Motorcyclist killed in accident

Police say speed may have been a factor in wreck

By Art Aisner
Special Writer

Troopers with the Michigan State Police are investigating a fatal crash that occurred Sunday afternoon just outside of Washtenaw County.

Members of the Chelsea Area Fire Department responded to multiple calls of a crash involving a motorcyclist along Clear Lake Road in Waterloo Township at about noon Sunday. Firefighter Robert Stelzer said upon arriving at the scene firefighters found an unresponsive man in his 40's off of the roadway near Seymour Road. They also found a BMW cruiser motorcycle nearby and determined it was the only vehicle involved in the crash.

The University of Michigan Survival Flight helicopter transported the man to the hospital, where he was declared deceased. The victim's name was not released pending notification of family members. Further details about the crash were not available as of press time.

Stelzer said it appeared the motorcycle was traveling northbound on Clear Lake Road and lost control at the end of an "S" curve in the roadway. Witnesses said the motorcycle fishtailed and then hit a sign on the side of the road, he added. The man was thrown several feet from his vehicle.

It was unclear how fast the driver was going and weather conditions were clear and sunny, officials said.

"He had a helmet, a heavy jacket and other riding gear on and appeared prepared," Stelzer said.

The northbound lane of the road was closed for several hours. The Jackson County Sheriff's Department assisted at the scene.

It is the second fatal crash involving a motorcycle that Washtenaw County authorities responded to within three days.

On Oct. 14, a 50-year-old Canton Township man was killed when his 20004 BMW motorcycle lost control on North Territorial Road shortly after 4:30 p.m.

Ball joins staff at Silver Maples

Jackson resident eager to create new menu ideas

By Shawn Personke
Guest Writer

The Courtyard Café, Silver Maples of Chelsea's public restaurant, has been a work in progress since it opened in fall 2007.

There have been ups and down in business, changes in personnel, fluctuating hours, and more. But at its core, the café was a really good idea. All it needed was someone with passion, creativity, and energy to take control.

The café is doing well. In mid-September, Silver Maples welcomed Mary Lou Ball to the food services staff and it's been one wonderful lunch service after another ever since.

"I am having a blast here at Silver Maples," she said. "Everyone has been so kind and helpful and made me feel welcome from the first day."

Ball has been wowing residents and staff with her home-made soup, fresh green and pasta salads, and interesting sandwiches and wraps.

But Ball's real passion is for breakfast.

"I have a soft spot for breakfast. It's my husband's favorite meal, too," she said. "I'd love to offer a breakfast wrap. You can just roll up any of your favorite breakfast items in a wrap and there you go."

She's also created a potato, sausage, and egg skillet meal that sells well for breakfast and lunch.

Born and raised in Jackson, Ball went to St. John Elementary School, Lumen Christi High School, and Jackson Community College. She has been married to her husband Mark for 26 years and has two sons.

Ball's Jackson connection came in handy when she heard that café customers wanted to see an upgrade in the bread choice for toast and sandwiches. Her first stop was the European Bakery, a Jackson tradition. The bakery has been recognized statewide for its traditional approach to baking and century old ovens. It offers a variety of breads.

One of the first things she took on when arriving at the Courtyard Café was to change up the daily specials. Ball's added some new items to the

Martinson to bring ale house to Chelsea

By Sarah Rigg
Special Writer

Amateur brewmaster Chris Martinson thinks that Chelsea needs its own craft beer pub and is inviting the public — but especially potential investors — to come to an informational meeting at 10 a.m. Saturday.

Martinson, who has an educational background in biochemistry, has been a home brewer for many years.

"You don't need to have a science background to brew beer, but it can be helpful for problem-solving," he said.

At Saturday's meeting, he will give a short presentation highlighting his business plan for what he's calling the "Chelsea Alehouse Project" and suggesting reasons for investing in the brewery, which is planned for a location in downtown Chelsea.

Martinson lives in Grass Lake and works in Ann Arbor but said he has strong connections to Chelsea.

"My wife is the director of the Chelsea Center for the Arts," he said, "and we're both pretty much a part of the Chelsea community. She runs a nonprofit there, and we spend a lot of time there and have our daughter in daycare there. We're really involved in Chelsea."

He said that about a half dozen years ago when he began spending more time in Chelsea, he noticed the lack of a brewery. He said he felt there was a "niche" in Chelsea that was asking to be filled by a laid-back locally owned pub.

"I'd like the feel to be similar to the Corner Brewery in Ypsilanti or Original Gravity in Milan," he said. "I'd like it to be a big open space, with a small kitchen with high-end deli sandwiches and appetizers, but with the focus on beer and the brewing community."

Martinson said he wants to make sure the alehouse is family-oriented and fits in with the other already established businesses in town. He'd also like to have outdoor seating, similar to the beer garden at Ypsilanti's Corner Brewery.

Additionally, he's hoping to attract amateur home brewers to meet and learn from each other at the alehouse and to sell basic home brewing supplies. If all goes as planned, home brewers may be able to submit their original recipes and see small batches of their handcrafted beers go on tap at the alehouse.

Martinson said he has been in the research and planning phase of the brewery for the last two years and anticipates the final steps of capital formation will be completed in the next three to five months.

He said he began exploring financing options a year ago, and figured out right away that he'd have to look into raising private capital to get the project off the ground.

He said he has a solid business plan and a tentative space in downtown Chelsea, with two back-up locations should his first choice not work out. Martinson also feels he's done the necessary market research to make sure the business will appeal to Chelsea's residents.

"The Facebook page 'Craft Beer for Chelsea' has more than 300 fans, and I have 180 people on my mailing list, most of them from Chelsea," he said. "I'm known as the beer guy in town, and people are excited and have been talking to me about it, asking when the brewery is going to open. I've had a lot of support at all levels, from city government to community leaders. People are really excited about it."

Martinson said now is a good time to start a craft brew business because the brewing industry in Michigan has been growing steadily over the years, despite the economic downturn. He said overall beer sales have been down a little bit in Michigan, but the market share for craft beers (also sometimes called "microbrews") has gone up 10 percent.

At the end of Saturday's meeting, Martinson said he will send each attendee home with a bottle of his homemade pale ale so they have an idea of the kind of beer he intends to brew at the alehouse.

"My focus is on running a successful, community-focused business," Martinson said. "It's important to me to build something fun. The brewery is going to be a fun place to go have a beer but also an asset to the community and my family as well."

For more information about the alehouse project, including the location of Saturday's meeting, e-mail Martinson at info@chelsealehouse.com.

Steele says it's time for Dingell to go

By Joe Slezak
Heritage Newspapers

Robert Steele said he likes U.S. Rep. John Dingell, D-15th District, personally. But, he isn't fond of Dingell's politics — and he wants the congressman's job.

Steele, a cardiologist who lives in Superior Township, is the Republican who is running against Dingell in the Nov. 2 election for a two-year term in the U.S. House of Representatives.

Steele, 52, said that Dingell, who has served since 1955, calls his constituents "my people." "My people?" Steele said. "He's got it reversed. They're not his people. He's their representative."

Steele said in a recent visit with the editorial boards at Heritage Newspapers that residents of the two parts of the district that Steele is not from — suburban Wayne County and Monroe County — have given him plenty of positive feedback.

He said many people are opposed to a federal health care plan, which has been tagged "Obamacare" — the issue Dingell has been fighting for since taking over for his late father in 1955, and the issue that was so important to the elder John Dingell, who went to Congress in 1933, when his son was 6.

All told, the two Dingells have represented the area for a combined 77 years. Steele said many people have told him it's time for a change.

In Wayne County, the 15th District covers parts of Dearborn, which is Dingell's hometown, and Dearborn Heights, and all of Brownstown Township, Flat Rock, Huron Township, Rockwood, Romulus, Taylor, Woodhaven, Inkster and Sumpter Township. The district also covers eastern Washtenaw County and all of Monroe County.

Steele

Steele said that even though he's from the Ann Arbor area, he can relate to the blue-collar residents of the district because he grew up in Greenville, a small town near Grand Rapids.

He also said many people have told him that Dingell has "abandoned" his constituents.

"People like him," Steele said. "I like him. It's just that it's a different time. Times have changed, and there's going to be a transition. It might as well be now, when it's going to make a difference."

Steele said he didn't run because of the health care issue, which he can relate to professionally. He said he wants to make a difference for his four children and 28 nieces and nephews. He said he was inspired to pursue public service because his grandfather served in World Wars I and II, and his father served in World War II.

He said he'd be able to take his real-world business experience to Washington — he is one of the founders of Michigan Heart P.C., which is based in Superior Township and has 36 physicians and 300 employees at nine offices in five counties.

"A lot of people will say, 'You don't have experience,'" Steele said. "Of course, I have experience. It's a different experience."

"I think the pertinent question is which experience is the right experience, and I would say he has no experience at what's needed and I have all the experience at what's needed."

Steele said his three biggest platforms are reining in spending and improving accountability and transparency.

"The current federal budget is like a family making $60,000 a year and spending $100,000, and planning it while owing $400,000," Steele said.

With accountability, he said, some members of Congress didn't read all 2,800 pages of the health care bill before voting on it.

"We need them to represent," Steele said. "It's in their job title."

He also said that with transparency, bills should just be on one topic and there should be at least a week before they are voted on so that the public clearly sees what the bill is about.

"There won't be unintended consequences like there are now," Steele said.

He also said that transparency was an issue with the health care bill, which he said, was crafted by bureaucrats without input from patients or physicians.

Steele said that with being a physician, he recognizes that there are challenges facing health care, but the bill doesn't properly address pre-existing conditions, tort reform and high deductibles; too much paperwork will be created; and he doesn't like that the program will be controlled by bureaucrats.

"The measure is too wide-ranging," he said. He added that the government doesn't want insurance companies to raise their rates, but they must to provide more required services.

"No one knows what's in these bills," Steele said. "When someone has a hangnail, you don't chop off their arm. You take care of the hangnail."

"You can't build a house on a bad foundation. We have to start over. There's virtually no problem now that wasn't made worse, and I say that from absolute practical experience."

Steele said, though, that the health care issue isn't his main motivation.

He said he simply wants to make a difference.

"I ran strictly because I couldn't get to be 80 and say I didn't do it," he said.

Dingell wants to keep making a difference

By Sean Delaney
Heritage Newspapers

U.S. Rep. John Dingell, D-15th District, is the longest-serving member of Congress, and he wants to keep going.

Dingell, 84, has been on Capitol Hill for 55 years. He took over for his late father, John Sr., who served from 1933 to '55.

"When I was a kid, my dad used to hate the Senate and I couldn't understand why because I thought they were such important people," he said. "But since I've been a very high-ranking member of the House (of Representatives), I've had very little reason to like the Senate."

Dingell said his office has received little or no cooperation from the Republicans in the Senate "on almost everything we've worked on," such as unemployment benefits, the stimulus package and the health care bill.

"But we've had a pretty good year in spite of it," he said.

Dingell, a Dearborn resident, is hoping to ride that momentum into the Nov. 2 election. He's being challenged by Republican Robert Steele, a cardiologist from Superior Township.

The health care bill, Dingell said, will cover every American and give tax breaks to small businesses.

"People, I think, generally like the idea that we passed the bill," he said. "Some people will tell you this is a government takeover of health care, and it's not. All we're doing is setting up exchanges and requiring the insurance companies to issue policies that meet certain federal standards. It's not going to cost the taxpayers money, and it's going to bring in $130 billion in the first 10 years. In the second 10 years, it's going to bring in $1.3 trillion."

Dingell then called on members from both sides of the aisle — Republican and Democrat — to put aside their differences and work together.

"The legislative process is a process of compromise," he said. "That's one of the problems we have in Congress. We have a lot of people that won't compromise. Politics has changed — it's become about always try to make the other guy look bad. I don't think that's what the Founding Fathers intended."

When asked about President Barack Obama, whose approval rating has fallen significantly in recent months, Dingell said a president shouldn't rely on polls to tell him how he's doing.

"Presidential ratings go up and down," he said. "You'll find most politicians have been rated very low at some time or another — Bush, Clinton, etc. — yet they all ran (for) re-election and won."

However, he said that if he were in Obama's shoes, he would have done things a little differently.

"I probably would have gotten into some of these fights at a much earlier time," Dingell said. "Had (Obama) done that, I think he'd be doing a little better politically. But I also think people haven't really evaluated yet what his first two years in office means to them. The big concern people have is the economy."

When asked about the current economic crisis, Dingell highlighted his role in "saving" the automotive industry and helping to pass the federal stimulus package. He also was critical of the role banks played in the disaster.

"The big banks set it up so they borrowed money from the government at a low price and then lent money out at a much higher price," he said. "In some cases, they were loaning it out at 30 percent or higher."

Dingell said the war in Iraq has cost the United States more than $750 billion "and by the time we're done, it's going to be over $1 trillion," he said.

"But the cost of taking care of our veterans is going to be about $3 trillion and no one's given any thought to it," he said.

Dingell said he supported the war in Afghanistan, but criticized the war in Iraq.

"I didn't support going in," he said. "I thought it was a bad idea to send our troops over there. I want to bring them all home safe. I don't think they have what they need over there."

When asked what it would take to end the war, Dingell said the United States would need to establish a form of stable government in the region, one that can keep "troublemakers" from gaining a foothold.

"I think that's possible," he said. "But it's not going to be easy."

Dingell will face a battle of his own against Steele.

"I hardly know him, so I'm not able to give a comment," Dingell said of Steele. "I run my own campaign, and we'll do what we should — we'll tell our story and we'll let him tell his story unless he starts telling things deliberately that are untrue."

"But for now, I don't have any feelings about him that I want to announce publicly. I'm sure when it's all said and done, he'll be a good former candidate and I'll continue to have a distinguished record of service in Congress."

Dingell acknowledged that while he's had problems with members of Congress on both sides of the aisle, he's tried to do what's best for those he serves.

"It's always been my judgment that the best public service, the best public interest legislation and the best politics lay right in the middle, and that's where I've been," he said. "When I feel I'm no longer able to serve my people well, I'll be the first one to head for the door."

Three running for 17th Senate District seat

By Dave Merchant
Heritage Newspapers

There are three people running in the Nov. 2 election for the 17th state Senate in Michigan. They are incumbent and Republican Randy Richardville, Democrat John Spencer and libertarian candidate Ronald Muzynski.

The 17th State Senate District includes all of Monroe County, the southern part of Washtenaw County, and part of Jackson County. The Washtenaw County portion includes Bridgewater Township, Lodi Township, Manchester Township, part of Milan, Pittsfield Township, Saline, Saline Township and York Township.

Randy Richardville (R)

Richardville, who resides in Monroe, believes that his experience in politics will be what is necessary for the next term.

"Out of 148 seats, 70 of those will have no experience at all in government," Richardville said. "My experience will help as one of the senior members in the Senate."

He said the economy is the biggest issue in the election. That must be addressed for the state to move forward.

"Everything hinges on the economy," he said. "I have an undergraduate degree in economics and I have worked in the business environment."

Richardville sees the economy in Michigan turning around, but said there have to be changes to certain laws before that will happen.

"The people in Michigan would like to expand," he said. "But we are over regulated and over taxed. The Michigan Business Tax needs to be eliminated."

Richardville stressed that Michigan residents want to live within their means, and are tired of the state over spending and getting taxpayers in a deeper hole with debt.

"We have to live within our means," he said. "We have to bring people back to the state. Sixty percent of the people who leave the state come back within five years."

Richardville proposes creating more jobs and attracting people from outside the state to come to Michigan. He wants people to stay in the state, and businesses to grow and expand.

"I want to put the unemployed back to work," he added. "The property values here have already gotten low. We have an educated work force who is ready to work."

Richardville served in the Michigan House of Representative from 1999 to 2004 and was elected into the state Senate in 2006, and is finishing out that term this year.

Richardville is very interested in public and community service, and serves on the board of directors for the Children's Trust Fund, the board of directors for the Monroe Senior Center and is a member of the Education Foundation for Monroe Public Schools, Bedford Business Association, and member of the Saline, Manchester, Milan, Jackson and Monroe chambers of commerce.

He also is a member of the Redeemer Fellowship Church in Monroe. Besides job creation, he considers government reform as the other major issue in the election.

"We need to invest in industries that will create jobs and invigorate Michigan's struggling economy is crucial to attract and retain jobs in our state," he said.

"The building on Michigan's strengths as a leader in the automotive industry and expanding to become the center for research and development into new alternative fuel technologies would be a good starting point."

On reforming the government he has some ideas.

"The government reform needs to take place by cutting the waste that currently exists within our state government," he said. "A government must learn to live within its means. Also, regulations need to be examined in our state. Any regulation that creates an uneven playing field for one business over another is not a regulation that I am in favor of."

Richardville is married to Sarah and he has two children, Amanda, 29, and Adam, 27.

John Spencer (D)

This is his first time Spencer, who lives in Leoni Township in Jackson County, is running for an elected office. He owns Great Lakes Metal Finishing Inc.

"Jobs are my top priority," he said. "Laws need to be fair for business. Products should not enter our state that allow other countries to break our fair labor laws."

Spencer said the government needs to generate new taxes in Michigan, but needs to do so by bringing jobs back and by getting taxes such as income and sales taxes by bringing back or creating new jobs in the state.

"We are in a bad rut," he said. "I don't see that changing overnight, but you have to look at the facts that so many jobs are connected with each other."

For example, he states the companies that work with the automotive manufacturing side are being hurt because so many jobs are being downsized or eliminated.

"It's not just the auto worker whose job is being eliminated," he said. "It is also the engineer, the sales manager and so many other jobs that are connected to that industry."

Spencer said he has talked to people from Ann Arbor, Livonia and Pinckney about the issue and seen the first- and second-tier businesses that have been hurt by the struggling economy. Many, he said, have gone out of business or on the verge of bankruptcy.

"I have been in manufacturing for 30 years," he said. "I see the diversity of the offering that the state has. Many companies that were family owned do not have the family members who are interested in running them, so they either close or sell."

Spencer said the business owners' children aren't always interested in running the businesses. "Many think it is not worth saving," he said. "I disagree. I believe that we are in the middle of the second industrial revolution."

Spencer said jobs should be coming to Michigan because the state already has the nucleus and the factories to produce these items.

"If you take them out of here, you have to create everything needed to make these jobs work," he said. "We already have that in Michigan; we just need to utilize it."

Spencer said laws need to be made so that companies aren't allowed to make products cheaper elsewhere and sell them in the United States.

"Years ago, if that was done in the '60s and '70s it was called

Pastor begins new faith journey

Edema leaves mark on Chelsea congregation

By Dave Merchant
Heritage Newspapers

After nearly seven years at the pulpit, Pastor Barb Edema is leaving the First Congregational Church of Chelsea. Her last sermon, in which she thanked the community, was held on Oct. 3.

Edema is moving to Johnson City, Tenn. with her husband, Dr. Doug Edema, who was recently hired for a new position.

Jim Menlove, one of the members of the church who has known Edema for about six years, admits it will be hard to see her leave.

"I can not say enough good things about her," Menlove said. "It is hard to explain it but she was a ray of sunshine."

Menlove said Edema was well respected in the church and in the Chelsea community. "I would meet with her once a week and we would discuss theology and church business," he said. "I can't say enough good things about her and her four children (who all went to Chelsea schools)."

Edema said she came to the church from Grand Rapids as a single mother of four children.

"I served in Grand Rapids and I was looking for another church to serve," she said. "I interviewed at the Chelsea Retirement Community and they told me it was for a part-time position."

She said she told them she wanted a full-time position and the CRC referred her to the First Congregational Church.

"It was truly the friendliest church I have ever been in," she said. "The service of worship was beautiful."

Since her time at the church she has written three plays, which were performed by members of the church to help raise money for communities in need.

"It has been such an exciting time," she said. "Getting people to participate has been wonderful."

The congregation has also gone on trips to Kentucky and New Orleans to help rebuild homes.

"This is a very difficult time," she said. "I anticipated retiring here and marrying the kids who I baptized. I love this church. It is truly amazing."

Her children are Elise, 23, Lauren, 22, Alana, 20, and Wesley, 16.

She isn't sure what God has in store for her next, but she has already located the homeless shelters near Johnson City and plans to volunteer for them.

Deb Borders, who is also a member of the church, said that Edema was truly loved by her congregation.

"She made a huge difference with the growth of the church," Borders said. "Her mission work has done a lot of good and she is leaving with a lot of good programs in place."

"YOUR NEW FASTER INTERNET CONNECTION WILL ALLOW YOU TO MORE QUICKLY ACCESS UNWANTED E-MAILS, ENDLESS TASKS FROM YOUR BOSS AND TIME-WASTING SOCIAL NETWORKS."

OUR TAKE: Editorial Social Security shouldn't be frivolously played with by politicians

Social Security is marking its 75th anniversary this year. Proponents have said it has kept seniors, survivors and disabled Americans out of poverty. That's probably debatable because the monthly stipends typically aren't that high. People who only have Social Security in their retirement aren't living in the lap of luxury.

But it's better than nothing. And those retirees who are fortunate enough to have another source of income, such as a company pension and/or personal savings, can live somewhat comfortably if Social Security is added to their income.

No matter how you feel about the program, it has helped many people survive in their later years.

So, any changes to this valuable retirement asset need to be made carefully.

Those proponents who would privatize the system and invest the funds in the stock market are certainly zealous over the concept, but when you consider how the market has been over the past decade, that action might not be prudent.

Sure, for those astute enough to invest in the stock market, privatization might be an option, but most Americans are not expert enough to manage their finances in this volatile, unsecured area. There's an old saying — which still seems to apply today — that warns if you can't afford to lose the money, don't invest in the stock market.

Most people who do want to take a chance usually have to rely on a stockbroker or investment counselor for guidance. That's fine, but when the markets plummet, the managers seem to land on their feet while the small investors — the average Americans — often are sacrificed at the financial altar.

For example, when a company goes into bankruptcy court, its major creditors usually get paid something — even just pennies on the dollar. But the stockholders most likely will end up with worthless pieces of paper.

Over the years, there have been plans to change Social Security to make it more financially viable. One current proposal comes from U.S. Rep. Paul Ryan, R-Wis., in what is called a "Roadmap to America's Future."

Among other things, the plan proposes to preserve the existing Social Security program for those 65 or older. But workers under 65 would be offered the option of investing over one-third of their current Social Security taxes into personal retirement accounts, similar to the Thrift Savings Plan available to federal employees.

It includes a property right so they can pass on these assets to their heirs and supposedly a guarantee that individuals will not lose a dollar they contribute to their accounts, even after inflation.

However, a group called Americans United for Change argues that the Ryan plan is a "Roadmap to Ruin" and opposes it.

Today, Social Security benefits are paid to more than 60 million people.

We dare say that in most cases, without that monthly income, the recipients would be destitute or at least in much worse financial condition.

The program has worked. It would appear that some tweaking or changes to the system are in order and maybe Ryan's plan is the answer.

But our lawmakers must proceed cautiously. Social Security may have been started by politicians, but it has become too critical to too many Americans to be frivolously played with by them today.

GUEST COLUMN: By Tim Skubick

Rick Snyder did what he needed to do and Virg Bernero did, too, but he whiffed on several home run opportunities that could have made him the clear winner in the only debate of the fall campaign for governor.

The debate was held Oct. 10 and telecast on several TV stations statewide.

You could hear the cheering in the GOP camp as Snyder, "the nerd," held his own, did not get trapped into arguments with his opponent, stayed on message and did not make a major gaff.

As a famous Republican once said, "Mission Accomplished."

Democrat Bernero, on the other hand, started very strong in his opening statement by raising a new "China" issue. Throughout the debate, he correctly and pointedly drew a strong contrast between himself and Snyder.

I'm for you, the little guy, because I'm one, too, and he's for the rich and the people at the top.

Ditto on the mission issue in Bernero's case.

But the Democratic challenger had several chances to accomplish more, but didn't, which denied him the mantle as the clear winner of the debate.

Missed Opportunity No. 1: Home foreclosures.

Bernero owns this issue, but he did not frame his answer to let the audience in on the secret.

Last week, Bernero forcefully called on the banking industry to cut homeowners a little slack when it comes to kicking them out of their homes. The very next day, the largest bank in the state did exactly what Bernero wanted, but he never made the connection.

He could have said, "Earlier I called on the banking industry to back off on their foreclosures and the next day, the Bank of America did just that. That, my friends, is what leadership is all about."

Missed Opportunity No. 2: The experience thing.

Both candidates were asked about how they would handle the politics of Lansing. Snyder has no hands-on experience, but is darn proud of it and his "I'm not a career politician" is part of the reason why he is ahead in the polls at this time.

Bernero could have acknowledged that point, but should have made the case for why experience does count in Lansing by saying, "My opponent thinks he can show up at the Capitol and pull this CEO stuff with lawmakers. Folks, they will eat him alive. I've been there. I won't be consumed by partisan politics and I know how to make a deal to move Michigan forward."

"And if you want proof that experience does count, the current governor concedes she lacked the legislative experience to make things work. So why would we want four more years of that?"

Another element that took a beating in this debate was how the two candidates got away with spewing broad generalities. Where in the heck was the beef on what they were going to do?

Snyder noted on fixing the schools that we had to "measure success."

Bernero was equally as vague: "Saving the schools is in the minds of the kids."

Or on helping Detroit: Each gave a ringing endorsement of saving Motown but, Snyder's remedy was to be a "partner" and "to pay attention to cities."

But what would you do?

What would it cost and who would pay for it?

Try to find those specifics in any of his overly broad answers.

On eliminating the deficit, Bernero said, "I did that in Lansing."

Yeah, but give us some specifics on where you would cut if you were governor.

Snyder side-stepped that question, as well.

Voters deserve more meat on the bones, but they went hungry last week.

Michigan needs to be rescued like the miners

They brought the Chilean miners up one by one after 69 days of living in a hole in the ground. Families were allowed to camp out on the ground above and provide moral support for the trapped men while remaining as close to their loved ones as possible.

There was an environment of cooperation, understanding, respect and a common goal to free the trapped men. Government, families and mine officials operated as a team. They took quick, coordinated action. No name calling, no blame game, no regulatory scandals, just a combined effort where everybody participated and played their part well in what was a completely successful rescue mission. They accepted their plight and dealt with it accordingly.

Maybe we in the good old United States, and the Detroit area specifically, including Ann Arbor, should begin such a coordinated model of cooperation in our own backyard.

If schools, unions, politicians and administrators were to stop trying to position themselves to come out on top with their "win-or-lose" attitude, our children would be better educated to lead us into the new world future.

If leadership quit wasting time and money on "pretending-to-care" campaigns and actually started participating in a coordinated effort toward a common goal, then we might start the long climb to the top instead of being buried under the weight of self-serving, bureaucratic posturing.

Politicians like Lansing Mayor Virg Bernero, who express a distinct propensity toward national and local protectionism instead of necessary cooperation and economic survival, will continue to drive Michigan further underground.

School union officials who put their member needs ahead of the children will continue to keep our children in the dark. Leadership, who cling to unsuccessful policies, teaching strategies, curriculums and imaginary budgets, will continue to teach citizens whose failure can't be used as a learning tool.

Schauer understands need for education

Former U.S. Congressman Tim Walberg states, "I see no place for the federal government in education."

Wow, his statement would dismantle special education and leave the most vulnerable students with no safe guards. If Mr. Walberg could have his way, children with disabilities would not be guaranteed an education.

The special education safeguards that parents and advocates have struggled for 40 years to secure would be erased. This action is turning our backs on the most vulnerable student and slamming the classroom door in their face.

Special education has changed the lives of students with disabilities. Providing the extra support for students to learn, play and grow together has changed how we view individuals with disabilities. My son is a third-grader with a hearing impairment and he requires some special audio devices to hear his teacher. He is a very good student and extremely popular with his classmates. Without this special education support, Connor would not be able to learn in his home school. He would struggle and may not even be able to attend Woodland Meadows Elementary. Connor and his classmates would not get the opportunity to experience the joy of learning from each other.

Mr. Walberg's reckless statement is scary for families with students who need special education services. Does he not realize that students with disabilities become productive members of our society with special education? Abandoning the federal education programs would begin the downward slide into segregation and isolation of students with disabilities. This would make individuals with disabilities dependent on others and cost much more in the long run.

The good thing is we have a choice because Rep. Mark Schauer supports students with disabilities. He has invited children with disabilities into his office to share their needs and concerns. He listened, questioned and shared ideas with the children. His great respect and admiration for the young advocates has been evident during every interaction.

Schauer realized support and hard work is the only way to improve the future for children with disabilities. He knows children with disabilities need support to grow into fully engaged and productive citizens. We need to keep Schauer in Washington, D.C., to support the rights of children with disabilities to get an appropriate education. Schauer understands students with disabilities and would never eliminate federal funding of special education.

Supreme Court reviews Lima Township land dispute

By Art Aisner
Special Writer

The Michigan Supreme Court is currently reviewing a six-year-old land dispute involving Lima Township that could have big implications statewide.

The state's highest court recently heard oral arguments from attorneys representing the township and resident Florence Beach in a dispute that will clarify and possibly set the precedent of how Michigan's Adverse Possession Doctrine will be applied in the future.

Justice (Robert) Young said it himself that this is not just about Lima Township. It's about the adverse possession issue, which will affect the next 100 or so cases that come before the Supreme Court," said Lima Township Supervisor Kenneth Unterbrink, who attended the proceedings in Lansing earlier this month.

The case began in 2004 when resident Florence "Twinkle" Beach sued the township for developing property on the old Beach farm plat that was designed for streets that were never developed. The township acquired lots on the property with plans to build a fire station on the northern end, with North and Cross streets serving as routes in and out of the station, court documents show.

But Beach argued that the unplatted streets fell under the property rights of the Beach farm due to adverse possession and abandonment.

The law is designed to limit real estate disputes by placing a statute of limitations over ownership and possession of property rights. It also prevents long-lost heirs of any previous owner from decades, and even centuries, from bringing legal claim to the land.

The cap required for adverse possession to take effect in Michigan is 15 years.

William Beach, Florence's great-great-grandfather, owned the deed in 1854, but the family left the farm in 1922. A tenant farmer lived and worked on the land until Dwight Beach, Florence's father, retired to the property in the late 1960s, according to court records.

Beach won her claim at both the Washtenaw County Circuit Court and State Appellate Court levels, but the township appealed.

Court records show there is significant case law on adverse possession, easements, and land titles that the court will have to review in making a decision.

Unterbrink said he left the recent hearing confident that the law was on the township's side, and that the justices would weigh all the information presented to them.

"We're working on behalf of the people and the public's interest in using those roads that were designed in the plat," Unterbrink said.

"It's up to the highest court now and what will be will be."

Beach declined comment on the issues raised by the case.

"Now that it's before the Supreme Court I can't comment until after we get a decision, which may come by the end of the year or early next year," she said.

The court does not provide a timeline for issuing its decisions and typically renders a ruling by judicial order.

Dexter band to host Halloween show

The Dexter Community Band will open their 29th season with a musical Halloween celebration. On Oct. 31 the band will present a free Halloween concert beginning at 3 p.m. in the Dexter Center for the Performing Arts located at Dexter High School, 2200 North Prker Road. The concert is open to the public.

This concert will engage audiences' eyes and ears as the musicians appear in their most outlandish Halloween costumes. Audience members are also encouraged to come in costume, especially children. A delight for all is the traditional children's parade across the stage to the familiar "Teddy Bear's Picnic" song. Who knows what budding thespian will make their first appearance?

The Dexter Community

The all-volunteer group is directed by William Gourley.

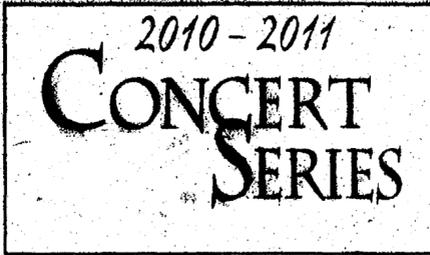

The program includes "The Sorcerer's Apprentice" arranged by Frank Winterbottom, "Cauldron" composed by University of Michigan Marching Band Director Scott Boerma, an Satoshi Yagaswa's "Nasca Lines."

For the children, Jay Babcock's new melody, "The Young Person's Guide to John Williams" will invoke visions of familiar popular movies.

The venue is handicapped accessible. The Dexter Community Band is a Dexter Community Education program. For more information call 426-2734.

Rake it or leave it

Here's what to do with your yardful of leaves...

Rake it!
Follow the guidelines in your community for curb-side pick-up. If you're asked to put leaves in the street, wait until just before collection day. Never rake them into or near storm drains, ditches, creeks or the river. Decaying leaves use up the water's oxygen, harming aquatic inhabitants.

Leave it!
Mow leaves by running over them with your lawn mower at next cutting. Leaves and grass clippings are the best fertilizer for your lawn.

Rake leaves into a compost pile for a nutrient-rich fertilizer for your garden next spring.

Allegiance Vascular Health

Charles Baird, a Jonesville resident who happened to be shopping at the mall said, "I noticed Allegiance Health was sponsoring a Health Fair and decided to take advantage of the free vascular screenings—which almost certainly saved my life."

Baird's test revealed a life-threatening aneurysm (weakening) in his abdominal artery.

In a quick sequence of events, Mr. Baird had a CT scan, saw a cardiologist and a vascular surgeon, and was in surgery to repair the aneurysm.

"I have nothing but praise for the vascular tech and the doctors. They did a fantastic job and treated me so well," said Baird.

Huron River Drive road work successful public, private partnership

By Lisa Allmendinger
Special Writer

A partnership between the Washtenaw County Road Commission, the Ann Arbor Bicycle Touring Society and the Washtenaw County Parks and Recreation Commission resulted in a resurfacing of three-quarters of a mile of Huron River Drive complete with bike lanes.

About 50 partners celebrated the Huron River Drive collaboration with a ribbon-cutting ceremony Oct. 14.

"The significance of this project is the example of the public-private partnership," said David Rutledge, chairman of the Washtenaw County Road Commission board.

Rutledge called it "a vivid example of what can be done as it relates to roads."

The bicycling society raised $45,000, the county parks added $50,000 and the Road Commission kicked in $90,000 for the $185,000 project.

"Part of our mission is to promote healthy lifestyles," said Robert Tetens, director of the Washtenaw County Parks Commission.

"We're pleased to participate in a partnership with the Road Commission because they design it and do the work," he said.

Anyone who drives the roads in Washtenaw County knows that bicycle riding is a popular activity for all ages.

"Today is a return to Huron River Drive for a lot of our members," said Doug Tidd, president of the bicycling club.

"A third of our members said they used to love riding Huron River Drive," he said, noting that they had stopped because of the condition of the road, particularly the stretch where the road work was done.

"At the bottom of the hill, we almost had to go into the middle of the road so we didn't bend a rim," Tidd said, adding that the road work will assist motorists, as well.

"It will be a plus for people who drive on this road; it will be easier to see us," he said.

A 3-foot bike lane was added along the stretch, said Roy Townsend, director of engineering for the Road Commission.

Resident Coleman Jewett, who lives near the resurfaced road, said neighbors in the area were happy about the roadwork, as well.

He said he thought it would take weeks to complete, but the project moved along very quickly.

"It seemed like they were done in a couple of days," he said.

Townsend said another section of Huron River Drive — from Tubbs to Zeeb Road — was scheduled for work and an added bike lane.

Work was scheduled to begin the week of Oct. 18.

dumping," he said. "Now it has become the global economy."

Spencer stressed that jobs and the economy are the No. 1 concern of the state right now. Also, the revenue from those jobs is desperately needed in the state, he said.

"As a Democrat, I am in favor of giving people a hand up," he said. "But after that, they have to start getting in the workforce and contributing to society on their own."

Spencer said there is no easy cure for the situation and admits it's going to take a while to get back. But he wants people to know he can work with big businesses and large manufacturers to ensure a turnaround.

"We have to encourage small businesses and incentives to steer businesses to Michigan," he said.

Spencer has been married to Donna for 27 years and they have three children: John III, 25; Chelsea, 22; and Michael, 19.

He is a member of the planning commission for Leon Township and the township's Downtown Development. He is also a former United Auto Workers worker.

Ronald Muszynski (L)

Muszynski is a Grass Lake Township resident and member of the Libertarian Party. The key issue that he sees in the upcoming election has to do with how he would like the government to be viewed.

"One of the key issues I see in the election is the transparency in government," Muszynski said. "I would definitely like to see what the government does."

Another top issue for him is the state's right to challenge unfunded or funded federal mandates to the states by use of the 10th Amendment to the Constitution.

"These two issues are easy to understand and often directly related to education and the economy," he said. "If the state's books are in order, it would be very easy and cost-free method of finally allowing the public open access. Politicians can never be held truly accountable, otherwise, and we will be eternally clueless."

"Budgets, finances, proceedings, legislation and documents for all local government should be posted online."

Muszynski said the 10th Amendment states that all matters not directly given to the federal government are to be the domain of the state.

"In other words, the states have relinquished control to the federal government. 'No Child Left Behind' and 'Obama Care' are two issues relating to government-run education and health insurance that are not federal issues," he said.

Muszynski said he would be in favor of fewer state taxes.

"I definitely think there should be less taxes on businesses and they should make it better for businesses that already exist here," he said. "I think in doing that, more business would be likely to come to Michigan."

"The current method of picking and choosing winners and losers must be stopped," he said. "Regulation, spending, tax rates and the complexity of our tax code must be held to an absolute minimum if we are to excel."

Muszynski also said students should be allowed to attend school wherever they wish.

"In order for our schools to be more competitive, we need to attach the students' share of money to the student so that it takes that money to any school," Muszynski said. "Good schools will prosper and bad schools will fail."

Muszynski, 54, is married and has a 20-year-old son and 14-year-old daughter. He is active with the Libertarian Party and activities that involve his children.

Candidates enter push for 54th District

Four hopefuls seek open seat in State House

By Art Aisner
Special Writer

David Rutledge doesn't like to talk about how many times he's sought the 54th District seat in the state House of Representatives.

But the longtime Democrat and presumed front-runner to represent Ypsilanti and Washtenaw County's eastern-most townships, is focused on earning every possible vote to get there. After all, in more than two decades, he has never been this close.

"It has been a 22-year journey for me, a dream really, and we're getting very close," the 65-year-old Rutledge said recently between campaign stops throughout the district.

"The important thing now is making sure people get motivated to vote because turnout is very important to me."

Rutledge said he's been working hard publicizing his record of service as a former Superior Township supervisor, business owner, and long history of community involvement to propel him past Republican Richard Deitering, independent David Palmer and Clifford McKinney of the U.S. Taxpayer's Party on Nov. 2.

Building on the momentum of his victory over five other opponents in the August party primary, where he received roughly 38 percent of the vote,

Rutledge has promoted his website at www.rutledgenow.com. he's gone door-to-door, doled out his fair share of yard signs, and blanketed the district with mailers to ensure he captures the seat. Currently held by term-limited state Rep. Alma Wheeler Smith, D-South Lyon, the position is vacant for the first time in six years.

Rutledge said he plans to follow Smith's footsteps as far as representing the entire district and focusing on state finances. But he said he also plans to be a strong advocate for early education funding, the environment and improving the state's eroding infrastructure.

To do so, he said he'd support a short-term increase in the state's gas tax to fund infrastructure improvements that could in turn be used to attract business investment across the state. Rutledge said he also favors expanding the state's budget cycle to five years to stabilize funds for school districts and municipalities that currently don't know what they're getting from year to year.

He said he is uniquely qualified for the job as an environmental consultant with leadership experience on both the Washtenaw Community College Board of Trustees and Washtenaw County Road Commission.

Rutledge is married to Geraldine, a retired teacher, and has two grown children and two grandsons.

He said he believes that his experience will serve him well in the House of Representatives with 70 new members next year as a result of term limits. It's also an opportunity for a freshman legislator to put partisanship aside if it gets in the way of progress.

"I've been involved in politics a long time and on the ground working on issues like transportation, education funding and job creation," he said. "Everything is so loggish along party lines in Lansing that there needs to be a leader that can bring people together."

Not likely, said Ypsilanti resident David Palmer, who is running as an independent. Palmer, 33, said he's always had a passion for politics, sparked by a speech by former President Jimmy Carter, one of his earliest memories. He has been involved in third-party politics in other states, but decided to run this year because of the large collection of "status-quo" candidates.

"I just looked at the field of candidates and I had no faith that we would get anything different from them than what we've always gotten," he said.

Palmer, a business manager with LaVision, a small, Ypsilanti-based high-tech firm, collected well more than the 600 signatures required to appear on the ballot and said many voters he's encountered have a definite sense of frustration with today's two-party system.

The Eastern Michigan University graduate said he'll truly be an independent voice if elected to Lansing because he would not want or have to rely on a political party's infrastructure to direct his actions and interests in the Legislature.

Palmer said he wants a reformed funding system for education across Michigan and would work to end unfunded mandates that are crippling municipal budgets.

He also strongly supports a Constitutional Convention, which he said if done properly, can remedy many of the state's structural funding and tax barriers.

"We have a tax policy designed for the 20th century and have none of the luxuries that they had the last time they did this in the 1960s, like revenue streams and undeveloped land," he said.

For more information about Palmer's candidacy, visit his website at www.palmer2010.com.

Deitering is a former Augusta Township supervisor and pastor of the Ypsilanti Free Community Bible Church. He beat out Rodney Nannery in the August party primary by fewer than 200 votes in a three-way race involving a write-in.

He is 49, a father of two and grandfather of five.

He could not be reached for comment for this story. In a candidate questionnaire completed for the Heritage Newspapers prior to the primary, Deitering said he would eliminate the current business tax in Michigan and provide additional incentives for larger employers to move their workforces here. He also wants to reduce government spending by reworking the Headley Amendment and pushing for a fair tax.

He has no campaign website.

Ypsilanti resident Clifford McKinney, who is affiliated with the U.S. Taxpayer's Party, did not respond to messages from the Heritage Newspapers by deadline.

Mayor's speech promotes positive news

By Krystle Dunham

Addressing the residents of Chelsea, Mayor Jason Lindauer presented his first State of the City address on Oct. 13.

In the 20-minute speech, Lindauer focused on the positive and successful additions the city has made over the past few years.

He began the speech on the financial state of the city, focusing on the fact that even with declining state revenues and property values, the city has managed costs and has provided important city services without a general tax increase for the past three years.

Lindauer said the balance in the city's general fund is within the stated policy of 15 to 20 percent of the general fund operating budget.

According to Lindauer, the fund balance for the fiscal year, which ended on June 30, was about 39.2 percent of actual general fund expenditures.

"This fund balance is in its best shape in the history of our local government," he said. "Just five years ago, the fund balance barely hovered above $100,000. Today, it is a healthy $1.4 million."

Even with the current economy, Lindauer said the city has still provided for local organizations like the Chelsea Senior Center, the WAVE transportation system, the Chelsea Recreation Council and Faith in Action.

The merger between St. Joseph Mercy Health System and Chelsea Community Hospital has also been a highlight, he said.

One of the results from the merger was the development of the Chelsea Area Wellness Foundation, which supports significant local health improvement initiatives through grants. St. Joseph Mercy Health System donated $25 million to the foundation.

The Chelsea Milling Company is expanding their capacity by building six new silos starting next month, Lindauer said.

Lindauer talked about the $11.7 million expansion of the water and wastewater treatment plant. He said the project was the city's largest public works project in its history.

The project was completed in May 2010 on time and under budget.

"Without the plant expansion, there would not be any possibilities for future economic growth including re-development or infill projects," he said. "The city was able to secure a coveted state revolving loan to finance the project at a 2 percent interest rate."

Lindauer ended his speech by honoring the hard work of Chelsea's residents.

"As a fourth generation resident, I feel like I have had a front row seat in watching my hometown grow in a sustainable, focused way that makes me so very proud to represent it as mayor," he said. "We are a modern, unique, thriving midwestern community. Together, we are laying a foundation that will make Chelsea stronger and more vital for generations to come."

Following Lindauer's speech, some area residents commented on what they heard.

Chelsea School Board Trustee Rob Turner said he appreciates all the support the city and Lindauer give to the schools.

"Our schools have always been a treasured asset to the city and we've always had a strong working relationship with the city," Turner said. "The working relationship continues to improve and I think that is partly because of Mayor Lindauer."

Chelsea residents Johan Stohl and his wife Donna came out to hear Lindauer speak.

"I was really pleased to hear his address," Stohl said. Donna added that she thought Lindauer had a good grasp on the city and knows how to proceed with certain issues.

State of the City

By Jason Lindauer

I'd like to start off this evening by thanking Silver Maples, particularly Jerry Wilczynski and Shawn Personke, for hosting this event. I'm proud to be delivering my first State of the City speech in such a warm and friendly venue, surrounded by a community of friends, family and business owners.

So what is the State of Chelsea, Michigan today, in the fall of 2010? Well, our city is certainly not immune to the financial concerns that have plagued our state and national economies.

Despite declining state revenues and property values, our city has looked inward to manage costs and still provide essential city services without a general fund tax increase for the past three years. This is a remarkable feat. The balance in the general fund is within the city's stated policy of 15 to 20 percent of the general fund operating budget. The fund balance for the fiscal year ending June 30, 2010 is approximately 39.2 percent of actual general fund expenditures. In fact, this fund balance is in its best shape in the history of our local government. Just five years ago, the fund balance barely hovered above $100,000. Today, it is a healthy $1.4 million.

Our administration team, including City Manager John Hanifan and Administrative Director Kim Garland, has done an amazing job despite a difficult economic climate. This can be attributed to better management of individual department budgets, greater than anticipated state-shared revenue, a reduction in the full-time workforce, and a reduction of anticipated spending for capital improvements in the various city departments.

Even though we are experiencing difficult times, the city continues to provide critical funding for quality of life issues that directly impact our citizens and shape our community.

The Chelsea Senior Center, the WAVE transportation system and the Chelsea Recreation Council are but just a few that come to mind.

Additionally, the community garden project is a superb example of the reach and impact our city has on its residents. Working together, the city provided the land asset, Faith in Action provided administrative guidance, our residents provided the labor of love, and the land gave back produce that in many cases was donated back to Faith in Action, allowing them to enhance their mission of feeding our most vulnerable population: children. This is Chelsea today.

The merger of the St. Joseph Mercy Health System and Chelsea Community Hospital has proven to be a very good thing for our community. An infusion of capital from the St. Joseph system will not only give us a state of the art medical facility right in our back yard, but also create jobs and opportunities for families and businesses alike.

Another result of the merger was the formation of the Chelsea Area Wellness Foundation. St. Joseph Mercy endowed $25 million dollars to this foundation. The primary purpose of the foundation is to support significant Chelsea Community Hospital initiatives and local health improvement initiatives through grants.

Silver Maples was a recent recipient of one of these grants for its "Hum, Move and Groove" project. This three loop walking trail will connect the Silver Maples campus with Chelsea Community Hospital, the Chelsea Schools, St. Mary Parish as well as the city sidewalk network. Creating a culture of healthy living and linking community partners is smart, informed and very forward thinking. This is Chelsea today.

Chelsea Milling, also known as Jiffy Mix, continues to boom and thrive in our city. The company is expanding their capacity by building six new silos starting next month. They've recently upgraded their research and development facilities and renovated their Welcome Center. We are proud to have the Jiffy plant in Chelsea. Their continued investments ensure a thriving business that is vital to our community's growth and sustainability. Jiffy is Chelsea.

With a solid infrastructure in place, the Chelsea First marketing campaign was launched as a joint partnership between the city, the Downtown Development Authority, the chamber of commerce and concerned business leaders to develop a comprehensive marketing and branding campaign.

The goal of this campaign initiative is to increase the number of customers from the local trade area as well as the greater regional market. We want to position Chelsea as a leading choice for visitors, businesses and residents seeking to relocate.

Last month, the city hosted representatives from Dexter, Manchester, Pinckney, Grass Lake and eastern Jackson county for a training session called "Balancing Nature and Commerce." This combined effort seeks to create partnerships in the surrounding Waterloo/Pinckney recreation areas to promote our region as a destination.

Right out our front door is the largest collection of state recreation land and Chelsea and its partners are positioning themselves as the gateway communities to these treasured land assets. This is yet another example of our city leaders thinking proactively and collaboratively.

Two years ago, the city began construction on the largest public works project in the city's history — the $11.7 million expansion of the water and wastewater treatment plant. Under the supervision of Utilities Director Brad Roberts, the project was completed in May 2010, on time and under budget.

Without the plant expansion, there would not be any possibilities for future economic growth including re-development or infill projects. The city was able to secure a coveted state revolving loan to finance the project at a 2 percent interest rate. To quote a famous TV personality, "This is a good thing."

The city continues to move forward with the police station project. Under Chief Ed Toth's leadership, our officers have faithfully protected and served our community despite cramped and outdated quarters. For too long our officers have made due, without complaint or excuse. The new station will help modernize the department and provide a 50-year solution to a 20-year challenge.

The city held two important town hall meetings on this problem that were well attended by concerned citizens. And in the true manner that makes this city great, thoughtful and passionate opinions were offered. The direct input of our citizens is critical to the progress of our community and this evening, I can report to you that your viewpoints were heard, were appreciated and were acted upon. The project is scheduled to break ground in spring of 2011.

Lastly, the city continues to update its information technology infrastructure to enhance efficiency and promote greater transparency. Utility customers can now view their account history online, either at home or at a city provided public kiosk. City council meetings are now professionally broadcast on Channel 18. Those missing town hall meetings can tune in and watch the re-broadcast and be up to speed on key city happenings. The city also produced a concise, yet thorough video on the WWTP expansion that is available for viewing on the city website, as well as being broadcast on Channel 18.

The city will continue to use this format to inform its residents and businesses of all that is happening in this great city.

So, my friends, what defines a community? I know some communities are defined by their illustrious history. For others, it is their public school system. A few communities I've visited seem to have a real commitment to their senior population as well as their arts and culture population. And many communities are known for their quaint downtowns and retail spaces.

Lucky for us, Chelsea is known for all of these things and so much more. As a fourth generation resident, I feel like I have had a front row seat in watching my hometown grow in a sustainable, focused way that makes me so very proud to represent you as mayor. We are a modern, unique, thriving midwestern community.

In closing, we are doing our utmost to put Chelsea first. That's a simple yet powerful ideal that is gaining ground. I'm fortunate enough as mayor to meet and interact with virtually every segment of our population in town. We don't always agree. We can view the same issue or challenge with diametrically opposed vantage points. However, this simple phrase has united us as a community.

Together, we are laying a foundation that will make Chelsea stronger and more vital for generations to come. Thank you for being here this evening and for honoring me with your presence.

2011 Mitsubishi Outlander Sport

A diet makes you look sporty, even if there's no more muscle

By Malcolm Gunn
Heritage Media
www.heritagemedia.com

It's not every day that Mitsubishi introduces new models to North America, but it had to happen sooner or later.

Technically, though, the 2011 Outlander Sport is a spin-off of the current Outlander wagon. In fact, both models use the same platform as the compact Lancer sedan. But with a 14.6-inch reduction in overall length over the Outlander, the Sport actually appears radically different. It's also geared to a different audience and seems destined to fulfill a different mission in life.

Without doubt, the Sport's attractively proportioned shape appears, well, sporty, as opposed to the sheetmetal on the family-values-looking Outlander. In fact, only the senior Outlander's outside mirrors are shared with the upstart. From stem to stern, the design is more cohesive and works well with the Lancer Evolution-style open-mouth nose-piece that Mitsubishi claims was inspired by jet-fighter air intakes.

Naturally, a price must be paid for pruning more than a foot from the Sport's length. The bigger Outlander is available with a third row and the Sport is not. Simple.

Although the cargo hold has been similarly shortened, it remains more than adequate. If need be, the storage space can be maxed out by folding forward the split 60:40 rear seat.

The Sport's five-passenger seating arrangement will suit most needs although we wonder about the polka-dot-like base seat coverings. For drivers, a display screen indicating fuel, outside temperature, odometer reading and other vitals separates the dashboard's large twin gauge pods.

The Outlander Sport's thrust is provided by the Lancer-based 2.0-liter four-cylinder engine that makes 148 horsepower and 145 pound-feet of torque. That's not exactly earth-shattering compared to the Hyundai Tucson's 175-horsepower engine or the Volkswagen Tiguan's 200-turbocharged horses, but it should be enough to make the 3,100-pound Sport (about 400 pounds lighter than the original Outlander) perform in a lively manner. The 2.0's 24/31 mpg city/highway rating with the five-speed manual gearbox makes it one of the best in class.

The manual is fitted to the base front-wheel-drive ES trim level, while a continuously variable (CVT) unit is optional on the ES, but standard in both the two- and all-wheel-drive SE. The CVT includes paddle shifters that control the six artificial built-in steps. The idea is to emulate the sound and feel of a more familiar automatic transmission with the pitfalls of a traditional automatic, such as the power- and economy-robbing torque converter.

The Sport's optional driver-activated all-wheel-drive is operated from a control knob on the floor console. Under low-stress/cruising conditions, the vehicle remains in front-wheel-drive. When tire slip is detected, up to 70 percent of the engine's torque can be directed to the rear wheels. When the situation calls for maximum traction from all four wheels, the AWD can also be set to a "Lock" position that maintains a 60:40 torque split.

The $19,300 Sport ES includes a good assortment of standard features that would please most bargain hunters. Opting for the $22,500 SE adds climate control, push-button start, rain-sensing wipers, upgraded seats and 18-inch alloy wheels (16-inch steel wheels are standard).

Among the suite of options are a mega-sized sunroof, mega-watt sound system and a navigation/rearview camera combo.

The Sport's performance might not entirely live up to its name (Mitsubishi has more potent four-cylinder engines that it could easily draw upon), but for style and content, this shrink-wrapped wagon should earn a spot in the big leagues.

2011 Mitsubishi Outlander Sport

It actually is pretty sporty inside. It's reminiscent of the exceptional Hyundai Tucson (especially the gauge pods), which is quite a compliment.

There's actually quite a bit of room here and provided there are no back-seat riders, you could flip forward one or both seat sections to transport large containers of goodies.

Mazda2 is new, smart and ready for the rush to small cars

By David Schmidt
Journal Register News Service

I've driven past Alice's Restaurant, located in the redwood-clad hills south of San Francisco and made famous by Woody Guthrie's 1960's hit many times, but have never eaten there.

On a Mazda drive recently, we stopped there for lunch, and you can get pretty much "anything you want at Alice's Restaurant."

Mazda wanted us to know that with the addition of the sub-compact Mazda2, that statement could define the company's American line-up.

The B-Segment, which we call sub-compacts, is mostly about economics. Price is important, and so are fuel economy, environmental issues and maybe a bit of a social "coolness," but economics is primary. Industry analysts expect this segment to double in the next two years as fuel economy measures push the industry to smaller, lighter cars, with smaller, less powerful engines.

Until 2008, the sales in the sub-compact segment mirrored fuel costs here. But when fuel costs fell in 2008, the sales of B-Platform car only flattened instead of falling. Mazda sees this as possibly signaling a change in attitudes towards cars this size.

Even so, the push for this car within the company came from Europe, where B-Platform is an extremely important and competitive segment. While we consider these cars to be sub-compacts, in most of the rest of the world, these cars relate roughly to the small family sedan here.

While Americans may balk at a sub-compact, research shows that 80-85 percent of the time, there are less than two people in the car. While many might think that being able to take all the nieces, nephews, grandkids or children to grandma's house may be important, if it happens for most buyers, it's a rare occurrence.

More important in these days of virulent objection to others wasting resources, we must learn to buy cars that meet our day-to-day needs. Buying cars that have a capability we only need once or twice a year is no longer correct. It's wasteful and worse yet, expensive. While I seriously doubt that American car buyers will suddenly buy these cars, they'll want others to do it.

Within the Mazda lineup, the Mazda2 becomes the brand's entry-level product. It'll be priced about $3000 less than the Mazda3, which is Mazda's current entry-level model, and this margin will stay roughly the same across the range of models.

The Mazda2 is already on sale in other markets. Mazda expects to sell 20,000 in the U.S. and another 20,000 in Canada, where this size car is very popular.

The primary competitors for the Mazda2 here will be the other B-Platform cars: Honda's Fit, and the Toyota Yaris, Nissan Versa and Ford Fiesta. These are the mainstream cars, and since Mazda is the second youngest brand in the U.S. market, Mazda styles their cars emotionally. In most of the segments in which Mazda competes, there are plenty of serious and sensible offerings, so Mazda looks to stand out. They focus their marketing efforts on reminding people that Mazdas are sporty cars that go around muttering "zoom zoom."

The first thing you notice about the Mazda2 is that you notice it. There's a lot going on with this car's looks. It's a dramatic and dynamic look, with strong character lines, and clear—even emphatic—design cues. According to Derek Jenkins, Mazda's North American director of design, their idea was to create a memorable car in a segment that's full of many interesting cars in Europe, but is reasonably boring here.

They focused on two elements. First, make the car look fresh and new. That means having a design that differentiates it from its competitors. To make sure everybody recognizes it as a Mazda, it has the family face and the 5-point rear glass, which is a design element in every Mazda "hatch-like" vehicle.

Secondly, it needs to say

something different when you look at it. For the Mazda2, that message is agility. The car looks like it's capable and athletic. Since they were seeking this dynamic and emotional design, the proportion needed to be that of a coupe rather than a mini-minivan.

Inside, the designers wanted customers to feel that the materials they touched were from a class above. They succeeded in that, thanks to clever design and materials choice. Knowing that individualism is rampant among Mazda folk, the company's already doing one-off concepts to encourage this kind of personalizing.

Product development engineer Dave Coleman answered the most critical question about this car: how to make a 100-hp. car fun to drive. His answer? Make the accelerator responsive so that you can feel as much of the power as quickly as possible when starting out or shifting.

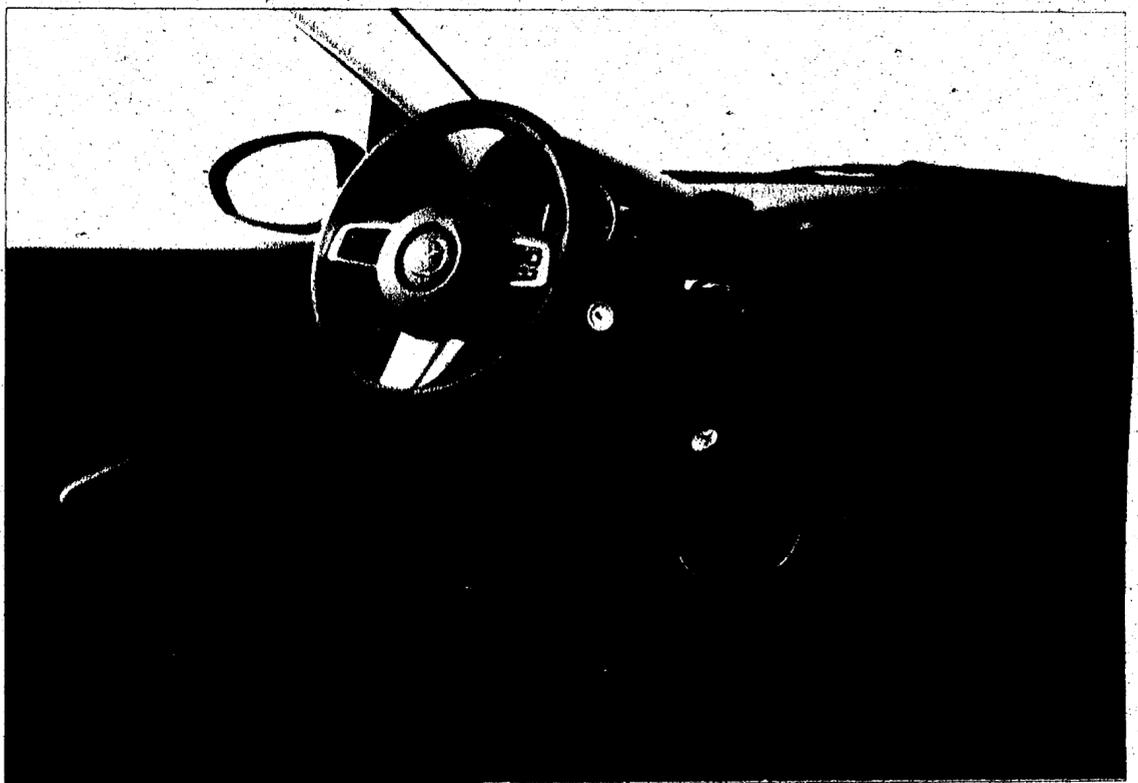

This is called tip-in, and it's something you can set. The Mazda2 has a pretty aggressive setting. The brake pedal also transmits a message about performance, so being quick and responsive to pressure is a good thing. The brakes are good, so that helps as well.

The body of this Mazda is quite rigid and tight, letting the suspension settings be comfortably dynamic. With electric power-assist steering, the feel of the steering wheel can be tuned. In the Mazda2, they chose to make the turn-in quick and precise. Also, the car stays nicely on-line, more noticeably while cornering, but reasonably well when going straight.

That's harder to do in a car that's as short as this one—longer is always more stable because it just takes more energy to make it turn. That's why long luxury cars seem to roll effortlessly down the highway.

So Mazda got the agility part of it right, but to make it fun to drive, there's got to be some gitty-up. The engine of the car is a 1.5-liter 4-cylinder engine generating 100 hp. and 98 lbs-ft of torque. It comes with a 5-speed manual transmission or 4-speed automatic as an option. These transmissions are both one gear less than most competitors. Mazda presenters attempted to explain what a great idea these transmissions were for fuel efficiency and driving, but it really is about keeping costs down.

While driving through rolling and twisting northern California roads, the addition of another manual gear, and one or two more gears in the automatic, would have made a fair bit of difference. For those who probably will be buying this, though, the difference is probably moot. Understand that to an auto writer, this isn't reason enough not to do something. But price is, and since this segment is all about price, I guess I have to forgive Mazda for focusing on what its customers are actually interested in instead of what we scribes think would make it more drivable.

Inside, the designers wanted customers to feel that the materials they touched were from a class above.

Despite that overall price concern, all the safety kinds of thing—airbags, ABS, brake emergency override, traction control and even stability control—are standard.

There are plenty of standard features inside, too, such as air conditioning, power windows and even keyless entry. You get an audio system standard, which includes an auxiliary input, perhaps an essential in a car expected to have lots of young owners. There's enough space inside with a surprisingly large storage capability of 27.8 cubic feet with the rear seats folded.

Mazda is going for a simple product lineup for the Mazda2. There are two models, the Sport and Touring. The Touring model gets more goodies, but has the same powertrain and mechanicals. There are six colors and two interior trims. You can choose an automatic or a manual. Then you're done, having decided on one of the 24 possible ways to get the car.

The Touring model will cost $1455 more than the Sport. The Sport's Base price is $13,980, and the top Touring model starts at $16,235 with automatic transmission.

It's interesting that whether the Mazda2 is successful here will have little to do with the car itself. If Americans are serious about their attitudes that cars should have a smaller environmental footprint, then this will be a good one to choose for those who still consider cars to be more than mere transportation.

University of Michigan doctors on 'brain trust'

Two breast cancer specialists from the University of Michigan Comprehensive Cancer Center were named to a "brain trust" of more than 60 top-ranking scientists, clinicians and advocates to guide the extensive research program of Susan G. Komen for the Cure, the world's largest breast cancer organization.

Dr. Daniel Hayes and Lori Pierce will serve as inaugural members of Komen for the Cure's new Scientific Advisory Council. They will provide scientific peer review for the breast cancer grants and programs that Komen funds on an annual basis.

The Scientific Advisory Council will also provide Komen leadership with guidance on breast cancer education and public policy. Susan G. Komen for the Cure, the largest source of breast cancer research funding outside of the U.S. government, currently funds nearly 760 active research grants around the world, with plans to invest another $59 million into 105 projects in 2010 alone.

Hayes is the Stuart B. Padnos Professor in Breast Cancer Research and clinical director of the Breast Oncology Program at U of M. Pierce is professor of radiation oncology and vice provost for academic and faculty affairs. Both are active in both treating breast cancer patients and conducting breast cancer research. As researchers themselves, SAC members must demonstrate to Komen that they are involved in innovative projects that seek to discover and deliver the cures for breast cancer. Given that they are not eligible to apply for standard Komen grants, SAC members will be provided with the opportunity to receive funding for their academic institutions in amounts ranging from $175,000 to $250,000 on an annual basis for their work. SAC members will serve two-year terms, which are also renewable.

Drive benefits Scouts

Believing that financial hardship should never be a barrier to attending summer camp, Girl Scouts Heart of Michigan launched the first targeted campaign to make Girl Scout camp possible for every girl who wanted to attend camp in 2010 in the council's 34-county service area.

"When it comes to Girl Scout camp, the question shouldn't be if a girl goes, it should be when," said Jan Barker, CEO of Girl Scouts Heart of Michigan, in a news release.

The three-month campaign brought in nearly $86,000. Of that amount, $62,787 funded camp scholarships, allowing 502 girls to experience outdoor adventure at one of the council's eight premier camps.

Additional funds were used to maintain the camps and to improve outdoor and environmental programming.

The need for scholarship funds and supplies at all of the council's camps increased dramatically in 2010 as Michigan's economy continued to falter.

By August, all funds set aside to provide financial aid to campers had been spent.

That's when the fund development team at GSHOM decided to try a last-minute phone-a-thon in all five of the council's regions: Kalamazoo, Jackson, Saginaw, Lansing and Ann Arbor.

The two-day telephone campaign brought in $3,700, money that was used to send girls to camp during the last few weeks of the camping season.

Other elements of the successful campaign included a direct mailing to 5,000 past donors, e-mail blasts to potential donors, online giving, personal solicitations and memorial gifts.

EAGLES EARN HONORS AFTER POSTING FIRST WIN

YPSILANTI, Mich. (EMUEagles.com) - The Eastern Michigan University football team walked off with several major awards after the Eagles posted their first win of the season with a 41-38 overtime thriller over the Ball State University Cardinals, Oct. 16.

Eastern roared back from an early 21-point deficit to take a 35-28 lead with 4:43 left in the game only to see the home team rally to tie the game at 35-35, forcing an overtime session.

The EMU defense came on strong in overtime, holding Ball State to a field goal.

That left it up to the Eagles' offense, and it did not disappoint, scoring on a 12-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Alex Gillett (Green Springs, Ohio-Clyde) to tight end Ben Thayer (Kalamazoo, Mich.-Hackett Catholic Central) on a third-down play to give EMU the victory.

For their efforts, Gillett and Thayer both won awards while also being joined by another tight end, Garrett Hoskins (Grand Rapids, Mich.-Creston), as an award winner.

All three players were singled out for national football honors by collegefootballperformance.com. Thayer was named National Tight End of the Week while Hoskins was selected as an honorable mention choice. Gillett was named honorable mention quarterback of the week for his efforts in the BSU game by collegefootballperformance.com.

In addition, Gillett was named Mid-American Conference West Division Offensive Player of the Week and was also singled out by rivals.com as their MAC Player-of-the-Week for Oct. 16.

Against BSU, Thayer caught two touchdown passes, including a 12-yard game-winning reception while Hoskins had a 73-yard touchdown catch. Gillett turned in a record-setting effort to lead the Eagles to their first win of the season. Gillett set EMU QB records for most rushes (35) and net rushing yards (189) while scoring two rushing touchdowns and also completing 10-of-18 passes for 225 yards and three touchdowns in EMU's come-from-behind overtime win. Gillett scored on touchdown runs of six and two yards and threw touchdown passes of 73, 33 and 12 yards, with the last one a 12-yard TD throw to Thayer in overtime to give EMU the victory. Gillett's 35 rushes is the 17th best in EMU history and the most ever by a QB while his 189 net rushing yards is the 18th best effort in school history, and also the most ever by a QB. Gillett led EMU back from an early 21-0 deficit to gain the win, the Eagles' first of the season. He had 53 total offensive plays and 414 yards in total offense, the ninth best single-game effort in school history.

USDA clears medical school's use of animals

Federal inspectors find "no deficiencies" despite PETA claim

By Art Aisner
Special Writer

Federal regulators have cleared the University of Michigan Medical School's training practices involving animals following a recent on-site visit, officials said.

Representatives with the U.S. Department of Agriculture met with university officials and reviewed the policies and procedures in place regarding animal research earlier this month. And they found that the medical school and all its departments in full compliance, a report shows.

The unannounced visit was a combination of a regular annual review by the department and in response to a complaint recently filed by the People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals.

The global nonprofit advocacy organization accused the university of violating the federal Animal Welfare Act for allowing what they called cruel and deadly training exercises in the Survival Flight course.

Specifically, PETA claimed that the use of cast and pigs to train intubation and other emergency trauma response techniques injured and led to the deaths of many animals. The accusations came after a review of several documents obtained through Michigan's Freedom of Information Act, and after attempts to end the practices through private meetings failed, organization officials said.

They asked USDA for a full investigation, but none will be necessary after the recent review.

The inspectors specifically looked to determine whether the university's procedures involving animals avoid or minimize discomfort, distress and pain; and that alternatives to procedures that may cause more than momentary or slight pain to the animals has been considered. They also ensure that a written narrative description of the methods used and sources of their training is in place.

"They spoke to staff, faculty and looked at our animal use and animal care protocols and found no deficiencies," said Howard Rush, associate professor and the director of U of M's Unit for Laboratory Animal Medicine.

"Once they look at the inspection report, I will not be surprised if they respond, or if not, go look for something else," Rush said.

Rush added that the USDA paid specific attention to the protocols used by Dr. Mark Lowell, an emergency room physician and professor of the Survival Flight course, who is the only instructor to still use animals over more modern human simulators.

PETA officials argued that Lowell's training on live animals is not only improper, but deficient. University officials disagreed, stating the importance of having experience with live tissue when emergency medical care needs to be rendered in non-traditional settings, such as roadsides during inclement weather, is invaluable.

The USDA inspectors did not issue an opinion on the use of animals and officials did not respond to messages seeking comment.

Justin Goodman, associate director of PETA's department of laboratory investigations, said the organization is disappointed with the USDA's findings and will be contacting the agency to discuss the matter further.

In the meantime, the group hopes to capitalize on the attention the issue has gained on campus and will continue its fight to change current policies, Goodman said.

Dozens of students were expected to don animal costumes and hold signs urging the university to drop animal laboratories outside the Oosterbaan Fieldhouse during the Homecoming rally just before Saturday's football game against the Iowa Hawkeyes.

Student activists also addressed the topic before the U of M Board of Regents at its regular meeting last week and filed a complaint with the Graduate Medical Education Committee.

"Our campaign is going to continue until the university does right by the animals, right by the trauma specialists they train and, ultimately, right by the patients, who will be the ones that suffer from inferior training methods," Goodman said.

Rush, who accused PETA of using inflammatory language and withholding certain facts to discredit the university's program, said he expected animal rights advocates to respond.

"Once they look at the (USDA) report, I will not be surprised if they respond, or if not, go and look for something else," he said.

Online competition could aid Ozone House youth center

Ozone House staff and volunteers are urging the public to participate in an online competition that may help keep the doors open at Ypsilanti's only youth center.

Ozone House staff were shocked in early October to learn that $100,000 in federal funding for their Street Outreach Program, funding vital services for young people in need of support, ended Sept. 30.

Ozone House's Street Outreach Program serves high risk-teens, primarily in the Ypsilanti area, with a safe place to seek refuge, hot meals, intensive housing and employment support, life skills training and leadership training.

Runaway, homeless and street youth face threats to their safety and future wellbeing, since life on the streets puts them in danger of being exploited and assaulted or of engaging in illegal behaviors in order to survive.

"These are really important services, needed more than ever in today's economic downturn, where families are struggling, and vulnerable young people are left to fend for themselves," said Ozone House Executive Director Katie Doyle in a news release.

"We've successfully helped thousands of youth who were clearly headed for trouble get on and stay on a positive and productive path. This kind of work is great for the youth, but also great for our community -- a $100,000 program that easily saves the community tenfold."

According to Doyle, the program has grown by more than 250 percent in four years and has welcomed more than 4,000 young visitors this year alone.

Every young person kept out of the criminal justice system saves the community at least $150,000 per year, Doyle estimated.

"We are devastated. We know the decision wasn't made on merit, because this is a highly successful program with an incredible return on investment," Doyle said.

"The written remarks on our proposal were very positive. It makes no sense."

Doyle said the staff at Ozone House believes the decision must have been made based on the economics of Washtenaw County.

"Relative to other counties across the country, Washtenaw County appears not to have been as hard hit by the recession. Tell that to a homeless 18 year-old whose only meal each day comes from Ozone House's Drop-In Center. Tell that to a family who cannot afford to house their child. Unless we can find some help quickly, we will have to shut the doors to this program."

Art Van Furniture recently announced that Ozone House was selected as one of 50 Michigan organizations, and the only Washtenaw County organization, to be awarded funds that will help keep the doors open at the Ypsilanti

Drop-In Center.

Ozone House now has the opportunity to secure $25,000 more as part of an online vote competition: the Art Van Million Dollar Charity Challenge.

The staff at Ozone House encourages all of the organization's supporters in to vote at <http://artvancharitychallenge.com/>.

This is the second year that Art Van Furniture has provided $1 million to fund 50 organizations that provide services in Michigan to support children, health and human services.

"We are honored to be selected by Art Van Furniture, and our hope is that this grant will be matched by other donors so that we can keep the doors open for vulnerable homeless youth who have nowhere else to turn," said Doyle.

"In these challenging economic times when our traditional grant funders have cut back support, Art Van has provided a lifeline."

Ozone House is a community-based, nonprofit agency that helps young people.

Since 1969, Ozone House has actively developed unique, high-quality housing and support programs and services that provide support, intervention, training and assistance to runaways and homeless and high-risk youth and their families.

All services are free, voluntary and confidential.

Local band plays fall concert today

Two local guests will appear with the Washtenaw Community Concert Band, formerly Ypsilanti Community Band, in its free fall concert at 7:30 p.m. today in Towsley Auditorium at Washtenaw Community College.

William Hayes, the longtime string and orchestra conductor in the Ypsilanti schools, will conduct his own composition, "Fanfare and March," in its premier local-area performance.

In addition, Christian Green, a University of Michigan student who is a world-renowned and highly accomplished bassoonist, will be the soloist with the band in the Carl Marie von Weber "Hungarian Rondo."

In addition to this distinguished music educator who will conduct his own composition and this talented soloist, the band's concert, using the theme "Looking to the East," will include a number of other features intended to appeal to listeners of all ages.

The band's three assistant conductors each will be featured as they conduct a number consistent with the theme.

Vince Chrisman will lead the band in Ticheli's "Shenandoah," a classic American folk tune about the historic Virginia valley where Chrisman's family has its roots.

From farther to the east -- across the Atlantic in fact -- James Wagner will present the "Harkstow Grange" movement from Percy Grainger's "Lincolnshire Posy," the work uses a folk melody from Britain in one of the most popular works written for concert band.

And from farther east still, Pat Padilla will have the baton for a presentation of Dmitri Shostakovich's "Festive Overture," a concert opener drawn from the Russian musical tradition.

Jerry Robbins, now in his 13th and final year as conductor, will preside over the remainder of the program.

The evening will begin with the band's brass section playing a fanfare from "Festmusik der Stadt Wien" by Richard Strauss, intended as festival music for the city of Vienna.

The Russian tradition will appear again as the band presents the final movement, "The Great Gate of Kiev" from Modest Mussorgsky's "Pictures at an Exhibition."

Originally written as a piano solo, this band arrangement of Ravel's classic orchestration calls on all of the band's tonal resources.

Moving back closer to home, but still looking east, the last part of the evening's program will include a "Salute to New York City," a medley of songs about the "Big Apple."

The "Cole Porter Classics" is a medley of songs from one of the principal contributors to The Great American Songbook, who made his mark on American music through New York's Broadway theaters.

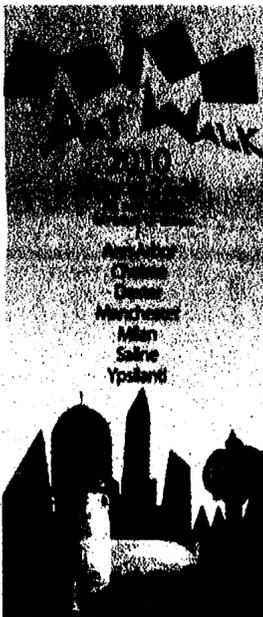

The evening will close with a musical trip to New Jersey, with "Jersey Boys," a medley of songs made famous by Frankie Valli and The Four Seasons during the 1960s and, more recently, through a hit musical of the same name.

This concert opens the 33rd season for this band, now in a partnership with Washtenaw Community College.

The WCCB consists of more than 70 players and is a non-auditioned group with a wide age range among the players that rehearses once a week year round.

See www.wccband.org for additional information about joining or supporting the band and the concert schedule.

Schauer, Walberg face off again in Election Day clash

Candidates see job growth, health care as top issues

By Daniel Lai
Heritage Newspapers

With Election Day looming, candidates for Michigan's 7th Congressional District in the U.S. House of Representatives are pushing hard to get voters out to the polls on Nov. 2.

In a strange case of déjà vu, Republican candidate Tim Walberg will face Democratic candidate Rep. Mark Schauer in hopes of reclaiming his seat in the U.S. House.

Schauer narrowly defeated Walberg in the 2008 presidential election with 49 percent of the vote, uprooting the congressman from Tipton after only one term.

The seat itself has changed hands every cycle since 2006, when Walberg defeated Rep. Joe Scharitz, a one-term Republican from Battle Creek.

No strangers to the political stage, both Schauer and Walberg said they are looking forward to the chance of representing the 7th District.

"This time it's different," Walberg said. "You have conservatives all over the country who are fed up with the government. They've had enough."

Prior to serving in the U.S. House, Walberg served in the state House of Representatives from 1983 to 1999.

He said the big issues facing the 7th District are job creation and repealing the national health care plan.

If elected, Walberg said he will work to repeal the government "takeover" of health care and replace it with reforms such as ending lawsuit abuse and allowing association health plans and the purchase of health insurance across state lines.

"A key concern for our constituents in the district is affordable health care and a great amount of fear of what has been done by the federal government," he said. "My plan goes back to my bill that I introduced while I was in Congress. It is a patient-centered, affordable approach that says let's look at things like expanding the use of health savings accounts. Let's offer association health plans for small businesses so they can join together in an economy of scale to produce health insurance that is affordable for employees."

Walberg said he would also like to see Congress tackle tort reform by putting a cap on non-economic damages and reducing "frivolous" medical lawsuits.

Schauer said his campaign has been heavily focused on issues such as jobs and unfair trade practices.

"While we've come a long way since I took office, when we were losing more than 700,000 jobs a month nationally, we still have a long way to go to get Michigan's economy back on track. Helping businesses create jobs will be the No. 1 issue next year," he said.

In addition, unfair trade deals like NAFTA have cost Michigan hundreds of thousands of jobs over the past decade, he said.

"According to a recent report from the Economic Policy Institute, 2.4 million American jobs have been lost or displaced as a result of the burgeoning trade deficit with China since it joined the World Trade Organization in 2001. During that time, the State of Michigan lost 67,800 jobs, including 4,700 in the 7th District alone, due to unfair trade with China. We need fair trade policies to level the playing field and help our workers and businesses compete," Schauer said.

On Social Security, which probably has become the biggest point of contention between Walberg and Schauer, Walberg said he is worried that the Social Security fund will be in deficit spending by 2016 or as early as next year if something is not done.

"We need to put a lock box on Social Security. It would mandate that no funds from that trust fund could be used for anything other than Social Security purposes," Walberg said. "Mark Schauer and his people have offered no solution to Social Security that is now in deficit spending six years earlier than it was projected to be. This administration has taken the trust fund and all the other funds in government, and has used them as slush funds and continues to spend at deficit levels."

"Seniors need to ask the question, 'What's your solution?' Mark Schauer has offered nothing but more deficit spending," Zack Pohl, a spokesman for the Schauer campaign, disagreed with Walberg's assessment.

"The facts are clear. Social Security will pay 100 percent of benefits through the year 2037. Tim Walberg in his own words said, 'I would definitely support the privatization of the so-called Social Security system,' and 'there ought to be a date certain when no longer does anyone have to put into Social Security,'" he said. "While Mark has been endorsed by multiple senior groups for his work to protect Social Security, Tim Walberg would cut retirement benefits for Michigan seniors and let Wall Street gamble our Social Security benefits on risky investment schemes."

For more information on the Schauer campaign, visit www.markschauer.com and www.walbergforcongress.com.

The 7th Congressional District consists of all a large portion of western and northern Washtenaw County.

Library millage will help keep Dexter great

Dexter is undoubtedly a great place to live, and one of the things that makes it so desirable is the Dexter District Library, a cornerstone of our community.

The DDL is a great public resource where children can study after school, where everyone can get a library card, and where everyone can have free Internet access. All ages can explore and borrow books, movies, and CD's as well as read newspapers and magazines. The library is one of the few avenues in town where community groups can reserve space to hold meetings in one of the library's meeting rooms.

The library also hosts free programs such as book clubs, children's storytime groups, the summer reading program, and numerous special events.

Our library has something for everyone and is Dexter's greatest public resource and a source of pride for the community. Keep our community great. Renew the operating millage on Nov. 2. Every penny is worth it.

Kantha Gardner

Dexter library is important to residents

Every time I drive by the Dexter library's old location on Fourth Street, I cannot help but wonder, "How did the library staff accomplish what they did in such a small space?" Now, in our beautiful new library, the director and staff can accomplish so much more making the library one of our area's best resources.

Whether you have used the library's services or not, you know they are there when you need them. From the computers and wireless service, to the private meeting rooms, the numerous children's programs or just checking out a book, the library is a valuable resource for everyone to depend on and utilize. Please support the library and vote to renew the Dexter library's millage, which accounts for 60 percent of the operating expenses, on Nov. 2. Thank you.

Democrats use false attacks on Walberg

This letter is written from a senior citizen, not only to the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee but also to Congressman Mark Schauer. A DCCC flyer falsely accuses former Congressman Tim Walberg of not taking care of me and all other seniors. DCCC has its words, but Walberg has his good deeds proving he does care for us seniors.

In 2007, Walberg sponsored House Resolution 4338, the Social Security and Medicare Lock Box Act to "establish a procedure to safeguard the surpluses of the Social Security and Medicare Hospital Insurance trust funds."

The only problem in 2007: (House Speaker) Nancy Pelosi saw to it that the bill was never allowed out of committee so that it could enjoy open debate on the floor of Congress. What has Mr. Schauer done to help us seniors? He's done nothing that I know of. He's basically sat and pushed buttons on such bills as Obama care, which punishes seniors. Mr. Schauer, show me the money.

One more deceptive DCCC flyer about Tim: a half-truth about the proposed fair tax. There is a 23 percent sales tax, but all other taxes are removed, as well as the entire IRS hierarchy. Flyers, flyers, pants on fire.

Quimet should be held accountable to voters

I am shocked. I am surprised. No, I am neither. Actually I am disgusted by recent published articles that local County Commissioner Mark Quimet has billed "we the taxpayers" of Washtenaw County over $35,000 for attending meetings, community events and perhaps even ribbon-cuttings and baby showers.

This is the same guy who is now running for the 52nd District to represent us in Lansing. My first question is: "Can we afford to have Mr. Quimet handling our state income tax money?" Then I ask: "How can a candidate like Mr. Quimet claim that he stands for lower taxes and at the same time gorge on the public trough for $35,000 extra?"

And all this time, since 2005 when he was first on the job, I thought the $15,500 per year in salary was his only compensation for being a public servant. I also thought that he was being extremely generous with his time to be everywhere. Well, I was wrong. Instead, he made the conscious choice to charge us an additional $35,000 for showing up in our community, and for mileage. Now that's politics as usual.

I wonder how many pre-school lunches $35,000 would have bought. I can only guess how many senior services $35,000 could have provided. Let's do ourselves a favor for the future and not vote for Mr. Quimet before he gets somewhere that he can do significantly more harm spending our limited Michigan resources.

Dexter tops Chelsea in Districts

By Terry Jacoby
 Heritage Newspapers

The Dexter soccer team defeated Chelsea 1-0 for the second straight time on Monday in a physical game that could have gone either way. The Dexter victory sent the Dreadnaughts into the second round of Division 2 district playoffs and ended the Bulldogs' season.

Dexter (9-9-4) played yesterday against Jackson Northwest in a second-round game. The winner will play at 4 p.m. tomorrow against the Milan-Tecumseh winner at Chelsea.

The Dreadnaughts' Dylan Polley scored the game's only goal at the 14th minute mark of the first half.

Varsity Soccer

"(Polley) got a clearing pass from Jacob Shilling in our end of the field and he just started heading up field with it," Dexter coach Scott Forrester said. "Their midfielders were up in our end so Dylan just took it down the field."

When he got to the Chelsea fullbacks, it was like a blue sea had parted.

"We like our players to go at the defenders and then distribute the ball after they have committed," Forrester said. "We had Ian (St. Pierre) out wide on the play and I think their fullbacks were more concerned with him and never tried to stop Dylan. He just went in and hit a perfect shot."

Scoring chances the rest of the way were few and far between.

"I felt like we controlled the game but it was a little closer than Thursday's game with them," Forrester said. "Both teams had some chances."

The Dreadnaughts will most likely advance to face Tecumseh in tomorrow's district final. The Dreads beat the Indians 3-1 earlier in the year.

"They are a good team," Forrester said. "They have some good athletes and it's not going to be an easy game."

Forrester said he likes the way his team

Bulldogs net five points at state meet

By Terry Jacoby
 Heritage Newspapers

The Chelsea tennis team finished 13th out of 21 teams with five points at the state championships last weekend.

"That's about the total I thought we would get," said coach Rahn Rosentreter.

The No. 1 doubles team of Henry Mountain and TJ DeRosia defeated the duo from Marysville 6-1, 6-1. They then lost to the No. 1 seed and eventual state champion from Cranbrook, 6-1, 6-1.

Chelsea's No. 2 doubles team of Zach Schepers and Garrett Livernois beat the team from St. Clair 6-2, 6-2 before losing to Forrest Hills Northern 6-4, 6-1.

The No. 4 doubles team of Nate England and Nick Young defeated the Haslett team in the first round 6-3, 6-7 (5), 6-3 but then lost to the No. 2 seed Country Day 6-1, 6-7 (4), 6-0.

Chelsea's Spencer Gines lost 6-2, 6-2 in No. 1 singles and Dylan Schepers lost at No. 2 singles to St. Clair 6-1, 6-1. At No. 3 singles, Henry Rutherford lost to Hamilton 6-4, 6-3. The No. 3 doubles team of Jake Ripberger and Aaron Zynda lost 6-1, 6-1 to Forrest Hills Northern.

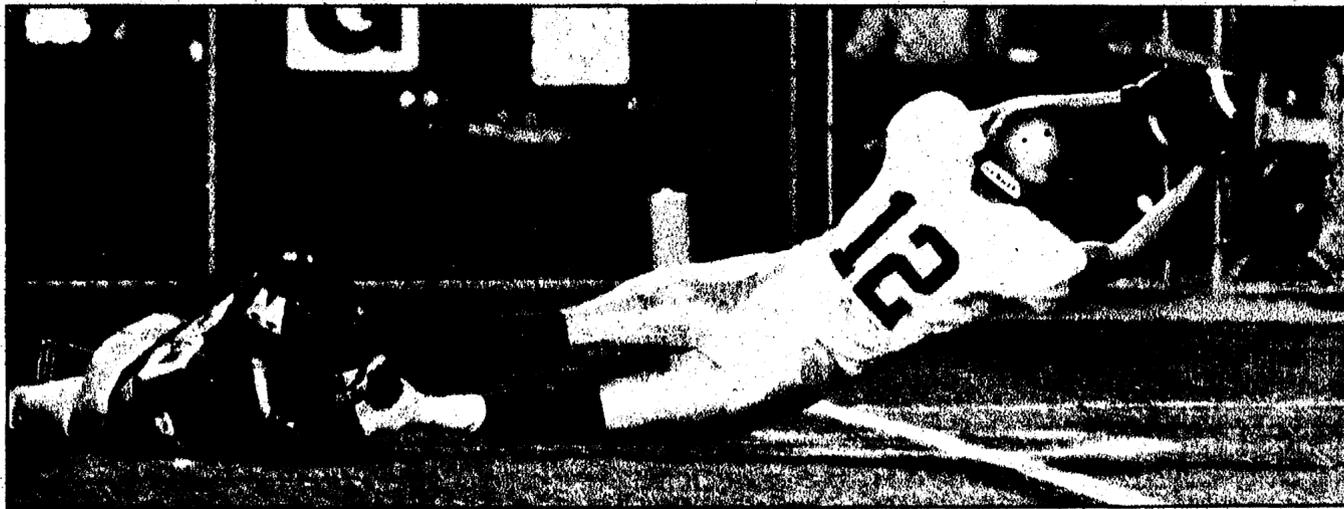

Drew Johnson played a three set marathon with Bloomfield Hills Andover, the fifth seed, before he fell 6-7 (8), 6-3, 7-5.

"Going in we thought we could realistically win five matches, we got three," Rosentreter said. "Looking back, the season was a success with winning the league back-to-back and going to state. The guys should be proud, especially the eight seniors, they had a good two-year run."

Gamble pays off for Pioneer

By Mike Larson

They say that fortune favors the bold. On Friday night, that old adage proved to be true for the Ann Arbor Pioneers.

Trailing Chelsea 21-20 late in the fourth quarter following a 51-yard Drake Johnson touchdown, Pioneer coach Jeremy Gold elected to take a chance and try to complete a two-point conversion to take the lead.

And the decision proved to be a good one.

Quarterback Andy Creal took the snap and immediately fired a bullet to Kyle Foster on a slant route.

Foster laid out to make the catch, and Pioneer took its first lead since the first quarter, going up 22-21.

"Our game plan was, when we scored, we were going to go for two," Gold said. Pioneer was then forced to go on defense, giving Chelsea the ball with 3:04 left in the game.

The Pioneer defense stepped up in a big way.

Chelsea quarterback Brian Paulsen started to orchestrate a drive, but it was stopped by the Pioneer secondary.

The Bulldogs ran 10 plays and moved 25 yards down the field before Pioneer defensive back Reilly Quigley snatched a Paulsen pass out of the air and effectively ended the game.

After the interception, the Pioneers knelt on the ball and ran the clock out for the victory.

"We got it done for our seniors," Creal said. "All our guys battled adversity this week. It was nice to see these guys play

Nate Bossory, Manchester

The sophomore quarterback eclipsed the 2,000 passing yard mark Oct. 15 in the Flying Dutchmen's 38-6 victory over the East Jackson Trojans. Bossory finished 12-of-16 passing for 206 yards, four touchdowns and two interceptions. The milestone came on a 20-yard completion to Josh Blades in the third quarter.

Rodriguez not 'discouraged' as bandwagon begins to empty

Every team in every sport has bandwagon fans. And despite what folks in these parts think, Michigan fans are no different than Chicago Cubs fans or Oakland Raiders fans or Boston Bruins fans or New York Mets fans or North Carolina fans.

When things are going well, the bandwagon is full of optimism and hope and high-fives. But when things go bad, fans often sprain their ankles jumping off the bandwagon, distancing themselves from the despair and hopelessness of even a single defeat.

After week five, the Wolverines were 5-0 but the bandwagon wasn't exactly rocking and rolling. The fans had been down this road only last year and knew what turns and obstacles lay ahead. Even a spot in the top 25, an electric offense and an undefeated record didn't convert the large number of nonbelievers.

The reason is the guy at the top. Let's face it, Michigan fans have never taken to Rich Rodriguez. And Rich Rodriguez has never given fans much reason to take to him. Now after two HOME losses, fans want to take him outside the Ann Arbor city limit complete with a Michigan Stadium restraining order.

It's a relationship that just doesn't seem to be working. The Wolverines are not meeting the expectations of a dedicated and loyal fan base. And the bandwagon wants someone else driving and leading the way.

But are we being fair? Rodriguez deserves the rest of the season and he's going to get that. There is still time to prove that he knows what he's doing. But to say the natives are getting restless is an understatement and we can't state enough how important the next few games are to his future in Ann Arbor.

"We have a week off to get some things figured out," Rodriguez said at his weekly press conference on Monday. "It's discouraging, but not disappointing."

And while Rodriguez admitted that there are a lot of areas that need improvement he has seen reasons for optimism - even if some fans haven't.

"We have had moments where we played pretty good against good football teams," he said.

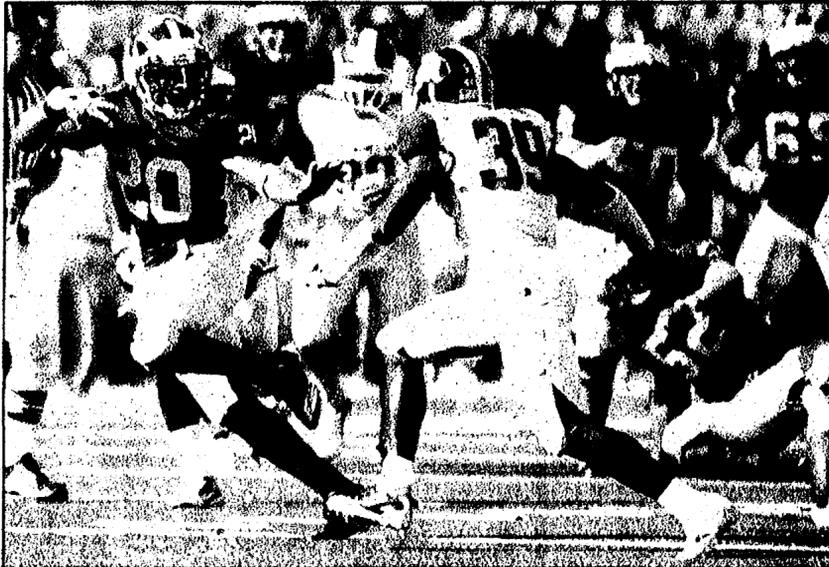

Rodriguez also quickly shot down any quarterback controversy: If Denard Robinson is healthy, he will be on the field. "If he's healthy, he's the starter," Rodriguez said.

The Michigan coach admitted that the defense has deserved much of the criticism. How can he defend a unit that has simply been brutal over the past three games. In their first three Big Ten contests, the Wolverines have given up 35, 34 and 38 points. Those numbers need to come down or it won't matter who is playing quarterback.

Indiana ran up 568 yards of total offense. Michigan State had 536 yards and Iowa 383 yards. The Hawkeyes averaged 6.4 yards per play and put the ball in the end zone on four of five trips inside the red zone.

The young defense is not getting any better and they are getting exposed by quality opponents. And for some reason they simply can't tackle. That, more than anything, is what's frustrating about the defense.

"The tackling was OK, but the last couple of drives it wasn't good," Rodriguez said. "I've been more disappointed with our ability to get off blocks."

Michael Shaw and the Michigan offense has had trouble keeping up with the woeful defense.

'Pink' Whalers top Spitfires

The Plymouth Whalers used excellent offensive balance and good goaltending from first star Scott Wedgewood to defeat the Windsor Spitfires, 4-1, in the Whalers annual Pink Out! game for Breast Cancer Awareness played Saturday night at Compuware Arena before 3,127.

The season's best and loudest crowd saw the Whalers win their second straight game to improve to 4-4-1.

RJ Mahalak (second), Robbie Czarnik (third), Garrett Meurs (second) and Stefan Noesen (sixth) all scored for Plymouth and third star Jay Gilbert contributed two assists from the Plymouth blue line. The Whalers raised over $12,000 towards breast cancer awareness as the team wore specially designed pink jerseys and Plymouth players all dyed their hair pink earlier in the week.

Plymouth head coach Mike Vellucci and associate coach Joe Stefan also dyed their hair pink as donations reached the past the $10,000 goal. Several Plymouth alumni now playing in the NHL - Chad LaRose (Carolina), James Wisniewski (New York Islanders) and James Neal (Dallas), among others - all contributed to the event.

Fans were also able to purchase game-worn pink jerseys. The Whalers' next home action is next Friday against Belleville and next Saturday against Mississauga. Both games start at 7:05 p.m. Tickets are available by calling 1-734-453-8400.

Chelsea native Tony Scheffler, a tight end, signed a contract extension recently with the Detroit Lions.

Scheffler inks extension with Detroit Lions

Chelsea native Tony Scheffler returned to the Detroit area this past summer and apparently likes being home. The Detroit Lions tight end signed a three-year contract extension with the team, multiple sources reported over the weekend.

The Denver Post reported that the deal includes a $2 million signing bonus. Scheffler was a restricted-free agent this off-season and is playing this season for the $1.176 million he was tendered by the Lions.

The 6-foot-5-inch, 255-pound Scheffler suffered a concussion during the loss at Green Bay but finished that game and has not missed any action because of the injury. He has 26 catches for 217 yards and a touchdown in six games this season, including two catches for five yards in Sunday's loss to the New York Giants.

Tight ends are playing a big part in the Lions' offensive scheme this season. Brandon Pettigrew, a first-round draft pick in 2009, has 33 catches for 336 yards so far this season.

Scheffler, who now lives in Saline, was a standout football and baseball player for the Chelsea Bulldogs before going to Western Michigan University. He was a second-round draft pick by Denver in 2006.

Scheffler was acquired by Detroit from Denver in a three-team trade in April 2010. He spent the previous four years of his career with the Broncos and finished the 2009 season tied for fourth on the club with 31 receptions while ranking third on the team with 416 receiving yards through 15 games played with nine starts.

In his four-year career, Scheffler has recorded 162 receptions for 2,108 yards and 15 touchdowns through 54 games with 28 starts.

Special teams also have been anything but special. Michigan is just 2 of 8 on field-goal attempts this season.

The Wolverines had a first down at the Iowa 15-yard line trailing 14-7 in the second quarter. But Taylor Lewan was whistled for a false start and the drive would die after a run and two incomplete passes. Lewan is No. 77 and he had a rough day for the Wolverines. This was just one of several big mistakes by the big offensive lineman.

But a bigger mistake happened when Michigan failed to put up any points after the 13 play, 59-yard drive down the field. The 38-yard field goal was blocked - again. The Wolverines also had a field-goal attempt blocked the week before against Michigan State.

Of course the Hawkeyes took advantage of the great field position (48-yard line) and scored to make it 21-7.

With more than a minute to play and Michigan facing a fourth and four at the Iowa 45-yard line, Rodriguez decided to let the clock run down and then punt despite trailing 21-7. Michigan needed a spark and Rodriguez had no intention of helping turn the key.

Decisions like these are why fans are fed up.

And while Michigan battled back and made a game of it against the Hawkeyes, there are many fans ready to turn the page on this season and this coaching staff. They've seen enough. Or haven't seen enough of what Michigan fans expect on Saturday afternoons in Ann Arbor.

"The first two years were extreme disappointments. But I think you have to be inside the program to see what's being built," Rodriguez said on Monday. "I'm not discouraged because I know what's going on inside the program. The frustrating part is that there are moments where I know we are really close and there are things that happen that are out of your control.

"We're going to be OK. We are going to be where we want to be. I just hope it's sooner than later."

If it's not "sooner," there will be no one left on the bandwagon for "later."

SWIMMING & DIVING

Chelsea swimmer Alex Duncan finished in 6:12.30 to take fifth place in the 500 freestyle last week for the Bulldogs.

Chelsea dunks Jackson, falls to Saline, Skyline

The Chelsea girls' swim team finished a challenging week hosting Division 1 state champions Saline and Division 2 favorites Ann Arbor Skyline in an SEC tri-meet.

But the Bulldogs started the week with a visit from Division 1 Jackson. The Vikings brought their "A" lineup to Chelsea in hopes of bringing home another win against the Bulldogs. Last year's meet was decided by two points in favor of the Vikings. But this time Chelsea pulled out a 95-88 win.

The first event of the evening the "A" medley relay of Lauren Dark, Kelly O'Keefe, Claudia Bravo and Hannah Olsen took second in 2:05.68; the "B" Relay of River Jensen, Katlin Connin, Alex Duncan and Jillian Dixon took third in 2:10.15 keeping Chelsea within two points of the visiting Vikings. The 200 freestyle saw Chelsea take a two, three and four. Jaclyn Murphy took second with a time of 2:08.05, Alexis Roberts third (2:14.95) and Katie Easley fourth (2:18.45). Claudia Bravo placed second in the 200 IM with a time of 2:28.13. River Jensen fourth (2:30.79) and Hanna Newbound fifth (2:32.14). Hannah Olsen brought home a much needed first place in the 50 freestyle with a time of 25.41. Jillian Dixon was third (28.15) and Kelly O'Keefe fourth (28.20).

Chelsea's divers gave the Bulldogs a much needed point cushion going into the second half of the meet by sweeping the top three places. Lauren Dark placed first with a score of 247.45. Kayla Whipple second (133.70) and Lena Cashman third (131.40). In the 100 butterfly, Claudia Bravo placed third (1:05.68), River Jensen (1:12.52) fourth and Katie Olsen (1:15.08) fifth. Hannah Olsen collected another first place finish with an impressive swim in the 100 freestyle in 57.07. Finishing behind Olsen for Chelsea were Jaclyn Murphy fourth (1:00.59) and Kaila Croskey fifth (1:04.60).

In the 500 freestyle Alexis Roberts was second in 5:57.04. Placing fourth was Katie Easley (6:04.43) and fifth place Alex Duncan (6:12.30). Chelsea took second and third in the 200 freestyle relay. "A" Relay of Hannah Olsen, Claudia Bravo, Jaclyn Murphy and River Jensen placed second with a time of 1:46.78, while the "B" relay of Jillian Dixon, Katie Olsen, Kaila Croskey and Hanna Newbound took third with a time of 1:55.64. In the 100 backstroke Maddie Doman placed third (1:18.21), Hannah Mahalak fourth (1:18.78) and Lauren Dark fifth (1:20.35). In the 100 breaststroke Kelly O'Keefe placed second (1:17.63), Hanna Newbound third (1:18.49) and Katlin Connin fourth (1:18.61).

The final event saw Chelsea's "A" and "B" relays round out the scoring with another second-third finish. The "A" Relay of Jaclyn Murphy, Katie Easley, Alexis Roberts and Alex Duncan swam second in 4:10.43, while the "B" Relay team of Jillian Dixon, Kaila Croskey, Katie Olsen, and Kelly O'Keefe placed third in 4:16.41.

"I told the girls at the beginning of the meet that on paper we should win this meet by two of three points, the challenge I issued to the girls was to avoid sixth place finishes in individual events (0 points) and score two relays to their one relay (top three relays score in dual meets) and we would be happy with another win; the girls rose to the challenge," Chelsea coach Dave Jolly said.

Last Thursday, the Bulldogs hosted Saline and Skyline. "The firepower and team size of these two programs is impressive, each team supports 40 plus swimmers and their lineups are potent," said Chelsea assistant coach Brian Thomas. "Our goal for this meet is to match up some key swims and hope for good races, personal best swims and state cut times."

Key swims for the Bulldogs included several top performances. Jaclyn Murphy narrowly missed her D-3 cut in the 200 freestyle with a time of 2:06.80. Hanna Olsen and Katie Olsen each swam personal best times in the 200 IM swimming times of 2:31.26 and 2:38.61. River Jensen in the 50 freestyle 27.37. Senior Claudia Bravo swam an impressive 100 butterfly swimming a time of 1:05.16 and earning a D-3 state cut. In the process, Senior captain Alexis Roberts swam an impressive 500 freestyle with a time of 5:56.26 and followed that swim two events later with a 100 backstroke time of 1:14.87.

The Chelsea swimming and diving team saw both highs and lows two weeks ago.

The Bulldogs hosted state-ranked Bedford in an SEC dual meet on Oct. 7. The Kicking Mules defeated the Bulldogs 120-66.

The 200 medley relay of Jaclyn Murphy, Jillian Dixon, Claudia Bravo and Hannah Olsen posted another D3 state

Cut time of 2:01.60. Lauren Dark narrowly missed the 600 yard varsity record held by Jillian Drow, missing the score by just .10 points. With this performance Dark solidified her position as one of the top divers in Michigan.

The "A" 200 freestyle relay of Hannah Olsen, Jaclyn Murphy, Claudia Bravo and River Jensen posted a time of 1:46.65 which was good for a D3 state cut. The 400 freestyle relay of Hannah Olsen, Jillian Dixon, Katie Easley and Jaclyn Murphy swam a D3 state cut time of 3:59.86.

Earlier in the month, the Bulldogs defeated visiting Pinckney, 101-84.

The Bulldogs led off the meet with a first and third finish setting the tone for the meet. Chelsea's "A" medley relay of Jaclyn Murphy, Katlin Connin, Claudia Bravo and Hannah Olsen took first with a D3 state cut time of 2:01.09; the "B" relay of Lauren Dark, Kelly O'Keefe, Alex Duncan and Jillian Dixon took third in 2:11.39. In the 200 freestyle, Alexis Roberts (2:14.34), Katie Easley (2:15.06) and Katie Easley (2:20.10) placed second, third and fifth respectively. Claudia Bravo placed third in the 200 IM (2:31.51) followed by Hannah Newbound (2:31.92) placing third and fourth.

Hannah Olsen won the 50 freestyle (25.85) with Jaclyn Murphy third (27.39). Senior Lauren Dark took first in diving with a score of 261.90. Lena Cashman took second (148.45) and Sarah Carrara third (147.45). The 100 butterfly saw a second-place finish for Claudia Bravo (1:07.28) followed by Alex Duncan fourth (1:14.33) and Katie Olsen fifth (1:17.39). Hannah Olsen won the 100 freestyle in 57.56 with Kaila Croskey fourth (1:04.75) and Maddie Doman fifth (1:06.82). Senior Jaclyn Murphy claimed a spot in the D3 state meet in Holland in the 500 freestyle with a state-cut time of 5:41.88, followed by Alexis Roberts' personal best time of 5:54.65 and Katie Easley 6:05.59.

Chelsea's "A" and "B" 200 freestyle relays took second and third place. The "A" relay of Kelly O'Keefe, Alex Duncan, Alexis Roberts and Katie Easley swam a time of 1:57.17 while the "B" relay of Jillian Dixon, Katlin Connin, Katie Olsen and Kaila Croskey swam a 2:00.15. Maddie Doman was second

MIDDLE SCHOOL FOOTBALL

Seventh-grade Bulldogs shut out Dexter team

The Chelsea seventh-grade football team blanked Dexter 30-0 last week.

Defensively, the Bulldogs played a great game. Some key stops with close interceptions were made by Jordan Haber, Tristan Koch and Trey Seitz. Also, umble recoveries were made by Jacob Gröb and Jacob Rhodes on kickoff and a fumble recovery on defense by Sean Cox.

JJ Duncan scored two touchdowns and Graham Kuras, JJ Niehoff and Quinn Kelly each scored one.

In addition, Justice Staton connected with Jacob Scheese for a 55-yard pass. Both offensive lines played great.

Eighth-grade match-up results in a 22-22 tie

The Chelsea eighth-grade football team battled Dexter to a 22-22 tie. The Bulldogs led 8-0 at halftime thanks to a 35-yard pass and a nine-yard TD from Cam Starkey to Jacob Burris. After Dexter opened the 2nd half with a TD of their own, the Bulldogs came back to take the lead on a 45-yard TD run by Ty Nelson who got great blocking from Jacob Gaken and Michael Smith. After Dexter had taken the lead, the Bulldogs went on a game-tying drive with big runs by Tanner Day, Jake Gingell and capped by a TD run from Dominick Goderis. The defense also played well led in tackles by Mason Bailey and Scott Moore.

DNRE partnering with others to develop pheasant recovery initiative

As pheasant season opens across the Lower Peninsula, veteran hunters recall a time when the birds were a premier quarry for Michigan hunters. At its peak in the 1950s, Michigan boasted a half a million pheasant hunters or more, who bagged almost a million birds annually.

At one time, opening day of pheasant season was almost akin to a holiday. Schools and factories closed in prime pheasant hunting communities for the day.

Although deer hunting has surpassed pheasant hunting in popularity, biologists at the Department of Natural Resources and Environment have not abandoned management for the colorful game birds. In fact, the department - along with a handful of partners - is embarking on an initiative aimed at restoring Michigan's pheasant hunting heritage.

"We are giving greater focus to small game hunting opportunities in Michigan," said DNRE Wildlife Division Chief Russ Mason. "We believe by restoring our high quality pheasant hunting tradition, we can attract new hunters and bring back hunters who have left the sport."

The DNRE has been working a number of partners - including Pheasants Forever, Michigan United Conservation Clubs, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture and the Michigan Department of Agriculture - to develop a pheasant recovery initiative. The DNRE believes that with proper attention, pheasant hunting can once again become an important component of Michigan outdoor recreation.

Pheasant populations have declined across the state for a variety of reasons, primarily habitat loss. In the golden age of pheasant hunting, some of the best counties for pheasant hunting were Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties. Most of that habitat has been lost to urbanization.

Elsewhere in the state, continued development, changing agricultural practices and reforestation has led to degradation of the remaining pheasant habitat.

That's where the new plan kicks off - restoring habitat in areas that have the potential to support pheasant populations and hunting opportunities.

"We believe this can work if people will work together through a grass roots community approach to get habitat on the ground," said Al Stewart, the upland game bird program leader at the DNRE. "Up to this point, many of the pheasant habitat programs have been piecemeal processes. We want to focus our dollars and activities on the best projects on a larger scale - perhaps a township in size. We want to identify deficiencies in the habitat and the hopefully restore that habitat."

The succession of grasslands into brush and woodlots has deprived the birds of the nesting, escape and winter cover that they need to thrive. From 1980 through 1993, forest cover increased in southern Michigan by 40,000 acres a year. Research indicates that once forest cover reaches 10 percent of the landscape, it becomes increasing difficult for pheasants to thrive.

The plan calls for identifying 10,000-acre areas where landowners are interested in resurrecting pheasant hunting. If those areas are identified, the DNRE will study the habitat, determine any deficiencies and work with partners and landowners to eliminate those deficiencies.

Once that is accomplished, the possibility exists to get birds from other pheasant-rich states, such as Kansas or South Dakota, to revitalize pheasant populations.

"It's sort of salting the pot," explained Stewart. "It's not going to be a put-and-take program. If people are committed to doing something for pheasants, then we're committed to helping them. Wild birds could help stimulate the revitalization."

The DNRE never forgot about pheasant hunting. During the 1980s and early '90s, the department brought Sichuan-strain pheasants to Michigan in an attempt to see if birds that were more genetically suited to brushy habitat could make a difference.

"That was the first time wild birds were brought to this continent," Stewart said. "That genetic strain can still be identified in wild birds."

"And we continue to be leaders in federal farm-bill discussions and activities. Our private lands coordinator just helped host a national discussion on the future of the farm bill. The farm bill puts pheasant habitat on the ground."

The revitalization will not be easy. "Today the upper Thumb counties and the diamond-shaped area - from Flint to Ithaca, to Grand Rapids to Jackson and back to Flint - have the best habitat available," Stewart said. "In the heydays of pheasant hunting that was considered to be fair to poor pheasant hunting."

"We continue to have an interest and emphasis on managing for pheasants on the state lands, but that isn't going to be enough. We need people on the land to help with this. We need to do it on a landscape level and we need to do it with community support. We have evaluated the habitat and have identified priority areas for pilot projects."

The group has identified three priority areas: Huron, Sanilac and Tuscola counties; Hillsdale, Lenawee and Monroe counties; and Gratiot, Saginaw and Clinton counties.

"We will host community meetings in these pilot areas," Stewart said. "We're trying to see if people are truly interested. If they are - and will identify their friends and neighbors who want to do things for pheasants - then we'll look at those specific areas and focus our efforts on the needs of pheasants in those areas."

A key component is doing it on a landscape scale.

"Efforts up to now have concentrated on small areas - 50 acres here, a filter strip there, a single landowner who want to do things for pheasants. Instead of a piecemeal approach, we're going to make a focused effort on a landscape scale. We need the whole package: food, nesting cover, winter cover, escape cover."

"State land can be paired up with private land to meet those needs."

"Optimistically, we can have 200 of these 10,000 acre areas," Stewart said. "The long-range objective will be to get 2 million acres into programs like this. It's like rebuilding a city one neighborhood at a time."

"We know that when you have the habitat, you have the pheasants. We hope that if we do it on the broad scale, it will revitalize pheasant hunting in Michigan."

The improved habitat will pay benefits not only for pheasants, but for other species, such as deer and wild turkeys, as well. Stewart said he believes the program will attract other conservation groups as partners when they see the benefits of improved habitat.

"Not only hunters will benefit," Stewart said. "People continue to be interested in pheasants. Non-hunters continue to enjoy hearing and seeing them. And they provide a positive economic impact."

DNRE biologists say with proper attention to habitat, pheasants can once again be common in Michigan.

is playing. "We are coming together at the right time," he said. "During these one-and-done games, you really have to stay focused and prepare mentally. We have some really competitive players on this team." Chelsea finished the season with a 3-8 record in the Southeastern Conference following Thursday's 1-0 loss to visiting Dexter. The Bulldogs ended up 9-12-1 overall on the year. "We were playing our best soccer the last few weeks of the season and as a coach you always want to be playing your best at the end of the year," Chelsea coach Shawn Hayes said. "(Monday) was a back and forth game similar to Thursday's game with Dexter

They took advantage of their opportunities and they got the breaks. We didn't take advantage of the breaks we got and that was the difference in the game." Both teams took six shots on goal. Senior Bobby Beneteau played a solid goal in net for the Bulldogs. "Bobby is one of our fastest players so we took him out of the net late in the game to try and generate some offense," Hayes said. "He made some big saves when he was in there." Sophomore Andrew Simons replaced Beneteau in the net. "We had some opportunities late in the game but couldn't put them on goal," Hayes said. Still, Hayes was proud of how his team played this season. "We definitely played better as the season went along," he said. "We played hard and it was a physical game both ways, like you would expect in a district game." Earlier in the week, Chelsea knocked off Ypsilanti 3-1. The first two goals were scored by Eli Arons in the 10th and 15th minute with assists from Pat Roberts and Charlie McCalla. The third goal came in the second half from Ryan Hilbert with an assist from Roberts. Drew Simons had seven saves for the Bulldogs.

Roundup

Girls hitting their stride

The Chelsea girls' cross country team remains on pace for big things at the end of the season. The Bulldogs ran to a first-place finish at the Gabriel Richard Invitational at Hudson Mills on Saturday.

Chelsea ran off with 41 points to beat Marshall, who finished second with 66 points. Napoleon was third with 73 and Notre Dame Prep was fourth with 103.

"We ran well," Chelsea coach Pat Clarke said. Juniors Danielle Dahl (20 minutes, 13 seconds) and Jessi Battaglia (20:41) led the team with fourth and sixth place finishes. Junior Elaine Johnson continued her fine running with a ninth-place finish at 21:07. Freshman Madison Nelson had her highest finish this season placing 10th with a time of 21:20. Senior captain Samantha Newbound had her highest finish ever placing 12th with a time of 21:28.

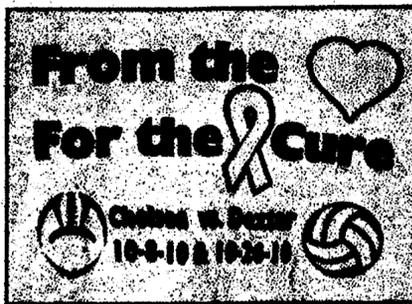

"We are coming along nicely at this point in the season and are starting to jell as a team," Clarke said. "This was a fine team win for us. We must continue to improve and our attitude must be intense heading into our most important time of the season. I hope we can peak in the next two weeks."

In JV action, freshman Lauren O'Toole had a PR time of 23:25 to place fifth overall.

Volleyball

The Chelsea volleyball team is headed down the home stretch of its season and will host rival Dexter on Tuesday in the annual "Volley for a Cure" game at Chelsea High School. The team will sell t-shirts to help raise money for breast cancer awareness.

In a quad-meet last Tuesday in Dexter, the Bulldogs beat Monroe 25-21, 20-25, 25-21 and 25-19 but lost to Bedford 15-25, 19-25 and 16-25.

The Bulldogs are 3-5 in the Southeastern Conference. Leaders on the day for Chelsea were Briana Carden (60 assists, 4 aces), Michelle Wellman (15 kills), Megan Brockett (15 kills), Ellie Stoffer (14 kills, 33 digs) and Tessa Elwart (11 kills).

Equestrian

After taking second at the regional competition three weeks ago, the Chelsea equestrian team placed ninth out of 10 teams at the competitive Class A state meet in Midland last weekend.

"The team had a blast at the state championship," said coach Lucy Heimerdinger. "Each class had 30 to 40 riders that they competed against. It was a fun time with great weather. We're already planning for next year."

The Chelsea equestrian team won the state championships last year in Class B.

with some passion and heart."

The game started well for the Pioneers as the Ann Arbor team struck first blood when Johnson ran into the endzone for a 6-yard touchdown.

However, on the very next possession, Chelsea took the lead. The Bulldogs were led by Joey Newland, who ran 20 yards for a score, and then the team converted an extra point when Charlie Hess booted the ball through the uprights.

At the end of the first quarter, Chelsea had a 7-6 lead.

The Bulldogs continued to put the pressure on the Pioneers, adding another touchdown early in the second quarter.

Chelsea got its second score when Paulsen hit Mason Border for a 20-yard touchdown strike. Again the point after was good and the Bulldogs took a 14-6 lead.

Pioneer had a chance to put some points on the board late in the half, but Sani Qasim was unable to hit a 28-yard field goal, allowing Chelsea to take an eight-point lead into the half-time break.

Just as things started to look bleak for Pioneer, the Ann Arbor team came storming back.

Late in the third quarter Creal found Jeron Clayton for a 31-yard touchdown pass to make the score 14-12.

Pioneer then converted its first two-point try when Creal hit Foster to tie the game up at 14-14.

Midway through the fourth quarter, Chelsea scored another touchdown when Berkley Edwards rumbled into the endzone from two yards out, and after another good extra point, the Bulldogs took a 21-14 lead.

Pioneer went on to score and then defend Chelsea's last stand to sneak away with the win.

Gold said he was really happy with the way his team, especially his defense, played.

"We started up this season struggling on defense," Gold said. "A lot of people saw that defense and said, 'Hey, they're going to have a poor defense this year,' but I'll tell you what, we had to replace nine starters from a year ago, and this team has grown tremendously in eight weeks."

"Our defense is playing really tough right now. My hat's off to our defensive staff for preparing these kids day-in and day-out and week-in and week-out. This is Pioneer defense at its finest right now."

Chelsea will try to get back on track tomorrow at Saline against the Hornets who need to win to make the state playoffs. The Bulldogs would like to win to help try and secure a home playoff game.

The win was also especially important for the Pioneers as it keeps the team's playoff hopes alive.

The victory over Chelsea gives Pioneer five wins, which makes next week's game even more important. The Pioneers will have to beat Holt next week to lock up a playoff spot.

Berkley led the Bulldogs' rushing attack with 48 yards on 11 carries. Senior Joey Newland carried the ball 12 times for 44 yards while Paulsen ran 10 times for 34 yards. The senior quarterback had a 40-yard run, but also lost 28 yards on a run.

Paulsen was 7 of 19 passing for 59 yards. He was sacked five times.

Nate Udell led the receivers with three catches for 29 yards. Borders had two catches for 24 yards.

Game Day: Chelsea at Saline

Where: Saline's Hornet Stadium

When: Friday, 7 p.m.

Outlook: In a game Saline (5-3) needs to win in order to qualify for the state playoffs, Friday's regular season finale match-up between two Southeastern Conference rivals looks to be another in a long line of intense Hornet-Bulldog gridiron clashes. Since 2000, Chelsea leads the series 7-3. In the last four meetings, however, the series is tied at 2-2. Last year, the Bulldogs won 34-21.

Chelsea (8-2), already qualified for the postseason, needs a win to have any chance of hosting a state playoff game. The Bulldogs have made the playoffs five straight years and 12 out of the last 13 seasons. Saline has been to the postseason four times since 2000. The last year the Hornets reached the playoffs was 2008.

Our Take: Always a hard-hitting, physical game, Friday's contest should come down to two things: execution on offense and tackling on defense. The Hornets, currently on a 3-game win streak have been doing both well as of late. Saline topped Ypsilanti 31-6 last week. The Bulldogs, coming off a 22-21 loss to Ann Arbor Pioneer last Friday, are four points away from being unbeaten on the year. Chelsea's only other loss was to Adrian 47-44 in Week 4.

Up Next: Fox Sports Detroit will host its Selection Sunday Show 7 p.m. Sunday announcing first round playoff pairings.

DOWN ON THE FARM

JV football drops a close one to Pioneer

The Chelsea varsity isn't the only football team in town to fall to Ann Arbor Pioneer by a point.

The JV team lost a tough 28-27 game on Thursday night to the Pioneers. It didn't appear as though things would be so close when Pioneer jumped out to a 21-0 lead. Chelsea received the ball first and moved the ball 40 yards on 10 plays, but the drive was snuffed out after an interception deep in Pioneer territory. One play later, Pioneer raced 70 yards for the game's first score.

Pioneer surprised Chelsea with an on-side kick and marched for another score to put the Pioneers up 14-0. After another failed Chelsea drive, Pioneer opened the second quarter with another touchdown to put Chelsea in a massive hole. A solid kick return by Zach Rabbitt gave Chelsea great field position on Pioneer's 32-yard line to begin its first drive of the second quarter. Four plays later, quarterback Logan Brown hit tight end Luke Hollandsowth for a 19 yard score to cut the lead to 21-7. Less than a minute later, Rabbitt made another huge play intercepting a Pioneer pass and returning it 40 yards for a touchdown. That put Chelsea down 21-14 at the half.

"The interception really gave our guys a lift. I think our guys knew we were in it at that point," Chelsea coach Orlandi said.

After a scoreless third quarter, few expected the fireworks that took place in the fourth quarter. Chelsea used a gadget play to tie the score. Brown completed a lateral pass to fellow quarterback Alex Maloney who then threw the ball 47 yards to a wide open Kyle Koseck to tie the game. Unfortunately, the Chelsea defense, which played extremely well after the first quarter, couldn't contain the Pioneer offense on its next drive. Pioneer used a double-pass of its own to convert on a third and 19 situation. The Bulldogs got the ball back with less than 5 minutes remaining and executed perfectly on an 11-play, 66 yard drive. Chelsea was forced to convert on a 4th and 4 situation during the drive. After that play, Colton Platt gained 30 yards during the drive that culminated in a Logan Brown 1 yard touchdown sneak. Chelsea was now down 28-27 and Orlandi chose to go for the two-point conversion and the lead.

"The decision was a no-brainer," he said. "We don't have overtime at the JV level and we don't want to settle for a tie. I was feeling good about our execution and was confident we could make it."

Unfortunately for the Bulldogs, Platt was stopped inside the Pioneer 1-yard line to preserve the Pioneers' lead with 1:11 remaining. Chelsea executed a perfect on-side kick that was recovered by Nick Burris to provide itself one last opportunity, but Brown's first pass on the drive was intercepted which sealed Chelsea's fate.

"This is one of the best efforts I've been a part of in my 15 years of coaching football," Orlandi said. "When we were down 21-0, I really didn't know if our guys would have what it takes to stay in it mentally. I'm proud of the way we clawed back into the game and competed to the end. The guys never gave up and if overtime were an option, who knows how this thing would have turned out."

"We could have played for a tie. Many teams would have done that. I know the guys in our locker room would not have settled for that. We did what we needed to do to climb out of a 21 point hole and to give ourselves an opportunity to win the game. The JV experience is one that prepares players for the varsity. I think our guys will take some very good lessons with them from this game."

Freshman

The Chelsea freshmen team lost to Pioneer 42-7. Chelsea had the ball trailing only 14-7 early in the third quarter, but a turnover and a Pioneer on-side kick tilted the game. Pioneer managed to score 21 fourth quarter points and Chelsea couldn't move the ball in the fourth quarter.

"I am proud of our kids," Chelsea coach Dennis Strzyzewski said. "Pioneer is an undefeated team that has been running up big scores on everyone. They have seven or eight two-way players that are very talented. Our guys stood up and battled in the first half. We just had too many mental errors and turnovers in the second half to hang with such a talented team."

Sylvan board votes to rezone property

By Lisa Allmendinger
Special Writer

Despite the objections of one business owner, the Sylvan Township Board unanimously approved a zoning change — from agricultural to business park — for more than 130 acres of property along I-94 at its board meeting on Oct. 5.

The property is located on Brown Drive and south of I-94. Charles Raeder, who owns a construction business in the rezoned area, implored the board to hold off on making a change until the economy improves.

"We're trying to make it attractive to customers," said LuAnn Koch, township clerk.

Raeder asked the board why they were hurrying to rezone the land, adding, "Nothing's going to happen on Brown Drive."

"I'd like to have some input and some serious thought to having some zoning that would allow a retail strip along there or highway commercial," he said.

A business park designation is intended to encourage and permit a mixture of commercial, office, research, and industrial uses that are compatible with each other in a campus setting, the ordinance reads.

In addition, a business park district should be located in the township's water and sewer service area.

A business park zoning allows things such as business, professional and executive or administrative offices, research, testing laboratories, assembly plants and light manufacturing.

Special use permits will be required for restaurants or cafeterias for employees, business or technical schools, day care centers, hotels, retail or gas stations.

Previously, the township's planning commission deadlocked with a 2-2 vote, with two members abstaining from the vote.

Lisa Allmendinger can be reached at 734-433-1052 or at lallmendinger@sbcglobal.net

The property is located on Brown Drive and south of I-94.

Chelsea to be featured in museum display

The Chelsea Area Historical Society has taken a bit of Chelsea to Ann Arbor with the exhibit "Industry & Arts in Chelsea" at the Museum on Main Street. The exhibit, which is open on weekends through the end of November, showcases Chelsea's rich history of industry, entertainment, and the arts.

Highlights of the show include a replica of a vintage Chelsea Milling Company office, Federal Screw Works products, Glazier Stove Company artifacts, Joe Hale's Disney memorabilia, and Purple Rose Theatre Company production items.

"We are thrilled to have the opportunity to bring Chelsea's amazing history to others in the county, and honored that Washtenaw County Historical Society invited us into their museum home," Janet Ogle-Mater, president of CAHS said.

The theme for the exhibit evolved as CAHS recognized the significant impact manufacturing had on the development of Chelsea, as the village was once a principal industrial force in the county.

However, they also realized how cultural pursuits of the arts, which has always been present, is growing and enriching Chelsea today.

"We wanted to highlight what has positively impacted Chelsea and what continues to influence our community today," Ogle-Mater said.

"Industry & Arts in Chelsea" consists of 11 distinct displays. The arts exhibits take visitors through the early days of entertainment — including the 50 years of village photographer E. E. Shaver and the performances at the Sylvan Town Hall Opera House — to more recent contributions of native sons Joe Hale's Disney animation and Jeff Daniels' Purple Rose Theatre Company. The industry displays document the significance of Frank Glazier's stove company and Federal Screw Works, the boom of the Michigan Portland Cement Company, and the stability of the fourth generation family-owned Chelsea Milling Company, better known as Jiffy Mix.

"We have received such a generous and positive response from the community to date," Ogle-Mater said. "We believe there is something for everyone here and we hope the whole family comes out to enjoy the exhibit."

Expansion planned for market

The New Chelsea Market will soon be opening the delicatessen and meat department on Oct. 22. The market is located at 125 South Main St. in downtown Chelsea.

The new addition will introduce new products and features for customers.

"We are looking to be health-conscious in terms of items that are antibiotic-free," owner Kevin Riley said. "We are also looking for good values for our customers."

The market has often added items to their shelves based on customer requests.

The deli and meat counter will be open during regular store hours and attended and staffed by a skilled meat cutter. Regular cuts of meat will be available, including Bell and Evans chicken, which the market added earlier this fall.

Other selections will include fresh wild caught fish and other seafood, a selection of cold cuts and cheeses, and an expanded selection of side dishes and salads for customers' convenience.

Continuing their past practice of taking customer suggestions, the selections on opening day will be chosen by co-owners Riley and his wife, Francisca Fernandez, but will evolve as new items are recommended. The selection will also be changed seasonally as fresh ingredients become available.

"We will expect our customers to let us know what items they can't live without as the department evolves," Riley said.

For more information, contact Kevin Riley at the New Chelsea Market at 1-734-719-4700.

Purple Rose Theatre workshop set for Saturday

The Chelsea District Library will host designers and technicians from the Purple Rose Theatre Company for a panel discussion at 10:30 a.m. Oct. 23.

The event will offer a behind-the-scenes look at how the technical elements of a production help tell the story. PRTC Artistic Director Guy Sanville will share the stage with technical director set designer Dennis Crawley, resident properties designer Danna Segrest, and resident sound designer Quintessa Gallinat.

A question and answer session will follow the event. Attendees can also submit questions in advance via e-mail to info@purplerosetheatre.org or on the PRTC Facebook page at www.facebook.com/PurpleRoseTheatre.

The event will be held in the Chelsea District Library's McKune Room, 221 South Main St. in Chelsea. This event is being offered free of charge. Advance registration is required by calling 1-734-475-8732.

GETTING CREATIVE

Students at Beach Middle School in Chelsea spent the last week of September partnering with the Chelsea Center for the Arts, Chelsea District Library and the state park system on a clay tile project.

The school is working with the arts center to create a clay tile impression of a plant through the study they are doing and then the 600 tiles they create will be glazed and put on the recently new pergola that was built at the library.

Encore's 'Damn Yankees' a winner with audiences

By Amy Gray

The Encore Musical Theatre Company in Dexter hits its newest musical, "Damn Yankees," out of the park.

George Abbott and Douglass Wallop's "Yankees" takes audiences to a simpler time, before baseball scandals and steroids dominated the sport, and looks inside a tight knit, moral community. Dan Cooney directs a very tight show, which was also a convincing baseball experience complete with hot dog vendors in the lobby. The energy of the show never dwindled and the acting ensemble worked extremely well together.

Steve DeBruyne shines as the older and younger versions of Joe Boyd, a real estate agent and a long-time suffering fan of the Washington Senators baseball team. His physicality as an actor was very convincing for aging 50 or so years. He did well at making Joe likable and faithful. His smooth, powerful singing voice filled the theater and lent itself to the ballads nicely.

Tobin Hissong's Mr. Applegate was a joy to watch. He plays every nuance of the Devil with smooth transitions, and his facial expressions were priceless.

The highlight of the show was the group of ballplayers. They did such a good job of making all the characters different and memorable. Their songs were fantastic with such a small group generating full harmonies.

Also deserving mention are MaryJo Cuppone as Lola and Sonja Marquis as Meg. Cuppone and Marquis were the perfect counterparts in this male-dominated show.

There were a few visual distractions that made the show fall just short of perfection. While Daniel Walker's set was designed and built well, it was painted poorly. The wall panels weren't quite consistent, and the unpainted spot under the turntable set stuck out.

There also seemed to be a few lighting issues in the bleacher section with a yellow light too close to an actor's head and a few dark spots.

Colleen Meyer's costumes were spot on for the '50s time period, but Lola's first black shirt didn't work with the choreography, and a few cast members had tattoos that nylons didn't quite cover enough.

Some of the baseball players' hats were also pushed too far forward, casting shadows on their faces.

"Damn Yankees" is a modern retelling of the Faust legend set during the 1950s in Washington, D.C., during a time when the New York Yankees dominated Major League Baseball.

The musical is based on Wallop's novel, "The Year the Yankees Lost the Pennant." "Damn Yankees" will take place Thursdays through Sundays until Oct. 24.

Tickets for all performances are on sale now and can be purchased online at www.theencoretheater.org or by calling the box office at 1-734-268-6200.

Board rules against Pleasant Lake drain extension

Residents request more time to study flood problem in area

By Adrienne Ziegler
Special Writer

After more than two hours of heated public comment on Oct. 14, a Board of Determination found that there was no necessity to study flooding and make improvements along the Pleasant Lake extension drain in Manchester.

At a hearing at Sharon United Methodist Church, Washtenaw County Water Resources Commissioner Janis Bobrin appointed three area residents to the Board of Determination, including Dale Lesser, a Dexter area farmer, Craig Hupy, an Ann Arbor engineer, and Jan Godek, Lodi Township supervisor. The board voted 2-1 in favor of no necessity for extensions or improvements to the drain with Lesser dissenting.

The Pleasant Lake Extension Drain, which runs north through Freedom, Lima, Sharon and Sylvan townships, flooded in some areas during heavy rains in the spring and summer, causing damage to existing crops and making some farmland unusable. Mike DuRussel, one of the owners of DuRussel's Potato Farm, said he lost more than $1 million in product due to flooding near the drain.

"When it starts running into your fields what do you do?" he said during the meeting.

Residents with affected farmlands circulated a petition in June requesting that the Water Resources Commission "clean out, relocate, widen, deepen, straighten, tile, extend, or relocate along a highway," the Pleasant Lake drain extension in order to curb the flooding.

Seven residents signed the petition. Only five signatures are required to hold a hearing.

Most of the residents who spoke at the meeting vehemently opposed the proposal due to the cost to homeowners in the drain district and lack of information on what caused the drain to flood.

"I would like to see a complete drawing of this area with circles and little areas that show where the problems exist," said John Sitek of Wingate Road. "I don't think enough research has gone into this to warrant all these people sitting here to vote on something that we're not even sure of."

If the Board of Determination had found the project necessary, all those within the drainage district would have been assessed for the cost of the project. In addition to the landowners, the townships at large and county and state road commissions would also share the cost of any research, engineering and construction performed on the drain.

"We all don't want to spend money we don't have to, but we know something has to be done, and maybe that's more studying out there," DuRussel said.

The Washtenaw County Water Resources Commission has the power to assess residents in the drain district collectively up to $5,000 per mile of drain per year to clear debris and perform maintenance. This year, they spent about $10,000 to clear brush and trees in response to reports of flooding. The 2010 maintenance will cost about $8 per landowner in the district.

Up until 2009, the Commissioner was restricted to $2,500 per mile per year in maintenance costs.

Any projects beyond the scope of $5,000 per mile per year must be found "necessary and conducive to the public health, convenience and welfare" by a Board of Determination after a public hearing.

According to documents provided by the WCWRC, only about $80,000 has been spent to perform maintenance and remove tree jams, brush and debris since 2002.

Water Resources officials could not estimate what the cost would have been to landowners if the board found the project necessary, because they are unauthorized to do anything more than an inspection before the Board of Determination deems it necessary.

Drain Inspector Bob Griffin examined the 9-mile extension, and presented his findings at the meeting. Photos of the drain showed varied conditions along the Pleasant Lake extension drain, with several tree jams, flow restrictions and bridges.

John Kozminski, a Waldo Road resident, circulated the original petition to improve the drain after 70 to 75 acres of his land flooded earlier this year. Kozminski said he believes that flooding on his property from the drain is due to excess runoff from the Chrysler Proving Grounds.

He implored other residents during the meeting to support the project so that the Water Resources officials could fully investigate the issue.

"Because Chrysler doesn't really have sufficient retention ponds, they're not maintaining their water. The real problem shouldn't be paid by the bulk of us. The money should really be paid by the contributor to the problem," Kozminski said during the meeting. "Nothing has changed in this area except that Chrysler Proving Grounds has been added since 1950. There has to be a reason and the reason is that there's too much water coming in from Chrysler Proving Grounds."

Kozminski said he's done some research on the drain, and prior to when Chrysler Proving Grounds built their compound in the early 1950s, the drain system, which was built in 1893, functioned perfectly.

Chelsea Proving Grounds monitors its water discharge daily and reports those results to the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality monthly. Chrysler Group officials said in a written statement when asked to comment on existing retention ponds and drainage systems. "The Proving Grounds is in compliance with state guidelines and all permits are up to date. The Proving Grounds maintains a retention pond on premises to control runoff."

Kozminski's comments brought sharp and loud criticism from the audience, many who said they shouldn't be asked to pay for the problems of one or two residents, especially in Michigan's current economic climate.

Other residents suggested that more frequent maintenance and tree jam removal would help solve the flooding problems. "I think this drain has failed to be maintained and inspected. The failure of inspection has led to an awful lot of blockage downstream," said Ted Hinderer of Scio Church Road. "I don't think that anyone should be too pleased with the job (the WCWRC) has done."

Bobrin said that there are more than 650 miles of drains in Washtenaw County and annual inspections are just too expensive to perform.

Most residents supported performing as much maintenance as the allotted yearly amount would allow for and revisiting the issue in the future.

"This was probably the rainiest May that we've ever seen. I have to question if this was an atypical situation and whether we need to have more time to see if there's really a problem," said Barb Satterthwaite of Scio Church Road. "Use the $50,000 we're allotted per year to clean up some of the trees that are crossing the area and come back and review this another time."

Anyone who opposes the decision of the board may file an appeal with the Washtenaw County Circuit Court by Oct. 25.

Parking limited on Election Day

By Lisa Allmendinger
Special Writer

Sylvan Township voters know that it's often hard to find a parking spot in the small lot at the township hall on Election Day.

The unpaved lot has room for about 50 cars - depending on how closely they park. And, depending on the popularity of the election and the time of day they chose to go to the polls, voters are sometimes forced to park along the driveway leading up to the township hall or even along Old US-12 then walk up the driveway to vote.

On Oct. 5, the Sylvan Township Board approved a new parking ordinance to try to alleviate the problem.

Township Clerk LuAnn Koch said that she frequently finds vehicles parked in the lot with campaign signs on them for long periods of time despite two-hour parking signs in the lot.

The notices are ignored, she said.

The vehicles take up spaces that could be used by voters who want to park, vote, and get on with their day.

The township's new ordinance states: "The township board specifically finds that multiple vehicles with political campaign advertising have continuously been parked in the township parking lot throughout election days, long after a reasonable amount of time for voting has expired, thereby unnecessarily occupying parking spaces on township land and depriving other electors' use of the parking lot."

According to the ordinance, on election days, between the hours of 7 a.m. and 8 p.m., there is a one-hour parking restriction for voters.

Election workers, poll watchers and others authorized to be present at the township hall for the election, for township business, the press and emergency personnel are exempt.

The ordinance places a $50 fine plus costs for the first violation in a three-year period, $100 for the second violation within a three-year period, $200 for a third violation in a three-year period, and $500 for a fourth or subsequent violation within a three-year period.

The township worked with the Michigan Townships Association on the ordinance.

The fifth annual "Wine, Women, and Shopping" event is set for 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Nov. 13 in downtown Chelsea.

Participating stores will be offering treats, door prizes, activities and demonstrations throughout the afternoon.

Special "perks" planned for the event include giveaways of wine glasses and bracelets, free tastings of Zingerman's new holiday baked goods, samples of Country Home Creation foods, trunk shows of Michigan-made apparel, and a Troll Beads event.

Participants can take time to relax and enjoy free mini-facial massages and a world dance by the Tree of Life Studio.

Throughout the day, participating stores will feature special sales and bargains for all the good boys and girls, big and small, on your shopping list.

Enter a free drawing to win one of four $50 gift certificates from participating businesses and have your pictures taken with our ladies at a wine tasting available at Seitz's Tavern and Jet's Pizza - three tastings for $3.

Chelsea has a quaint strolling downtown with unique gift shops, galleries, and free parking. Take a break and enjoy a meal or a latte at one of the fine restaurants and cafes.

"It's a really fun day for women to do some stress-free holiday shopping and a lot more enjoyable than shopping online or fighting the crowds at the malls. It's also a great way to support your local businesses and keep Main Street vibrant," Alta Brown, owner of Chelsea Antiques and co-organizer of the event said.

Maps with event listings will be available on the day of the event. Look for red and white balloons at participating stores.
