Two Chelsea teens die in motorcycle crash

By Edward Freundl
Staff Writer

Two Chelsea teenagers were killed Friday night in Sharon Township when the motorcycle they were riding apparently left the road and struck several trees.

See Page 3-B of today's edition for complete obituary information.

According to Michigan State Police troopers from the Ypsilanti post, Ian Charles Hughes, 18; and Anna Rose Herter, 16, were pronounced dead at the scene of the accident, which occurred on Sylvan Road just north of Wingate Road.

Their bodies were discovered by a property owner shortly after 8 a.m. Saturday, a police report stated, but an investigation indicated that the crash occurred at about 8:30 the night before.

Hughes was driving the off-road dirt bike south on Sylvan Road, police said, and neither he nor Herter were wearing helmets when the bike went off the road on a very tight corner and crashed.

Police said speed appears to be a factor in the crash, but it is unknown at this time whether alcohol was involved.

On Monday, Chelsea High School Principal Julie Deppner said the school was thrown yet again into grieving the loss of more young people, a situation it has faced far too often in recent years.

She expressed condolences to the Herter and Hughes families.

"As many times as we go through this, whatever I'm feeling is nothing like what their families are going through right now," Deppner said.

The principal spoke from personal experience about both of the victims.

Ian Hughes attended Chelsea schools for almost his entire life, Deppner said. He was set to graduate with the Class of 2008, but left school a year ago.

"He came to see me earlier this year and said he felt like that was a big disappointment to his parents," Deppner said.

Hughes decided to return this fall to earn his high school diploma.

"He wanted his diploma; he wasn't satisfied with a GED," she added.

Deppner said Hughes was excited to be accepted at Stone School, which she described as Ann Arbor's alternative school.

"He was caring and thoughtful, he had a lot of friends who cared about him, and he was the type to stick up for his friends and look out for other people," Deppner continued.

She said she spent some time with the Hughes family over the weekend.

"The one thing that was prevalent was his love for his family — he did a lot for them," Deppner said.

"His sister Daniele and twin brother Trevor were the most important people in his life."

Daniele, also a CHS graduate, is now a senior at Eastern Michigan University, and Trevor graduated on schedule in June.

Something special: Hill among state's best backs

By Don Richter
Sports Editor

It was late in last Friday's Division 3 state district final. Holding on to a slim 14-7 lead, visiting Chelsea found itself deep in its own territory at its 11-yard line.

Host Mason had just scored a touchdown cutting Chelsea's advantage in half. The hometown crowd was in a frenzy, screaming at the top of their collective lungs. At the same time, the Mason defensive players were confidently motioning with their arms for the crowd to cheer louder. Momentum, it seemed, was definitely on the side of the home team.

While momentum might have been on Mason's side, Chelsea had in its arsenal something even more game-changing — the Bulldogs had Nick Hill.

With his back against Chelsea's end zone, Hill took the handoff. In the blink of an eye, he was through the hole and past the flat-footed Mason linebackers. One juke-step left and he was sprinting by the hapless, on-rushing Mason safety.

Bye.

See ya.

Six points.

With 4.4 speed, cat-like quickness and unnatural football instincts and vision, Hill is arguably the best junior running back in the state.

Before the Mason defense could even react, Hill (5-foot-8, 185 pounds) had exploded for a career-long 89-yard touchdown run. With his score, Chelsea built its lead to 22-7. The Bulldogs would eventually win 22-20 on a late-game, heroic defensive stand, but it was Hill's run that gave Chelsea the lift it needed to withstand Mason's gallant final push.

"We just decided to run off tackle, trying to get a

After the dust settles: Schauer outlines his 'top priorities'

By Sean Dalton
Staff Writer

Mark Schauer was still tired late last week after winning the Michigan District 7 seat in the U.S. House of Representatives from Republican incumbent Mark Walberg.

However, physical fatigue did little to blunt his enthusiasm.

"I'm feeling great," Schauer said Nov. 7. "I'm excited for the work I will be a part of to help Michigan through a tough economic transition."

He said the 300 supporters with him in Battle Creek on election night were equally enthusiastic for a change in Washington.

"This is something my volunteers have been looking at for months and months," Schauer said.

He and his supporters had just soaked in speeches by President-elect Barack Obama and Republican presidential candidate John McCain once that race's conclusion was clear, and they were preparing to make their

Filmmaker debuts 'powerful' documentary at McKune

By Terry Jacoby

Glan Carlo Menotti, a Pulitzer Prize winning composer, once said, "Any subject is good for opera if the composer feels it so intently he must sing it out."

Tom McPhee felt the emotion of his project so "intently" that including the word opera in the title was in perfect harmony with the story he was trying to tell. But in truth, the story was being told for him – and he would be the first to admit that he was just lucky enough to be there to document it.

'An American Opera'

A film by: Tom McPhee on the rescue efforts of animals after Hurricane Katrina.
When: 7 p.m., Nov. 19
Where: McKune Memorial Library in Chelsea
Tickets: Make reservations for this free showing at 734-475-8732.

Unlike a traditional opera, McPhee tells his story using images and words. Some disturbing. Some gut-wrenching. Some touching. All memorable. It's a story he felt compelled to tell after experiencing it while it was happening all around him. How lucky are we that a filmmaker and storyteller such as McPhee was living in this moment, allowing him to share with the rest of us what he was seeing through his unique perspective.

And how lucky is Chelsea that the filmmaker selected McKune Memorial Library to premiere his already award-winning documentary, "An American Opera." The film, which will be shown at 7 p.m. on Nov. 19 in the McKune Room, depicts the efforts of thousands of volunteers and other groups who attempted to save the lives of animals left behind following the destruction of Hurricane Katrina.

Michigan Women's Basketball is FAN-tastic!

Cameron Riordan, 6, of Milan celebrated her birthday with pizza, pop, cupcakes and 30 friends at Crisler Arena watching the U-M Women's Basketball team play.

"They even pronounced my name on a big speaker," she said of the party that her father says people still mention because it was so unique.

You can plan something similar this year for your son or daughter.

For just $150, the Michigan Athletic Department offers a women's basketball package that includes 20 tickets, 5 large one-topping pizzas, 20 beverages, 20 cupcakes, an autographed mini-Michigan basketball, a commemorative photo of the group, and reserved seating.

In addition, a birthday message is placed on the scoreboard.

If there are more than 20 people in the party group, that's fine. Additional tickets are $2 each.

The doors open 60 minutes before tip-off for party attendees and pizza, beverages and cupcakes are served to the group's reserved seats.

Hosting a birthday party at Crisler Arena at one of this season's 14 home women's basketball games provides parents with a fun and creative way to celebrate the special occasion.

Call 734-647-1261 for more details and for a complete schedule of home games.

U-M Women's basketball team posted a 19-14 season last year and returns 10 players from last season. Five are seasoned seniors for second-year coach Kevin Borseth.

In fact, last year's squad was one of only five teams in the program's 35-year history to post 19 wins, including a record 12 home victories.

The team also went to a post season tournament for the first time since 2002 and garnered a WNIT invitation.

It was the first time a U-M Women's Basketball team advanced to the quarter finals in post season play.

U-M Athletics also offers group rates for all women's home games. Groups of 10 or more fans who purchase tickets in advance receive a team poster autographed by Head Coach Borseth, a commemorative photo of the group. A pregame welcome message will be shown on the scoreboard.

Group single game tickets for adults are $3 each. Student group single game tickets for those 18 years and younger are $2. Senior citizen group tickets for those 55 and older are also $2 Call 734-647-1261 to purchase your group tickets.

There are also a number of upcoming special promotions planned during the women's basketball games this season.

On Thursday, Nov. 20, for the game against the Texas A&M Aggies, bring two canned food items to Crisler Arena and admission to the game is $1.

On Friday, Dec. 5 for the game vs. the North Carolina State Wolfpack, there will be a Girl Scout Cookie tip-off.

On Sunday, Dec. 28 versus the Northwestern Wildcats, fathers should plan to bring their daughters to the game. The Big Ten clash is a daddy/daughter date night.

On Thursday, Jan. 22, for the game against the Iowa Hawkeyes, make it a girl's night out. Bring your friends and have fun rooting on the Wolverines.

On Feb. 1, help rock Crisler by packing the house for the Wisconsin Game. It's an Elementary School Day promotion.

And on Sunday, Feb. 15, for the game against the Minnesota Golden Gophers, be a part of the Pink Zone Game, a breast cancer awareness promotion.

first down," Hill said of his game-changing TD. "It was a close game, but once I got through the hole I hit the cutback and it was downhill from there. I saw him (Mason defensive back) out of the corner of my eye, but he wasn't going to catch me."

With Big Ten schools and Mid-American Conference programs already flooding his mailbox with recruiting letters, Hill is one of the most highly sought after juniors in Michigan.

Hill, who admitted former University of Michigan halfback Anthony Thomas was his inspiration growing up, said he has been a running back ever since he started playing football with the Junior Wolverines.

"I like the thrill of running the ball," he said. "Running back is a pretty good fit for me."

Another running back Hill admires is former Wolverine Mike Hart. The two are acquaintances.

"I look up to Mike Hart," said Hill, whose features and running style mirror the former U-M All-American. "A lot of people compare me to him. He calls me his little brother. People think we're related."

For the season, Hill has rushed for 1,908 yards on 244 carries with 24 touchdowns. He also has 15 receptions for 225 yards, five kickoff returns for 157 yards with one TD and 13 punt returns for 172 yards. Despite missing the final two quarters of the season-opening game against Ann Arbor Huron and the entire Northville contest the following week with a slight leg injury, his all-purpose total is a staggering 2,462 yards.

This year, Hill rushed for a school record 340 yards on 40 carries in Chelsea's Week 7 35-27 victory over Ann Arbor Pioneer. The prior week, he ran for a then school record 312 yards versus Adrian.

In the regular season finale, Hill carried the ball 25 times for 228 yards and five touchdowns in the Bulldogs' 34-28 overtime win over Temperance Bedford. Mule coach Jeff Wood simply shook his head after the game when commenting on Hill's performance.

"He is by far the best player we've seen all year," he said.

The following week against Milan in Chelsea's 31-14 Division 3 state pre-district victory, Big Red coach Steve Robb was even more complimentary in his assessment of Hill.

"He's a pretty special player," he said. "I've seen him about seven times or so on film or in person and he just takes over games in the fourth quarter. He's a big difference maker."

Chelsea coach Brad Bush said Hill is a very competitive person.

"He's a great player," he said. "Nick's extremely talented and he's a team guy. I don't really know if it matters to him how many carries he gets, but he's developed the mentality that he knows he's going to get it a lot. He's able to make plays as the game goes on and get stronger."

For Hill, taking over late in games is what he strives for every time he takes the field.

"As the game gets going, I try and get better and better," he said. "I try to make plays. I could never do this without my offensive line, though."

After last Friday's win over Mason, Hill, who rushed for 317 yards on 37 carries with two touchdowns, was pulled aside by the assorted media covering the game for interviews and comments. After patiently answering all questions, Hill was late getting on the team bus. As he sprinted out of the stadium toward his waiting teammates, an unidentified, but still obviously frustrated Mason fan was overheard saying, "Look, there goes No. 32 — and he's still running."

Indeed.

It was a sight Mason fans and players grew weary of the entire game.

Deppner then spoke about the loss of Anna Herter, who was born in Hyderabad, India, and adopted as a child by Bruce and Sherry Herter.

Anna, a junior, also had a host of friends who will miss her sparkling personality and warm smile.

"The students are really mourning her loss. They spent a lot of time outside school telling stories, and made a makeshift memorial at her locker with photos and flowers," Deppner said.

"Her friends talked about how Anna was always the life of the party and her smile always brightened the room."

She was an active member of the district's child-care program, Deppner noted.

"She was very successful in that; the young kids she worked with really cared for her a lot," Deppner said.

The mood inside the school on Monday matched the cold, grey skies outside.

High school counselors were joined for the day by counterparts from Beach Middle School, as well as youth pastors from St. Mary Catholic Church and First United Methodist Church, and Deppner said "about a couple of dozen" students took advantage of their services to express their feelings.

"The teachers appreciated having the extra support," Deppner said.

Funeral arrangements for both Anna Herter and Ian Hughes were handled by Staffan-Mitchell Funeral Home in Chelsea.

Services for Anna took place Wednesday, and will be today at 4 p.m. for Ian.

Chelsea Briefs

Closed for Thanksgiving

Chelsea city offices and the Chelsea Transfer Station on Werkner Road will be closed in observance of Thanksgiving on Nov. 27 and 28.

The Transfer Station will be open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Nov. 29.

Recycling open house

The Western Washtenaw Recycling Authority will host an open house at its Werkner Road facility from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Nov. 22.

There will be tours and a slide presentation on the growth of recycling in this area and the subsequent need for expansion of the facility.

Post office history lesson

"Going Postal in Chelsea History," a slide show researched and written by Cary Church of the Chelsea Area Historical Society, will be shown at 7 p.m. tonight in the McKune House room of the Chelsea District Library.

It will be a regular session of the Chelsea Building Interest Group, but the public is welcome to attend.

Chelsea has had a post office on Main Street at various downtown locations for more than 150 years.

The present post office, one of 40,000 across the country, was built in 1936 through a Public Works Administration project.

CAHS member and Chelsea Standard guest writer Kathy Clark will conduct the history presentation, and Deb Greer of River Gallery will talk about the beautiful WPA mural painted on the north wall of the post office in1938.

Holiday parade invite

The Chelsea Hometown Holiday and Light Parade is seeking participants for the parade, scheduled for Dec. 6.

The parade features floats and walking units and welcomes businesses and nonprofit organizations to join the fun.

"We have several businesses, neighborhood associations, and community organizations already on board to participate," said Parade Chairperson Lori Whitesall of The Chelsea Teddy Bear Co.

"There are still opportunities to participate in the parade. The only requirement is the unit be lighted in some form."

The deadline for submission is Nov. 21. Applications are available at the Chelsea Area Chamber of Commerce, 310 N. Main St., Suite 120, or online at chelseafestivals.com.

"I had just sold my business and divested myself of all of my responsibilities, so there I was with a unique opportunity to involve myself in something that matters,"

Tom McPhee, filmmaker

McPhee wanted to capture the wide range of emotion that volunteers were experiencing while dealing with such an enormous and daunting task. The audience, in turn, will share these feelings while also asking questions such as how and why.

McPhee, who moved to Chelsea last year, believes he has a different calling than working in corporate America. He's always believed that calling started and ended behind a camera, telling a story through his vision. At age 44, he's already lived a pretty diverse life, even spending time in the marketplace, both in computer hardware and automobiles.

"An American Opera" wasn't a calling. It was more or less destiny. The stars were aligned, at the right place and at the right time. Whether that was coincidence, well, that's for someone else to decide.

"I had just sold my business and divested myself of all of my responsibilities, so there I was with a unique opportunity to involve myself in something that matters," says McPhee. "I was watching the news coverage (of Hurricane Katrina) a little bit as it came in. I paid a little bit of attention to what was going on. And then it was impossible not to pay attention to what was going on. On the morning of Sunday, Sept. 4, I knew then I had to go down there.

"I went down with no expectations. But I was compelled to go down. I spent the entire day packing provisions like tools, supplies, food and water. My car was packed, but I also brought my cameras."

Those cameras would end up having a far more reaching and lasting impact than any of the supplies he took with him.

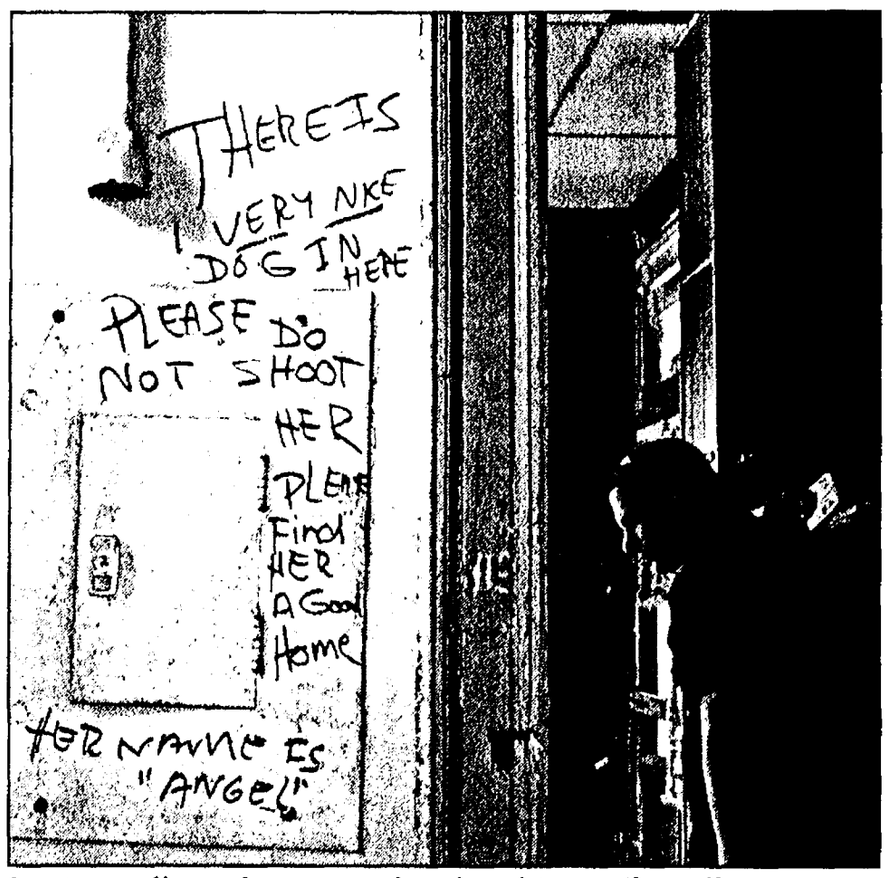
On the way down McPhee met a generous woman online who invited him to stay at their home in Gonzales, La., located between Baton Rouge and New Orleans. The rest of his story actually ends up being the story told through the camera in "An American Opera."

"Mrs. Gomez worked at the YMCA that was at the Lamar Dixon Expo Center in Gonzales that was doing a lot of staging," he says. "So she suggested we go down there first so they could point us in the direction where people could use our help. So we went there early in the morning. And there was all kinds of activity."

The facility, similar to the Michigan State Fairgrounds, was being used as a refugee center for about 2,200 people that had been there for about a week.

"There were five or six organized church groups and the Red Cross," McPhee says. "For the first few hours we thought that there had to be something more because they didn't seem to need us here. We were getting ready to leave when we heard these noises from the back of the facility.

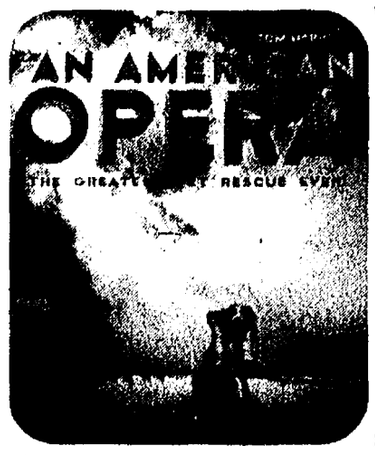
"We drove to the back where there were all these barns and they were filled with animals. Thousands of animals were being dropped off. The organizations that were evacuating people out had a mandate to separate people from animals."



A note to police and rescue workers is written on the wall.

It didn't take McPhee long, maybe 30 seconds, to see what a huge problem this was. He knew that it was going to get worse before it got better. And he also knew that this was where he was going to stay. This was his destiny.

"I gave all of my provisions away and we had a place to stay so I decided to just go and see what was going on," he said. "And as I was opening my car door to get out a woman came by asking if anyone had a digital camera. So for the next four days I started taking picture after picture. They kept bringing in more and more animals and I kept taking picture after picture of each one of them."



While taking photos of lost pets, mostly dogs and many injured or sick, McPhee couldn't help but see the bigger picture. The filmmaker in him was starting to surface.

"Everything just slowed down for me and I was able to get a perspective that there was some really interesting psychology going on," he says. "The whole event was a close encounter event. The machine that drove people to go down because of a close encounter event. The people there were driven to be there.

"I was getting something very fresh. I recognized the initial big bang that the big part of this story was happening right now."

McPhee, who ended up spending 16 days down there during his first visit, contacted several large Web sites that deal with pet adoptions. They just didn't understand what they were dealing with at the Lamar Dixon Expo Center.

"They wanted me to load the pictures up using their format, and they just didn't get it," McPhee says. "I tried to explain that I took 1,100 images that day and there was no way I could do what they were asking."

McPhee was taking a picture of the log ticket that they were brought in with and a photo of the animal. He was doing that over a thousand times a day for four days. He then put down his still cameras and picked up his video camera.

"An American Opera" begins with the perfect overture. A volunteer looks directly into the camera and without hesitation, says, "I want to translate this experience that I've had and give it to you so you can live vicariously so you can better understand what the story is and if it's painful for me, I really hope it's painful for you."

Parts of "An American Opera" are painful. Seeing a family pet abandoned, scared, stranded on roof tops, locked in cages and laying dead on the kitchen floor show the harshness and the brutality and the realism of what these volunteers experienced. But the flip side of the film shows people such as Jane Garrison who left her comfortable home in Mt. Pleasant, S.C. to not only help, but take charge and lead.

"I wanted us to rescue as many animals as possible and that should have been the goal of everyone," Garrison says near the beginning of the film. By the end of the film you will understand what she's talking about.

It shows America at its worst. And it shows America at its best.

"It's been three years to finish this because I made it a point to live this material," McPhee says. "My feeling was that everyone was focusing on facts and raw information in these reports that were being shown on TV and the aspect was fairly thin compared to what was really going on.

"I saw an opportunity to get into why did this happen and how much of it was us and what could we do. And I didn't want it to be a talking documentary. This wasn't about facts and figures. It needed to be about emotions. I wanted to create something where you got all of the information, but you also had the emotional connection to what was taking place. It was what needed to happen to show the connection to what these people were going through."

Born and raised in Dearborn, McPhee is what he calls a homer. He never strays too far from Southeastern Michigan and is enjoying his new home in Chelsea. He has been an innovator in the film, event, multimedia and television industries for more than 15 years. McPhee created and managed Flixtour, the premier college film tour, started "Real Detroit Weekly - The Music Show" and was executive director of the 1998 Detroit and Windsor International Festival of Film.

McKune Director Joan Elmouchi says that hosting a world premiere movie of this importance and quality is another example of why this library was named "The Best Small Library in America" by The Library Journal and the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation.

"The Chelsea District Library is thrilled to have the opportunity to hold the first public premiere of this award-winning documentary," Elmouchi said. "We're looking forward to a very special evening.

"The staff works hard to provide the community with not only literary events and programs, but major series of live concerts, performing arts productions and workshops by partnering with the Purple Rose Theatre Company, and supporting events for the public schools and community organizations."

Sharon Pignanelli, president of the Friends group, agrees that this movie adds to the uniqueness of events McKune offers to the community.

"The Friends of the Library are pleased that their year-round fundraising efforts will help to financially provide for the public premiere of such an important filmmaking endeavor," she says. "We are proud to support the excellent programming of the Best Small Library in America 2008."

The Friends will host a VIP event to meet the filmmaker and producer at 6:30 p.m. that evening.

Karen Persello, head of youth and teen services, will oversee this event for the library.

"I am very thrilled that the Chelsea District Library is hosting the first public premiere of 'An American Opera,'" she said. "This movie is about a little-known part of the aftermath of Katrina and is therefore an important film that ultimately gives us hope."

Persello stresses that this is not a film appropriate for young viewers. The library is recommending the movie for ages 14 and up.

"An American Opera" is marketed as "The Greatest Pet Rescue Ever" and is certainly one of great importance on many levels.

"It's the story of so many people working upstream against incredible odds," McPhee says. "It's really an incredible story on how we deal with crisis and how just one person can make an enormous difference."

Space will be limited for this free event. Reservations may be made by calling 734-475-8732 (ext. 216) or via email to marketing@chelseadistrictlibrary.org. For more information on the film, log onto www.american-opera.com.

City to refund more than $110,000 to businesses

By Edward Freundl
Staff Writer

For the second time since April, an error in metering for two large municipal water system users will cost the city tens of thousands of dollars.

The Chelsea City Council on Tuesday approved one refund of $94,002.14 to the Chelsea Retirement Community and a separate refund of $16,444.84 to McKinley Properties on behalf of The Chelsea Teddy Bear Co.

City Administrative Services Director Kim Garland told the council that both were the result of errors in the electronic device that reads the number of digits on high-flow water meters and transmits the data by radio signal to the water department.

"The ERT (Electronic Read Transmit) has to be programmed to thousands (of gallons)," she said. "We rely on the vendor to calibrate them, and they did not."

The error was discovered during an audit using manual meter-reading procedures.

The meters were installed at the CRC in October 2004 and at the Teddy Bear Company in November 2005.

Both meters have been replaced subsequent to the errors being discovered.

The council also approved an "inter-fund loan" from the Electric Department to the Water Department of $200,000 plus 3 percent interest to cover not only the cost of the refunds but also to correct a deficit associated with payments to complete municipal drinking water wells 6 and 7.

"The loan is an allowable practice, and the interest charge is an allowable practice, according to our auditors (who were at the meeting to present the findings of the city's annual audit)," said City Manager John Hanifan.

This marks a total of $143,765.17 in refunds this year paid to major water customers due to faulty meter readings.

The scene repeated itself at the April 22 City Council meeting, when the council approved refunds of $29,255.04 to the Chelsea School District and $18,863.15 to the F.A. Kennedy Co. of Jackson, owner of Polly's Country Market.

At that time, Garland explained that errors in reading the digits occurred in only those two of the six compound meters in use, which have low-flow settings for periods of low usage volumes and high-flow readings for heavy volumes.

The school meter was installed in August 2005 and the Polly's meter in October 2004.

"As a corrective measure, we will manually read these meters," Garland told the council at the April 22 meeting.

In other council business:

The City Council took action on the following items on Tuesday:

Approved an Industrial Facilities tax abatement certificate for Sheridan Books Inc. totaling $1.24 million, comprising $1,129,000 for new machinery and equipment and $111,000 in personal property and real property improvements.

Approved the first reading of three amendments to ordinances to officially codify existing standard practice related to collection of unpaid water, sewer and electric bills, which will be held as liens against the property. Second reading and approval of the amend ments are set for the Nov. 25 council meeting.

Approved a proposal from Utility Financial Services to prepare a financial plan and rate study for wastewater, water and electric fees for an amount not to exceed $24,450. UFS conducted the city's last rate study in 2005.

"This is a competitive price, and UFS is the best there is in our region," Hanifan said.

Charles E. Ramsey
Head Coach

More than 2,000 area students will gather in the EMU Convocation Center to attend the "Education Day" program for elementary and middle school students.

"We try to invest in our children and it is important that they value learning at a young age," said Dr. Derrick Gragg, EMU's Director of Athletics. "The Education Day program gives young students a positive outlook about college by hearing it first hand from role models such as college and professional athletes. We hope that this experience will reinforce a student's desire to continue their education after high school."

The pre-game speaker line-up will be highlighted by Cheryl Ford and Plenette Pierson, members of the WNBA Champion Detroit Shock, which won its 2008 title in EMU's Convocation Center. Ford and Pierson will stress the values of staying in school, safety and community awareness.

Hooper, the mascot of the Detroit Pistons, will also be in attendance, mingling with students and rallying the Eagles against Marygrove.

Students will also have time to meet the EMU basketball team and cheer them on during the game that afternoon.

The Eagles have played once this season when they hosted Alma College in an exhibition game Sunday, Nov. 9, won by EMU, 79-43. Junior forward Justin Dobbins (Cleveland, Ohio-Glenville) led the way in the game, scoring 14 points followed by Kyle Dodd (Rockwood, Ontario, Canada-Ross Collegiate) and Solomon Farris (Detroit, Mich.-Osborn) with 12 each.

Support all our troops during holiday

Even when our nation has been divided politically, we have consistently come together behind the brave men and women who serve in our nation's armed forces. They offer their lives to defend this country, and for that we are all grateful.

Carl Levin

But a year and a half ago, an investigation by The Washington Post and hearings in Congress uncovered major short falls in our efforts to care for our troops who have been wounded in combat.

Although these wounded warriors received superb, state-of the-art inpatient care, we learned that there was an inadequate system to ensure they consistently receive high quality care when they were outpatients. Instead, injured services members faced an overlap of different systems and bureaucracies that left them and their families confused, overwhelmed and all too often without adequate care.

In response, the Senate Armed Services and Veterans' Affairs committees held a rare joint hearing to address the problem. We then wrote the Wounded Warrior Act, which passed with overwhelming bipartisan support in both the House and the Senate as part of the National Defense Authorization Act for fiscal year 2008. In January, the president signed it into law.

The act requires the Defense Department to use the VA disability rating standards and to adopt the more favorable VA standards for determining if a medical condition is service connected. This should prevent our wounded warriors from being subjected to a complex maze of different and unfair ratings.

We also increased minimum severance pay for services members who are wounded in combat zones or combat related activities, and eliminated some counterproductive requirements that severance pay be deducted from VA disability compensation for combat injuries. We also authorized $50 million for improved diagnosis, treatment and rehabilitation of service members suffering from traumatic brain injuries and post-traumatic stress disorder.

Additionally, we required the secretaries of Defense and Veterans' Affairs to develop comprehensive policies to ensure a seamless transition to VA care for wounded warriors, so that no service member gets stuck in the system or falls through the cracks.

Despite the significant step forward that the Wounded Warrior Act provided, there continue to be shortfalls in implementation. For instance the increased staffing at the VA that we identified as necessary has not yet been fully achieved.

Beyond the Wounded Warrior Act, this year Congress also enacted a 21st Century G.I. Bill, which provides financial support to post-9/11 veterans to pursue a college education.

Throughout the debates in our current wars, unlike the past, the citizens of our country have steadfastly supported our troops. That supportive spirit will continue this Veterans Day and into the years ahead, and as we continue our efforts to care for our nation's wounded warriors.

Carl Levin is the senior U.S. senator from Michigan

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor: "Suffer the little children." From the hearts, minds, and mouths of our children are coming forth some startling post-election statements and questions.

They speak about "killing," "dictatorship," "socialism," and other extensions of campaign excess. Children listen to media and family statements, and take them so literally, even if they were meant metaphorically.

Since the election, Sarah Palin has said, "God bless Barack Obama and his beautiful family." A Congresswoman who almost lost her re-election because of questioning Mr Obama's patriotism now, says that she is "extremely grateful that we have an African-American who has won this year." She rejoiced about the, "tremendous signal we sent."

Parents, teachers, and religious leaders of all faiths have such a huge responsibility right now. We have to help our children accept the deepest meanings of democracy; we are all part of our community. Mr. Bush is, and Mr. Obama will be, President of all of us in the United States. We all need to help our children understand and cherish our democracy.

To the Editor: I would like to take this opportunity to thank everyone who supported me during my campaign for the Lyndon Township Clerk position.

I truly appreciated the letters submitted to the paper on my behalf and also all of the positive comments I received from so many people.

Running for public office is an experience I will never forget. It made me aware of the responsibilities involved at the township level and alerted me to the fact that I need to pay more attention to the activities of the Board and the decisions they make affecting the residents.

I intend to become a more observant taxpayer from now on, and who knows, maybe in four years, I will be on the campaign trail once again!

Barbara J. Fredette

To the Editor: There is still time for the Michigan House to enact legislation to protect Michigan workers by passing HB 4163, a law that will make all worksites, including bars and restaurants smokefree.

Secondhand smoke kills people. The health hazards of secondhand smoke are well-documented. It's the third most preventable cause of death in the country. Individuals who work in bars and restaurants are involuntarily put at risk. They deserve protection, too.

When are our lawmakers going to start protecting Michigan workers rather than Big Tobacco and other well-financed special interests?

This is not a partisan issue.

A majority of states have already enacted smokefree laws, including Ohio. It's time for Michigan.

Our lawmakers need to listen to the people in their communities and pass a smokefree air law that protects all workers. I hope that they take this up right away upon their return to work after the election.

Our take:

Veteran's Day a time to say thank you

Can you ever fully say thank you to an armed forces veteran?

In some respects, you can't. How do you express your gratitude to someone who has given up a time period in his or her life to protect our country?

And even more difficult is how do you say thank you to someone or his family who has been wounded or killed in the Armed Forces. To place a value on that soldier's life is impossible. But that doesn't mean there aren't things Americans can do to try to say thanks.

That's one reason on Veteran's Day we try to say thank you and express our appreciation for the sacrifices of veterans and their families.

Veteran's Day — celebrated Tuesday throughout the nation — originally was established to honor the soldiers from World War I, who bravely fought and won the "war to end all wars." Unfortunately, as is so painfully obvious, that hasn't been the case.

But today, Veteran's Day is still observed, as noted on the U.S. Department of Public Affairs Web site as "... a celebration to honor America's veterans for their patriotism, love of country, and willingness to serve and sacrifice for the common good."

And so it should be.

Although America continues to face many conflicts throughout the world, we need to stop and thank the loyal and brave individuals who have served and are serving in our armed forces.

Locally, residents, churches and groups conducted several events to honor veterans.

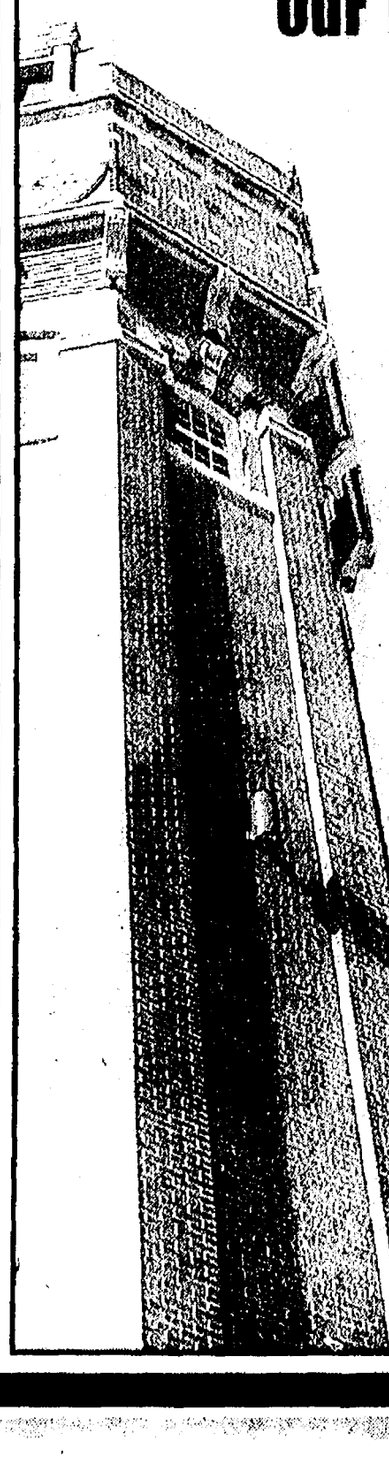
The national Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, headquartered in Kansas City, Mo., encouraged Americans to remember our veterans, particularly those fighting overseas in Iraq and Afghanistan.

The VFW suggested numerous ways to honor our soldiers, including displaying a yellow ribbon, taking a meal or doing something nice for a veteran's family, and encouraging veterans and their families to take advantage of programs like those offered by the VFW, including the Military Assistance Program, Operation Uplink and the Unmet Needs program. At home, merely flying the flag shows support for the troops.

Past and present veterans deserve all the accolades we can give them for their hard work and patriotic service.

We don't say this often enough: Thank you.

Our Chelsea History



Where was A. Steger's poultry business in 1890s?

A. In a barn next to Chelsea Flouring Mill.

B. In a barn behind Freeman & Cummings market.

C. Glazier Savings Bank and stores, location corner of S. Main and South streets.

Answer C. Augustine Steger received live poultry from local farmers in the old fieldstone and wooden barns at this location up until 1898. He routinely employed "ten hands," adding 15 more each Christmas campaign to kill, pluck and dress fowl for rail shipment. Steger was said to process 3,000 dressed turkeys and 5,000 chickens during one week before Christmas. "How is that for business?" quoted a 1890s newspaper article. Steger's son was a well-known Chelsea dentist, A. Steger, who practiced on the second floor of the Kempf Bank building a few store fronts north of his father's poultry business.

Police seek help in tracking down break-in suspects

By Edward Freundl
Staff Writer

The Washtenaw County Sheriff's Department has released descriptions of vehicles suspected of involvement in a series of break-ins that has plagued western Washtenaw and eastern Jackson counties since late August.

The Chelsea Standard obtained a copy of an e-mail that Sgt. Lisa King of the Sheriff's Department's Prevention Services division recently sent to several Neighborhood Watch groups and homeowners' associations in the affected areas.

"I would like to say we know all parties involved, however we are not sure if we have actually named every suspect that is involved," the e-mail stated.

"From Aug. 20 to Oct. 23, we have had 68 reported break-ins in the central-west part of Washtenaw County, mostly during daytime hours.

"Our agency (and the) Michigan State Police have been working very hard on catching the different suspects involved.

"There have been some arrests, and we have valid warrants out for some of the suspects, however there may be some new vehicles and new suspects involved."

King reminded people to remain vigilant about suspicious vehicles and people.

"At least get a license plate number and e-mail your Neighborhood Watch Coordinator," she wrote.

As a result of the arrests and ongoing investigations, the Sheriff's Department released a list of partial descriptions of vehicles that are of interest.

"Some vehicles to look out for are:

White work van with a ladder rack is consistent (with several reports), but another detail that should stand out is a brown stripe, about a foot wide, down the entire side of the vehicle. It has been seen in the Chelsea area.

Blue Dodge Ram pickup truck, Illinois license plate

Blue 1990s Chevrolet pickup truck, possible Michigan plate CD 21504

Black or grey sedan, no make or model

"These are only the known vehicles that have been seen in the area of recent break-ins," King wrote.

"Be on the lookout for any suspicious vehicles, even if it is not listed. Call 911 with as much information as possible, mainly the license plate number and description of the vehicle and its occupants."

Sgt. King also offered the following common-sense tips:

"Make sure everyone is locking their houses and garages, and not leaving valuables in the vehicles. If you have an alarm system at your residence, use it."

The Michigan State Police also have their hands full in the investigation, and troopers are coordinating their efforts with the LAWNET Major Crimes Unit and the Sheriff's Department on these break-ins.

Sgt Tony Cueva of the MSP Ypsilanti Post said Tuesday that victims of these crimes can take an active part of identifying their missing property.

"We're urging people to check pawn shops to get their belongings back; there was a lot of jewelry stolen and it doesn't have serial numbers," Cueva said.

"People are going to have to physically look at the items to identify them."

Cueva suggested "the smartest thing to do" is check pawnshops or businesses that buy gold or jewelry in Jackson and Ypsilanti.

"If they've been a victim of a break-in that we've handled, contact Trooper Greg Setla at the post (734-482-1211) to identify your property," Cueva said.

Detective Tom Boivin of LAWNET said last week that arrests have been made in some of the incidents, but there are likely several groups of subjects involved given the number and geographic area of the crimes.

"Three people are in the process of being charged, but they are not responsible for all of the cases," he said.

Pam Byrnes (right) with supporters last Tuesday night.

Byrnes elected to leadership position in state Legislature

By Edward Freundl
Staff Writer

The Chelsea and Dexter representative in Michigan's House of Representatives has been chosen for a high-profile position of leadership in that chamber.

Pam Byrnes of the 52nd District, easily won re-election to a third term on Nov. 4 and two days later received an extra honor when she was elected Speaker of the House Pro Tempore by her Democratic Caucus colleagues.

"It's quite an honor to be elected to that position, but it also carries a lot of responsibility," Byrnes said Monday.

"Essentially I'm running the daily proceedings in the House. The speaker pro tem takes over in the speaker's absence," which Byrnes said is much of the time because Speaker of the House Andy Dillon, District 17, is busy working on other legislative issues outside the chamber.

"It's one of the top leadership positions, no doubt about that," she added.

"I am chair of several committees; and I was associate speaker pro tem this session - which is appointed by the speaker - so I've had some training during this last session."

Byrnes will take over the position when the 95th session of the Legislature convenes in January.

"I was elected by the caucus, but I will be formally elected by the entire body in January after the swearing in," she said.

Byrnes is one of two women elected to the House leadership team, with State Rep. Kathy Angerer (District 55) elected Majority Floor Leader.

This marks the first time that women will hold two of the top three posts in the Legislature.

Angerer replaces Rep. Steve Tobocman (District 12) as Floor Leader and Byrnes replaces Rep. Michael G. Sak (District 76) as Speaker Pro Tem, both of whom were term-limited.

The issue of term limits is one that Byrnes will likely see debated as speaker pro tem during this, her third and final term in the House.

"The Speaker has indicated his desire to get a change in term limits before the voters as a constitutional amendment; I guess we'll have to see," Byrnes said.

"Even former Gov. John Engler said several months ago that it was an experiment that failed.

"I know there's a lot of interest in changing term limits, to extend them," she continued.

"As time goes on, people realize it doesn't make sense to hire somebody for such a short time to run the government — we shall see what happens."

The strong showing of Democrats in last week's election resulted in a balance of power of 67 Democrats and 43 Republicans in the House now, a gain of nine seats for the Dems.

"I'd been working hard with a number of our candidates to get over the finish line, and obviously all that work paid off," Byrnes said.

She commented on the consequences of the state Senate losing its Majority Leader, Mark Schauer of Battle Creek, to the halls of Congress.

Schauer defeated one-term incumbent Republican Tim Walberg for Michigan's 7th District seat.

"That's going to be very interesting," Byrnes said. "There will definitely be a new election for caucus leader, and there may be a special election to replace his seat in the Senate."

that Barack Obama will bring about meaningful change. I hope that one day you might embrace him as the world has.

You'll soon march out into the world. You'll fight bravely in a sometimes-hostile environment. With this change in leadership you'll be viewed differently. Obama's election brought more respect to America and as a US soldier, you will be an ambassador for a different nation.

Millions volunteered, stood in lines, and rallied for him—for significant reasons. Obama stands beside us, as one of us, a uniter, not a divider. Too long we have struggled— black versus white, young versus old, rich versus poor, republican versus democrat. Today Obama stands as the man to begin to bridge these divides.

He brought people in, people that others simply left behind. As a believer in this nation, you must see how powerful and important that is. He inspires Americans to use their citizenry for good. He might not have won your vote, but he hears your voice and will work will us all for a brighter future. Obama is a force for mobilization—motivating all to become civilian soldiers.

To create a better nation with more security, prosperity, truth, understanding, and unity, we need Barack Obama. Come January, Obama will be our president, your Commander in Chief. You wear the flag because you love this country. Surely you, an American Soldier, will understand my love and hope for this country is greater today than it has ever been.

To the Editor: Election Day 2008 is over and it's a new day for the USA!

As involved voters, we can be proud of the time and effort we put into getting ourselves informed and helping to inform others about issues and candidates at the national, state and local level.

We have voted our hopes instead of our fears.

Our work continues as we make our voices heard. We need to let our elected officials know what we think, and urge them to work for what's best for all of their constituents.

I recommend reading both McCain's concession speech and Obama's victory speech for their thoughts about how we can move beyond the election and face our current and future challenges.

Election 2008: A look back

Area Republicans reflect on post-election reality

By Sean Dalton
Staff Writer

Fresh from successfully retaining his seat as District 1 County Commissioner, Mark Ouimet was already coping with the new political reality following the Nov. 4 election.

Ouimet was in the minority of Republicans across the country last week when he fended off Democratic challenger Eric Borregard.

Ouimet is ready not only to continue a positive constructive relationship with his fellow commissioners, one of whom reached across party lines to make an election endorsement for him, but would like to foster good will and understanding between differing political and ideological camps in general.

"I think the Republican Party really has to stop - quite frankly, both sides need to stop - pointing out the negatives and stop yelling at each other," he said.

Ouimet said it was time to find common ground and make that the country's priorities, and begin a political discourse that involves "working on them together," instead of becoming a "roadblock."

"Clearly (what we are doing now) is not working under the system that we have now with 'gotcha' politics," Ouimet said. "You see it at all levels and it doesn't work for the electorate. As a county and a state, we pay for that."

To understand Ouimet's diplomatic nature when it comes to dealing with ideological opposites, one must understand his background.

"Both my grandfather and father made it very clear to me that being an elected official is an extension of community involvement," Ouimet said, commenting about his upbringing in a politically active family.

His grandfather grew up in Washtenaw County, and came from a long line of ministers and farmers – self-made men of significant accomplishment.

"He worked in the dairies in the west part of Ann Arbor and then worked at a clothing store," Ouimet recalled.

During the Great Depression, he saved enough money to open his own clothing store in 1930, while still finding the time to serve the community as chairman of the United Way, then called the Red Feather Society, among other activities.

His grandfather served as an at-large member on the board on which Ouimet now serves, when it was called the County Board of Supervisors.

Ouimet's father, a Vermont man who met his mother at the University of Michigan while working as a clerk, would later also serve on the Ann Arbor City Council, before his political ambitions were cut short with his death at age 52.

"One thing I learned from both of them is that you don't want to give it or take it personal," Ouimet said. "You may be on different sides of a political issue, but next week you might be working together on a nonprofit like United Way or Ele's Place. We're all trying to make the community better."

Ouimet says it's been difficult to watch the campaigns for state and federal positions unfold on the 24-hour news networks.

"You have to try to stay focused on the process and stay away from the personalities," he said. "The people on both sides are not bad people. I'm just hoping we can find ourselves in a better place and be more issue-oriented."

Ouimet says the thoughtfulness of his father and grandfather during long days of passing out literature or putting up signs for their political and philanthropic causes helped shape his attitude.

"I was very fortunate to spend time with my father doing things that helped other people in the community, like coat drives or blanket drives," he said, adding that he will always remember his father as "one of the most even-tempered, kind persons" he has ever known.

Ouimet says that is the kind of leadership he will exercise through deeds and discourse, and he hopes he will not be in the minority on that within his party.

"We need to work on energy independence and what our priorities are on how to achieve (it)," he said. "We need a policy where we deal with health care. How do we make sure that there is access to it in our country?

"These are the things that I think are critically important and I think we have to stop being at each others' throat. We aren't going to agree on everything, but we have to come together to accomplish some things."

Ouimet summed up his feelings about post-election America:

"Our political leaders need to help us set that agenda and point us in a direction, because once we, as Americans, become galvanized on the issues in this country the sky is the limit."

County leader weighs in

Craig McGregor is the chairman of the Washtenaw County Republican Committee.

The committee's ideals in Washtenaw County "include the belief that the government's sole responsibility is to guarantee individuals and their families the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness; and that good government can only be accomplished by limiting government to providing those services that individuals cannot ensure themselves and by protecting free enterprise."

McGregor doesn't believe those ideals were well-represented last Tuesday night. And that the train slipped off track long before it reached the station of decision.

"The biggest problem we had was the open primaries for the elections," McGregor said of his displeasure with Republican presidential candidate John McCain.

"State chairmen were pushing primaries for

Election 2008: A look back

Walberg: 'I will be available to serve again'

By Terry Jacoby
Heritage Newspapers

Things were looking favorable for Tim Walberg early Tuesday night; the key word being "early."

"We were hopeful early on," Walberg said Friday from Chicago. "We were pulling votes where we thought we would, and in Calhoun County we were doing better than we had done previously."

Unfortunately for the first-term Republican representing Michigan's 7th District in Congress, the trend quickly changed.

Calhoun County went 33,649-23,920 to Mark Schauer, the Democratic state Senator from Battle Creek.

And when the Tipton native lost the Republican stronghold of Jackson County 34,977 to 34,231, the writing was on the wall - and it said, "You're out."

"As the night went on things changed," Walberg said. "We saw the results from Scio Township and when Jackson came in we knew that it was over."

Tim Walberg

What disappointed Walberg more than anything was not that he lost, but the way that he lost.

"I don't think I lost because of anything I did or didn't do, and that's a little frustrating," he said. "It wasn't that Mark Schauer supporters beat us. It was the voters that came out in high numbers to support Barack Obama that beat us."

Republican presidential candidate John McCain's questionable strategy, including his decision to stop campaigning in Michigan, didn't help, because some Republicans chose to stay home instead of supporting the Arizona Senator.

"The vote counts still looked pretty good, but (McCain's) decision to pull out of Michigan squashed a lot of the passion," said Walberg, who will finish out his first and only term in early December.

While Walberg certainly doesn't believe in Schauer's message, he does believe the new rookie Congressman will stand by his core beliefs.

"Mark will do we what he said he will do and he will fight for Michigan and for the people living in the Seventh District, the same way I did and everyone else who has had the honor to occupy this job have in the past," Walberg said.

But ...

"He will vote as a Democrat and a very liberal Democrat and go along with Obama on things such as a national health care system.

"Obama will raise taxes and do what (Jennifer) Granholm did in Michigan and we know how that's worked out so far for Michigan businesses. Raising taxes has never been good for business and historically has never helped the economy."

Don't expect Walberg, 57, to become a spectator or take a seat in a rocking chair and watch the world roll on by. He plans on staying in Michigan, living in District 7, and speaking out when he sees the need.

"I wish our country well and our state well," Walberg says. "Mark has the finest job a person can have and I do wish him well and have told him I will help in any way I can.

"I'm disappointed, sure. I won't be a roadblock, but I still have an opinion and will be looking for ways to make an impact. I will be available to serve again."

When asked if he would run again for a spot in the U.S. House of Representatives, Walberg said,

"I never say never."

Local Salvation Army needs your help

The Salvation Army of Washtenaw County will kick off its annual Red Kettle Campaign with an event beginning at noon tomorrow at Briarwood Mall.

TSA-WC's goal is to raise $300,000 in kettle donations during the holidays to provide community services year-round. Honorary co-chairs of the Red Kettle Campaign are Ann Arbor residents Sally and Burt Lamkin.

The kickoff event will take place to the west of California Pizza Kitchen and Chipotle Mexican Grill. TSA-WC will serve light refreshments.

"The Red Kettle Campaign is an important fundraiser for The Salvation Army because the money raised helps us provide essential services year round to those in need in Washtenaw County," said Washtenaw County Coordinator Major John Williams. "We hope to attach more meaning to the coins and bills that people drop into the kettle by helping them understand that those dollars translate into warmth, food, shelter and joy for those who most need our help."

Through Dec. 24, bell ringers will collect donations at 43 red kettles throughout Washtenaw County.

Volunteer bell ringers are an essential part of the success of the Red Kettle Campaign. TSA-WC needs to fill more than 3,500 bell ringer shifts from Nov. 14 through Dec. 24 (Sundays and Thanksgiving excluded). TSA-WC is looking for people who want a simple and easy way to give back to their communities by "ringing a bell" during its biggest annual fundraising campaign.

Bell ringing opportunities throughout Washtenaw County are posted at www.sawashtenaw.org.

For more information or to obtain a complete listing of TSA-WC's red kettle locations, please visit www.sawashtenaw.org or contact Volunteer Coordinator Janice Nelson at 734-668-8353 ext. 217, or via e-mail at Janice_nelson@usc.salvationarmy.org.

crossover voters for Democrats and independents, skewing votes for us to pick up a nominee.

"McCain was force-fed to us."

McCain's unpopularity among conservatives and his decision to throw in the towel early in October in Michigan certainly had a negative impact on Tim Walberg's re-election bid for Congress, McGregor said.

The incumbent Republican lost to Democrat Mark Schauer and low turnout in traditionally heavy Republican counties was certainly a factor, he noted.

McGregor, who works for the city of Chelsea Department of Public Works, says the answer to fixing the Republican Party is simultaneously simple in its statement and complex in its implications.

"The whole Republican Party needs to take a long, deep, hard look at how they do things," he said. "You can't run things from the middle. You have to do things from the right.

"Now moderates and liberal Republicans are running the party and driving it into the ground. Like Obama said, we have to start from the bottom up."

He said he thought this was the appropriate response to Democrats whom he labels as "liberals" disingenuously representing themselves as progressives.

While McGregor fosters a personal distrust for President-elect Obama, saying that he "scares me," he was nothing but impressed with how well the "Democratic ground game" of the campaign served their candidates.

"As far as an organizational standpoint of changing the whole way things are done at a party level, it works in that regard," he said.

Doing a better job of getting the GOP's message out will be a priority in the coming months and years, McGregor said. And it will start at the ground level.

"We need to change how things are run, and at the county level is how we're going to start," he said. "We need to start in the outlying areas.

"I can understand in the past, we haven't gotten our message out like I wanted to."

McGregor says fixing that is a good place to start.

As for bipartisan cooperation, he feels a sense of futility.

"Every time you try to reach your hand across the aisle to a Democrat they don't grab your hand, they slap your face."

McGregor pinned his hopes on Kentucky U.S. Sen. Mitch McConnell, who is noted for leading successful filibusters against a Democratic majority own announcement at 1:15 a.m. Wednesday.

"Our only hope right now (is McConnell's) means to filibuster in the Senate," he added.

"We had to wait until (that time)," Schauer said. "We wanted to make sure that we had a lead that couldn't get surmounted, we double- and triple-checked with 96 percent of precincts reporting and we had a 6,000-vote lead."

Once it was clear that the Schauer campaign had won Eaton, Calhoun, Jackson and Washtenaw counties and battled Walberg to a draw in his home county of Lenawee, "We knew (he) wasn't going to be able to catch us."

Schauer thanked the Western Washtenaw Democrats for their work, as well as state Rep. Pam Byrnes of Lyndon Township and U.S. Rep. John Dingell of Dearborn.

He was also thankful for an infusion of campaign resources from the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee. All of that support, as well as that of his individual supporters, helped him win an "incredibly tough election."

Now Schauer is focused on issues that he feels are top priorities after "a tough eight years."

"We have to re-evaluate our trade policies, including looking at trade deals like (the North American Free Trade Agreement) and sort out our relationship with China and (the World Trade Organization)," he said. "We have to make sure that we have policies that create a level playing field, fair trade and an opportunity for our workers and businesses to compete in this global economy."

Schauer called helping Michigan's ailing auto industry a "very urgent priority."

"That is just critical to those direct automotive jobs ... critical to the industry in general, suppliers and auto dealers," he explained. "We can't be neutral and see the domestic auto industry die."

His policy is that of the Democratic Party: "Help them make changes they have to make to be successful and healthy over the long term," with a guiding hand pushing those companies toward technologies and processes that result in more fuel-efficient vehicles.

Schauer says he expects some talk on the matter to occur during the next "lame duck" session of Congress.

Like automotive jobs, protecting home buyers and homeowners is another top priority, Schauer said.

"We need to protect these jobs, home buyers and some of the businesses so we don't see a repeat of the Wall Street meltdown," he said, adding that more financial sector regulation would be something he could get behind in Congress.

> "We need to protect these jobs, home buyers and some of the businesses so we don't see a repeat of the Wall Street meltdown,"
> Mark Schauer

Support will also come from Schauer's Congressional seat in the form of votes for legislation that stems the tide of foreclosures in Michigan, which is "devastating families and communities and lowering home values," he said.

To that end, he supports any efforts from the top to help displaced autoworkers retrain for new work. In the interim Schauer supports unemployment benefit extensions to keep those hit hardest by the economic recession afloat long enough to regain their footing.

Schauer will also be behind "incremental" efforts to address the growing health care issue in the country, starting with expanding children's health insurance programs.

Schauer said he is just glad to have this opportunity to represent the people of the 7th Congressional District in Michigan.

"A Democrat has never held this district before, since its creation in 1992," he said. "We had a lot of attacks thrown at us from Tim Walberg's campaign and other special interest groups, but we were able to withstand that and get out our message about turning around our economy."

Schauer says that his immediate focus is setting up his Congressional operation in a way that "keeps me closely in touch with my constituents and closely accessible," describing a connection with his electorate "like this district has never seen before."

Honoring Chelsea heroes

Three local veterans recall their service in World War II

By Janet Ogle-Mater
Special Writer

America entered World War II after the bombing of Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941. According to the U.S. Census Bureau, approximately 16.1 million men and women served in the U.S. Armed Forces from 1941-1946.

The U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs projects the number of living WWII veterans to be less than 3 million. They further estimate America loses 900 World War II vets a day.

Like small towns across America, Chelsea sent many of its young men and women to war. According to the "Roll of Honor" sign, which once hung on the outside wall of the Chelsea Market building, 306 men and seven women from Chelsea and the surrounding vicinity served in the U.S. Armed Forces during World War II.

Today, the records of the local VFW confirm 18 living WWII veterans. Gus Hansen, Commander of the American Legion, agrees with that number.

"There is no telling how many others may be living, because after the war, some men just wanted to completely separate themselves, so they wouldn't be a member of either group," Hansen said.

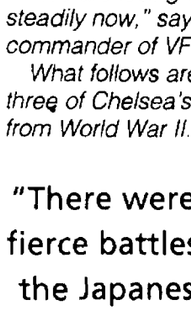
According to local obituaries, Chelsea has lost five WWII veterans since May, three during the same week in July.

"We are losing our WWII vets steadily now," says Chuck Reed, commander of VFW Post 4076.

What follows are the stories of three of Chelsea's valiant veterans from World War II.

"There were some pretty fierce battles fought with the Japanese there," he says. "Our squadron took over a Japanese airfield, and we flew combat missions in enemy territory from September to December of 1944. We were lucky; we only had a few casualties."

Daniel Ewald



Ewald

Daniel Ewald came to Chelsea in 1926 at the age of 3. He turned 18 two weeks before the bombing of Pearl Harbor. He enlisted in the U.S. Marine Corps a year later on Dec. 15, 1942 while a senior at Chelsea High School.

"My best friend, Joe Hale, talked me into enlisting," Ewald recalls. "We thought we would have it better than in another branch of service – more choices.

"We knew military service was inevitable. My draft orders came just before Christmas, two weeks after I had enlisted."

Ewald joined the Marine Platoon #75 in San Diego for six weeks of boot camp.

"It was a rude awakening," he says. "I thought we would be welcomed, but the discipline started the minute we arrived. I was scared to death. They treated us like a bunch of cattle and dogs. They tested both our physical and mental endurance daily.

"I got along by staying in the middle and going unnoticed. If you were of average skills and learning ability, had good physical condition, and had nothing that made you stand out - like being too short or tall, you could get along.

"I swear, all 60 Marines in our platoon gained 15-20 pounds of muscle in those six weeks."

Ewald spent the next eight months in training at telephone and radio school on the Goleta Marine Base in Santa Barbara, Calif. Then it was off to the South Pacific.

"After 19 days across the Pacific, I remember apprehension of seeing distant islands and wondering what we would encounter. Lucky for us, the fighting Marines had already been there and moved the next battle further north."

Ewald, who achieved the rank of sergeant, was a member of a three-man flight crew on a torpedo bomber. He was the gunner, manning a machine gun, radio, and homing device.

He continued training while stationed in the Hebrides Islands, then his squadron of 360 moved up to the Central Pacific and the island of Guam.

"There were some pretty fierce battles fought with the Japanese there," he says. "Our squadron took over a Japanese airfield, and we flew combat missions in enemy territory from September to December of 1944. We were lucky; we only had a few casualties."

Ewald spent about a year overseas before he got a month furlough home, after which he was sent back to California, then Pearl Harbor. His last mission was from Hawaii to Tsingtao, China in August 1945.

"The war had just ended, but our ship was already loaded, so we went as occupational forces," he says. "We got caught in a ferocious typhoon in Okinawa. It lasted several days, and at the end of it there were hundreds of boats smashed, sunk, or just unusable. I finally got home on March 10, 1946."

After the war, Ewald attended the Michigan Academy of Arts in Saginaw with his best friend and former Marine, Hale. He joined the Dana Corp., in Chelsea, where he worked in the engineering department for more than 33 years.

He married Clara Miller, a lifetime resident of Chelsea, in 1947. Together they raised five children: three daughters and two sons. They have 12 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Today, Ewald, who turns 85 later this month, and his wife reside quietly in a condo with most of their family living nearby.

"I was talking to a sailor on deck as we were approaching the beach, and suddenly he was lying on the deck, dead," he recalls. "I was about the second man off the right side of the ship that morning, in water up to my ears, when an 88-millimeter shell hit the ship. Blew it up. To this day, I have no idea how many men may have survived."

Merle Barr Jr.

Barr

Merle Barr Jr. received his draft notice in October 1942 when he was 20 years old. He entered U.S. Army basic training at Fort Belvoir, Va. in January 1943. After three months of basic training, he attended Officer Candidate School.

"By the end of June, I had my commission," Barr says.

He was given the rank of second lieutenant, and later captain. He joined the Cleveland National Guard, a combat engineering battalion, in England in October 1943.

"I got there just in time to celebrate my 21st birthday," he says.

Barr trained with the battalion in England by removing old mines that were deteriorating along the British shores, and by completing simulations of ship-to-shore operations.

"We were out front of infantry to take care of the land mines and build roads and bridges," he says. "Because we made the way for the infantry to come through, it was front-line combat."

Barr left England to take part in the D-Day invasion on June 6, 1944.

"It was the longest day," Barr stresses, "just like the movie says," speaking of the 1962 war classic "The Longest Day." "It was pretty horrific."

Barr pauses, and then relates his D-Day experience.

"I was talking to a sailor on deck as we were approaching the beach, and suddenly he was lying on the deck, dead," he recalls. "I was about the second man off the right side of the ship that morning, in water up to my ears, when an 88-millimeter shell hit the ship. Blew it up. To this day, I have no idea how many men may have survived."

As a liaison officer between two combat battalions, the mission for Barr was to determine how much loss the battalion he went in with had and then find his own battalion to report the state of affairs.

"We needed information to coordinate opening roads inland from the beach," he explains.

Barr had to travel more than a mile of Omaha Beach on his own.

"There was still sniper fire and I got trapped on the beach by a machine gun nest," he said. "I eventually found a radio man and he made contact with a ship in the channel. He gave them our location, then lost contact. The ship just kept firing in the vicinity – turned the woods into toothpicks. Totally annihilated it."

Barr took refuge in the wooded area and the next morning went back to the beach to find his battalion, which he did by mid-afternoon the day after landing.

Late in 1944, Barr was transferred to military government.

"Toward the end of the war there was a need to have military government personnel working with civilians to get Germany's government, industry, and economy going again," says Barr, who spent all of 1945 working in the Bavarian Alps.

Barr came home in the spring of 1946 and went to work for Chelsea Light and Water Co. He married his first wife later that year. They were divorced in 1959. He has two children, a daughter and a son, from this marriage.

Barr had been working for Federal Screw Works in the Clocktower building when he was drafted, and FSW invited him back in 1947. He began work as the manager of the Chelsea purchasing department, but when the manager of the Detroit purchasing department died suddenly, Barr was offered the position. He commuted from Chelsea to Detroit for 30 years until his retirement in 1987.

He remarried in 1960 to his wife, Arline, and they have a daughter and son. He has seven grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Today, Barr, 86, and his wife take pleasure in traveling to visit family members who reside throughout the country, including a son and grandson who live locally.

"We had two four-hour duty shifts each day. On the first, I would stand watch for an hour, steer for an hour, check the equipment for an hour, and then do what needed to be done on the ship for the rest of the time."

Duane Landwehr

Landwehr

Duane Landwehr, originally from Manchester, enlisted in July 1944, when he was only 16. He had changed his birth certificate to declare he was older.

"I and couple of friends went to the Federal building in Detroit to enlist in the Navy, but they wouldn't take us," he says. "They told us to come back when we were older. So, we went downstairs to the Merchant Marine office and they signed us up.

"We just wanted to go. We were proud of it. And we figured we would have to go sooner or later, so why not sooner."

He received his six weeks of basic training at Sheepshead Bay, N.Y.

"I didn't know what to expect really," he recalls. "But we learned how to fire certain weapons, tie knots, how to get boats off the ship, and things like that – it was all new to me."

He was given the rank of seaman, which meant he would be responsible for maintaining and operating deck equipment, standing watch, steering the vessel, and routine maintenance.

"We had two four-hour duty shifts each day," he says. "On the first, I would stand watch for an hour, steer for an hour, check the equipment for an hour, and then do what needed to be done on the ship for the rest of the time."

In February 1945, Landwehr set out on a Liberty ship, a type of cargo ship built during WWII for wartime industrial needs, from Baltimore to Italy. He was part of a large Merchant Marine convoy loaded with ammunition and other supplies for the troops.

From the writer

All three of these veterans emulate the humility and sense of duty the Greatest Generation is known for by downplaying their roles, their courage, and their sacrifices during the war.

And yet, they are quick to mention the heroics they witnessed of others in the war.

Speaking of his fellow comrades, and perhaps his generation as a whole, Merle Barr concludes, "I'm proud of what we did as a group. There really was no choice – we either had to straighten things out or it would not have been any good for any of us."

In June, America honored its last known living veteran from World War I. All too soon, we will be at the same uninviting milestone for America's World War II veterans. So, while time remains, let us share our appreciation and gratitude to those men and women who rose to meet the challenge our country put forth nearly 67 years ago.

Concert offers so much more than organ music

Sunday's packed concert at St. Barnabas Episcopal Church proved to be entertaining and educational. Kathy West, organist at the church and recent donor of the new Rodgers organ, put together a program of her "musical friends" playing traditional chamber music by Mozart and other selections. A four-piece chamber ensemble was joined by the St. Barnabas choir and the vocal group, In Harmony.

One of the lesser known pieces was "Bagatelles for Chamber" by Dvorak. West was able to demonstrate on the new organ what the music would have sounded like as originally written for the harmonium. The harmonium was the original pump organ where the player had to pump the pedals to get music from the instrument.

In most contexts today, the Bagatelle piece is played with the organ sound most of us know which could overwhelm the other instruments. West introduced the piece explaining the history of the harmonium and recalled pumping organ pedals as a six year old. She said that even her "musical friends," who she has played with for a number of years, were surprised how the piece sounded with the organ on a setting for harmonium.

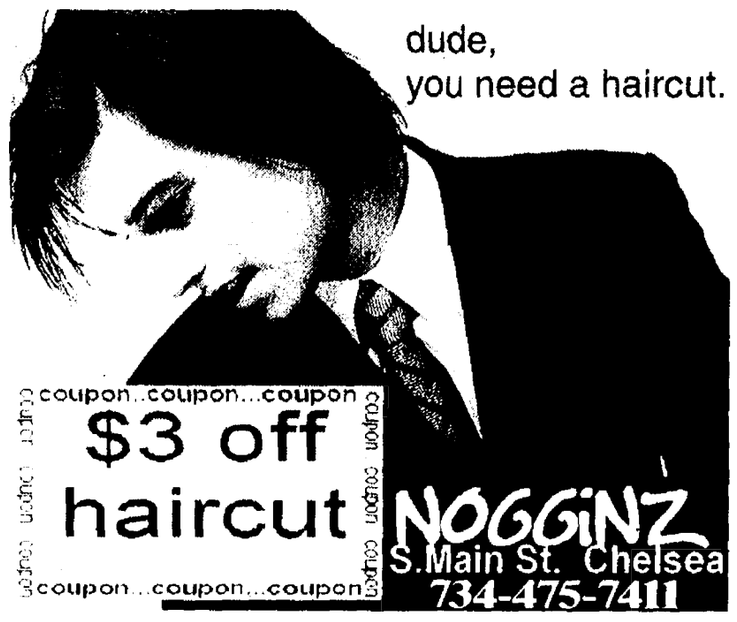
A reception followed the concert which ended with the hymn "Joyful, Joyful, We Adore Thee" from Beethoven and "Why We Sing" a signature song for In Harmony. Seventy-five people attended the free concert that followed the formal dedication of the organ to the Church at the 10 a.m. communion service. The Rev. Myra Colvin celebrated the service.



SYLVAN TOWNSHIP VOTERS

We would like to thank the Sylvan Township Voters for their recent support in the November 4th Election. A quote from Abraham Lincoln says it best for us:

"I do the very best I know how – the very best I can; and I mean to keep on doing it until the end"

MANY THANKS!

HEROES

In the area of Gibraltar, which was heavily manned by submarines, the convoy lost a ship.

"I did not see the actual sinking, there were so many ships in our convoy," he explains.

From Italy, Landwehr returned to Galveston, Texas, then crossed the Atlantic again to France in April 1945. He left France and voyaged through the Panama Canal into the South Pacific, where he remained for a few months.

On his last mission, Landwehr was sent to Okinawa in October 1945, where his ship got caught in the same ferocious typhoon Dan Ewald had been in.

"We didn't know each other then, and it was just a couple of years ago that we discovered we were there at the same time," says Landwehr, who returned home and left the service in January 1946, just before he turned 18.

Landwehr moved to Chelsea in 1953 and married lifetime resident Winona Franklin. Together they had three sons, and together they endure the loss of a son a year ago. They have five grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Also in 1953, Landwehr began work at the Chrysler Proving Grounds. He worked as a test driver, technician, and for 18 years as test supervisor. He retired in 1983.

Today, Landwehr, 80, volunteers at the Chelsea Community Hospital where he delivers the mail and drives the shuttle. He and his wife enjoy visits with their family who live throughout southeastern Michigan.

He is survived by his wife, Caren (Como), his daughters Amy (Bill) Lamb of Chelsea, Dr. Charlotte (Colby) Skelton of Saint Paul, Minn., and Meghann (Michael) Zellen of Los Angeles, granddaughters Madeleine, MacKenna, and Molly Lamb of Chelsea, and sister Jane (Joe) Ringer of Deephaven, Minn.

Born on Oct. 12, 1942 to Jake and Claudine (Jones) Ziegler in Flint, Ron graduated from Bentley High School. He attended the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, completed his Bachelor of Science in Civil Engineering in 1965, and later earned a Professional Engineer license.

In college, Ron met the love of his life, Caren, and they were married in 1964. They have lived in Chelsea since 1974, save for three years spent working in Saudi Arabia and exploring the world with their young family. Ron retired in 2006 from the Chelsea Proving Grounds.

Ron did everything with limitless enthusiasm and passion. He never did anything half-way, he never sat around waiting for life to happen to him. Even in retirement, Ron worked tirelessly. He tackled projects for family and friends, and still made time for motorcycles, horses, bird-hunting, and training his beloved dog, Chloe. On the day he died, Ron and Chloe were enjoying a beautiful Indian Summer afternoon cutting wood on a nearby farm. Ron also had made plans for a motorcycle ride with friends and a family dinner party later that evening. This day was like so many others, symbolic of the mix of hobbies, friends, and loved ones that made up his life.

Funeral services were Saturday, Nov. 8, 2008 at the Staffan-Mitchell Funeral Home. Ron will be remembered as a loving and devoted husband, father, grandfather, brother, and friend. Expressions of sympathy may be made to the March of Dimes.

Chalk Talk with Don Richter

Chelsea Standard / Dexter Leader Sports Editor Don Richter goes beyond the final scores.

Chelsea's defense shows its heart

It's a very old saying, but it's oftentimes true. In sports, it's said offense sells tickets, but defense wins championships.

At Chelsea, the Bulldogs are known for a high-flying, high-octane, wide-open offense. With standout junior halfback Nick Hill, a well-oiled and cohesive offensive line and dangerous threats at receiver and quarterback, Chelsea has one of the area's most potent attacks. In 11 games this season, the Bulldogs have scored 354 points for an average of 32 points per outing. Chelsea has scored 30 or more points in eight of its 11 contests this year.

The Bulldogs' offense has indeed grabbed most of the headlines the past season, but lately it's been Chelsea's unheralded defense that has come up big when it's mattered.

Most recently, the Bulldog defense made the play of the game in helping defeat Mason 22-20 in last Friday's Division 3 state district final. With 37 seconds left in the contest, Mason scored a touchdown. Trailing by two points, Mason was forced to attempt a two-point conversion to tie the game and force overtime. With its season hanging in the balance, Chelsea's defense came up huge, blowing up Mason's two-point conversion option play and tackling the ball carrier in the backfield for the victory.

What was impressive about the game-winning defensive surge was not only the stop in the backfield, but the number of Bulldog defenders converging on the ball carrier. Seemingly shot out of a cannon, Chelsea players surrounded the Mason running back like bees on honey. The play was over before it even started.

While the Bulldogs have given up 249 points this year, for an average of 23 points per game, when it has mattered, Chelsea's defense has come up big time after time this season.

Chelsea coach Brad Bush said the Bulldogs' defense has risen to the challenge all year, especially against Mason.

"Obviously, the defense came out and played well from the start," he said. "I thought our defense took a step forward tonight."

In the state pre-district opener against Milan, the Bulldogs fell behind early 14-0. With its playoff life in jeopardy, Chelsea's defense rose to the challenge and shut out the Big Reds for the final three quarters, winning 31-14.

In the regular season finale against Temperance Bedford, the Bulldogs had not only one, but two successful goal line stands. The first occurred just

Chelsea shuts down Mason

By Don Richter
Sports Editor

It was a history-making night last Friday as Chelsea defeated host Mason 22-20 in a Division 3 state district final. With the win, the Bulldogs (9-2) won their first state playoff game in school history on the road.

"You wouldn't know that, we really don't talk about it much," said Chelsea coach Brad Bush. "But when I told the guys that, they went crazy."

Also going crazy last Friday night was the Chelsea fan base that crammed into the Mason visitor's side stands and lined the fence two-deep. The overflowing crowd saw a Bulldog team pushed to the brink. Despite its best season in years, Mason (9-2) was unable to pull out the win.

"We played hard," said Mason coach Jerry Van Havel. "I can't fault our effort. I love these kids. To be where we are right now is an outstanding accomplishment."

Last season, Mason finished 1-8 overall.

"It was a tough game for us," Van Havel said. "Chelsea played well. Our kids played their hearts out."

Bush said last Friday's district final win was a great victory for his program.

"Mason is a heck of a team," he said. "That's a very good football team we beat. I'm very pleased."

In the past few games, the Bulldogs have started slowly. Against Mason, Chelsea came out ready to play.

On its second possession of the game, junior running back Nick Hill scored on a 3-yard run over right guard. Senior Michael Roberts' point after touchdown kick giving the Bulldogs a 7-0 lead with 3:38 left in the first quarter culminated the 10-play, 62-yard drive.

Early in the second quarter, after a goal line defensive stand by Chelsea that forced a missed field goal attempt by Mason, the Bulldogs struck for a 45-yard touchdown pass from Roberts to senior tight end Jake Mantel (6-foot-4, 215 pounds). Mantel's catch was highlight-reel quality as he made an outstretched, fingertip grab over the middle for the score. Roberts added the extra point increasing Chelsea's advantage to 14-0 with 4:33 remaining in the first half.

In the third quarter, Mason finally got on the scoreboard as senior Nick Mellios hit pay dirt on a 1-yard dive. Sophomore Josh Derby booted the extra point cutting the Bulldogs' lead to 14-7 with 5:47 left in the third frame.

With a minute gone in the fourth quarter, Chelsea was backed up deep in its own zone at its 11-yard line. The Mason crowd was loud looking for a quick stop. Instead, Hill took the first play from scrimmage and sprinted 89 yards up the middle for a career-long touchdown run. After two consecutive Mason penalties on the extra point attempt, the Bulldogs decided to go for two points. Roberts barreled in on a quarterback sneak upping Chelsea's lead to 22-7 with 11:01 left in the game.

The two-point conversion turned out to be the difference in the contest.

"They were really trying to time our snap (on extra point)," Bush said. "They jumped twice. So now the ball goes from the three to the one and a half to the three-quarter yard line, if there is such a thing. We rolled the dice a bit."

On its following possession, Mason senior Sam Grantham scored on a 35-yard pass from senior quarterback Cody Morrison on a fourth and 10 play. Derby split the uprights closing the gap to 22-14 with 8:21 left on the

Volleyball

Bulldogs win district title

By Don Richter
Sports Editor

Fresh off winning a Southeastern Conference White Division championship, Chelsea volleyball captured a Class B state district title defeating Tecumseh for the crown last Friday at Ann Arbor Gabriel Richard.

Earlier during the regular season, the Bulldogs beat the Indians in a SEC White Division match-up.

In the district final, Chelsea topped Tecumseh in four games.

"Tecumseh blocked very well at the net and was able to slow down our offense in Game 1," said Chelsea coach Laura Cleveland. "The team responded very well after dropping the first game by increasing their defensive intensity, serving and serve receive accuracy in Games 2 through 4. The passing improved and our side out efficiency and attacking efficiencies went up."

Cleveland said the Bulldogs played better as the match progressed.

"The team was able to gather momentum and did not let it go throughout Games 2 through 4," she said. "Our confidence grew with each game and the team became the aggressor in the match."

In the district semifinals Nov. 5, Chelsea defeated the host Fighting Irish.

"The student section for Gabriel Richard was great and really helped the host team," Cleveland said. "The team responded very well in the arena which was loud and full of energy on both sides."

To open district play, the Bulldogs defeated Milan.

"This is the third time playing Milan this season, which is always a difficult task playing against an opponent you have beaten twice already in the season," Cleveland said.

The district title was Chelsea's fifth in the last nine years.

The Bulldogs played Dearborn Divine Child in a Class B regional semifinal after press deadline. If successful against the Falcons, Chelsea would play the winner of Ida-Bloomfield Hills Lahser Thursday at 7 p.m.

Freshman Volleyball

Chelsea's freshman volleyball team concluded its season losing to Temperance Bedford 25-21, 25-10, 15-11 Oct. 30.

"Our season was not full of wins, but it was full of improvement," said Chelsea coach Pennie Ward. "We came up against Bedford and they are one of the stronger teams we play."

Ward said losing to the Mules didn't matter as much as seeing her team come together and play well.

"Hard work and desire will pay off," she said. "The proud look on the team's face said it all. They were all winners."

Members of the Bulldogs this season included Briana Carden, Jessie Palumbo, Maria Maldonado, Lauren Lyon, Missy Bluteau, Kirsten Bokros, Megan Brockett, Taylor Van Riper, Grace Martin, Alexis Romelhardt, McKenzie Hoffman and Lauren Barbour.

Swimming and Diving

Dawgs compete in SEC meet

By Don Richter
Sports Editor

Chelsea's girls' swimming and diving team participated in the Southeastern Conference White Division meet last weekend at Dexter. The Bulldogs placed second.

Chelsea coach Dave Jolly said the Bulldogs swam well with quite a few standout performances.

"I would have to say that sophomore Ellen Day and sophomore Claudia Bravo had the greatest meet," he said. "Each had career best times in all of their swims over the weekend."

Bravo also qualified for the state championships on two relays.

"She was so focused, but relaxed, throughout the entire taper," Jolly said. "What was probably the most important factor to her success over the weekend was her consistency throughout the resting process."

In the 200 medley relay, the Bulldog foursome of Jaclyn Murphy, Michelle Kellogg, Claire Stephens and Hannah Olsen placed second in a season best time of 1:55.40.

"This time will put them among the best in the state going into the state championships," Jolly said.

In the 200 freestyle, Katlin Cottrell finished second with a career best clocking of 2:00.77. Katie McEachern was sixth in 2:09.10, while Sarah Daniel was ninth in 2:15.98 and Abby Ingall 12th in 2:18.77 for Chelsea.

Kellogg touched third in the 200 individual medley in 2:23.62. Kristin Angelocci was eighth in 2:31.33, while Bravo was ninth in 2:31.72 and Hanna Newbound 11th in 2:35.75.

Stephens was second in the 50 freestyle in 25.23, while Hannah Olsen was sixth in 26.19 and Donna Prieskorn 11th in 27.28.

In the one-meter diving competition, Lauren Dark finished first for the Bulldogs with a score of 377.60 points.

"What is most impressive is that she (Dark) had been out of competition for nearly a month with a back injury," Jolly said.

Christina Coffman ended up fifth in diving with a score of 307 points.

"She had a fantastic meet," Jolly said of Coffman. "Her place earned her a spot in next week's diving regional. It was a great performance by a first-year diver."

Stephens finished second in the 100 butterfly with a time of 1:01.89. Bravo was eighth in 1:09.21, while sophomore Emily Phillips was 11th in 1:15.62.

Prieskorn was fifth in the 100 freestyle in 57.34, while Olsen was sixth in 57.74 and Murphy eighth in a career best 58.76.

Cottrell placed fifth in the 500 freestyle in 5:33.87.

"In the prelims she swam a career best of 5:30.42," Jolly said.

McEachern was sixth in a state qualifying 5:46.53, while Ingall was 12th in 6:10.59.

In the 200 freestyle relay, Kellogg, Bravo, Prieskorn and Cottrell finished third in a state qualifying 1:46.04.

"Bravo's 26.85 was absolutely unbelievable," Jolly said.

Also in the 200 freestyle relay, Amanda Johnson, Kim Hansen, Ingall and McEachern placed ninth in 1:55.53 for the Bulldogs.

In the 100 backstroke, Murphy was third in 1:05.73, while Angelocci was sixth in 1:08.75, Sarah Daniel 10th in 1:11.27 and Grace Benton 12th in 1:13.20.

Kellogg ended up third in the 100 breaststroke in 1:13.18, while Becca Brezee was seventh in 1:16.37, Newbound 10th in 1:19.72 and Kelly O'Keefe 11th in 1:21.08.

In the 400 freestyle relay, the group of Olsen, Cottrell, Prieskorn and Stephens placed second in 3:46.38. McEachern, Angelocci, Brezze and Murphy ended up eighth in 4:02.92.

State-ranked Chelsea next travels to Oakland University in Rochester to compete in the Division 3 state meet Nov. 21 through 22.

Cross Country

Pappas named MVP

By Don Richter
Sports Editor

Chelsea's boys' cross country team held its end-of-season banquet last week.

Named the Bulldogs' MVP this season was sophomore August Pappas. Pappas finished seventh overall with a time of 15:49.1 at the Division 2 state meet Nov. 1. With his performance at the state final, Pappas earned All-State recognition. He also received All-Region and All-Southeastern Conference accolades. In the classroom, Pappas earned Academic All-State with a 3.611 grade point average.

Receiving the Most Improved Award was freshman Bryce Bradley. Bradley earned All-Region and All-SEC honors this past season. This year, Bradley set a freshman Chelsea record with his time of 16:10.3.

Senior Nick Hewitt received the Coaches Award. Hewitt ran to All-SEC first team accolades this year.

Senior Jared Gentz earned the SEC Sportsmanship Award for the Bulldogs.

Named Chelsea senior scholar-athletes were Mark Smith, Jack Hermann and Hewitt.

Receiving the Mark Kerr Man Up Award for the Bulldogs was Smith.

Senior Peter Wilke was named first team All-SEC and first team All-Region for Chelsea.

Junior Geoffrey Smith-Woollams and Smith both were named All-SEC second team for the Bulldogs.

Chelsea junior Geoffrey Smith-Woollams was named All-Southeastern Conference second team this past season for the Bulldogs.

On the year, Chelsea finished first in the SEC White Division and second in the Division 2 state regional meet.

"To sum up the season, we worked very hard and therefore performed very well," said Chelsea coach Eric Swager. "A top four finish in the state is exceptional. This is the best men's team in school history."

Swager said distance running is great sport.

"Kids without a ton of natural talent can work extremely hard and become good," he said. "This is the story of our team."

Swager said it was an enjoyable and memorable season.

"I would like to thank all the parents and other supporters that came out and cheered for fall's most exciting sport," he said. "We look forward to continued success in the future."

Chelsea Gold

Chelsea's Andrew Klink, a fourth-grader at Pierce Lake Elementary School, won a gold medal in the school's Jog-A-Thon last month. The event is for students in kindergarten through fourth-grade. The top five students in each grade completing the most laps are awarded medals. The participant completing the most laps overall is given the gold medal. Andrew jogged/walked 10 miles to take top honors.

MHSAA seeks scholar-athletes

The Michigan High School Athletic Association's Scholar-Athlete Award, will again present 32 $1,000 scholarships to top student-athletes at member high schools during the 2008-09 school year.

Underwritten by Farm Bureau Insurance, the Scholar-Athlete Award highlights the value that extra-curricular activities play in the total education of a high school student, often improving their academic achievements in the process. The Scholar-Athlete Award is in its 20th year. Since its inception in 1989-90, Farm Bureau Insurance has presented $447,000 in scholarships through this program.

The first 30 scholarships will be presented on a graduated basis across the MHSAA's traditional class structure. From Class A schools, six boys and six girls will receive scholarships; from Class B schools, four boys and four girls; from Class C schools, three boys and three girls; and from Class D schools, two boys and two girls will be honored.

The final two scholarships will be at-large minority selections, regardless of school size. The scholarships may be used at the institution of higher learning the recipients attend during the first year at those colleges.

Applications from individual schools will be limited to the number of available scholarships in their class. Class A schools may submit the names of six boys and six girls; Class B schools may submit four boys and four girls; Class C may submit three boys and three girls; and Class D may submit two boys and two girls.

Students applying for the Scholar-Athlete Award must be graduating during the 2008-09 school year, be carrying an unrounded 3.50 (on a 4.0) grade point average, and have won a varsity letter in a sport in which the MHSAA sponsors a postseason tournament prior to their senior year. The sports the MHSAA sponsors postseason competition are baseball, girls and boys basketball, girls and boys bowling, girls competitive cheer (not sideline cheerleading, dance or pom pon), girls and boys cross country, football, girls and boys golf, girls gymnastics, ice hockey, girls and boys lacrosse, girls and boys skiing, girls and boys soccer, softball, girls and boys swimming and diving, girls and boys tennis, girls and boys track and field, girls volleyball, and wrestling.

Applicants will be required to show involvement in other school-community activities and submit an essay on the importance of sportsmanship in educational athletics.

Applications are available only in digital format. The downloadable forms on the MHSAA Web site need only be saved to a computer, filled out in nearly any word processing program - in Windows or Macintosh platforms — and then printed out to be attached to the required essay and letters of recommendation.

Students must submit their applications to their school athletic director, principal or guidance counselor by Nov. 24, 2008. Students should check with their school administration to determine who the internal coordinator for the program is, and if the school has an earlier internal application deadline. Schools have additional materials to submit with student applications, and each school must submit all of its applications at one time. Individually mailed applications to the MHSAA office will not be accepted.

The application materials will be available online until Nov. 24 on the recognition page of the MHSAA Web site.

before halftime, while the second happened as the clock wound down in the fourth quarter. Both defensive stands keyed Chelsea's eventual 34-28 overtime victory.

As the Bulldogs advance deeper into the state playoffs, their defense seems to toughen and stiffen the better the competition. Since trailing Milan 14-0 early in the pre-district opener, Chelsea has given up only 20 points in its last seven quarters.

This Saturday, in the Division 3 state regional final, the Bulldog defense will face their most difficult foe yet. Inkster (10-1) is big, strong and fast. The Vikings have outscored their first two playoff opponents by a combined score of 102-0.

While we sports writers and sports pundits like to talk about defense winning championships and offense selling tickets...blah, blah, blah...what really matters is the young men between the lines, buckling on their chinstraps and believing.

Yes, Inkster has scored a gazillion points this season, has one of the state's top wide receivers in Cam Gordon (6-foot-3, 215 pounds) and arguably the state's best junior quarterback in Vince Young-like Devin Gardner (6-4, 210), but when it comes down to it, size and speed aren't always the deciding factor in football games. Heart, execution and an undying will to succeed can often win the day defensively, despite what appears to be overwhelming odds.

Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower, also a five-star general during World War II, and someone who knew a thing or two about winning, coined a phrase much more eloquent and appropriate for the Bulldog defense as it prepares to face powerful Inkster Saturday.

"What counts is not necessarily the size of the dog in the fight — it's the size of the fight in the dog," he once said.

It's maybe not as sexy or easy as saying defense wins championships, but Ike's quote still rings true.

Chelsea is three wins away from a football state championship. Inkster is the Bulldogs' most formidable opponent to date.

What's the size of the fight in Chelsea's defensive Dawgs?

We'll find out Saturday.

clock.

After a Chelsea punt, Mason took over at its own 20-yard line with 5:08 remaining in the game. Sixteen plays later, Mason senior Evan Hayden caught a 10-yard touchdown pass from Morrison with 37 seconds remaining. Trailing 22-20, Mason was forced to go for two points to try and tie the game and force overtime.

With the entire stadium crowd on its feet and the season of both squads on the line, the Bulldog defense dug in. Mason ran left, attempting an option play. A whole host of Chelsea defenders smothered the play, tackling the Mason ball carrier behind the line of scrimmage ending the game.

Hill finished the night with 317 yards rushing on 37 carries with two touchdowns. Mellios ended up with 164 yards on 24 attempts.

Chelsea quarterback Michael Roberts rolls out against Mason last Friday.

Roberts was 6-of-10 passing for 110 yards and one TD. Morrison was 21-of-34 for 227 yards and two scores.

Senior Michael Lenneman had two catches for 28 yards, while senior Steven O'Keefe had two receptions for 19 yards for the Bulldogs. Senior Casey Kloeckner had seven receptions for 41 yards, while Grantham had seven catches for 112 yards for Mason.

Chelsea finished with 453 total yards, while Mason had 394 total yards.

The Bulldogs had seven penalties for 71 yards, while Mason had eight penalties for 58 yards.

Defensively, senior cornerback Scott Rhodes and senior linebacker Kyle Coburn led Chelsea each with nine tackles. Junior end Colton Waterbury added seven stops, while senior linebacker Cody Schiller had six tackles and senior end Dakota Risner and junior cornerback Dakota Cooley each recorded five tackles for the Bulldogs. Freshman linebacker Connor Holbrook led Mason with 12 tackles.

Chelsea next travels to Inkster (10-1) for a Division 3 state regional final Saturday at 1 p.m. The Vikings, Division 6 state runner-up in 2006, have defeated their two playoff opponents this year by a combined score of 102-0.

Football

Inkster up next for Dawgs

By Don Richter
Sports Editor

For the third consecutive year, Chelsea football will play in the Division 3 state regional final.

The previous two years, the Bulldogs have hosted the final. Each season, Chelsea lost to Lansing area squads. In 2006, the Bulldogs lost to Fowlerville, while last year Chelsea fell to East Lansing.

This season, the Bulldogs (9-2) travel to Inkster to take on the Vikings (10-1) Saturday at 1 p.m. in the Division 3 regional final. If successful against Inkster, Chelsea would play the winner of Warren Fitzgerald (10-1)-Bloomfield Hills Lahser (10-1) in the state semifinals at a site and day still to be determined.

In 2005, current head coach Greg Carter took over the program after a successful career at perennial state power Detroit DePorres. At DePorres, Carter won multiple state championships before the school closed.

After arriving at Inkster, Carter immediately turned the program around. Prior to Carter taking over the reigns, the Vikings had records of 1-8 in 2004, 0-9 in 2003, 5-4 in 2002, 1-8 in 2001 and 3-6 in 2000.

In 2005, Carter's first season, the Vikings finished 9-3 and lost in the state regional final. In 2006, Inkster advanced to the Division 6 state championship game before losing to Saginaw Nouvel Catholic 28-14. Last year, the Vikings had arguably their best team under Carter, going through the season unbeaten at 8-0 before having to forfeit all eight wins because of using an ineligible player. Because of the penalty, Inkster finished 1-8.

This year, Inkster is 10-1 losing only to Highland Park 24-22 in Week 2. In that game, numerous Viking starters did not play.

In two playoff games this year, Inkster has outscored its foes 102-0. To begin the playoffs, the Vikings beat Gibraltar Carlson (6-4) 50-0 in the pre-district opener and last week pounded Trenton (7-4) 52-0 in the district final.

REGIONAL FINAL

Who: Chelsea at Inkster

What: Division 3 state regional final

When: 1 p.m. Saturday

Records: Chelsea (9-2), Inkster (10-1)

For the year, Inkster has scored 432 points for an average of 39 points per game. Defensively, the Vikings have allowed 118 points for an average of 11 points per outing.

Inkster is led by senior wide receiver-linebacker Cam Gordon (6-foot-3, 215 pounds). Gordon is being recruited by Iowa, Ohio State, Michigan, Michigan State and Minnesota to name a few of the schools after his services. With his size and 4.5 speed, Gordon is one of the state's best players.

At running back, the Vikings have shifty senior Alan Freeman (5-9, 185). Also a defensive back, Freeman is being wooed by Bowling Green, Central Michigan, Eastern Michigan and Toledo.

Another top performer for Inkster and its best playmaker is junior quarterback Devin Gardner (6-4, 210). Gardner is a threat running or passing. He is considered one of the top two junior quarterback prospects in the state. Notre Dame, Ohio State, Wisconsin, Michigan and Michigan State are a few of the big-name programs recruiting him.

'A clever shredding machine'

Caring for a healthy bobcat no piece of cake

By Jim Orr

When I got home from out of town I had a message on my answering machine from a friend that he had found an injured bobcat.

My heart skipped a beat as I listened to his message asking for my help.

As I started to imagine how I might handle one this fairly dangerous wildlife species, the next message played saying they were going to take it to the veterinary clinic as it was unconscious and they could not reach me.

I relaxed a little as my macho vision of handling a wild cat vanished with the answering machine beep.

It would have been interesting to work with a bobcat but I must admit I was a little relieved at not having to wrestle with a powerful sharp-clawed beast.

As the rest of the messages played out the last one was from the veterinary clinic asking if I would come pick up a bobcat as soon as possible.

"The game was afoot" as Sherlock Holmes used to say.

I arrived at the veterinary clinic with all my glamorous tools of the rehabilitation trade.

I had my heavy-duty elbow length gloves, my Kevlar arm guards, even a catch pole in the event things got dicey.

The excitement was to come later.

The doctor explained the Bobcat had been virtually unconscious for the past 24 hours. It had just started to come around a few hours ago and they where glad I was there to take it off their hands.

I was led to it's cage and eased up on the adrenaline as I saw the poor thing laying on its side, barely able to lift its head up.

It had apparently been hit by a car and had all the signs of a severe concussion, but no broken bones or other apparent injuries.

This type of injury often results in swelling around the brain or spinal area.

The swelling restricts transmission of signals to and from the brain resulting in anything from paralysis to blindness.

Steriods can help and also hurt

Steroids are injected to reduce swelling in the hope functions return, but they can only be administered for a few days before the steroids start to cause adverse effects to the bodies organs.

The bobcat had already had a very heavy dose with minimal effect.

I wondered how much help only two more days of steroids might offer such a distraught animal.

I put on my gloves and loaded the cat in a large travel cage with little resistance other than a guttural growl.

I was amazed at how heavy the cat was for its size. It was obvious it had a lot more muscle and bone weight than the average cat.

The second day I was faced with the task of injecting the steroids into a caged, cornered and very awake bobcat.

I soon realized the protective gloves where too heavy to operate the syringe so at least one hand would have to work unprotected.

I pondered which hand I might best afford to lose. I held the cat's neck with the gloved hand and injected the medicine with the sacrificial hand.

The cat tensed and growled but did not resist. I sweated.

The third day was a little more hair-raising as the Bobcat was now standing and turning at will.

It was still dazed but very capable of inflicting great pain if so desired.

The growl was deeper and considerably more expressive and I was glad this was to be the last day I had to gamble with a naked hand.

By the forth day the bobcat was ready to go into an outside pen, which would give it an area to regain its running, climbing and general feline balancing skills.

The plan was simple, place the travel cage in the large outdoor cage, stand behind the little cage as close to the exit door as possible, reach over the top, release the cat, exit the big cage quickly and close the door.

It did not work out quite as planned, Does it ever?

We got the travel cage into the big cage without incident. I found my place near the exit and behind the release cage as planned. At the point the plan ceased to exist.

My brother, who was assisting, was outside the cage. He informed me that I needed my gloves.

"Not yet," I said. "I don't need them until I get ready to open the door on the travel cage."

"You need them now!" he advised as I realized the back of the cat's cage had fallen off and the cat was about six inches from me looking at me unobstructed.

"Are you the guy that has been sticking me with that giant needled." I imagined him saying.

I turned to dive out of the cage only to find my thoughtful brother had slammed shut the door trapping me inside.

"I need my gloves!" I shouted.

Long story short the Bobcat was not in a vindictive mood. I was able to get out of the cage while it simply watched with a bemused smile.

The cat exited his cage only after I was out of the way.

Handsome and regal, the bobcat is well equipped with razor-sharp claws, quickness and cleverness.

'Godspell' live

Chelsea High School Theatre Guild presents 'Godspell' this weekend

"My name is known: God and King. I am most in majesty, in whom no beginning may be and no end."

This is the voice of God speaking and also the first line of "Godspell." Chelsea High School Theatre Guild is presenting the 1970's musical, "Godspell," this weekend, Nov. 13-15.

This musical, by Stephen Schwartz and John-Michael Tebelak, originally opened off Broadway in May 1971 and one of its songs, "Day By Day" reached No. 13 on the Billboard pop singles chart in the summer of 1972. After five years of sold-out productions it opened on Broadway in 1976.

The "Godspell" cast is made up entirely of Chelsea High School students.

"This group of young men and women delved into this production with both feet; enthusiastically and unconditionally. We had only five weeks to prepare this performance, about two weeks shorter than normal," said Musical Director Alisa Bauer.

"The dedication and hard work they displayed would put many people to shame. They constantly brought their creativity and excitement to each rehearsal and did so without hesitation. I am proud and honored to have had the opportunity to work with and get to know this amazing group of people. They have inspired me every day of rehearsal as I am sure they will inspire you."

The show is at 7:30 p.m. today, tomorrow and Saturday in the Chelsea High School auditorium. Tickets prices are $10 adults and $5 students/seniors (over 60), children 4 years old and younger are free.

Tickets are for sale at Chelsea Pharmacy, Chelsea Rentals and Chelsea DAWG Pound (school store) this week.

Ashlyn Brinklow listens while Jesus speaks.

Director Alisa Bauer coaches Jesus, Cameron Girard, during rehearsal of Gospell.

He's healthy, now comes the hard part

At the time I got him, the bobcat weighed about 30 pounds and had trouble moving or keeping his eyes open.

He has since fully recovered and has been ready to return to the wild for several weeks.

When I originally picked him up my Kevlar gloves and arm guards seemed more than enough protection to manhandle him

My super gloves seem to have diminished greatly in size and value since he regained the full use of his weapons of mass destruction.

Nothing short of a tank or Robocop seems worthy of entering his pen now.

I decided to use my superior intelligence to trick him into the travel cage. That was two weeks ago and he still occupies the big cage, refusing to vacate.

The original plan was so simple. Everyday I have placed his food on a feeding platform in the pen. He has become very used to the process and to me, often coming out to retrieve his meal before I even leave the pen.

I had planned to simply set the travel cage on the feeding platform, place his meal inside, and close the door when he entered.

Unfortunately he has grown so much while in my care the travel cage I intended to use is too small for him.

The next size cage is too big to fit through the welded steel door to his pen. The game was afoot again.

I set the travel cage just outside the door to the pen, closed off any escape areas and rigged a rope to the door so that I could close the travel cage from my hiding place inside the cabin next to his pen.

I tested the rope and the door closed perfectly.

I put his chicken in the back of the travel cage and quickly retreated to my hiding spot with the rope.

The flaw in this genius plan was the fact the bobcat had watched me set up and test the trap.

As I peered out the cabin window he walked right up to the travel cage but — stopped short and looked at me watching him from the window.

It was obvious he was not about to enter while I was watching. I leaned out of his view just enough that he could not see me but I could still see his rear end and short tail.

This way I knew when to yank the rope when his tailed passed out of sight into the travel cage.

Great plan, he stepped into the cage, I yanked the rope, the door swung shut, I though it was over.

I ran out expecting to see a stupid cat in a cage but instead found him up on his feeding platform eating the piece of chicken that use to be in the travel cage.

The door to the travel cage was almost closed, but a large rock had prevented it from closing enough to trap him.

The rock was not there when I tested the trap. He smacked his lips as he finished dinner and climbed into his shelter to take a nap.

I wiped the stupid look off my face, cancelled my victory dance, and rethought my plan.

The next day I made sure that there was not a rock within 10 feet of the door. I tested it twice, braced everything so that even a hard yank would not disturb the perfect setup and resumed my hiding place in the cabin with my trusty trigger rope.

The bobcat refused to leave his sleeping shelter.

I would slowly peek up over the window sill to spy on him and he would be sitting in the doorway staring a hole right through me.

I would crouch down behind the window, crawl to a new vantage point, carefully peer around a corner and again he would already be staring at my hiding spot before I could get set.

I decided motionless might work, so I sat very still at the window barely breathing as I watched him.

He walked out of his tree top shelter, across the branch, down to the travel cage and stopped short at the door, looked up at me in the window, calmly washed his paws and went back into his shelter to take another nap.

This went on for over an hour before it dawned on me he was simply taunting me, playing a game.

The phone rang in the cabin startling him. He leaped back into his shelter as I got up to answer it.

I said "hello" and turned back to the window to keep an eye on smarty pants only to find that in that split second he already snatched the chicken back and was back in his treetop shelter.

I really felt stupid standing there with the trigger rope still in my hand watching him smugly eat his dinner.

This went on for two more days before I threw in the towel and took a one-week vacation after arranging for baby-sitters and feeders for all the critters. I am back now and the game resumes tonight.

If I have to, I could dart him with a tranquilizer, assuming he stood still for a split second, but that is a last resort.

Tranquilizers are very disorienting to an animal and not something you like to do just prior to release unless absolutely necessary.

Maybe if I upgrade the bait used to lure him into the travel cage, perhaps some cornish game hen braised with butter and filled with wild rice and cranberry stuffing.

I have pretty much decided it is time to call Webster and have them eliminate the term "dumb animal" from the dictionary. I have yet to meet one in my work.

Home is where the healing happens

By Sean Dalton
Staff Writer

Like many people living in the 9-to-5 workforce, Nicole and Ron Greer felt cozy as cogs in someone else's business machinery.

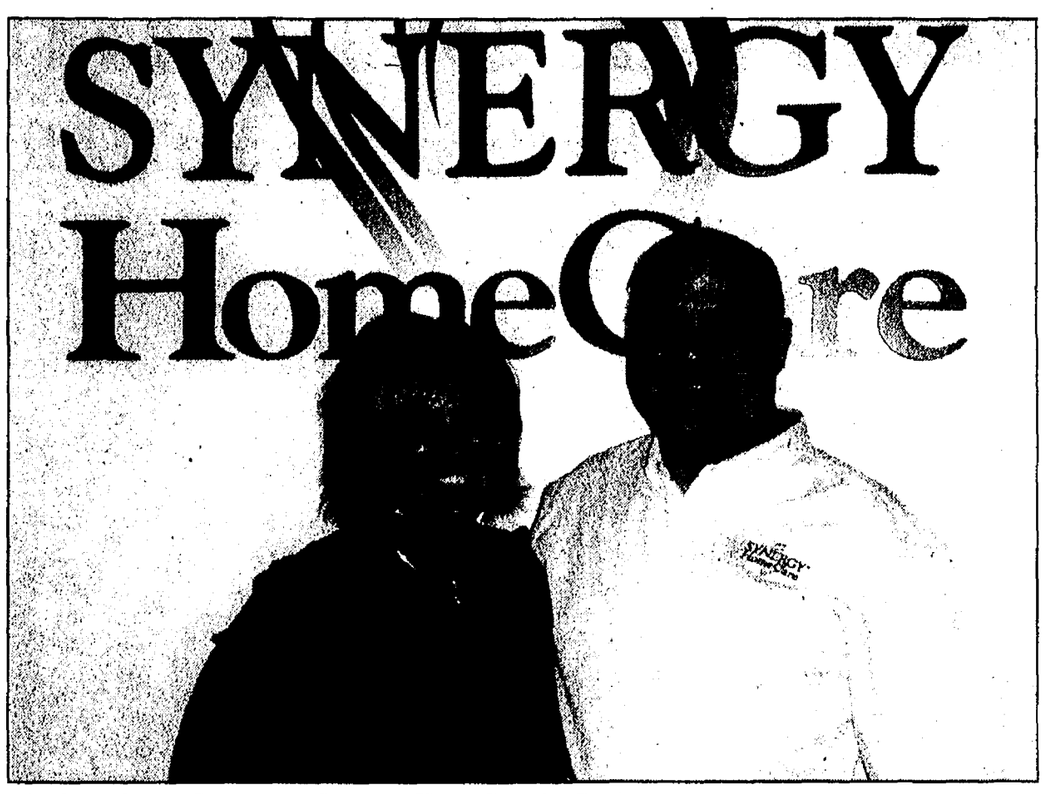
Risk isn't a concern, day-to-day operations are someone else's responsibility and the pay is steady. But the entrepreneurial bug bit both of them when they realized there was a need for home-based health care.

"Both of us had been caregivers in our families," Nicole said. She remembers the day her grandmother was diagnosed with terminal cancer; just six months after her grandfather had passed away.

"We figured out of 10 children, 23 grandchildren and 13 great grandchildren, we could get a handle on it," she said. "We sat down and made a calendar with everyone in the family covering a schedule, but after the first month life happened. There are children and careers, and it was a great emotional strain having to go there and watch her suffer."

Had Nicole known that there were companies that could have helped; she says she would have called in a heartbeat. Ron has also had brain cancer, Alzheimer's disease and other ailments touch his friends and family. Both of these people have eased the suffering of others with their bare hands.

So Nicole and Ron shed their corporate comforts and went into business for themselves doing something that they felt passionately about when they opened Synergy HomeCare at 140 W. Middle St. in Chelsea.



Nicole and Ron Greer own Synergy HomeCare in Chelsea.

"Leaving a stable corporate career for the uncertainty of business ownership isn't for everyone, but for us, this choice allowed us to launch Michigan's first Synergy HomeCare branch," Nicole Greer said. "It's also a chance for us to give people a choice other than moving sick relatives into their own homes or into a facility. There is definitely a disconnect there."

The Greer's want people to know that the third option that they provide – keeping the elderly, sick or disabled in their own homes with as much independence and dignity as possible is the best option.

Providing such care is quite a leap professionally. Nicole was a dealer relationship manager at AmeriCredit Financial and Ron was a new car manager for Art Moehn Chevrolet Honda.

"Though we both had successful careers, we wanted to start a business that not only left us fulfilled at the end of the day, but provided a true service to the community," Greer said.

Synergy Homecare is a nationwide company that provides companionship, homemaking and personal care to the elderly or disabled. The company was founded in 1999 by another entrepreneur who saw the rising need for the deployment of home health care with a rising elderly population, as well as the disabled and those recovering from illness, surgery or childbirth.

It says right on the company website that "we take great pride in and have a great passion for the work that we do – and we only hire caregivers that have the same pride and passion that we have."

That's one reason why the Greer's wanted to become franchisees.

"The paperwork was very extensive," Nicole said. "It's extensive because the company is based out of Arizona and it is a state that is licensed for care-giving, while Michigan is not."

In home care is serious work, both Greer's agree. Nursing credentials and various other certifications are necessary. They even work with the Alzheimer's Association in the Clocktower Complex to reach out to those elderly members of the community suffering from the disease.

"It's a significant percentage of our overall clients," Nicole said.

The alternative would be a nursing facility for such folks, and the Greer's are adamant about their mission.

"Our ultimate goal is to keep people in their homes," Nicole said. "We hope that we can service them and keep them there, but if we can't we can at least help families network with the best caregivers available."

The service is even used by companies and individuals to care for sick children and family members, to ease the burden placed on the sort of life that comes with a demanding high-powered career.

"No matter your situation we enjoy meeting with a family and hearing their stories, and discussing how we can help," Nicole said.

Aging industry

According to the U.S. Administration on Aging, people ages 65 and up currently represent 12.4 percent of the population, and that number is expected to grow to 20 percent by the year 2030. That's good news for elder care companies including Synergy HomeCare which recently opened the first of 14 locations planned for Michigan.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics reports that the home health care industry is expected to increase by more than 55 percent between 2002 and 2012, fueled by the aging of the nation's 76 million baby boomers. The Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services say spending for home health care will surpass $90 billion by 2014.

A 'checklist' for surviving a financial crisis

money WISE
By Deb Bauer

Over the past few weeks, the news has been almost incomprehensible. It's hard for many of us to make sense of the failure of major Wall Street firms and large banks and the $700 billion bailout of the financial sector. And it's hard for investors to be calm when stocks have fallen almost 30 percent from their all-time high a year ago. What can you do to cope? Consider the following "checklist" for surviving a financial crisis:

• Close your ears, but open your eyes. These days, you may hear some so-called "experts" talking about end-of-capitalism scenarios. Try not to listen to these doomsayers. We still have the most powerful economy in the history of the world and we will recover from these setbacks. However, even if you close your ears, you should keep your eyes wide open. Specifically, look for opportunities. Stock prices are down now, but they won't always be — and, all else being equal, investors who buy into the stock market at lower prices are likely to earn higher returns than those who buy stocks when prices are higher.

• Focus on things you can control. During a financial crisis, your success at weathering the storm depends on your ability to stay calm and concentrate on the things you can control. For example, you can control your emotions so that you aren't panicked into making unwise, short-term decisions, such as putting all your money under your mattress. And, to a certain extent, you can even control your portfolio's ability to withstand volatility. How? By diversifying your holdings as broadly as possible. The wider your range of investments, the less you'll be hurt by downturns that primarily affect one asset class. (Keep in mind, though, that diversification, by itself, cannot guarantee profits or protect against loss.)

• Review and rebalance your portfolio. During this market decline, some of your holdings have probably fallen more than others. As a result, you may now own a lower percentage of a specific asset class than you had originally intended when you built your portfolio. Consequently, you may want to meet with your financial advisor to determine if you should rebalance your portfolio by adding more money to those asset classes that have fallen the most. You may also want to rebalance if your risk tolerance or long-term goals have changed.

• Look for quality investments. In this economic environment, it's more important than ever to focus on quality investments. If you buy stocks, look for those companies with strong balance sheets. If you're purchasing bonds, stick with those that receive high credit ratings. If we are entering a prolonged economic downturn, these types of investments will, in all likelihood, fare better than lower-quality stocks and bonds.

Misfit E-toys needed

The Methodist Children's Home near Detroit is a home for kids who have suffered severe neglect or abuse.

Every year, these kids write up their Christmas lists. Just like countless others, many of them ask Santa for a "Game Boy" or a "DS" or another hand-held electronic game set. And every year, these kids are disappointed.

Is there an abandoned, unused, and no-longer-loved Game Boy languishing in your home? Don't let it be a Misfit Toy! Put it in a ziplock, along with any of its game cartridges, chargers, and accessories, and bring it to the Misfit E-Toys box in the Chelsea High School office. The Children's Home kids will give these toys all the love they need.

There also is a collection box at First United Methodist, in the Grams Hall social area.

Bring all e-toy donations by Nov. 30. If you'd like a receipt, please include a self-addressed envelope in your ziplock.

For more information, contact Edie Wiarda at 475-9121. For more information about the Methodist Children's Home, log onto www.themethodistchildrenshome.com.

Service of Remembrance

A community Service of Remembrance is being held at 3 p.m. on Sunday, Nov. 16, at the Chelsea Community Hospital dining room. This non-denominational service is open to anyone who has lost a loved one in the past year.

The service, which is expected to last approximately 45 minutes, will consist of speakers who will discuss grief during the holidays, reading of the names of those who have passed away, and lighting candles in their memory. Each grieving family will be presented with a personalized memorial angel ornament.

After the service, light refreshments will be provided, along with a time to share memories and experiences. Brochures about coping with the holidays will be available.

There is no cost for the program, and pre-registration is not required. The service is jointly sponsored by Chelsea Community Hospital, Cole Funeral Chapel, and Staffan-Mitchell Funeral Home.

Questions may be addressed to John Mitchell at 475-1444 or Allen Cole at 475-1551.

Tradition on parade

The Servants of Charity celebrate its founder

By Joe Yekulis
Guest Writer

In the old traditions of the Catholic Church, feast days are set aside to honor God, Mary, or a particular saint or person who has been declared blessed on the day of their death.

The Servants of Charity Congregation honored their founder, Blessed Louis Guanella, on his feast day at a special Mass on Sunday Oct. 25, 2008 at the Shrine of St. Joseph in Grass Lake.

Fr. Guanella was born in northern Italy in 1842 and lived until 1915. His mission in life was to care for the "poorest of the poor," and especially those who were cast out from society as a result of their disabilities. He began the Servants of Charity Congregation in 1908, and they are celebrating their 100th Anniversary this year.

He was beatified by Pope Paul VI in 1964, and is undergoing the process of canonization for sainthood by the Congregation for the Causes of Saints in Rome.

The Servants of Charity have been operating St. Louis Center in Chelsea since 1960, and have been operating the Shrine of St. Joseph since 1995 in Grass Lake.

Nearly 150 people attended the Feast-Day Mass that was said in honor of Blessed Guanella, and Monsignor Steven Raica of the Diocese of Lansing was the celebrant. Concelebrating the Mass with Msgr. Raica was Fr. Joseph Rinaldo, SdC, Fr. Fortunato Turati, SdC, Fr. Enzo Addari, SdC, and Fr. Satheesh Alphonse, SdC.

A special tent was set up on the grounds of the Shrine to accommodate the number of people present, and members of the Knights of Columbus 4th Degree Assemblies were present from both Jackson and Washtenaw Counties to add to the dignity of the event.

The Ladies Guild of the Shrine of St. Joseph held a reception for those in attendance following the Mass.

Joseph Yekulis is the public relations director for the Servants of Charity at the St. Louis Center.

Members of the Knights of Columbus Color Corps from Jackson and Washtenaw Counties move in formation from the chapel to the Mass tent.

(L to R) Fr. Addari (not seen), Fr. Turati, Msgr. Raica, Fr. Rinaldo, and Fr. Alphonse consecrate communion.

Julian Early leads St. Louis Center residents into the tent for Mass.

Worshippers line up at the reception food table after Mass.

Researchers comment on stem cell win

University of Michigan executive officers and faculty issued statements after Tuesday's election regarding the passage of Proposal 2, an amendment to the Michigan Constitution that allows new embryonic stem cell lines to be derived from embryos that have been created for fertility treatment purposes.

The embryos affected by the amendment would otherwise be discarded, unless donated with informed consent.

Proposal 2, approved by voters, overturns a 1978 Michigan law that prohibited creation of new stem cell lines from discarded embryos. The amendment will take effect Dec. 19.

Prior to passage of Proposal 2, Michigan has been one of the most restrictive states in the country with respect to embryonic stem cell research.

MARY SUE COLEMAN, president of the University of Michigan, said: "The passage of Proposal 2 by Michigan voters signals an exciting new era for scientific research and innovation in our state. By expanding research with the creation of new embryonic stem cells, University of Michigan scientists can broaden their pursuit of therapies and cures for medical disorders that touch the lives of thousands of Michigan families.

"We will now build on our already strong reputation for adult stem cell research with an equally committed approach to embryonic stem cell research. We are proud to be one of the country's leading research universities, and this endorsement by voters will strengthen our ability not only to improve the health of our communities, but also to boost the intellectual and economic vitality that is critical to the future of our region."

DR. ROBERT KELCH, executive vice president for medical affairs, said: "By passing Proposal 2, the citizens of Michigan have voiced their hope for the future of biomedical research, their confidence in our scientists' talents, and their desire for our state to be known as a welcoming environment for life sciences discovery and industry.

"Now, it is up to us in the scientific community to build upon what the voters have given us, and to maintain their trust and respect by carrying out this research with the utmost regard for both ethical and legal boundaries. All of us at the University of Michigan are committed to that goal, no matter what our field of research.

"We do not yet know what our scientists' stem cell research will find, nor how soon it might impact the way human diseases are diagnosed and treated. But we do know that scientific research is what has brought us to today's heights of medical achievement. And only through further research, free from undue restrictions, will we realize even greater gains. The voters of Michigan deserve thanks for sharing that vision with us."

SEAN MORRISON, director of the Center for Stem Cell Biology, said: "The people of Michigan voted to support science, innovation and potentially life-saving research. They saw through the fear and misinformation from the special interest groups that opposed Proposal 2. This is a great day for the state that allows us to strengthen our life sciences sector and to advance critical medical research with energy and hope.

"Proposal 2 will allow research in Michigan that is already occurring throughout most of the rest of the country, while entrenching restrictions in the state constitution that ensure that the research is performed ethically and under oversight mandated by federal law. The University of Michigan will launch new research programs that we expect to advance the science of stem cell biology and the treatment of patients."

DR. EVA FELDMAN, director the A. Alfred Taubman Medical Research Institute, said: "It is so gratifying that the people of Michigan understand the critical role that embryonic stem cell research can play in the health and well-being of our state. They recognize its promise to find cures and new treatments for currently intractable diseases. They know that embryonic stem cell research offers the best hope for bringing relief to tens of thousands of Michigan citizens who suffer, daily and terribly, from a wide range of diseases.

"Now, at the University of Michigan's A. Alfred Taubman Medical Research Institute, we are ready to move forward to seek innovations in the laboratory that will lead to cures in hospitals and doctors' offices across our state. We can continue our fight against diabetes, cancer and ALS (amyotrophic lateral sclerosis) with a new freedom that will lead to new cures. It is truly a historic moment. For our state, it means a healthier community and a healthier economy. For our patients, it means hope. For our children, it means a better future."

Here are the five key things to know about stem cells:

1. Scientists generally agree it's crucial to push forward rapidly in all three key areas of stem cell research: embryonic stem cells, tissue/adult stem cells and induced pluripotent (or "reprogrammed") stem cells.

2. Embryonic stem cells that scientists study come from early-stage embryos.

3. Adult stem cells are like supporting actors in the quest for stem cell treatments.

4. Induced pluripotent stem cells, or iPS cells, are adult cells reprogrammed to behave like embryonic stem cells.

5. Michigan scientists want to explore all types of stem cells to look for treatments or cures. But they currently lack a key tool: the ability to develop their own embryonic stem cell lines.

• Be patient. No one can predict when a bear market will end, but history has shown that turnarounds can happen quickly and unexpectedly. So be patient. The most successful investors have the courage to stay the course and take advantage of opportunities while others are "bailing out" of the financial markets.

We may still have some rough roads ahead of us. But if you can check off every item on this list, you may be able to smooth out some of the bumps you'll encounter on your journey toward achieving your long-term goals.

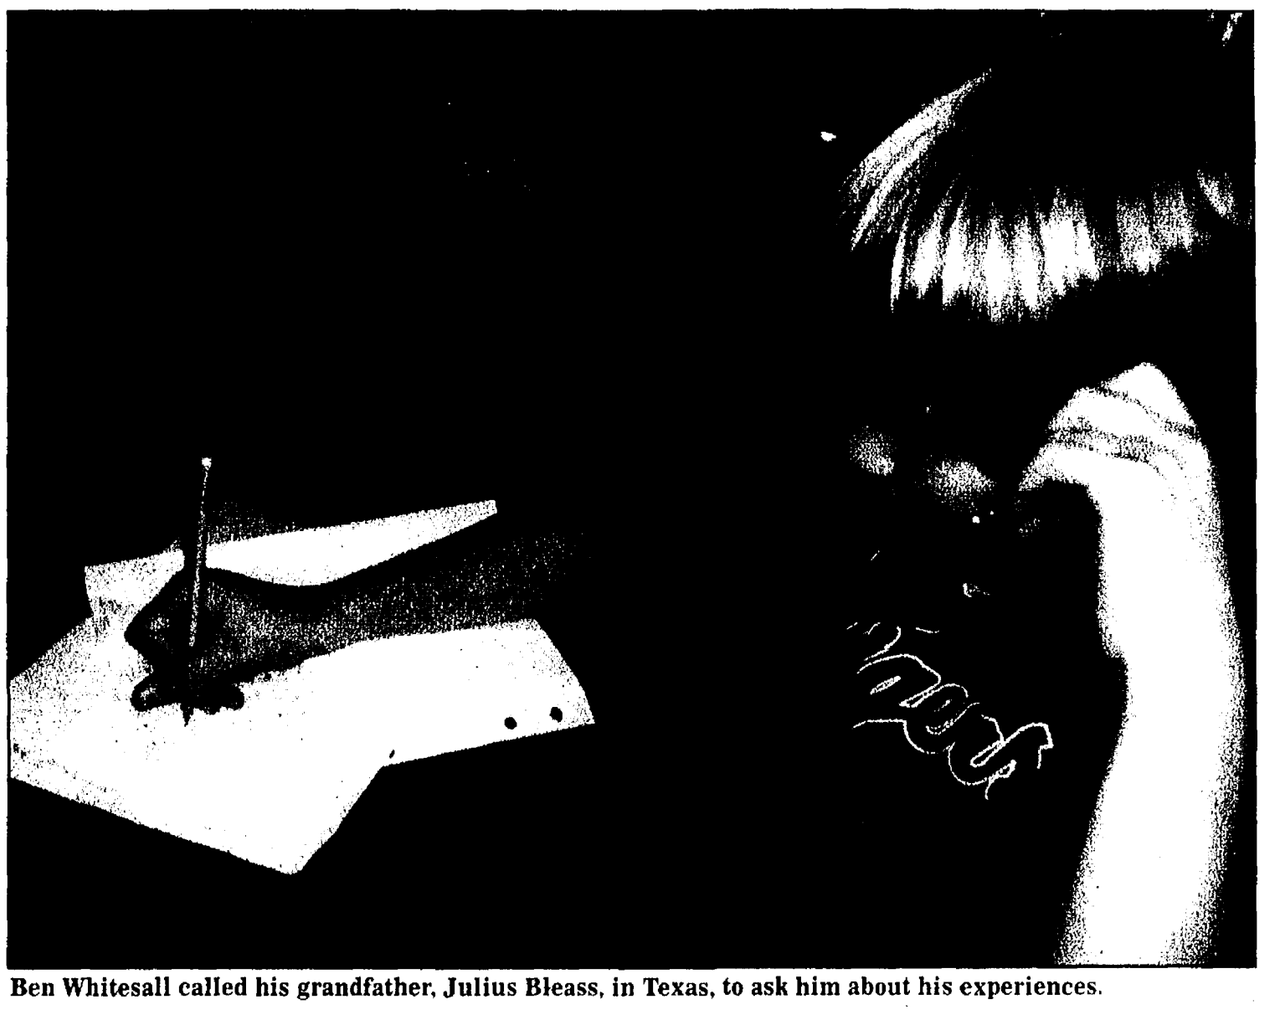
Students honor veterans

Sixth-graders write tributes about family and friends

Students in Barbara Locks' sixth-grade language arts class at South Meadows wrote about veterans in their family or friends who served or are serving. They were to find out when they served, where they served and what they did. They were to also include specific experiences, and how the veteran felt about what they did.

For extra credit, students wrote letters and cards of appreciation to patients at the Veterans Administration Hospital in Ann Arbor.



Ben Whitesall called his grandfather, Julius Bleass, in Texas, to ask him about his experiences.

Kayla Bradley wrote about her father, Jared Bradley of Chelsea, who is a veteran from Desert Shield and Desert Storm, in Iraq. He served in the 82nd Airborne, 1987 – 1993. One of his most memorable moments is when he jumped out of the aircraft and after he checked to make sure his chute was open, he felt something by his feet. He looked down and saw another guy's chute. "This made my dad's chute start to collapse while he was still IN THE AIR! In order to get his chute to fill back up with air, he had to run across the other person's chute and jump off it. . . I'm so proud of my dad and also proud to say my dad served in the war!"

Chris Zenakis wrote: My mom's dad, Robert Babb, was in the 82nd Airborne of the U.S. Army. He served in Normandy, France. One day when he was parachuting, he landed in a tree. Two Germans were walking by when they spotted him. He was playing dead in the tree. The Germans stabbed him in the shoulder twice. He survived, but he could-n't get the metal out of his shoulder. My dad's dad served in WWII also. He was a Seabee in the U.S. Navy, deployed to the South Pacific.

Sarah Reiber wrote: My cousin Kenny Reiber, from Pennsylvania, has been serving in the Armed Forces for a few years. He is now in Iraq, and is grateful for being alive. A few months ago he was driving a tank to safety, when all of a sudden a bomb came down, missed Kenny and hit his best buds sitting next to him. Kenny was the only one in the tank that survived. I am very grateful that he is still alive, and I really hope that it stays that way.

Kali Hill wrote about her grandpa, William Hill. He served in Company B 156 Signal Battalion of the Michigan Army National Guard, 1971 - 1992. In June of 1979 he was walking up a hill with his company in a sever thunderstorm, and lightning struck the ground, ran up the hill, and shocked 48 soldiers. All of them went to the hospital. Two lost their heartbeat, but lived after being revived. "When the lightning shocked my grandpa, he got thrown against a tree and his hands were clenched together and he couldn't pick up his sling on his weapon. He had to take his arm and try to pick his weapon up."

Katie Lee wrote about her Grandpa Orin Wahl, who served during WW2 as a P47 pilot. He flew as many as 141 missions over Europe, and won the Distinguished Cross. "The bad thing is he died of cancer before I was born. Hearing lots of stories about him, m mom thinks I would love him and he would love me. Now I remember Orin Wahl as a hero who helped save our country from disaster."

Dominick Goderis wrote about his Grandpa Don Maze, of Chelsea. He served in Vietnam, in the infantry. He and 40 other people were on a Search and Destroy mission. They went to a city, walking through the rain all night. They crossed a creek, but on the way back the creek had become a river and was 10 feet deep. A swimmer took a rope across the river and tied it to a tree. They all crossed the river holding this rope.

Jacob Hartman interviewed Tom Fraser, of Dexter.

Tom Fraser served in the war in England, France, and Germany, in 1942-1945 in the World War 2, being a Railroad engineer. He worked at a machine shop fixing the engines of the broken down trains. This was an important job because the trains were used to carry cargo for the soldiers that were bravely fighting in the war. I think it might have been hard he could have been working on the engines in the snow in the hot days maybe during a bad snow storm, but he kept up his strength and kept working to win the war.

"I bet he had fun when he was at the different places, meeting new people, discovering new places and doing new things."

Alyssa Zangara wrote: My grandpa James W. Hammel of Chelsea joined the Marines in December 1956 . . . After boot camp he went in the infantry training, then learned to operate a movie projector. He went to Japan, Okinawa and the Philippines. In Japan he was a part of the occupation forces near Mt. Fuji. In Okinawa he was on stand by. In the Philippines they had a mock invasion. "We used helicopters for a new technique, called 'vertical assault'. This would allow us to hit targets behind enemy lines." That's what my grandpa James W. Hammel did for us.

Nicole Atchley wrote: My Dad's friend's Dad was a Paratrooper in World war II. He would jump off of planes and land on the enemies side and as if he wasn't doing enough trying to land with out breaking his legs he also had a Machine gun with him. He would shoot the enemies with the machine gun.

My dad's dad, my Grandpa Atchley, was in the Navy. His job was to do the Radios, using Morse Code.

My Grandpa Jasinski told me about his friend/ co-worker, Gene Gefkke, who went to the World War II. He was fighting on Iwo Jima and he got shot by a machine gun. He got shot right above his waist and was almost cut right in half. If a doctor hadn't come to him right a way he would have been dead. But surprisingly he lived and when he got back from the war he lived a long time after that.

All Men and women who go to any war are heroes to me because not only are they fighting for their own freedom and peace, they're fighting for everyone in our country. I am proud of all my family and friends and just anyone who has ever served in any war.

Alex W. Keyes wrote: My great grandfather James W. Keyes is also know as Pop or the Grand Old Man of the Air Corps. He fought in World War 2 as a bomber gunner in a Mitchell bomber. His plane The Miss Baltimore was shot down and he survived on a raft for 2 days with 3 other men, and only getting tea when a plane landed in the water and wasn't able to fly again. He got a Silver Star, Legion Of Merit, 2 Air Medals, Purple Hart, and an Army commendation Medal. He was in the Army from 1920 to 1977 when they forced him to retire. 1920-1926 he was in the U.S. Cavalry. From 1942-1957 he was in the Air Corps fighting in Italy, China, Japan islands and Germany. He also fought in the Korean War. All in all he competed 67 missions, 64 in WWII and 3 in Korea. When he retired from the Air Corps he went and worked in an army base as a recruiter. He retired in 1987.

Jacob Dobberstein wrote: My grandpa Raymond Sleep, 1929- , did not fight. He was placed in West Germany, working as an intelligence officer typing reports on East Germans who wanted to come into West Germany. His office was in a huge mansion where an old German shoe company was.

My grandpa met a German maid that worked in the mansion. The maid's mom had died shortly after the war. She had gone to West Germany to visit an Aunt and wanted to stay there. The man that interrogated her asked if she wanted a job as a maid. She accepted the job. It was the same mansion my grandpa lived in and he asked her out to the movies one night and she said yes. They were dating for 6 months before my grandpa asked her to marry him. She said, "Yes." They finally got to leave and go to America. My grandma learned English pretty quickly. I think it was a really neat thing that they got married and met that way. I am glad they met because I would not be here today if they didn't. My grandpa loved the whole experience.

My other grandpa, Ralph Dobberstein, worked on Air planes that were in WWII. He taught the new mechanics how to work on them too. He died when he was only in his 60's from a heart attack. I wish I could have met him. I would have liked to learn more about him and what he did.

Brian Evans wrote: My brother Chris Evans Joined the Navy in April, 2007. When he was going to the recruitment office to talk to his recruiter, I came along. When I went in there I saw a lot of people in the military. His recruiter had the shiniest shoes I have ever seen before. Later that spring he went to boot camp in Chicago. Our whole family came to see him graduate boot camp. We had so much fun with him the weekend before he left. We were so scared that he was going to be stationed in Iraq. But then we got the news that he was going to be stationed on Offutt Air Force base in Nebraska, even though he is in the Navy.

He is a military police officer which means that he is basically a cop on the base. He has to sit by the huge planes all night long. Or since he is an E4, he doesn't have to sit by the planes all night. Instead he gets to drive an F-150 around. He also gets to carry an M-16 around. Sometimes rabbits set off the alarm, which is annoying, because they have to walk or drive over to check it out every single time. This happens almost every night!

Grant Allen wrote about Tamara Smith, a family friend, who enlisted in the National Guard in 2000. She was deployed to Tikrit, Iraq in 2005, as a Human Resource Specialist. She said that the most emotional experience she felt was the day she left the U.S., in January 2005. Her family was very supportive and knew she was doing something good.

She didn't have to leave the base much, which she was very thankful for Shen she did leave it was either in a Blackhawk or a High Mobility Multipurpose Wheeled Vehicle. She said there were fun parts, too, in Iraq. Soldiers would do whatever they could to make life fun. They played games like Twister and Connect Four.

Mitchell Henschel's Great Uncle Melvin Blough was in the Vietnam War for 10 months. He was drafted to war, and said he wished he would have gone to Canada and even wrote a letter to congress to try and get out. He lost both his legs and got a purple heart but everyone in his group died because of the war. Mitchell's Grandpa William Henschel was in Vietnam during monsoon season in 1967, an experience he'll never forget. He was trained to be infantry man and a PFC, and was only there for 3 months. He lost his leg by stepping on a field mine, and got a purple heart.

Mitchell's Great Grandpa Donald Fitzgerald was a technical administrator and 13th engineer during 1946 to 1948, before the Korean War started. The most interesting thing that happened is during winter when around the fire he tried to warm his back but instead the seat of his pants got burnt.

Samir Almhiemid wrote: My grandpa, William Burke, served in the Army in 1951 – 1953. He got moved to the U.S. headquarters in Germany. He joined with the commanding general as he flew over Holland to assess the damage after the North Sea dikes broke.

Grace Menter interviewed Harold Samuelson of Dexter. He told her about his trip from the Philippines to Japan, after the close of the war in the Pacific. Not all of the Japanese submarines had been accounted for, so when the sun set, they had to have a blackout on his ship. No flashlights, no matches, nothing. What a relief when the last submarine was accounted for: now they could have light!

Bryan Evans wrote: My grandpa, Ralph Evans, served in the U.S. Navy. He joined in 1951 and went to boot camp in Chicago. He was stationed at Guantamano Bay, Cuba, and did all kinds of things. He flew as a crewman in planes. He had a lot of free time. It was beautiful in Cuba and there were a lot of animals. He fished and hunted all the time. They would hunt deer and all kinds of birds. While my grandparents were stationed there my dad was born and since he was born on a U.S. base he is both a U.S. and Cuban citizen.

After two years in Cuba, he was stationed along the Tutexent River in Maryland at the Naval Air Test Center. He worked with atomic bombs, not set them off but to test them in the aircrafts and see how they fit and things like that. He was there for two years. I am happy that there wasn't a war going on, because if there was he might have been stationed where there were battles. I am happy that my grandpa served and did something for this country.

Anna Cleypool wrote about her grandfather, William Wellborn, who served in World War 11. He was in a special unit that worked on the Manhattan Project. "When they were testing the bomb in White Sands, NM, many important people were in the safety bunker to watch the test. M grandfather was there. He told my mom that everyone was told to wait a few seconds after the bomb was set off before they stood up. But they had miscalculated the blast and when everyone stood up and put on their special glasses, they were all blown over from the sound blast. Some people had broken arms and legs. . . I am very proud of Grandfather. His contribution helped to change the world. After the war he stayed at Los Alamos and used his knowledge to develop other uses for nuclear power. He served his country and the future of science."

Victoria Dennis wrote of her dad, who served in Bosnia and fought in the Somalian war. He helped fuel aircraft. I was born and healthy by the time he got home. "Now I look in boxes in my basement and think how scary it must have been. I see things like a plaque, a uniform, and old photos. The plaque has his title: SGT Randall B. Dennis. I always wonder how he earned his title, and if he would ever tell me his story."

'God's calling is not just for a few'

By Jeff Crowder

Last night I was talking with our teens about what jobs they wanted to do when they grow up.

I asked them rank a list of nine characteristics of jobs they might want or want to avoid. They included things like:

- Making lots of money
- Being your own boss
- Becoming famous
- Making a difference in the world
- Doing manual labor
- Finding a job I like
- Working with others

We talked about choosing your job. It was interesting to hear the various tasks people were thinking about. Some included:

- Farming
- Pediatric medicine
- Veterinarian medicine
- Coast Guard rescue

It was a great time to hear about their hopes and dreams. I heard them thinking through how they might want to spend their life. Pretty powerful stuff.

But today I read something that reminded me of this fact: sometimes we don't choose. Sometimes we are chosen.

Think about the word vocation. Webster's New Concise Dictionary gives two definitions for vocation:

2. occupation

1. calling

Think about that second definition for a moment. Is it possible that things you are doing in your life, things you enjoy doing, aren't simply a job (boring, monotonous, insignificant), but are actually a calling? Could it be the things that excite us most may be places where we are responding to something or Someone outside of ourselves?

If we are called in our vocation, then there is A Voice who vocalizes; One who calls us.

Think about Moses (Exodus 3:4). God called to him from within the bush.

Think about God speaking to Noah to get ready for the flood (Genesis 6). A little bit like Evan Almighty, with a few modifications.

Or think about my personal favorite, Samuel. God calls the boy, Samuel, three times before Eli (the priest and spiritual leader who was supposed to know this was The Voice), finally figures out what is going on. (For the whole story, read 1 Samuel 3.)

I am convinced God's calling is not just for a few. It's not just for the pastor or the priest. It's not just for huge tasks like leading a nation out of slavery or becoming President.

I am convinced the Voice calls us to many tasks, both great and small, short-term and long-term, some seemingly insignificant or others with obvious significance.

So my question is this: have you ever stopped to reflect upon what you do, why you do it, and why it makes a difference? Have you ever asked yourself if you chose your vocation or if Someone was calling you to choose that path?

If you're really willing to ask and wait quietly for an answer, there's no telling what the response might be.

Grace & peace

MEET THE TEACHER: Marcy Ott

Name: Marcy Ott

Education: Michigan State - Master's degree in Education-Special Education, History/Psychology/English
Native of: Auburn Hills
Teaching experience: Seven years Ingham County Juvenile Home; five years Holt (some regular ed, some special ed teacher consultant); 20 years Chelsea High School - first as Teacher Consultant, then English, World History, Psychology
Where you teach: Chelsea High School
Grade/subject: This year: World History (10, 11), Psychology (11, 12), English (11, 12)
Favorite subject in school: History, Humanities and Athletics (basketball and softball)
Least favorite subject: English
Something people would be surprised to know about you: My real name is Mercedes (no, I don't own one!) I struggled through high school and dropped out of college for a year until I knew that I wanted to be a teacher.
Most influential person in your life (and why):

My grandmother, who was born in 1898 at a time when women didn't even have voting rights. She was a single mother (married when children were in high school) and worked as a secretary in Detroit.

Even though she only completed a business college degree, she was a wealth of knowledge. Her love for family, food, reading, and work ethic are just a few traits that I share.

She lived through change (electricity, car, jet, man on the moon) but was able to be very knowledgeable until the day she passed away at the age of 93! An incredible life!

Quote to live by:

"Be kind, for everyone you meet is fighting a harder battle." - Plato

What do you like most about teaching?

I love working with students. This is my 32nd year of teaching and I am never bored. Each day can never be predicted. Teaching can really touch the lives of students and students can really touch the lives of teachers.

What do you like least about teaching?

When I just can't seem to reach a troubled student or a student who is having great difficulty.

What is the most challenging part of teaching?

Trying to find ways to help all students. Dealing with a lot of paperwork!

How can parents get more involved in their children's education?

Come to school - sit in on a class or two! Ask students about their day, even though they might at first say "nothing happened." Read with your kids - they are never too old!

How has your job changed over the years?

I have been lucky enough to work with all levels of students at the high school and to teach a variety of classes. Styles and curriculum may change, but students always need good teachers.

What do you like most about teaching in this district?

We are lucky to have a beautiful workplace. We have all the technological tools to really enhance our lessons.

The majority of our students and their parents are very positive. The community is like a family - through many tragedies they have pulled together and supported each other.

Walk us through a typical day for you:

I begin my day with a few students from classes who may need help, or might just stop by to say hi.

First hour begins with 10th- and 11th-grade student in World History. (I have this same class third and fifth hours). With our new trimester schedule, our hour is broken up with several aspects to the lesson plan.

From individual to group activity, the 72 minutes really does fly by! Fourth hour I have Psychology with 11th- and 12th-graders. This hour is unique in that we talk about our behaviors and emotions related to Psychology - we learn a lot about ourselves.

As I mentioned earlier, I can never predict my day - my day is filled with variety and emotion. From a passion for learning (for the most part - but believe me, there are days when some students have some problems being positive) to sometimes emotional trials.

Getting to know students through the day - knowing that some need a hug - some we will never know if they do or not - but for some students, the school day is the best part of their day. We just never know what we think we know about our students.

Family says thanks to a hero

By Linda Westcott
Guest writer

On Sept. 19, 20 and 21, AJ Hale Sr. along with his family, wife Priscilla, daughter and son-n-law Dianna and David, daughter and son-n-law Linda and Rick, son AJ Jr., son Alan and friend Kelly, and niece Anita took a motor home and went to Washington DC to see the World War II Memorial and other sites.

When we first got to the hotel a gentleman told AJ Jr. that he was there to bury his father, who was a WWII vet, in Arlington National Cemetery. His father's remains had been found after 68 years, this was confirmed after DNA testing. He asked AJ to thank dad for serving our country.

When we reached the memorial we could not find parking, we pulled up to the curb and an officer walked up to the motor home and asked if he could be of any help, we explained we could not find a place to park, he had two soldiers help Dad off the motor home. The respect they show WWII veterans is unbelievable.

Dad was surprised at the size of the WWII Memorial. We looked up everyone's pictures on the computer.

He was overwhelmed at the graves at Arlington. He wished he could have spent more time there and would like to go back.

We ran into an Army platoon and I asked their leader if a few of them would have their picture taken with Dad. He said of course, yelled off five names and told the five to do whatever it was I needed. They saluted Dad and thanked him for serving our country, took the picture, shook his hand again, thanked him and walked away. We did not even get a chance to ask them for their names. They said it was an honor for them to have their picture taken with Dad. It was very emotional.

We were all so honored that we were able to enjoy this experience as a family.

Dad served in the U.S. Army Air Forces along with his brother Luther, they both enlisted on June 9, 1941. His brother John was drafted in 1941 and served in the U.S. Army. Dad and Luther were both sent to Selfridge Air Force Base for basic training. After the war broke out Dad and Luther did not see each other until three and a half years later in France. John was injured in the war and sent to England.

Dad was in England until the invasion then sent to France and Germany. He was in Mississippi during the attack on Pearl Harbor. After the war Dad was sent back to England. He came home on the Queen Mary.

Dad's first tour he served four years, three months and 21 days, then re-enlisted and served another four years mostly in the Philippines. His rank was Air Force Staff Sergeant.

Appetizers

ROBERTA'S CHIPOTLE SWEET POTATOES

3 tbls. butter
2 tsp. pureed chipotle chiles
5 cups heavy cream
9 sweet potatoes, peeled and thinly sliced
Salt and freshly ground pepper

Preheat the oven to 350 degrees. Butter a shallow 8-quart casserole. Whisk together the chile puree and cream. Layer the potatoes (salt and pepper each layer as you go) and the chile cream, ending with the cream. Bake for 1-1/4 hours till the potatoes are tender and the top is light brown and bubbly.

I always have chipotle puree in my fridge. I take a couple cans of canned chipotle chiles in adobo (an onion/tomato sauce), which you can find at any grocery store, and throw them in the blender.

Alternatively, you can puree 2-3 whole chipotle chiles and some of the adobo in a blender with a little of the cream, then whisk it into the rest of the cream.

Chipotle chiles are dried, smoked jalapenos and as a result, their flavor is concentrated and very hot. Start with the smaller amount of chiles till you find out what level heat you can tolerate.

FISHY DELIGHT

1-1/2 - 2 pound cleaned, gutted whole rainbow trout
1-2 large lemons, halved
2 garlic cloves, finely crushed
3/4 to 1 tsp salt
1/2-3/4 tsp. black pepper
Cooking oil for lining the foil and for the fish
For the filling:
1/4 cup finely chopped fresh flat-leaved parsley
1/4 cup finely chopped fresh cilantro leaves
1 medium white onion, finely chopped
1-1/2 tsp. cinnamon powder
1/2 tsp. cumin powder
1/2 tsp. turmeric powder (optional)
Decoration:
1 tomato, thinly sliced
1 cucumber, thinly sliced
1 lemon, cut into four wedges

Line a cookie tray with a sheet of aluminum foil and oil it with cooking oil or olive oil and leave aside. Preheat the oven to 325 degrees.

Spread a newspaper on a working surface and place the cutting board on the top. Wash the prepared fish and place it on the cutting board. Using a sharp knife lightly score the fish in three places on both sides.

Rub the inside and the outside with garlic. Squeeze the lemon juice on top of the fish and even inside the cavity and finally sprinkle with a little of the salt and the pepper, cover with foil and leave aside for half an hour. Cut the lemon skin into small pieces and leave aside.

Meanwhile, mix in the herbs and the onions, ground cumin seeds, the remaining salt, pepper and the turmeric powder. Reserve a little of the cinnamon powder and mix in the remaining.

Take the fish from the cutting board and place it on the cookie tray lined with the aluminum foil. Fill the cavity with the herbal filling and then pat some of the filling on both sides of the fish.

Put some of the lemon skin slices in the cavity and place some in the gills. Sprinkle with the remaining pepper and the cinnamon and 3 tbsp. of cooking oil.

Wrap the fish in the foil, taking care to not tear it as this will let the juice leak out resulting in drier fish. Bake in a preheated oven for 30 to 45 minutes.

Remove the fish from the foil and allow it to cool slightly and then transfer it to an oblong dish and just before serving decorate the fish by placing the tomato slices, alternating them with cucumber slices. Place the lemon wedges on the nar-

ZUCCHINI FRITTATA

2 pounds of zucchini – approx 3-4 cups grated
1 tsp salt
3 eggs – lightly beaten
1 medium onion minced
2 tsp chopped fresh basil
2 tsp chopped fresh oregano
1 minced habanero pepper
8 ounces grated Monterey Jack cheese

Shred zucchini. Mix with salt and let stand in colander over a large bowl for 30 minutes. Squeeze out any remaining moisture. Preheat oven to 325 degrees. Combine eggs, onion, herbs and grated cheese. Add shredded zucchini. Mix well. Pour mixture into a greased pie plate (I used 10 inches). Bake for 30 minutes at 350 degrees until golden and well set. I set oven for broil on low for three to five minutes to get golden top. May be served hot or cold.

Try to use smaller zucchinis (under 6 inches). If you use larger ones, remove the seeds.

I scrubbed my zucchinis and sliced off both ends. You may use dried herbs instead of fresh – use less. You can use frozen shredded zucchini – make sure it thaws and drains well.

CHEESY SURPRISE

Dip:
3/4 cup cream cheese
1/2 cup yogurt
1 tbsp. finely chopped cilantro leaves
1 tbsp. finely chopped flat-leaved parsley leaves
1 tbsp. finely chopped green parts of spring onions
1 tbsp. finely chopped white parts of spring onions
2-4 tbsp. salsa with tomato chunks
1/4 – 1/2 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. black pepper
1/4 tsp. paprika (optional)

Serve with:
4 celery sticks, cut into finger-sized length
2 large carrots, peeled, halved and cut into finger-sized length
1 apple, peeled and cut into medium-wedges (optional)
1/4 slice of lemon for the apple
Other vegetables and fruit of your choice
1 bag of tortilla chips (optional)

Prepare the herbs and the vegetables a day in advance, put them in separate airtight containers or plastic bags and refrigerate. It's really important that the herbs and the onions are finely chopped so that all the flavors are nicely blended.

Score onion both the white and the green part into six sections and then thinly slice them. The apple should be prepared half an hour before serving and rub it with the lemon juice to prevent the color change.

Using a fork or a hand whisk, whip the cream cheese until light and fluffy. Then beat the yogurt and gradually mix in the cream, mixing it all the time until a smooth paste is formed. Add in the herbs, salt and pepper.

More yogurt can be added if the cream mixture is too thick. Stir in the herbs, the salt and pepper and taste and adjust seasonings. Lightly stir in the salsa and transfer it into a bowl and refrigerate for half an hour. Salsa doesn't need to be thoroughly mixed.

Just before serving:

Take out the bowl from the fridge and sprinkle the top with paprika and place the bowl in the middle of a round dish and put the vegetables, apple wedges and chips around the bowl and serve.

RAINBOW BITES

1 cookie tray lined with aluminum foil and oiled
Half a loaf of French bread cut into thin round slices
2 garlic cloves, peeled
4 ounces unsalted butter
8 ounces Brie cheese, torn into small pieces
1/2 green capsicum (bell pepper), sliced into thin strips
1/2 red capsicum, sliced into thin strips
1/2 yellow capsicum, sliced into thin strips
4-6 tbsp. extra virgin olive oil

Line a cookie tray with aluminum foil, oil and leave aside. Put the peeled garlic cloves on a cutting board and place the broad side of a knife over the cloves and press it down to crush them and leave aside.

Rub each bread slice with the butter and then with the crushed garlic and place it on the tray with the garlic side up. Sprinkle each slice with Brie cheese pieces.

Mix the capsicum strips and carefully place on top of each slice so that each slice gets all the colors. Take the olive oil and dribble it over the top. Alternatively take the olive oil bottle and partially cover the top with your thumb and sprinkle the oil over the bread in one sweeping motion.

Place the rack in the center of the oven and put the tray on the top. Grill for about six to eight minutes until the brie melts down. Transfer the bread onto a white serving dish and serve immediately.

Lenea Howe of Saline proudly displays her fried apple pies, which she says are "better than your average" fruit pies.

"BETTER THAN GRANDMA'S" FRIED APPLE PIES

Crust:

2 1/2 cups flour
1 cup Crisco (or 1/2 cup Crisco and 1/2 cup lard)
1 tsp salt
Very cold water

Cut shortening and flour with two knives or a pastry cutter until the shortening pieces are the size of peas. Don't over mix or dough will be tough. Add salt. Sprinkle water on dough mixture and fluff with a fork and more water slowly until it forms a soft ball. If it is too sticky add a little flour to the surface.

Filling:

4 large apples (Jonathans, Granny Smith, etc.)
1/2 cup raisins (optional)
1/4 cup white sugar
1/2 cup brown sugar
2 tsp. cinnamon
1 tsp. nutmeg
1/2 tsp. ginger
1/2 cup water
1 heaping tsp. cornstarch
1/2 cup water

Chop apples and add other ingredients in medium saucepan and cook until apples are soft. In a small drinking glass place cornstarch and the second 1/2 cup of water and stir until dissolved.

Add to boiling apples and remove from heat. Continue stirring until filling thickens. If too thick, add a bit more water.

Roll out piecrust to about 1/8 inch thick. Using a cutting template like a Cool Whip lid or coffee can edge, cut a circle about 6 inches in diameter. Place 1/4 cup filling in the center of the dough. Dampen the edge of 1/2 of the circle with water and bring the other 1/2 of the dough over forming a 1/2 circle pie. Use a fork to seal the edge of the pie.

In a large skillet bring Crisco oil to 350 degrees and try to maintain that temperature during the frying process. You only need about 1 inch of oil in the pan. Fry two pies at a time for 3 minutes on each side. Remove from the oil onto paper towels and sprinkle with cinnamon sugar.

Recipe makes 12 pies.

BREAKFAST TREAT

1 can of Pillsbury biscuits
5 eggs whipped
1/2 cup of cheese
1/2 cup ham or sausage
1/3 cup tomatoes or green peppers (if you like veggies add mushrooms or onions)

Spray both a 12 muffin tin and a six muffin tin with cooking spray.

Open up the can of biscuits and cut each one in half. Leave them round and cut them in half to shape them to fit nicely into the sprayed muffin tin. One half per muffin tin hole — do not use baking cups.

Once all the muffin tins have been filled with dough there will be two left empty (just put a little water in those two).

Set the muffin/tins aside. Mix up the eggs with the cheese and add any finely chopped tomatoes, green peppers, onions and mushrooms.

If you do not like vegetables leave it plain. Add sausage or ham. Then use a medium size cookie scoop and scoop the muffin tin about 1/3 full. Do not let it overflow or you will have a mess on your hands.

Bake at 350 degrees until brown (15-25 minutes oven temperatures vary).

For a variation of this to serve as an appetizer or a luncheon, put a scoop of cooked chicken mixed with barbecue sauce inside the dough. Sprinkle with cheese and bake at the same temperature. The dough will be done when it is brown.

A dessert option would be to take the can of rolls and one can of cherry pie filling. Fill each dough with a scoop of cherry pie filling and a dash of cinnamon sugar mixed together. Instead of making 18 desserts take the four that would have been in the smaller pan and use that dough to make little tops and then you have little pies.

RECIPE

Filling:
4-5 Golden delicious apples
1 - 1-3/4 cups sugar
1 tbsp. cinnamon powder
3 tbsp. cornstarch
Decoration:
10-12 scoops of ice cream of your choice
10 canned red cherries

In a big bowl mix together the flour, salt and butter and with the tips of your finger mix the flour with the butter until it is broken into tiny pieces and the mixture resembles thick crumbs. Alternatively a pastry cutter could be used to prepare the mixture.

Gradually add the chilled water, a couple of spoons at a time, into the flour mixture and using the tips of your fingers gently mix it in until the dough adheres together; stop adding water.

Transfer the dough on the working surface and by using both hands in a cupping motion, bring the dough together until a ball is formed.

Water can be sprinkled to moisten the dry flour and butter mixture, if any. Return the dough to the bowl and cover it with a sticky plastic film, or place the dough in a zip lock plastic bag and chill in a refrigerator for half an hour.

Peel the apples and cut into thin slices and leave aside. In a big bowl combine together the sugar, cinnamon and cornstarch and mesh it with hands to remove all the lumps, if any.

Preheat oven at 400 degrees and have a 9-inch non-stick pie pan with extended edges on the working surface. Alternatively oil the base and the sides of the pan and spread some flour to coat the pan and set aside.

After half an hour, lightly dust the working surface with extra flour and place the chilled dough on the top. Divide it into two portions: 1/3 and 2/3. Cover the 1/3 and leave aside and form the bigger portion of the dough into an even sphere.

Using a rolling pin, gently stroke the dough downwards and outwards, while continuously moving dough as it flattens out. Continue rolling the same fashion until the dough is big enough to cover the base, the sides and the top of the pan.

Use the rolling pin to measure the widest part of the pie pan and use it to measure the size of the rolled-out dough, leaving an inch or two extra.

Slightly dust the rolling pin and place it on one side of the rolled out dough and roll the dough onto the pin and place the pin over the middle of the pan and gently unroll the dough and remove the rolling pin.

Adjust the dough with your hands so that it is evenly distributed on the base, the sides and the extended edges of the pan, if any, and set aside.

Roll out the remaining dough the size big enough to cover the top of the pan and leave aside. Mix the thin apple slices and the sugar mixture until all the slices are covered. Put the mixture into the prepared pie pan that has been lined with the dough.

Slightly moisten the dough over the edges of the pan. Cover with the second rolled out dough and gently press it to the bottom dough so that they bind together.

Using the blunt side of a knife, trim off the hanging pastry. Then pinch the dough at the outside, lift slight and twist inwards and gently press, repeat until the entire edge is formed into tiny twists.

Using a sharp knife cut out four leaves from the top of the pie and place them on a cookie tray as some of the filling will expand and the syrup may ooze out.

Place it in the oven on the middle rack and reduce the heat to 375 degrees, and bake for 45 minutes. Open the oven door and check for doneness; the pastry should look golden brown. If it's not done, bake for a little longer, checking it every five minutes.

Remove from the oven and allow it to cool for 10 minutes. Gently move around the pie in the pan and wait for it to cool enough to handle.

Pick the pan and gently tip over onto a flat round serving dish large enough to accommodate the pie. Cool completely. Scoop out the ice cream of your choice and place it around the pie and one on the top in the middle of the pie. Top each scoop of ice cream with a cherry and serve immediately.

Tip: This pie freezes well. Remove it from the freezer the night before and place it in the fridge. An hour before serving, heat it in a preheated oven at 300 degrees for half an hour.

Better Hearing Through Digital Technology

- Types of hearing aids. Not all hearing aids perform the same with every type of hearing loss.
- Hearing in noise. No hearing aid has been designed that will filter out all background noise. The most effective solution for improving speech intelligibility in noisy situations is hearing aids with digital signal processing and directional microphones.
- Fit and comfort. There should not be any soreness, or rashes associated with your wearing hearing aids. If there is go back to your hearing healthcare provider.
- Sounds. Hearing aids should allow you to: (1) hear soft sounds (e.g. child's voice, soft speech) that you could not hear without amplification; this is part of the enjoyment of hearing aids; (2) prevent loud sounds from becoming uncomfortably loud for you. However, very loud sounds that are uncomfortable to normal hearing people may also be uncomfortable for you.
- Whistling and feedback. If it squeals after the initial insertion, then most likely you have an inadequate fit, and should tell your hearing healthcare provider.
- Your friend's hearing aid. Do not expect your friend's hearing aid brand or style to work for you.
- Your family doctor. Do not expect your family doctor to be knowledgeable about hearing loss, brands of hearing aids and whether or not you need them. Data shows that only 13% of physicians screen for hearing loss.
- Adjustment period. Give your hearing aids a chance, being sure to follow the instructions of the hearing healthcare provider.
- Expect benefit. By benefit, I mean that your ability to understand speech has improved in most listening situations.
- Restore hearing. No matter how technically advanced, hearing aids cannot restore your natural normal hearing.

To get health benefits can be achieved by using Mazola oils instead of cooking oils higher in saturated fat, such as butter or shortening. To achieve such benefits, Mazola oils should replace a similar amount of higher saturated fat oil and not increase the total number of calories you eat in a day. One serving of a Mazola oil contains 14 grams of fat, of which no more than 2 grams are saturated fat.
