Library to offer low vision center

State-of-the-art equipment will be available for patron checkout

By Daniel Lai
Heritage Newspapers

The Chelsea District Library and the Chelsea Lions Club are teaming up to provide a new service to benefit individuals with poor eyesight in the community beginning in 2011.

With the help of a $4,000 donation from the Lions Club, the library plans to install a low vision service center in its first floor lobby.

"This is the perfect marriage between the library and the Lions Club given the club's underlying mission," library director Bill Harmer said.

"We've been working together for awhile to figure out how to come up with a project that would really benefit the community."

After visiting the Plymouth District Library and attending a demonstration on its low vision center, Harmer said he approached the Lions about funding a similar project.

"If you look at our demographics, 25 percent of the population is age 65 or older, and that's expected to rise to 33 percent in the near future," he said.

Harmer said the project would consist of a glass case that would house low vision equipment including a variety of magnifiers ranging in power, which would then be made available to library patrons to check out and use.

"We're looking at some really state-of-the-art equipment," Harmer said. "We've come such a long way with technology that assists people who have a hard time reading."

The equipment is lightweight and can be placed on top of a newspaper or book page allowing the user to slide the magnifier across the text.

"Some people with low vision might also have physical challenges, too, so this gives them an outlet to sample the equipment with ease," Harmer said.

In addition, it allows caregivers to demo the equipment at the library before making an investment to purchase similar magnifiers for their home.

"Instead of making an ill-informed decision, people with low vision can come to the library, test out the equipment, and see what works for them," Harmer said. "This equipment is very user friendly, it's not cumbersome, and it fills a huge community need."

In addition, the library recently received a brand new Meryln machine that magnifies print text onto a large screen for

Council close to marijuana ordinance

By Daniel Lai
Heritage Newspapers

The Chelsea City Council approved the first reading of its zoning ordinance Tuesday that would prohibit medical marijuana dispensaries in the city.

The council will approve the second reading of the ordinance at its meeting on Dec. 14.

Though dispensaries are not currently in Chelsea, and there are no applications on file, if passed, the ordinance would prohibit future dispensaries within the city limits.

"The issue of medical marijuana dispensaries has been a growing concern since the use was voted upon in 2008," the city said in a statement included in the council's information packet. "Some communities have attempted to control the spread of the clinics by allowing them only in certain zoning districts, others by prohibiting them as the activity violates federal law. Staff feels this amendment is the preferable method for controlling these types of activities."

Before voting, council member Rod Anderson asked what the process would be if the conflict between state and federal law was resolved concerning medical marijuana.

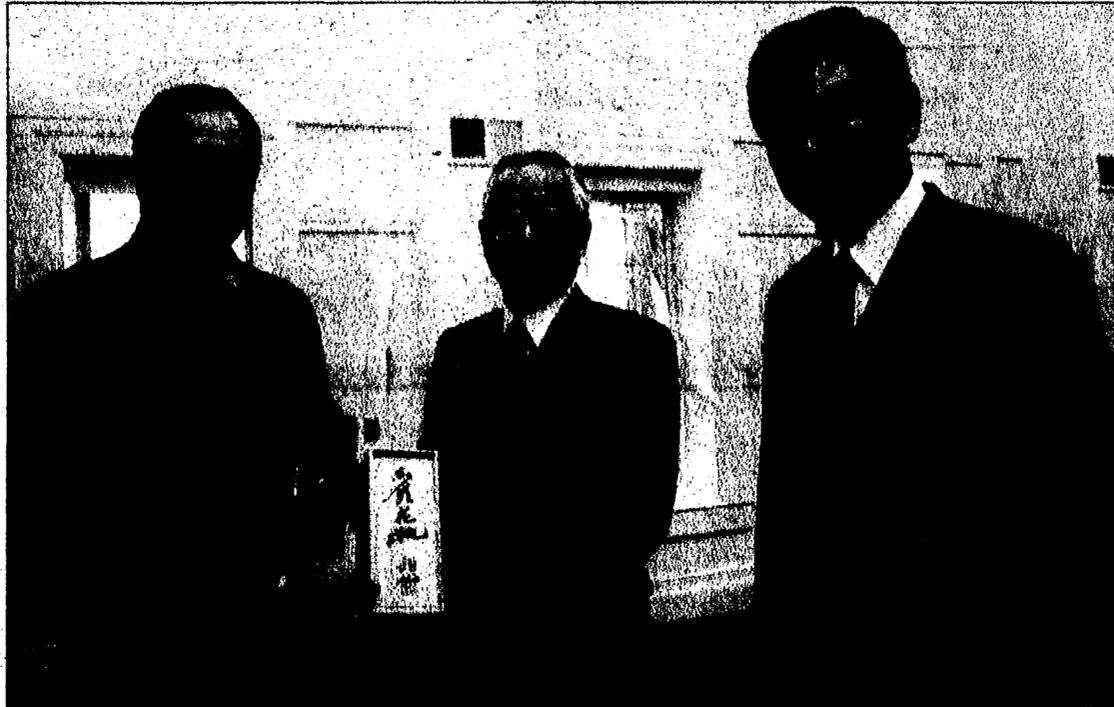

"I agree 100 percent with the basis of this ordinance," he said. "However, we need to remember that two-thirds of the state's voters approved the ballot initiative, and I think we need to keep an open mind if the state comes up with a way to rectify the law. We have to remember that it was strongly approved by the constituency."

On Sept. 28, the city council placed a 60-day moratorium on the establishment of medical marijuana dispensaries to give the planning commission time to develop wording for the ordinance.

Dance group to perform 'Nutcracker'

Young guest dancers to join teens, adults in classic ballet

By Lori Tucker-Sullivan
Guest Writer

It's the dream of every little girl who attends a "Nutcracker" performance — to be on the stage herself, dancing with the Sugar Plum Fairy, fighting the Rat King, or attending the festive Christmas party that begins Tchaikovsky's well-loved ballet.

This year, nearly 30 young guest dancers have been given the opportunity to join the teens and adults of Youth Dance Theatre as they present "The Nutcracker" Dec. 3 through 5.

Zoe Patselas, 6, is one of the children who will be featured in the show. Patselas will dance as a small party child who attends the holiday festivities that set the scene for the ballet.

"I get to wear a white dress with a red sash," she said. "I get a present at the party and my pretend dad helps me open it. My favorite part is when I curl up under the Christmas tree and fall asleep."

Patselas began dancing last year, taking a class at the Ann Arbor YMCA. Her mother, Jennifer Patselas, said she heard about auditions for guest dancers in the Youth Dance Theatre performance and decided to audition. Patselas took her place in line with the older kids and danced for Artistic Director Wendi DuBois.

Dexter Community Band to perform show Dec. 12

Come join the joyful notes of the Dexter Community Band on Dec. 12. The band's traditional holiday concert will begin at 3 p.m. at the Center for the Performing Arts located in Dexter High School at 2200 North Parker Road.

This year's concert promises to be a fun-filled event. The band will entertain audiences with the "Parade of the Wooden Soldiers" by Leon Jessel. A special Dixieland Band, within the band, will do a rendition of "Rudolph, the Red-Nosed Reindeer" by Johnny Marks. The Dixieland band members are Milford Wolpoff on clarinet, Jan Stevens on tenor sax, Rich Savitski on trumpet, Mike Savitski on trombone, Erick Starnal on tuba and Bill Adams on drums.

The band has purchased four new holiday pieces. "Christmas from the '50s" will feature the melodic voice of Jim Paravantes with the band accompaniment. Paravantes will also be the featured vocalist in the well-known song, "Have Yourself a Merry Little Christmas." Larry MacTaggart's "Laughing all the Way" will set the toes a tapping. "Santa's Journey" by Roy W. Kaighin will announce the entrance of a special visitor from the North Pole. It is rumored that he will bring candy canes for the children.

The band will become a bell choir performing "Carol of the Bells" which is a new arrangement by Sean O'Loughlin. The concert will conclude with Leroy Anderson's "Sleigh Ride" and the traditional audience Christmas sing-a-long.

The band will decorate the Center for the Performing Arts in a festive way. This year the band will proudly display a new Christmas tree generously donated by Hackney Hardware. After the concert the band members will provide refreshments for the audience. The concert is free and open to the Salvation Army still looking for more bell ringers

The Salvation Army of Washtenaw County is looking for community support to help fill remaining openings for volunteer bell ringers during its annual Red Kettle Campaign.

Volunteers are needed to fill shifts at the nonprofit's 49 Washtenaw County kettle locations through Dec. 24, excluding Thanksgiving and Sundays.

Volunteers are asked to donate a minimum of two hours of time, though longer shifts are encouraged.

"Low volunteer turnout limits the support we're able to provide," said Major John Williams in a news release.

"The more people who volunteer to ring bells, the more money we can dedicate to helping those in need."

New this year, volunteers can visit www.registertoring.com washtenaw to view and sign up for available shifts. Information also is available by calling 668-8353.

In addition to individual shifts, group shifts are available for those who wish to ring with friends or family, or as part of an organization.

Funds raised during the annual Red Kettle Campaign are used to assist Washtenaw County families and individuals throughout the entire year.

The Salvation Army has operated in Washtenaw County for more than 100 years. The nonprofit provides various programs and services at centers located in Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti.

TSA-WC uses an average of 82 cents of every dollar donated to provide a food pantry, soup kitchen, clothing, a family shelter, transitional housing and counseling for veterans, character building for youth, camp programs, emergency and disaster relief, utility assistance and eviction prevention.

prevent destructive behavior in Chelsea youth, has released their new line of merchandise.

"We're very excited about the new SRSLY merchandise," SRSLY director Reiley Curran said. "Our youth coalition members helped us select and design the items. The T-shirts are still very popular, and now people will have SRSLY gear to wear when it's cold outside."

The clothing line includes black polo shirts with the SRSLY logo for $18, hooded sweatshirts for $30, black skull-caps for $10, and zippered fleece shirts for $40, among others.

"I love the new hoodies. It has a place for my iPod in the pocket, and holes for the ear buds," Cindy Rhodes, CHS psychologist said.

Curran said all of the proceeds from the sale of the items will be used for SRSLY programs and activities.

To order products, customers can fill out an order form and bring it with payment to the next SRSLY meeting on Dec. 2 at the Washington Street Education Center, or deliver to the SRSLY office at Chelsea Community Hospital.

"Make sure to order early to ensure delivery in time for the holidays," Curran said.

"for some time," DuBois said. "Nutcracker" is a ballet and a story which resonates in the minds and hearts of all ages. However, I believe the ballet holds special magic for young dancers. I know that I have many early memories of "Nutcracker" events and to this day, if I hear the music, I'm at least momentarily transfixed by those memories.

By developing special roles for younger dancers, they are able to have this wonderful experience without being expected to maintain the rigorous schedule of the older dancers. Patselas would like to continue to be in the "Nutcracker" when she's older.

This is a feeling understood by high school dancer Julianna Wise, who will dance with Patselas as she performs the role of Frau Stahlbaum, the hostess of the merry party.

This is Wise's eighth performance, and in addition to being Frau Stahlbaum, she is also a snowflake, jester, and will dance the Coffee Pas. She began her experience at age 9 as a party child, similar to Patselas. In addition, she was also a mouse and a candy petal her first year with YDT. Since that time, she counts 15 different dances that she has performed.

"As Frau Stahlbaum in this year's performance, I help to keep the children out of trouble, so I get to interact with some of the new guest dancers," Wise said. "I remember the feeling of being in the Nutcracker the first time. It's a little scary just to be in the big studio with so many older kids. Then you get to the stage and it's even more intimidating. I try to help the younger dancers so they feel at ease and excited about the performance."

Wise's poise and professionalism have grown through the years as she takes on bigger and more demanding dances. She knows that, in addition to performing, she and her fellow high school dancers are role models for the younger performers like Patselas who learn from Wise's example of hard work and dedication.

"Children always relate to other children, and I think that's part of the 'Nutcracker' appeal ... by using young dancers to speak (through dance) to other children, we help to facilitate a type of communication and connection to each other, to the ballet and to the performing arts in general," DuBois said.

The show will take place at 7 p.m. Dec. 3, 2 and 7 p.m. Dec. 4, and 2 p.m. Dec. 5. In addition, attendees can enjoy a special Sugar Plum Fairy Tea prior to each matinee at 12:30 p.m. on either Saturday or Sunday.

Performance tickets are $18 for adults and $12 for students. Separate tickets for the tea are required and are $12 per person. Tickets are available at www.youthdanceandtheatre.org.

users. "Once we have our staff trained on the Meryln, it will be available for the public to use," he said.

Harmer said the low vision center will probably open in the early part of 2011 as funding is awaiting approval from the Lions Club board.

"I submitted my proposal and now I'm just waiting to hear back," he said.

He said the center would be entirely funded by the Lions Club.

"We're lucky to have the Lions Club in Chelsea. Without them, we wouldn't be able to afford this equipment," Harmer said.

Lion Keith Bloomensaat said the club has agreed to fund the project but is also looking into ways to offset some of the cost.

"We're committed to the project and we're excited to offer it to the residents of Chelsea," he said.

Mobile demonstrations at the Chelsea Senior Center and Silver Maples will be scheduled to demo the equipment.

"We encourage people to come in and try the magnifiers once they arrive because we don't want anything sitting and collecting dust," Harmer said.

The library is also planning a recognition ceremony for the Lions Club at a later date.

EMU SWIMMING TO HOST THE EMU INVITATIONAL

Paid Advertisement

YPSILANTI, Mich. (EMUEagles.com) - Head Coach Peter Linn's Eastern Michigan University men's and women's swimming and diving teams will host the EMU Invitational this weekend, December 3-4. Competing against the Eagles at Jones Natatorium will be Bowling Green, Wayne State, Findlay, Michigan State, Toledo, Michigan, IUPUI, Ball State and Waterloo. Friday's action is slated for 3:30 p.m. and will pick back up on Saturday at 10 a.m.

THE QUARTER-CENTURY MARK: This weekend will mark the 25th consecutive season for the EMU Invite, as the men's team first introduced the invitational back in its 1985-86 season; which occurred on Dec. 6-7, 1985, and featured men's programs from Michigan, Miami Ohio, Kenyon, and Oakland. EMU placed second behind Michigan after posting a score of 827 points. The then-Hurons were led by Dave Cetlinski's NCAA National Championship qualifying time and pool record mark of 15:22.81 in the 1,850 freestyle. Cetlinski also captured the 200 yard freestyle victory in 1:41.46 and the 500 yard freestyle in 4:30.88. In addition, Cetlinski joined Dan Kieft, Mike Cashman, and Chris Black in winning the 800 yard freestyle relay crown in 6:51.43, edging the Michigan Wolverines by just four tenths of a second. On the boards, diver Tom Michael won the three-meter event with 478.40 points and was second in one-meter action with 475.95 points. Since that season, the EMU men's swimming and diving program has recorded 15 first place finishes in the invite.

LUCKY NUMBER 13: The men's squad will be going for their 13th consecutive first place finish this weekend after capturing their 12th consecutive EMU Invite victory in 2009-10. The impressive streak dates back to the 1997-98 season, where the Eagles scored 1137 points to clinch the top spot.

FOR THE 21ST TIME: On the women's side, this weekend will represent the 21st consecutive run in the invitational. The women's team has captured six first place victories since joining in on the EMU Invitational in the 1989-90 season, where they placed third with 541.5 points. Oakland won the event with 862 points, followed by Wright State at 604.5. The fourth through eighth place finishers were Michigan (535.5), Kenyon (434), Denison (234), Cleveland State (171.5), and Ferris State (122). EMU's Melanie Nelson broke a school record in the 100 breaststroke with her time on 1:05.42.

Imagine showing up at work where you have 110 employees and suddenly 65 of them are brand-spanking new and you don't know them from Adam.

Also imagine you get a memo that says a new CEO is on the way and he has never worked in your field, either.

And when these new folks show up, their first assignment is to fix your company budget, which is $1.6 billion out of whack.

If you have even an ounce of brains you should be going: Gulp!

Welcome to the Michigan Capitol Building, where in a matter of days that exact situation will begin to unfold.

Double gulp!!

Can you say, "inexperienced?"

Let's begin this sorry tale in the Michigan House of Representatives, where about 70 percent of the membership has never been there before. Term limits and the stunning election victory by the GOP combined to send 65 lawmakers into retirement, and with them, a boat load of institutional memory.

Among the new legislators you have a 23-year-old waitress; a 55-year-old trucking business owner; a 46-year-old, self-employed excavator; and a 63-year-old guy who owns a concrete company.

GUEST COLUMN

TIM SKUBICK

All of which will certainly qualify them to run state government starting on day one. The loss of hands-on experience in the 110-member House will be painfully evident when you look at the composition of the Appropriations Committee. It is the most important committee.

Get a load of this: There will be at least 15 new members on it, who are just like Gov.-elect Rick Snyder - i.e. hasn't been there, hasn't done that - yet they will be called upon to make critical financial decisions that will shape this state for years to come.

If there is any glimmer of hope in all this, it resides in the 38-member Michigan Senate, where the turnover was great but many of the new folks coming in have served in the House and they bring their experiences to the table.

There is also new leadership, where GOP leader Randy Richardville (R-Monroe) has a fine record of bipartisan cooperation, unlike Mike Bishop, who steadfastly blocked almost every move Gov. Jennifer Granholm made in that direction.

The new Senate Democratic leader, Gretchen Whitmer, is a veteran and her working relationship with Richardville will be dandy. She and he won't agree on everything, but they have the ability to talk and listen to each other, which is a huge plus.

There's also a new House speaker with two years under his belt. Rep. Jase Bolger (R-Marshall) is a bit of an unknown quantity. His Democratic counterpart is Rep. Rich Hammel of Flint.

At first blush they should be able to get along. So as we move into the holiday season, things are looking fairly rosy when it comes to potential cooperation.

Yet all the inexperience that engulfs the Capitol will make for some rough going. It's oh so easy to talk about peace, when the war has not yet begun.

Chances are that it is only a matter of time.

Tim Skubick is the host of the TV show "Off the Record" and blogs regularly at the newsherald.com's MiCentral.

The debate about how much government is too much has existed since the founding of the United States. There are those who say government - from the federal level on down to local municipalities - is too intrusive in our daily lives. Some people, though, will argue more government regulation is needed in certain areas.

Usually there's a fine, constantly moving line between too much and not enough or just right. The debate goes on endlessly. However, sometimes there seems to be no doubt that government is overstepping its bounds.

One such case is occurring in San Francisco, where a proposed city ordinance would ban McDonald's from putting toys in Happy Meals unless it adds fruit and vegetable portions and limits calories. The proposal would apply to all restaurants, but the focus has been on McDonald's and its Happy Meals.

Supervisor Eric Mar said he proposed the law to protect the health of his constituents. We find it nice that the city is so concerned about the health of its residents, particularly children. But we hope that type of ordinance stays on the West Coast.

Admittedly, people will bring up the state smoking ban in restaurants and say "what's the difference?"

They're both over the top. The answer is that while eating a high-fat, high-calorie meal may not be good for a person's health, if an individual wants to eat such food, that's his choice and it doesn't affect anyone else.

The same can't be said for smoking because of second-hand smoke and its dangers. We would think that if public officials want to help improve the health of their citizens and children, they should promote such efforts as Oakland County's Count Your Steps program.

Each year thousands of students at hundreds of elementary schools participate in the program, which generally runs from April to May.

Founded by Oakland County Executive L. Brooks Patterson to combat the growing epidemic of childhood obesity, it encourages children to walk more and count their steps using pedometers issued by sponsors. At the end of the year, students in classes with the largest combined number of steps win special prizes.

McDonald's and all of the fast-food chains are not pillars of healthy eating.

They never have been. And their advertising budget, which is geared to getting youngsters hooked on their menus, is in the billions of dollars. But in the final analysis, proper eating habits should not be ordered by government, but rather taught by parents.

Your Voice: Letters to the Editor

Writer should have shared more background

I took notice of a guest column in the Nov. 18 edition titled "Congress should end ObamaCare" by Sally Pipes of the Pacific Research Institute. Pipes says the "voters have spoken—they want Congress to scale back ObamaCare."

She writes about two provisions that need to be repealed or adjusted, then at the end of her piece, she writes, "...voters will have the chance to relieve Obama of his veto pen and press for the total repeal of the health reform law in 2013."

So the goal is not to "scale back" or fix the health care bill, it's to repeal the bill.

I bet if you ask most Americans about the following benefits of the bill, they may want to see these benefits continued:

- Adult children may remain as dependents on their parents' policy until their 26th birthday.
• Children under age 19 may not be excluded for pre-existing conditions.
• No more lifetime or annual caps on coverage.
• Adults with pre-existing conditions may buy into a national high-risk pool until the exchanges come online.
• Small businesses will be entitled to a tax credit for 2009 and 2010, which could be as much as 50 percent of what they pay for employees' health insurance.

• The "donut hole" closes for Medicare patients, making prescription medications more affordable for seniors.

• Requirement that all insurers must post their balance sheets on the Internet and fully disclose administrative costs, executive compensation packages, and benefit payments.

• Authorizes early funding of community health centers in all 50 states. Community health centers provide primary, dental and vision services to people in the community based on a sliding scale for payment according to ability to pay.

• No more rescissions. Effective immediately, you can't lose your insurance because you get sick.

These sound like good, sensible reforms to me. The right and the GOP has done a fine job scaring the American public with the talk of death panels, but have not been clear on how they intend to fix the health care problem, other than to repeal the current plan. That's no plan. America can not continue with a health care system the way it currently is.

Also, let's look at Sally Pipes, your author of the opinion piece from the Pacific Research Institute. Ms. Pipes is a Canadian citizen (socialized health care) residing in the United States who is the president of the Pacific Research Institute, a right-wing think tank based in California.

The PRI takes right-wing positions on all issues of public interest, and its funding comes from groups such as Altria (Philip Morris Tobacco), Pfizer, Phrma (Pharmaceutical Lobbyists), Exxon Mobil, Chevron Texaco, and foundations led by right-wing corporatists Charles Koch, Richard Mellon Scaife, the Walton family foundation (Walmart), and Kimberly Dennis of the Earhart Foundation, right here in Ann Arbor.

I believe that an opinion page is an essential part of a local newspaper; however, I also believe that long pieces such as Ms. Pipes' should have context and should be transparent in who writes it, why, and who funds the "research" that is done.

Don't be fooled by Pipes' guest column

Once again Heritage Newspapers has chosen to hand over its featured guest editorial column to another right-wing proponent. Sally Pipes quotes several polls to support her crusade to repeal health care legislation.

I am writing to give voice to the majority of Americans. In framing her crusade around repeal of "ObamaCare," Sally Pipes fails to address the larger picture of our failed health care system and the public's majority support for a single-payer, "Medicare for all" solution.

Sally Pipes quotes polls, but ignores the polls and facts that show the larger picture:

• The United States is the only industrialized country without universal health care. While we are spending 50 percent to 187 percent more per person on health than these other countries, we get far less and many millions go without any coverage at all.

Meanwhile life expectancy in the United States ranks behind 46 other nations and 42 nations have a lower infant mortality rate, including Hong Kong, Slovenia, and Cuba.

• Most Americans are in danger of bankruptcy and loss of their homes due to an illness. A total of 62 percent of personal bankruptcy filings in the United States are due to medical expenses. In 75 percent of those cases, the individuals had health care insurance.

Either the insurance company canceled their coverage when they became ill—a practice that is outlawed under ObamaCare—or their insurance proved inadequate. The total out-of-pocket medical costs for those who had insurance when they became ill is a steep $17,749, on average. For those who didn't have insurance, the average debt was $26,971.

• Since at least 1987, polls have shown the majority of the public favors a single-payer system.

• Medicare operates with 3 percent overhead, non-profit insurance 16 percent overhead, and private (for-profit) insurance 26 percent overhead. Paying 766 percent more in overhead to provide huge profits to private insurance companies is indefensible when we are talking about the life and health of yourself, your family and your neighbors.

Don't be fooled by those who try to divert your attention from the failed health care system and the public's united support for the only reasonable solution:

Get educated, tested as we mark World AIDS Day

The rate of HIV infection among the poorest Americans now matches that of Ethiopia and Angola.

A Centers for Disease Control and Prevention report said HIV was detected in 2.4 percent of American adults living at or below the federal poverty line. That's twice the rate of our general population, equaling the HIV rate among Ethiopians and Angolans.

Dec. 1 is World AIDS Day. And such reports remind us why we need this day.

Americans with the lowest incomes have the most difficulty accessing medical care, drugs and treatment, either because they lack health insurance or have no health care provider.

That's why UnitedHealthcare, through its United Health Foundation and partners in the communities we serve, funds federally qualified health centers that provide free or low-cost HIV testing in a safe and confidential setting. We know that regularly testing people most at risk for HIV and then providing HIV and AIDS patients with the antiretroviral drugs they need—dramatically reduces new infections. Without treatment or education, people will continue to transmit the virus to their partners.

Mentorship program participants give presentation for Board of Education

By Crystal Dunham
Special Writer

Students with the Chelsea High School mentorship program gave a brief presentation to the Board of Education at its meeting on Nov. 22.

Student Bobby Hall has been shadowing physicians at Chelsea Back Care. Through a PowerPoint presentation, he summarized his general observational and learning experiences.

"It (the mentorship program) has brought me closer to my educational and life goals," he said.

Student Steve Lesko did a video presentation, to match with his job shadowing at Russell Video in Ann Arbor. He said that his experience helped him to decide to major in film and video production in college, adding that he has been accepted to Grand Valley State University.

Brad Bush, who runs the program, said that the mentorship job shadowing experiences are planned through a combination of the students' own connections and Bush's help prior to the start of the school year.

In other action:

Navy Seaman Marcus S. Holben, grandson of John W. Holben of Pinckney, recently completed U.S. Navy basic training and was meritoriously promoted to his current rank at Recruit Training Command, Great Lakes, Ill.

During the eight-week program, Holben completed a variety of training, which included classroom study and practical instruction on naval customs, first aid, firefighting, water safety and survival, and shipboard and aircraft safety. An emphasis was also placed on physical fitness.

The capstone event of boot camp is "Battle Stations." This exercise gives recruits the skills and confidence they need to succeed in the fleet. "Battle Stations" is designed to galvanize the basic warrior attributes of sacrifice, dedication, teamwork and endurance in each recruit through the practical application of basic Navy skills and the core values of honor, courage and commitment.

Author to sign copies of new book

Chelsea resident Winifred Parker will debut her new book, "Two Pleasantly Scary Stories for Children" at the Just Imagine bookstore in Chelsea on Dec. 4. Parker will be available to sign books from 3 to 6 p.m. at the store, located at 108 E. Middle St.

Parker, affectionately known as "Winn," resides in Chelsea, with her husband, Joe. She has four children and seven grandchildren. Her grandson, Vince, has always asked her to tell a scary story. His request encouraged her to write this book. It is her first publication.

The book is composed of two stories, Book I and Book II. In Book I, the setting is Chelsea. The O'Brien family children and two of their friends help solve the mystery of the missing neighborhood dogs. In Book II, the setting is in the Black Hills of South Dakota at a ranch. The O'Brien children investigate the mysterious happenings at a local cave. The illustrations add to this enjoyable publication for children, family members and teachers.

response for a request by Frame Hardwoods, Inc. for an industrial facilities tax exemption.

The council voted to reappoint Chuck Schauer and Richard Bauer for another three-year term on the Zoning Board of Appeals. Schauer and Bauer's terms both expired in September.

The council voted to appoint Mary Schroer to the planning commission to fill a vacancy left by Rita Holmes. The term will expire in June 2012.

Daniel Lai is copy editor for the Chelsea Standard. He can be reached at 429-7380.

The board discussed the eighth grade Washington, D.C. trip planned for May. Requests for financial aid for students to go on the trip are higher than average this year, but scholarship funding is slightly down.

Superintendent David Killips reported current student enrollment numbers are down. He noted that the number of students in the kindergarten class has gone from 173 last year to 144 this year.

"The highest enrollment district-wide was in 2002 with 2,941 students," Killips said. "The 2010 enrollment, which includes students in programs that did not even exist in 2002, is 2,550."

Wayne Welton was voted Athletic Director of the Year for Region 6.

Sarah Conrad was voted the state's 'Students Leading Students' Student of the Year.

Sixth grade student Samantha Dunlap and seventh grade student Gabe Raines won their grade levels at the SEMMLAA spelling bee in Pinckney.

Ford Fiesta a comfortable, fuel-efficient subcompact

By Bryan Laviolette
CUNA REPORTER/NEAR SERVICE

The idea seemed preposterous: three people, one medium-sized dog, two sets of golf clubs (minus one of the bags), three duffel bags and all the usual paraphernalia, including 10 pairs of shoes, required for a long weekend at the lake. But how to stuff all that stuff in a subcompact? Yes, we knew there would be complaints, but we undertake this research for you, loyal readers.

Somehow, we crammed it all in. It looked like a clown car with all the people and stuff popping out of this Ford Fiesta upon arrival, but it illustrates a point — it's possible to travel comfortably in a subcompact. We even had room to take home a couple of gifts and knickknacks purchased at the annual crafts fair.

An added bonus was superb mileage: over a week spent with the Fiesta, mostly traveling on rural two lanes, we averaged 39 mpg. This thing doesn't so much sip fuel, it dabs a rag on it and wrings out every last drop.

Following a groundbreaking social media campaign, it seems that Ford's been telling us about the Fiesta for a long time. Now that it's here, it's easy to see what all the fuss was about. The Fiesta has fun styling details, nifty interior touches and some clever features. It's entertaining and easy to drive.

The Fiesta is available in two basic flavors, 4-door sedan and 5-door hatchback. Ford higher-ups apparently had to be convinced that it should offer the hatchback in the U.S. They had so much trouble moving hatchback versions of the original Ford Focus that they now only offer that car as 4- and 2-door sedans only.

Just a thought: maybe if Ford didn't charge a $800 premium for the smaller (by 13 inches) hatchback, it wouldn't have so much trouble moving them.

And the hatchback doesn't even come in the base S trim. Yes, I know, the hatchback has an extra door and all of the associated engineering, etc., but smaller often means cheaper. OK, I'll get off the soapbox now.

One of the coolest features of the Fiesta is its automated, manual 6-speed transmission. It was so smooth, I thought I'd remembered wrong that a regular slushbox automatic wasn't even an option in this car. It starts off from lights smoothly, shifts quickly and with little fuss.

Expect to see more of these transmissions in the future because they're more efficient than typical automatics with their power-robbing torque converters.

As much as we enjoyed the transmission, there are a few criticisms. Oddly, it was sometimes reluctant to offer a downshift when requested, a surprise because the computer "an" shift so much more quickly than a driver with a clutch pedal and gearshift. Also, it would be even more fun if it offered manual shifting.

There are two reasons for the lack of manual shifting. First is the obvious one, cost. Second is the computer will always do a better job choosing when to shift than a human when the goal is efficiency. And this car is about big-time fuel economy.

On that count, Ford did very well. It's rated at 30 city and 40 highway. Want better fuel economy? Buy a hybrid, but don't expect to pay Fiesta prices for a new one.

The Fiesta is powered by a 1.6-liter 4-cylinder making 120 hp. and 112 lb-ft of torque. It may not sound like much, but the little engine has less than 2,600 pounds to drag around via its front wheels.

Acceleration is rather tepid, but the engine revs smoothly.

The Fiesta's electric-assist power steering is sharp and has good feedback. The car handles pavement imperfections superbly. There's no torque steer.

Complaints? There are a couple. First, the rear of the car seems floaty at freeway speeds, particularly when unloaded. Not surprising for a car of this size, because crosswinds tend to push it around a bit.

But the biggest criticism revolves around the Fiesta's convoluted infotainment system. The Fiesta was largely designed by Ford's European group and it shows.

For some reason, Europeans must be willing to accept arcane menus and difficult-to-understand operations. They must enjoy the novelty of buttons that would seem to be designed to perform a task, but don't. For example, after finding my way to one particular screen, I decided to just go back to the radio, believing that pushing the "radio" button would take me there. But it wouldn't.

And why, with 10 buttons on the steering wheel, do none of them control the radio volume? Even the Sync voice button is relegated to the turn signal stalk.

Hey, Ford: Tell the European office that you're taking control of all infotainment design and functionality. Cars like the new Edge show that you're good at it. Don't worry, the Euros will get used to entertainment systems that make sense.

Fiestas start at $13,995 (including destination), for a base S sedan with a 5-speed manual transmission. The Fiesta Hatch SE — the lowest-priced hatchback available tested here starts at $15,795. With upgraded stereo, automatic trans, ambient lighting package, Sirius satellite radio, heated front seats and the Super Fuel Economy Package (P195/60 15-inch tires, cruise control, painted aluminum wheels), the as-tested price rang the cash register to the tune of $18,820.

Typical of cars in this price range, there's no center armrest, which makes long drives less than comfortable because there's no where to rest your right elbow. Surprisingly, Ford doesn't even list one as an accessory, which isn't typical.

The seats are Euro stiff, but they're comfortable. There's plenty of lateral support for the car's cornering ability.

The upholstery in the test car was black with cool blue stitching and accents.

The oversize rear headrests require the front seats to be moved forward to lower the

This thing doesn't so much sip fuel, it dabs a rag in it and wrings out every last drop.

rear seats. Also, those massive headrests block rearward vision, although the center headrests slides into the seatback.

The Fiesta isn't very wide and those who are a little wide in the beam will find that some parts hang off the sides of the seats a bit. Rear seat riders will find deeply scalloped front seatbacks and decent headroom. Legroom is limited by cooperation from those in the front seats.

There's a surprising 15.4 cubic feet of space behind the second row. Fold the rear seats and that number climbs to a unimpressive 26 cubes. The load floor isn't flat.

Shockingly, the Honda Fit, which is just 1.5 inches longer, squeezes 21 cubic feet behind its rear seats and a station-wagon-like 57 cubes with the rear seats folded.

So if storage space is a priority, the Fiesta isn't the best choice. But there's a ton of safety technology packed in here, including seven airbags, traction control and stability control.

While this might not be in keeping with the Fiesta's fuel-efficient mission, a sport-minded model might be a fun addition to the Fiesta lineup.

Firm up the suspension, give it better brakes and some paddle shifters for that cool transmission and it could be a lot of fun. Extra horsepower is always welcome, but it isn't entirely necessary to increase the Fiesta's fun quotient.

Fewer trips to the gas station are the Fiesta's calling card. And that's the main reason Ford will see a steady stream of customers who are interested in its new little fuel dabbler.

2011 Dodge Charger

A little more nostalgia without trampling a legend

By Malcolm Gunn
Webbase Media

The new 2011 Charger isn't so much brand new as it is restyled, refined and ready to strut its stuff with its upgraded powertrain lineup.

The big-dog Dodge has been around in its current format since the 2006 model year, one year following the launch of its platform-shared Chrysler 300 relation. Since then it has become the go-to choice for buyers seeking a traditional rear-wheel-drive sedan with pedal-to-the-metal performance in a practical wrapper.

Given that Chrysler has been undergoing a corporate overhaul since Fiat took over, several of the 2011 offerings have been delayed past the usual fall window. Honestly, six months ago, there was no guarantee that there would even be a Dodge Charger, so enthusiasts will be happy to know that a revamped 2011 model will arrive early in the new year.

It's hardly a carryover year, either, as the Charger sports a number of upgrades to tempt those whose long for those bygone musclecar days, tempered with the practicalities of 21st-century family life. That has actually been the Charger's strong suit all along.

The car's new nose-piece includes an aggressive and more prominent (think snout) cross-hair grille. In addition, a new aluminum hood has twin "scallops" that hint at the available power lurking beneath.

The altered roofline has a more steeply raked windshield as part of a 15-percent increase in glass area that helps lessen the car's bottom-heavy appearance. In back, a full-width taillamp (an homage to the second-generation 1970 Charger) is encircled by 164 tiny light-emitting diode mini-lamps that call attention to the entire panel.

The Charger now sits slightly closer to the ground, which also reduces the gap between the tires and the fender lips.

The more planted appearance is backed up by a thoroughly revised suspension that Dodge says improves the car's road-holding and high-speed cornering agility, while enhancing ride quality.

Interior upgrades were also a top priority and on that issue Dodge's design team had its work cut out for it. The upgraded seat coverings and redesigned dashboard that's now covered in premium "soft-touch" material shows improved attention to detail. As well, Dodge claims that added sound-deadening materials and improved door seals place the Charger on an equal footing with the BMW 5-series in terms of cabin quietness.

Beyond reducing intrusive noises, Dodge has also cut back on the Charger's engine selection, but dramatically improved the base V6 in the process. For 2011, both the 178-horsepower 2.7-liter V6 and mid-grade 250-horsepower 3.5-liter V6 have been replaced with an all-new 292-horsepower 3.6-liter unit.

The 3.6 is the exclusive domain of the base SE trim level, while the R/T gets the 370-horsepower 5.7-liter "Hemi" V8 that carries over virtually unaltered from the 2010 model year. It includes a fuel-saving system that shuts down four of the eight cylinders under light- or zero-load conditions, then instantly fires them up again when needed. Dodge claims that the 5.7 pushes the Charger to 60 mph in less than six seconds.

For the time being, both engines are connected to five-speed automatic transmissions, but a plan is afoot to connect the Hemi to an eight-speed automatic in the interests of reducing fuel consumption.

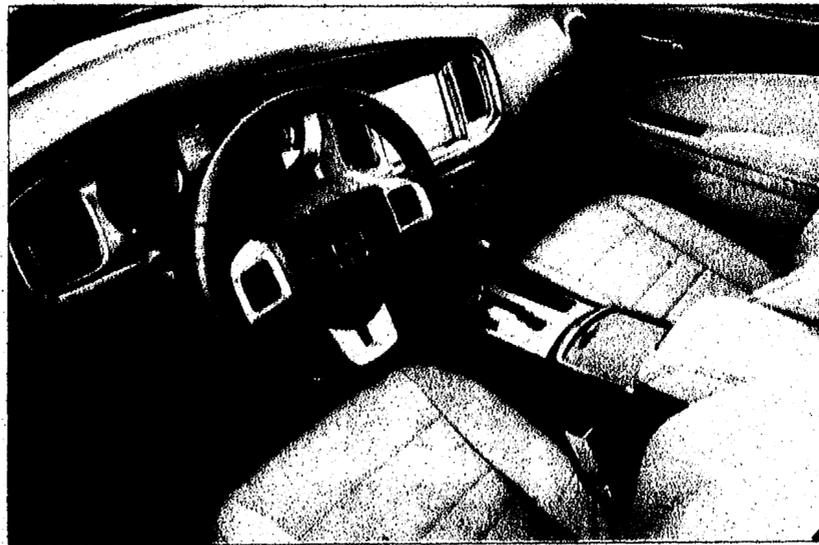

Conspicuously absent this time around is the high-performance Charger SRT8 (425-horsepower 6.1-liter V8), even though the Dodge Challenger coupe, by contrast, ramps up with a new 470-horsepower SRT package.

Ordering the Hemi allows the purchaser to select the available on-demand all-wheel-drive system that comes with a fuel-saving front-axle disconnect that hooks up only when needed, improving fuel efficiency by a claimed five-percent in the process.

Final content details have yet to be released, but there will be several specific option groupings for both the SE, and R/T models. That should be plenty to please a wide range of buyers who enjoy the look and feel of a sporting sedan with the capacity to move you in more ways than one.

The car's new nose-piece includes an aggressive and more prominent (think snout) cross-hair grille. In addition, a new aluminum hood has twin "scallops" that hint at the available power lurking beneath.

Looking a little more European than Chrysler, the Charger shows stylish and detailed interior upgrades. Integrating the display screen with the gauge package in a very wide driver display is quite unique and refreshing.

Restaurant urges patrons to become organ donors

Paesano Restaurant in Ann Arbor is partnering with Gift of Life Michigan and its Donor Drive 2010 to raise awareness of the need for organ donation.

The restaurant will stage a drive for its employees and customers to enroll as many organ donors as possible. In addition, Paesano will give away special gifts as part of the program.

Starting Dec. 8 and running through Dec. 17, Gift of Life will sign up donors during lunch at the restaurant from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

It's part of a massive statewide campaign to add a million names to the Michigan Organ Donor Registry.

"We're happy to help this wonderful organization and have had great enthusiasm from our employees to help," said Paesano owner Michael Roddy in a news release.

"I think our customers will also be supportive during the holiday season and give the gift of life."

Michigan ranks 42nd nationwide in the percentage of registered drivers who have officially expressed their wish to someday become organ, eye and tissue donors.

Last year in Michigan, 288 people donated organs, and this was not nearly enough to meet the need.

Adding a million names to the state's confidential database will bring Michigan in line with the national average of 39 percent.

"There is a critical need for life-saving organs in our state, so Michigan needs more residents to commit to giving organs and tissues," said Roddy.

"It could be the only chance some of us have to save a life, and we want to help in any way that we can."

Part of the reason Michigan lags behind other states is that most residents aren't aware that signing the back of a Michigan driver's license or state ID isn't enough to be a donor anymore.

Residents now must join the Michigan Organ Donor Registry by going online to www.giftoflifemichigan.org, by calling 1-800-482-4881, visiting the Secretary of State branch office, or coming to Paesano the week of Dec. 8 to 17 during lunch and registering in person.

After joining the Michigan Organ Donor Registry, a red heart logo will be placed on the individual's Michigan driver's license or state identification, indicating that person's wish to someday be a donor. Gift of Life Michigan is located in Ann Arbor and is the state's only federally designated organ recovery organization.

Paesano's Restaurant is located at 3411 Washtenaw Ave. in Ann Arbor. For more information, call 971-0484 or visit www.paesanosannarbor.com.

Website developers give back through GiveCamp

Volunteers at Ann Arbor GiveCamp provided new websites or web applications for free to 13 charitable organizations in southeastern Michigan, including Hope Clinic International, Leslie Science and Nature Center, Red Beard Press and Talkin' Proper, all based in Ann Arbor.

Ann Arbor GiveCamp was held Sept. 17 through 19 at Washtenaw Community College.

GiveCamp is a weekend-long event where software developers, designers and database administrators donate their time to create custom software for nonprofit organizations.

Nonprofit groups submitted applications to attend, and their proposed project had to something that could be completed in a weekend.

Hope Clinic International builds medical clinics and provides free medical care for women and children in Nicaragua.

This organization was given a new website that president Sheryl Snyder says is more in keeping with the doctors and nurses they need to attract for the work.

"For small nonprofits who can't afford huge amounts of money to do their website, it levels the playing field," Snyder said.

"We have a site that's at a professional level, which helps us increase our donor base and more," Snyder said. Leslie Science and Nature Center attended its second GiveCamp this year to finish off a large, complicated project started last year.

The center needed a web-based scheduling program to keep track of the many programs and participants it accommodates each year.

"We were doing all of this work before by paper trail," said Karen Rendell, business manager at the center. The new system saves hours of work, she said. "With the click of a mouse we can see what we have available, what staff are available," Rendell said.

This year, a team of developers helped tweak the system to expand its capabilities and make it even more user-friendly.

"Both years have been phenomenal," Rendell said. Without GiveCamp, Rendell says the center could not have afforded the estimated $22,000 in work done last year or the additional $6,000 worth of help received this year.

GiveCamp organizer Michael Eaton estimates that volunteers donated a little more than 1,400 hours.

Using an average rate of $75 an hour for their work, he said Ann Arbor GiveCamp provided $105,000 of free service to 13 charities and nonprofit organizations.

Similar GiveCamps are held annually in Grand Rapids and Lansing.

This was the third Ann Arbor GiveCamp.

Website connects volunteers, nonprofits

The Blueprint for Aging, sponsored by Catholic Social Services of Washtenaw County, recently announced its new volunteer website, VolunteerWashtenaw.org.

True to its slogan, "Something Worth Doing," the site connects local nonprofit organizations with people who want to find worthwhile ways of giving back to the community.

An array of nonprofit organizations, including youth, senior, environmental and health-based groups, have already registered and entered their volunteer opportunities on the site. Advanced matching functionality makes the site easy and helpful to people of all ages looking to find the ideal volunteering opportunities.

With a few clicks of the mouse, users can browse through all organizations posted on the site or they can search by type of volunteering or days or number of hours wanted.

Once users get to the nonprofit sites, they can view the opportunities available, and, if interested, submit their names so that the nonprofit organizations can contact them.

VolunteerWashtenaw.org is designed for those looking for ways to help their community as well as those looking for ways to fulfill court-appointed community service requirements.

It is also designed to give nonprofit organizations a state-of-the-art vehicle to communicate their opportunities.

Ann Arbor residents Dr. Michael Zelenock and his wife, Jean, enjoy a recent visit from Senior Helpers caregiver Katie Herzog.

Local community helps families impacted by Alzheimer's disease

Senior Helpers offers steps to combat affliction

By Sheila Pursglove
Special Writer

November was National Alzheimer's Awareness Month, drawing attention to the progressive brain disease, which is the most prevalent form of dementia and sixth leading cause of death in this country.

But for many Americans, awareness doesn't stop with one month. They and their loved ones struggle daily with problems of memory loss, thinking and behavior that eventually become so severe that sufferers can no longer carry on a conversation or respond to their environment.

Sheila Doeden and Alan Caldwell are only too well aware of the heartbreak caused by Alzheimer's. Co-owners and co-managers of Senior Helpers Ann Arbor, they provide caregivers for non-medical personal home care services, and help seniors keep their minds sharp, engaged and healthy.

"Senior Helpers strongly encourages mental and physical activity for our clients, as much as possible," Caldwell said. "Keeping active mentally and physically is very important, and contributes to delaying the progression of Alzheimer's disease, and dementia in general."

The Senior Helpers team is helping Dr. Michael Zelenock take care of his wife, Jean. The Zelenocks, both 87, live at University Living, an independent and assisted living facility on South Main Street in Ann Arbor. Senior Helpers, with 300 franchises in 42 states providing in-home senior care, is accredited as an Alzheimer's Association Early Detection Alliance Champion, with innovative in-home programs.

Arbor:

"The most important thing in my life is my wife," Michael Zelenock said. "She doesn't like to be left out. It's very important for her to be a part of the conversation, otherwise she feels left out."

"If she can't be a part of things, she doesn't feel like she's living," Doeden, Jean has limited functionality, but Senior Helpers does as much as possible to keep her active.

"She enjoys getting out to the dining room, and likes to participate in meal time conversations," Doeden said.

The Zelenock's son, Tom, lives in the area, and frequently visits his parents.

"I bring the dogs to visit, and mom can decide and vocalize what her favorite is," he said. "Small talk is key for mom, talking about things that I'm doing."

"It's hard for my mom, realizing she isn't able to process, and it's hard for me, knowing I can't make it better."

Gertrude Soviar, 91, is another client of Senior Helpers. Stricken with Alzheimer's, Soviar has limited functionality, and lives with her daughter and son-in-law, Linda and Jerry Gonto.

Caregivers help the couple take care of Soviar, and work to keep her physically active, getting her outside on walks as much as possible. They also keep her mentally active, fostering good conversations, reminiscing with old photographs, and reading magazines with her.

"It's very hard for mom that she can't express herself verbally," Linda Gonto said. "She unpacks the groceries, unloads the dishwasher, and folds and puts away the laundry. She tells the time, and reads magazines. Staying active helps her feel like she still has control over certain aspects of her life, and like she still has a purpose."

"I often think, 'Is this for real?' I can't even believe this is happening."

Senior Helpers, with 300 franchises in 42 states providing in-home senior care, is accredited as an Alzheimer's Association Early Detection Alliance Champion, with innovative in-home programs.

"One of the most important things we do is to educate seniors across the area and their families," said founder and CEO Peter Ross.

"There is no cure in sight for Alzheimer's, but research has proven time and time again that exercise for the body and mind are two of the best ways to prevent the onset and progression of the disease."

"We have some great activities and programs in place to help seniors work their muscles and their brains on a daily basis so they can stay healthy and sharp."

Prevention programs include "Brainy Day Activities," a product of HippoCampus Headquarters, offering specially designed games and puzzles; "Life Bio Journal," from LifeBio.com, helping seniors chronicle their life story in a journal that works the memory, verbalizes thoughts and provides a keepsake for family members; and exercise, getting seniors up and moving to increase cardio and muscular health.

"When a loved one develops Alzheimer's, it affects the whole family," Ross says. "Caring for Alzheimer's and dementia patients can be difficult physically and emotionally. Sometimes families need help from a trained, certified professional caregiver. This is especially important for people who can't see their elderly loved ones on a regular basis or for those who live far away."

Coats sought for needy

The Charles Reinhart Co. is collecting new and gently used coats during the company's 15th annual coat drive.

The coat drive, which kicked off in mid-October, will collect coats to be donated to more than 20 local agencies.

More than 13,000 coats have been collected throughout the company's 14 previous coat drives. Employees of Charles Reinhart Co. said that, this year, they are struggling to collect as many coats as in previous years.

New and gently used winter coats are being collected at all of the Reinhart Sales offices, as well as all Sunday open houses.

To see a list of open houses, visit http://reinhartrealtors.com/open_houses.

Capital Cleaners, Chelsea Cleaners and Gold Bond Cleaners have donated their services to professionally wash the coats before they are distributed to local agencies.

"The coat drive is an event

More than 13,000 coats have been collected throughout the company's 14 previous coat drives.

our agents have embraced and the local community has supported for 14 years," said Bill Miller, general manager of the Charles Reinhart Co., in a news release.

"In these difficult economic times, the need for winter coats is even greater. We are working hard, with the support of our community, to provide the warmth needed for those less fortunate in our communities."

WriteSteps named 'Best of Bootcamp'

Ann Arbor SPARK celebrated the conclusion of its 18th Boot Camp program with participant investor pitches and a reception on Nov. 16 at the SPARK Central business incubator.

At the Ann Arbor SPARK Boot Camp celebration, WriteSteps was selected as the "Best of Boot Camp" winner, based on the quality of its investor pitch and business plan, and will receive $5,000 in business consulting services.

Ann Arbor SPARK's Boot Camp is a two-day business planning and preparation event designed to help early stage technology businesses. Boot Camp combines hands-on learning and one-on-one mentoring, and the event features noted speakers on entrepreneurship, successful local entrepreneurs and investors.

"The experience at Boot Camp has been invaluable for WriteSteps," said Suzahne Klein, founder and CEO, in a news release.

"Boot Camp provided the tools for us to become more focused and has given us the confidence and knowledge we need to launch our national efforts. WriteSteps will be the first web-based writing curriculum for elementary teachers that meets the new national standards."

WriteSteps provides elementary school teachers with techniques and strategies to meet National Common Core Standards Initiatives standards for writing, including easy-to-use lesson modules tailored for each grade level.

Each module includes complete lessons demonstrated on video, as well as downloadable lesson material to use in the classroom.

Also at the Boot Camp celebration, Tyler Paxton of Are You a Human was awarded "Best Pitch" by the judges. AYAH is creating and marketing a human authentication applet for use on websites.

Ann Arbor SPARK's expanded Boot Camp program includes "after care" that helps further the likelihood of entrepreneurial success for participating start-ups.

At the conclusion of Boot Camp, every graduating company receives complimentary access to three months of services designed to accelerate their business and fulfill milestones identified during Boot Camp.

- Those services include:
 - SPARK Entrepreneur Resource Board.
 - Business introductions from Boot Camp mentors.
 - Power lunch.
 - Entrepreneur education programs.
 - Funding Fundamentals workshop.

The next scheduled Ann Arbor SPARK Boot Camp is May 5 and 6, 2011. Applications will be accepted starting Jan. 11, 2011.

Boot Camp participants that receive early decision admission receive complimentary entrepreneur education programs prior to the spring 2011 Boot Camp.

Ann Arbor SPARK is a nonprofit organization with the mission of establishing the Ann Arbor region as a destination for business expansion, retention and location. The nonprofit helps business at every stage, from startups to large organizations.

Study finds model doesn't apply to melanoma

University of Michigan researchers have determined that most types of melanoma cells can form malignant tumors, providing new evidence that the deadliest form of skin cancer does not conform to the increasingly popular cancer stem cell model.

In addition, the researchers found that melanoma tumor cells can change their appearance by switching various genes on and off, making the malignant cells a stealthy, shape-shifting target for researchers seeking new treatments, according to a team led by Sean Morrison, director of the U of M Center for Stem Cell Biology.

Both findings fly in the face of the cancer stem cell model, which states that a handful of rare melanoma stem cells drive the formation, growth and progression of malignant tumors in many cancers.

Some supporters of the model have suggested that melanoma might be more effectively treated by taking aim specifically at these rare cancer stem cells, rather than attempting to eliminate all melanoma cells.

But after conducting an exhaustive search for this elusive sub-population of tumor-forming melanoma cell, the U of M team concluded that it probably does not exist.

The researchers analyzed 44 sub-populations of human melanoma cells, and all 44 had a similar ability to form tumors when transplanted into mice.

"Some have suggested that melanoma follows a cancer stem cell model in which only rare cells are able to proliferate extensively and form new tumors," said Morrison, a Howard Hughes Medical Institute investigator in a news release.

"Our results suggest that most melanoma cells are capable of driving disease progression and that it won't be possible to cure patients by targeting rare sub-populations of cells," Morrison said. "We think you need to kill all the cells."

The team's findings were published Nov. 16 in the journal Cancer Cell. The first authors of the paper are Elsa Quintana of the U of M Center for Stem Cell Biology, based at the Life Sciences Institute, and Mark Shackleton, formerly with the Morrison lab and now at the Peter MacCallum Cancer Center in Melbourne, Australia.

The study found that tumor-forming melanoma cells have the ability to throw a genetic switch that changes the types of proteins expressed on the cells' surface. The study is the first to present evidence for this type of pervasive "pheno-

The Nature article demonstrated that tumor-forming melanoma cells are not rare, as predicted by the cancer stem cell model.

The researchers determined that at least one-quarter of melanoma cells have the ability to form new tumors.

typic plasticity" among melanoma cells from patients.

Patterns of surface proteins are used to identify different cell types and are commonly called cell surface markers.

"The fact that these markers are turned on and off by melanoma cells raises the possibility that melanoma cells may also turn on and off genes that regulate clinically important characteristics like drug resistance and metastatic ability," Morrison said.

"The ability to transition between various states may make melanoma more difficult to treat."

The authors stress that while their results argue against a cancer stem cell model for melanoma, their findings do not invalidate the model. In fact, certain leukemias and other cancers appear to follow the model.

"It will be critical to determine which cancers follow a stem cell model and which do not, so therapies designed to target rare sub-populations of cells are not inappropriately tested in patients whose disease is driven by many diverse cancer cells," Quintana said.

The cancer stem cell model assumes that cells differing in marker expression also differ in function and that only a very small subset of cancer cells displaying the critical marker pattern — less than 1 percent of cancer cells — can form tumors.

The model proposes that most of the cancer cells that compose tumors have little or no capacity to proliferate or to contribute to disease progression.

"The cancer stem cell model says that tumor cells are organized hierarchically, and that only the cells at the top of the hierarchy form tumors. Cells at the bottom of the hierarchy can't," Morrison said.

However, the Morrison laboratory was unable to find any subset of melanoma cells that lacked the ability to form tumors.

"In our model, all these cells can form tumors," he said.

"And they're phenotypically different from each other, not because they're hierarchically organized, but because they're just turning these surface markers on and off."

The U of M team found that all tumor-forming melanoma cells gave rise to progeny with a variety of marker patterns, and that all of those sub-populations retained the ability to form tumors.

The marker changes appeared to be reversible, rather than being associated with a transition from tumor-forming to non-tumor-forming states, as the cancer stem cell model would predict.

The Cancer Cell paper follows up on work reported by the Morrison lab in the Dec. 4, 2008, edition of the journal Nature.

The Nature article demonstrated that tumor-forming melanoma cells are not rare, as predicted by the cancer stem cell model. The researchers determined that at least one-quarter of melanoma cells have the ability to form new tumors.

Melanoma kills more than 8,000 Americans each year.

The human melanoma cells used in this study were provided — with the patients' permission — from the U of M's Multidisciplinary Melanoma Program, one of the country's largest melanoma programs and part of the U of M Comprehensive Cancer Center.

"These new findings significantly advance our understanding of melanoma," said cutaneous oncologist Dr. Timothy Johnson, director of the U of M melanoma program and a co-author of the Cancer Cell paper.

"This type of groundbreaking discovery achieves our core objective of combining clinical studies with laboratory research to develop new and better treatments for optimal patient care," Johnson said.

In addition to Morrison, Quintana, Shackleton and Johnson, the paper's authors are Hannah Foster of the Center for Stem Cell Biology; Dr. Douglas Fullen, associate professor of pathology and associate professor of dermatology at the Medical School; and Dr. Michael Sabel, associate professor of surgery at the Medical School.

Foreign student enjoys time in U.S.

Local couple finds joy in teen transfer program

By Krystle Dunham
Special Writer

Sanna Laakkonen has only been living in Chelsea for a couple of months. But the 17-year-old Finnish girl is already finding the small town atmosphere to be quite special.

"Here I feel like almost everyone knows each other. It's a little community," Laakkonen said.

Laakkonen, who is originally from Espoo, Finland, is an exchange student at Chelsea High School this year.

She is currently living with a local host family, as part of the Youth For Understanding USA program.

And as part of the program, she will spend the next year as a senior at CHS and will participate in all of the senior functions throughout the year, including prom and graduation in June.

The program prepares young people for their responsibilities and opportunities in a changing and interdependent world. It has been a leader in youth exchange programs in more than 60 countries since 1951. Each year, more than 4,000 students participate in the programs worldwide.

The goal of the organization is for YFU students to gain skills and perspectives that help them meet the challenges and opportunities of the global community.

Rick Benson of Chelsea and his wife, Joni, who are the host family for Laakkonen, first became familiar with the YFU program a few years ago. The couple had found a notice in their church bulletin from St. Mary's church and decided that they wanted to get involved with the program in August 2008.

Benson said the decision to be involved didn't happen overnight. He said the couple was worried that they might not meet the requirements to be a host family, because their three children are all grown up and have started their own families.

"So many people think that if they don't have a student to send over somewhere, they can't be a part of the organization," Benson said. "This is so not true. There are all different shapes and sizes of families that can be host families through YFU."

Before the couple welcomed Laakkonen into their home in August, they had the privilege to be a host family for three other exchange students. The students were from Germany, Thailand and China.

Joni said in order for her and Rick to become a host family, they filled out an application through YFU. The organization then did a home study, criminal background check and a reference check.

Once that part of the process was successfully completed, the couple decided whether they would like to house a boy or girl from the country of their choice.

The Bensons then started looking at different biographies of students that were enrolled with the organization and decided which teenager would be the best fit for them.

Benson said that the couple wanted to host a student from Finland, and Laakkonen seemed to meet their needs.

Laakkonen's interest in bowling and cheerleading, as well as the letter she wrote to her prospective host family gave the couple a sense of what type of teenager Laakkonen truly is.

"You just get a gut feeling on whether they are a good fit," said Joni, who is now a YFU volunteer area representative for Chelsea.

Laakkonen said the process for a student to be involved with YFU is also just as time consuming, which includes a large amount of paperwork. But, she said it was well worth it.

Since arriving in August, Laakkonen joined the CHS cheerleading team and is a member of St. Mary's youth group.

Benson said the couple wanted to make sure when Laakkonen arrived in Chelsea that she would be able to adjust quickly to the new lifestyle she would have.

They thought the cheerleading team and the youth group would offer her the opportunity to meet other teens and make new friends.

When Benson first dropped off Laakkonen at the youth group, he said she was a bit shy and quiet.

Sanna Laakkonen, an exchange student from Espoo, Finland, is living the life of an American high school senior at Chelsea High School. She lives with Rick and Joni Benson, who are her host family. She is also a member of the bowling team and the cheerleading squad.

But, when Benson picked her up a couple hours later, something had changed.

"It was like night and day when I picked her up," he said. "She made friends."

Laakkonen said she admitted when she first left Finland and headed to the United States, she feared it would be very hard to be away from home.

She said she was concerned she would have a hard time meeting new people and struggle with the English language.

However, Laakkonen said she has adjusted more to the small community feel of Chelsea and has already made so many memories and friends, whom she plans on staying in touch with when she leaves at the end of June.

"I really like the school here, better than back home," she said. Laakkonen, who had 20 schools to choose from when picking what high school she would attend.

"Chelsea High School has great school spirit," she said.

As the school year continues, Laakkonen said she looks forward to attending the Winter Carnival, prom, and graduation, where she will receive an honorary diploma.

She also looks forward to receiving her varsity letter in cheerleading, being a part of the high school's bowling team, and traveling to Minnesota for Christmas, where the Bensons have family there.

For those who are interested in becoming a host family, contact Joni Benson at 1-248-939-3120.

Local residents featured in holiday craft show

By Sheila Pursglove
Special Writer

Pat Simonelli created her first teddy bear in memory of her father. The Saline resident went on to become a "bear artist" who travels to bear shows around the country, and whose critters — they include rabbits, cats and elephants — are featured on collector websites.

Her bears will be on sale at the "All the Trimmings Holiday Show" 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Dec. 4 at the Chelsea Fairgrounds Service Building, 20501 Old US-12, in Chelsea.

An Ypsilanti native, Simonelli has been creative since childhood, with a particular passion for sewing.

After running a home-based dog grooming business for more than 20 years, she turned to interior decorating when her two children were grown. Years of dog grooming and having dogs as pets played an important part of the facial expressions on her bears.

"The bear making has been an extension of my love for animals," she said. "Making bears is so much fun. Each one seems to have its own personality."

Simonelli sews her bears on an antique Featherweight Singer sewing machine. Many are one-of-a-kind creations. She does a lot of hand-dyeing of mohair, creating different looks, and uses mohair remnants for smaller bears.

Known mostly for panda bears, Simonelli mixes fabrics and colors. Her bears are vintage style, from 9 to 24 inches in size, with paws of recycled leather and suede from coats and other clothing.

Chelsea resident and quilt maker Lynn Harris has been sewing and quilting since she was 9 years old, and made her first quilt when she was 12. Inspired to sew by her mother and encouraged by her grandmother, the Virginia native also is an avid knitter, and can crochet, tat, spin and embroider.

An engineering graduate from Virginia Tech, Harris said she loves the geometry of quilts, and finds the blending of fabric, pattern and symmetry a fun process with infinite possibilities.

Her appliqué quilt, "Childhood's End," was included in the national 2002 American Quilt Show, and two of her mini quilts were recently published in "Pretty Little Mini Quilts" by Lark Books.

Harris will display and sell quilts of all sizes, pouches, purses, small bead knit amulet necklaces, children's aprons and oven mitts, note cards, her original knit patterns for socks, and more.

As a child, folk artist Sandra Somers found Victorian houses awe-inspiring. Those images live on in her primitive folk art, rural and small town scenes full of old buildings, barns, young children and animals.

"I loved those wonderful, big old houses," she said. "Old buildings have such interest. I think they speak to us."

A national leader in the field of country and folk art paintings, Somers has exhibited her scenes of small-town and rural life in several of the historic buildings at Greenfield Village in Dearborn and at the University of Michigan Taubman Center in Ann Arbor, and her work "Around the Hearth" appeared on holiday greeting cards to benefit the Ann Arbor Ronald McDonald House.

She creates her paintings, lithographs and note cards in her farmhouse studio in New Boston, and has won awards for paintings of local scenes.

Somers, who holds a fine arts degree from the University of Michigan and who taught art in Wayne-Westland schools, said her images are very history-oriented, and that costuming the characters is fun. Her paintings are like stories, and her images, often full of animals and children, are very homespun. Several are Victorian.

The most senior artisan at the show is 91-year-old Larry Ogden, a retired geologist who has been doing counted cross-stitch since 1991, designing his own patterns of local birds, and stitching and framing them. He is the father of the show organizers Marlene Dushbier and Susie Ogden, both artists from Chelsea.

"Susie and I are both optimistic about this year's show since it has grown every year in attendance and sales," Dushbier said. "Many items are purchased as gifts for the holiday season. It appears to be a trend for shoppers to buy hand-made, locally made gifts."

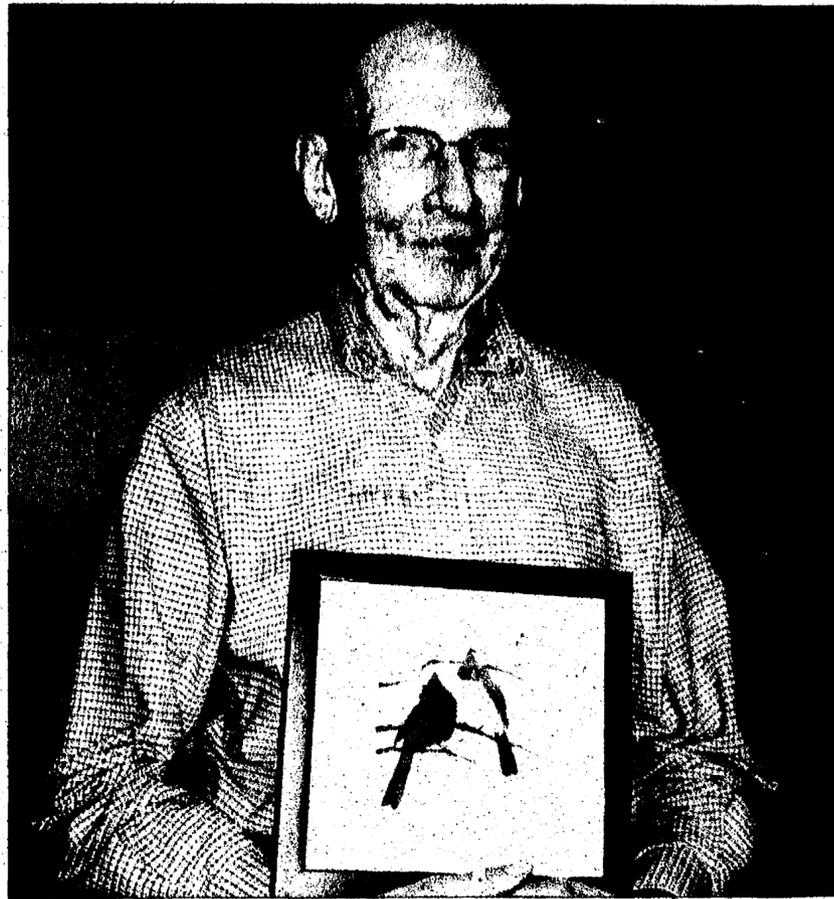

"We have a wonderful group of returning artisans, but also make an effort to find new, aspiring talent to help get them started in a friendly atmosphere."

"We think it's a fun show as most of our customers have also become our friends and return annually for the social atmosphere. The Hometown Holiday connection is beneficial for both show and local merchants. Our customers are often heard asking about the other festivities in town."

Other featured artisans are Jo Kladyk, Lynn Krawczyk, Deb Kureth, Kris Miller, Chris Purcell, Jan Schmidt, Kay Silkworth, Ginger Sissom, Doug Stevens, Wendy and Larry St. Antoine, and Margaret Stech.

Admission is free, and there is free parking and refreshments. For more information, visit www.allthetrimmingshow.blogspot.com.

Political cartoonist to promote new book Thursday

By Sheila Pursglove
Special Writer

Nationally syndicated political cartoonist and author Ted Rall will visit Ann Arbor to promote his new book, "The Anti-American Manifesto," a manifesto for an America heading toward economic and political collapse.

While others mourn the damage to the postmodern American capitalist system created by the global economic collapse, Rall sees an opportunity. In his view, as millions of people lose jobs and homes, they and millions more are opening their minds to the possibility of creating a radically different form of government and economic infrastructure.

Rall will be a guest speaker 7 p.m. Thursday at the University of Michigan Hatcher Graduate Library Gallery, Room 100.

This is the Ohio native's second visit to Tree Town.

"I spoke at the Michigan Theater a few years ago to my biggest crowd ever — 1,200 people, with my name in lights — amazing," he said. "I loved it and was sad that my main reason for visiting — applying for a job at the University of Michigan — didn't pan out."

"Of course, there is that small matter of the weather. As if Ohio wasn't cold enough, at least global warming is changing that."

Rall, the 2008-2009 president of the Association of American Editorial Cartoonists, twice the winner of the Robert F. Kennedy Journalism Award and a Pulitzer Prize finalist, drew cartoons for local newspapers and magazines while a student at Columbia University. Expelled for academic and disciplinary reasons, he later returned to graduate with honors.

After posting cartoons around the streets of New York

City, he landed a few clients, and was eventually signed for national syndication. His cartoons now appear in more than 100 publications, including the Los Angeles Times, Tucson Weekly, Newark Star-Ledger, Village Voice and New York Times.

Rall, who hones in on issues important to ordinary working people — un- and underemployment, the environment, popular culture, and political and social trends — has contributed op/ed articles to The New York Times.

He had a weekly syndicated opinion column for Universal Press Syndicate, and has been a staff writer for P.O.V. magazine. A major feature story about Tajikistan appeared in Men's Journal in 2008.

Rall, who hosted a twice-weekly radio talk show in Los Angeles, often broadcast from overseas, airing the first live talk radio shows from Cuba, Uzbekistan and Kashmir Province, and live reports from the war in Afghanistan.

He is currently working on "The Year of Chris," a graphic novel sequel to "The Year of Loving Dangerously."

'To Kill a Mockingbird' to be staged

Ann Arbor Civic Theatre will celebrate the 50th anniversary of the publication of "To Kill a Mockingbird" with a stage adaptation of the classic novel by Harper Lee.

Adapted by Christopher Sergel and directed by Debra Reichard, "To Kill a Mockingbird" runs Dec. 2 through 5 at the University of Michigan's Arthur Miller Theatre, 1226 Murfin Ave., Ann Arbor. Performances are at 8 p.m. Thursday through Saturday, and at 2 p.m. Sunday.

"You never really understand a person until you consider things from his point of view," says Atticus Finch in "To Kill a Mockingbird."

Finch, one of the most iconic figures in American literature, is a gentle, unassuming widower whose goal in life is to teach his children integrity, compassion and courage.

The time is summer, 1935, in a small town in Alabama. Finch, an attorney, agrees to defend a black man, Tom Robinson, who is accused of raping a white girl. Through the course of the trial that hot summer, Atticus' conviction never wavers and his children learn what it means to stand up for what you believe in, no matter what the consequences.

"The play illustrates how our children are always watching and learning from the adults around them," said director Debra Reichard in a news release.

"You see two single fathers — Bob Ewell and Atticus Finch — raising their children and leading by example," Reichard said.

"The way children view and experience the present with the guidance of their parents is what leads to the future generation's convictions and moral compass. In the play, as the children experience these feelings for the first time, the audience gets to re-experience those feelings right along with them."

The cast of "To Kill a Mockingbird" features Marc Holland as Atticus, Talia Akiva as Scout, Eli Tell as Jem, Lache Williams as Calpurnia, Ian Bejster as Dill and Charlie Newhart as Tom Robinson.

The cast also includes Karen Underwood, Breeda Miller, June Weiland, Richard Sherburne, Jon Elliott, Michael Slaughter, Sean Sabo, Christine Koch, Ben Blaesing, Steven Proehl, Zach Damon, Wendy Fritz, Jim Kane, Todd Young and Steve Stenman.

Tickets are $20 for adults, $18 for seniors, $10 for students and $15 for all tickets on Thursday. As a part of the educational program Literature Alive!, the Sunday matinee features $8 tickets for students and teachers followed by a talkback with the director and cast following the performance.

All patrons on Sunday are invited to stay for the talkback. Tickets are available online at www.a2ct.org, by calling the office at 971-2228, at the A2CT office at 322 W. Ann St. or at the door. Special Literature Alive! tickets can only be ordered through the A2CT office.

Additional information is available by visiting www.a2ct.org.

Eli Tell, Ian Bejster, Talia Akiva and Ben Blaesing will perform in "To Kill a Mockingbird" Dec. 2 through 5 at the University of Michigan's Arthur Miller Theatre in Ann Arbor. Performances are at 8 p.m. Thursday through Saturday, and at 2 p.m. Sunday.

Marc Holland (left), Talia Akiva, Lache Williams, Eli Tell appear in "To Kill a Mockingbird" Dec. 2 through 5 at the University of Michigan's Arthur Miller Theatre, 1226 Murfin Ave., in Ann Arbor.

Students join 'Great Mail Race' at South Meadows

Students in Mrs. McDonald's fourth grade class at South Meadows Intermediate School received a letter from a fourth grade in Mansfield, Texas inviting them to join "The Great Mail Race."

McDonald's class filled out a survey about Michigan and Chelsea and then drew names of states to send the surveys to. Students used an atlas to randomly pick a city and researched that city's schools. Letters were then sent to the school inviting a fourth grade to send a letter back and to also contact schools in each of the 50 states.

Students Salf Ghani, Alex Berry, Emmy Bragg, and Angel Casey participate in "The Great Mail Race" at South Meadows Elementary School in Chelsea by mailing letters to other students.

Students Brandon Jackson, Alexis Goulding, and Abby Merrill participate in "The Great Mail Race." The program connects students across the United States with snail mail letters.

Ride-a-long gives insight into police responsibilities

On Friday, while everyone was resting from long hours of holiday shopping, I took a trip. Instead of hitting the malls and finding the best deals, I was riding in a police car with Washtenaw County Sheriff's Deputy Harry Valentine. This was not my first time on a ride-a-long, but I will admit it was quite informative.

The deputies in the area generally patrol Dexter village and township. That in itself gave me some interesting perspective on the surrounding terrain. I had never been to some of the streets and backroads patrolled before.

Valentine explained to me that deputies do a good job of patrolling the main streets and can respond quickly to calls. There is quite a bit of work that has to be done with different cases on a daily basis. Some of that work can be done in the car and other work can be done at the station.

Early on, we were dispatched on a citizen complaint involving a homeless person loitering inside a business. Two deputies replied to the call.

The deputies spoke with the man, who ended up leaving to go to a homeless shelter.

I really learned there is a lot involved with police work, and most of it the general public never gets to see. Officers are constantly on the move and have to be doing about a half dozen things all at once. It makes for an interesting tour when you follow them.

Granted, for safety reasons I was not allowed out of the vehicle during any stops or during any calls.

When patrolling, officers are equipped with cameras in their vehicles that turn on when they leave the vehicle. They also have a microphone on so you can hear everything they say when they are talking to a suspect.

This equipment is not only to protect themselves, but also to use in court as evidence.

DAVE MERCHANT

Valentine has been a deputy for 26 years and has been the union president for quite some time as well.

"The funny thing is, when you have been doing this as long as I have, people start asking you when are you going to retire?" Valentine said. "I currently have the most seniority of anyone in the department at this job. Everyone wants me to retire."

At one point we went back to the station so Valentine could make a call regarding a woman who was in distress. He spoke to the woman over the phone and calmed her down.

It was very interesting to see some of the different roles that the deputy had to play.

Police work requires a lot of judgment and experience, and with Valentine, the people in Dexter can rest assured that they have an officer who does his job well.

Later in the evening we had a traffic stop, and the deputy ran the person's information and let the driver off on a warning. He said depending on the situation, the deputy ran the person's information and let the driver off on a warning.

It's not always a ticketing offense. He pointed out that stopping a vehicle and leaving the police cruiser's lights on also let people know police are patrolling the area, and it helps slow down traffic for safety.

"I don't care who you are, when you see someone pulled over, you slow down and look at them," he said. "We do the same thing even when we are off duty. It is just human nature."

We also went on an assist call to Scio Township in a mobile home park.

I was impressed with how things were handled in the area. I was also honored to ride around with one of the top deputies in the Washtenaw County Sheriff's Department. Being able to learn from his experience and see how professional things are handled was a great honor.

Police protection may be expensive, but be glad that you have it and be glad that the taxes cover it. These men and women are in the frontlines everyday and they are worth every penny.

Wellness Foundation seeks volunteers

By Amy Heydlauff
Guest Writer

What if a group of people in your town wanted to develop a coordinated, resident-centered plan to help you feel better? What if someone said: "Let's make it easier for people to control their blood sugar or outlook on life or weight, if they want to." What if that group of people said to each other: "How can we help aging residents keep their joints limber and our kids maintain a healthy weight?"

Would you be interested in their ideas? Do you have some ideas of your own?

In Chelsea, Dexter and Manchester, there are motivated people organizing to make it easier for the residents of their communities to "move more, eat better, connect with others in healthy ways and avoid unhealthy substances."

If those goals seem familiar it's because they are the fundamentals of the Chelsea Area Wellness Foundation's vision.

In each town the wellness troops are gathering in the form of a Wellness Coalition. They are talking about the idea of one big plan to address the things that make a community "well."

They are making lists of people who might want to help and talking to friends and neighbors. It is grassroots, community organizing at its best. People who care about their town are talking to other people who care about their town and the people in it.

This sort of thing can't happen everywhere. But in western Washtenaw County we have a history of getting things done. We have a way of cooperating and an energy that's palpable. Even though these organizing people know western Washtenaw County data shows we are more overweight, less likely to exercise and eat vegetables, or more likely to have a stroke, they are not daunted. Eating better, moving more, connecting with others and avoiding unhealthy substances are options they want all community residents to enjoy.

That has to be good for everyone - especially our children.

If no one has reached you, and you want to help, let us know. We'll put you in touch with the right people in your community. E-mail us at info@5healthytowns.org. Or call our office at 433-4599.

Social Security Administration answers common questions

The Social Security Administration provides answers to commonly asked questions below.

GENERAL
How do you replace a damaged Social Security card?
 While you can replace your Social Security card free if it is lost or stolen, you may not have to do so. Knowing your Social Security number is what is most important.

You may need a new card if you are starting a new job and your employer asks to see the card. For more information about getting a replacement card, go to www.socialsecurity.gov/ssnumber.

RETIREMENT
How much of a difference will it make if I defer retirement benefits until age 70?
 It can be significant. For example, say your full retirement age is 66 and your monthly benefit starting at that age is $1,000.

If you choose to defer receiving benefits until age 70, you would increase your monthly benefit amount to $1,320. That is almost an extra $4,000 each year for the rest of your life.

This increase is from delayed retirement credits you get for your decision to postpone receiving benefits past your full retirement age.

The benefit amount at age 70, in this example, is 32 percent more than you would receive per month if you chose to start getting benefits at full retirement age. This higher benefit would continue for as long as you live. You can estimate your future benefits at different ages using our Retirement Estimator at www.socialsecurity.gov/estimator.

SUPPLEMENTAL SECURITY INCOME

I heard Social Security pays Supplemental Security Income (SSI) benefits to children who were born prematurely. Is this true?

SSI is for people with low income and resources and, in most cases, the income and resources of the parents would be considered for a child.

For children who meet the income and resource requirements, Social Security does provide SSI disability benefits to certain low birth weight infants, whether or not they are premature.

Children who weigh less than 1,200 grams (about 2 pounds, 10 ounces) at birth can qualify for SSI on the basis of low birth weight.

Children who weigh between 1,200 and 2,000 grams at birth (about 4 pounds 6 ounces) and who are considered small for their gestational age also may qualify.

Even if children who were born prematurely do not fall into one of the low birth weight categories, they still may qualify for SSI if the evidence in their record shows that they meet the definition of disability for children for another reason.

For more information, go to www.socialsecurity.gov/applyfordisability/child.htm.

I receive my Supplemental Security Income payments on the first of the month. What happens when the first of the month falls on a Saturday?

If you receive an SSI payment on the first of the month, and the first of the month falls on a Saturday, Sunday or legal holiday, your payment should arrive on the previous banking day.

For more information, visit our Schedule of Social Security Benefit Payments at www.socialsecurity.gov/pubs/calendar.htm.

Keep the reference handy, and remember, if you have direct deposit, you'll never have to wait for your payment to arrive in your mailbox; it will be directly deposited into your account.

DISABILITY

Why is there a five-month waiting period for Social Security disability benefits?

The law provides for a five-month waiting period to ensure that during the early months of disability, we only pay benefits to persons who have long-term disabilities.

Social Security disability benefits can be paid only after you have been disabled continuously throughout a period of five full calendar months. Therefore, Social Security disability benefits will be paid beginning with the sixth full month after the date your disability began. You are not entitled to benefits for any month in the waiting period. Learn more by reading our online publication, Disability Benefits, at www.socialsecurity.gov/pubs/10029.html.

benefits three months ago and still have not received an answer. When should I expect to be notified of the decision?

The length of time it takes to receive a decision on your disability claim is usually from three to five months. It can vary depending on several factors, but primarily factors considered are:

- The nature of your disability;
- How quickly we obtain medical evidence from your doctor or other medical source;
- Whether it is necessary to send you for a medical examination to obtain evidence to support your claim; and

 ■ Whether your claim is randomly selected for quality assurance review of the decision.

The more information you can provide about your disability and medical providers during the initial application, the more likely the process will go faster.

The best way to prepare for a disability application is to use the Disability Starter Kit located online at www.socialsecurity.gov/disability/disability_start_kits.htm.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Schools made changes without enough input, research

48 minutes is not enough time

Until now, I have been a big supporter of Dexter Community Schools. Two very important issues are being pushed through the Board of Education without significant public input. First, the current administration wants to change the school day schedule from the current five period day with 70-minute classes to a seven period day with 48-minute classes.

Second, they are making a large monetary commitment ($9,500 for the first year of the International Baccalaureate diploma program, $10,000 for the second year plus a non-refundable application fee of $7,000) that will benefit only 38 students next year.

Why haven't there been public alerts, hearings and meetings about the implementation of these things? International Baccalaureate information was presented but only after the decision to implement the program was made.

The opinions of our community's taxpayers should be heard and honored in a fully advertised series of public meetings. Extensive public forums took place when the district was grappling with the busing situation. Everyone was notified. Is the everyday schedule of our children's high school facility any less important?

Do we have so much money that a minimum financial commitment of $27,000 for 40 students is no big deal?

Parents received an e-mailed letter from the principal of Dexter High School outlining the board's plan for a change in the school day on Nov. 22. They sent it during Thanksgiving week and required people's input within seven days because they intend to reach a decision within a week. They sent this request for feedback immediately preceding a busy holiday weekend that is well documented as the most traveled of the year. Is that how we want our school administration to function? Requesting important information from people when we know they aren't going to be home?

As a former teacher, I believe that a 60-minute class is the minimum needed to do any real teaching. I understand that budgets and desires rarely mix company. But the only school in our general vicinity that has less than 55-minute class periods is Chelsea. They have 50-minute classes — with an 80-minute fourth hour.

Many area schools have 60-minute class periods or more. The letter from the DHS principal promotes a 22-minute cut in current class times, but he wants to add two additional class periods in a two-semester format.

A seven-period day with 48 minutes per class does not allow our students sufficient daily class time for thorough investigations of important advanced placement and fine arts topics. A 48-minute class time will effectively require our well-respected music programs to offer much less in terms of quality and quantity, thus adversely affecting hundreds of students.

I'm not against having the IB program in Dexter. I'm not against a two-semester schedule. I am against how the expense and ramifications of such far-reaching decisions is being forced on our community without reasonable input.

I am against gutting a music program with hundreds of students in order to benefit 40 students by shortening class times. I have listened to the IB people. More importantly, I have listened to a dozen parents in other school districts in southeast Michigan, and I keep hearing the same thing: The only real benefit of the IB program over our current advanced placement program occurs if your child plans to attend a university overseas. There are only 20 IB schools in Michigan because they are cost-prohibitive with benefits for a very small number of students. I hope Dexter eventually offers the program, but not by means of hidden agendas and a minimal effort to solicit public opinion, and not at the cost of our valued band and orchestra programs.

My confidence in the people who run Dexter Community Schools has been seriously shaken. These issues — so vital to our children's educations — have been handled poorly. Educational policy should reflect the community's beliefs and needs. Not the desires of a few administrators.

Regardless of whether you agree with me, I hope that Dexter's parents will voice their opinions on this issue and not have such things forced upon them without recourse.

Do we know enough about the IB program?

I am concerned about how a relative few Dexter High School faculty members can seemingly make far-reaching decisions regarding the direction of the curriculum of our school district.

It was only a few short weeks ago when a meeting was held to discuss the interest in moving towards an International Baccalaureate program in Dexter. Many, including myself, walked away from this meeting with more questions than answers. Just last week an article in the Dexter Leader seemed to indicate it was a done deal. How can this possibly happen? It does not seem that all of the facts have been thoroughly researched on this topic.

In the article in the Dexter Leader, one Dexter school official made the comment that the IB program would provide more college opportunities. What does this compare to now? What little I have heard and have the opportunity to research seems inconclusive that IB is any better than advanced placement at providing more college opportunities. In fact in all of the web research I have done regarding the position of colleges on this issue, not one college stated specifically that IB would provide any inherent advantages over advanced placement. What they all said is that either advanced placement or IB would benefit our students over no advanced program. So the question must be asked: Why offer both?

International Baccalaureate has a much fewer number of schools and participants than advanced placement does in the United States, and has not been around as long. What is lacking in AP that IB will offer? What is the relative number of students who have expressed taking IB in Dexter?

If this is a case of a major change to the curriculum at a relatively high cost that will only be participated in by a few select students, how can this possibly be justified? One also must ask the question, how will IB dilute AP and other programs currently offered? It is a simple fact that you cannot offer all things to all people. Something must be sacrificed, as there is a finite amount of money, trained teachers and other resources.

In addition, in a school district where the music program is so strong (the Dexter Band is referred to as 'the pride of Dexter') how can we let this be downgraded because of another program?

In a time in our state where tax dollars are down due to economic issues, is this really the time to commit to spending more taxpayer dollars or stealing them from other popular and successful programs?

One other matter of concern: Since IB is a global program, whose view(s) of history will our students be taught? I maintain that U.S. history is and has been an important subject. I am sure that other countries' views of how the U.S. was founded differ from those in U.S. history books. To loosely quote a contemporary author: "If we do not know where we came from and the circumstances surrounding it, we can not possibly know where we are going."

The United States fostered our creative and entrepreneurial spirit by allowing people to think boldly and not be constrained by the views of others. The old world views of religion, trade wars, class systems and other once global views is the reason many came to America in the first place. Many think that the power of independence is out of place and needs to be constrained by a more global perspective. One cannot help but wonder how the IB program will support the American perspective.

There may be good answers to these concerns; however I have not heard from anyone in the Dexter School District address them with anything but a broad and political statement that does not address anything specifically.

A decision of this magnitude should be arrived at after careful deliberation and study. What is the rush to make a decision on this? Or has all of the research been done and not shared with the community? Either way, we deserve honest answers before moving forward in any direction.

School officials did not show diligence in decision about IB

I would like to know why our Board of Education is willing to turn our high school upside down and gamble at least $500,000 (that is a budget figure I got from Trustee Michael Wendorf) for an up-and-running International Baccalaureate program most of the board members and people in the community know very little about.

School administrators are painting a picture of a blissful high school where teachers have worked on committees, conducted research and have reached consensus on a program and on a schedule that they feel is best for our students. That is so far removed from reality that it is laughable.

Teachers in the high school did vote, but they were presented with three choices — two plans with seven period days (one with 47-minute periods and one with 48 minutes), and one plan that had trimesters-but all classes, including band, orchestra, journalism, yearbook, art and other electives were one trimester and students could choose in which trimester of the elective he or she wished to participate.

The latter plan received four votes.

The teachers never had the opportunity to vote on a plan to keep the current schedule or one that returned to semesters but in a six-period configuration. Teachers in programs most affected by this change were never asked to give their opinions. Everybody on the scheduling committee had a stake in IB. No advanced placement teachers were on the IB committee or the scheduling committee.

There has been no due diligence on this change, or with the IB program.

There has been no cost benefit analysis.

There is no defined budget for IB, or any consideration that this scheduling change will incur costs.

There have been no meetings to solicit community input.

There have been parent forums (only for those interested in IB) where a school employee charged with selling IB to families has oversold the impact of IB on college admissions and has made sweeping and misleading statements.

There has never been any definition of the problem that IB purportedly solves.

There has been no study of the impact of this schedule change, nor of the impact of IB on band, orchestra, choir or advanced placement classes. Yet, it is a fact that these successful programs will be cut by 40 percent in order to accommodate the IB schedule.

International Baccalaureate will affect journalism, art, debate, drama, and athletics.

Dexter High School will also be introducing a "recitation" period (in my day we called it study hall) that some teachers have told me may be mandated for all students. This will be unstructured time that is unproductive, wasteful and, of course, supported by taxpayers.

I have been told that we need to pilot IB for at least two years in order to understand if it will work, and that the only way to pilot it is to implement IB in the high school.

A pilot study is, by definition, a small scale preliminary study conducted before programs are implemented in order to check the feasibility or to improve the design. Often, pilot experiments are used to provide quantitative proof that the system has potential to succeed on a full scale.

This is not a pilot program by any stretch of the definition. I don't want my kids to be part of a "pilot" for 50 percent or more of their high school careers.

In the fall of 2009, Dexter published an annual report containing the following statement: "Dexter High School completed its first year of a revised trimester system in which students were afforded greater opportunities for elective courses to round out the rigorous Michigan Merit Curriculum recently adopted by the State of Michigan. The revised school day provided opportunities for staff to update curriculum to assure relevance, continue their work on alignment and common assessments, and spend longer periods making connections to their students."

Now, only slightly over a year later, we are being told that trimesters were a failure and we need to return to semesters — and not even the six period configuration that we had in 2007-08, but a seven period configuration that is new in our experience.

School administrators have told me that the move to semesters is not connected to the introduction of the IB program, but it seems ironic that IB requires a seven-period day. I have been given no other explanation for the addition of a seventh period. Forgive my skepticism, but my perception is that we were either being misled a year ago or that we are being misled now.

I have seen no empirical data to support the change neither in the high school schedule nor in favor of IB. Where are the statistics that even hint that IB will make Dexter Schools better? I agree that there are problems in the schools. But why is our school board so quick to dismantle what is working in the vague hope that a radical new approach will make Dexter better?

International Baccalaureate will have a marked impact on every single student in DHS. Students with no interest in the IB diploma will be placed into IB classes because those will be the classes available. Eleven IB classes are being added in the high school in 2011-2012 and 10 in 2012-2013. No advanced placement classes are being added. Nor will any non-IB classes aimed at the general school population be added.

Please look into the IB content and judge for yourself if this is the kind of education you want for your student, www.ibo.org. Plans are underway to implement IB in every school building in Dexter in the near term. Please attend the school board meetings. I believe this is the only way to have any impact.

Local woman to display soaps at art show

By Sheila Pursglove
Special Writer

Soaps made by Cyndi Zuccaro of Dexter sound good enough to eat: calendula, rosemary, lavender, rose, green tea and peppermint, carrot, lemon balm, Mindo chocolate coffee, and cream with orange. Her red clover and milk soap is good for those prone to skin cancer, and her cappuccino soap with Mindo coffee, milk and nutmeg helps remove kitchen odors from hands.

Each bar of soap is packaged with a little gift - an adornment such as a shell, dried flower/ herb, or twig.

Zuccaro is one of 30 artisans featured at the "More Friends Holiday Shows" in the West of the Moon art gallery at 112 E. Middle St.

in Chelsea. Six themed shows are running Saturdays through Dec. 18, with eight artists featured each week. Zuccaro took part on Nov. 13, and will return on Dec. 18.

Her interest in making soap grew from her passion about eating and buying local, humanely raised food.

"Seven years ago I started raising chickens for eggs. I thought it would be a small operation - I ordered a mix of 25 Heritage-breed laying hens to share with a friend. When they arrived I fell in love and could not part with them, keeping all 25," she said. "They ranged from pasture and were supplemented with organic feed - they were healthy and multiplied. We now even raise our own meat."

Two years ago, she started studying nutritional and medicinal herbs and began making her own tinctures and a special skin toner.

Last spring, she had lunch with Barbara Wilson, a friend and the owner of Mindo Chocolate in Dexter, a business that makes a special dark chocolate with selected beans from Ecuador.

"She had some extra cocoa butter and we chatted about what we could do with it," Zuccaro said. "I love to cook using wild plants and herbs, and I have always bought homemade soap from Amy Lesser in Dexter. So attempting to make soap out of the cocoa butter seemed like a fun fit."

The first stop was the library, to checkout and study several books on soap making.

Her first bars of soap were calendula, one of her favorite herbs, with lemon essential oil. She used cayenne pepper to add an orange color and topped the bars with dried calendula petals from her garden.

"They turned out really nice - not only were they beautiful, but functionally the soap had a very creamy lather and lasted a long time," she said. "I was hooked."

Maintaining the medicinal properties of the herbs and cocoa butter is very important to Zuccaro. Not wanting to add herbs or cocoa butter to the soap during the lye process, she experimented making a simple soap with organic coconut oil and organic palm oil, then let it age and complete the lye process (saponification).

After the simple soap was complete, she melted it in a double boiler then added raw cocoa butter, herbs, and essential oils.

"I poured it into a square mold, let it cool and then cut the bars," she said. "I cut chunks by hand. I like a natural look."

"My soaps are unique in that the herbs and cocoa butter are added after the lye process."

All of Zuccaro's soaps contain local, organic, and wild-crafted ingredients. Only organic essential oils are added for fragrance; she never uses fragrance oils.

She also developed an all-purpose moisturizer good for healing dried, cracked skin, containing raw cocoa butter, organic coconut oil, avocado oil, honey, and Vitamin E.

Each September, Zuccaro coordinates a local products market at the Webster Township Fall Festival. This past September, after making several successful batches of soap for fun that were well received by friends and family, she decided to try her hand at selling soap at the festival.

"Folks responded well and were calling for more - so this is how I started making and selling soap," she said.

The "More Friends Holiday Shows" are being held from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturdays through Dec. 18. Admission is free. For more information, visit www.DarwinStudio.com or MoreFriends.html.

Q&A: Cooney talks about holiday show

It's starting to look a lot like Christmas — at least in theaters all across the state, with the opening of holiday-themed shows. While some are new and others are beloved classics, The Encore Musical Theatre in Dexter has a bit of both: a brand new musical adaptation of "It's a Wonderful Life." Recently Artistic Director Dan Cooney talked about the project and its co-creators.

Q: The Encore Musical Theatre has been quite successful staging some of the most beloved musicals of all time. But for your next show, you're shaking things up by presenting an original adaptation of a familiar holiday classic. Was it always in your business plan to eventually produce an original musical?

A: Yes, producing original musicals was always in the plan. Not necessarily in our second year when we're still finding our legs, but these things have a way of taking on a life of their own once you put it out there.

Q: So why now?
A: It was really a matter of necessity. Due to the rights being pulled for national touring companies and such, the licensing companies denied us rights to the shows we were interested in doing for the holiday season.

Q: With all of the established Christmas shows you could have chosen, why create a new one - albeit an adaptation of a beloved favorite?

A: There are many established Christmas shows out there, but as you know we are focused on musicals, and I haven't found many of the existing holiday musicals to be very appealing. The few I thought The Encore could do well were not available.

Q: So how did you go about deciding on "It's a Wonderful Life?"

A: Along with what I've already expressed, one major factor with "It's a Wonderful Life" that made it possible and put it on the fast track: The film script of "It's a Wonderful Life" is in public domain, so this is something I could get started on immediately.

Q: What is it about "It's a Wonderful Life" that makes it the perfect movie to adapt to the stage? And how easy is it to adapt such a familiar tale? What are the concerns your team faced - and the potential pitfalls?

A: Let's start with the pitfalls. I think that attempting to turn "It's a Wonderful Life" into a classic Rodgers & Hammerstein-style musical is a challenge that only Rodgers & Hammerstein should take on - and that's obviously not going to happen, so this brought our writing team back to the basics: a story about a man with big dreams, but who is living a pretty ordinary life focusing greatly on the future and "some days," yet still chooses to encourage, support and love in most every situation without realizing the amazing impact this has on others.

What's not perfect about adapting a film that for most who experience it, well up with tears, feel their heart again and are granted the opportunity to understand that the only thing standing between their current life situation and one that would be considered "wonderful" is the choice to practice gratitude, love and enthusiasm. A choice that we all have ability to make, but God alone knows why it's such a daily struggle.

Q: Speaking of the team, you're got quite a powerhouse behind the show: Jon Huffman adapted the book and the music is by John McDaniel, the Grammy and two-time Emmy Award winner who served as the bandleader on TV's The Rosie O'Donnell Show. But an interesting name is among the credits: Kathie Lee Gifford, who wrote the lyrics. How did you pull this team together, and in particular, how did Gifford become involved in the project? Has she been a lyricist before this?

A: Basically, these lovely and talented people are all friends, and as much as I'd like to boast about all the hard work I have done gathering this awesome creative team - the truth of the matter is I just asked them and they said, "yes." Kathie cast me in two of her other shows, "Under The Bridge" (which played off Broadway) and "Saving Amy" (which is in the process of being mounted for Broadway), both fantastic shows of which I very much enjoyed being a part.

Based on my experience in both of those shows, she quickly grew to become one of my new favorite lyricists. She was also extremely generous, kind and loving to each and every cast and crew member on both of those projects.

Q: How long has the team been developing the project?

A: Jon Huffman and I have been working on the project since May. Kathie joined us about three months ago, and interestingly enough, John McDaniel joined the team only five weeks ago.

Q: What process have you used to write it? Have you been spending a lot of time in New York? Or is much of it done via e-mail, phone and other ways of communicating?

A: As for the process, it started with me going through the film script and choosing the moments I felt could best support songs. I then went back, chose song titles and took a stab at about seven of the numbers.

At this point I called my friend, Jon Huffman, and we started talking concept. We quickly agreed that we would not try and write a Rodgers & Hammerstein style musical, but rather stay as close to the original tone of the film as possible. Once Jon crafted a shape we liked with songs plugged in, I quickly realized that though the songs fit nicely, I needed help from a much more experienced lyricist than myself. That's when I called Kathie Lee. Similarly, with the music, some friends and I in New York City were off to a good start, but the style of our music, in my opinion, wasn't quite right for the piece. Enter Mr. John McDaniel just five weeks ago and only two weeks before the first day of rehearsal.

Q: You're credited with writing additional lyrics. What exactly did that entail?

A: In all honesty, most of the lyrics at this point are Kathie Lee's, but you'll find a line or two of mine still hanging around. Also, most of the titles and song concepts have stayed in place.

Q: And are you also directing the show? If so, when was the last time you had a full night's sleep?

A: I am in Florida performing in the pre-Broadway production of "Bonnie and Clyde." "It's a Wonderful Life" is being directed by the very capable and talented team of Jon Huffman and Barb Cullen, and I am very grateful to them. We are also very fortunate to have Tyler Driskill music directing and working on additional orchestrations and arrangements.

Q: Besides the cast, what unique challenges did you face once the show got up on its feet? What's been the most unexpected surprise you've encountered so far? And the biggest problem?

A: Adapting this story from a film, where it seems every few seconds we are in a different place, we had to come up with a set that allows us to move from place to place seamlessly.

So far there haven't been any unexpected surprises or problems. I consider it a little Christmas miracle that we are sailing smoothly through this process. That's what happens when you have so many dedicated and enthusiastic individuals putting energy into something - a little miracle.

Q: As a co-founder of The Encore, how serious is it to produce your first original work? Are there any additional risks you take with an original production that don't apply to a standard musical such as the recent "The Sound of Music?"

A: Producing our first original work I imagine would have been absolutely horrifying if it weren't titled "It's a Wonderful Life." This title is so well known, it may give "The Sound of Music" a run for its money. At this point there are no additional risks. The longevity of the show, of course, will depend on how well it is received.

Castro, Foote named co-MVPs

Saline senior leads Hornets to 45 wins

By Terry Jacoby
Heritage Newspapers

Saline's Cassie Castro has long been known around volleyball circles for her strong defensive play. She was the Hornets' Defensive Player of the Year for the past two seasons.

But the senior goes on the offensive when it comes to commitment and dedication to the sport she has grown to love. Reaching the level of play Castro has achieved requires plenty of hard work. That hard work has paid off, both for her individually as well as the Saline volleyball program.

"From an individual standpoint, I went into the season training hard and trying to be in the best physical condition and pushing myself 100 percent," said Castro, named Heritage Newspapers All-Area Volleyball Player co-MVP for the 2010 season.

"I was pleased with my performance throughout the year. Of course there were certain times where I would have liked to have done better, but overall it was a great season."

Her individual commitment helped lead the Hornets to an impressive 45-10 overall record.

"From a team standpoint, we had a great group of girls who worked hard and pushed each other to do our best," she said. "Overall, we had some great

Dexter junior sets up Dreads for success

Volleyball is not necessarily dominated by giants. Sometimes, the smaller players come up big in big spots and in big games.

Dexter's Caitlen Foote was never the tallest player on the floor, but she was certainly among the best.

"Caitlen comes in under the radar a bit because of her size, but teams quickly realize she's one of our biggest and most powerful hitters," said

Dexter coach Erin Penn. "Caitlen is very talented, both in the front and back row. She's aggressive in every skill she performs, and she holds the highest standards for herself."

Those standards helped earn Foote Heritage Newspapers All-Area Volleyball co-MVP honors.

"I feel like we had a really good team and we did well," said Foote, who also was named team MVP and helped lead the Dreadnaughts to an impressive

40-16-6 overall record and a trip to the District championship game. "I think we could have gone further than we did, but I am so proud of everyone for working as hard as they did."

"Overall, we had a great year. I am proud to be a part of Dexter volleyball." Foote, 18, finished the season with 388 kills, 54 aces and 396 digs.

A2's almost native son

Ann Arbor a starting point for Detroit's Howard

The goalie said that the size of the high school was difficult to get used to at first.

"It was a real culture shock for me," he said. "I went from a school where I knew almost everyone, to being put into a school that was just massive. It took a while to get comfortable."

Howard was born and raised in Ogdensburg, New York, a city of about 12,300, located on the south bank of the St. Lawrence River in the northern part of the state.

"I came from such a small town, coming into Ann Arbor was a big thing for me,"

Howard said. "I was pretty shy, so I just wanted to keep my head down and get to my classes and everything. I didn't really want to draw too much attention to myself."

Howard might have been able to avoid attention while in classes at Pioneer, but the young goaltender wasn't able to keep out of the spotlight when he was between the pipes.

Howard played nine games with the Under-17 team, and 26 games with the Under-18 team during his stay in Ann Arbor. In that time, he amassed a record of 22-11-1 with four shutouts.

He also managed to curry favor with his coach, Mike Eaves.

Eaves, who is currently the head coach of the University of Wisconsin hockey team and father of Howard's current Red Wing teammate Patrick Eaves, said he was impressed with Howard from the start.

"Jim was a very talented player when he came to us. He Jimmy Howard was born in New York, became a collegiate legend in Maine and is currently occupying one of the loneliest and most scrutinized positions in all of professional sports.

But before he set NCAA records and earned the job of starting goaltender for the Detroit Red Wings, Howard spent some significant time in Ann Arbor.

Howard, 26, donned his goalie gear in A2 during 2001, as he suited up and played with the U.S. National Team Development Program.

"It was a great time for me when I was in Ann Arbor," Howard said. "We were really busy with hockey, but I really loved the city."

Howard was 17 when he played with the NTDP, which is headquartered at the Ann Arbor Ice Cube.

While in Ann Arbor, Howard was enrolled at Pioneer High School.

2010 All-Heritage Volleyball Team

Marissa Owen
Saline

Grade: Junior
Position: Outside Hitter
Overview: One of the best junior players in the area, Owen was a powerful hitter for Saline this season. A strong presence up front at the net for the Hornets, Owen was proficient spiking the ball or blocking this year. Behind Owen, Saline won 40 matches this season.

Amelia Horton
Milan

Grade: Senior
Position: Middle Blocker
Overview: The top player on Milan's squad, the 5-foot-9 Horton was a dominating force around the net this season for the Big Reds. The All-Huron League middle blocker led Milan this year with 197 kills, 37 aces and 84 blocks. She also recorded 177 digs.

Michelle Wellman
Chelsea

Grade: Senior
Position: MH
Player overview: Wellman led the Bulldogs this season in number of kills (212), blocks (69), assists and 39 solo blocks. "She was a force offensively and defensively for the team all season," Chelsea coach Laura Cleveland said. "Michelle also served at 85 percent this season and improved each year defensively at the net and excelled in her technique as a blocker."

Mckenna Erkfritz
Manchester

Grade: Sophomore
Position: Middle Blocker
Overview: One of the top sophomores, not only in the area, but in the state, Manchester's Mckenna Erkfritz was a dominant player this year for the Flying Dutchmen. The 6-foot middle blocker finished the season with a team high 287 kills and 110 blocks. She also posted 25 digs and 19 aces.

Ellie Stoffer
Chelsea

Grade: Senior
Position: OH and Libero
Overview: Stoffer took twice as many serve receptions than any other player on the team and passes at a high efficiency. She led the team with 290 digs and also had 111 kills this season. "Ellie displayed a great toughness defensively and has a great range as a defensive player," said coach Laura Cleveland. "She was always willing to put her body on the floor to dig a ball and keep a play alive for the team."

Halley Cook
Manchester

Grade: Senior
Position: Setter
Overview: The leader and quarterback of the Manchester squad, Cook helped spark the Flying Dutchmen to a 40-23-4 overall record this year. The senior setter ended up with a team high 780 assists this season. Cook also recorded 47 aces, 152 digs, 14 blocks and 45 kills.

Talia Wood
Dexter

Grade: Sophomore
Position: OH
Overview: Wood is a big-time hitter, especially for her age. "She is extremely sound when it comes to technique both in hitting and blocking," said coach Erin Penn. "Most defenses can't stop her even when the whole gym knows we're going to set her. I don't doubt that by her senior year she'll be one of the top players in the state." Wood finished with 413 kills and 57 blocks.

Destiny Hudson
Belleville

Grade: Junior
Position: Outside Hitter
Overview: Destiny Hudson has been a two year player on the Belleville varsity team. She found herself in the starting lineup for coach Michael Musser this past season. The junior had more than 120 kills this season. "She continues to work hard in the off-season and each year comes back stronger," said Musser. Hudson was an all-league selection this year for the Tigers.

Dunla Ismail
Lincoln

Grade: Senior
Position: OH
Overview: One of Lincoln's captains (along with Ashley Agdorny), Ismail was a force around the net all season for the Railsplitters. Her power hitting helped lead the Rails to several wins during the season, including over rival Ypsilanti in the regular-season finale. The senior, who plays with a ton of enthusiasm, was an honorable mention selection for the all-SEC team.

Tyler Richardson
Ypsilanti

Grade: Senior
Position: OH
Overview: Richardson, who also is a dominant basketball player, signed to play volleyball at the University of Albany in New York earlier this year. The senior was a Southeastern Conference all-league honorable mention selection. Richardson, who only started playing volleyball as a freshman, earned a full-ride scholarship to play for the Great Danes in the America East Conference.

2010 ALL-HERITAGE VOLLEYBALL TEAM

Former U-M standout finds success in Dexter

You could certainly call Erin Penn's homecoming a spike of success.

Penn, who grew up in Dexter and played four years on the varsity team, recently returned to the area and became the head volleyball coach just prior to the start of the 2010 season. She helped lead the club to a second place in the SEC White Division and a trip to the district finals at Pinckney.

The team's success earned Penn

Penn, in her first year with the Dreadnaughts, had a tough choice when it came to picking the team's most outstanding player. Several girls could have easily gotten the nod.

"Caitlen is our team's MVP because of her steadiness in addition to the fact that she Heritage Newspaper's Coach of the Year honors.

"I came into this season wanting to establish fundamentals and create a mentality within the program that set up strong principles, and I believe we did that," Penn said. "I wanted the girls to buy into the fact that they are representing their school and their community, and that all levels of the program work together to build the best Dexter volleyball team we can at the highest level."

Dexter volleyball is a team effort, on and off the court.

"Our middle school, freshman and JV coaches all worked hard to do this - it was a concerted effort by all of us," Penn said. "We still have a ways to go when it comes to our win/loss record as well as our competitiveness in post-season playoffs, but we can't expect that to happen overnight."

"My team did a phenomenal job of stepping up to the challenge and doing anything I asked. They worked hard all season and put the team before themselves. I couldn't have asked for anything more. I'm so proud of all of them."

Penn is a former Dreadnaught. During her junior year, the Dreadnaughts won regionals for the first time in school history before losing in the state semifinals.

Penn was named Gatorade Player of the Year for the state of Michigan and earned her second All-State selection during her senior season. She graduated with a 4.0 grade-point average and accepted a scholarship to Michigan.

After red-shirting her freshman year, Penn was a four-time All-Big Ten Academic award winner and team captain her final two seasons.

"After graduating from U-M with a degree in history, I moved around the country for four years (that was 13 moves, by the way) with my husband, Mike Penn, while he played minor league baseball with the Kansas City Royals," Penn said. "During those four years I was an assistant coach for a varsity team in Columbus (Ohio) and coached a freshman team out-in Arizona. I also became the director of operations for All-American Volleyball Camps in which we ran over 150 satellite camps across the country."

When Mike retired from the Royals in 2009, the family moved back to Dexter.

"I heard the varsity and freshmen positions were opening up at Dexter, and was excited to be a part of the program again and get the chance to give back to the community that I so love," she said. "All those years of moving around made me realize how much I love this area and this town in particular. We have great schools and a wonderful community. My husband and I feel so blessed to be able to come back here to raise our family."

plays both front and back row for us," Penn said. "Caitlen also adds to the team with her serve receive and defense."

Having to choose out of such an impressive group is a good thing. The Dreadnaughts finished with an 8-3 record in the Southeastern Conference, just a game out of first behind Tecumseh. Both Foote and teammate Talia Wood were named to the All-SEC team. Sydney Spicer and Polly Washabaugh were honorable-mention selections.

Foote began playing volleyball in the fifth grade with the Huron Valley Volleyball Club.

"At the time I was trying out different sports and volleyball was one of them," she said. "Volleyball was the sport I ended up really liking, and stuck with it. I love everything about it. I love the intensity of a close match and when the team is giving it their all and we win."

Foote is just a junior and is looking forward to her senior season. The Dreadnaughts should be loaded again next season.

"I want to continue to get better," she said. "There is always room for improvement. I would like to play volleyball in college, but I don't have a particular college in mind just yet. I'm still decid-games by beating ranked teams. But there were times where we would have liked different outcomes. We had a great record and I was proud of our team."

The 17-year-old also can be proud of her own accomplishments during her amazing run with the Hornets.

After being called up to the varsity team during the districts as a sophomore, Castro became a starter during her junior season. She was a first-team All-Southeastern Conference Red Division selection and first team All-Region pick in both 2009 and 2010.

The Saline team captain this past season, Castro also is a candidate for the 2010 All-State team.

Saline coach Lisa Shea is going to miss Castro when the season rolls around next year.

"I really enjoyed coaching Cassie," Shea said. "She's the most talented libero I have ever coached. Her court coverage kept us in countless points. She was a wonderful teammate and is an excellent role model for our younger players to look up to."

Castro started playing volleyball in sixth grade. She realized she was pretty good when she got the call to join the varsity as a sophomore - at the beginning of district play.

"I go 100 percent all the time and I never give up on a ball," she said. "I play with confidence and I'm a team player."

She also had a solid jump serve, could read the hitter and was a standout defensive player.

"I enjoy volleyball because it's a competitive sport, and it's such a fast pace game when playing a competitive team across the net," she said. "It's very exciting."

Castro hopes to take her game to the next level.

"I would like to continue to play volleyball when I go to college," said Castro, who would like to become a special education teacher when her playing days are over. "Currently, I am being recruited and I am in the process of evaluating my options, what would fit me best educationally and athletically."

Her performance in the classroom is as impressive as her sets and spikes. She currently has all A's and is working hard to lay the groundwork for a successful four years in college.

She also is proud of the groundwork she helped put down with the Saline volleyball program.

"I am proud to be a part of the Saline volleyball program," she said. "It's been a great experience. I have had many great opportunities being involved with the team. From middle school through high school the coaching staff has always been supportive and helpful in all aspects."

lot of time in the minors, and for some guys, that can be the kiss of death. For Jim, though, he used it as an opportunity."

Howard started his professional career with the Grand Rapids Griffins in the American Hockey League.

Between 2005 and 2009, Howard spent time bouncing around between Grand Rapids and Detroit, but in the 2009-2010 season, he was finally given a chance to start.

"We knew for a long time that Jim had what it took," Red Wings coach Mike Babcock said. "We wanted to make sure he was ready, and that we weren't getting him in over his head."

Howard proved he was ready. Last season the goalie played in 63 games, going 37-15-10 and was a finalist for the Calder Trophy, the NHL's rookie of the year award.

"Last year things really came together for me," Howard said. "But it helps when you play in front of such a great team." Things haven't slowed down for the keeper either.

As of Monday, Howard was ranked second in the league with 13 wins. He also had a save percentage of .914 and a goals against average of 2.49.

"Things are starting to come together for us," Howard said. "We've got a lot of great players and we are trying to bring another Stanley Cup back to Detroit."

And while Howard wasn't born in Michigan, he said there is a very special place in his heart for the Wolverine State, and Ann Arbor in particular. "I'm not originally from here," he said. "But this is my hockey home. I get to play for the Detroit Red Wings and I got to represent my country in Ann Arbor. I kind of feel like my hockey career really took off in Ann Arbor. I'll always feel like my time there was a special time."

was so competitive," Eaves said. "He just never stopped working. You knew that he was going to put in the time. Nobody was going to outwork him."

Eaves said that Howard's time in Ann Arbor, playing for the NTDP, was defined by his ability to evolve as a player.

"It wasn't easy for a lot of those guys," Eaves said of the NTDP players. "You have to remember, they are still kids, and they are uprooted from their homes and their families. They are put into a program and asked to play their best. It's not easy."

Howard, like most other players in the USA program, came to Ann Arbor and lived with a host family.

"But none of that fazed Jim," Eaves said. "He learned on the fly. One thing about developmental programs is that it forces players to redefine what hard is."

"Jim came here and was a great player in his own right. But when you are playing with the best in the country, you can't take anything for granted. And he did that. He really rose to the occasion." Rising to the occasion has kind of been Howard's hallmark, even after he left Ann Arbor.

After playing with the NTDP, Howard started filling up his trophy case.

In 2002 he led the United States to gold in the IIHF World U18 Championships in Slovakia and was later named the USA goaltender of the year.

The goaltender elected to go to the University of Maine, where he led the Black Bears to the Frozen Four championship during the 2003-2004 season.

The Bears came up short, falling to the University of Denver, 1-0.

While with Maine, Howard was drafted in the second round (64th overall) of the 2003 NHL Entry Draft by Detroit.

It was then when things started to slow down for the upstart goalie.

"He went into the NHL and really had to work hard for a spot," Eaves said. "He spent a

Saving the sturgeon

Recreated spawning beds net fish for reintroduction

There are few fish that evoke a sense of awe as the lake sturgeon. They grow to over 11 feet long and can live for decades.

They are the largest fish to inhabit the Great Lakes but rarely seen by most fishermen. I'd never seen one in my lifetime.

Sadly, their numbers have plummeted over the years due to dams that block access to their spawning grounds, impacts from invasive species, overharvesting and habitat destruction, particularly a lack of spawning habitat in the Detroit River.

Their spawning grounds were decimated many years ago from loss of wetlands, industrial pollution and dredging in the Detroit River for shipping channels.

Thankfully, there are people like Dr. Leon Carl who is the Midwest Area Regional Executive of the USGS.

Dr. Carl had a vision that the spawning grounds for Lake Sturgeon and other species like the lake whitefish could be rebuilt.

Dr. Carl's idea was simple and elegant. However, the logistics involved were daunting, to say the least. Just imagine trying to recreate spawning grounds that haven't existed for almost a century with permits and jurisdictions shared by two countries, state, provincial and local governments, as well as an Indian tribe.

There were so many questions that needed to be answered.

For instance, where

TAYLOR MADE ADVENTURES

RICK TAYLOR

were the spawning beds? At what depth were they? How strong were the currents? What kind of substrate (natural river rock) did these fish spawn on? How to create habitat for native species in a way that discourages the expansion of invasives? How do they achieve these goals and not disrupt existing shipping channels? More importantly, how could they be assured their work wouldn't be destroyed by the shipping channels? The questions go on and on.

The work began on forming a multi-jurisdictional partnership called the: Huron-Erie Corridor Initiative. The HEC is the connecting corridor between Lake Huron and Lake Erie you can find more information at huron-erie.org.

The partners began collecting data and using the science and management expertise from multiple federal, state and Canadian agencies.

The data collected was invaluable in finding these elusive spawning bed locations.

Russell Strach, Director for the USGS showed me pictures of the Detroit River back in the 1920's. These pictures illustrated the disregard and ignorance we had for our natural resources.

There were pictures of dredging machines that not only tore up the spawning beds but also put the spoils on the rest of the existing spawning beds.

It took a long time looking through historical documents, but some of the old spawning beds were found and the work had only just begun.

After a great deal of time, effort and money the end was in sight.

Experimental spawning beds were recreated with the help of multiple U.S. and Canadian agencies.

Then it happened. Most locals know of Fighting Island, which on the upper Detroit River just south of Lake St. Clair. Fighting Island is just one of many locations with the newly placed spawning beds.

Scientists were hoping for the best when they went down to check for sturgeon eggs. And they found them!

All their work came down to this moment. Just imagine being the one to find those elusive eggs and absorbing the significance of that moment.

All-in-all there was just a small handful of eggs collected from the site.

The Fisheries Scientists brought the eggs back to the USGS site located in Ann Arbor where they were hatched.

Sixteen lake sturgeon

Several area school children were among those helping to release young sturgeon into the Detroit River. The fish came from eggs harvested from recreated spawning beds.

have survived in captivity; likely far higher odds than in a natural environment.

Not only did the USGS incubate these eggs, they also hoped to release the sturgeon once they got large enough to survive in the wild so scientists could learn more about habitat use by these juvenile fish.

Strach showed me the sturgeon prior to their release and I was truly humbled to see them. Watching those 16 sturgeon swimming in a holding tank at the USGS location was a sight that I'll never forget.

On Oct. 22, Senator Carl Levin, Congressman John Dingell, Canadian

Member of Parliament Jeffrey Watson, Trenton Mayor Gerald Brown, HEC initiative partners, and a group of school kids got to participate and release the young sturgeon.

I remember sitting with Strach afterwards and watching the proud look on his face as he went over the work of Dr. Carl and all the other dedicated scientists with the USGS and other agencies.

Then he looked at me and gestured with his hands to help make his point that "this is a celebration about the restoration of fish habitat of the Huron Erie Corridor (HEC)."

Passion is a funny thing.

Passion made the partners work to reestablish lake sturgeon and lake whitefish spawning habitat. Let us not forget that passion fills every scientist involved in this project.

Passion exudes from Strach as well. I remember how excited he was to show me the sturgeon and his energy is contagious. If there's a common thread among these scientists then it's a passion for nature. I hope their passion puts a skip in your step as it has for me.

Pheasants Forever, others take aim

Southeastern Michigan counties on list for habitat improvement

Pheasants Forever, the Michigan Department of Natural Resources and Environment (DNRE) and other partners have developed a new Pheasant Recovery Initiative aimed at restoring Michigan's pheasant hunting heritage.

Three county areas are initially targeted by the initiative for pheasant habitat improvement, including Huron, Sanilac and Tuscola counties; Hillsdale, Lenawee and Monroe counties; and Gratiot, Saginaw and Clinton counties.

Geographic Information Survey (GIS) was used to identify priority areas in the state based on the potential to positively impact pheasant numbers.

Factors in developing priority areas include: an open agricultural landscape, less forest and abundance of lands enrolled in federal Farm Bill conservation programs (such as the Conservation Reserve Program, or CRP).

The plan calls for identifying 10,000-acre areas where landowners are interested in resurrecting pheasant hunting.

Once identified, the DNRE will study the habitat and work with partners and landowners on habitat restoration.

"There are more than 50,000 hunters who pursue pheasants annually in Michigan, and we can do better at meeting their demand for opportunity," says Mike Parker, Pheasants Forever's Regional Wildlife Biologist in the state. "It's a given that when you have quality and quantity habitat, you have pheasants."

"Revitalizing habitat - nesting cover, escape cover and food and winter cover - is the key to revitalizing pheasant hunting in Michigan."

The goal of the plan is to double Michigan's current pheasant harvest. The plan will also have a tremendous impact on hunter retention and recruitment in the state.

The key difference between past efforts and the new Pheasant Recovery Initiative, Parker says, is the broad landscape scale.

"Previous efforts have been successful on small er scales, improving 40 acres for a landowner here, and 40 acres for a landowner there," Parker said. "But to maximize pheasant hunting, we need to broaden the focus."

Parker said the goal will be to restore pheasant habitat on 15 to 30 percent of the landscape within the Pheasant Recovery Areas, utilizing state land where possible.

The long-range objective is to have 200 or so 10,000-acre Pheasant Recovery Areas in the state, or 2 million acres in the program.

Other partners developing the Pheasant Recovery Initiative in Michigan include Michigan United Conservation Clubs, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture and the Michigan Department of Agriculture.

For participating Pheasant Recovery Area coalitions, the DNRE staff will provide assistance on habitat prescriptions, project partners will aid in securing seed for grass plantings and federal resources may be leveraged to provide financial incentives for participating landowners.

Also, for land that meets habitat restoration objectives, the DNRE may provide seed and/or materials for plantings.

This winter, Pheasants Forever, DNRE staff and project partners will be hosting landowner workshops to discuss the Pheasant Recovery Initiative.

To get involved in the program and for more details, landowners may also contact Al Stewart, DNRE Upland Game Specialist at stewartal@michigan.gov or Mark Sargent, DNRE Private Lands Coordinator at SargentM@michigan.gov.

Michigan is home to 36 Pheasants Forever chapters and more than 7,800 Pheasants Forever members.

Area athletes sign

Last week, Huron basketball players Dante Williams and A.J. Mathew signed their letters of intent to play at Oakland University and the University of Toledo respectively.

Several athletes around the Washtenaw County area have followed suit, as more and more sports stars are signing to play in college.

Dave LaMore of Dexter signed to play basketball at Cornell, while fellow Dreadnaughts Andrew Erber signed with Virginia Military Academy to play lacrosse and Stephen Sobczak signed to swim at Missouri.

Milan's Nena Doran, Kat Hoffman and Vanessa Garcia all signed to play college softball. Hoffman and Garcia will take their bats to the University of Detroit-Mercy, while Doran will take her skills to Cleveland State.

THE GREAT OUTDOORS: FROM THE DNR

Keeping tabs

DNRE Fisheries Division has a watchful eye on all of state's waters

Most anglers understand that the Fisheries Division of the Department of Natural Resources and Environment not only manages the fish populations of the state's waters - and protects and improves fish habitat - but also helps build fish populations by stocking lakes and streams with fish produced in the hatchery system.

But a somewhat lesser-known job of the Fisheries Division is simply keeping tabs on what's going on in the state's waters and trying to understand why.

Fisheries Division's research section tries to get a snapshot of current fish populations, and, by comparing those pictures to past pictures, draw conclusions about what direction those populations are headed.

When fisheries managers change regulations - for instance when the length limit on bass was raised from 12 inches to 14 inches - researchers often follow with surveys designed to figure out how the change impacted the fisheries.

The DNRE maintains a number of research stations across the state dedicated to answering questions about fisheries.

There are stations located in all four of the state's major watersheds - the Great Lakes of Superior, Michigan, Huron and Erie - though sometimes the responsibilities of the station transcend watershed boundaries.

The fisheries research station located on Lake St. Clair, for instance, not only monitors the Lake St. Clair fish community, as well as the lower Great Lakes sturgeon population, and the Lake Erie walleye population, but it surveys the Saginaw Bay fish community, too.

The research station's vessel, "Channel Cat," is the station's "primary work platform," explained fisheries biologist Mike Thomas.

"We know, because of the tagging studies that fisheries research biologist Bob Haas started back in the 1980s, that walleye that spawn in Lake Erie tributaries are migratory and contribute to fisheries as far north as Saginaw Bay," Thomas said. "The management implications of that kind of migration of that sort of species - sought by both recreational and commercial fishermen - are very large.

"That knowledge has fostered the collaborative approach to managing these fisheries among the various agencies that have jurisdiction over these waters.

"If we all had decided to go ahead and do our own thing and ignored the migratory nature of these fish, it could result in a catastrophic impact on these fish."

Anglers can remember a few years back, when Lake Erie's walleye population was at a low point, the seasons were changed and creel limits were cut. The idea was to leave enough fish to be able to repopulate the lake. Thomas said.

"Monitoring year-class and recruitment strength has provided managers with the information that allows managers to make wise decisions," Thomas said. "That's why we manage Lake Erie by quotas."

Phil Schneeberger is the station manager-biologist at Marquette Fisheries Station.

"We have a lot of responsibility on Lake Superior, but we have the northern shores of Lake Michigan and some projects in northern Lake Huron, too," Schneeberger said. "And we do more work on inland streams and lakes than other Great Lakes station; that goes way back to when we first started this station and we hired biologists who had that kind of expertise."

Schneeberger said classifying inland streams and working on lake sturgeon reproduction are a couple examples of the station's inland work.

"On Lake Michigan, we've had a project going on since the late 1980s that looks at walleye, yellow perch and, more recently, the near-shore fish populations with a lot of the focus on the Bays de Noc," Schneeberger said.

"And Lake Superior is the focus of our large vessel program - the Lake Char - and that works mostly on lake trout."

the recent changes in recreational lake trout creel limits and has a lot to do with how the treaty waters are managed.

"And I work with commercial fisheries and collect data on whitefish in northern Lake Michigan and all of Lake Superior," Schneeberger said.

Biologist Jim Johnson runs the research station at Alpena, which researches Lake Huron and the St. Marys River.

"The main thrust of this station is to evaluate our restoration and sport fishery enhancement efforts," Johnson said. "It's a thread that runs through everything we do."

"Right now we're assessing lake trout recruitment, which is a serious concern since the alewives disappeared.

"There's not as much prey out there as there used to and we know the fish are not growing as large and as quickly as they used to."

The Alpena Great Lakes Fishery Research Station is also working on new stocking regimens for both trout and steelhead. The old stocking strategy - putting in the trout when they're young and small - isn't working because of predation by walleye.

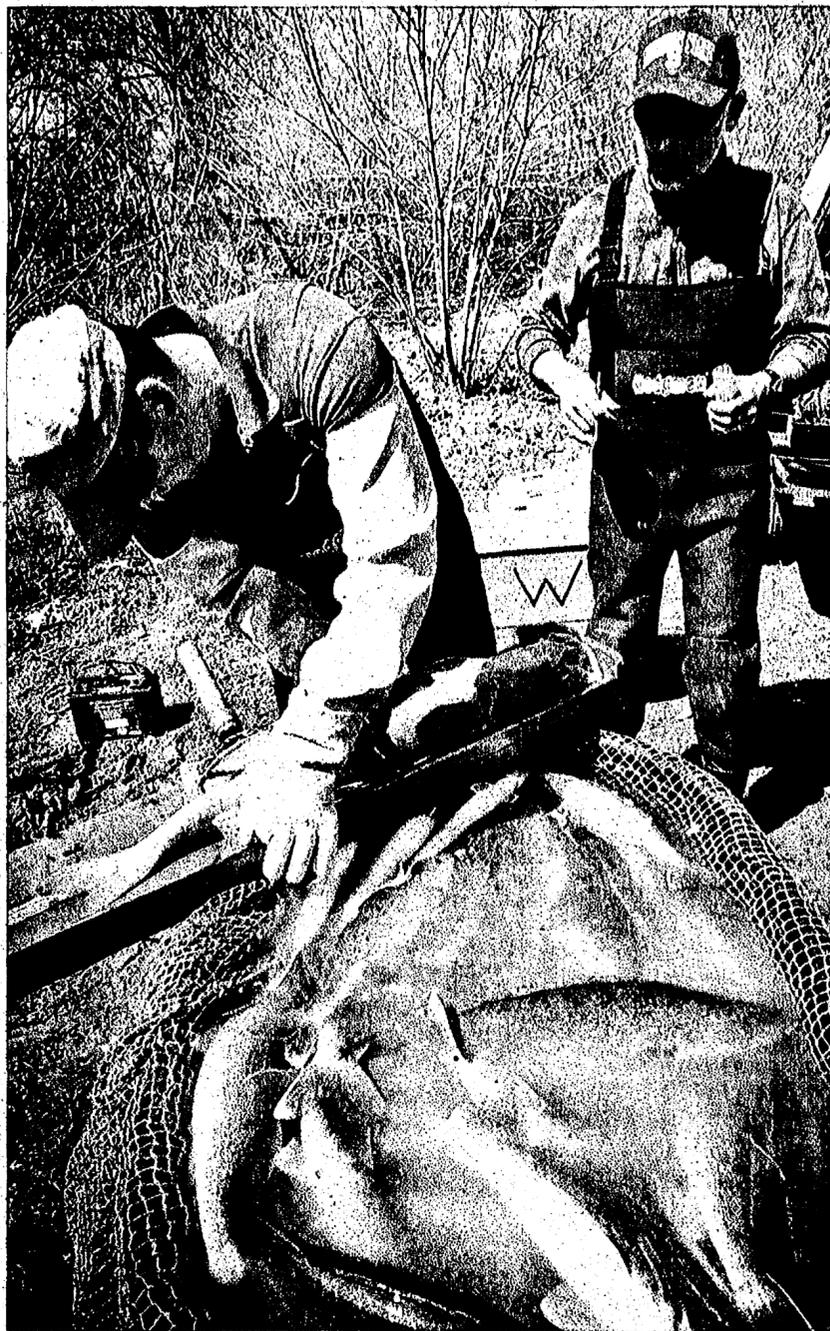

"We have a big investment in the fish that come out of our hatcheries," Johnson said. "We're trying to make sure we're getting the most we can out of that investment."

One unusual project out of the Alpena shop is trying to determine if lake herring - a native species that has been decimated - can be rehabilitated and will it serve as a prey base, as well as a fishery, in a future.

Biologist Dave Clapp, who heads the Charlevoix Research Station, runs a number of projects that have implications well beyond its Lake Michigan base.

For instance, the Coded Wire Tag program involves tagging young Chinook and rainbow trout (steelhead), then retrieving tags from harvested fish.

The coded wire tags gave the DNRE the data to show that many Chinook salmon planted in Lake Huron were caught in Lake Michigan.

The Charter Boat Survey tracks charter boat fishing on all of the Great Lakes and Lake St. Clair. The Statewide Angler Survey collects catch, harvest and participation rates for recreational anglers on key Great Lakes tributaries and inland lakes.

As with the other research stations, the Charlevoix facility is headquarters for a large research vessel (the R/V Steelhead).

But the Charlevoix station also conducts small-boat surveys, including a cisco survey at Elk Rapids and near-shore lake trout trawling.

Inland, the Charlevoix station is working on a lake trout travel study in Elk Lake and a muskellunge travel study on the Antrim chain of lakes.

In short, the research stations are in charge of assessing fisheries resources and determining which management practices can enhance them.

They are a vital cog in managing Michigan's fisheries resources
