costs are higher and force him to charge higher standard fees. Because pet ownership is such a big commitment, it's important to get a grasp of these fees before choosing a vet.

• Emergency service: This can be very important when choosing a vet. Know what type of emergency service the hospital your vet is associated with provides. No pet owner wants to find themselves in an emergency and not know what to do. If a

Humane Society offers free feline adoptions

Because of the continuing cat overpopulation crisis in Washtenaw County, the Humane Society of Huron Valley will be temporarily waiving all adoption fees on cats over 6 months of age.

HSHV has over 70 adult cats looking for new homes.

"Right now our cat cages and foster homes are completely full and we know that many homes are feeling very empty," Tanya Hilgendorf, HSHV executive director, said in a press release. "If your kids have gone off to school and you crave something to make you feel needed, the HSHV has something that really needs you – adult cats.

"You can end your 'Empty Nest Syndrome' and help us empty our over-crowded cat cages by coming out to the HSHV and adopting an adult cat."

Hilgendorf said offering free cats to welcoming families will help control the shelter's feline population.

"We value every animal in our care and believe that they all have worth beyond any dollar amount," she said. "We understand that a free pet is controversial to some but in order to save lives, it is our job to do whatever is necessary to find loving and responsible homes for homeless animals in these tough economic times."

While HSHV rarely waives all adoptions fees, studies have shown that free adoptions are just as successful as fee-based ones. The Humane Society in Berks County, Pa., frequently offers free adoptions and has tracked the results, which have been very positive.

"All adopters must still meet HSHV's adoption requirements, including being able to afford food, care and veterinary treatment, and participate in an adoption counseling meeting before they can adopt," Renee Benell, HSHV adoption coordinator, said. "We will also follow-up on the free adoptions just as we have always done to help ensure a successful transition."

HSHV's cat adoption fees include: Kittens 6 months and younger — $100 (adopt one and the second kitten is free).

Adult cats over 6 months old – free for a limited time.

All HSHV cats will be spayed or neutered and vaccinated, and have microchip identification.

HSHV is an independent 501(c)(3) non-profit organization serving all of Washtenaw County and relies on donations from businesses and individuals in the community.

The mission of the HSHV is to find loving homes for every adoptable animal in its care and to prevent cruelty to animals.

The shelter is open from noon until 5 p.m. Saturday through Monday, and from noon until 7 p.m. Tuesday through Friday. HSHV is located at 3100 Cherry Hill Road in Ann Arbor. For more information, call 1-734-662-5585 or visit the Web site, www.hshv.org.

Cats, dogs highly sensitive to human allergens

With the onset of fall, people across the country begin to feel the effects of outdoor seasonal allergens. Sneezing, watery eyes, stuffy nose and serious respiratory difficulties are all symptoms allergy sufferers know all to well. But did you know that like people, our feline friends can suffer from allergies?

Much like in the human population, the occurrence of allergies in pets seems to be on the rise. Cats show comparable allergy symptoms to humans, even to the point of developing asthma.

Pet allergies fall into three main categories: food allergy, an allergic reaction to an ingredient in a pet's food; flea allergic dermatitis, or "flea bite hypersensitivity"; and atopy, an environmental allergy.

Atopy in pets is the most unfamiliar type of pet allergy. Just like humans, cats can suffer an allergic reaction to airborne substances such as dust, pollen or molds. Depending on the allergen, or agent causing the allergic reaction, your cat may demonstrate symptoms seasonally, such as in the case of pollen, or year-round, as in the case of dust or molds.

Many people have long blamed pets, particularly cats, for causing allergies and breathing problems in people. However, in the past few years, scientists have found that humans may be introducing agents triggering asthma in cats. Dusty houses, human dandruff, chemicals, artificial fragrances and certain types of cat litter can all create serious inflammation in the airways and worsen cats' asthma.

With a rising number of cats suffering from feline asthma, which causes shortness of breath, wheezing and coughing, the condition is fairly common. Once your cat is diagnosed with feline asthma, you have several treatment options depending on the severity of the case.

Horses require time, financial commitment from their families

Horses have earned the reputation as the backbone of life on a ranch and farm due to their long history of being instrumental helpers in rural areas.

While horses today still are in abundance on farms and ranches, that isn't to say they should be seen as mindless powerhouses, or relegated to cowboy companions. In fact, horses are kept as pets all across the country in rural and suburban areas, just as a person might keep a dog or cat as a companion animal.

According to Animal Behavior Associates, the total number of horses owned in the United States in 2001 was estimated to be 5.1 million. Horses can be purchased, leased or adopted. Whether you choose to keep a horse as a pet companion will rely on a number of factors.

• Expense: Horses can be expensive pets. Apart from the initial expense of purchase, food and shelter costs can quickly add up. If you are lucky enough to have ample land on your property, you may save in boarding costs. But if you need to rent a stall, it can be pricey. Many horse experts say that you'll need at least $1,200 per month for horse care.

• Space: Horses need exercise, a chance to graze and a place to rest out of the elements. Individuals with a lot of acreage may be

Loud noises induce panic among pets

This is the season for bottle rockets and thunderclaps. What causes many people to look up in the sky in awe could be prompting your pet to cower under the bed.

Some pets are extremely sound sensitive. These dog and cats may suffer a high level of fear and stress when exposed to loud noises such as fireworks, gunshots, thunder and vehicle backfires, according to the Association of Pet Dog Trainers.

In such a state of anxiety, pets may jump through windows, scale fences or do whatever is in their means to escape normal confinement systems, such as leashes or cages.

"It makes a lot of sense for animals to be afraid of loud, sudden noises. In the wild, noise of this magnitude would be correlated with some real danger, like a landslide or tornado," Dr. Janice Willard said. "We may be able to understand that a fireworks display is just entertainment, but for our pets, the fear is very real and related to basic survival instincts."

Not all pets react the same way to loud noises. And some are bothered by one noise and not another. It pays to get in tune with what frightens your dog or cat.

"What may cause fear in a dog and how the dog responds behaviorally will vary between dogs. Noise phobias are not mutually exclusive. Some dogs may only be fearful of thunderstorms, while others may also be afraid of fireworks and other loud noises," said Dr. Kari Wallentine, a veterinarian and graduate student in animal sciences and industry at Kansas State University.

While it is often difficult to teach an old dog — or cat — new tricks, there are steps to reduce pets' anxiety when loud noises are stressful.

• Be mindful of when fireworks displays or other loud events, such as block parties or community festivals, are taking place in your

Separation anxiety can have adverse effect on dogs

The bond between a pet owner and pet is a strong one. Before leaving for work each morning, most pet owners make sure to say goodbye to their pet, especially if the family pet is a dog.

These devoted dog owners typically miss their dog while at work, and the feeling is mutual. In fact, some dogs even suffer from separation anxiety.

Oftentimes, the behavior that results from separation anxiety is misunderstood, leading dog owners to think their dog is being disruptive or just has a bad temperament. That couldn't be further from the truth for most dogs — and only highlights the importance of understanding and recognizing separation anxiety in dogs to avoid misdiagnosis.

What is separation anxiety?

Separation anxiety in dogs occurs when dogs are left alone. In a typical case, a dog will have a dramatic anxiety response within 20 to 45 minutes after their owners leave them.

These responses can include digging, chewing or scratching at doors in an attempt to reunite with their owners, or howling or barking to get their owners to return. Dogs may even grow so distressed they urinate or defecate inside the house. This occurs even in dogs that are house trained and otherwise well behaved.

Many dog owners assume these negative responses are a dog's attempt at punishing the owner for leaving. Instead, these responses are the result of a panic attack the dog suffers when the owner leaves.

Why does a dog suffer from separation anxiety?

The Humane Society of the United States notes that the exact reasons for why some dogs experience anxiety while others are perfectly fine when left alone is unknown. For some dogs, these anxiety attacks can be triggered by a number of circumstances:

- A dog accustomed to constant human companionship is left alone for the first time.
- A traumatic event, such as being left at a kennel during a family vacation.
- A change in routine, such as a shift in work schedule or even moving to a new home.

How do I know if this is separation anxiety?

The signs of separation anxiety are rather easy to detect and include the following:

- The behavior occurs primarily when the dog is left alone.
- The dog seems especially excited or frantic when greeted.
- The negative behavior always occurs when the dog is left alone.
- The dog grows excited or even depressed when you are preparing to leave the house.
- The dog doesn't like being outside alone.

What can I do to help?

While it's important to consult a veterinarian if you suspect your dog is suffering from separation anxiety, the HSUS suggests the following techniques for dealing with dogs with mild or moderate anxiety problems:

- Don't make a big spectacle when coming and going. When you get home from work, ignore your dog for a few minutes, then calmly pet him or her. Of course this will be difficult, but it will help the situation.
- Leave your dog a reminder of you during the day. This can be an article of clothing you recently wore or something else that has your scent attached to it.
- Keep a radio or television on in the house so your dog can hear comforting voices and not just silence.
- For dogs who exhibit more severe or advanced symptoms of separation anxiety, visit the HSUS Web site at www.hsus.org.

VET

certain hospital does not meet your emergency requirements, look elsewhere. If that's not an option, always be sure to keep a history of vet visits, so in the case of an emergency, you're immediately and fully prepared to show your animal's history if you need to see a vet whom you have not seen before.

- Proximity: Proximity can be especially important for pet owners. It's just more convenient to be nearby to a veterinarian. If the vet's office is far away, that could be costly in case of an emergency. In addition, routine appointments have a tendency to get put off if the vet is too far away. In general, try and use a vet located close enough to your home to make both of these things a non-issue.

If need be, you can always consult a vet who specializes in your breed while allowing a nearby vet to handle the more routine consultations.

PET APPEAL

Keep pets safe by poison proofing the home

When it comes to poison proofing a home, lots of people might assume it's only necessary for homes with young children. But homes that have pets, be it a friendly feline or man's best friend, need to be safe as well.

Keeping pets safe from poisons is especially important since many pets spend much time at home alone. While you're at work, for example, a pet likely has free reign over the home, leaving open the possibility of all sorts of unsupervised trouble. To poison-proof your home for pets, consider the following tips.

• Know your poisonous plants: Plants are a major poison hazard for pets, be it cats or dogs. For dogs, poisonous plants can include azaleas, morning glory, oleander and daffodils. For cats, the list includes geraniums, primrose, iris and marigold. Consult a veterinarian for a complete listing of potentially poisonous plants. If you have any of these plants in your home, be sure they are elevated to a height that a dog cannot reach and away from anything that a cat could climb onto.

• Lock all kitchen and bathroom cabinets: Typically, cleaners are kept in the cabinets below the sink in bathrooms and kitchens. A resourceful pet can get into such cabinets if they're not locked. Unfortunately, many cleaning products can be lethal to pets if ingested. Be sure to lock all cabinets where cleaning products are kept.

In addition, whenever you use these products, close the door and keep pets out while doing so. Don't spray any product into the air while a pet is in the room.

• Keep the toilet lid closed: While it can be comical to imagine a dog drinking from the toilet, it can also be very dangerous. That's because automatic toilet cleaners contain chemicals that can make pets very sick. Always close the toilet lid whenever you've finished using the bathroom.

• Keep intentional poisons away from pets: Sometimes, homes with pets get unwanted guests. If your home has mice or other rodents, be sure to keep all rodenticides out of a pet's reach. Also, even if you do place a rodenticide in a location your cat or dog can't reach, that doesn't mean they won't necessarily be exposed to it. That's because rodents can transport these poisons to a different location in your home.

Before deciding on a rodenticide, first determine if it's worth the risk you're putting your pets at should they be exposed.

The same rules apply to insecticides as well. If you suspect an insecticide could be harmful to your pet, consult your veterinarian.

• Do not leave batteries lying around: Pets, especially dogs, love to chew on household items. Batteries left out can be very harmful and even lethal to pets if they chew on them.

Keep batteries in closed drawers and make sure any batteries that have been discarded are not placed in trashcans that don't have a closeable lid.

• Keep your garage and driveway clean: A car that leaks fluids is not only bad for your wallet, but can be very harmful to your pet as well. Keep your driveway and garage as clean as possible, and thoroughly clean up after any leaks. Products such as windshield washer fluid, antifreeze and motor oil should be stored high on shelves in the garage.

neighborhood. You can anticipate whether the noise will be frightening to your pet and take the necessary precautions.

• If your pet spends most time outdoors, move him or her inside if there are fireworks or thunderstorms. Not only does this safeguard the pet's safety, it can help reduce the level of stress from these loud events.

• Make attempts to muffle the frightening sounds. Move your pet into an inside room, such as a basement or a large closet so he or she is far enough away from the noise. Keep the room dim and think about playing soft music or placing the television on to serve as white noise.

• Don't encourage your pet's behavior, but don't punish it either.

"Ignore fearful behavior the best you can, even though it may be difficult," Wallentine said. "Don't punish your pet or do anything that your pet might find rewarding, such as petting or talking soothingly; this may increase the fearful behavior and phobia."

• There's a difference between intermittent fear and a serious phobia. If your pet's health is compromised by loud noises or other triggers, talk to your veterinarian and see what behavioral treatment options or medications there may be available.

Sanctuary provides home for neglected animals

By Amanda Hitt
Special Writer

Stepping onto the property of SASHA Farm is like stepping into an illustration from a children's storybook. A playful dog greets guests at the gate with a wag of her tail. Cows munch grass serenely on the hillside, roosters crow boisterously and occasionally a donkey lets out a loud bray.

Horses trot curiously to the fence to see if the new visitors brought them an apple or a carrot. Pigs lie lazy in their wallows and herds of goats and sheep graze in their pasture, stopping occasionally for a quick game of tag. You expect that at any moment, a farmer dressed in denim overalls will emerge from the barn, perhaps carrying a pitchfork and chewing on a piece of straw.

This isn't any ordinary farm, though. Located in the rolling hills of rural Manchester, SASHA Farm Animal Sanctuary is quietly fulfilling its mission of saving farmed animals from abuse, neglect and abandonment. The sanctuary provides the animals with good medical care, safe housing, plentiful food and companions for their entire lives.

This summer, SASHA took in two sheep who had been badly beaten and needed several surgeries to mend their broken bones; four Great Pyrenees dogs who had been so badly neglected by a backyard breeder that they were covered in baseball-sized mats and were fearful of being touched; two potbellied pigs who were being raised in a drug house in Detroit; and several other animals who were simply abandoned when they were no longer wanted.

Without a place like SASHA Farm and its generous supporters, these animals, and so many more that came before them, would not be alive today.

Even in the tough economy, SASHA is continuing to save animals, though it receives no government support. Funded solely by compassionate individuals, SASHA faces some difficult financial challenges.

As hay and grain costs rise, not only does feeding the resident animals cost more, but the sanctuary is also asked to take more animals whose owners can no longer afford to feed them. As fuel costs rise, not only does it cost more to drive animals to the vet or make a trip to the feed store, but the volunteers that the sanctuary depends on — most of whom drive from Ann Arbor or the Detroit suburbs — can no longer afford to make the trip as frequently. Still, the sanctuary finds a way to continue to save animals.

The sanctuary relies heavily on volunteer help. For those who have time to spare, consider volunteering. What could be more relaxing than spending a quiet day in the country, feeding horses, walking dogs or planting flowers?

For more information, visit SASHA Farm's Web site, www.sashafarm.org, to learn more about the farm and the animals that call the sanctuary home.

HORSES

able to devote the space for stables and a corral. Others will have to keep their horse at a stable where they can then visit and ride the animal.

• Time: Horses are time-intensive pets. That means that they will require ample amounts of your time for care. Your responsibilities will include riding and exercising, feeding, tack cleaning, mucking stalls and grooming.

• Grooming: Grooming should be a daily habit, as grit lodged under a saddle can be uncomfortable for a horse. As well as providing a shiny coat, regular grooming also enables one to notice any abnormalities on the horse. Cuts, irritations or fever can be detected and treated during a thorough grooming session. Expect to spend a few hours every day with horse care.

Part of horse grooming involves visits by a farrier. The farrier's job is to take care of the hooves. The farrier does this by regularly keeping the hooves trimmed and observing the conditions of the hooves. The farrier will use a rasp, a hoof pick, a hoof knife and nippers.

The rasp is used like an emery board, the pick is used to clean the debris out of the foot, the hoof knife is used to clean out dead sole and the nippers are used for cutting the excess hoof wall growth off.

Horses rely on their feet heavily, therefore foot maintenance is key. Farriers are responsible for this health and can take preventative measures to ensure hoof health and even work to correct certain problems.

• Feeding: Proper nutrition will allow a horse to grow and function normally throughout its life. Hay is generally the most widely used source of food for horses, as it's rich in vitamins, minerals and proteins, and is an essential part of normal food digestion. Make sure the hay is good quality and free of mold, as this can cause colic.

A balanced diet for horses is largely based on carbohydrates, with fats and proteins as essential supplements to the diet.

How much food a horse will need is largely dependent upon size. One of the leading causes of animal cruelty among horses is malnutrition, so careful attention should be placed on providing enough food.

Horses can be rewarding companions and beautiful animals. However, careful consideration should be placed on whether you have the time and money needed to keep a horse before you seek to purchase or lease an animal.

Research canine breeds before investing

When a family decides to welcome a dog into their home, it can be a day to remember for all involved. Dogs not only make great pets, but they make great friends as well, renowned for their unconditional loyalty.

But how successful a dog will adapt to its new family rests on a variety of factors beyond the dog's control. Choosing the right dog involves more than just picking out that doggy in the window. Before families head to the shelter or nearby breeder, it's important to consider the following factors to ensure that both the family and the dog will prove a good match for each other.

A dog's temperament is arguably the most important thing for a family to consider when shopping for a dog.

Temperament

Like people, dogs come in all shapes and sizes, and all different temperaments, too. A dog's temperament is arguably the most important thing for a family to consider when shopping for a dog.

While certain breeds have become known for exhibiting certain behaviors, oftentimes the science is less exact. For example, while pit bulls are widely considered aggressive dogs, many pit bull owners would say that's a generalization. Many have stated that their dogs, while active and fun-loving, aren't aggressive toward humans or other dogs.

The best way to judge a dog's temperament is to observe the dog itself before buying it. Also observe the behavior of the dog's parents, as just like humans dogs get a lot of their behavioral patterns from mom and dad. Of course, such observation is typically only available if families go to a breeder, which will be more expensive.

If you must go to a kennel, observe how a dog behaves around other dogs, and see how a dog you might adopt reacts to different members of your family, particularly children.

Financial commitment

How much a dog initially costs won't necessarily impact how well the dog fits into a family. However, certain breeds are more costly than others over the long haul. If money is tight, the dog may be the first to have to do without, and this could lead to physical and temperamental problems with the dog down the road.

A prime example is the English bulldog. While a popular and desirable breed to many, it's very common for bulldogs to come with a host of physical ailments, including respiratory problems and problems with their hips that could require surgery. Families with multiple children might want to avoid such a breed in order to keep money saved for the unforeseen problems and expenses that typically arise.

A dog that has needs that aren't met will most likely develop problems, be it physical, temperamental or both, so families need to get a grasp of the long-term financial commitments that accompany certain breeds before choosing a dog.

Current family members

The makeup of a family and the lives that family leads will also determine how well a dog will adapt to a given environment. Families with young children often make the mistake of choosing a dog that is very small, the theory being that a smaller dog poses less of a threat to the child. While that might be true, it doesn't take into consideration the threat the child or children can pose to the dog. Particularly for toddlers and younger grade school children, small dogs such as shih tzus or Chihuahuas are often seen as toys. This can be very harmful to the dog, which needs to be treated gently.

Another thing to consider is the lifestyles of all family members. Dogs are known for their loyalty, and often feel they need to protect the family's turf. For families with very social lifestyles that often include inviting friends over to the house, a dog that is less protective and more friendly to strangers would be the best match.

Allergies

Before even considering which dog to get, have all members of the household tested for dog allergies. Many people are allergic to dogs, which can make for a miserable home life. There are inoculations available that can negate a pet allergy, but be sure to visit an allergist first and see just what you may or may not be allergic to.

Four easy ways to digitally preserve your wedding photos

Your great-grandmother probably had just one treasured wedding portrait, and your own mother likely captured memories of her special day in an old-fashioned photo album.

You, however, are getting married in the Internet age, which means you'll be able to preserve a virtually limitless number of images from the biggest day of your life.

Here are four ways to digitally preserve your wedding photos:

1. Digital devices

From digital picture frames to smart phones that allow you to store images on a micro SD memory card, digital devices mean you can keep — and carry with you — favorite wedding photos.

Some digital frames limit the number of images you can store, while others are compatible with SD memory cards, meaning you can store, view and swap out thousands of images. You can also use your MP3 player, laptop, PDA and some mobile phones to store images.

You can present your images in a slide-show format, and even share images with a specific group of family or friends, or designate them viewable by anyone interested in wedding images.

2. Your PC or laptop

Many wedding photographers now offer services to put your wedding photos on a disc so that you can transfer images to your PC or laptop. Most developing services, like those found in pharmacies or department stores, also offer the option to put your images on a disc.

This storage method makes it easy to transfer images to your PC or laptop, where you can use editing

Classic luxury is back just in time for your wedding

Good news for brides inspired by Audrey Hepburn and Grace Kelly, classic is back. Fabrics, silhouettes and accessories borrowed from the 1940s through 1960s offer brides the opportunity to start with the basics and enhance them with luxurious finishing touches.

The dress

Eschewing large, modern swags of fabrics, designers are embracing the hourglass figure. Waists are nipped in or defined with belts and sashes, often in a color that slightly contrasts with the dress. Charming gowns with the look of prom dresses from the 1950s glide down the aisle with fitted bodices and full skirts of tulle, lace and applique.

For a less formal wedding, brides can go bombshell in frocks reminiscent of 1960s cocktail dresses. The length is shorter, but the look is equally sophisticated with gathered waists and narrower skirts.

The accessories

Birdcage veils — with large netting that falls at cheekbone length — are back in a big way. These simple veils frame the bride's glowing face and highlight special jewelry. Ladylike wrist-length gloves are the perfect complement to vintage bridal looks.

The classic bridal look is a perfect match with a simple and elegant pair of pearl stud earrings and a lustrous 16-inch strand of cultured pearls around the bride's neck.

"The Hindu Lord Krishna is said to have offered pearls to his daughter as a wedding gift which is where pearls and weddings were first married," says Jeremy Shepherd of PearlParadise.com, the world's largest online pearl company. "Pearls are considered a symbol of purity, making them the perfect fit with a bride's white dress."

Shepherd recommends white akoya pearls, a saltwater pearl that grows primarily in the coastal areas of Japan and China. Considered to be the classic pearls for jewelry, akoya pearls are prized for their perfect round shape, mirror-like luster and soft, neutral colors.

Visit www.PearlParadise.com for more ideas and classic bridal pearls.

The look

Tie a classic dress and accessories together with a polished hairstyle such as a bun or chignon and keep make-up understated. Dark brown or black eyeliner extended slightly past the end of the eyelid, a touch of black mascara and a shade of red lipstick perfectly matched to the bride's complexion are all that's necessary to complete the perfect, classic Hollywood face.

Get the wedding hairdo you really want

We've all heard the hair horror stories. Trusting bride submits to highly-recommended hairstylist, only to leave the salon on her wedding day with a hairdo that resembles a basket of brioche. Or, the glamorous updo that looked so photo-worthy indoors promptly flops in the middle of the seaside ceremony. How can you make sure that your hair is as dreamy as your dress, bouquet and bling-bling ring on the big day? "It takes a village," laughs Damien Carney, international artistic director for JOICO. "But with some forethought and collaboration with your hairdresser, it's possible to have the hairstyle you love on your wedding day."

Plan ahead

As soon as you have the guy, the ring, the date and the place, dial your hairdresser. Book an appointment and set up a two-, three- or six-month schedule for your cuts, your hair color, a practice session and the actual wedding day. "You'll want regular trims, even if you're growing your hair out," notes Carney, "and frequent deep conditioning treatments with a formula like JOICO'S K-PAK Deep-Penetrating Reconstructor so that your strands positively gleam when you walk down the aisle."

Schedule your final hair cut two weeks prior to the wedding, to give your ends time to recover from "snip shock." (If your hair is short, schedule this appointment one week before your wedding.) At that time, stock up on wedding day hair helpers. (Carney's go-to product for many of his glamorous looks is JOICO's Brilliantine Spray Gloss. This weightless shine booster helps control frizz and split ends, and it leaves hair looking glossy and lustrous.)

Book your final hair color application one-to-two weeks prior, so that by aisle-time, your hue will be beautifully blended. (Look for salons that use JOICO's Vero K-PAK color — these high-quality formulas condition and protect and the color is so shiny and vibrant it's found on the sets of "American Idol," "Grey's Anatomy" and many more.)

Be real

Work with your stylist to honestly assess your hair type, facial shape and personal style. While that ornate updo worthy of Marie Antoinette might seem like a good idea at first, if you're more of a natural type, you might want to consider something less structured. Bring lots of photos to the salon to help clarify the communication between you and your stylist. Also, think about the location of your wedding. If you're gathering on your parents' terrace, plan for the possibility of wind, humidity, even rain. "Be sure to carry the styling formula that your hairdresser recommends," suggests Carney. "A quick spritz of JOICO'S new Design Collection Humidity Blocker Finishing Shield, for example, will lock your style in place and tame frizz without making your hair stiff or sticky."

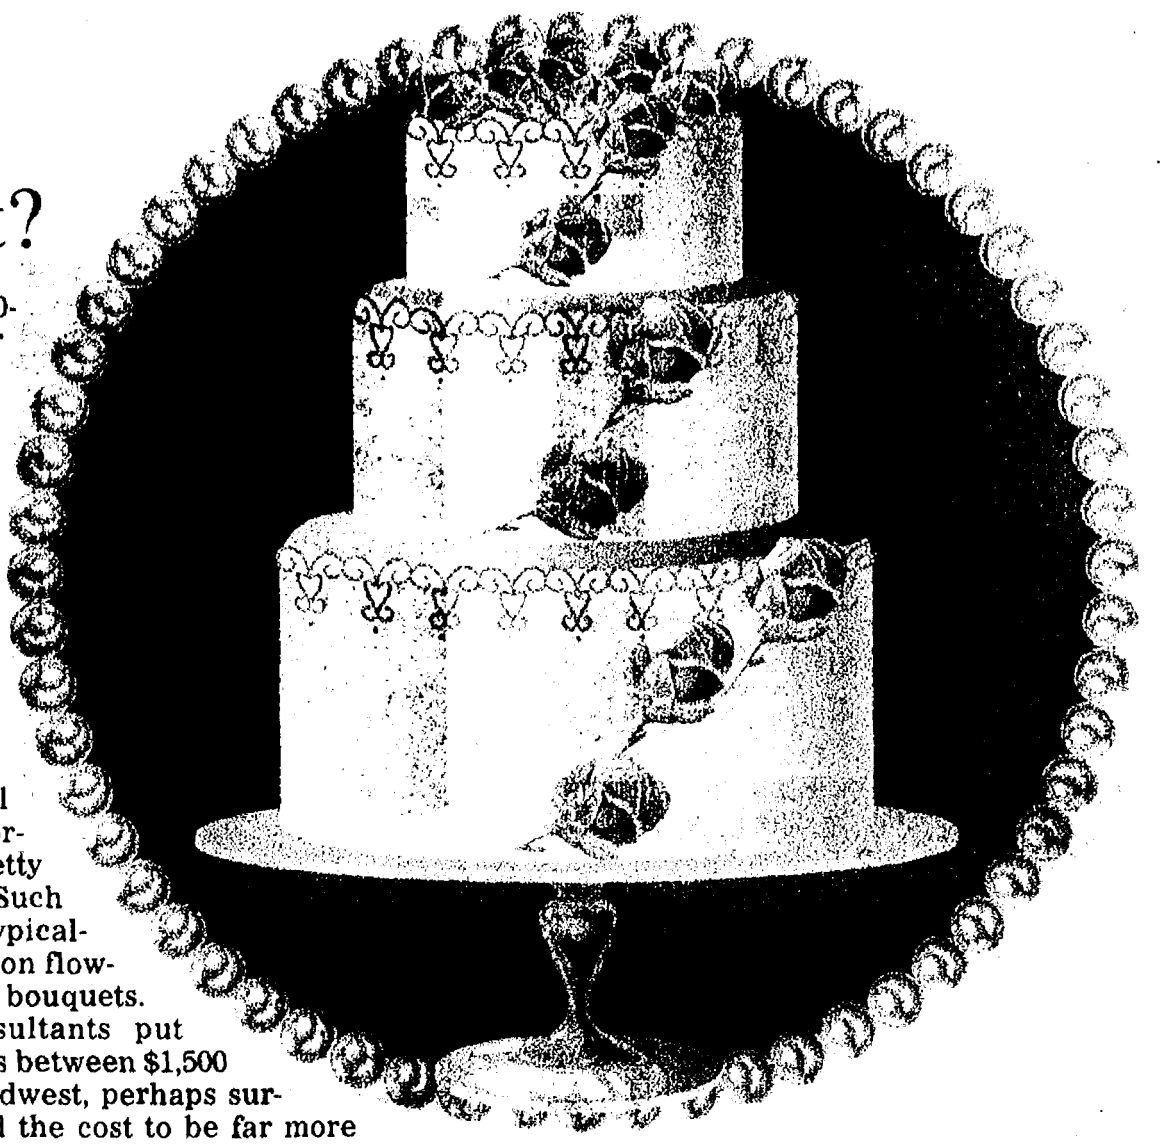
What will your wedding cost?



According to The Knot, an online resource for all things nuptial, the average cost of a wedding is $22,000. However, depending on the region of country, the bride and groom can expect to spend far more or even a lot less than that. Some interesting tidbits gathered in a survey of bridal consultants across the country conducted by The Knot:

• Those living in regions where the cost of living is highest can expect to spend more than the average. These regions include the Northeast, where a high-end reception site, such as an estate or museum, will fetch a minimum of $3,000, according to Meg Holland of Newton, Massachusetts-based Events Unlimited, Inc. In comparison, Ann Marie Kjelland, of Weddings by Ann Marie, in Plymouth, Minnesota notes that a similar site in that region will likely charge in the neighborhood of $1,000.

• Throughout much of the country, the cost to feed the guests is roughly the same. A more upscale meal in the Northeast can expect to fetch $120-200 per plate. A similar meal in the Midwest is not all that less expensive, typically between $120-140 per plate, while the price is similar in the South as well. Some regions, however, are especially cost-effective. Judy Lehmbeck, of Judy Lehmbeck Bridal and Parties in Oklahoma City, reports a high-end meal in that region is likely to cost between $50-100 per plate, far less than one might expect.

• One area that seemed to have the most uniformity was the cost of floral arrangements. Regardless of where the wedding is taking place, a middle-of-the-road floral arrangement will cost in the neighborhood of $2,000 pretty much anywhere. Such an arrangement typically includes in-season flowers and elaborate bouquets. While most consultants put such arrangements between $1,500 and $2,000, the Midwest, perhaps surprisingly, reported the cost to be far more than that, as Kjelland reported a couple can expect such a floral tab to be $3,000.

the film studio. So when designing your style, it's important to think about how it will look in all those photo opps. "Make sure there is some visual interest to your hair when it's viewed from the front," suggests Carney. "It's a mistake to have all of the detail — the flowers, the hair jewelry, the curls, the extensions — at the back of the head, out of view 90 percent of the time." Your best bet? Use your digital camera or your cell phone to snap pictures from every angle when you're in the salon for your run through.

Rehearse

That's right. You're going to practice walking down the aisle the night before your wedding, and in the same vein, it's wise to do a practice session with your stylist a few days before the ceremony. Bring your veil, and have your hairdresser do the 'do from start to finish. That way, your stylist will have a practice session under her belt in order to perfect her work, and you'll have a chance to tweak the look, photograph it and "feel it" so that you'll know it's right. The payoff? There will be no surprises when you're trying to get to the church on time.

Relax!

Try to maintain your perspective on what's really important — your fiancé, your family, your friends, and your future. "Remember, in the years to come, your happiest memories will center on your proud dad as he walked you down the aisle, your groom's happy smile and the love of your guests," notes Carney.

So plan ahead and do prepare as much as possible in advance. But once the big day arrives, let go and enjoy your wedding. That's the secret to looking truly beautiful!

For more information on hair-care tips, products and information from the experts at JOICO, visit www.joico.com or call 1-800-80-JOICO. January 2008 marks the 30th anniversary of Joico's K-PAK Reconstructor, the salon industry's Gold Standard of Reconstruction since 1978.

Travel secrets you should know before booking your honeymoon

It seems as though with the Internet and its many travel Web sites there would be no need to have an actual person book your travel. Surprisingly, however, more and more people are going back to using travel agents for at least some of their travel needs. According to a New York Times article, Forrester Research, a technology consulting firm, reports 9 percent fewer people booked travel online in 2007 than in 2005.

This is probably not news to brides and grooms embarking on their honeymoon planning, and who may find themselves turning to an experienced travel agent for the very first time in their lives. Most honeymoon couples are young enough to have incorporated the Internet into most aspects of their personal and professional lives, so why shouldn't they just book a honeymoon online themselves?

"Honeymoon couples have many reasons for using a travel agent to help plan and book their honeymoon, not the least of which is the time they can save and focus on other wedding details, instead. An experienced travel agent can help them plan the itinerary, book airfare, hotels and activities, saving them time and, frequently, money," according to Scott Ellingboe, CEO of The Honeymoon (www.thehoneymoon.com), an online honeymoon resource that has a honeymoon gift registry service, destination information, honeymoon packages, and a nationwide network of experienced travel agents.

While it's true that travel agents can save a couple the time they might otherwise spend on research and planning themselves, can they really save them money?

"Travel agents have relationships with tour and package providers that they can leverage in ways the average consumer cannot. Also, honeymoons can involve complex itineraries to various places throughout the world." This is why The Honeymoon has put together a network of honeymoon and destination specialists throughout the country. "These agents don't pay us to be there, we chose them because we wanted our honeymoon registry customers to have the most experienced and knowledgeable travel agents in the industry," offers Ellingboe. In fact, honeymoon and luxury travelers have never really stopped using travel agents for this very reason. Ten years ago the travel agent was going to be 'disintermediated,' a fancy word for 'put out of business.' But today agents are still a viable part of the travel industry.

There are so many travel options from which to choose that using a travel professional with the "been there, done that" experience can make the difference between a good trip and a "trip of a lifetime." Long live the travel agent!

Many photo-sharing Web sites now offer ample storage for all your wedding photo needs.

PhotosYourWay.com, for example, a new innovator in photo-sharing, offers 7GB of free storage, enough to store thousands of images. Photo-sharing Web sites also allow you to spice up your photo presentation with effects like captioning, cropping, editing, borders and more. You can present your images in a slide-show format, and even share images with a specific group of family or friends, or designate them viewable by anyone interested in wedding images. One caveat — photo-sharing sites are only for original, amateur works, not the copyrighted images you receive from your professional wedding photographer.

PhotosYourWay also offers the opportunity to get paid for your original, amateur wedding images. When you upload your images, simply select the option that makes them available for purchase by photo houses, advertising agencies, publishers and anyone else who needs fresh wedding images on a regular basis. The Web site acts as a broker for the images, sharing a percentage of the sale price with the member who posted the photo. It's possible to make up to $300 for exclusive rights to one of your images.

4. Your own wedding Web site

Many couples are now opting to design their own Web sites prior to the wedding.

Pre-wedding day, the sites can be great resources to communicate important information to guests and for making faraway loved ones feel like a part of your wedding preparations. After your big day, the site can be used to share anecdotes and images from the honeymoon, update friends and family on where you'll be living as newlyweds, and even for posting personal thank-you messages for especially thoughtful gifts.

Newly engaged? Plan, execute the next steps

Making the commitment to live life with another person is a large step. It marks the beginning of your future together.

Planning a wedding can be big undertaking. Many times the course of planning from the moment of engagement to the wedding day can stretch over several years. It requires patience, budgeting and organization. A wedding binder or filing system can help keep receipts and information all in one place. Additionally, use these steps as guidelines for your own event.

1. Engagement party: Many couples enjoy having an engagement party to announce that they're planning a life together. Engagement parties are receptions on a smaller scale. It's not necessary to invite all of the guests you'd be inviting to the wedding unless you have the budget to do so. Keep it to immediate family, including grandparents, aunts and uncles and first cousins. You may also want to invite close friends. If finances are an issue, consider a brunch or a cocktail party with passed appetizers instead of a full sit-down dinner.

2. Set the date: Once you decide you're getting married, you should consider when you want the big day to occur. This can depend on what month of the year you enjoy or when you think you may have saved enough to cover the cost of the wedding itself. Prime months include the spring and summer. If you want to have your wedding relatively soon, you may find that certain dates are already booked up for houses of worship and reception halls. Choose an off-peak time of the year, such as January, March, November or December, instead.

3. Establish a budget: The scope of your wedding will depend largely upon what you can afford. Many of today's average weddings range from $25,000 to $35,000. Make a list of all the costs you will have: wardrobe, clergy fees, reception hall, flowers, photography, gifts for wedding party, transportation, honeymoon, etc. Figure that the majority of the costs will be around $2,000 each (excluding the reception site, honeymoon and ceremony). Seeing the end cost will help you develop a plan for saving. Keep in mind that many of the payments and deposits are made over time, so you won't have to come up with the lump sum all at one time.

4. Wedding sites: Once you have a date and budget, your next step is to make arrangements with the church, synagogue or other place where the ceremony will take place. Most houses of worship prefer you secure the day with them before booking your reception site. Many places book a year or more in advance, so it is important to shop around and secure your locations as soon as possible. When looking at reception locations, it helps to have a preliminary idea of how many people you'll be inviting to the wedding so you can compare costs and decide on room sizes. Certain places offer lower rates for Friday and Sunday than Saturday night. This can help to keep your reception more budget-friendly.

5. Photography, Music, Flowers, Limos, Hairstylist: Some wedding vendors book up as fast as reception sites, particularly if they come well recommended. Secure your date for services with these people shortly after you reserve your ceremony and reception site. Vendors will likely require a deposit and balance paid before the wedding.

6. Wardrobe: The ladies in the wedding will need to browse for and decide on gowns roughly 6 to 8 months before the wedding. This allows time for the dresses to be ordered and alterations to be made. Gentleman can typically shop for tuxedo rentals a month before the wedding.

7. Registry: If you want to select gifts from a specific store, register for them as far in advance as possible. This way if people want to give you gifts from the registry in advance of the wedding, they'll know what to choose. Definitely register by 2 to 3 months before the wedding, because this is when the bridal shower is typically held.

8. Stationery: Order your invitations, save-the-date cards, etc. 5 to 6 months before the wedding so you have time to check the proofs and ensure they're printed correctly. Wedding invitations are usually mailed out 1 to 2 months prior to the event. It is customary to stamp the RSVP card so that guests simply put it in the mail.

9. Religious requirements: Some houses of worship require classes or retreats before a wedding ceremony to prepare the couple for marriage in a religious sense. Make sure these tasks are completed.

10. Honeymoon: It used to be the groom's task to book the honeymoon, but most couples do it together these days. Book the honeymoon and apply for passports if necessary, several months in advance.

11. Seating arrangements: This can be one of the most challenging parts of wedding planning. Once the majority of your RSVPS are in hand, you'll want to think about seating. Most reception halls will give you a seating map that you can use to determine seating. If you are a visual person, you may want to enlarge the map and actually cut out the names of guests to stick and re-stick in different areas of the room until the seating is just right. There are also computer programs that can help you with seating tasks.

12. Balances due: In the last months to weeks before the wedding, most balances will be due for the services. The reception hall will want a final seating count and you will be picking up your gown. When paying these balances, it's also a good idea to confirm with musicians, photographers and limo companies.

13. Rehearsal: Set a rehearsal a week prior to the wedding or within a few days before. This gives everyone a trial run. A dinner is customary following the rehearsal.

14. The big day: Rest up the night before and organize all of your wardrobe, honeymoon packing and then get set for one of the most momentous days of your life.

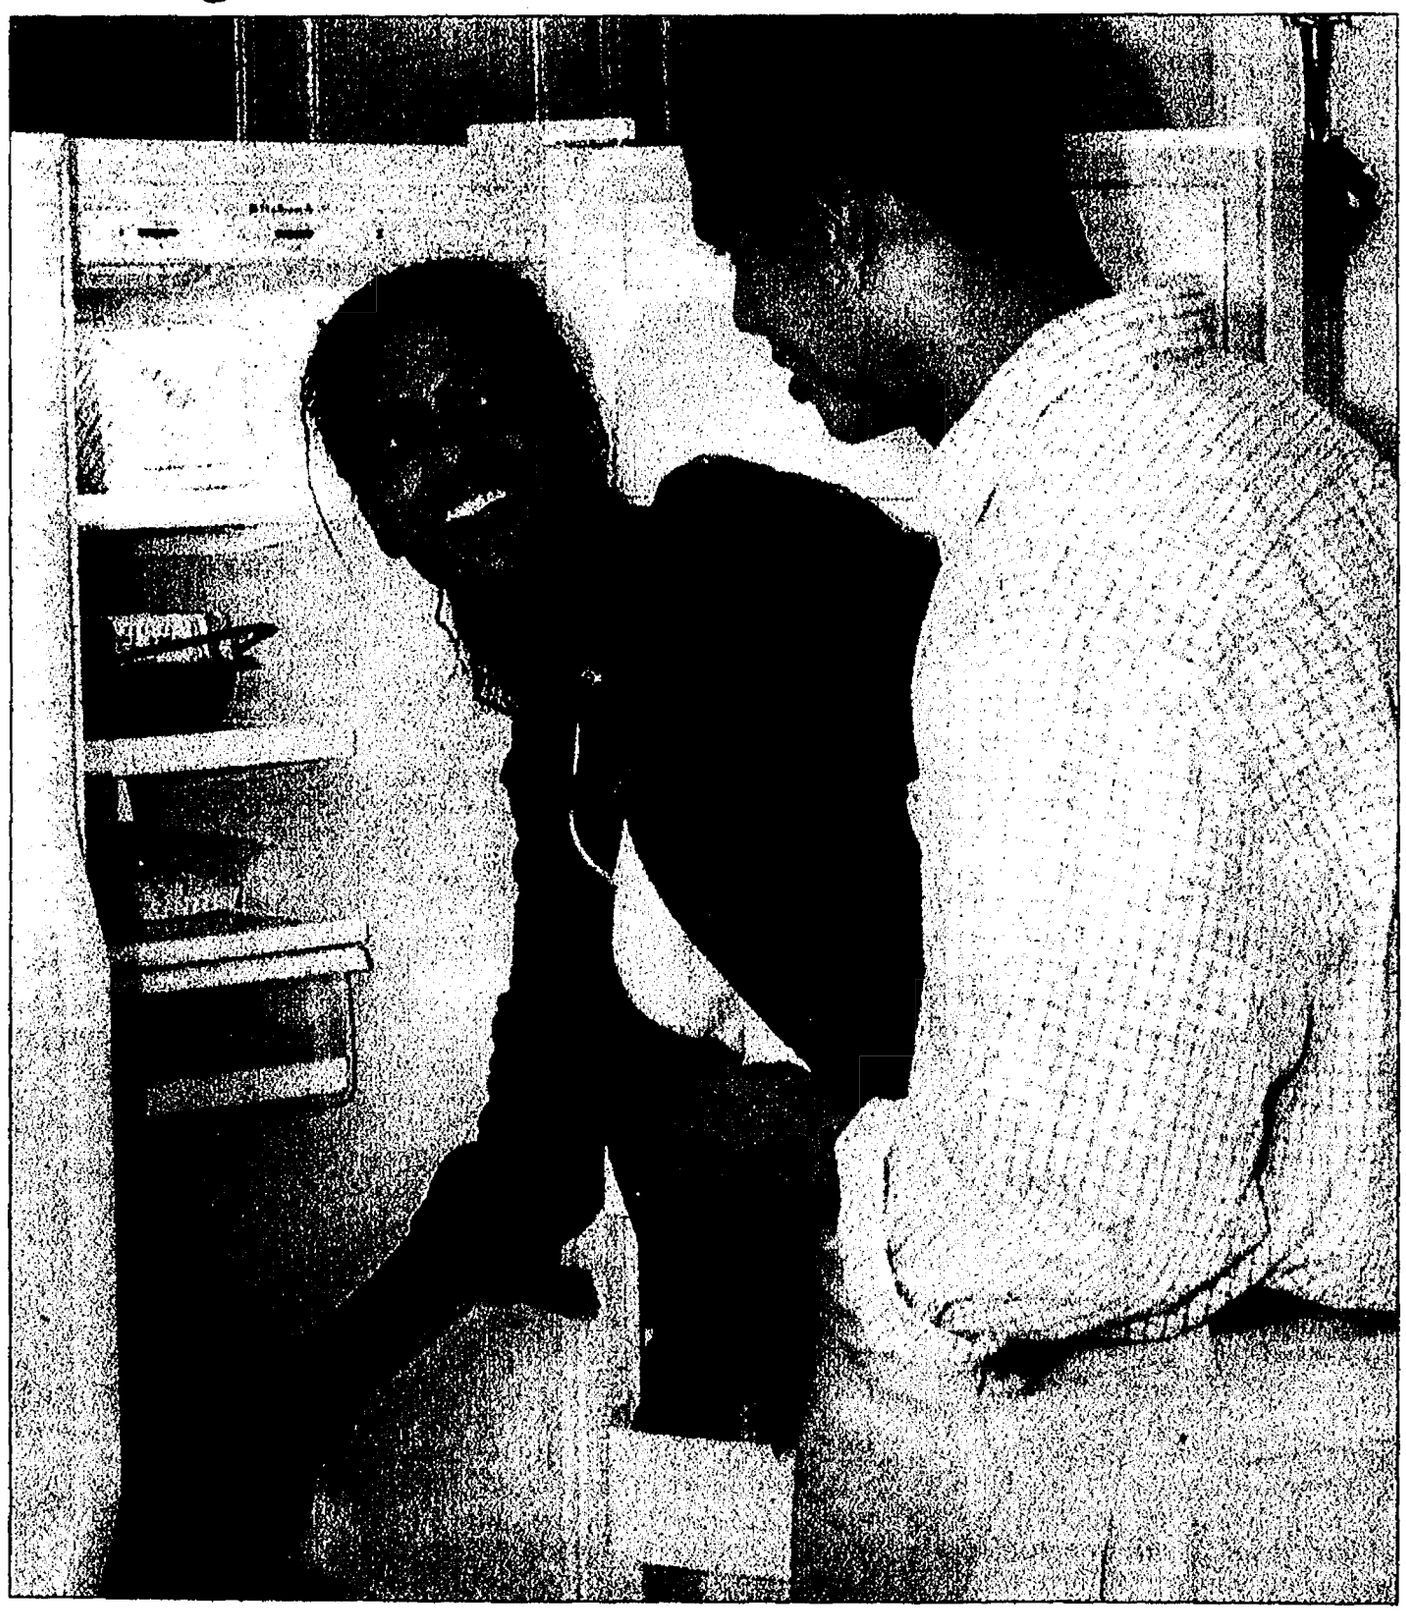
Happily ever after

Settling into marriage takes time for newlyweds



From flowers to guest lists, engaged couples spend months planning the perfect wedding. After the vows are said and the reception is complete, most newlyweds are ready to relax. But there are several steps newlyweds should take before their happily ever after can begin.

"Settling into life as a married couple takes some work," says Lindsey Leesmann, a recent newlywed and contributor to YesYouCanOnline.info. "If you're taking your husband's last name, you must complete the name change in several places. You also have to discuss managing money as a couple and learn how to live together."

Leesmann offers the following to-do list for newlyweds changing their last names:

Obtain a copy of your marriage license

If you stated you'd be changing your last name when purchasing your marriage license, you'll receive a copy of the license in the mail. This license should be taken to each location on your path toward a new last name.

Go online

Next, acquire a new Social Security card and update your passport. Complete Form SS-5 and take it to the local Social Security office to obtain a new card. The form can be found on the Social Security Administration's Web site (www.ssa.gov). Your passport can be changed by completing Form DS-5504, found at www.travel.state.gov.

Drive to the DMV

The next stop for newlyweds is the local Department of Motor Vehicles. Each state is different, so make sure to bring all the items required to get your name changed and renew your driver's license.

Check in at your bank

Most banks simply need a copy of the marriage license and the account holder's signature to approve a name change. Some may also require your spouse to be present.

Drop by the post office

To change your name at the post office, just pick up a change of address envelope, fill it out and mail it back.

Once the name change is complete, newlyweds can focus on managing money as a couple.

"Money is often a tricky topic for new couples," says Sam Goller, award-winning author of "Yes, You Can,Ä¶ Achieve Financial Harmony." "But it's important to start communicating about money at the beginning of your marriage."

Goller offers the following suggestions for newlyweds working to manage their finances as a couple:

Determine priorities

Prior to creating a financial plan, talk about your histories with money and what's most important to each of you when it comes to money.

Find missing dollars

You have to understand your spending habits before you can spend money in a way that helps meet your goals. Consider keeping a spending journal to find out where your money really goes.

Choose a system that works for you

You may prefer to sit down each month as a couple to pay bills and develop a monthly budget. Or maybe one of you is better at handling expenses and prefers to do it alone. Find a system that works with your needs.

"The key to managing money as a couple is to never stop talking," says Goller. "With shared determination, a plan and open communication, newlyweds have the power to improve their financial position both now and well into retirement."

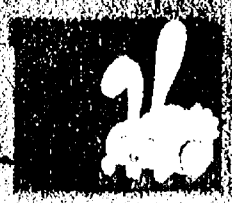
Miserable Creatures!



With limited apologies to Bambi, Bugs Bunny, and Punxsutawney Phil, in their natural form, these creatures will make even the most animal-loving gardener wacko!

We have a product from Sweden called PLANTSKYDD, which has been very effective in repelling these pests. Essentially, it's bovine blood and some fish oil, and it comes in pre-mixed liquid, granular, and concentrated powder forms.

Sure, it's disgusting! But it works!

HOT PEPPER SPRAY

(with slight modifications)

1/2 cup dried cayenne pepper

1/2 cup jalapeno pepper

1 gallon water

1/4 cup cooking oil

Add the peppers to the water; boil for 30 minutes. Stay out of the steam. Strain out the solids; pour into a spray bottle; add the oil. Shake before spraying to mix the oil and water. This should last thirty 1-2 hour. Please use gloves when working with this!
