More M-52 road work on horizon

MDOT, local businesses plan to communicate

By Dave Merchant
Heritage Media

Construction cones will continue to accent the Chelsea area this summer when one of the major roads will be under construction. The major M-52 project will begin sometime later this year, according to the Michigan Department of Transportation.

Bob Pierce, Executive Director of the Chelsea Area Chamber of Commerce, said the road work might cause a bit of a headache for local businesses.

for two summers," Pierce said. "That experience gave us an opportunity to develop a communications process between MDOT (Michigan Department of Transportation), the City, the merchants and the Chamber."

Pierce said there is no way around the fact that businesses in the community will be impacted by this construction. "We will help to minimize this impact through good communications, proactive marketing, and support from all parties in this project," he added. "We are fortunate to have staff at the city who are supportive and understanding of the needs of our business community."

Pierce said there will always be surprises and changes in any project but likes to say that the communication process in place will ease the pain during the construction. He has been in contact with City Engineer Christine Linfield about this project.

Final Farewell

Turner resigns from school board position

By David Hayda
Heritage Media

Chelsea School District Board of Education member Rob Turner tendered his final resignation at Monday evening's meeting, effective December 31.

Turner is the longest-serving member currently on the board. Turner stated in his letter to the board that the resignation is the result of his election as Washtenaw County Commissioner. He thanked the board for three years of "unfailing support" for the residents of Chelsea.

Chelsea President Steve Olsen noted that Turner has been a very active member of the board and has been a great asset to the district.

principle of what is in the best interest of the students.

Turner said his involvement with the schools has been a joy since his first days with the North Creek PTO many years ago. He said that he was impressed with Superintendent David Killip's leadership skills, and that Chelsea is "...one of the finest districts in the state."

Scoreboard Proposal

Also at the meeting, Athletic Director Wayne Welton and football coach Brad Bush presented information about the need for a new scoreboard at the football field, citing age of the scoreboard, poor visibility in its current location, and newer lighting and wireless technology that is now available.

Welton and Bush said that a new scoreboard would be useful for other sports and events that take place at the stadium. They proposed that funding for a new scoreboard would be through scoreboard advertising, with no cost to the district. Saline and Ann Arbor schools have scoreboards funded through advertisers, using a company called Side Effects, Inc.

If approved, the new wireless scoreboard would be placed in the proper location and have LED lighting, which is more visible during daylight hours. The district would approve artwork and

Pamida store set to close

By Dave Merchant

It doesn't say so on the windows or doors, but things will be changing at the start of 2011 at the Chelsea Shopping Center.

The Pamida Store in Chelsea will be closing its doors by the end of the year, according to Bob Pierce, executive director of the Chelsea Chamber of Commerce.

"Pamida has been a very convenient choice of shopping locally, especially for our seniors," Pierce said. "I have spoken to any number of local business owners and citizens who shop at our local department store instead of going to Ann Arbor or Jackson. There will most certainly be a change in shopping patterns when Pamida closes."

opened in 1993, according to information from the corporate office.

Pierce said the company has been a good neighbor to the community and will be missed.

"I was saddened to hear the news that Pamida will be ceasing operations in Chelsea at the end of the month," he said. "They have always been such a strong supporter of the Family Martial Arts holds food drive for Faith in Action charity Family Martial Arts of Chelsea recently held a holiday food drive to benefit the Faith in Action food bank.

Organized by second degree black belt and junior instructor Michael Hoffman, 17, the Family Martial Arts food drive generated more than six dozen canned, boxed, and shelf stable food items donated by the school's Tae Kwon Do students and their families.

"The Michigan economy has really affected a lot of children and families in our area this year, which means a lot of local people are struggling to make ends meet, not just for the holidays but year round," Hoffman, a senior at Chelsea High School and member of the National Honor Society, said. "I'm hoping that our contributions will help out some families in need."

Master Ana Hotaling, Family Martial Arts' co-owner and master instructor, commended Hoffman's efforts.

"We require our Tae Kwon Do students to participate in community service and in activities that help build their citizenship ... in other words, to put forth a black belt effort in their community," she said. "Michael sets an example for our students, especially our younger students, to follow, and his encouragement led to the many donations we received from our families."

Family Martial Arts students also won 10 medals recently at the 2010 Shinn Mu Kwan Taekwondo Invitational in Haslett, Mich.

Tae Kwon Do schools from all around Michigan and Indiana participated in the yearly fall competition, and Team FMA's athletes—ranging in age from 4 to 40—successfully competed in breaking, forms, and sparring. The results include:

• Bryce Hotaling, 4, of Lyndon Township: First place in the 4-year-old boys' novice division in breaking; First place in the 4-year-old boys' novice division in sparring FMA black belt Nathalie Vandecan of Ann Arbor served as a referee for the event.

District Goals & Programs

Andrew Ingall, Executive Director of Instruction, presented updates to the district's annual goals. Highlights included work towards the new high school requirement that students have at least two years of a world language, expansion of the Reading Apprenticeship program through the Washtenaw Writing Collaborative, and video surveillance to promote a positive and safe school climate.

During public input, Mickey Howe presented plans for Martin Luther King, Jr. Day on January 17. "Differences Without Divisions" is a program to promote diversity in which three panelists will be speaking about Muslims and the Islamic faith. There will be an opportunity for questions and public discussion. Additionally, a youth portion of the forum is being planned which will be aimed at middle and high school students. The event will take place at the Chelsea Public Library.

Other Board News

The board voted to reject bids for restroom renovations in the WSEC 300 building because the cost was much higher than expected.

The deadline to apply to fill the vacant board position is January 6.

According to the latest reports from the state, the School Aid Fund is ahead of last May's projections, but the state is $1.6 billion in the red. "The General Fund may tap the School Aid Fund," said Killips.

The EduJobs Bill is bringing $540,000 to the district, which will be used for the 2011-2012 school year when the stimulus funds are no longer available.

Students competed with carpenters in a nail-driving contest at the recent Just Build It Construction Career Expo at Eastern Michigan University.

Career expo attracts over 1,200 students

Event showcases career options in construction

By Gerald LaVaute
Heritage Media

More than 1,200 students attended this year's Just Build It Construction Career Expo held in November.

The annual event was presented by the Washtenaw Contractors Association at the Eastern Michigan University Convocation Center. It was attended by students in eighth through 12th grades.

The event is intended to showcase to young people the wide range of career opportunities in the construction industry, and to provide direct contact with skilled tradespersons and educators in the industry.

Educators from the 35 local schools whose students attended the expo were enthusiastic about the experience.

Charlene Korpics, a guidance counselor at South Middle School in Belleville, asked students to complete an interest survey in attending the expo, and brought 22 eighth-graders from South school to the expo, in addition to more than 20 additional students from nearby North Middle School.

Korpics said the expo paid for bus transportation to and from the event, a help to lean school budgets the last few years.

"It's real positive experience," Korpics said.

"The kids enjoy the hands-on exhibits," she said.

Students get to see different companies and schools during the expo, and students talk about the event after they return to school, she said.

More than 30 exhibitors, ranging from colleges like EMU, to skilled trades like sheet metal workers, plumbers and pipefitters, ironworkers and bricklayers, to companies like Dymax Engineering and Skanska U.S.A. Building, Inc., participated in the event.

John Ruhlig, a teacher in the building trades program at Saline High School, said students from Saline, Milan, Dexter, Chelsea and Manchester high schools participate in the South and West Washtenaw Consortium, a program in which students attend a half-day of classes at their own school, and travel each day to Saline for training in skills in the construction industry.

Here, they join students from the other schools who are interested in preparing for and learning more about a career in construction.

Ruhlig said that he has taught in the program for 16 years, and has brought students to the Construction Career Expo for each of those years.

He said that there is not a lot of training in high school that helps to prepare a student for a career outside of further training in college, and the expo shows them that there is another way to get training for a career.

"A lot of kids don't know why they're in school," Ruhlig said.

And, depending on the age of the student, the benefits can be twofold. Middle school students are made aware of opportunities in the construction industry, and can begin thinking about it as a career direction, while in high school, Ruhlig said, they can use the expo to begin to learn more about a specific career direction from exposure to skilled trades practitioners. They are also offered an apprenticeship program to begin training in that trade after graduation from high school.

Strands of spaghetti provided the material for a building exercise at Just Build It.

Sizemore wants better communication

By Austen Smith
Heritage Media

With four new board members taking their seats in January and a potential $20 million deficit looming for budget years 2011 and 2012, Washtenaw County Board's Rolland Sizemore wants to see steps taken to improve communication among departments.

During a recent board meeting, Sizemore, D-5th District, specifically called out the Washtenaw County Road Commission saying he wasn't pleased with current management and that he had gotten complaints from residents in his district.

In a later interview, however, Sizemore expanded his comments that the county needs to improve communication among all departments in the hope they leave no stone unturned during the budgeting process.

"I just think there is a disconnect between the local level and the county government, and there is disconnect between the county and its government and the road commission," Sizemore said. "We need to look at things a little differently. The fact is we used to have the money and now we don't. Communication is going to be the secret at all levels. We need to make sure we have that type of communication and we're not missing opportunities."

Washtenaw County Road Commission Managing Director Steve Puuri said his department has provided a number of avenues to improve communication, including sending out board packets prior to meetings and staff reports, in addition to the regular board liaison who attends all of the road commission meetings and functions.

"I'm not really sure what additional information (Sizemore) is looking for. We would like to provide that information in what areas he needs," Puuri said.

Puuri said he met with Sizemore in early November to discuss the Ford Boulevard conversion project. In that meeting, Sizemore expressed concerns that some residents weren't able to get their comments on the record and had trouble reaching officials at the road commission.

"(Sizemore) was not happy because he felt that some of the residents did not have their public comment incorporated into the project," Puuri said.

Puuri addressed the issue of residents not being called back when they contact the road commission, saying most of their staff have direct phone numbers available on the website and they have a front desk receptionist during business hours.

"That sort of thing is more difficult to track," Puuri said. "We have had customer service training over the years and I don't hear a lot of complaints boiling up to my level."

With recently unseated county commissioner Ken

Schwartz, D-2nd District, poised to replace David Rutledge's seat on the Road Commission, Sizemore believes that they will be able improve on the disconnect between county government and residents.

"Ken was the attorney for Augusta Township in his district. He knows the people there, and he was on Superior Township board, so he knows the people there. He will be good to work with," Sizemore said.

"He brings that connection closer between county board and the road commission. He knows what we're looking for."

U of M study looks at colon cancer

Patients with complications less likely to receive chemo, research shows

Patients who have complications after colorectal cancer surgery are less likely to get chemotherapy, even when it is clearly recommended for their diagnosis, a new study from the University of Michigan Comprehensive Cancer Center finds.

In addition, patients with complications were more than twice as likely to have their chemotherapy delayed for more than 120 days after diagnosis or two months after surgery, which is considered the appropriate timeframe for receiving chemotherapy.

"Surgical complications are typically thought to be short-term problems, but our study suggests there is a clear link between downstream cancer care and complications that occur during surgery," said lead study author Dr. Samantha Hendren, in a news release. Hendren is also assistant professor of surgery at the U of M Medical School.

"This is critical because chemotherapy in this subset of colorectal cancer patients has clear lifesaving benefit."

According to the American Cancer Society, 142,570 Americans will be diagnosed with colorectal cancer this year, and 51,370 will die from the disease.

The study looked at data from 17,108 patients who had surgery for stage III colorectal cancer. Chemotherapy is recommended for all stage III colorectal cancer patients and has been shown to improve survival as much as 16 percent after five years.

Patients were identified for the study from the Surveillance, Epidemiology and End Results-Medicare database, a large population-based registry.

Results of the study appear in the December issue of the journal Diseases of the Colon and Rectum.

Because chemotherapy stresses the body and slows healing, medical oncologists are generally reluctant to give chemotherapy to patients who are frail or unwell because of complications from surgery.

Hendren also suggests that some patients may opt out of chemotherapy after experiencing surgical complications.

Complications include pneumonia, urinary tract infections, heart attack, wound infections, need for additional surgery or abscess drainage. Researchers believe that some of these complications can be prevented.

Nationally, variations exist among hospitals in use of chemotherapy for stage III colorectal cancer, and national quality guidelines focus on encouraging chemotherapy use.

The researchers believe that surgical complications could be one factor that explains this disparity and urge hospitals to adopt quality measures to reduce complications.

"If we're going to try to improve compliance with chemotherapy guidelines, we need to be aware why patients are not getting it. Surgical complications could be part of that picture," said Hendren, noting that this will be the topic of her next study.

Enrichment program now open

E.nopi of Ann Arbor is the first Michigan location of the internationally known E.nopi after-school education enrichment program.

Located at 2411 Oak Valley Drive, Suite 500, in the Oak Valley Office Center, E.nopi of Ann Arbor assists children ages 4 through 14 who wish to excel at or beyond grade level.

"E.nopi is designed to help children learn proactively, independently and at their own pace," said Stephanie Stevens-Barbatano, director of E.nopi of Ann Arbor, in a news release.

Classes are offered in math, reading and writing. The E.nopi math curriculum incorporates components to improve children's problem-solving skills and spatial understanding, which helps prepare students for standardized college tests.

Classes are taught by certified teachers, with one teacher for every four students. Children take a preliminary diagnostic test so they begin the program at the appropriate level.

The E.nopi teaching method was pioneered by Young Joong Kang in 1976. Kang is the founder of Daekyo, Korea's educational services provider, which today operates in more than a dozen countries and benefits over 2.5 million children.

The new Ann Arbor center is one of 120 E.nopi locations in the United States and among 800 worldwide.

Schools, cities face dire times in the new year

'Tis the season to be jolly, but not if you live in a city or have kids going to school.

The harsh reality is 70 cities and well over two dozen school districts are in bad shape financially. No one is predicting any of them will follow the auto guys into bankruptcy court, but no one is ruling it out either, starting with the governor.

"There are a lot of cities that are on the bubble," said Gov. Jennifer Granholm, and it could burst at anytime.

Without new revenue, the governor warns, "if you continue down this path, you will have more and more cities that are going to be asking for an emergency manager or bankruptcy."

Hamtramck already is asking for just that.

Over at the Michigan Municipal League, the lobby group for local governments, there's an air of apprehension: Things could get worse before they get better... if they ever do get better.

Lobbyist Andy Shore sees the perfect storm growing on the horizon.

The lifeblood of local governments is the property tax. Try collecting that when buildings are boarded up and plastered with "For Sale" signs.

And state aid has been dropping like winter temperatures.

No community wants to go into bankruptcy," Shore said, but "it's possible if the situation gets dire."

TIM

The cities, like little kids waiting for Santa, are foolishly looking to Lansing.

Hey gang, the cupboard is bare. In fact, with $400 million in state revenue sharing still sitting out there, it becomes an easy target for the new governor and the Legislature to raid to reduce the state's own $1.6 billion sea of red ink.

Shore reports that lawmakers often tell the Michigan Municipal League that local governments can raise millage when the state reduces assistance.

It's the kind of trickle-down policy that drives the locals batty.

Their prayer would be that state government would step up and raise some new revenue.

But first the new Snyder administration and others want to debate what role state government should be playing.

"What do we want government to be?" asks new Senate GOP Leader Randy Richardville, who shocked Lansing the other day when he confessed that "everything was on the table," including new revenue from somewhere.

Granholm took that as a holiday ray of hope. She tried on her watch to raise new revenue. She got one income tax increase and a few other items, but she knew it was not enough.

She believes the new Legislature might go there if the new governor leads the way.

Recall that Rick Snyder ran on a platform of not talking about raising new dollars, but he chose his words carefully.

"It's my objective" to avoid new taxes, he said. Note the key word "objective." Note, he did not completely rule it out and, in fact, some of those around him have whispered that there is no way out of this budget mess without an influx of new bucks.

He shows no signs of going there... yet. Betting money around these parts is that "it's only a matter of time."

The schools are not much better off. Due to an influx of Obama-bucks, they are staying just above the waterline, but their costs are rising too and the federal bailout is gone for good.

Losing public servants is one thing... shutting down schools and impacting our children is quite another.

You get the eerie feeling that all this will come to a head after the new year. First one city goes down, then another, and then some school districts will join in.

Perhaps a series of bankruptcies in home towns and schools would be the catalyst for new revenue.

And maybe you still believe in Santa Claus, too.

OUR TAKE: Editorial Seniors need $250 Economic Recovery Payment

Press Secretary Robert Gibbs has announced that President Obama will renew his call for a $250 Economic Recovery Payment to senior citizens this year, as well as to veterans and people with disabilities.

Last year, under the Recovery Act, 56 million people reportedly benefited from the first Economic Recovery Payment, including about 50 million Social Security beneficiaries.

The president's efforts come in the wake of the Social Security Administration's announcement that for the second year in a row, there will be no cost-of-living adjustment for those receiving Social Security benefits. The political overtones of this move are as obvious — and in some respects as menacing — as clouds on a stormy day.

But, if you strip away politics — and it's often difficult — then this is not such a bad idea. We believe this is a case where the Democrats have stumbled onto something reasonable and good. Believe it or not, there can be some good ideas coming out of Washington.

It's usually for the wrong reason, but that shouldn't mean we completely dismiss the proposal.

First, let's concede that the Democrats are backing this idea to help win support from senior citizens, most of whom are not real pleased with the Medicare sacrifices they are being asked to make in the new health care bill. And, for that matter, it wouldn't be such a bad idea for Republicans to jump on board.

There will, of course, be the knee-jerk response from some that it's fiscally irresponsible and cuts have to be made somewhere.

But the $250 allotment would be helping many people survive. It would not be just giving them some extra spending money.

The core issue with the $250 payment is not politics but inflation.

The Social Security Administration defended its no cost-of-living decision, saying inflation is low or non-existent. Well, in some areas, such as the housing industry, the bubble has burst and homes are cheaper.

But most seniors are pretty well set in their home or apartment and aren't going to be looking to buy a new house.

However, in the basic living areas that affect senior citizens the most, inflation is anything but stagnant. The cost of food and clothing continues to rise, despite the horrible economy.

Just recently it was announced that inflation is expected to boost beef prices by 4 percent.

And the price of gasoline, which vacillates daily, generally is on an upward trend. Likewise, heating and electrical rates are doing nothing but skyrocketing.

For many senior citizens these costs consume the greatest percentage of their income. You can make any issue political and certainly our illustrious leaders in Washington are doing that with the proposed $250 payment.

But the money for most seniors, will certainly be put toward basic living expenses.

There are plenty of other areas in the budget to cut to pay for this.

GUEST COLUMN: By Tom Watkins

Mayor Bloomberg learns a different tune

Mayor Bloomberg, bring on Diana.

In 2001, "Diana Ross" joined me as my deputy, chief academic officer when I was appointed state superintendent of public instruction for the state of Michigan.

You see, like Cathleen P. Black, the chairwoman of Hearst Magazines, I was not a career educator. I came to the role from the position of president and CEO of the economic council of Palm Beach County, Florida. The Economic Council is a private business organization comprised of the top business leaders in the county.

In accepting the responsibility, I presented the state board of education with a symbolic yardstick. It did not have inches, centimeters, feet or meters. It read: "Show me how this helps a teacher teach and a child learn." The Michigan Department of Education decision making yardstick every decision we made had to measure up to this statement.

This brings us to "Diana Ross." Like Ms. Black, as a new state superintendent I was without a pedigree in pedagogy, curriculum, psychometrics and learning theory. I instinctively knew I needed to bolster my strengths in the business of education. The assistance was needed for both political and educational reasons.

My skills were in business, marketing, media, legislative, community and the political side of the ledger. All needed for a dispirited educational system at the time. Yet, education's "business" is education. It is ultimately about helping teachers teach and children learn.

TOM

I viewed my role as doing the blocking and tackling to clear out the craziness that often gets in the way of teaching and learning.

So, welcome Diana Ross. I hired one of my competitors for state superintendent as my second in command; the deputy superintendent.

In fact, thinking the title sounded more like a NY city building manager, I changed the title to chief academic officer. He was a former teacher, a principal, a local superintendent and had forgotten more knowledge about education than I knew.

He was also the former superintendent of Dearborn Public Schools, Dr. Jeremy Hughes.

My skills and the educational talents of my extremely talented chief academic officer were complementary and ultimately beneficial to the 1.7 million children that attend Michigan's public schools.

Form follows function. Yes, education needs to be managed and led well — but at the end of the day it is about helping teachers teach and children learn.

The chief academic officer had the lead, under my direction on that end. I sang doo-wop to the educational tune our chief academic officer had the lead to implement.

Mayor Bloomberg, we made a good team. I did not lose in the arrangement, our kids won.

In a change of heart, Mayor Bloomberg forgot about the Diana Ross and the Supremes hit song "My Guy."

"Nothing you can say could tear me away from my guy (My gal)..."

"Cause I'm stuck like glue to my guy..."

Learning to compromise and work in teams are good 21st century skills.

It was positive to see the Mayor accept the compromise offered by New York's state education commissioner David M. Stiner and have Ms. Black agree to hire a second in charge with the educational experience and skills she does not bring to the table.

Oh, I must tell you, given how crazy education is today, it was not my business skills that served me best in the role as state Superintendent, it was the experienced I gained as the former state mental health commissioner.

For the students of New York City it is good the political theater is over — now, let's get the focus back where it belongs — on teaching and learning.

Tom Watkins served as Michigan's state superintendent of schools, 2001-05 and state mental health director, 1986-90. He can be reached at tdwatkins@aol.com

Hospital party celebrates garden

By Jan Collins
Guest Writer

Chelsea Community Hospital celebrated the 10-year anniversary of its Garden of Serenity recently by hosting an appreciation party for donors, volunteers and employees.

Following the lunchtime event, patients and families enjoyed the fourth annual Fall Fun Day in the garden. Activities included nature crafts, refreshments, a garden quiz, and a raffle for mums. Kelly Chan, Therapy Services Director, also presented a speech to honor the donors and volunteers.

The Garden of Serenity is centrally located across from the main dining room in the hospital. It is lush with cooling shade trees, flowering shrubs, perennial grasses and flowers, giant pots filled with annuals, and a memorial statue and benches. It is a place where staff, patients, family members, and visitors can have lunch, hold a meeting, or simply take a break and experience the positive sensations of the outdoors.

Rehabilitation therapists at Chelsea Community Hospital bring patients outside to practice mobility and other skills. Several hospital rooms, a clinic, and a few offices also enjoy the garden view, screened lightly by yews and trees.

Recent donations from the hospital employee giving program, High 5 Club, and the Chelsea Area Garden Club helped the garden acquire a large cedar trellis with red flowering Mandevilla vines, large pots, and a triple-tiered fountain—a structure that many employees requested over the years to add the soothing sound of trickling water to the garden.

A Garden's History

Over 10 years ago, the idea of a peaceful garden in the middle of a community hospital came about when Dr. Larry Handelman brought two women together who had experience with the courtyard. Recreational Therapist Jan Collins Shamraj and Master Gardener Charlene Harris worked to create the Garden of Serenity at CCH.

Shamraj worked with patients in a modest adapted gardening program in the courtyard. Harris was a patient at Chelsea in the late 1990s who often wandered the hallways in her wheelchair looking for a way outside for some fresh air. An avid gardener, Harris began to visualize the potential for the space. She thought that anyone who viewed the courtyard might be beckoned in to enjoy a serene garden space for relaxation and comfort.

Harris became the driving force behind the Garden of Serenity, which she helped to envision, design, and build with help from Shamraj and many others. It has been a true community effort involving over 60 volunteers contributing to the materials, building, care and improvement of the garden, including its second Master Gardener volunteer from 2008 to 2010, Sandy Hofmann.

The garden is a very popular space at the Chelsea Hospital. One could say the Garden of Serenity is all about plants, but dig a little deeper and it's also about bringing people together.

The Pamida Foundation has provided grants to many local agencies including Faith in Action and the (Chelsea) fire department. They have been a model for how big box stores should interact with a local community," he said.

According to the Pamida chain website, there are more than 200 stores in 16 states. Some of the other locations in Michigan are Clare, Tecumseh and Brooklyn. This store employs 17 individuals.

In 2008 the store reopened after a fire that reportedly caused about $1 million in dam-ing with MDOT on these issues," he said. "They are working to finalize the detour routes and she shared dates with them regarding the fair. MDOT will not have lane closures during this time."

According to Pierce, there was major construction on Main Street a few years ago and the Chamber worked well with MDOT. The construction crews were able to make sure that temporary signage was handled properly.

"I envision a similar approach will be taken with this project," Pierce said. "While the problems created for businesses by the construction was unavoidable, we did minimize any other surprises and major issues."

Exhibition to open Jan. 7

The Ann Arbor Art Center will open its first exhibition of 2011 called "Moving Ground." The exhibition features the works of fiber artist Lois Bryant and photographer/sculptor John Cynar, who explore the parallels of manmade and naturally occurring patterns.

The exhibition opens Jan. 7 and a reception, which is free and open to the public. It will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. Jan. 14 at the Ann Arbor Art Center's second-floor exhibition galleries.

Nationally recognized fiber artist Bryant finds inspiration literally from the ground beneath her feet. Her installation explores her creative process from start to finish.

Her work begins as a photographic study of light and shadow, textures and surfaces. The digital images are translated by the computer-aided Dobby loom into large scale jacquard weavings. She then links the historical hand-loom process with contemporary abstract imagery, resulting in tapestries that look like something familiar yet are also open to alternative interpretations, according to a news release from the art center.

The exhibition includes an interactive installation where a series of images are projected on the floor and appear to move beneath the viewers' feet. Bryant's weavings can be found in the permanent collections of numerous museums, corporations and private collectors.

Cynar uses digital photography, found objects and encaustic painting to visually weave together elements of landscape with those of architecture. Cynar plays with the juxtaposition of natural and personalized space. He is currently a master's of fine arts candidate in sculpture at Eastern Michigan University.

Workshops with both artists will be offered Jan. 15. Visit www.annarborartcenter.org for more about the exhibition and accompanying workshops, as well as additional art center information.

"Moving Ground" will be on display through Feb. 6.

Antiques show to feature something for everyone

Annual fundraiser helps historical society projects

By Steven Howard
Heritage Media

The Saline Area Historical Society will host its 24th annual Antique Show at the Washtenaw Farm Council Grounds Jan. 15, with the event representing an important revenue generator for the organization.

Janet Swope is responsible for ensuring the show goes on as planned, and she said there will be something there for every taste.

"It's all across the board," she said of items vendors will be selling. "It's just a nice general collection of antiques, but there aren't any crafts."

Swope said the antique booths will be concentrated in one heated facility on the grounds, making for a pleasant winter shopping experience.

"We have 35 (vendors) all in the one building," she said. "We have many people that have said they really enjoy the show."

Although the past few years have been tough on the antiques trade, causing the show to be downsized a bit, Swope said she and her colleagues always expect a loyal customer base because of the overall quality of the event they put on.

"We always have a good crowd," she said. "It's a nice, friendly show. People in the past have come in from Chicago."

In addition to the diverse shopping, Swope said some local Scouts will be on hand to feed hungry patrons.

"The Girl Scouts do all the food," she said. "They also make their famous apple pies that will be for sale."

All of the culinary proceeds will go right back into providing the young cooks and bakers with funding for their future scouting endeavors.

"We just let them come in and cook all the food," Swope said, "and they keep all (the money) that they make."

The antique show itself is also financially beneficial to the historical society, with proceeds going toward furthering historical society functions throughout the year.

"We just have the one (antique) sale, and it's our biggest fundraiser of the year," Swope said. "It mostly goes into our general fund and most of it goes toward education."

Swope said educational opportunities afforded by these funds include the many interpretational programs offered to schoolage children at Rentschler Farm throughout the year.

Swope said planning began in the summer to make certain all went well.

"In August, we start working on it," she said. "There's a lot of advertisements we have to get out early."

Exactly how many people actually turn out for the show largely depends upon if the weather cooperates, so Swope said they are hoping for a clear day that's not too cold.

"The weather kind of controls the show," she said.

Swope said the antique show will open its doors at 8 a.m. and run until 5 p.m.

Admission is $3 per person, and parking is offered at no cost.

Those seeking more information can call either 429-3164 or 944-0713.

The Washtenaw Farm Council Grounds is located at 5055 Ann Arbor Saline Road in Ann Arbor.

Corvette Grand Sport makes dreary driving fun

By David Schmidt
Contributing Writer to the Auto Section

Here's a flash: the Corvette Grand Sport is a very livable car, and it makes a decent (and fun) daily driver.

Some caveats: like all sports cars, it's not terribly good in ice and snow, so you might not want to commute in it in the middle of a northern winter. Few people who own them use a Corvette as a daily driver, anyway, although this car is capable of that. While it may be a second car (usually a reward for the buyer), it's a car with a job to do—make its driver happy.

Even if most of its work is on a weekend morning on a gyrating road, the fact that it can do regular old automotive grunt work is a statement of the standards that GM applied in designing this Corvette.

It would make any commute more fun

My test Grand Sport was the new blue color for 2010, and it's a great color for this car. While it's not exactly the hue of America's blue and white racing colors, it does evoke memories of the Corvette's racing heritage.

What sets the Grand Sport apart is the wide-body styling, a wider track and a stiffened suspension, which allows this model to focus on performance slightly more than the base Corvette.

It gets wider wheels and tires; revised shocks, stabilizer bar and spring specifications; and specific gearing.

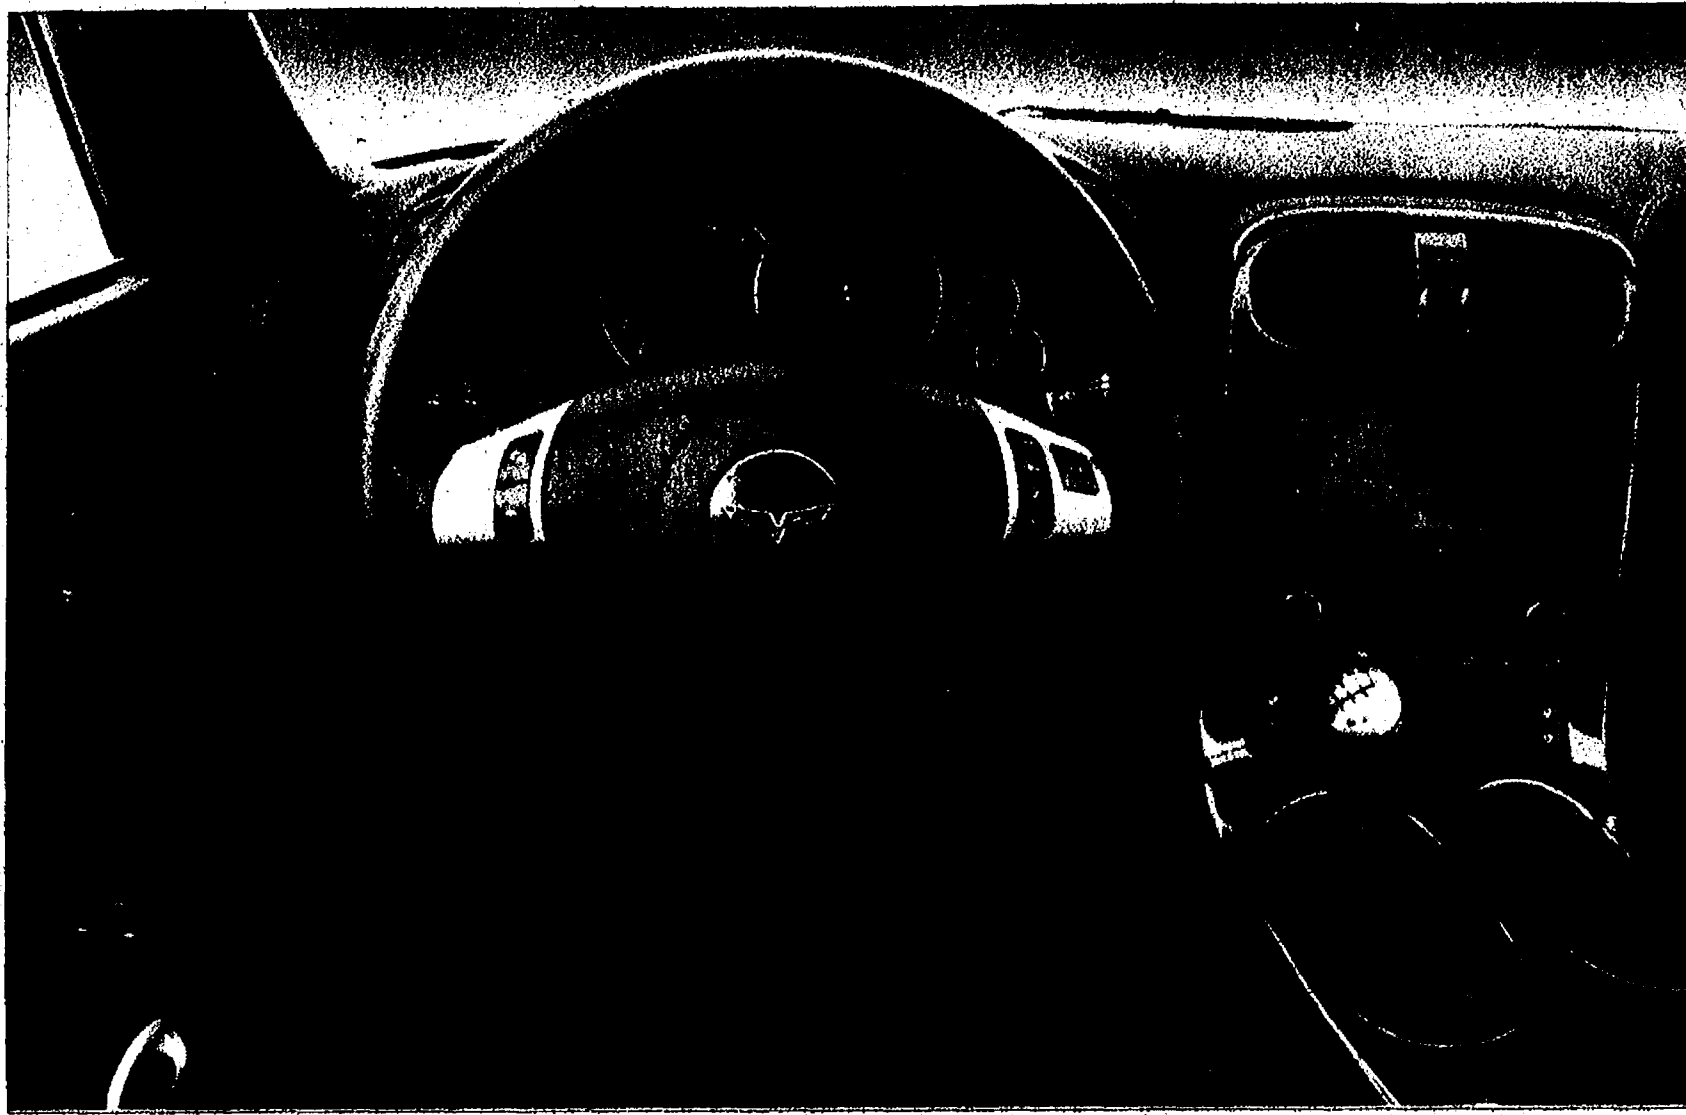

This is a big car: flat, long and wide. It really isn't that big, but your eye fools you into seeing a car that could be a prototype racer if you let yourself get a bit carried away.

There's no missing it. In a parking lot, it looks like a bold word in a page of bland pale text.

You have to smile, knowing you're about to get into it, and there are many people around you who'd be glad to change places with you. Or join you.

Is it perfect? No

While the seats are comfortable and supportive, the interior is still clearly a Chevrolet. It's not that the designers haven't tried to make it nice, but compared to comparably priced sports cars, it doesn't have the same feel, both literally and figuratively.

The controls are sleek and sporty.

Perhaps it's a matter of having to use what's already available.

This is a halo car bought by affluent enthusiasts. GM's development money's going to be spent on products that sell in the hundreds of thousands rather than thousands.

That's as it should be. My job is to evaluate cars dispassionately, before driving around with a silly grin on my face.

Much of that smile comes from being near the 6.2-liter LS3 small-block V8 engine—the engine for both the Corvette and Grand Sport models.

It produces 430 hp, and 424 lb-ft of torque with the standard exhaust system. An optional dual-mode exhaust system ups that by six horsepower and four lbs-ft of torque.

A standard 6-speed manual transmission and an optional 6-speed automatic paddle-shift automatic are available. I'm not a fan of this transmission, as it feels like a throwback.

It's heavy, and the linkage is clunky and still wants you to shift from first to third.

GM's engineers could create a transmission that's as good as the ones BMW and Porsche have for equally powerful cars.

Unfortunately, there are too many things General Motors needs to do that are much more important to the company's survival.

The Grand Sport does come with standard launch control with the manual transmission, greatly improving full-throttle starts when you're on a track. Put the car in competitive mode, and it holds a predetermined engine speed while the driver pushes the throttle to the floor.

So you pop the clutch, and the system controls the torque for the best traction, therefore acceleration, off the line.

The body of the Grand Sport has a hydroformed steel rail backbone structure for stiffness. Suspension cradles, control arms, knuckles, springs, dampers, bushings, stabilizer bars and steering gear are as light as possible, again for better response.

You can choose either the standard suspension, for a ride balanced between comfort and handling, or opt for GM's Magnetic Selective Ride Control suspension, where the dampers detect road surfaces and adjust the damping rates to those surfaces almost instantly.

GM says all this results in zero-60 mph in four seconds, a lateral loading of 1 g and an EPA-estimated mpg of 26 mpg on the highway. See, designing a light car is environmentally responsible.

If your Grand Sport coupe has the manual transmission, you also get a dry-sump oiling system, differential cooler and a rear-mounted battery. With the Magnetic Ride Control and with manual transmission, the car sports Goodyear F1 Supercar Gen 2 tires.

In addition, there are functional brake ducts and extra cooling for the Z06-sized brakes, which come with 14-inch front rotors with 6-piston calipers and 13.4-inch rear rotors with 4-piston calipers. This means the brakes offer the same level of braking performance as the engine gives you in power.

This going and stopping is accomplished through the 18-inch front and 19-inch rear wheels shod with 275/35ZR18 tires in front and 325/30ZR19 tires in the rear.

It's a formidable package.

For those who have discovered the joy of track driving, this Corvette will provide you with huge fun. On the street, it requires care to avoid the interest of the local constabulary.

But in a week of driving this in more-or-less commuter fashion, I was most impressed with how civilized this Corvette could be, if I chose to be so as well.

It went to-and-fro with style and comfort. The stereo was good, there was room for a week's grocery shopping and it was easy to park, all hallmarks of a usable car.

But always lurking—in both the car and the driver's mind—is just how much fun is a mere pedal-push away.

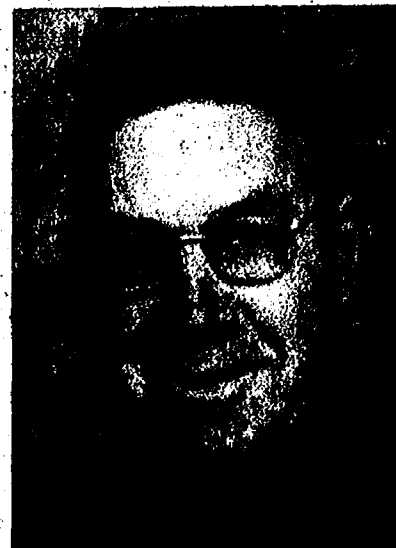

That's why people buy cars like this. Just knowing you can fly lets you smile and applaud the decision to reward yourself with this car as well as the car itself.

It is a grand, grand sport.

Team orders are back in Formula One racing

By David Green

Team orders, international auto racing's euphemism for a fixed finish, is once more acceptable in Formula One.

The sport's governing body, the international automobile club (Fédération Internationale de l'Automobile, or FIA), made that pronouncement Dec. 10, following a meeting of its World Motor Sport Council. A number of rules changes were announced, including repeal of the Sporting Regulations article (39.1), which in 2002 prohibited the practice of having F1's two-car teams orchestrate the finishing order of their two drivers.

Article 39.1 was implemented in response to loud disapproval of Ferrari's decision to have Rubens Barrichello pull aside so that Michael Schumacher, bidding at the time for a third straight world driving championship, could win the Austrian Grand Prix.

Until that moment, global racing fans had seemed to take team orders in stride, the notion being that grand prix racing is a team sport and teams should be permitted to arrange things in the best interests of the team overall, rather than allowing each driver to face for his own personal achievement.

On the west side of the Atlantic, a more individualistic concept of the sport evolved, and most rank-and-file U.S. racing fans reject the notion of orchestrated finishes, even involving only two cars in a field of 16, 18, 20 or more competitors.

Schumacher's iron-fisted domination of F1 at the time of the 2002 Austrian GP very likely had much to do with fans' negative reaction to Ferrari's use of team orders. Schumacher claimed the title five years in a row from 2000 to 2004, winning an incredible 48 out of 85 races in that period.

Schumacher, it seemed, was the driver who least needed the assurance of team orders.

Appropriately enough, it was Ferrari, and a team decision that gave Fernando Alonso victory in this year's German Grand Prix, that reignited the controversy over team orders. Felipe Massa, one year after a near-fatal accident, was leading the race at the Hockenheimring when he got a thinly veiled radio message.

"Fernando is faster than you. Do you understand?" was the message from Massa's pit. He slowed, allowing Alonso to pass, and once again, there was outrage.

There was also a $100,000 fine levied by race stewards for violation of the team orders prohibition and an order to appear before the World Motor Sport Council for review later in the season.

At the review, however, no further punishment was ordered; instead, the council promised to review the matter. Its decision in December showed the result of that deliberation.

There will never be a consensus. On the one hand, the two-car nature of F1 team structure gives credence to the notion that each team should be able to do as it pleases with its two entries.

On the other hand, the sporting nature of any competition is adversely affected when one competitor is deliberately assisted by another. This is why, for example, the National Football League wouldn't permit Dallas Cowboys owner Jerry Jones to add a second team to his properties.

Further, in the two instances cited here a villain was perceived to have benefited at the expense of a more deserving driver: Barrichello, the long-suffering second to the great Schumacher, and Massa, who was on the way to a storybook comeback from personal adversity.

The FIA hedged its bets a little. It retains in the rulebook language that will permit punishment of teams that are determined to have "brought the sport into disrepute."

In other words, the team drivers had better make the fix look good.

2011 Nissan Quest

Compared to the awkward-looking Quest of old, the styling of the 2011 version is far more pleasing.

Nissan's minivan gets a little form to go with all that function.

By Malcolm Gunn
Wheelbase Media

There might be plenty of room inside most minivans, but will there be enough room for all of the newly reconstituted models that have recently emerged from hibernation?

The Nissan Quest is the most recent member of the minivan group to awaken from its dormant state.

Many pundits thought it might never return since there was no 2010 edition.

With an early 2011 due date, the Quest joins the newly altered Toyota Sienna and Honda Odyssey people movers.

They enter the fray alongside Chrysler's one-two punch: the Town & Country and Dodge Grand Caravan minivans that have also been refreshed with better engines and upgraded interior and exterior styling.

Compared to the awkward-looking Quest of old, the styling of the 2011 version is far more pleasing.

The overall design has added curves and sculpting to the hood, doors and rear quarter panels that lessens the typical minivan's boxy appearance.

The wraparound rear glass allows the liftgate to neatly blend in with the rest of the body despite its extreme upright posture.

Along with the Quest's

new suit of clothes, the designers cut the distance between the front and rear wheels by almost six inches, bringing that number more in line with the competition. This should make the Quest more maneuverable in tight spaces without too great a sacrifice in ride quality or passenger space.

Likewise, the new interior mixes function and form, with bigger and bolder gauge pods, more clearly defined switches and, with the shifter mounted high up on the instrument panel, plenty of passthrough access between the front doors.

As with most minivans, there are three rows of seats, but the Quest comes standard with second-row high-back bucket seats instead of a more typical bench.

Also unique is the split-folding three-place third row that tilts forward to create a flat load surface. This is instead of folding into the rear well below the floor, which in the case of the Quest is now always available for discrete stowage of smaller items.

The Quest's 3.5-liter V6 is the workhorse engine for a number of Nissan cars and trucks. In the Quest, it makes 253 horsepower, up from 235 horses.

Directing power to the front wheels is handled by a continuously variable transmission (CVT) that has become another Nissan favorite. It replaces the previous Quest's five-speed automatic.

The CVT varies its "gearing" to keep the engine in its most efficient rev range. When driving, a CVT feels like a normal automatic transmission that's slipping: the revs change out of lockstep with the rate of acceleration.

Nearly every minivan offers at least one very unique trick up its sleeve and the Quest's entry in this category is called an Easy Fill Tire Alert. Attaching an air hose to the valve stem on the wheel causes the hazard lights to flash, signaling that a proper hose-to-stem connection has been made.

A short beep from the horn indicates that the correct tire pressure has been attained.

The rest of the standard gear on the base S model includes the expected air conditioning, power-operated controls and basic four-speaker radio/CD player in addition to roof rails and keyless push-button start.

Moving up to the SV adds tri-zone air conditioning (driver, passenger and rear seat), power sliding side doors, fog lights, heated front seats and a six-speaker audio package.

The close-to-the-top SL pushes the content up further with leather seat covers, power driver's seat, 18-inch wheels (16-inches are standard) and a power liftgate.

The top-rung LE is finished off with a 13-speaker Bose-brand sound system, touch-screen navigation, rear-seat DVD player and power-folding third-row seat.

The LE also gets Nissan's new Advanced Climate Control System that includes a special air purifier and filter that reduces undesirable odors and allergens invading the cabin.

Being out of the minivan game for the 2010 model year while its competitors were busy bringing out new products could potentially hurt Nissan's attempts at a comeback.

Fortunately, the latest Quest has plenty of style and substance that should resonate with shoppers in this bracket.

For those folks, it's a Quest very much worth considering.

What you should know: 2011 Nissan Quest

Type: Four-door, full-size minivan

Engine (hp): 3.5-liter DOHC V6 (253)

Transmission: Continuously variable

Market position: The minivan ranks have been reduced in recent years, resulting in intensified competition among the remaining brands. As a result, the current platforms now offer leading-edge styling, features and fuel economy.

Points: Quest has arguably become the best-looking of the bunch; inviting, practical interior styling major leap forward; Honda Odyssey's fuel economy supremacy likely to remain unchallenged; Dodge Grand Caravan's low base price, powerful V6 could also steal Quest's thunder; This time around, Nissan got it right.

Safety: Front airbags; side-impact airbags; side-curtain airbags; anti-lock brakes; traction control; stability control.

Giving back

Saline American Legion Post Cmdr. Louis Worley (left) joins Jerry Berger, Charlie Frey, John Lopez, Brett Fry, Gloria Near and Dorothy Vogel in making a donation to Saline Area Social Service for $500. The local nonprofit provides a food pantry, prescription drug assistance and back-to-school clothing, as well as Easter, Thanksgiving and Christmas food baskets and a Holiday Adopt-a-Family program to residents of the Saline school district. The agency depends on the generosity of the community to fund the programs.

Kathy Angerer receives honor

State Rep. Kathy Angerer, D-55th District, was recognized recently by the Michigan Association of Chiropractors for her work reforming insurance laws to expand the chiropractic scope of services.

"Michigan residents deserve the best health care possible, including chiropractic services," Angerer said in a news release.

"I was proud to partner with Michigan chiropractors to ensure that patients throughout our state can access chiropractic care when they need it."

The MAC recognized Angerer, who serves as House Majority Floor Leader, as the 2010 Legislator of the Year for her efforts to reform Michigan insurance law to broaden the scope of practice for chiropractic services.

Until this year, Michigan law defined the term "practice of chiropractic" to limit chiropractors to perform only services that deal with the nervous system's relationship with the spinal column, despite the fact that chiropractors are trained to perform a much broader scope of services.

Angerer collaborated with a number of other legislators to expand the scope of practice to deal with the entire human nervous system and the musculoskeletal system's interrelationship with the body.

Gov. Jennifer Granholm signed the legislation into law in early January of this year.

"I am so honored to be recognized by the MAC," Angerer said.

"Chiropractors improve the lives of Michiganders every day. By taking a conservative approach to health care treatment, chiropractors can help their patients learn more about their well-being and avoid preventable health issues."

The Michigan Chiropractors Association is a statewide network of chiropractors. Chiropractic care includes the diagnosis, treatment, and prevention of neuromusculoskeletal disorders, and the effects of these disorders on the nervous system and general health.

Donations down for Salvation Army

Donations are down this year for The Salvation Army of Washtenaw County, whose goal is to raise $300,000 during its annual Red Kettle campaign to provide services to residents in need throughout the year.

The nonprofit provides various programs and service centers located in Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti.

Services provided by The Salvation Army of Washtenaw County include a food pantry, soup kitchen, clothing, an emergency family shelter, transitional housing and counseling for veterans, character building for youth, camp programs, emergency aid and disaster relief, utility assistance and eviction prevention.

In addition to its Red Kettle campaign, support is also lagging for The Salvation Army Washtenaw County's holiday assistance programs such as Adopt-a-Family and Angel Tree Toy Drive.

"We had 100 more families turn to us for help this holiday season, but we're falling short on where we should be for donations," said Major John Williams of The Salvation Army of Washtenaw County in a news release.

"If everyone gives what they can, even just $5 or $10, together we can reach our goal."

As of the first week in December, only 87 of the more than 700 families that signed up for assistance with the nonprofit had been adopted by local businesses, organizations and other local families.

The Salvation Army of

Washtenaw County was hoping to have at least 300 families adopted before the Dec. 10 deadline.

The opportunity to give gift donations to at several area retailers ended Wednesday. However, the community can continue to provide support at any of the 49 red kettle locations in Washtenaw County through Dec. 24.

For more information on how to support the nonprofit, call 668-8353 or visit www.sawash.washtenaw.org.

Study finds interventions improve outcome for depressed

U of M scientists show targeted care is effective

A recent University of Michigan study showed that providing patients with brief mental health follow-up interventions and tools for self-management dramatically improve outcomes for depressed patients.

In the 15 minutes a primary care doctor typically has with a patient, she's expected to diagnose the current ailment, help manage ongoing health issues and provide preventive care.

In this setting, confronting all but the most obvious and immediate mental health needs of patients is an ongoing challenge.

A new study by researchers at the University of Michigan Health System, however, points to a strategy for improving and sustaining mental health results in chronically depressed patients by providing small amounts of flexible, targeted follow-up care — without overburdening busy doctors' offices.

The study, published in the September/October issue of Annals of Family Medicine, shows that patients who received interventions that included self-monitoring tools and follow-up phone calls from a care manager were more likely a year and a half later to have symptoms that were in remission. The patients receiving these interventions also had fewer reduced-function days than those receiving usual primary care treatment.

"The key is to keep patients engaged in treatment," said Dr. Michael Klinkman, a professor of family medicine at the University of Michigan Medical School, in a news release. Klinkman was lead author of the study.

"What it's not is telephone therapy," he said.

"Patients have a human contact, somebody who can help them become more actively involved in their own care. It's hard to do that if you're just spoon-feeding information to educate a patient or telling them to go to a website."

With a more traditional approach that depends on a follow-up office visit, it might be months before a primary care doctor learns that his patient's depression is getting worse. And in many cases, patients simply don't follow up.

In this study, depression interventions were introduced in five family care practices within the U of M Health System.

Clinicians were free to refer none, some or all of their depressed patients. In the analysis, 728 enrollees were compared to 78 control patients receiving usual care.

At the end of 18 months, 49.2 percent of 120 enrollees who completed 18-month assessments were in remission, compared to 27.3 percent of 66 people in the usual-care control group.

The patients receiving interventions had fewer reduced-function days than those receiving usual primary care treatment.

For the study, a care manager worked in collaboration with doctors' practices, rather than on the side or independently, Klinkman said.

Klinkman said that helps the family practice office to act as a home base for all of a patient's medical needs.

The approach can also serve as a model for treating other types of chronic conditions, he added.

Many patients have depression alongside other mental health and medical problems, Klinkman noted.

"There are people with chronic issues who have had multiple depressive episodes in the past," he said.

"No one wants to study them, because it's hard to make them better. But we didn't cherry-pick. We took everyone — and the rate of remission we saw was about double what it has been with usual care. The other thing that is really noteworthy: the results persisted over time."

While some patients did become less engaged when their symptoms started getting better, many got back in touch with their care manager when things started to slip again.

"We helped get people back into care who otherwise might not have returned to treatment," Klinkman says.

In related news, the U of M Depression Center has recently launched a new web-based toolkit for patients and their families, which is also intended to be a resource for primary care physicians.

The site, depressiontoolkit.org, features resources and downloadable tools that can help individuals assess whether they might be suffering from depression and tips for how to talk with others about depression.

Several of the tools developed for the study were integrated into the Depression Center Toolkit.

The project was supported by grants from the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation.

In addition, Klinkman received grant support from the National Institute of Mental Health and the Lilly Foundation.

Rewards offered for crime tips

Questionable insurance claims rose more than 52 percent in the first half of 2010, according to a group dedicated to raising awareness about the cost of insurance fraud.

To increase awareness about this crime, Governor Jennifer Granholm declared Oct. 10 through 16 as Insurance Fraud Awareness Week in Michigan.

"Many people wrongly believe that insurance fraud is a victimless crime," said Lori Conarton, communications director for the Insurance Institute of Michigan, in a news release.

"However, they are wrong. We all pay for this crime through our insurance premiums."

A study by the National Insurance Crime Bureau found that questionable claims for excessive medical treatment, auto glass claims and staged accidents all rose significantly during the first six months of 2010.

It is estimated that one out of every 10 claims is fraudulent. "In Michigan that translates into about $3 billion annually being picked from our pocket-books," Conarton said.

Insurance fraud is a felony in Michigan. Those convicted of fraud can be jailed up to four years and/or fined up to $50,000 and ordered to pay restitution.

To combat insurance fraud in Michigan, insurance companies are establishing Special Investigative Units (SIU) which train insurance personnel to identify suspicious losses.

Here in Michigan, residents are encouraged to fight back against this insurance fraud by reporting it.

Through the Michigan Arson

Prevention Committee, rewards up to $5,000 are paid to persons who provide information that leads to the arrest and/or conviction of arsonists. The number for reporting these crimes is 1-800-442-7766.

The insurance industry is also involved in a program that pays for information leading to the arrest and warrant of auto thieves and chop shop operators.

Citizens can call the HEAT, which stands for Help Eliminate Auto Theft, tip line at 1-800-242-HEAT with information on stolen cars and suspected auto theft activities.

HEAT tips are rewarded with up to $1,000 each for information that leads to the arrest and warrant of individuals suspected of auto theft, auto theft related insurance fraud and/or auto theft related identity theft.

Up to $10,000 is available for tips that result in the arrest and binding over for trial of suspected theft ring members and/or chop shop operators.

In addition, HEAT provides a $2,000 reward for the arrest and warrant of a carjacking suspect.

The National Insurance Crime Bureau, a not-for-profit organization that receives support from more than 1,000 property and casualty insurance companies also has investigators in Michigan.

The NICB partners with insurers and law enforcement agencies to facilitate the identification, detection and prosecution of insurance criminals.

Anyone who suspects insurance fraud can call NICB at 1-800-TEL-NICB. Callers are eligible for rewards.

The Michigan Insurance

Fraud Awareness Coalition was formed in 2009 to fight back against this crime. Members are the Michigan Chapter of International Association of Special Investigation Units, Insurance Institute of Michigan, National Insurance Crime Bureau, Coalition Against Insurance Fraud and Michigan Arson Prevention Committee.

New drug therapy developed for cancer patients

A new three-drug combination used to treat the blood cancer multiple myeloma may be effective as a front-line therapy for newly diagnosed patients, according to a study led by the University of Michigan Comprehensive Cancer Center.

The drug combination includes a novel proteasome inhibitor called carfilzomib, combined with lenalidomide and low-dose dexamethasone.

This is the first study to look at carfilzomib as a front-line treatment of patients with myeloma, a type of cancer that arises in the plasma cells.

According to the American Cancer Society, 20,180 Americans will be diagnosed with multiple myeloma this year, and 10,650 will die from the disease.

Initial results of the phase I study were presented at the American Society of Hematology Annual Meeting and Exposition.

"This combination treatment appears to deliver everything we expected and more. We have seen no neurotoxicity and fantastic efficacy, the best reported to date," said study author Dr. Andrzej Jakubowicz in a news release.

Jakubowicz is director of the multiple myeloma program at the University of Michigan Comprehensive Cancer Center and associate professor of internal medicine at the U of M Medical School.

The study, which still is recruiting participants, has enrolled 31 people to date.

All patients responded to this combination, measured by at least a 50 percent reduction of the disease, and the disease was completely or nearly eliminated in a significant portion of patients.

Responses were rapid, and the depth of response continued to improve with additional treatment.

Of patients who completed eight cycles of therapy, more than two-thirds achieved a complete response, meaning they showed little or no signs of cancer. These response rates appear to be higher than those achieved by the best current regimens in newly diagnosed multiple myeloma.

Responses were rapid, and the depth of response continued to improve with additional treatment.

After a median follow-up of six months, all patients were alive with no progression of their cancer.

Researchers found that the three-drug combination, called CRd, was well-tolerated, with few serious side effects. Most notably, peripheral neuropathy — which is marked by numbness or tingling of the fingers and toes and can cause significant pain, depending on the severity — was infrequent and mild with this treatment.

This side effect typically limits extended use of currently available multiple myeloma treatments and is often the reason patients discontinue a therapy.

The study also included patients who were eligible for a stem cell transplant.

The researchers found that these patients were able to remain on CRd treatment and achieved responses similar to or better than those observed after a stem cell transplant. This outcome delayed the need for a stem cell transplant in these patients.

Newly diagnosed myeloma is most sensitive to treatment, Jakubowicz explained.

"A great response in the initial phase of treatment is critical because it projects how long patients will remain in remission, as well as their overall survival. Patients have a better chance of living longer if their response to initial treatment is better," said Jakubowicz.

Carfilzomib has recently emerged as an important drug in treatment of multiple myeloma. It has previously been tested as a single agent in patients who have exhausted all available treatment options and in relapsed disease.

Currently, a Phase III trial is ongoing looking at CRd compared with lenalidomide and low dose dexamethasone alone for patients with relapsed multiple myeloma.

Study looks at television advertising

Nonprofits aiding the sick or poor could increase charitable donations through ads in which consumers empathize with an actor portraying an unfortunate plight, according to a new study by researchers at the University of Michigan, Westminster College and University of North Carolina.

The study looks at observers' reaction to a poor woman's emotions when asking for assistance.

The study's participants who viewed the ad had negative emotions toward a woman who expressed anger about being poor.

When the woman expressed shame about her economic status, viewers had more positive emotions — such as pride and confidence — and a willingness to donate money to the charity, the study indicates.

"This implies that if women find themselves in positions in which they need to elicit help from others, it behooves them to act in an ashamed manner," said Elizabeth Cole, chair and professor of U of M's Women's Studies Department in a news release.

"But when the poor express shame, they suggest that they blame themselves for their poverty, and those with social class privilege are able to feel that inequality is appropriate and just. This means that the display of emotion can be used to legitimize economic inequality."

Cole collaborated on the study with lead author and U of M alumna Cathleen Power of Westminster College and Barbara Fredrickson of UNC.

"Observers' responses to stigmatized women were influenced by whether the woman's behavior fulfilled a feeling... linked to her class status."

The study also looked at how viewers responded to a major illness, such as cancer. Respondents expressed more anger toward the women who were upset about being poor than they did toward the woman who was angry about breast cancer.

Cole said the anger isn't directed at the woman, but with her, perhaps in solidarity with her plight.

The poor, the findings indicate, are only able to avoid anger and gain pity from those with power by expressing emotions that suggest they accept the blame for poverty.

"In doing this, those with class privilege are able to feel pride about their 'accomplished' higher standing, thus justifying inequities in the class system," researchers said.

The findings appear in the journal Feminism & Psychology.

Arbor Hospice offers up tips for grieving

Arbor Hospice is offering tips for helping people who are grieving at the holidays.

*Help those who are grieving by talking about the person who died.

*Don't expect them to do everything the same this holiday season.

*Lighten the load of those who are grieving by offering to help them with their grocery and/or holiday gift shopping. Offering to take their children shopping also can be a great way for you to help them cope with loss during the holiday season.

*Understand that all people grieve differently, so give them space and be very understanding of their situation.

*Make sure to include the person who is grieving in your plans and understand that they may back out at the last minute.

*Make it a point to call, write or visit with those who are grieving. Knowing that others are thinking about them will make them feel better in this time of grief.

*Be a good listener and ignore the urge to give advice unless asked.

*Remember, grief is a complex journey that continues long after a significant person has passed on.

Arbor Hospice, a not-for-profit 501(c)(3) organization, offers certified hospice services, an inpatient hospice facility, grief support services and community education programs. It serves communities in Jackson, Lenawee, Livingston, Monroe, Oakland, Washtenaw and Wayne counties, with offices in Ann Arbor, Monroe, Plymouth and Woodhaven.

YPSILANTI, Mich. (EMUEagles.com) — The Eastern Michigan University E-Club, a group of former EMU varsity athletic letterwinners, has announced the addition of seven new members into the Athletic Hall of Fame. The Class of 2010 will be honored at a Hall of Fame ceremony Saturday, Feb. 19, 2011, in the EMU Student Center on campus.

The Class of 2010 includes: Clement Chukwu (track), Dawn (Godfrey) Heck (softball), Laurie (Hubbard) Leonhardt (women's swimming), JoAnn (LeFevre) McBroom (women's basketball), Hildred Lewis (football and men's track), John Martin (baseball), and Barry Stokes (football).

In addition to the Hall of Fame inductees, the E-Club will present Ed Mizinski, a past E-Club president and former EMU football player, with the Ron Oestrike Distinguished Service Award. The award, named after former EMU baseball-coaching legend Ron Oestrike, was first presented at the 2008 Hall of Fame ceremony to Oestrike. The award is voted on by the E-Club Executive Board and is presented to individuals that have been instrumental in assisting the E-Club.

Tickets for the Hall of Fame ceremony and luncheon, which also includes tickets for the men's and women's basketball doubleheaders at the Convocation Center, are $45 each and can be purchased by calling Amanda Decker at the EMU Foundation, 734.481.2335.

The women's basketball team will host Northern Illinois at 2 p.m. and the men's team will take on a to-be-named opponent in a Bracketbuster Game set to begin at 4:30 p.m. The Hall of Famers will be honored at the games in the Convocation Center.

Clement Chukwu was a six-time NCAA All-American trackman for EMU and was a member of the Nigerian 4x400-meter relay team that was awarded the Gold Medal in the 1996 Olympic Games.

Dawn (Godfrey) Heck was an All-Mid-American Conference softball player who graduated in 1996 and still holds three EMU varsity records: for at bats (741), runs scored (122) and stolen bases (107).

Laurie (Hubbard) Leonhardt was a standout swimmer for EMU who won three events at the inaugural Mid-American Conference Women's Championship in 1981 and went on to qualify for the NCAA national championship meet.

Hildred Lewis was a two-sport star for EMU from 1962-66. He earned eight letters, in both football and track, and was the varsity record holder in the 880-yard run. He was invited to try out for the NFL's San Francisco 49ers.

John Martin graduated in 1978 after a turning in an outstanding baseball career for EMU. He went on to play for the St. Louis Cardinal team that won the 1982 World Series.

JoAnne (LeFevre) McBroom was a first-team All-MAC selection for the EMU women's basketball team in 1986-87 and finished her career as the fifth-leading scorer in EMU women's basketball history.

Barry Stokes earned four football letters at EMU and went on to play professional football with seven NFL teams before injuries forced his retirement.

Consider establishing a business retirement plan

If you're self-employed or you own a business, you've got a lot to think about: attracting new customers, maintaining cash flow, upgrading equipment and facilities—the list goes on and on. Yet, as busy as you are today you can't forget about tomorrow, which means you need to have a solid retirement plan in place.

All retirement plans offer some features in common, such as tax-deferred growth of earnings. So how can you pick the plan that's right for you? You'll need to consider your business' annual income, number of employees and other factors. Fortunately, you have some good plans from which to choose. Here are a few to consider:

Owner-only 401(k)

If you are self-employed with no employees other than your spouse or a partner, the Owner-only 401(k) may be an option for you. Also known as an individual 401(k), an owner-only 401(k) offers you many of the same advantages of a traditional 401(k), such as a range of investment options, tax-deductible contributions and tax-deferred earnings growth. You may even be able to choose a Roth option for your owner-only 401(k), which allows you to make after-tax contributions that have the opportunity to grow tax-free.

For 2010, you can contribute up to $16,500 as a deferral, and total contributions cannot exceed $49,000 or $54,500 if you're 50 or older. But you must plan ahead to take advantage of this plan for 2010 because it will need to be set up prior to Dec. 31.

SEP IRA

If you have just a few employees or are self-employed with no employees, you may want to consider a SEP IRA. For the 2010 tax year, you can put in the lesser of $49,000 or 25 percent of your compensation, which is capped at a maximum of $245,000. You fund the plan with tax-deductible contributions, and you must cover all eligible employees—at a minimum, those who are at least 21 and have been with your company for three out of the immediately preceding five years. (Employees themselves cannot contribute.) Keep in mind, though, that the percentage of compensation contributed to a SEP IRA must be the same for you and your employees. If you don't get a plan set up prior to year-end, the SEP IRA is the only plan that you can set up and fund, up until your tax filing deadline, to get a 2010 tax deduction.

FINANCIAL FOCUS

Solo defined benefit plan

Generally speaking, this plan, which is similar to a traditional pension plan, may be suitable for you if you have relatively high earnings and can afford to take advantage of the high contribution limits, which are determined by an actuarial calculation. Your contributions are tax deductible.

In choosing a retirement plan, you may want to consult with your tax adviser. But don't wait any longer to get started. The future will be here soon enough—so you'll want to be prepared for it.

U of M surgeon named to national institute

A University of Michigan Medical School surgeon is among 65 new members elected Monday to the Institute of Medicine of the National Academies, one of the highest honors in the fields of health and medicine.

Dr. Diane Simeone, a professor of surgery and molecular and integrative physiology and division chief of gastrointestinal surgery, will join more than 1,700 researchers in the medical sciences, health care and public health in the prestigious organization. Each year, new members are elected during a selective process recognizing researchers who have demonstrated outstanding professional achievements and commitment to service.

Those selected volunteer a significant amount of time to serving on various IOM committees and participating in IOM activities.

"I'm grateful for the incredible honor of election to an organization with such an esteemed and accomplished group of colleagues," Simeone said in a news release. Simeone is the surgical director of the

Multidisciplinary Pancreatic Cancer Clinic at the U of M Comprehensive Cancer Center, one of a few such centers in the country focused on this disease. In addition, she is the director of the gastrointestinal oncology research program at the Cancer Center. Her research focuses on pancreatic cancer stem cells and molecular profiling in pancreatic cancer.

Simeone will be formally inducted into the organization during its annual meeting Oct. 16 and 17, 2011.

Bike, walking trail proposed near Leonard Preserve

County shows interest in rail-to-trail project

By Jana Miller
Heritage Media

Manchester's Village Council heard almost exactly the same presentation about a proposed bicycle and walking trail at its regular meeting Dec. 6, but this time it was a completely different experience for council members. That's because this time over 30 residents packed into the Village Hall to share their opinions on the proposed project.

Resident Ray Berg, President of the Manchester Area Chamber of Commerce and a member of the Downtown Development Authority and the Gateway Communities Initiative, made the presentation. He has been responsible for a majority of the background research that has gone into the current project, although he credits other residents and local groups for coming up with the idea for a trail in the past.

"The idea behind this thing is what can we do to get people to come to Manchester and take advantage of its parks and the Leonard Preserve and at the same time bring them downtown," he said to the crowd. "We've had discussions with a trails and bridges engineering firm, a proposed bridge manufacturer, and potential funding sources."

The trail itself would be promoted throughout the county, particularly to constituents in the western part of Washtenaw County.

Berg's presentation mirrored the last one in that it touched on the type of work needed for the trail, the route from Manchester's Village Hall to the Leonard Preserve, a proposed shared-use pedestrian bridge over the Mill Pond, and cost estimations.

As the plan currently stands, the bridge would require the bulk of the financing and would amount to approximately ly $600,000. To convert the rail bed itself—which comprises a two-mile stretch along the old New York City Railroad that runs north of downtown—it would cost approximately $200,000. That figure for the rail bed assumes the use of crushed and compacted limestone instead of asphalt. The limestone base would cost approximately $67,100 per mile, whereas asphalt would cost $107,000 per mile.

Berg said he intends to first apply for the Washtenaw County Connecting Communities Program, which has a grant application deadline of Dec. 31. He said he would then pursue other financial opportunities on a county level, as well as federal-level grants, the Michigan Natural Resources Trust fund, the Chelsea-Area Wellness Foundation, the Rails-to-Trails Foundation, private donations, and community fundraising.

"I intend to get the application to Jeff (Wallace) by Wednesday and have Council prepare a letter of support to submit with the application," Berg said. "What I'm asking for from Council is support to go forward and pursue this thing," Berg said.

Council members Pat Vaillencourt, Marty Way, and Jim Dzengeleski voiced specific concerns as to what type of financial burden could potentially fall upon the Village taxpayers to get the project financed.

"As I understand it, you don't get the money up front," Dzengeleski said. "The county grant program is a reimbursement fund, and I'm not sure the Village has the money right now to front that kind of money."

Berg said he did not plan on asking for any money from the Village.

"That is not my intent," Berg said. "In this case the Village already owns the land. The Village's matching part is its equity."

During public participation, those who attended and took the time to speak were overwhelmingly in favor of the bike and walking trail proposal. Many riders themselves came to the meeting to say how happy it would make them to stay in Manchester to do what they love.

"I've probably ridden hundreds of miles on bike paths, and I'm really excited about this opportunity to have even a short trail to have more opportunities for safe riding (in the Village)," said Debbie Spring of Manchester Township.

David Davis of Freedom Township said that he has been a member of the Rails-to-Trails program for almost 40 years and was thankful that such a trail might come to the Village.

"I've been a long-time friend of Rails-to-Trails," he said.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Bike path proposal worthwhile

Those residents of Bridgewater, Freedom, Manchester and Sharon Townships and the Village of Manchester who didn't attend the Dec. 6 Village Council meeting missed a great presentation on the proposed Rails-to-Trails conversion of the old New York City Railroad bed that runs through the Village, into a multi-use path connecting the Leonard Preserve with Chi-Bro Park and the Village Hall.

Ray Berg from Freedom Township has done extensive work in defining the scope of the project and identifying potential funding sources with the capability of making it all happen. He is seeking a resolution from the Village Council in order to submit the first grant application to Washtenaw Parks and Recreation by Dec. 31. The public hearing was well attended and about 20 members of the audience spoke in favor of proceeding with the planning, asked a few questions that need to be addressed and raised a few issues that need to be checked out before final approval.

This is an exciting project that should be a major improvement in the Village's livability. It will provide pedestrian friendly opportunities for residents and our township neighbors to get out and walk or ride their bikes or take their children down to the Raisin River, the mill pond and to the Leonard Preserve, which is a major nearby community asset that is not very well known. It is a 287-acre nature preserve owned by Washtenaw County Parks and Recreation and well worth the visit. It is just west of the Village limits and includes another section of the Raisin River.

The overall scope of the trail is still being defined and needs the input of more citizens. Some of the potential opportunities include developing a park on the property the Village just purchased across M-52 from Chi-Bro Park and fronting on the Mill Pond. One idea that was not talked about last night is the thought that if the parcel was made into a park, what with water and sewer already available on site there might be the possibility to erect a smaller version of the depot that used to exist across the street and maybe provide a water fountain, a baby changing station, bathroom facilities or other amenities.

The trail needs a name and maybe we could have a contest to pick out something appropriate. Maybe the kids in our schools could have a contest to design a cover for a brochure that will be needed. There is going to be the necessity of private fundraising and maybe we could get Jeff Daniels, who has a series of 10 "Jeff Daniels Unplugged" concerts at the Purple Rose Theater in Chelsea this month, to appear at a "Plugged Into Manchester" concert at the Manchester High School. One of the ideas expressed was to buy commemorative bricks to pave around the benches to be installed. Another unexpressed thought is the chance to purchase a foot or more of the rail for $15 each.

This is something that would be a fantastic asset to the Village and it needs the support and help from a lot of people. Here is another chance to prove that Manchester can pull together once again and get it done. The resolution should come up at the Dec. 20 Village Council meeting and will provide another chance to express your opinion.

Christmas Blood Drive Important

Manchester will be holding its Christmas Blood Drive on Thursday, Dec. 23, at St. Mary's Parish Center from 1 to 7 p.m.

As you all know, during the holidays, any holiday, the shortage of blood is higher than usual. People are so involved in other things that they either forget about donating or can't seem to find the time. Unfortunately, accidents and illnesses are ongoing and the need for blood to treat these people that are involved does not stop.

If you are a current blood donor and have not been contacted by Marja Warner, please call her at 428-9506 to make an appointment. If you have never given before now is a good time to start. Remember that those with appointments and are there no later than 10 minutes after their appointment time are honored before walk-ins. If someone just drops in and wants to donate, they would be offered the first available time slot.

Manchester's goal is to collect 60 pints of blood.

Please call and make an appointment so we can not only make our goal but also to ensure that there is blood available for those who need it.

Preserve the Jackson Street Corridor

I have been a resident of Sylvan Township for over 45 years and live just two miles from Chelsea on Cavanaugh Lake Road. I have always felt that Chelsea is my hometown. I enjoy the warmth and friendship of the people and the close attention that is given one by the merchants. But also, I love the architecture of the old homes and buildings that have been preserved and/or restored to their original grandeur.

As a member of Preservation Chelsea, I have also felt strongly that the buildings in the Jackson Street Corridor including the Daniels Addition on Main Street should be preserved and adaptively reused for future businesses. Their historical significance alone warrants their value, but they can also be converted to bring a positive economic advantage to the community. My feelings and thoughts about these historic buildings were validated when I attended Ed McMahon's presentation making the case for historic architecture as an economic asset for communities.

However, our economic situation, nationwide at the moment, gives one pause, and perhaps the best solution right now would be to recognize the viability of preservation by putting it in mothballs until times that would indicate a healthier atmosphere for development. And I'm sure that time will come.

"and my experience is when you do develop a trail it really brings people out. I hope you do it. I would really look forward to having access to this trail."

Chris Kanta of Manchester Township felt it would help develop the Village into a county asset.

"I like the idea of the connection to the Leonard Preserve," she said. "I think it's underused in our community and will make it a much more livable community. I think the health and wellness is a huge aspect of what folks really want today, particularly for our young people."

In response to that, Berg mentioned pursuing having the path used as a safe path to the schools. It would cut through a large portion of town and get students across the river to the sidewalks along M-52.

Although most residents in attendance, many of which were Manchester Township residents, were in support of the project, the public did give Berg and Council an opportunity to look at potential issues.

For example, several residents wanted to know what kind of restrictions would be placed on the use of the path, if any, such as for dogs or skateboarders.

A few other individuals in attendance who reside along the trail were worried about trespassing and safety.

Nancy Wellwood of Manchester Village said she was concerned about trespassing because of how close her residence is to the rail bed.

"Our intention is to go to all 32 owners who live close along the trail and ask if they want to participate in having some sort of fence there to designate the trail from private property," Berg said in response. "We intend to put into cost estimating a low, split-rail fence along the property line. But from the research we've done on these types of trails, trespassing, hasn't been an issue. People who are using these trails are going from point 'A' to point 'B' and not wandering off."

Greg Weidmayer, the Superintendent of Public Works for the Village of Manchester, said he was concerned about the construction of both the bridge and the path. He said the Village has a sewer and water main to maintain in the Mill Pond which would be difficult if the bridge was constructed.

"It also creates two dead ends in the Village, the worst of which is at Washington Street," he said. Weidmayer was concerned logistically on how they would shovel snow on those dead end streets without vehicle access to the rail bed.

The Board ultimately elected to support Berg going forward as long as some of the issues mentioned by Council and the public were addressed. Berg said that if additional funding is not obtained or problems can't be solved, the Village can always either pull the Connecting Communities grant application before March 31 or turn down the grant money.

"If the money is out there, why not us," Council member Amelia Woods said. "If Ray has already done the research and gotten public feedback, I would say let him go forward and come back to us. It could be tremendous for the Village, and I don't think any of the issues are such that we couldn't find a solution."

Council member Pat DuRussel thought the timing was wrong for the project and was concerned about long-term maintenance. He said he didn't want the Village to have to take care of the path down the road. Berg said the plan was to create a 501(c)(3) called Friends of the Trail to take care of it in the long term.

Council ultimately gave Berg the green light to go forward and to submit the grant application to the Village Council. They will look at the application on Dec. 20 and vote to support it at that time.

"The risk here is about the future commitment," Pat Vaillencourt said. "You'll hit a brick wall if the Village taxpayers are going to have to pay for it."

out of last year's district playoffs. That loss didn't sit well and they were ready to make a stand and prove that this year's team was going to play with more aggressiveness and determination. There wasn't a lot of standing around on Friday night as the Bulldogs raced out of the blocks scoring the first nine points of the game and leading 18-8 after the first quarter against visiting Saline. The Hornets would never get closer than eight points, falling to the much more experienced and deeper Bulldogs 57-43 in Chelsea's season opener.

Chelsea senior sharp-shooter Charlie McCalla led all scorers with 14 points. Junior Jake Steinhauer dominated the boards, finishing with 11 points including eight in the first half. Mason Borders and Jake Fischhaber each had six points for the Bulldogs.

Senior guard David Hendrickson led Saline with 11 points. Junior Michael Smutny had eight points and Reece Dils and Derek Owings each scored six for the Hornets.

"I thought for an opener we were organized and played with a lot of confidence especially defensively," Chelsea coach Robin Raymond said. "Saline has two really good shooters in (Reece) Dils and (David) Hendrickson and we worked for a couple days in practice getting around picks and not giving them a good look. And I thought we did that."

"They may have had three open looks in the first half and they did hit them which isn't surprising because they are both really good shooters."

Raymond saw plenty of good things from his experienced and aggressive basketball team. "We didn't turn the ball over and rebounded really well," he said. "We ran our man-to-man offense and that created more movement for us. Our guards did a great job controlling the play offensively. Patrick (Roberts) was pushing the ball and had his head up looking for teammates. Jake Steinhauer rebounded the ball inside really well for us."

Chelsea nets comeback victory over host Saline

Chelsea coach Todd Blomquist knew his team could play better basketball. After scoring a measly 12 points in the first two quarters against Saline last Friday night, the Bulldogs (2-0) came out in the second half outscoring the Hornets 27-17 earning a 39-34 Southeastern Conference victory.

"We hung in there," Blomquist said. "We kept our heads in the game. We didn't have a good shooting night and we struggled scoring in the first half. I thought we were a little passive at times tonight."

In the final two quarters, Chelsea cranked up the heat on defense.

"We played well defensively," Blomquist said. "We let our defense create our offense. We came out hard in the third quarter."

Indeed, The Bulldogs trailed 17-12 at the break. To begin the third quarter, Chelsea went on a 7-2 run tying the contest at 19-19 with a fastbreak basket by junior Megan Hall with 3:56 left in the frame. Junior Mackenzie Cole scored the other five points for the Bulldogs in the run. Junior Amanda Price (6-foot) drained one free throw for Saline ending the third quarter with the Hornets down 26-23.

To begin the fourth stanza, Chelsea went on a 3-0 run keyed by Hall's fastbreak bucket giving the Bulldogs a 29-23 lead with 6:32 remaining in the game.

Saline (0-2), however, refused to quit. The Hornets rallied as sophomore forward Caitlin Ellis hit two straight inside baskets bringing Saline closer at 29-27 with 5:38 left on the clock. Senior Hannah Fitzsimmons drained a shot from the outside and Cole swished two free throws, putting Chelsea back on top 33-27.

The Hornets, however, fought back, once again, as junior Jill Borowski and Ellis both battled hard inside for baskets cutting the Bulldogs' advantage to 33-31 with 3:03 remaining.

Cole then buried a basket from the wing, followed by a steal and bucket from senior Rachel Cooperrider increasing Chelsea's lead to 37-31 with 50 seconds left in the contest.

A2 native scores with USA Football

Ann Arbor native Megan Moyer was recently named research manager for USA Football in Indianapolis. Moyer will offer support in membership acquisition as well as take the lead on participation studies, event surveys and analysis to assist in annual planning. A 2000 graduate of Ann Arbor Pioneer High School, Moyer most recently worked for Northrop Grumman in the Washington, D.C., area as manager for its risk analysis and research section on projects for the U.S. Navy and intelligence community. The following is an exclusive Heritage Newspapers Q&A with Moyer:

Are you a football fan? I am a football fan! It's hard to grow up in Ann Arbor without some appreciation for college football. While fandom was not in my job description, understanding and enjoying the game certainly makes the job more fun and, I think, more rewarding.

What was the path you took to "score" this? My path to sports was not typical. If there is such a thing as typical in the sports industry, after undergrad, I worked as a defense contractor in the DC area for a number of years. There were aspects of the job I enjoyed, and it was great experience, but the industry wasn't something about which I got excited. To transition to the sports industry, I went back to school and finished my MBA with a graduate internship with the Tampa Bay Lightning before starting with USA Football in September.

What exactly is a research manager? My role with USA Football is to use data and information to help us do what we do better. That covers a number of things: collecting and analyzing data about our members, putting together and administering surveys, evaluating USA Football's events and resources, the list keeps growing. USA Football members include youth football coaches, players, league commissioners and game officials who reside in all 50 states and we put on upwards of 80 events for our members each year.

What is a typical day like? I've been with USA Football for two months and I'm very much still in planning mode, so most days I spend time outlining research plans - short and long-term - making sure they are in line with the organization's strategic plan and that the right resources are in place. We usually have at least one survey or study underway, so part of my day is making sure those are running smoothly or analyzing results. I also have the chance to get involved in some of USA Football's great events; last Saturday I spent part of the day at Central Indiana's Border Wars (an Indianapolis-area youth football tournament), and I'm looking forward to our involvement at the MAC Championship game at Ford Field and our Team USA vs. The World game featuring our Under-19 National Team in February in Austin, Texas.

What are your career goals/objectives? I'm new to the sports industry and learning as I go. I'm excited to see where it will take me! If I don't stay in the National Governing Body community, I could see myself with a city sports council or in college sports administration.

How did you first hear about USA Football? I first saw the job posting for my position on TeamWork Online, which

About USA Football

USA Football, the sport's national governing body on youth and amateur levels, leads the game's development, inspires participation, and ensures a positive experience for all youth, high school, and other amateur players.

The independent non-profit hosts more than 80 football training events annually for coaches, players and youth football league commissioners. USA Football is the official youth football development partner of the NFL, its 32 teams and the NFL Players Association and manages U.S. national teams for international competition.

Endowed by the NFL and NFLPA in 2002 through the NFL Youth Football Fund, USA Football (usafootball.com) distributes $1 million annually in equipment grants and offers youth league volunteer background check subsidies.

is a Web site where many of the professional teams and a number of the national governing bodies post their job openings. While I was in graduate school, I volunteered during the USA Sevens Rugby Tournament and had a great experience, so I was intrigued by the opportunity to work for a National Governing Body.

Were you an athlete in high school or college? I was not a varsity athlete at Pioneer, though I did play JV field hockey for a couple of years. I played sports through Ann Arbor Parks and Rec growing up and on and off in college. But I don't consider myself even a casual athlete.

What is Indianapolis like compared to Ann Arbor? The USA Football offices are at the center of downtown, and I'm able to walk to work, which has been great. Comparisons to Ann Arbor are tricky, since I never lived in Ann Arbor as an adult, but Indy and Ann Arbor share a sensibility about the importance of community involvement and volunteerism. Both cities, too, are football towns - Ann Arbor for college football and Indy for the Colts. Beyond the Colts, IU and Purdue have good followings here and I've been told by Indy natives that the quality of high school football here has improved, especially since the Colts moved to town and started winning.

Hockey Bulldogs bounce back with impressive win

By Terry Jacoby

The Chelsea hockey team bounced back after some bad bounces didn't exactly go their way on Friday at the Division 3 Hockey Showcase in Gaylord.

The Bulldogs headed north to one of the toughest tournaments in the state and were greeted by state powerhouse Grand Rapids Catholic Central on Friday in the first of two weekend games. The Bulldogs lost 8-0 but the game wasn't the blowout the score says it was.

Both of the games we played over the weekend were strange games to say the least," Chelsea coach Don Wright said. "The scores were not indicative of the type of games they were. I don't remember such unique games."

The Bulldogs' 8-0 loss to Grand Rapids Catholic Central in what was a good hockey game up until the end of the second period. Chelsea trailed 3-0 and the Bulldogs were playing fairly well, creating scoring chances and competing with a very good high school hockey team.

But GRCC scored three goals in the final 1:19 of the period to blow the game open.

"There was some very strange goals in that game," Wright said. "The puck just seemed to take strange bounces and go off sticks and end up in our goal."

Wright was very pleased to see his team bounce back on Saturday. The Bulldogs blanked Cadillac, another very good and experienced hockey team 2-0 to finish the tournament with a 1-1 record.

"We scored two goals in the first period and then spent the rest of the game killing penalties," Wright said. "We had to kill 10 complete penalties in that game and did a great job of limiting their shots and keeping them off the scoreboard. We did have some chances after our two goals but it was difficult to generate any offense when you are killing penalties."

Chris Boyd stopped 23 shots to record the shutout for Chelsea.

Senior Luke Heinen scored

Showcase Saturday

The Arctic Coliseum in Chelsea will host the second annual Southeastern Conference Showcase on Saturday. This unique event will give hockey fans the chance to see four games without spending the entire day at the rink because the Arctic Coliseum has two rinks. A single-priced admission ticket gets fans into all four games. Warren Mott is replacing Lincoln, which did not field a team this season.

The following is Saturday's schedule of games:

1:30: Monroe vs. Dexter
2 p.m.: Huron vs. Saline
4 p.m.: Bedford vs. Pioneer
4:30: Chelsea vs. W.Mott

at 3:57 with assists from Brad Hepler and Kody Johnson to give the Bulldogs a 1-0 lead. At 7:05 of the first period, Hepler scored with assists from Austin Sullens and Dylan Laidlaw.

"Chris played very well in goal and we took control right from the start," Wright said.

The win gives Chelsea a 5-3 overall record. The Bulldogs are 2-0 in the SEC.

Last Wednesday, Chelsea knocked off host Bedford 8-3.

After Bedford took a 1-0 lead, Jacob Ryan scored at 6:19 (with an assist from Kyle Whipple) and Hepler scored at 14:39 (assisted by Charlie Hess) to give the Bulldogs a 2-1 lead after the first period.

Chelsea broke the game open with five goals in the second period.

Heinen scored at 5:25 (assists from Hess and Hepler); Cody Fojtik scored at 7:05 (assists from Johnson and Sullens); Hewitt scored at 8:33 (assists from Whipple and Ryan); Johnson scored a power-play goal at 9:27 (assists from Hepler and Hess); and Heinen scored at 12:09 (assist from Hepler).

Sullens added a third-period goal at 14:14 with assists from Johnson and Taylor Atchley.

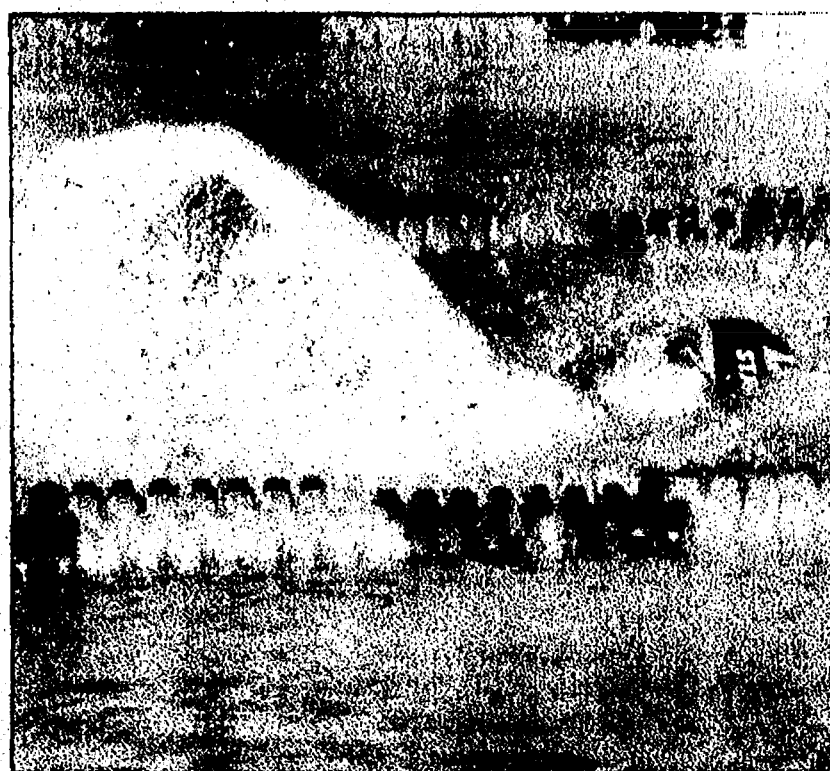

The Bulldogs outshot Bedford 31-10 and Boyd got the win in goal. Charlie Miller also saw action in goal for Chelsea.

Athletes of the Week

Tristan Simmons, Ypsilanti

Simmons, left, helped lead the Phoenix to a 70-51 victory over Wyandotte in the boys' basketball season opener. The junior guard scored a game-high 32 points, including 11 of the team's first 12 points despite not starting the game.

Jon Victor Brilhante, Dexter

Senior Jon Victor Brilhante, an exchange student from Brazil, earned a state-qualifying time in 100 backstroke with a time of 56.09 in a dual meet with Milan on Dec. 9.

Tyler Fisher, Milan

Milan senior Tyler Fisher placed first in the 100 butterfly with a time of 56.85 seconds in last week's dual meet win against Adrian.

Mackenzie Cole, Chelsea

Mackenzie Cole led Chelsea with 11 points in the Bulldogs' 39-34 victory over host Saline in an SEC opener last Friday. Cole buried a basket from the wing, followed by a steal and bucket from senior Rachel Cooperrider, to give Chelsea a 37-31 with 50 seconds left in the game.

Kendall Academy teams up with biggest golf dome in U.S.

The successful Kendall Academy is branching out, announcing a partnership with the Great Lakes Golf Center, located next to the Great Lakes Crossing Outlets mall in Auburn Hills, by offering a full range of its state-of-the-art instruction in the biggest golf dome in the United States.

"It's a great opportunity for us to extend our instruction to even more golfers and the timing is perfect," Dave Kendall said. "Winter is a good time to work on and refine the swing and the Great Lakes dome is huge, heated and easily accessible. Owner Mike Ashley runs a first-class operation and is restoring the dome to a destination spot for both practice and instruction."

Kendall is a two-time Michigan PGA Teacher of the Year; twice was voted the Section's Professional of the Year; and is a champion player in his own right. He built a teaching staff at the Kendall Academy at Miles of Golf in Ypsilanti and at The Meadows GC in Grand Rapids that has produced nationally-ranked players as well as many outstanding junior and high school golfers.

"Our goal is to make everyone a better player and help them to play well and enjoy the game more," Kendall said.

"Teaming up with Kendall Academy is a perfect fit for Great Lakes Golf Center," said Mike Ashley who purchased the facility (formerly Mulligan's) as the sole proprietor a year ago this December. "I was looking for someone with an established reputation and identity for offering quality instruction and that certainly sums up Dave Kendall and the Kendall Academy."

Ashley is also a respected and established name in the golf business. Mike's father, Brian, in fact designed and developed Mulligan's when it opened in 1999 but later sold his interest. Mike and Brian are also part-owners of the Royal Oak Golf Center in Royal Oak and the Four Seasons golf dome in Columbus, OH.

"Our business credo is to offer a good experience for our customers," said Mike Ashley. "We want golfers coming to Great Lakes to hit balls or to take a lesson with Kendall Academy and to feel better about their game. Customer service in golf is more important than ever so we insist upon new golf balls and quality mats at our locations."

Jeff Goble will be the Director of Instruction at Great Lakes. Goble has been teaching for 20 years and joined the Kendall Academy in 2006 after nine years with the Rick Smith Golf Academy at Treetops Resort and Naples, Fla.

THE BIG CHILL AT THE BIG HOUSE

It doesn't get any bigger than this

By Mike Larson
A2 Journal

The Big Chill lived up to its name in more than one way. On Saturday, Michigan Stadium played host to a rival hockey team and a record-breaking crowd of over 113,000 fans.

The game was big and it was chilly out, so the event, which picked up its moniker from a 1983 movie about former U of M students, was very aptly named.

That part of the game's story is obvious.

Of course it was going to be big. It sold out Michigan Stadium, for Schembechler's sake! Organizers were sure that, even if the weekend's snow storm came early, the event more than likely would shatter the Guinness World Record for people watching an ice hockey game.

As it happened, the snow held off and the Big Chill obliterated the old record by more than 35,000.

In other words, on Saturday, if US Census estimates are to be relied on, Ann Arbor became the second biggest city in Michigan by population, trailing only Detroit.

The word "big" might not even be enough to describe it. But like I said, that part of the story was obvious.

The part of the story that might not be so obvious was how big this was for the University of Michigan and the athletic department in particular.

Sure, it was huge that this event, a game that received national attention from media outlets like The Wall Street Journal and USA Today, went off without a hitch.

Surely, after the game, the organizers felt some relief at making such a grand spectacle not only come to fruition, but also having made it shine in the regional and national spotlights.

But that's not even the biggest positive thing that the Big Chill brought those lovers of the gold block "M."

This game, even if it was just for an afternoon, made Michigan sports relevant again.

I'm not saying that the national media doesn't care about the Wolverines in other sports, but let's face the facts, Michigan hasn't been the power it has been in recent years.

Regardless of what any hardheaded alumni, RichRod apologists or Wolverine superfans want to tell you, the Michigan football program is in trouble. If it's not in shambles now, it will be soon.

By the standard set after years and years of success, this season fell short.

Sure, the Wolverines are going to a bowl. Of course, it's a bowl nobody cares about, against a team that most casual sports fans know of only as a footnote in the Cam Newton recruiting scandal.

The Michigan football team also became somewhat of a joke in the Big Ten. With the exception of a win against Wisconsin last season, the only conference teams Michigan has been able to beat are the doormats.

The team has lost three games in a row to Michigan State and they have lost 9 of the last 10 games to Ohio State, including the last seven in a row.

So much for rivalries, eh?

But on Saturday, the Wolverine hockey team had a chance to prove that Michigan was still there, that the Wolverines weren't going to get rolled by a quality opponent every time they played in Michigan Stadium.

The Michigan hockey team put on a clinic against Michigan State, winning 5-0 in a game that featured some of the best collegiate hockey players in the country.

The team rose to the challenge of playing not only against a big rival, but a big rival that was actually good.

Sure, there are detractors out there that will go on and on about how, "hockey isn't a big deal," and that, "hockey doesn't count," or it, "isn't one of the big sports."

Whatever Losers say a lot of things in order to justify losing. Wolverine fans know that better than anyone these days.

But those detractors are wrong. Hockey is a big deal, and it was a huge deal on Saturday.

That hockey team proved to the 113,000 plus fans that showed up in the freezing cold, that there was still a reason to cheer for the maize and blue and to sing "The Victors" as loud as possible.

For an afternoon, the Michigan Wolverines and their fans got to experience greatness in the Big House once again.

Let's all hope that the experience wasn't a one-time only thing.

Let's hope that an ice rink doesn't have to be erected in Michigan Stadium in order for the Wolverine faithful to walk out of the building satisfied.

The Big Chill was a big deal. But Michigan's ascension back to glory off of the ice would be so much bigger.

GENERAL ADMISSION

MIKE LARSON

Hockey game one for the history books

The Germans never saw it coming.

After holding the Guinness World Record for largest attendance at an ice hockey game since May, the Germans could do nothing Saturday as their record was smashed like the inside of a bratwurst.

The Big Chill at the Big House, the hockey game between Michigan and Michigan State, which was played Saturday on an outdoor rink in Michigan Stadium, was expected to set the new record, but the amount of people who showed up for the game exceeded even the wildest of expectations.

113,411 hockey fans showed up for the game at the Big House, eclipsing the old Guinness mark of 77,803, which was set on May 7 of this year in Germany during the 2010 IIHF World Championship game against the USA and Germany.

The attendance seemed to even eclipse the actual game, which Michigan won, 5-0.

"This is just amazing, to see this many people in one place," said University of Michigan sophomore Geoff Winstern. "It's one thing to see huge crowds at football games, but you expect to see the Big House full for football. But for a hockey game? It's definitely a great experience. I'll remember this forever."

In addition to setting a new Guinness record, the game also, perhaps even more impressively, set a new Big House record.

The 113,411 narrowly beat the old Michigan Stadium record of 113,090, which was set at Michigan's home-opening football game against Connecticut earlier this season. The game also marked the rededication of the stadium after lengthy renovations.

"This kind of event really shines a spotlight on the University of Michigan and Ann Arbor," Carla Mitchem of Ann Arbor said. "I wondered how it would work out when I heard about it. I knew people would show up for a game against Michigan and Michigan State, but I wasn't sure if they would pack the stadium. I was wrong. The place was definitely packed."

The day of the game had a unique, but familiar feel.

"It's almost like a football Saturday in the winter," Mitchell said. "It's different, but it's kind of the same. It's weird."

Ann Arbor did have a football game feel to it on Saturday, as fans flocked to Michigan Stadium from all directions.

Photos by Jonathan Knight

The Michigan Wolverines head out of the tunnel at Michigan Stadium on Saturday.

The parking lot at Pioneer High School was packed with cars, ticket scalpers and parking attendants were out in full force.

The only difference was that people were dressed in winter hats, thick jackets and hockey sweaters, rather than the fall attire usually designated for football season.

The temperature was just 41 degrees when the puck dropped, making it a pretty chilly affair.

"It was cold, but I didn't really notice it," Winstern said. "I think when you get that many people in one place, it doesn't seem quite so bad."

The game also offered something most hockey fans never get to see: fireworks.

After every goal scored, fireworks that were set up around the field launched in a showing of brilliant color and smoke.

Then, after the game had finished and after the sun had gone down, the remaining fans were treated to a full-fledged fireworks display set to music.

The players also checked out the fireworks, with some kneeling on the ice to watch the show.

"It was pretty cool," freshman defenseman Jon Merrill said. "It's something you don't get to see every day, so we wanted to stay and watch."

Merrill got to see some fireworks earlier in the day too, when he scored a pair of goals for the Wolverines.

"It's always great to score," he said. "But to score in such a big game is huge."

Huge is right. Big goals in the Big House for the Big Chill. It doesn't get any more huge than that.

Chelsea's Will McEachern goes to work at 119 pounds for the Bulldogs.

Bulldogs pin 5 wins at SMCC

By Terry Jacoby
Heritage Newspapers

After facing such wrestling powerhouses as Bedford and Dundee, the Chelsea Bulldogs got a chance to take a breath and put some matches in the win column.

The Bulldogs easily won all five matches on Saturday at a team tournament hosted by Monroe St. Mary's Catholic Central. The Bulldogs improved to 5-4 on the season after starting off the year facing some elite programs.

Chelsea defeated Blissfield 57-17, SMCC 39-24, Dearborn Divine Child 54-21, Southgate Anderson 52-27 and Willow Run 77-3.

"It was a great tournament for us, especially for our younger wrestlers," Chelsea coach Kerry Kargel said. "We have wrestled against some tough competition before this tournament and this helps give our guys some confidence."

"It's a good experience for these guys to work on things and work on moves and discover that some of these moves do work. It was a really good learning experience."

Five Chelsea wrestlers went 5-0 on the day. Freshmen Brandon Cameron at 103 pounds, junior Ben Doll at 112, senior Andrew Nold at 140, senior Joey Newland at 152 and senior Charlie Kempf at heavyweight all won five matches on the day without a loss.

Nold won all five of his matches on pins.

Sophomore Nate Miller at 125 pounds, sophomore Avery Osentoski at 130, senior Matt Lindauer at 160 and sophomore Jay Szcodronski all went 4-1 for the Bulldogs.

Freshmen Will McEachern at 119 pounds, Nick Everding at 171 and senior Chris Shoemaker at 214 went 3-2 on the day.

Travis Nichols went 2-2 at 125 pounds, Billy Collins went 2-3 at 135, Travis Preston went 2-1 at 145 and Brennan Kurth went 1-1 at 145.

The Bulldogs wrestle today at Skyline against Huron, Ypsilanti and Skyline. Chelsea will wrestle Saturday in the Coldwater Invitational.

JV Basketball: Hornets hold off Bulldogs

The Saline junior varsity team opened up a close game with an explosive third-quarter finish.

With less than 2 minutes to play in the quarter, Saline clung to a 31-30 lead. A steal by Sedric Bazy set up a layup by Ryan Kirkpatrick, who was fouled on the play. The sophomore converted the three-point play to give the Hornets a 34-30 lead with 1:26 to play in the third.

Sean Corcoran and Bazy hit back-to-back triples in the final minute to give Saline a commanding 40-30 lead heading into the fourth quarter.

A layup by Chelsea's Zach Rabbitt cut the Saline lead to 45-38 with 1:42 to play. But the Bulldogs could not get any closer as the Hornets finished up with a 49-38 victory.

The Bulldogs led 13-12 after the first quarter and the game was tied 23-23 at halftime.

Corcoran led the Hornets with 12 points. Mike Hendrickson had nine points, Tyler Eisemann scored seven and Caleb Luckett had six for Saline.

Rabbitt led Chelsea with 12 points. Luke Hollandsworth and Logan Brown each scored six for the Bulldogs.

Saline junior guard Britten Clark (No. 41) tries to turn the corner on Chelsea's Amber Stetbon Friday night.

As it did all night, Saline fought back, refusing to wilt under the Bulldogs' pressure. Junior Katie Chrysler made a free throw then forced her way through numerous Chelsea defenders for an offensive rebound and basket bringing the Hornets closer at 37-34 with 41 seconds remaining on the clock.

Despite a gallant attempt, Saline could get no closer as the Bulldogs showed their poise as junior Grace Martin and Cooperrider each made last second free throws to seal Chelsea's victory.

Despite his disappointment, Hornets coach Jason Pickett said his team would improve.

"This kind of game matters if we learn something from it," Pickett said. "We need to continue to stay together. Chelsea executed better down the stretch. We need to be stronger with the basketball. We'll find out in a month or so what we learned from this game. We're young and we will get better. That's the key."

Ellis led Saline with 10 points.

"She had a solid game for us," Pickett said. "She'll keep improving."

Borowski added six points, while junior Britten Clark and Price each had four points for the Hornets.

Junior Maura McCann and Chrysler each netted three points, while juniors Cera Smart and Alli Cope each had two points for Saline.

Cole paced Chelsea with 11 points.

"She's a three-year varsity player for me," Blomquist said. "We have a lot of different offensive weapons. She was the one to lead us today."

Hall chipped in eight points, while Cooperrider had seven points for the Bulldogs.

Sophomore Riley Singleton (6-2) and Fitzsimmons each had three points, while senior Amber Stetbon, sophomore Grace Sauer and Martin each had two points and senior Emily Cottrell one point for Chelsea.

BOYS

Saline coach Jay Plitzuweit didn't see much difference in his team between the season-opening 90-55 loss to powerful East Lansing last week and the Chelsea game on Friday night. But he understands the process will take some time.

"Our same struggles are showing," said Plitzuweit, comparing the Hornets' first two games. "We need to have some good practices and fix a few things and if we can do that, this team has the potential to get a lot better and play a lot better and be a successful team."

But Plitzuweit admits that these aren't quick fixes.

"There is a lot of hard work and a lot of learning ahead of us," he said.

A steal and layup by Roberts gave Chelsea a 4-0 lead before McCalla buried a triple from the corner to make it 7-0 with 5:32 left in the opening quarter. Spencer Mykala knocked down two free throws and Chelsea led 9-0.

Hendrickson put the Hornets on the board with a triple and Owings followed with a layup to make it 9-5. But Chelsea went on a 9-3 run to finish the quarter. The only Saline points came on a triple by Dils. McCalla hit his second three of the game with just seconds remaining to give Chelsea an 18-8 lead after the first quarter.

Mykala, a senior forward, scored inside to give the Bulldogs a 23-10 lead before the Hornets went on a 5-0 run. But the quarter ended with two put-backs underneath from Steinhauer to give Chelsea a 27-15 lead at the break.

After the teams traded baskets to start the third quarter, Borders scored twice inside on nice passes from Roberts to give Chelsea a 33-17 lead. After a three-pointer by Dils, Roberts hit a jumper and Fischhaber scored inside for a 37-20 lead. Two free throws with seven seconds left gave Chelsea a 44-26 lead after three quarters.

Chelsea's lead reached 20 points on a steal and layup by Aaron Zynda to start the fourth quarter.

"Hopefully, you just want to get through the first game and then make some adjustments, but we played very well on both ends," Raymond said. "We had great ball movement and played unselfish basketball."

They also have some nice depth to work with.

"We can go nine to 10 deep," Raymond said. "We have the three big guys underneath I can rotate. The best thing about this team is how unselfish they play, and each player knows what they can do and won't try to do more than they are capable of doing."

Depth is something the Hornets are trying to create. They have only two seniors that are seeing a lot of minutes but they do have some size. Smutny, who is 6-foot-7 and is the team's starting center, played hard against the Bulldogs and shows a great deal of potential.

When asked if he saw any positives from Friday night, Plitzuweit said, "Flashes."

"I think we did a better job of taking care of the basketball in the full court," he said. "We just have to play offense with a sense of purpose. We need to become a much scrappier team than we are right now. If we become

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING VILLAGE OF DEXTER PLANNING COMMISSION ORDINANCE AMENDMENT

Pursuant to Michigan Public Act 207 of 1921, as amended, notice is hereby given that the Village of Dexter Planning Commission will hold a public hearing on Monday, January 3, 2011 at 7:30 p.m. at the Dexter Senior Center, 7720 Ann Arbor Street, near public commons, on the proposed amendments to Article 2, Definitions; Article 3, General Provisions; Article 4, Special Land Uses; and Article 14, General Provisions of the Village of Dexter General Code. The following is proposed:

Article 2 Add: Medical Marijuana Dispensary means any store front, office building, or other structure or facility that dispenses, facilitates, sells, or provides any medical marijuana, cannabis, or any product containing marijuana or cannabis to patients permitted by the State of Michigan and in compliance with the Michigan Medical Marijuana Act of 2008 (Michigan Department of Community Health (MDCH)). No growing or cultivation is permitted at a Dispensary. A Dispensary shall not include or permit consumption of medical marijuana. A use which is not intended for use in the medical use of marijuana prior to enactment of said Ordinance shall be deemed to not be a legally established use, and therefore not entitled to nonconforming status under the provisions of this Ordinance and/or State Law.

Add: Medical Marijuana Home Occupation means the cultivation of medical marijuana by a registered medical caregiver as defined in Sec. 3 of the Act, MCL 333.2642(3)(a), for compensation within a single family dwelling that is the registered primary caregiver's primary residence and which complies in conformity with the restrictions and regulations contained in the Act and in the State Regulations developed by the Michigan Department of Community Health (MDCH). Medical Marijuana Home Use does not include any multi-family dwelling.

Article 3, Section 3.05 Amend to the following:

A home occupation may be permitted in a single family detached dwelling within a zoning district where such dwelling is permitted, subject to the following conditions:

A. Application and approval of the home occupation is received from the Village of Dexter in accordance with this section.

B. Certain uses by the nature of their operation have a pronounced tendency to increase in intensity beyond the limits permitted for home occupations, thereby impairing the reasonable use and value of surrounding residential properties. Therefore, the following uses shall not be permitted as home occupations: medical care services, mortuaries, funeral homes, day care centers, child day care, antique shops, restaurants, private clubs, veterinary clinics, animal grooming establishments, barbers, shops or beauty parlors with more than one stylist, child day care, commercial, studios or kennels, real estate offices, restaurants, vehicle repairs or painting shops, retail shops, landscape installation and maintenance businesses, snow removal, contracting, construction, contractors, trailer rentals, funeral homes, nursing homes, private clubs, adult recreational uses and repair shops in general. However, this section is not intended to prohibit offices related to the administration of construction, contracting, landscaping, maintenance, or snow removal businesses. Note, this list does not include every use that is prohibited as home occupation.

C. The use of the dwelling and for a home occupation shall be clearly incidental and subordinate to its use for residential purposes, and not more than one quarter (25%) of the floor space of the dwelling unit may be used for the purposes of the home occupation or for storage purposes in conjunction with the home occupation.

(D) A home occupation shall be conducted completely within the principal structure.

(E) There shall be no change in the outside appearance of the structure or premises or other visible evidence of conduct of such home occupation and there shall be no external or internal alterations not customary in residential areas including the expansion of off street parking areas.

(F) No article shall be sold or offered for sale on the premises except such as is primarily produced within the dwelling.

(G) A home occupation shall not create noise, dust, vibration, smell, smoke, glare, electrical interference, wireless communications interference, fire hazard, or any other hazard or nuisance to any greater or more frequent extent than would normally be generated in a similarly zoned residential district.

(H) Signs not customarily found in residential areas shall be prohibited. However, one (1) non-illuminated name plate, not more than two (2) square feet in area, may be attached to the building, and which sign shall contain only the name, occupation, and address of the occupant.

(I) There shall be no deliveries to or from a home occupation with a vehicle larger than a 15,000 pound truck with not more than two (2) axles.

(J) In no case shall a home occupation be open to the public earlier than 8:00 a.m. nor later than 7:00 p.m.

(K) No outdoor display or storage of materials, goods, supplies, or equipment shall be permitted on the premises. The home occupation shall not be visible from the street.

(L) Bed & Breakfast operations shall be permitted in Residential Districts as required in Section 8.11 of this Ordinance.

(M) No more than one other person shall be employed or involved with such activity on premises other than a member of the immediate family residing in the dwelling unit.

(N) Services and transactions shall be conducted by appointment only, walk in retail trade shall be prohibited.

Add Section 3.05

2. Medical Marijuana Home Occupation. In addition to the requirements in Section 8.05(1), Medical marijuana home occupation shall be subject to the following requirements:

(A) The medical use of marijuana shall comply at all times and in all circumstances with the Michigan Medical Marijuana Act and the General Rules of the Michigan Department of Community Health, as they may be amended from time to time.

(B) All medical marijuana shall be contained within the main building in an enclosed, locked facility.

(C) All necessary building electrical, plumbing and mechanical permits shall be obtained prior to the installation of the electrical wiring, lighting and/or water piping devices that support the cultivation, growing or harvesting of marijuana are located.

(D) If a room with windows is utilized as a growing location, any lighting methods that exceed usual residential periods between the hours of 11pm and 7am shall employ shielding methods without alteration to the exterior of the residence, to prevent ambient light spillage that may create a distraction for adjacent residential properties.

(E) The structure where marijuana is grown shall be clearly marked with a sign that reads "Medical Marijuana Home Occupation" and shall be subject to inspection and approval by the Fire Department to insure compliance with the Michigan Fire Protection Code.

Article 8, Section 8.11(A)(2) Add Medical Marijuana Dispensary

Article 8, Sec. 8.11(B)(2) Add: Medical Marijuana Dispensary

The intent of the Zoning Ordinance is to regulate medical marijuana dispensaries by providing for regulations and fees in a manner that promotes and protects the public health, safety and welfare, mitigates potential impacts on surrounding properties and persons, and that conforms with the policies and requirements of the Michigan Medical Marijuana Act, MCL 333.2642, et seq.

scrapper we can make more things happen."

Despite the Bulldogs playing a strong all-around game, it wasn't a perfect performance.

"Sure, there are things we can do better," Raymond said. "We still need to be more aggressive with the ball, especially against a zone defense. We can play better, but for an opener I'm pleased with how we played and the effort the kids gave."

Chelsea plays Stockbridge on Tuesday before the holiday break. The Hornets play Friday night at home against Novi and then take a few weeks off before returning Jan. 4 at Milan.

Maura McCann (No. 20) looks to make a move for the Hornets during Friday game with Chelsea.

Basketball home opener is always a special night

As I drove up to Saline High School for last Friday night's girls' basketball home opener, I thought traffic was a little heavier than usual for an early season, mid-December hoops game. Though it was the home opener, I still thought, 'Wow, way to go Hornets - way to pack 'em in there.'

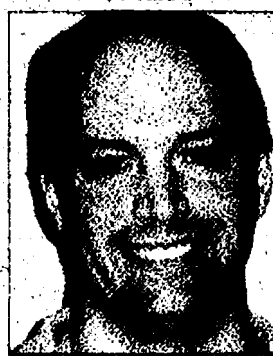

I arrived a little after tip-off and was amazed at the number of headlights I saw exiting the parking lot. Again, I thought to myself, 'Wow, way to go Saline JV - they really have quite a fanbase this season.'

Then I thought about how that bacon double cheeseburger with fries and two Cokes (yes, two) I just inhaled prior to the game wasn't sitting too well in my stomach. But, alas, that (mis)adventure will have to wait for another column.

It was basketball time and I had to switch gears and replace my feedbag, err, my hamburger issues, and put my sports writer's cap on. As I made my way to the Saline High School entrance I noticed an odd sight as I walked through the parking lot toward the front doors. It was a chilly night, so I had on my winter coat, sweater and gloves. I had to watch my step as there were small patches of ice littered here and there in the parking lot.

CHALK TALK

DON RICHTER

As the wind howled through the open lot, I mumbled something to myself about how I wasn't ready for winter and that I'm already tired of the cold, when I looked up and saw two young ladies standing outside the school, apparently waiting for a ride home, with no coat on, no hat, no gloves, in T-shirts and shorts.

I kid you not. It must be a youth thing. Both girls were chit-chatting on the phone seemingly unconcerned with the cold surrounding them.

I chuckled to myself. Here I am a grown man all bundled up shivering from the cold, while standing in front of me are two young ladies in shorts and T-shirts jabbering on their phones like it's a warm, breezy summer night. So, of course, I did the only thing I could do as I approached them - no, I didn't ask them where their coats were (that would be too adult-like), I, instead, quickly took off my gloves, unzipped my coat and walked by. What cold? I don't feel anything.

Of course, they both were completely oblivious to my presence. But, somehow, I felt a little better.

I ain't no punk.

I still don't know why they chose shorts and T-shirts for a wintry December night, but what do I know? Maybe there was some sort of swimming activity going on?

Gymnastics? I don't know. Anyhow, it was a great opening night for hoops. The stands were packed for the game against Southeastern Conference rival Chelsea. The contest was close throughout and both teams played good, clean basketball. All in all, a fun night. I'm looking forward to the upcoming season.

Maybe next time I'll try the shorts and T-shirt thing. Or, maybe not. Knowing me, I'd probably pass out from hypothermia before reaching the school entrance and be found lying face first in the parking lot somewhere.

Nah, I think I'll stick to bacon double cheeseburgers and indigestion. That's far safer.

Well...sort of.

The cast of the 2010 Holiday Pageant at Weber-Blaess Schoolhouse included Emma Beardsley, Ian Burns, Tate Burns, Gillian Cain, Michael Doa, Drew Denlinger, Lauren Denlinger, Kaylee Klepaczyk, Sarahyn Klepaczyk, Aubrey Lavasseur, Morgan Mervis, Isabella Proccassini and Natalie Wysocki.

Christmas show features old-fashioned pageant

One-room schoolhouse took viewers back in time

By Steven Howard

The look of enjoyment on the faces of those gathered to take in the 2010 Holiday Pageant at the Weber-Blaess one-room schoolhouse in Saline Sunday spoke to the quality and uniqueness of the performance that was presented.

The show is part of the Saline Area Schools Historic Preservation Foundation's annual roster of events, and featured 13 children portraying a 1930s-style performance.

Rebecca Groeb-Driskell was responsible for organizing the pageant and said doing so was a pleasure.

The students involved have all shown exceptional promise in either theater, music or both, Groeb-Driskell said.

"A lot of them are theater and music students," she said, adding that all have participated in the humanities for a long time prior to participating in the pageant.

Groeb-Driskell said getting to be in the show is a big thrill for those involved.

"They like the idea of dressing in the old clothes," she said, also mentioning their collective fondness for traditional song and dance.

Students rehearsed for several weeks to ensure they got everything just right.

"It was since early November," Groeb-Driskell said of the process.

The show featured songs, poetic readings and other dramatic efforts, all based on research as to how pageants of this era were orchestrated.

"I actually have notes from teachers pulled from journals," Groeb-Driskell said, indicating a lot of the themes she encountered in the Depression-era writings seemed to relate to problems contemporary families might be experiencing, though, perhaps, not quite as severe.

"We talk about how people are having difficult times," she said of dialogue in the show. "I think it definitely correlates to what some families are dealing with now."

Saline City Councilman Brian Marl, who also serves as vice chairman of the foundation, was in attendance Sunday. He said the pageant represents an important method of keeping the region's past alive.

Marl said his grandfather attended a one-room schoolhouse, as did many others in agriculturally-based areas such as Saline, and noted how such pageant events really meant a lot to those who went.

"This was a very big deal in the one-room schoolhouse culture on the schoolhouse calendar," he said.

When the show began, the audience was treated to a high-spirited medley of favorite Christmas carols, followed by dramatic interludes, such as several scenes based on Charles Dickens' classic "A Christmas Carol."

The students' acting and singing offered an opportunity for audience members to suspend their disbelief and feel as though they had actually been transported back through time.

Adding to the feeling was the newly decorated schoolhouse, featuring era-specific prints and decorations put up in the last few weeks.

At the show's conclusion, Santa Claus made an appearance, causing many in attendance, young and old alike, to gasp joyfully when he made his surprise entrance.

Santa passed around a few treats before auctioning two gift baskets based on 1930s sundries, toys and food.

In the end, the first basket was sold at a price of $35, while the second went for $50.

The show's young actors even came around with snacks people might have had during Christmas in the 1930s, staying in character and answering questions from the audience about their participation.

Michael Doa called being in the pageant "a really interesting experience," citing his enthusiasm for learning the traditional songs, poems and renditions.

Sarahyn Klepaczyk agreed, and said the event marks the beginning of the holiday season in her estimation.

"It really puts me in the Christmas mood," she said, "so I like it a lot."

Speaking on behalf of the foundation, Cheryl Hoeft said she and her colleagues have worked hard to enrich the lives of students and community members with such activities since moving Weber-Blaess to its current location in 2004 at an expense of $175,000.

Library to host celebration

The exhibit "Celebrating 400 Years of the King James Bible: Its Origins in Manuscript and Print" opens Jan. 5, 2011, in the University of Michigan's Harlan Hatcher Graduate Library.

The exhibit traces the roots of the King James Version of the Bible, showing both its direct ancestors and other, related works up to its appearance in 1611.

Attention is also given to the materials upon which the Biblical text was preserved, from papyrus to parchment to paper.

Also called the Authorized Version, the King James Bible was the standard version in English for 350 years.

Commanded by King James I in 1604, just after he succeeded Elizabeth to the throne, 47 scholars began the task of a new translation, "as consonant as can be to the original Hebrew and Greek; and... set out and printed, without any marginal notes."

James intended it to be accepted by all branches of English-speaking Christians.

The title page of the first edition of the King James Bible reads, "THE HOLY BIBLE, Conteyning the Old Testament, and the New: Newly translated out of the Originall Tongues; and with the former Translations diligently compared and revised by his Majesties speciall Comendament" [sic].

Further, the title page notes the edition was printed in London in 1611 by "Robert Barker, Printer to the Kings most excellent Majestic" [sic].

"The annual Bible exhibit in the Hatcher Graduate Library draws patrons from across Michigan and Ohio," said Karen Jordan, director of programming and community engagement for MLibrary, in a news release.

"We are delighted to share these rare, ancient documents with the community."

All of the materials displayed in the exhibit are from the University of Michigan Library's Papyrus Collection and Special Collections Library.

The Bible exhibit can be seen at the Hatcher Graduate Library on the first floor in the Audubon Room.

Exhibit dates are Jan. 5 through March 20, 2011. Hours for the exhibit are 8:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturdays and 1 to 7 p.m. Sundays.

The exhibit is free and open to the public.

'Tangled' soars, but also plays it safe

Hey, I'm Ryan Michaels, a 14-year-old writing movie reviews for Heritage Newspapers. I've been doing it for three years, and enjoy it a lot. Here's my review of "Tangled."

Catchy songs, upbeat heroine, bubble-gum attitude and gorgeous animation. These are what tend to define classic Disney animation, which is to say the periods in which they hit their stride (1940s, '50s, and early '90s).

They're clearly aiming for that vibe with their latest and 50th film, "Tangled," a telling of the tale of Rapunzel. In this, Rapunzel is still a naive, long-haired princess stuck in a tower for all 20-something years of her life.

When a charming thief named Flynn hides away in her tower, Rapunzel sees it as an opportunity to witness the outside world. The unlikely duo get in all sorts of adventures and, in true Disney form, begin to fall for one another.

Despite the fact that the film is rendered with computers, this is a movie that looks and feels like a traditionally animated one, and I mean this in both good and bad ways. It's good, because, let's face it, the film is absolutely gorgeous.

Over the last six years, Disney poured $260 million into developing this movie, and nearly every penny shows on screen. It blends the abstract beauty of hand-drawn animation with the vivid detail of that of computer-generated animation. Every frame is a visual revelation.

It's also refreshingly straight-forward, doing away with the self-aware, referential style we're used to from, say, a "Shrek" movie.

But the downside of adhering to the Mouse House's traditional habits is that "Tangled" plays and feels like most other Disney films, and most animated films for that matter. It pleasantly ebbs and flows along for 90 minutes, hitting all the beats and character moments you would expect, never feeling really important or necessary.

Mind you, it's never once boring, and to be sure I sat in the theater enjoying myself a good deal, but considered: After all the amazing movies Disney has given us, did such a standard one really need to be made? Had they focused on the story as much as they did the visuals, then probably so. But, instead, we have "Tangled," a movie that soars in some respects but plays it far too safe in others.

I give it 2.5 out of 4 stars.

Parading through town

R&B Plastics Machinery entered the Saline Christmas Parade for the first time this year. The company manufactures large machines that make plastic bottles of all shapes and sizes for markets such as packaging, food and beverage, dairy, detergents, motor oil and many more. The company is more than 33 years old and has some 55 employees. They chose the theme, "A Candyland Christmas Story" to tie-in with the parade theme and show how plastics play a big part in everyone's daily lives. Pictured are Bob Phelps, warehouse manager, and Dave Abraham, paint-booth operator, as the parade route bends through Saline.

New research offers hope for Alzheimer's treatments

New molecular tools developed at the University of Michigan show promise for "cleansing" the brain of amyloid plaques, implicated in Alzheimer's disease.

A hallmark of Alzheimer's disease — a neurodegenerative disease with no cure — is the aggregation of protein-like bits known as amyloid beta peptides into clumps in the brain called plaques.

These plaques and their intermediate messes can cause cell death, leading to the disease's devastating symptoms of memory loss and other mental difficulties.

The mechanisms responsible for the formation of these misfolded proteins and their associations with Alzheimer's disease are not entirely understood, but it's thought that copper and zinc ions are somehow involved.

The research, led by assistant professor Mi Hee Lim, was published online Dec. 3 in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Science.

In earlier work, Lim and her team developed dual-purpose molecular tools that both grab metal ions and interact with amyloid-beta.

The researchers went on to show that in solutions with or without living cells, the molecules were able to regulate copper-induced amyloid-beta aggregation, not only disrupting the formation of clumps but also breaking up clumps that already had formed.

Building upon that first generation of compounds, Lim and lab members Jung Suk Choi and Joseph Braymer now report a second generation of compounds that are more stable in biological environments.

The researchers tested one of those compounds, described in the PNAS paper, in homogenized brain tissue samples from Alzheimer's disease patients.

"We found that our compound is capable of disassembling the misfolded amyloid clumps to form smaller amyloid pieces, which might be 'cleansed' from the brain more easily, demonstrating a therapeutic application of our compound," said Lim, who has joint appointments in the Life Sciences Institute and the Department of Chemistry.

In addition, preliminary tests show that the bi-functional small molecules have a strong potential to cross the blood-brain barrier, the barricade of cells that separates brain tissue from circulating blood, protecting the brain from harmful substances in the bloodstream.

"Crossing this barrier is essential for any treatment like this to be successful," Lim said. Next steps include more intensive testing of the new compounds for diagnostic and therapeutic properties.

Lim and her team collaborated with Ayyalusamy Ramamoorthy, professor of chemistry and biophysics on this work, with funding from the U of M Horace H. Rackham School of Graduate Studies, the Alzheimer's Art Quilt Initiative and the National Institutes of Health.

WEDDING

Michelle Lynn Dettling, daughter of Michael and Tami Dettling of Chelsea, married Peter Hendrick Ott, son of Michael Ott and Karen Hendrick of East Lansing, on July 17 at McGuire's Golf Resort in Cadillac. They were married by the Rev. Mandy Bolen, a friend of the couple, in front of family and friends. The bride and groom both attended Alma College.

SRSly plans New Year's Eve party

By Jana Miller
Heritage Media

The Chelsea area SRSly coalition is looking forward to its next major event: a safe and fun New Year's Eve party at Beach Middle School. The party will take place Dec. 31 from 4 to 8 p.m. at the school and will give students and their families something safe and fun to do for the holiday.

The party is free and will feature a long list of activities, including live music, karaoke, a talent show, and food.

There will be a chili cook off with judging starting at 5 p.m. The first 10 entrants to e-mail Sara Wild at swild@srslychelsea.org will receive a gift card to Polly's Country Market to buy supplies. Everyone at the party is permitted to sample the entries and vote for their favorite.

Along a similar theme, there will also be a sugar cookie decorating station. Party guests can either eat what they make or enter the cookies into the cookie decorating competition. Judging for that contest begins at 7 p.m.

There will also be plenty of opportunities to participate in physical activity. Swimming will be available from 5 to 7 p.m., and party guests can also play volleyball, basketball, or indoor soccer.

There will also be a SYSly Olympics. Teams of four can compete in different categories for points. The grand prize will be awarded at 8 p.m. to whichever team can out-eat, out-dance, and out-do the competition.

Door prizes will be awarded throughout the night every half hour, and guests can play games, do arts and crafts, or hang out with friends in the meantime.

The SRSly coalition is in need of volunteers for the event. Those who plan to attend the party are asked to consider donating an hour of their time between 4 and 8 p.m. to lead or oversee an activity.

To volunteer, ask a question, or sign up for the talent show or chili cook-off, contact Sara Wild at (734) 475-2819 or swild@srslychelsea.org.

MLK Day speaker on tap

Tricia Rose, professor and chairwoman of the Africana Studies Department at Brown University, will be Eastern Michigan University's keynote speaker on Martin Luther King Jr. Day.

Her talk, called "MLK and the Legacies of the Civil Rights Era," will occur at 10 a.m. Jan. 17 in the EMU Student Center auditorium. This event is free and open to the public.

Rose was born and raised in New York City, spending her childhood in Harlem and the Bronx.

She went on to graduate from Yale University, where she received a bachelor's degree in sociology and then her doctorate from Brown University in the field of American Studies. She taught at Rutgers, New York University and at the University of California Santa Cruz.

Rose lectures frequently to scholars, corporate and general audiences on a wide range of topics relating to American cultural politics, inequality, diversity, black culture, music and gender.

Rose has also been featured as an expert commentator on NPR, MSNBC and other national and local outlets.

She is most well-known for her ground-breaking book on the emergence of hip hop culture, "Black Noise: Rap Music and Black Culture in Contemporary America." The book won an American Book Award from the Before Columbus Foundation in 1995 and was also considered one of the top 25 books of 1995 by the Village Voice.

In 1999, Black Issues in Higher Education listed "Black Noise" as one of its "Top Books of the Twentieth Century."

In 2003, Rose published another book, "Longing To Tell: Black Women Talk About Sexuality and Intimacy."

Publisher's Weekly noted that the book was "heart-breaking, inspiring, and brutally honest... as compelling as it is sorely needed."

Her most recent book, "The Hip Hop Wars: What We Talk About When We Talk About Hip Hop... and Why it Matters," is a rebuttal to both sides of the contemporary debates on hip hop, which she contends negatively shape our much larger conversation about race and identity in America.

"Hip Hop Wars" explores 10 of the most crucial issues at stake in the public conversation on hip hop.

She concludes with a call for reincarnating the progressive and creative heart of what hip hop once was.

Rose's keynote address is part of a weeklong celebration of Martin Luther King Jr.'s life and legacy. More details about the week can be found at www.emich.edu/mlk.

For more information about this event, contact Campus Life at 487-3045, campuslife@emich.edu or emich.edu/campuslife.

BIG RED COUNTRY

ALYSSA STUART

School and homework, social life and friends, family life, and trying hard to fit in or to be accepted in school all creates stress in teenagers' lives. And most don't know how to deal with it.

Some tips on how to deal with stress can be found on the website

Don't ignore stress in teens' lives

www.pamf.org, which says allow plenty of time by yourself as being too busy is a big source of stress.

Exercise is a great stress-buster. The website recommends at least 30 minutes of physical activity every day. Also, get plenty of rest sleep and eat a healthy diet that includes high-fiber foods.

If you're under stress, discuss your stress with a friend or family member and ask for help from them if you feel you need it.

According to www.thehealthcenter.info, other ways to deal with stress include taking breaks during stressful activities. Say "no" to things that will make you overworked. Also, avoid major changes in your life that will increase your stress.

Teens undergo many stressors in their lives, and if they do not seek help on how to deal with stress, they may have it throughout their adolescence lives. The website Livestrong.com states that school pressure such as completing daily homework, studying for exams, scheduling that cuts into study time and relaxing downtime all create stress.

Also, peer pressure, family problems, sense of loss and self doubt make life stressful. Stressfocus.com states some stressors include physical changes, changing relationship with peers, responsibilities to their families and new responsibilities that come with being a teen.

There are five types of stress, according to www.thehealthcenter.info.

Eustress is a short-term stress and it arises at the points of increased physical activity. To cure it, stress motivation and inspiration are needed.

• Distress is a negative stress and is prompted by constant readjustments or alternations in a routine. You may experience a sense of discomfort and unfamiliarity.

• Acute stress is an intense stress that arrives and disappears quickly.

• Chronic stress is a prolonged stress that exists for weeks, months or even years and it is one of the harder types of stress to eliminate.

• Hyper stress is when an individual is pushed beyond what he or she can handle. Little issues cause an emotional response and they become overloaded or overworked easily.

To most, stress doesn't appear to be a big deal and easily curable. But what we seem to ignore is how fast stress can build and become harder to cure.

Girls are affected more than boys and they respond to stress by seeking help from others and taking action to reduce their stress. Boys, however, respond by not dealing with stress at all or by getting their mind away from sources of stress.

To cure all types of stress, we need to realize what the signs of stress are and then not ignore stress if you have it. If you have it, figure out a way to get rid of it because building up stress is an unhealthy thing, and ignoring it now can make it difficult to deal with in the future.
