Charges added to CSC case

By Art Aisner
Special Writer

Washtenaw County prosecutors have charged a local martial arts instructor with another set of sexual assault and child pornography possession charges after a second victim came forward to authorities.

Court officials said the second victim was a student of Bruner's at an Ann Arbor area martial arts studio at the time.

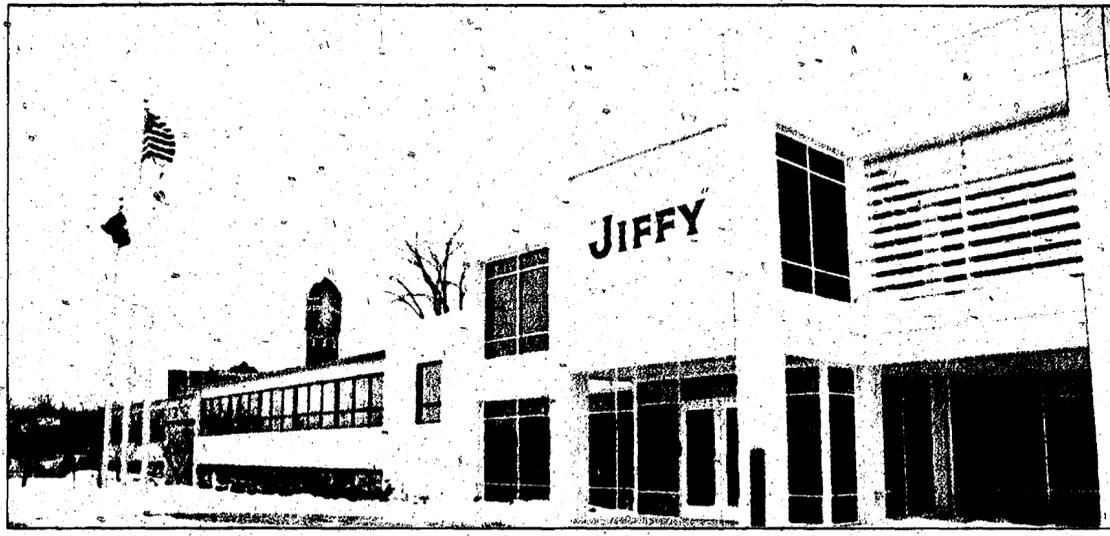

Court records show Edward James Bruner, 58, is now charged with one count of first-degree criminal sexual conduct for an incident in 2004 that was just recently reported.

Court officials said the second victim was a student of Bruner's at an Ann Arbor area martial arts studio at the time.

Bruner, of Scio Township, was charged last month with first-degree criminal sexual conduct and second-degree criminal sexual conduct for a January incident on I-94 near Chelsea. Prosecutors also levied four counts of possessing child sexually abusive material, court records show.

"The instructor has taught at three area studios in the past 20 years — Ann Arbor West Tae Kwon Do, the now-defunct Victory TKD in Chelsea, and most recently at Kitchi Tae Kwon Do in Dexter Township.

He recently adjourned a preliminary hearing in Washtenaw County District Court and remains in custody without bond pending another court appearance on Feb. 24.

Chelsea Milling Company recently constructed a new public entrance for its factory tours.

Jiffy enjoys expansion

By Erica McClain
Heritage Media

In a tightened economy, one Chelsea business has certainly made strides. The Chelsea Milling Company, known for its Jiffy Mix, has spent the past year making vast technological improvements for both its operations and for the public.

The company, which dates back to the early 1800s, has completely overhauled its touring facilities with by adding two theater rooms, one seating 33 people and the other 88, where audiences can view a 10-minute video presentation.

In the video, the company's new mascot, Corny, a computer-generated, animated Jiffy Mix box guides the audience through the company's operations.

Corny, along with company president, Howdy Holmes, reveal to the audience not only how the factory puts out 1.5 million boxes of Jiffy Mix per day, but also how the grain gets to the company — right down to the farmers.

This presentation is a far cry from what the company's tour guides used to run a set of slides and tell the audience about the history Jiffy. The problem with the presentation was not only that it was outdated, but it also did not match the company's style.

"Our behavior and our presentations need to match," Holmes said. He said tour guides are more like hosts now, and the addition of Corny, the animated Jiffy box, makes the presentation much more interesting for children.

From the video presentation, tourists then get to see an inside look at the packaging facility of Chelsea Milling, which is unique in that the company keeps its entire operation within its factory. From the production, to the packaging, Chelsea Milling is one of the few companies left that uses "vertical integration," Holmes said, thereby saving $6 million.

For the property itself, Chelsea Milling has added two new components.

The largest and most noticeable is six new grain silos on the property, which used 1,200 cubic yards of cement and 750 pounds of rebar steel, in an 86-hour continuous pour. Holmes said the company is currently installing a conveyor for the silos and expects them to be ready for production in April. The silos should add the capacity for 300,000 bushels of grain, Holmes said.

Chelsea Milling also constructed an 11,000 square-foot research and development building, which will provide several new facilities.

For visiting chefs, a new kitchen and brainstorming area was added. There, Milling Company employees and visiting chefs can discover together how they can best use Jiffy Mix.

Howdy Holmes, president and CEO of Chelsea Milling, stands in a kitchen used for research and development.

To test new batches, a sensory room was added. Holmes said before the room was added, testers would sit around together and rate the products, which led to similar data. The new space requires taste testers to focus on the product without interruption, with dividers between each area.

To ensure that batches are just right, Chelsea Milling acquired a pilot plant for its r-and-d as well. Holmes said the pilot plant allows employees to make very small test batches, which they shelve for a year to ensure its quality. Before the upgrade, Holmes said the company did not have a pilot plant, so all test batches had to be made on a much larger scale, proving costly when a batch wasn't just right.

Holmes said constructing these additions at Chelsea Milling Company when the economy is still down wasn't fiscally constrained. The company, in fact, owes its success to tight times.

"When economic times slow down, people will eat at home more," he said. "And companies that produce valued products, whether it's cake mixes or breads or whatever the case, may be able to benefit from that."

To reserve a time to tour the Chelsea Milling Company, call 475-1361. Tours are available 10 a.m., noon and 2 p.m. Monday through Friday and take about one hour to complete.

Mothers of preschoolers to hold expo

By Crystal Hayduk
Special Writer

With a myriad of choices for educating children and providing supplemental educational experiences, parents of young children may feel tight on time and overwhelmed. Chelsea Mothers of Preschoolers wants to help.

With the assistance of a $750 grant from MOPS International, the local chapter is sponsoring the Chelsea Education Expo, which will be free of charge to all who attend. The event will be held 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 26 at the Comfort Inn and Village Conference Center, 1645 Commerce Park Drive, Chelsea. "Educating our children is one of the most important roles we serve as parents," said Sara Van Assche, coordinator for the Chelsea Chapter of MOPS.

Van Assche believes that bringing together educators, care providers and community programs will make it easier for families to gather the information they need to make decisions for their children.

"Chelsea MOPS understands that families do not have enough time to attend the numerous open houses, informational meetings and round-ups around town," Van Assche said. "We are hoping that Chelsea families take advantage of this free community event to collect information, get their questions answered and feel good about the choices they make for their children's education."

As of press time, 43 agencies will be represented at the event. The number increases every day, and is updated on the Facebook page "2011 Chelsea Education Expo" under "notes."

Democratic state Senator Rebekah Warren has also confirmed her attendance as of press time. All of the politicians who represent the area have been invited.

According to Denise Cugliari, MOPS publicity chair, the group applied for the "Reach More Moms" grant offered by the international group.

"When the Chelsea group

One of three suspects in Ann Arbor pot clinic robbery convicted

A Detroit man charged with a brazen armed robbery at an Ann Arbor medical marijuana clinic recently entered into a plea deal with prosecutors. Terrence Robinson, 34, pleaded guilty as charged to armed robbery, conspiracy, unlawful imprisonment and weapons violations at a recent pre-trial hearing in Washtenaw County Circuit Court, records show. A no contest plea was entered on one count of resisting and obstructing police. He will be sentenced March 17.

Robinson was among three men who entered the Liberty Clinic, located in the 200 block of Main Street in downtown Ann Arbor, Sept. 30 and ordered the patients and employees to gather around at gunpoint. The seven victims were duct taped and restrained while the men robbed the dispensary of cash, police said. A witness who escaped called 9-1-1 and reported that two armed men entered the building. Officers responded to the scene and arrested all three after a brief scuffle. No one was injured during the ordeal. Andre White, 32, and Markus Bailey, 18, are also charged with armed robbery, conspiracy to commit armed robbery and unlawful imprisonment, court records show. Washtenaw County Circuit Judge David Swartz recently granted a motion by Robinson's attorney to sever the case from the other two suspects. White, of Royal Oak, and Bailey, also of Detroit, face trial next month.

Wounded man freed while awaiting trial on domestic violence charges commands and was shot is free pending trial early next month.

Court records show Devin Reddick posted 10 percent of his $10,000 bond at the Washtenaw County Jail late last month following his formal arraignment on charges of domestic violence, driving with a suspended license and resisting police officers. He will stand trial before a jury March 1 in Washtenaw County District Court. Reddick was jailed upon his release from the hospital for treatment of a gunshot wound to the abdomen Jan. 15. Pittsfield Township Public Safety Director Matthew Harshberger said an officer shot Reddick after he made threatening gestures and refused to surrender at a traffic stop in the Rosewood Village Condominium complex. The officer was placed on paid administrative leave, per department policy, and an investigation by the Michigan State Police is under way. Reddick was wanted for questioning in a domestic assault complaint filed by his wife about an hour earlier, police said.

Convicted arsonist ordered back to prison for blaze

A man described by local authorities as a serial arsonist for setting a series of house fires in Ypsilanti nearly a decade ago is heading back to prison. Gregory Craig, 45, was recently ordered to serve three to 10 years behind bars for intentionally setting fire to an Augusta Township home in the 7000 block of Talladay Road last June. No one was living in the home at the time and no one was injured. The fire, however, gutted the multi-story home. Michigan State Police troopers responding to the scene arrested Craig nearby and he was charged with one count of arson of a dwelling. He pleaded guilty as charged. Washtenaw County Circuit Judge David Swartz didn't credit Craig for any time served at the Washtenaw County Jail since his arrest. He also ordered the sentence to begin following other penalties for violating his parole. Craig has eight prior convictions for arson and arson-related crimes that date back to 1999. He was paroled in 2008 after serving nearly six years of a maximum 20-year prison sentence, prison records show.

Multiple felony charges filed in rape case

Two men were charged last week with repeatedly sexually assaulting a Pittsfield Township woman in an apartment earlier this month. Maurice Ron Manning, 22, and Michael Martell-Deshawri Brown, 32, were arraigned on multiple counts of rape at the Washtenaw County Jail last week. Manning is in custody on $300,000 cash bond and both are expected to appear in a Washtenaw County District Court for a preliminary hearing this week, records show. Manning, a Pittsfield Township resident, faces four counts of first-degree criminal sexual conduct, one count of unlawful imprisonment, and one count of prostitution and pandering. He faces between 15 years and up to life in prison if convicted, court documents show. Brown, a resident of Ypsilanti Township, faces six counts of first-degree criminal sexual conduct, unlawful imprisonment, prostitution and pandering, and assault with a dangerous weapon. He was denied bond at arraignment. The assault was reported to police Feb. 1 and occurred in the 2700 block of Goldside Road, according to a police report. Medical assistance was required, but further details were not released. Manning is currently on probation for a criminal sexual conduct conviction in 2006, prison records show. He pleaded no contest to assault with intent to commit sexual penetration, and was sentenced to probation. He was required to register as a sex offender, refrain from drug and alcohol use, and complete treatment. Downtown chocolate event a hit

By Sean Dalton
Heritage Media

Most businesses in town had something special planned for last Saturday's third annual Chocolate Extravaganza.

From chocolate demonstrations at Garden Mill to a history and sampling of fair trade chocolate at Mission Marketplace there were all kinds of creative, fun events held at various downtown businesses.

"It's been a great day, and the weather has cooperated nicely," said Garden Mill owner Trinh Pifer. "We can't measure how many people have visited us today, but there have been a lot of families, couples and kids visiting us."

Dexter-based chocolate maker Janet Brown set up shop in the back of Garden Mill making chocolate hearts and chocolate covered strawberries, and other handcrafted candies for visitors.

"We get a lot of interest from people at the Chelsea and Dexter farmer's markets... it's not something people expect to see," Brown said.

Heart shaped dishes filled with conversation heart candies were one of her most popular items at the event this year.

Kevin Frahm of Mission Marketplace had the Soft Serve Symphony playing in the back room of his shop in the evening, after having presentations and discussions on the importance of free trade chocolate.

He also had spicy hot cocoa and candies available, but Frahm says that business owners need to go above and beyond putting out a tin of candies or a plate of brownies if Chocolate

A Soft Serve Symphony members Peter Van Reesema and Corey Richfield play at Mission Marketplace during Chocolate Extravaganza

Extravaganza is going to continue to grow.

"This is an opportunity to communicate to your customers who you are," Frahm said. "I think the businesses that really get on board with this do a lot do good."

"And I think the businesses that don't participate and aren't quite as creative, and just open a bowl of chocolate... this doesn't necessarily help them."

Frahm says that like Pifer, Chocolate Extravaganza brought dozens of new faces through his doors, which is important for him because Mission Marketplace is a non-profit free trade store that delivers a message as much as a product.

"For me this was a chance to talk about the darker side of chocolate - about the history of cocoa being discovered in Mexico and South America and being exported by the Spaniards," Frahm said.

Even today there are children around the world picking cocoa outside of free trade circles, and although it's not very upbeat Frahm felt that his customers enjoyed learning something while spending their time in his store.

"I think as a participant you get out of this what you put into it," Frahm said.

Peter Van Reesema and Corey Richfield of Soft Serve Symphony said that they were pleased with the crowds they were drawing.

"We'll definitely be back here performing next year," Van Reesema said. "Events like Chocolate Extravaganza and Sights & Sounds are definitely what make Chelsea special."

"When the Chelsea group started this process, we agreed that we wanted to do something that would not only gain a greater public awareness of MOPS, but somehow benefit the community," Cugliari said.

The grant will help to pay for the cost of the conference center, publicity for the event and small prizes for those who attend the expo. Gift certificates to a variety of local establishments have been donated for raffle, including a king-size Jacuzzi room donated by the Comfort Inn.

MOPS International is an organization that has been supporting, encouraging and meeting the needs of mothers of children from birth through kindergarten through local groups for almost 40 years.

Kathie Reiner, marketing and public relations manager for MOPS International based in Denver, Colorado, said that the "Reach More Moms" grant winners were chosen based on several factors, including "their proposal's innovative approach, the group's ability to incorporate new mothers into their local group, the quality of the plan proposed and the capacity of the group to carry out the plan." Reiner said the education expo will help young families make informed decisions about educating their children.

"MOPS International believes 'Better Moms Make A Better World,'" she said. "Helping mothers make informed decisions about their children's education helps to make them better moms, and we know in the long run will make a better world."

The 25th annual Fleece Fair, which is being held from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Feb. 19 in Chelsea, will feature unprocessed wool and alpaca, angora, mohair, cashmere, llama, silk and other fabrics.

Fleece Fair to feature local artists

Annual event will show spinning techniques

By Sheila Pursglove
Special Writer

The Spinner's Flock, which attracts fiber artists from across Washtenaw County, will hold its 25th annual Fleece Fair from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday in Chelsea. Admission is free and facilities are wheelchair accessible.

Visitors will find unprocessed wool, as well as fibers from alpaca, angora, mohair, cashmere, llama, camel, bison, dog, silk, cotton alone and in combination; yarns handspun by Spinner's Flock members, and finished garments, accessories, dolls and toys for sale, as well as spinning tools, including wheels and spindles, other equipment, quilt batts, weaving tools, felting supplies, dyes, books, magazines, and patterns.

There will be demonstrations of different spinning techniques throughout the day.

The Spinner's Flock, which also hosts a Fall Fleece Fair in Chelsea and Handspinners Holiday Fair each November at Matthaei Botanical Gardens in Ann Arbor, was launched in 1980 by a small group in Ann Arbor.

Members included sheep owners with lots of wool to spin, handspinners looking for wool, and people who wanted to learn how to spin.

The group now attracts members from southeastern Michigan, northern Ohio and Indiana; many of them raise sheep, angora goats, llamas, alpacas, and angora rabbits.

The group's president is Ann Arbor resident Rose Owens, a member for 12 years.

"I learned to spin fiber from my Sheltie dogs, so I could keep them with me forever, and now I spin all kinds of fiber," Owens said.

Ann Arbor resident Marge Mills has been a spinner for 23 years.

"I came to a Spinner's Flock Fleece Fair and bought two balls of roving and I hugged them for a year.

"Then I came back and learned to spin them into yarn," she says.

Her husband bought her some sheep, and built a barn and a craft studio for Mills' fiber processing and fiber artwork.

Rosemary Papp, another

Ann Arbor resident and long-time spinner, was fascinated by yarn and saw a spinning demonstration at Greenfield Village in Dearborn.

"I wanted to learn how to produce the yarn I wanted to use," she said. "At the time, good wool yarn was very difficult to find.

"Even today when there is a lot of millspun wool on the market and available to handknitters and other fiber artists, handspun is treasured for its longwearing properties. For spinners, it's also possible to create just exactly the yarn you want for any given project."

Sue Pufpuff of Battle Creek has been spinning for more than two decades.

"It all started with three rabbits in the '80s," she said. "I learned to spin because I couldn't find good yarn."

She now owns Pufpuff's Fiber Processing that does custom carding, blending, felting and dyeing of small specialty orders.

Kathy Moskal and her daughter, Leslie, raise alpacas, angora goats and angora rabbits on their small farm in Sylvan Township. Kathy has taught at the Chelsea Center for the Arts and gives spinning demonstrations at the Waterloo Historical Museum outside Chelsea.

Diana Eakin got started with spinning because her son wanted a chinchilla. She convinced him an angora rabbit would be a much better pet.

"Once he had a bunny, we all wanted something knit from his lovely fur," she said. "I learned to spin to make angora yarn. My husband, Bob, became interested in making wheels, spindles and other wooden spinning tools that he sells at the fleece fairs."

The Spinner's Flock meets on the second Saturday of each month at the Washington Street Education Center in Chelsea. The public is welcome. Newcomers can learn handspinning in a "Learners Circle" on their own equipment or guild-owned equipment.

The upcoming Fleece Fair will be held at Beach Middle School, 445 Mayer Drive, in Chelsea. For more information call 475-7922, or visit www.spinnersflock.org or www.facebook.com/spinnersflock.

Living the good life: Computer gamer makes living pursuing passion

By Jana Miller
Heritage Media

Ann Arbor native Sheng Han is living a life that would make computer nerds and gamers drool in their drool.

Han owns a sales and service center for personal computers called The PC Core, located on Washtenaw Avenue. He recently transformed the space into a gaming center, The Game Core, two months ago.

"I was at a point where I had $35,000 worth of gaming equipment sitting around, and I figured I might as well use it," Han said.

The new gaming center serves as a hub for many teenagers and college students looking to play together in groups from a common location.

The players buy time from Han to play on his custom-built computers, which have approximately 300 different games installed and are hanging decoratively from the ceiling.

"I thought that, given the location, it would be good to have something for all ages," Han said. "The other day a (customer) asked me if I had imagined when I was younger that I'd be doing this.

"I own my own store, work with computers and get to play computer games. It is pretty nice.

"I also have a Microsoft Xbox 360 with the new body motion tracking Kinect system for people to try out. It is a ton of fun."

Ann Arbor resident Anthony Voss, a college student, is one of Han's regular customers and said he comes to the store for the friendly environment and custom equipment.

"I come here to chill and relax," Voss said. "In terms of gaming, I'd rather look over at a friend (I'm playing with) than talk over the computer. For me, coming here also encourages me to get out and be social."

Voss was also complimentary of the computer systems he has access to in the store.

"They're really nice," he said. "For those who don't have really good gaming computers at home, coming here is great and cheap."

When Han started out

Sheng Han, owner of The PC Core and The Game Core, elected to hang his computer systems from the ceiling because they looked aesthetically interesting. Customers can purchase time on these machines to play games, either individually or as a group.

professionally, he was a desktop support employee for University of Michigan doctors.

He routinely helped doctors with computer questions and service.

"I had been doing repairs and things like that for 15 years, and it just made sense for me at the time to open my own store," he said.

Han said his biggest concern when he first opened the PC Core in 2009 was whether customers would be comfortable dropping off their machines at the store.

"It actually hasn't been a problem," he said. "People have no problem bringing them in."

Doing repairs makes up the vast majority of Han's revenue, but he does offer other services. He sells his own custom computer brand called DarkWerks Gaming Systems, a series of gaming computers built to handle heavy gaming use.

He also sells various systems and products in the store. "I custom build all machines, and I don't pre-build anything," he said.

Han is also planning to offer classes in the future, including educational classes about computer programs and online safety.

"I meet a lot of people who have no idea how to use the newest version of Microsoft Word, or older individuals who come in with a computer infested with viruses," he said. "I may start offering some classes in the spring."

For more information on custom computers, service help, or the gaming center, call 1-734-929-5687, or visit www.thepccore.com or www.thegamecore.com. The store also has a Facebook page.

The PC Core and The Game Core is located at 3354 Washtenaw Ave. in Ann Arbor.

Legislation impacts local farmers

Bills protect verified farms from civil fines

By Amy Bell
Heritage Media

Recent legislation could change the future of the Michigan Agriculture Environmental Assurance Program.

MAEAP is a partnership designed to protect natural resources by educating those who operate farms using environmentally responsible agricultural production practices.

Senate Bills 122 and 123 would make the discretionary state program permanent and give it dedicated state funding. Participation would remain voluntary and requirements for permitting would stay the same.

With the legislation, verified farms will be protected from civil fines, and grants will be made available in an effort to encourage compliance and participation.

The bills were approved Feb.

10 by the Senate's Agriculture Committee and will be sent to the Senate for consideration.

Budget concerns have frequently created doubts for the program's future.

"Not knowing whether MAEAP will be around next year and have any meaning or recognition has been a deterrent for some farms to participate," stated Matt Smego, Michigan Farm Bureau state legislative counsel in a press release. "The Michigan Farm Bureau supports Senate Bills 122 and 123 because they will give MAEAP certainty and longevity, so that farmers don't have to worry whether their voluntary efforts and personal investment to meet MAEAP's high standards for environmental protection could go in vain."

To become MAEAP-verified, farmers must take part in educational seminars, an on-farm risk assessment and both develop and implement an action plan addressing potential environmental risks. Every three years, the farms are re-verified.

Ken Siler, president of the Washtenaw County Farm Bureau, said the program is important because it's a mechanism for farmers to demonstrate to the public that farmers are following the environmental guidelines.

"It says we're doing what we're supposed to do to preserve the groundwater," he said. "From that standpoint, I think it's very important we're able to continue the program."

Siler's Manchester farm has been MAEAP-verified for more than four years. He raises sheep and grows corn, soybeans, hay and wheat.

Diane DuRussel, office manager at DuRussel farms in Manchester, said the farm has been MAEAP verified since 2009. The farm harvests more than 20 different crops, including potatoes, radishes, greens, onion and parsley.

DuRussel said the verification process involved documenting practices such as when crops are irrigated. Water samples are taken during designated times of the year.

"There's more governmental involvement and more documentation," she said.

The process took about two years and involved documenting the practices that were already taking place at the farm, she said.

DuRussel said she thinks the legislation is a good idea.

"I think it will justify the work the people in the industry are doing to satisfy environmental standards," she said. "These days you can say anything, but what's backing it up? That's the proof in the pudding."

According to the Michigan Farm Bureau, nearly 10,000 Michigan farms began the verification process. Nearly 1,000 farms are verified.

According to the MAEAP program, in 2009, verified farms kept 10,253 10-yard dump trucks of soil from reaching streams and lakes. More than 184,000 pounds of phosphorus is reduced per year, which is enough to grow 118 million pounds of algae in lakes and streams.

Transportation authority shares proposals

By Erica McClain
Heritage Media

The Ann Arbor Transportation Authority wants residents across the county to choose their public transit future through a series of public meetings.

At a recent forum in Chelsea, Michael Benham, AATA special assistant for strategic planning, and Juliet Edmondson, a member of the consultant team, unveiled three transit options to the public.

The least expensive, Lifeline Plus, would improve transit services already in existence.

The transit plan would feature two main lines. An east-west line would start in Chelsea, connect to Dexter, run through Ann Arbor and end in Canton. A secondary line would begin in Ann Arbor, stop in Ypsilanti and end at the Detroit Metro Airport. The plan would integrate with other area transit systems such as the Chelsea WAVE and the county's People's Express. The AATA would also incorporate integrated ticketing systems to speed up ride time and ensure door-to-door services for seniors and those with disabilities.

A second scenario, Accessible County, would build upon Lifeline Plus and add another transit line, running north and south. It would begin in Whitmore Lake, run through Ann Arbor, stop in Saline and split off to final destinations in Manchester and Milan.

A third and final plan, Smart Growth, would build on the other scenarios, adding a high-capacity transit line and a regional rail service.

The high-capacity line would run throughout Ann Arbor and out to Ypsilanti. The regional rail service would begin in Whitmore Lake, travel through Ann Arbor and stop in Dearborn and Detroit.

All three plans would also include extended hours of operation.

Capital costs for each plan have been estimated by the transit authority. Lifeline Plus would cost $48 million to construct. Accessible County will cost $51 million to build, and Smart Growth would require $465 million. These figures would represent payment over 30 years.

Benham said when the authority looked at a national average for transit funding, about half comes from federal dollars, while the other half is generated locally.

While all three plans would significantly increase public transit in Washtenaw County and possibly even to Wayne County, residents at the Chelsea meeting were unsure of which option they would choose.

"Obviously, the best choice is Smart Growth, but maybe we can only afford Accessible County," said Scott Cooper, a trustee on the Sylvan Township Board and member of the WAVE board.

Cooper said Smart Growth was the best return on the investment because it will generate far more jobs and community benefits.

A funding breakdown has not been analyzed by the transit authority yet. Benham said the group had decided it would be best to unveil plan options to the public first and then analyze funding options before pitching proposals to local municipalities.

Benham said, overall, one concern has been voiced repeatedly: Who's going to pay for this and how much?

"We're constantly aware of it, and we're trying to strike the best deal we can," he said. "We're not here to ask for western Washtenaw to pay for Ann Arbor-

Ypsilanti. "Our focus is to make it all balance out."

Study finds stress, drugs connected to abuse

Biological fathers are more likely to spank their children when they are unable to cope with stress from parenting or when they use abuse alcohol and drugs, a new study indicates.

The study, which included researchers from Ann Arbor's University of Michigan, also finds that fathers used corporal punishment — which involves physical force to a child to correct a behavior — more often on boys than girls.

The research, which appears in the current issue of Journal of Interpersonal Violence, is among the first studies to shed light on paternal stress, drug/alcohol use and corporal punishment, while accounting for the father's mental health and involvement with the child.

Brian Perron, an assistant professor of social work at the University of Michigan, collaborated on the research with Shawna Lee, assistant professor at Wayne State University and the study's lead author; Catherine Taylor, an assistant professor at Tulane University; and Neil Guterman, a professor at the University of Chicago.

The study uses data from 2,309 biological fathers from 20 cities nationwide with populations that exceed 200,000 people.

The sample includes married and cohabiting fathers, as well as fathers who do not live in the same home as their children but saw them more than once in the last 30 days. The children were 3 years old.

Fathers provided background about themselves and their mental history, such as feeling anxious or depressed. They also answered questions about the frequency of using alcohol and drugs within the last 12 months.

When asked about the frequency during the last 30 days of disciplining their child, respondents could indicate "none," "only once or twice" (moderate corporal punishment), or "a few times to every day or nearly every day" (heavy corporal punishment).

Overall, 61 percent of the fathers reported no corporal punishment, 23 percent indicated moderate corporal punishment and 16 percent was considered heavy.

Among the other findings:

- Younger fathers were more likely to engage in heavy corporal punishment than older fathers.
- Cohabiting fathers and fathers who were not married or living with the child's mother were less likely to report spanking than married fathers.
- Children who were more aggressive, as reported by their mothers, were more likely to be spanked by their father.

Stress, depression and drug use also were associated with fathers using corporal punishment. These men were more likely to indicate they spank their children often, the study indicates.

Regarding alcohol consumption, drinking heavily in one day — which is considering having at least four drinks — was associated with both moderate and heavy corporal punishment.

Researchers also analyzed how race played a role in the fathers' behaviors. Although African American fathers were significantly more likely than white fathers to engage in moderate corporal punishment, they were not more likely than white fathers to use heavy corporal punishment.

In contrast, Hispanic fathers were significantly less likely to engage in heavy corporal punishment than white fathers. Researchers said this finding is important given the limited research available on Hispanic fathers and their parenting practices.

The findings are consistent with other studies that focus on mothers. For example, prior research with mothers has shown that parenting stress increases risk for spanking; Lee said.

John Martin graduated in 1978 after a turning in an outstanding baseball career for EMU. He went on to play for the St. Louis Cardinal team that won the 1982 World Series.

JoAnne (LeFevre) McBroom was a first-team All-MAC selection for the EMU women's basketball team in 1986-87 and finished her career as the fifth-leading scorer in EMU women's basketball history.

Snyder short on all the facts

Maybe it was just a rookie mistake, but for a guy who prides himself on being a pretty sharp business cookie, it's a stretch to dismiss it as that.

At least that is the conclusion that Democrats and labor leaders have reached in the wake of Gov. Rick Snyder's latest brain child - i.e. the "Dollars and Sense" document designed to explain, in plain English, Michigan's spending mess. "Average State Employee Compensation is Twice Average Private Sector Worker, 2009," was the eye-grabbing headline that immediately caught the attention of the news media.

So the headline writers grabbed that "fact" and ran with it, but, as is often the case, some of the "facts" ended up on the cutting room floor.

To his credit, the governor noted that the salary issue did not compare "apples to apples," meaning it was not a direct comparison of all the public and private sector jobs.

"I don't want to overreact to this," he confided in one interview. He knew the comparison of public employees to private sector workers was a tricky assignment and his own report did not do justice to the inherent disparity.

And the report contained that disclaimer, but some of the news stories missed the fine print.

Here's what the bold print trumpeted:

In 2009, the average compensation for state workers was a respectable $85,000 while in the private sector the figure was just a tad shy of $40,000. The headline was cloned from that.

But the report indicates that part-time workers were rolled into the private sector figures and would automatically lower the average salary.

And then this disclosure, also missed by some:

"This analysis does not compare private and public sector employees with similar jobs, years of experience or education." In other words, the report is "useless," according to United Auto Workers' lobbyist Ray Holman, whose job it is to defend the thousands of state employees who pay his salary.

Holman argues this is not a fair comparison, which leads him to wonder why Mr. Businessman/Governor plunked the "faulty" data into the report in the first place?

Snyder says the data does suggest a trend and an area that needs to be looked into. The state Democratic Party chairman couldn't disagree more.

"It was inaccurate and misleading," argues Mark Brewer, who could hardly wait to take a shot at the new governor who continues to enjoy a blissful honeymoon around Lansing.

"The data is faulty," and he points to six other "qualified and independent reports" since 1998 that suggest those at the public trough are not doing as well as those at the private one.

Snyder knew the unions would challenge the data in his report, but he made another mistake. He failed to include labor experts and pro-government workers on his list of researchers who assembled the data.

After the fact, he said that if other groups have conflicting information he is more than willing to listen to them.

Wasn't this the candidate who wanted to be all inclusive and foster cooperation with all sides in order to pursue his "relentless positive action?"

But instead he's created more conflict at the very moment he seeks to create cooperation.

In the business world they call that counter-productive.

OUR TAKE: Editorial

We need to tighten the economic vice around Iran

News reports have stated that a recent attempt at diplomatically reaching out to Iran in hopes that it would curtail its nuclear weapons desires has failed.

We're not surprised. The nation, led by ruthless and immovable Mahmoud Ahmadinejad, does not want to negotiate. It wants to develop and use nuclear weapons. That goal must be halted.

The effort involved in trying to persuade Tehran to reconsider its refusal to stop activities that could be harnessed to make nuclear weapons is a waste of time.

Uranium enrichment lies at the heart of the dispute. Low-enriched uranium - around 3.5 percent - can be used to fuel a reactor to generate electricity, which Iran says is the intention of its program. But if uranium is further enriched to about 90 percent purity, it can be used to develop a nuclear warhead.

To use an analogy, if the world has its foot on the throat of Iran, then it's time to step down harder, not let up. The little extra breathing room is good to have, but it needs to be used to increase the pressure on Iran, not promote more fruitless diplomatic efforts.

It's time to get tougher with Iran. The nation reportedly is suffering from the wide range of financial and trade sanctions, travel bans and other penalties imposed by the United Nations, the United States, the European Union and others, but it has not been enough.

More pressure needs to be placed on the Islamic Republic, as well as nations that might be tempted to break the U.N. sanctions.

Two outside forces supposedly account for any Iranian problems in enriching uranium - the increasing weight of U.N. and other sanctions meant to choke off raw materials needed to make and maintain the program, and the apparent havoc caused by the mysterious Stuxnet computer malware. Officially it's not known who planted the computer virus that has delayed Iran's progress toward developing nuclear weapons. But whatever country and whomever the individuals are that were involved deserve high praise and a medal.

Unfortunately, the nuclear effort only has been delayed, not stopped. Israeli officials now talk of a three-year window - until 2014 - before Iran can make a bomb. That compares with projections of 2011 just a few years ago.

To use an analogy, if the world has its foot on the throat of Iran, then it's time to step down harder, not let up. The little extra breathing room is good to have, but it needs to be used to increase the pressure on Iran, not promote more fruitless diplomatic efforts.

When you're facing a threat from a venomous snake, you don't try to pet it. Somehow you have to grab it by the neck and cut off its head, figuratively speaking. You have to eliminate the threat.

We're not advocating military action, although that could be a last resort. We're talking about tightening the economic vice around Iran and doing whatever possible to nullify the nuclear threat.

Yes, the top priority of the president and Congress is to promote the creation of jobs and to improve America's economy. But Washington needs to keep a very close eye on Iran, and stopping its nuclear drive must be near the top of the priority list.

As the sarcastic, tongue-in-cheek comment goes, "One nuclear bomb can ruin your whole day." And, unfortunately, if that bomb is exploded by Iran, you know that country isn't going to stop at one.

GUEST COLUMN: By Sen. Carl Levin

Myths cloud debate about affordable health care

One of the U.S. Senate's first significant votes of the year was an attempt to repeal the Affordable Care Act, the health insurance reform that became law last year.

I believe the attempt to repeal it stemmed from a number of myths about the law.

Some opponents said the new law amounts to a "government takeover" of health care. Some said it violates the Constitution. Others said it will cut the benefits on which Medicare recipients depend, or will explode the deficit, or will kill jobs. If such a law existed, I'd want to repeal it, too.

Thankfully, the Affordable Care Act does none of those things. This law does not take over the health care system; it strengthens and protects our existing private health insurance system.

The independent fact checkers at Politifact.com found that the law "is, at its heart, a system that relies on private companies and the free market," and called the claim that government would take over the system Politifact's "Lie of the Year."

The new law does not violate the Constitution. Opponents claim that the law violates the Constitution because it requires citizens to purchase insurance. Under their arguments, many other programs, including Medicare, would also violate the Constitution. Perhaps that is what these opponents believe, but it is emphatically not what most Americans believe, and it is contrary to decades of legal precedent.

This law does not reduce care for Medicare beneficiaries.

In fact, most Medicare recipients already enjoy expanded benefits under the Affordable Care Act. Medicare beneficiaries now receive preventive care such as annual checkups with no out-of-pocket costs; and, starting last year this law began to shrink the "doughnut hole" that hits so many seniors with significant drug costs.

The law strengthens Medicare by beginning to rein in the enormous costs that threaten to swamp the system in coming years, and it does so by encouraging efficiency and reducing waste and abuse.

The Affordable Care Act does not explode the deficit.

The independent, non-partisan Congressional Budget Office found that repeal of the Affordable Care Act would increase the deficit by $143 billion over the first decade and by significantly more in the years to follow. It was ironic in the extreme that members of Congress who say they want to reduce the deficit would try to add $143 billion to that deficit as their first major action of the year.

This law does not kill jobs.

Again, independent observers have dismissed this claim as patently false. The independent FactCheck.org called the claim "exaggerated and misleading" and said the law's opponents have "badly misrepresented" findings by the Congressional Budget Office in making their arguments.

Here's what the Affordable Care Act does, in fact, do.

This law protects Americans from abuses by insurance companies, such as denial of coverage for pre-existing conditions, or gender. It allows parents to keep children covered under their insurance plans until age 26. It requires that coverage include preventive care at no out-of-pocket cost.

It limits the unilateral power of insurance companies to arbitrarily impose annual or lifetime coverage limits. Those arbitrary limits have forced families to choose between much-needed care and bankruptcy.

Families will be protected from unexplained premium increases, and they will get clear, easy-to-read summaries of their options.

Small businesses will receive tax credits to help them provide affordable insurance coverage to their workers.

And insurance companies will be prevented from rescinding coverage when patients need it most - when they get sick.

This law is sensible, moderate reform that in the coming years will make health insurance more affordable and secure for those who have it today, and make affordable coverage available for millions of Americans who are now without it.

It will reduce the deficit, protect the Medicare benefits that seniors depend on now and in the future, and help families afford the insurance coverage they need.

It was good for Michigan and the nation that this important law's opponents failed in their efforts to repeal it.

Carl Levin is the senior U.S. senator from Michigan.

American Red Cross needs your support

Winter weather has blanketed much of the nation over the past several weeks, and the storms are taking a toll on all of us. Perhaps even more important is the impact this weather has had on our nation's blood supply.

You may not realize it, but every two seconds, someone in the United States needs a blood transfusion. The American Red Cross was forced to cancel more than 750 blood drives in January alone, resulting in a shortfall of more than 28,000 scheduled blood donations.

To help build the blood supply back up to sufficient levels, the Red Cross has introduced "Recovery 2011." This campaign is designed to reach out to eligible donors, to ask them to make and keep blood donation appointments as soon as they are able to do so. It also aims to encourage organizations to step up and reschedule a canceled blood drive, agree to host an emergency blood drive or increase their existing blood drive goal by 10 percent.

The Red Cross is grateful to those who responded to our appeal for blood donations, yet the need is still great. Now is a great time to join the "Recovery 2011" initiative and help meet the needs of patients in our local community. Call 1-800-733-2767 or visit redcrossblood.org to find out more about this program or to make an appointment to donate at a blood drive near you.

Food feeds the soul

My relationship with food service has been 30-some years, the majority of my adult life. Food waitress, cocktail waitress, event coordinator, bartender, caterer — my role has run the gamut.

This changed for me recently, as I kept a promise to myself to leave it all behind by the end of 2010, to use these talents for celebratory events with family, friends, pets and friendly strangers.

What I have found, when creating memorable events for groups ranging from four to 450 people, with clients such as brides, athletes, presidents, children, drag queens, witches, clowns, millionaires, hippies, infants, Shakespearean actors, mimes, Mafioso, Supreme Court justices, soldiers, college students, pizza magnates, zoo keepers, tailgaters and swinging seniors, is that there are some important qualities needed to make a go of it in this business.

While anyone can master the "Official White House Rules of Etiquette," the subtleties of a fine Cabernet, the art of barbecuing a roast pig and tapping a keg for 200, it takes a certain person to survive and even thrive in this vocation.

The real, more important skills needed cannot be learned. You either have these or you don't. You must be able to jump in and do any job to make an event happen, whether it's building a tent, creating a Halloween/Jewish/Scottish wedding on the fly, arranging flowers, cleaning up a flooded room, accommodating an extra vegetarian, persuading a reluctant mascot to get in costume, cutting off a drunken cousin, piecing together a crumbling five-layer cake, moving furniture, creating hot food without an oven, breaking up a pumpkin fight between human playing cards, entertaining a crying child, parking cars, handling unruly pets and family members, and counseling fighting lovers.

It's imperative to adapt and to think on your feet, to laugh and continue on, to somehow be able to fix whatever has gone wrong and to ultimately end up with the client and guests happily pleased.

Food service has been good to me, supporting me through challenging years as a student and single mother, and on through life as it got easier, with extra money for unexpected disasters and joyful pursuits. It has taught me many things, allowed me the pleasure of irreplaceable experiences and, most of all, has fostered some of my greatest friendships.

As I leave it all behind, I see the change as opportunity and yet it is with bittersweet feelings that I walk out of the kitchen for one last time.

Theater seeks original scripts

Ann Arbor Civic Theatre will host a playwriting and play reading festival Feb. 18 through 20.

"The Play's the Thing" is an opportunity for playwrights to have their works read, discussed and reworked. It's also an opportunity for the audience to hear new works and to give feedback to the playwrights.

Each performance features a different type of play — "Show Me Your Shorts," a series of 10-minute plays; "One is the Loneliest Number," one-act plays; and "I Can't Believe I Read the Whole Thing," a full-length play.

Ann Arbor Civic Theatre is looking for submissions of new works or original adaptations.

Plays may be a series of 10-minute vignettes, one-act plays or full-length plays.

There is no fee to enter scripts, but writers are limited to submitting one full-length play, two one-acts or six 10-minute plays.

The deadline for submissions is 3 p.m. Jan. 24. Selections for the readings will be chosen by Jan. 31.

Those submitting scripts need to be available the week-end of Feb. 18 through 20 to attend the reading of his or her work.

Playwrights whose scripts are chosen for "The Play's the Thing" will have the opportunity to meet with the facilitator of their reading the week of Feb. 1.

For complete guidelines and application, visit the Ann Arbor Civic Theatre website at www.a2ct.org or call the office at 971-2228.

Memory Support Center set to host open house

By Steven Howard
Heritage Media

Staff of the Memory Support Center at Brecon Village will host an Adult Day Open House at the facility on Brecon Drive Feb. 23 to offer information to family members and caretakers of those living with Alzheimer's disease.

Program Director Marti Coplai said area professionals who work with Alzheimer's patients are also encouraged to attend.

"We had a little Sunday event before," she said, "but we decided to have a weekday event to have more professionals attend and make more people aware of our adult day program."

The evening will begin at 5 p.m. with wine and cheese, and people will be able to meander around the center to get a first-hand look at the facility.

There also will be chair massages available.

"We'll start with a meet-and-greet, and everyone can walk around and enjoy the space," Coplai said.

Attendees will be informed of some of the services the memory support center can provide their loved ones.

Coplai said that because the facility exists on the campus of a live-in community, the memory support center can accommodate people for a much more extended period of time than most comparable operations.

"We're available 24-7, every day of the week," she said, "which is kind of unique. We have either respite services or day services and we also provide overnight services."

Those enrolled at the memory support center have the opportunity to involve themselves in many life-enriching activities.

"We offer music and art, men's and women's groups," Coplai said, among other things. "We offer all meals while they're here. We also have salon services and podiatry services."

Coplai said such interactions are not only beneficial to those who participate in them, but also to the family members and caretakers who can accomplish other tasks such as going to work while their loved ones are well provided for at the facility.

"This is something that can really fill the void," Coplai said, referring to the isolation people with Alzheimer's often feel if they are by themselves too often. "And it can really help the family."

At 6 p.m. the open house schedule will shift to a talk by Bruno Giordani, associate director and clinical core director at the Michigan Alzheimer's Disease Research Center.

Giordani's academic scholarship "focuses on the interaction of cognition and mobility performance across the lifespan and neuropsychological disorders," according to literature provided by Coplai.

He will discuss current research into Alzheimer's disease, as well as advances in treating and understanding it.

The event will last until 7 p.m. Coplai said those who wish to bring adult family members requiring care can do so, as staff will be on hand to provide activities and services while open house attendees take in the program.

"We'll have respite care available that day free of charge," she said.

The Adult Day Open House will begin at the Memory Support Center building within the Brecon Village complex, 101 Brecon Drive, in Saline.

All events are free of charge. For more information on Evangelical Homes of Michigan, visit www.evangelicalhomes.org.

After walking about 200 yards to my tree stand and finding myself out of breath and sweating like crazy, I finally decided it was time to do something about my weight. I checked into By-pass surgery, but my insurance wouldn't cover it and I didn't have $25,000. Michigan farmers like what Snyder is saying

By Amy Bell
Heritage Media

Members of Michigan's agriculture community are still feeling the effects of Gov. Rick Snyder's State of the State address more than two weeks later.

Michigan's No. 2 industry was mentioned several times in the speech given Jan. 19 in Lansing, lending hope to many of the state's farmers that the new administration will see their role in the state's economy.

Carl Lesser, a Dexter farmer, said he is encouraged by what he has heard so far from the new governor. However, he said, the state still needs to overhaul its regulations.

"These regulations have killed business in Michigan," Lesser said. "If they would have kept it going, it would have killed agriculture, too."

The 86-year-old farmer has seen many changes within the state's agricultural industry. Lesser has lived on the same road in Washtenaw County his entire life and now produces corn, wheat, soybeans and hay. He is also a former

Washtenaw County Farm Bureau board member and is now serving on the Dexter Township Board of Trustees.

Lesser is feeling confident in Snyder, especially because the new governor is a businessman. Since government is more like a business now, Lesser said it should be run by someone who has been in charge of a payroll, and not just a politician.

He was also encouraged by the creation of three new subcommittees within the state House. Since January, committees on agriculture processing, economic development and trade, and forestry and mining have been formed.

John Hochstetler, owner of Our Family Farm LLC, was encouraged by Snyder speaking about bringing production back to the state.

"I think Snyder's on the right track," he said.

Snyder

Hochstetler cited Wayne County as an example. Vacant properties could be used for agricultural production where anything from chickens to sweet corn to radishes could be raised, he said.

"Think of the food we could make in Detroit," he said. Lesser also remembered when production was a major mainstay within the state when canning operations and many other facilities were abundant.

Hochstetler hopes Snyder will also pay attention to a local effort called "10 percent Washtenaw."

According to Hochstetler, county residents spend a total of $1 billion a year on groceries. However, the county is producing only 1 percent of that amount.

"If we could do 10 percent Washtenaw, we would have a $100 million a year business," he said.

The effort could create jobs not only for the county but for the state, as well, he said.

In his address, Snyder also said he would work with the state Legislature to make the Michigan Agriculture Environmental Assurance Program part of state statute.

The voluntary program helps farmers minimize and/or eliminate agricultural pollution risks on their land by teaching them how to address and identify risks while remaining in compliance with state and federal environmental regulations.

"It is heading toward statute," stated Michigan Department of Agriculture and Rural Development Director Keith Creagh in a press release. "A priority of this administration is to codify MAEAP in statute to give it relevance and standing.

"What's left now is the heavy lifting. It's a priority program, and I look forward to rolling up my sleeves to make this a great partnership between government and the farming community."

Michigan Farm Bureau President Wayne Wood stated the governor spoke about "outcomes-and-results-based" government throughout his campaign.

"To have the new governor formally acknowledge the program meets his standards for that type of program is a crowning achievement for MAEP," he stated.

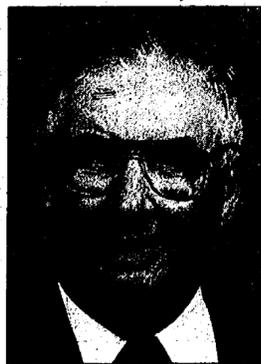

"Giving MAEAP statutory teeth will help the program appeal to more farmers by providing some of the regulatory stability they are seeking to effectively operate their farms and grow jobs for Michigan families."

NIETHAMMER, LEON ERNEST, Ann Arbor, MI; passed away on Thursday, February 10, 2011; at Arbor Hospice. Leon was born in 1926 in Ann Arbor to Ernest and Selma (Finkbeiner) Niethammer. He married Georgena Lirette in 1950 and they had 59 years of life together before her passing in December 2009. Leon was a lifelong resident of Ann Arbor, graduating from Ann Arbor High School in 1944. After a two-year stint in the Navy Air Corps, he enrolled and graduated from Cleary College. Leon worked for 7-Up Bottling Company for 38 years until his retirement in 1988. That same year he began work at Ed's Bread as the delivery person and bakery helper and worked there until his 80th birthday, at which time he felt he was "too old" to work anymore. Others thought differently, and in 2007 he was hired to work the Ed's Bread booth at Saline Farmers Market, where he worked until December 2010. Leon was a life-long member of Zion Lutheran Church, where he gave much of his time and energy, by serving on the building and grounds committee, and money counting committee. He sat in the same pew every Sunday until his illness. Leon was well-loved by all who knew him. His gruff exterior hid the softness inside. He was there for all of his family helping them in many ways. He will be greatly missed, but his memory and his off-repeated statements will live on in all of us. Leon is survived by his three daughters, Leslie Niethammer (David Rhoads), Judy (Ron Schinske) and Sandie Niethammer (Thom Byrd); six granddaughters, Amanda Schinske (Bob Whitmore), Katie Schinske (Matt Sebolt), Emily Schinske, Veronica Schinske, Greta Niethammer, Hannah Niethammer; and three great-grandsons, Noah Sebolt, Adam Sebolt and Isaac Whitmore. Leon has a surviving sister, Helen Shelley; and sisters-in-law Beverly Kirsh and Doris Niethammer. Many Finkbeiner, Stoll and Niethammer cousins, including his special friend and cousin-in-law Ron Mason, survive him. Cremation has taken place. A Memorial Service will be held at Zion Lutheran Church, 1501 W. Liberty, in Ann Arbor on Tuesday, February 22, 2011 at 11 a.m. The family will receive visitors at 10 a.m. Pastor Barry Ludwig will officiate. Memorial contributions can be made to Zion Lutheran Church or to Arbor Hospice.

U of M to aid new businesses with Venture Accelerator

The University of Michigan has officially opened its Venture Accelerator at the North Campus Research Complex to provide space and resources for new businesses based on U of M technology.

The Venture Accelerator will provide laboratory and office space, as well as business services, to startup companies emerging from the pipeline of new ventures at U of M Tech Transfer. The accelerator will occupy 16,000 square feet at the sprawling 174-acre, 30-building NCRC, the former Pfizer pharmaceutical property purchased by the university in 2009.

The Venture Accelerator is part of U of M Tech Transfer, which recently relocated to the NCRC with U of M's Business Engagement Center.

"This new accelerator, positioned with the Office of Technology Transfer and the Business Engagement Center, sends a powerful message of our intent to make the North Campus Research Complex the center for partnerships in U of M's ever-expanding world of engagement," said U of M President Mary Sue Coleman in a news release.

"We are excited about a promising future for research and, most important, for the people and communities that will benefit from our discoveries," said Coleman, who attended an open house and ribbon-cutting ceremony Jan. 18 at the NCRC.

While the ribbon-cutting event marked the accelerator's official opening, one U of M startup company has already moved in, and four others are expected to be there within weeks. The first tenant, Life Magnetics, arrived Dec. 20, 2010. The other four companies are Phrixus Pharmaceuticals, EngXT, 3D Biomatrix and Civionics.

"We spent a fair amount of time looking at other facilities in the area, and we concluded that this is far and away the best location for us at this point in the company's life," said Bill Wood, interim chief executive officer at Life Magnetics.

The company, founded in 2009 by recent U of M graduate Brandon McNaughton, is developing a device that helps physicians quickly identify the most effective antibiotics to use against an infection.

The core concept behind the device was part of McNaughton's doctoral thesis at the U of M applied physics program. Wood said the company is 24 to 30 months away from having a product ready to market to clinical microbiology labs.

"The former Pfizer facility is world-class, and because the infrastructure is in place, we don't have to waste time and energy trying to pull it together," Wood said.

"That allows us to focus on the work that needs to be done, not on ancillary administrative hassles. So that should enable us to move ahead more quickly."

Ken Nisbet, executive director of U of M Tech Transfer, said that moving new startup ventures more quickly and effectively to the marketplace is the main goal of the Venture Accelerator.

U of M is already among the top 10 U.S. universities in the number of startup companies it spins off — more than 90 since 2001.

About two years ago, Tech Transfer officials realized they could achieve even greater progress by offering U of M startups the laboratory and office space they require, along with the professional business services that every fledgling company needs, said Jim O'Connell, associate director for business formation at U of M Tech Transfer.

The Venture Accelerator resembles a business incubator but is distinguished by the diverse array of services it offers to tenants — a suite of resources typically not available at business incubators.

"We're going to surround these companies with everything they need to get started," O'Connell said.

"The idea is that with the right advice, connections, to experienced talent and a little prodding, we can get new startup businesses out the door better and faster."

Accelerator tenants will have access to Tech Transfer's Venture Center to help them refine business models, attract investors, acquire gap funding and connect to talent that enhances the company's quality and sustainability.

Accelerator tenants can also seek guidance from seasoned entrepreneurs in Tech Transfer's Mentors in Residence program.

"The Venture Accelerator is a major step in creating a continuous innovation pipeline for our faculty to move their ideas from the lab bench into a commercial reality," said Stephen Forrest, U of M vice president for research.

"There is no doubt that the University of Michigan has almost unparalleled strength in creativity and innovation, and the Venture Accelerator provides an essential link in generating successful enterprises from our creative concepts while incentivizing faculty to pursue their ideas to success in the marketplace," Forrest said.

"I am very proud that the Office of Technology Transfer has taken the lead in making the accelerator a reality for U of M."

The Venture Accelerator has enough space to accommodate about 15 startup companies. An accelerator manager will be hired, along with three additional mentors in residence at Tech Transfer.

The business accelerator will house a mix of life sciences, clean-tech, software and other technology ventures based on discoveries from U of M research.

Selected U of M startups will sign one-year leases (for a maximum of up to three years) and will pay fees "comparable to the costs of other local business incubators," O'Connell said.

Additional funding for the project is provided by Tech Transfer, the Office of the Vice President for Research and the U of M Health System.

Eventually, O'Connell said, the Venture Accelerator will host various other service providers that startup companies need: bankers, accountants, business formation attorneys, venture capitalists, human resources specialists and marketing experts, for example.

In addition to celebrating the accelerator's launch, the open house and ribbon-cutting event also marked the formal opening of new homes for U of M Tech Transfer and the Business Engagement Center, which moved into the NCRC in December.

Local doctors named among best

Hundreds of University of Michigan Health System physicians have been named to the 2011-12 Best Doctors in America list.

The new national list includes 433 U of M physicians, up from 396 U of M doctors who were honored in the last listing two years ago.

This places those U of M physicians among the top 5 percent of doctors in their specialties. U of M has more physicians recognized than any other health system in Michigan.

The list will be included in the upcoming issue of StyleLine magazine.

The "Best Doctors" from U of M do not include about a dozen other physicians who have adjunct faculty positions because of their work with U of M residents at other hospitals in the area.

The list is compiled every two years by Boston-based Best Doctors Inc. and is based on an in-depth survey of more than 46,000 physicians in 43 specialties and more than 400 subspecialties of medicine.

Each nominated physician was screened and asked to provide information about his or her practice.

In all, more than 1,600 faculty physicians treat patients at UMHS hospitals and health centers; all are U of M Medical School faculty members and belong to U of M's Faculty Group Practice.

The Best Doctors database of physicians is used by patients, families and other physicians to seek expert medical resources and guidance.

"Access to the full database is provided through employer-based benefit plans.

Best Doctors was founded in 1989 by two physicians affiliated with Harvard Medical School, whose goal was to provide greater access to dependable, high quality medical information and care for individuals with serious illness and injuries.

Local Girl Scouts, part of the Girl Scouts Heart of Michigan serving southeast Michigan, will be participating in history-related projects this year to prepare for the 100th anniversary of Girl Scouting.

The public is invited to trade, buy and sell Girl Scout and Boy Scout memorabilia at the Girl Scout/Boy Scout Memorabilia Sale 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. April 9 at the Girl Scouts' Kalamazoo Program and Training Center, 601 W. Maple St., in Kalamazoo.

All proceeds will support the work of the Girl Scouts Heart of Michigan History Team, as the group celebrates the centennial of Girl Scouting in 2012. Local collectors and vendors from across the country are invited to rent a table for $20 and display their Girl Scout and Boy Scout treasures.

The show is open to the public. Adult admission is $5, but children are admitted for free. For a vendor registration packet, e-mail historyteam@gshom.org.

"Anyone who is interested in Girl Scout or Boy Scout memorabilia is welcome," said Joann Germinder, a Girl Scout volunteer from Battle Creek.

busy, eventful year of preparation and celebration of Girl Scouting's centennial.

The centennial marks 100 years since Juliette Gordon Low began the first Girl Scout troop in the U.S. on March 12, 1912, with 18 girls in Savannah, Ga.

The GSHOM History Team is teaching Girl Scout Cadettes, Seniors and Ambassadors how to handle archival materials and document their significance.

These Girl Scout "detectives" will be on hand at the show to meet Girl Scout alumnae and gather their stories for use during the centennial celebrations.

In the Ann Arbor region, the Huron Valley Girl Scout Council was formed in 1958, with 125 troops from Washtenaw, Livingston, Monroe and Western Wayne Counties. Girl Scouts of the Huron Valley Council (renamed merged with Girl Scouts Heart of Michigan in 2008.

During the summer, GSHOM will host a week-long archival workshop for girls at the Michigan Historical Museum in Lansing.

The museum will be the venue for an exhibit of Girl Scout memorabilia, "Girl Scouts: A Century of Leadership."

Historic displays also will be featured at each of GSHOM's five regional centers, in Ann Arbor, Jackson, Kalamazoo, Lansing and Saginaw.

Girl Scout alumnae in the Ann Arbor region are welcome to stop in at the Ann Arbor Regional Center, 1900 Manchester Center in Ann Arbor, to donate materials and to go on record with their own Girl Scout stories.

Salon owner helps organize fundraiser

By Jodie Mason

Jaye Ward Green, owner of Salon Varga, is no stranger to breast cancer. Four years ago, she lost her best friend to the disease.

"I kept saying that I needed to do something," Green said. "I was talking about it in the salon and received good feedback, so I decided to put something together."

Green realized the scope of the disease when two of her friends were also diagnosed with breast cancer.

"I feel like any way we can raise money to stop this disease, the better off all of us will be. I haven't met anyone who hasn't been affected in some way by breast cancer. I only have about 200 clients, but out of those 200, I probably have about 25 clients with breast cancer."

A local country club hosted

Cut, Colour and Cure, a charity event, to raise funds for the University of Michigan Comprehensive Cancer Center Feb. 12.

Raffle tickets were made available at the door, and there was a live auction and games.

The charity event was held at the Travis Pointe Country Club in Ann Arbor at $25 per ticket.

"The more people who are able to come out to the event, the more we can help the cause," Green said prior to the event.

"This event is thrown by a very fun group of people. But my personal goal is to have over 200 people come out and support the cause."

Market conducts grocery raffle for those in need

Members of the Knights of Columbus from Chelsea and Dexter joined together last fall with the Polly's Country Market chain to conduct a Grocery Raffle to benefit St. Louis Center, Faith in Action and local families in need.

Chelsea store manager Corey Kennedy drew the winning tickets in the raffle, and prizes were awarded in January.

The contest reverted to a 50-50 raffle when less than 500 tickets were sold, and the grand prize was $4,000 in gift certificates from Polly's Country Markets that could be used in any of the area stores in Washtenaw or Jackson Counties.

"Helping out our communities during this time of year is a great thing to do, and we are honored to support this effort," Kennedy said.

Don and Gwen Merke of Dexter Township received the grand-prize tickets. Their tickets were purchased for them as a gift by neighbor and Chelsea-Knights Columbus member Brian St. Pierre.

"We're going to share these gift certificates with Brian and give many others away to people that we know who can use them," Don Merke said. "It was very kind of Brian to do this for us."

Maureen Tait of Chelsea got the second-prize ticket, which was worth $200. She plans on sharing her winnings with those in need.

"This was the first time that we've tried to do this, and we received a great response from the community and our local parishes," Dan Vencil, grand knight of the Dexter Council said.

The Knights of Columbus in Chelsea and Dexter plan on conducting another Grocery Raffle through Polly's Country Markets during the Lenten season.

They will be designating the proceeds from the raffle within the next month to these worthy nonprofit organizations.

"We have many generous people in our communities who support St. Louis Center and Faith in Action, and these organizations deserve our help," Grand Knight Owen Ballow of Chelsea said.

Library offers early literacy workshops

The Chelsea District Library is pleased to announce new early literacy workshops for parents.

Starting in March, the library will offer pre-reading and pre-writing workshops for parents to attend while their children participate in Storytime. Workshops are intended to teach parents fun and simple activities for children that will enhance skills needed to become successful readers and writers.

"Many parents don't realize that the most important teacher their child will ever have is themselves," youth librarian Lisa McClure said. "Children 5 and under need quality exposure to language, reading and writing, or they will struggle when they get to school. Reading books is great, but other basic activities like simply naming the fruits and vegetables as you go through the grocery store provide a great literacy experience."

The library's pre-reading workshops will take place 11 to 11:30 a.m. March 18 and 11:30 a.m. to noon March 23 and 24 in the McKune Room.

FINANCIAL FOCUS

Survival after spouse death

By Deb Bauer
 Guest Writer

Because the death of a spouse may mean a drastic reduction in your household income you'll need to carefully consider what you spend. Make a list of your monthly expenses, and use it to determine what you can go without. Budgeting for only the basics can help to cushion the blow and make your money go further.

According to the Women's Institute for a Secure Retirement, expenses may still be as much as 80% of what they were before a husband's death. So, in many cases simply cutting back may not be enough. You may be forced to "downsize" on a much larger scale.

Before making any major financial decisions, like selling your home or other big-ticket assets, carefully consider all of your options. Seek the advice and expertise of professionals and try to remain open to significant lifestyle changes - at least in the short term.

Insurance and pension or retirement disbursements often begin after the first year following death. These payments are typically large lump sums and may be daunting to manage. Again, your best options are to wait before making any major decisions and seek the counsel of professionals who can help you determine the best use of the funds.

Planning for the Worst

Advance planning is a step that most people avoid. It invites painful thoughts and forces you to ask uncomfortable questions. But it is the single most significant factor in your financial recovery after the loss of a spouse. Now is the time to start talking about it.

While it may not be pleasant, having a plan can make an incredibly difficult situation a little more bearable. If you'd like to learn more about how to protect yourself for the future, or if you need guidance now, please don't hesitate to contact me.

This material was prepared by Raymond James for use by Deb Bauer, Financial Advisor of Raymond James & Associates, Member New York Stock Exchange/SIPC. Deb may be reached at 1161 S. Main St., Chelsea, MI or (734) 433-9201.

While There's Still Time

Here are some steps you can take now to help ease your financial burden in the event of your husband's death:

- Talk about money as a couple. Discuss your earnings, your assets and your investments.
- If you don't have wills or living wills, create them.
- Because it can be difficult to establish yourself financially after the loss of a spouse, make sure you have accounts and credit cards in your own name now.
- Keep all of your important financial documents organized and up to date.
- Work together to create a plan, and adjust all of your important legal and financial documents as necessary.
- Decide together and appoint a third party to handle these concerns if you feel you won't be able to do so if you aren't able with your finances take the time to learn.

Discovering the art in mid-century modern

By Elaine Owsley
Special Writer

Our architect daughter, Amy, verified for me that a spade was not being called a spade - so to speak. I asked her, since I had heard the title so often watching the "buy a house, flip a house, sell a house" programs on HGTV.

"What the heck is "mid century modern?" I asked her.

"What do you think it is, Mom?"
"I think they mean houses built in the 1950s. And, if that's what they mean, why don't they just say so? Are they afraid someone will think the house is too old?"

Big sigh from architect daughter: Come to think about it, the age of a house is routinely hidden behind a title of some kind - it usually means the style of the house, but since certain styles were more popular at certain times, it also denotes the age. Think about "craftsman" and you are usually talking 1910 to 1940; "colonial" was popular in the '60s and '70s; ranch began in the '50s and has continued on; "tri-level" is another '60s or '70s style.

Now I grew up in the '30 to '50s era, and, frankly, I can see nothing about "mid-century" anything that is appealing style-wise.

You have to remember that the '50s brought in chrome, laminates, plastic and Naugahyde. Not the coziest kind of furnishings, nothing warm and inviting about that stuff.

It was stiff, hard, shiny and cold looking. And it still is.

I saw a chrome dinette set in an antique store with a really incredible price. Do they even use the word "dinette" any more? It was just as ugly now as it was then, all chrome trimmed and laminate topped and plastic seat covers. Looked like a lunchroom at a bowling alley - something just easy to wipe down.

My sister-in-law gave us one of those "sets" she wasn't using any more when we were first married. It was yellow topped and seated and everything else was "chrome," so "mod." The flat (that's upstairs apartment in a two-family house) we rented had a dinette space off from the kitchen that was a perfect fit.

It was years and three children before we could replace it. Actually, having that impenetrable surface and three children worked quite well, except for oatmeal getting caught in the places where the chrome trim abutted the laminate top.

Buildings during this period followed that metallic factory look - there's an ugly addition to Harris Hall at the Law School; the new addition to the Ann Arbor Court building would fit right in.

Cold and hard was symbolic of something space age-like, I guess. Remember this was also the era when we were going to have an airplane in every garage and sonic abilities for almost everything.

There have always been names to hide the truth about something - think "silk purse and sow's ear" or "call a spade a spade" for instance.

Time after time we see "new" when it is something that is really recycled from an earlier era.

I think the reason there is so much left of the '50s is that it didn't age like wood and fabric does. The lifespan of plastic, Naugahyde, chrome and laminates is almost endless. Deep in the bowels of landfills, I'll bet you could find your own chrome dinette set, that, with a little polish, would come back to life - like zombies.

So, although the "mid-century modern" name really means "built in the '50s" at least those houses weren't constructed of plastic, laminates and chrome. And to be truthful, the post-war construction was pretty good - and there were lots of them. When we were looking to buy a house in the early '60s, the choices - block after block of them - were either ranch or tri-levels. Then, they were truly "modern" and it was, "mid-century."

Buildings during this period followed that metallic factory look - there's an ugly addition to Harris Hall at the Law School; the new addition to the Ann Arbor Court building would fit right in.

Encore's 'Little Women' has heartwarming song

By Sean Dalton
Heritage Media

Not only is Jo, played by Katie Hardy, the main character, she's also the best part of "Little Women" thanks in large part to Hardy's enthusiastic performance.

Hardy has a blast in her role, thanks surely in no small part to Steve DeBruyne's directing efforts - the Encore's production of Alcott's masterwork is his directorial debut.

The plot centers around Jo March and her three sisters - Amy, played by Madison Deadman; Beth, played by Cara AnnMarie; and Meg, played by Thalia Schramm - and their lives together both during adolescence and later on in life.

Having never read Louisa May Alcott's book nor seen any of its Hollywood adaptations, my personal experience watching Encore's take on the adventures of Jo March and her family was one of the best I've had so far.

The nearly two-and-a-half hour-long production begins with a peek into the "present" at a New York City boarding house, where Jo March is a transplant from Concord, Massachusetts seeking a publisher for her bawdy tales of daring do and misadventure.

The Encore actors and stage then jump back to 19-year-old Jo and her sisters back at home while their father is away serving in the Union Army as a chaplain during the Civil War.

Having not read the book, I'm unclear on what was excised by the folks at the Encore to bring a nearly 500-page book effectively to the stage, but what's here is a great story of a girl and her family weathering a rough journey well and coming out the other side stronger.

The central theme of "Little Women" involves growing up mentally and emotionally and accepting what has come to pass.

The play's duration never occurred to me until I looked at my cell phone after the curtain call.

Accompanying Hardy, Deadman, AnnMarie and Schramm do a wonderful job playing off of the central role's strong presence and performance.

Deadman's Amy is appropriately bratty and snobbish while remaining likeable - a tough tightrope to walk for such a young actress.

AnnMarie's Beth is mufed, which concerned me at first, until I had finished watching the show and realized that she is meant to burn bright only at a few specific moments during the show.

Schramm's Meg is the most sparingly used of the three sisters, more than likely as a contrast to Jo and as a means of moving the plot along. Still Schramm does a great deal with the role and her amount of time on stage.

DeBruyne's deft casting doesn't end with the March sisters.

Sonja Marquis plays Marmee and comes out of nowhere with surprisingly strong, almost show stealing vocals.

Anne Bauman delights as the well-meaning, but overbearing, traditional Aunt March, who stands against all of the feminist idealism and free-spirited living that Jo March isn't even aware that she embodies.

It's ironic that the characters of Aunt March and Jo are also the funniest, in addition to being funhouse mirror reflections of each other.

Rusty Mewha plays the stodgy German Professor Bhaer who also comes out of left field as a strong player in the story, which makes me wonder how his character developed in the book. Regardless of the print version, the character is used effectively and economically in DeBruyne's show.

Sean Widener plays Jo's admirer Laurie with enthusiasm and energy that often matches and exceeds Hardy's performance.

This late in the production's schedule the Encore cast and staff have tightened the show to the point where everything is pitch perfect and without flaw.

Colleen E. Meyer's costumes are great enough to stand up to the intimate scrutiny of Encore audiences, and Leo Babcock's two-story set showed surprising versatility as crews moved set pieces to and from the stage, sometimes merely shuffling things around.

The music has taken a thumping from other critics for being pared down from full orchestra to a couple of keyboards and percussionists, but the true star of "Little Women's" music is the singing and the context that each song is given by the story.

AnnMarie and Mewha each hit high notes during their singing moments giving "Little Women" heart, while Hardy's singing is its soul.

For those who want to see a great musical, the Encore has extended the performances until Feb. 27.

Egg artist featured at fair

Ardyth Paganone is one of the many artists who will be featured at the 38th Annual Dexter Pioneer Arts Fair on March 19.

Paganone, also known as the "Eggin' Pagan," will showcase some of her finest work in decorative Ukrainian eggs, also known as "Pysanky."

"It can be a time-consuming process," Paganone said of making her beautiful creations.

"It's worth it though, when the final outcome reveals a one of a kind, beautiful piece of art and lore."

The process begins with a plain egg cleansed and emptied, followed next by a series of repetitive waxing on of designs and drying of progressively darker colors.

The process can take from one to over six hours, with work on design-completed eggs continuing with the melting of wax, cleaning with mineral spirits and then cleaning by hand.

A thin coat of varnish is applied to help aid in the egg's protection from UV light, moisture from humidity, and oils from handling.

"Eggs are entirely hands-on, handmade, one at a time," Paganone said. "No two are ever alike."

Egg decorating of this sort started with the pagans, thousands and thousands of years ago, according to Paganone.

Symbols within the designs were believed to hold mythical properties.

Pysanky were originally created to give thanks or provide safety or hope for people, crops and animals.

The pagan might have buried a decorated egg in the field to hope that adequate water will yield a strong crop; one might be hung in a homestead for protection from bad spirits, or one might be placed in a barn to keep the livestock healthy.

"Since the days of the pagan, with the advent of Christianity, the egg became the symbolic representation of the Holy Trinity, Christ and Christ's Resurrection," Paganone said. "Now-a-days, we see the Ukrainian Egg almost only at Easter and have forgotten its simple beginning."

"What ever your spiritual belief, the Ukrainian Egg is an object to delight in... when I first started decorating eggs,

I read an old legend that says: As long as Pysanky are created and shared, the balance between good and evil shall always weigh to the side of the good."

The arts fair will be held at Creekside Intermediate School, at 2615 Baker Road in Dexter from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Paganone is one of more than 50 artisans who will demonstrate their traditional folk crafts and offer them for sale.

Included are jewelry, stained glass, weaving, quilting, watercolor, woodcarving, spinning, toys and lace making, among others.

A craft table for children and a homemade bake sale are also included. There will also be a drawing for door prize items offered by some of the crafters.

Good Food Film Festival set for Feb. 28

A collaboration among Washtenaw Community College, Slow Food Huron Valley, the Food System Economic Partnership and Whole Foods Market has resulted in the first Michigan Good Food Film Festival.

The film festival screening is free and open to the public. It will take place from 6:15 to 9 p.m. Feb. 28 in the Morris Lawrence Building at Washtenaw Community College.

The Michigan Good Food Film Festival is a juried competition that will screen digital films created by Michigan residents and Michigan students.

For each of these two categories, entries of both 30-second shorts and films three to five minutes long will answer the question "What does good food mean to you?" Four winners will be awarded cash prizes.

The audience will also vote on a "Viewer's Choice" award winner, which will be screened the following day at the HomeGrown Local Food Summit.

The Michigan Good Food Film Festival is the opening event for the 3rd Annual HomeGrown Local Food Summit, which will take place March 1, also at Washtenaw Community College.

"Food is where all the major issues of our time converge," said organizer Kim Bayer, president of Slow Food Huron Valley, in a news release.

"At least three times a day, we make decisions about health, justice, the environment, our economy and really the future of our communities and our planet."

She said the film festival is an opportunity to demonstrate what a "good food future" might look like.

"Washtenaw Community College's digital video program was developed with an understanding that the future is about interaction," said Victoria Bennett, special projects coordinator for the Business and Technologies Division.

"Our award-winning faculty developed a curriculum that asks students to use the digital video medium to communicate stories for business, nonprofit, public service and entertainment. Students start using a camera in their first class and end the program using the state-of-the-art editing and display facilities."

Bennett said the Michigan Good Food Film Festival is just one of the ways that WCC is working to provide opportunities for students to create meaningful work with real world applications.

"We are delighted to support this year's film festival," said Mary Ann Nisley, marketing and community relations for Whole Foods Market.

"At Whole Foods Market, we recognize our responsibility to be active participants in our local communities and believe in supporting local farmers and producers."

Nisley said the company provides this support through its Local Producer Loan Program as well as through a commitment to offering locally grown and produced foods for sale in Whole Foods stores.

"Sponsoring the Michigan Good Food Film Festival is an extension of something we believe in strongly," she said.

The Food System Economic Partnership, a five-county collaborative nonprofit, "exists to catalyze change in the food system of Southeast Michigan."

As part of its work, FSEP connects farmers with eaters (especially young eaters) to help put food grown in the region on the tables, or local residents.

"For the past four years, FSEP has worked to build relationships between school food service directors at local schools with farmers in our communities," Farm to School Program Director Michaela Rehmann said.

"As a result, everything from fresh kale to rutabaga to zucchini has been served in school lunches. Through the Farm to School Program, we've helped our children understand what good food is and where it comes from."

"The Michigan Good Food Film Festival is an opportunity for students to show us what they've learned."

Judges for the Michigan Good Food Film Festival include Jennifer White, host of All Things Considered and director of community outreach at Michigan Radio, and Chris Bedford, Michigan filmmaker, writer and food system organizer.

Titles submitted for consideration include "Breakfast," "Michigan Farm Women," "Invasion of the Food Snatchers" and "The Season of the Raspberry."

The University of Michigan Department of Theatre and Drama will perform George Bernard Shaw's "Arms and the Man" from Thursday through Sunday at the Mendelssohn Theatre in Ann Arbor.

'Arms and the Man' coming Feb. 17-20

The University of Michigan Department of Theatre and Drama presents George Bernard Shaw's "Arms and the Man" Thursday through Sunday.

Department of Theatre and Drama professor Philip Kerr directs.

George Bernard Shaw wrote 29 plays and countless books, essays, articles and reviews in his lifetime. After a string of stage failures, "Arms and the Man" became his initial commercial success in 1894 and was the first of his works to debut in North America only five months after its London premiere.

Often considered an "anti-romantic" comedy, the play weaves Shaw's infamous wit with a satirical study on the illusions of both the glories of war and romantic love.

"Arms and the Man" is set at the end of the Serbo-Bulgarian War in 1885. An idealistic young Bulgarian woman, Raina, is delighted to be engaged to Sergius, a dashing but dense hero of the war.

One evening she is startled to confront a soldier in her boudoir - Captain Bluntschli, a handsome Swiss mercenary fighting for Serbia - who begs for refuge.

Attracted, Raina assists Bluntschli evade capture, although she views him doubly lacking in courage when he confesses that he would rather carry chocolates than bullets.

Upon her fiancé's homecoming, Raina begins to find Sergius pompous and foolhardy, a distinct contrast to her sensitive 'chocolate cream soldier.'

When the Captain suddenly returns and is surprisingly welcomed by Sergius, Bluntschli's presence turns Raina's ideals, household and engagement upside down. Torn between the two men, Raina must decide to whom she will give her heart.

"The work has a playful sense to it," said Kerr in a news release.

"We've worked to find these elements in the characters and have featured it in the set which contains some whimsy. The play's exotic setting in a sense disguises the fact that it's very much an English play in nature."

Kerr said "Arms and the Man" touches on a number of themes, including romantic idealism vs. common sense and the place of women in society.

"Although strictly a comedy of ideas, the play is fun and nimble, which is why it continues to delight audiences," Kerr said.

Joining Kerr on the creative team is scenic designer Michael Bou-Maroun, a senior in Department of Theatre and Drama making his main stage debut. Associate Professor Jessica Hahn, who recently designed "Much Ado About Nothing," designs costumes.

Mary Clare Blake-Booth, a junior in the Department of Theatre and Drama, designs lights.

Following the performance on Friday will be a post-performance discussion moderated by Kerr and featuring members of the cast.

Curtain Call Fridays offer an opportunity for audience members to talk with artists about each production.

Sponsored by the Friends of Theatre & Drama, Curtain Call Friday discussions are free and open to all.

"Arms and the Man" plays at 7:30 p.m. Feb. 17, at 8 p.m. Feb. 18 and 19 and at 2 p.m. Feb. 20 in the Mendelssohn Theatre in Ann Arbor.

Tickets for "Arms and the Man" are $24 and $18 for reserved seating, and students pay $10 with ID.

Tickets are available at the League Ticket Office, located within the Michigan League. The Ticket Office is open from 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Monday through Friday and 10 a.m.-1 p.m. on Saturday. Or, order tickets by phone at 764-2538.

Tickets may also be ordered online at www.music.umich.edu.

The Lydia Mendelssohn Theatre, located within the Michigan League at 911 N. University, is accessible to patrons in wheelchairs and features an infrared assisted listening system.

Concert to showcase local talent

One of Chelsea's most popular entertainment traditions, the Faculty and Friends Show, will take place this year on Saturday, March 12 at 7 p.m., in the Chelsea High School Auditorium. This show, Chelsea's 8th annual, brings to the stage your teachers and alumni, your talented neighbors and friends, alongside well-known state and local performers for a night of memorable performances—singing, dancing, acting—perhaps even juggling and acrobatics—and, of course, instrumental wonder. Tickets are $8 general admission, $5 students/seniors, or $20 for a family. Proceeds benefit the Chelsea music program.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Support Henry Thurston's memory

Over 20 years ago I worked with Henry Thurston at the Dexter Bakery. Henry was a man of and for his community.

He loved us and served us for over 46 years.

I think what our school and community really wishes – what we all wish is that we had more Henrys.

When asked what community meant to him, Henry said, "just doing things for people ... mostly just being around and supporting them."

"I just wish I could do more for people, but you can only do so much."

And Henry did a lot.

I think we need to look within ourselves and ask if we love and serve our community as much as Henry Thurston.

If we all did this, I think our community would be an even better place to live, share and raise our families.

We need to challenge ourselves to follow Henry's example and become as he was called "Dexter's Biggest Fan".

I have read that each football coach would leave a note for his successor that that simply read, "Keep Henry".

Let's "Keep Henry's" memory and legacy of service alive.

Henry didn't talk much, but I believe he sings today. Let's keep the song that was his life alive and keep the music playing.

Henry was what we all want Dexter to be.

Let's "Keep Henry".

I ask you to support the Henry Thurston Field House. If you knew and loved Henry, please make your opinion known to the school board, write the paper and attend school board meetings to voice your support. Please sign the petition at the Dexter Bakery.

The chili kings

Nine contestants created chili from scratch Saturday, Feb. 5 at the 20th Annual Cavanaugh Lake Chili Cook Off.

The Cook Off was held in conjunction with the 39th Annual Winter Carnival, hosted by The American Legion Post 31 on Ridge Road in Chelsea.

The chefs created chili in a four-hour period, with just one hour for preparation.

Comments from the judges sheets included lines such as "meat has nice texture", "a little mild" and "broke a sweat!"

In the end, the judges selected Westland resident Chris Thompson's stew as the First Place Chili. Chris received a trophy and $50 prize.

Second place, a trophy and $35 went to Sue Collins of Chelsea, and the third place winner of $25 and a trophy went to Tina Sanderlin of Southgate.

The People's Choice award, which is coveted by contestants as "local bragging rights," went to the Chelsea team of Brian Edick and Tony Robards.

Judges for this year event were: State Rep. Mark Ouimet, Washtenaw County District 1 Commissioner Rob Turner of Chelsea, American Legion Post 31 Commander Juff Gunnis and Financial Secretary Craig Maier, both of Chelsea, and Steve Daut, past award-winning Chili Cook, also of Chelsea.

More than 900 tickets were sold for the chili tasting.

The Son's of the American Legion Squadron 31 organized the cook off. Larry Doll was the Chairperson for the event, assisted by Squadron Financial Secretary Ross Stofflet.

MONEY MATTERS

Should you refinance your mortgage in this climate?

As the economy recovers, homeowners are faced with the good news/bad news prospect of a better real estate market with the likelihood of higher mortgage interest rates.

For many, that leaves three choices — sell, refinance or sit tight with the mortgage they have now.

Despite the average 30-year mortgage rate that stood at 4.8 percent in late December, the decision to refinance isn't always a great idea. In fact, it should be considered as part of an overall financial plan that is as individual as you are.

It makes sense to confer with financial and tax experts before you make such a move because there are more questions to consider beyond "How do I get that low rate?"

Among the questions you should ask are the following:

What are your current financial goals? If you're planning to stay in your home for the next 20 years, your outlook is far different than someone who wants to retire and move in the next five.

Many people focus on paying off their mortgage instead of planning for retirement or education savings for their children. It's important to get advice on this question that fits your overall lifestyle and financial needs.

The important question is when you'll get to breakeven on the cost of the refinance, generally 3 to 6 percent of the total loan amount.

If your breakeven is at 12 months, and you plan to stay in the home five years or longer, it will probably be worth doing.

What's your current debt load? If you're swimming in debt, don't expect to get the lowest, most attractive rate available on the market.

While the credit crunch is loosening, many mortgage lenders are being quite picky about whom they'll offer their most affordable loans to and many are still turning away borrowers in significant trouble.

It's best to try and cut your level of credit card and other consumer debt before applying for any loan.

When was the last time you checked your credit reports and credit score? You have the right to get all three of your credit reports — from Experian, TransUnion and Equifax — once a year for free.

You can do so by ordering them at <http://www.annualcreditreport.com/>.

Yet don't order all three at the same time. By staggering receipt of each of your credit reports at different points in the year, you'll get a continuous picture of how your credit picture looks.

Also, you'll have the opportunity to focus on possible errors in a single report, which will give the other two credit agencies time to update their files.

Can you make biweekly payments on your current loan? Your current lender might have sent you an offer for a biweekly mortgage loan program that will save you considerable money over the life of that loan.

Discard their offer — many lenders make big fees off these programs — and see if you can do it yourself.

Some lenders won't allow it, but see if you can break up your payments in a way that will equally divide the principal and interest payments so you're whole by the end of the month. Otherwise, they might apply the first half-payment to principal and still insist on the full monthly payment by the due date.

You may also consider adding a 13th payment for the year. Either by adding the equivalent of 1/12th of what you typically pay per month to principal or simply double-paying your mortgage one month a year when you're flush, you'll pay your loan off faster.

Fixed or variable? Given the recent uncertainty in the mortgage market and the current loan environment, it makes sense to try and go for a fixed rate loan since rates remain at historic lows. Higher rates mean higher payments if rates go higher.

What about a second mortgage? Second mortgages can be problematic. As many lenders have gotten stricter about doing business, they may not be as willing to take second-fiddle status behind an older second mortgage, which happens in a refinancing process if not addressed. If the borrower can't roll the two loans into a single loan during the refinancing process, it may delay or kill the deal based on what the two lenders are willing to do.

Are you on top of your tax issues? Remember that lenders are looking as broadly as they can these days for signs of financial trouble.

If you have any late payments of current property taxes or any other potential disputes with state or federal tax authorities, those issues can complicate matters. Make sure you're current.

Chelsea's Charlie Kempf has raised his arm a lot this season for the Bulldogs. He is headed to the regionals on Saturday.

Kempf scores trip to regionals

By Terry Jacoby
Heritage Media

During the Bulldogs' wrestling dual-meet last month with rival Dexter, Chelsea's Charlie Kempf battled Dexter's Shawn Chamberlin in a tough battle at heavyweight. Both coaches felt this match would go a long way in deciding the winner of the meet.

Kempf was able to slam home the victory on a pin and help send his team to the win column. It was a big win for a big kid in a big match. But Kempf has even bigger things on his to-do list.

He checked one of those off on Saturday with his showing at the District 2 wrestling tournament in Dexter. The senior placed third overall to advance to this Saturday's regional at Mason High School. Kempf went 3-1 on the day and improved his overall record to 46-11.

Kempf was visibly upset after losing to Adam Robinson of Mason 8-4 in the semifinal round on Saturday. He spent most of the time before his next match alone, keeping his thoughts to himself. His coaches were afraid he would let that setback effect the rest of the day.

But he showed it had the opposite result, pinning Tecumseh's Cody Ross in just 1:13. He went on to beat Dexter's Shawn Chamberlin in equally impressive fashion to earn third place. Despite that little bit of adversity, Kempf responded like a champion.

Boys Basketball Bulldogs bounce back with win over Tecumseh

By Terry Jacoby
Heritage Media

The Chelsea boys' basketball team entered Friday's game with host Tecumseh looking to get back on track after losing three of their last four games, including a loss Tuesday at Saline to the much improved Hornets.

The struggling Indians appeared to be a gift from the schedule-maker, coming at just the right time.

The Bulldogs didn't exactly hit their stride but did enough to pull off a tough 56-52 win on the road.

Chelsea improves to 10-4 overall and 7-4 in the Southeastern Conference with home games against Pioneer (Tuesday) and Adrian (Thursday) coming up this week.

"They made a big run at the end of the third quarter and had it down to two points at one point in the fourth quarter,"

Chelsea coach Robin Raymond said. "They were pretty excited to be in the game at that point and clearly had momentum. But I still felt like we were in control of the game. I felt that if we just ran our offense, we could score. We never panicked."

Patrick Roberts led Chelsea with 16 points. Charlie McCalla knocked down three triples and finished with 11 points. Spencer Mykalla had eight points, Jake Steinhauer had seven, Jake Fischhaber scored six and Mike Steinhauer had four points.

The Indians jumped out to a 13-5 lead and the place was rocking. But the Bulldogs settled down and trailed by only five points heading into the second quarter.

Chelsea switched gears in the second quarter and went on a 20-5 run to take a 10-point lead at the break. The Bulldogs continued to play well early in the third quarter and led 45-27.

"We decided to rotate some people into the game and they came back on us," Raymond said. "They hit a couple of threes and got the lead down to 45-34 after three quarters."

"We had a tough time getting the momentum back in the fourth quarter. We pulled the offense out a little and forced them to come out and get us."

That's when the Indians started fouling and the Bulldogs nailed their free throws. Chelsea hit 23 of 34 free-throw attempts, including 4 for 4 in the last minute to secure the win.

"I was really happy with how we played in the second quarter and to start the third," Raymond said. "We pressured them and passed the ball well and shot it well."

Dils shoots down Chelsea

If there was a moment during Tuesday's game against visiting Chelsea that confirmed to Reece Dils - and everyone else in the gym for that matter - that this was his night, it came with 4:52 to play in the second quarter.

Dils, who had already scored 15 up to that point, fired a shot deep from the left corner. The ball rattled around a few times and looked like it would fall harmlessly off the rim. But the ball caught a piece of the iron one more time and fell through the net.

Chelsea's Darr and Saline's Leadbetter make Central Michigan's hockey team

By Terry Jacoby
Heritage Media

When Central Michigan University let students know that they were looking for players to form a club hockey team, two former local high school standouts jumped at the chance to get back on the ice.

Problem was, they weren't alone.

"There were about 85 kids at tryouts and they only took 24 players for the team, 21 skaters and three goalies," said Jacob Leadbetter, a member of last year's Saline Hornets, who won a Southeastern Conference Red Division title and regional championship during his senior season.

The odds were tough, but so is Leadbetter, who quickly proved to coaches that he belonged on the roster. But making the team was just a first step in his hockey goals.

"I want to become not just another player on the team that bounces around between lines, but to work hard over the summer and come back next year to be a huge influence on the team," Leadbetter said.

Chelsea's Matt Darr also showed up on the ice with hopes of playing for the Chippewas. Darr was in between the pipes during the Bulldogs' exciting run to the state semifinals last year and was excited when he called home to Chelsea asking for someone to bring him up his goalie equipment.

"What got me to tryout for hockey up here is that I really missed playing and the only thing I could think about was hockey when I first got here," said Darr. "When I saw a flyer for the team, I thought it couldn't hurt to at least try out and hope for the best to make the team."

Leadbetter and Darr both admit that the tryouts were competitive and difficult.

"The first couple were pretty intense," Darr said.

"There were about 10 goalies at the first tryout so I was worrying about just making the first cut."

Athletes of the Week

Matt Schultz, Milan

Matt Schultz took first place at the Huron League wrestling meet last week to help lead the Big Reds to a co-champion league championship. The senior, who placed seventh last year at the state meet, ran the table at the league meet at 215 pounds. He also reached a milestone, hitting 100 wins during his impressive career. On Saturday, Schultz (45-6 overall) advanced to the individual regionals by placing fourth at districts.

Steven Bleise, Dexter

On Saturday, Dexter's Steven Bleise finished first at 103 pounds in the Division 2 wrestling districts at Dexter to advance to Saturday's regional. Only a freshman, Bleise won all three matches on the day and improved to 45-5 on the season. He has not lost to a Division 2 opponent this season.

Sidney VanArsdale, Lincoln

Lincoln's Sidney VanArsdale made some big plays early to keep his team in it and then made some bigger plays late in the game to help his team win it in a 52-50 upset of Dexter on Friday night. The 5-foot, 10-inch senior guard, with his explosive quickness and soft jumper, led the Rails with a game-high 19 points.

Reece Dils, Saline

Reece Dils finished with a career-high 37 points as the Hornets knocked off the Chelsea Bulldogs 59-38 in a Southeastern Conference game last Tuesday. The sophomore sharpshooter had 21 points in the first half and finished with nine triples in the win.

Q&A: With PGA Teacher of the Year and golf show headliner Todd Anderson

When and where did you give your first golf lesson? It was May 1984 at Green Ridge Country Club in Grand Rapids. Working as an assistant pro for Lynn Janson, I still remember Bill Somerville coming into the pro shop and setting up a lesson with me. A good player, Bill had a tendency to have a lot of lateral motion on his forward swing so we worked on him moving his lower body more through the shot.

How did you first know you were interested in becoming a golf instructor? Well, I was fortunate during my college golf days at Alabama and before Green Ridge, to work as a range assistant at the Golf Digest Schools at North River Yacht Club in Tuscaloosa. I was around such outstanding teachers as Davis Love Jr., Bob Toski, Jim Flick and Peter Kostis. It was an incredible apprenticeship-type experience to listen and soak up what they had to say. They all had their individual styles and I listened and learned each of their methods. My primary job was to tee up shots for the teachers' students so I was literally only a few feet away from these eye-opening lessons. The people on that staff were so talented.

Incidentally, how did you end up attending the University of Alabama? I wanted to go to a southern school so I could play year round. Golf coach Conrad Rehling recruited me and said I could earn a schol-anship if I made the team. I'm proud to say I made the team all four years and I was co-captain my senior year.

As a teacher, what three fundamentals do you stress to your students? Pre-swing fundamentals are the foundation of the golf swing. I'm big on the correct grip, the correct posture, the correct alignment and the correct ball position. With these fundamentals the next objectives are to hit the ball solidly, to have the right shape to your golf swing, the right alignment of the clubface leaving impact, to have the club shaft leaning forward at impact, and finally to have the right sequence in your swing. But if I was simplifying all of this I might say it's the three S's: set-up, shape and sequence.

What's the most misunderstood aspect of the golf swing? I think it's the thought that in order to hit the ball straight you have to have the clubface square at impact and continue straight down the line through the shot. Well, actually to hit it straight, you must come somewhat from the inside toward the ball and with the clubface slightly open near impact and with the body continuing to rotate around the ball. The swing is moving on an arc and not on a straight path back and through the target line. So actually you want to square the clubface to the ball at separation not at impact. It's an important difference.

Golfers usually don't spend enough time practicing, so what do you recommend as a regimen?

Breaking down someone's practice time, I would recommend one-third time spent with the long game, one-third with pitching and chipping and one-third with putting. And within each one of these areas, I would urge one-third time working on mechanics, one-third time with drills, and one-third with tests simulating game or pressure-type situations.

Darr not only made the first cut but made the team and is playing quite a bit, despite being only a freshman.

CMU coach Michael Willett had some tough choices to make but goalie wasn't one of them.

"Matt's size was a bit of a concern for us in tryouts, but his quickness, apparent work ethic and consistency are what made us decide to pick him over six of the other goalies who were cut," Willett said. "Additionally, his demeanor off the ice is exactly what we look for. He conducts himself well and looks for coaching; he is quiet and reserved but confident."

Willett also was impressed with what he saw from Leadbetter.

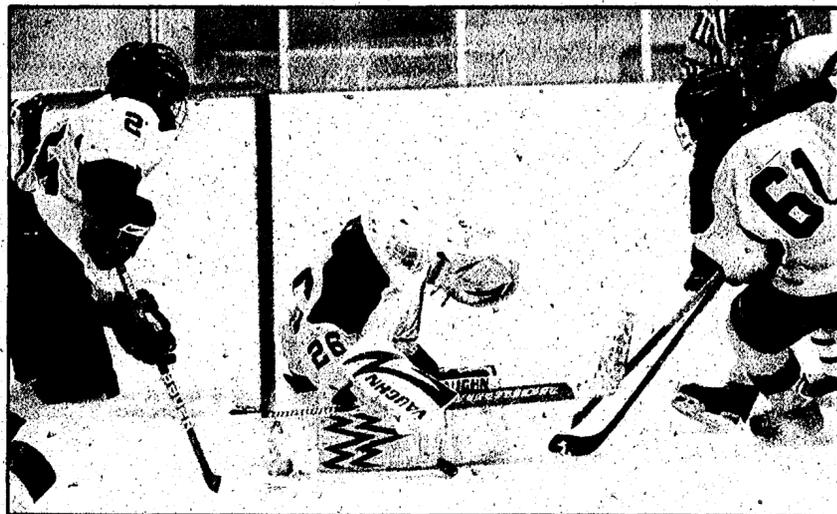

"In tryouts, Jacob proved himself to be one of the harder workers of the group," Willett said. "We had concerns about some of his game, but thought his energy and grit would be a good addition to the team. Jake is a winger who is quick and pesky."

Darr, 18, the son of Mark and Jenifer Darr of Chelsea, picked CMU because of academics and not athletics.

"The reason I went to Central was for the Business School," he said. "I have a lot of interest in their program. Also, I chose Central because it's in Michigan and it's my second favorite college in the state next to Michigan."

Darr, who is majoring in finance and economics, is now "mihoring" in hockey.

"I love playing hockey up here," he said. "It's probably the best thing for me to do. We have only three practices a week which isn't bad, and have games every weekend. Juggling school with hockey is a piece of cake and never interferes with my school work. I got a 3.18 (grade-point average) the first semester."

The competition in the ACHA is competitive and intense with many former high school standouts lacing up the skates. Giving up hockey is not easy to do so getting a chance to keep playing is an "awesome" experience.

"I plan on playing hockey up here until I can't anymore," Darr said. "If I ever transfer I would still tryout for the team at that school."

Leadbetter, 19, the son of Chris and Theresa Leadbetter of Saline, plays forward for the Chips. He had four goals and three assists through games played through January. He is studying Business Management as his undergraduate major and Physical Therapy as his graduate studies.

And like Darr, hockey has become a big part of his young college life.

"I miss those memories from high school and it was hard leaving all that behind and moving on to college," he said. "But I was glad that I was able to continue my hockey career and make the college team as a freshman."

Showcase!

Bulldogs play well, despite two losses

By Terry Jacoby
Heritage Media

The scoreboard showed the final scores but it didn't reflect how well the Chelsea hockey team stepped up and performed in the inaugural Public High School Hockey Showcase at the Arctic Coliseum in Chelsea.

The Bulldogs played up to their name, overcoming injuries to a couple front-line players and standing up to two of the top hockey teams in the state.

"Both of these games were against quality opponents and we were excited to get matched up against these teams," Chelsea coach Don Wright said. "We were playing a little short-handed and had to make some adjustments because of the injuries but I thought we played well in the two games, especially considering the quality of the opponents."

"Both of these teams (Livonia Churchill and Clarkston) are ranked in the top 10 in the state or have been ranked."

Chelsea fell 7-5 to Churchill on Wednesday but not without a fight. The Bulldogs fell behind 5-2 early in the third period but stormed back to get within a goal late in the game.

Churchill led 3-0 early in the second period when the Bulldogs finally got on the board with a goal from Charlie Hess on assists from Joe Heinen and Jacob Ryan at the 6:56 mark.

Less than a minute later, Churchill took a 4-1 lead before Hess scored again (with assists from Ryan and Connor Carry) at 12:07.

After Churchill scored early in the third period, Taylor Atchley (from Carry) scored at 2:51 of the third period. Churchill again answered with a power-play goal at 5:31 to go up 6-3.

At 9:41, Hess got the hat trick with assists from Heinen and Hepler. At 15:10, Hepler scored with an assist from Ryan to make it 6-5 and the Bulldogs were suddenly within a goal of knotting the game up.

"We had a couple of good chances to score but couldn't get it in the net," Wright said.

Churchill scored an empty-net goal with 10 seconds left in the game.

"Charlie (Hess) really did a good job for us," Wright said. "He was aggressive going to the net and scored a couple times on rebounds. He really worked hard."

On Friday, the Bulldogs fell to Clarkston 5-3.

"We made some early mistakes we shouldn't have made," Wright said. "We played really well in the third period but dug ourselves too big of a hole."

Clarkston built a 4-0 lead, including a goal with just 4 seconds to play in the first period.

A little more than 1 minute into the third period, Hepler scored with an assist from Caleb Bentley to make it 4-1. Just 8 seconds later, Steve Lesko scored from Hess to make it 4-2.

But skating with a 5-3 advantage, Clarkston scored to make it 5-2.

Hepler had an unassisted goal to make it 5-3.

The Bulldogs are 11-9 overall and 5-0 in the Southeastern Conference.

Wright was proud and pleased with how the Showcase came off in its first year. He hopes to make this an annual event.

"Of the 43 games there were only three lopsided games and eight games went into overtime," he said. "We had a lot of fans and scouts show up. It was a huge success."

The event attracted 44 teams from all over the state for the three-day tournament.

Chelsea beat Saline in a Southeastern Conference clash 42-30 in girls' basketball at Chelsea high school on Tuesday night.

The win boosted the Bulldog's record to 11-3 overall and 7-3 in the league and brought the Hornet's record to 4-11 overall and 4-7 in league play.

"It wasn't our best game, but we got things done on defense and that turned into offense sometimes," said Chelsea's Rachel Cooperrider who was the game's leading scorer with 12 points.

Megan Hall added 11 points for the Bulldogs. Hannah Fitzsimmons scored seven and Riley Singleton added four and also snagged seven rebounds and blocked seven shots.

Emily Everett led the way for Saline with seven points. The Hornets also got five points from Britten Clark and Alli Cope.

The game started slow with the score at the end of the first quarter at 8-5 in favor of Chelsea. A bank-in three from Cope tied the game at 10-10 in the second quarter, but Chelsea then went on a 6-0 run and did not relinquish the lead for the rest of the game.

Chelsea coach Todd Blomquist agreed with Cooperrider that Tuesday might not have been his team's best performance.

"Offensively I thought we struggled, missing some easy opportunities, but our free-throw shooting was the best that it's been, which we need to continue to do looking towards districts," he said.

"Saline kept the game close until mid-way through the first quarter, a fact coach Jason Pickett talked about after the game.

"We competed well and we got the stops that we needed to get," he said. "I thought our defense played pretty well coming off of a back to back."

Pickett was also pleased with the way some of his players decided to try and make their own shot in the second half.

"That's who we're trying to be," he said. "Be more aggressive and dictate what happens instead of sitting back on your heels."

In the JV game, Saline beat Chelsea 44-20. The Hornets were led in scoring by Amanda Johnson who scored 10 and also got help from Melissa Needham with eight points. Chelsea got six points each from Nicole Robbins and Dani Slinder and five from Kerri Benjamin.

Bulldogs have their way with Tecumseh, 58-18

The big wheels of the Chelsea girls' basketball team keep on turning. The Bulldogs knocked off Tecumseh 58-18 on Friday to improve to 13-3 overall and 9-3 in the Southeastern Conference.

"We played a very efficient first half," Chelsea coach Todd Blomquist said. "Our defensive pressure in the full court led to easy scoring opportunities and we also made very good decisions with the basketball. We had a season low five turnovers in the first half while creating 20."

Megan Hall continued her outstanding season. The junior led the Bulldogs with 12 points as she knocked down 6 of 8 free-throw attempts. Senior Rachel Cooperrider, who also is playing well this season, had 10 points and six steals in the win.

Junior Mackenzie-Cole had nine points, junior Grace Martin had six points and six rebounds and sophomore Bailey Darwin had six points and five rebounds for the winners.

Chelsea jumped out to a 19-4 first quarter lead and led 37-8 at halftime.

Bulldogs send five wrestlers to Regionals

By Terry Jacoby
Heritage Media

Milan's Tim Sims and Dexter's Steven Bleise were overall champions during Saturday's exciting and action-packed Division 2 Individual District championship inside a packed and loud Dexter High School gymnasium.

Throughout the long day that began at 9 a.m. and lasted past 5 p.m., wrestlers from all over the area competed to advance to Saturday's regional at Mason High School. Milan, Dexter, Chelsea and Ypsilanti joined 11 other schools competing for four spots in each weight class to advance to the regional round of the high school state tournament.

The tournament was perfectly run by the Dexter wrestling team and Dexter High School Wrestling Booster Club. The event went the distance without a hitch and featured champions, upsets, celebration, frustration and even a few tears. These tournaments are tough, emotional and highlight some of the best athletes in high school sports going one-on-one for themselves and their schools.

Bleise defeated Adrian's Joe Garcia 7-5 in the championship match. The two were deadlocked at 5-5 late in the match when Bleise executed a two-point inside switch to earn the victory and send the freshman on to regionals as a district champion. He is 45-5 on the season and has not lost a Division 2 match.

After an opening round bye, the top-seeded Bleise defeated Brock Hoffman of Parma Western on a fall in just 35 seconds. Bleise then defeated Jackson Northwest's Ryan Dula 10-2 in the semifinal round.

The Dreads will send two wrestlers to regionals from this weight class. Zeke Breuninger finished fourth. The freshman will take a 17-12 record to regionals.

The other local district champion was the impressive Sims, who improved to 52-0 on the season after running the table at districts. After a bye, Sims defeated Milan's Carson Zois (fall, 43 seconds) and Fowlerville's Arik Fluegel (T-Fall, 19-4) to earn a spot in the championship match.

At the other end of the 152-pound bracket was Dexter standout Drew Barnes. The junior also opened with a bye and the beat Jefferson's Hunter Dunn (12-5) and Parma Western's Corey Kerstetter (fall, 2:37) to earn a spot across from Sims in the finals.

Sims took control early and built a 7-1 lead. Barnes fought hard but couldn't get anything going against the strong and quick Sims who won 11-4. The two could meet again at Saturday's regional.

Chelsea's Ben Doll is headed to regionals after placing fourth at 112 pounds. The junior is 41-14 on the season and defeated South Lyon's Trevor Starr (fall, 1:04), Adrian's Robert Comar (fall, 58 seconds) and Haslett's Jon Breckon (fall, 3:44).

Dexter's Alex Sloan took fourth place at 125 pounds. The senior is 36-13 on the season. He defeated Carlson Airport's Caleb Roberts 12-10 before losing a close 3-2 match to Tecumseh's Anthony Lesko. Sloan beat Chelsea's Nate Miller 7-1 to earn a spot in the third-fourth match.

The Bulldogs' Avery Osentoski earned a spot in regionals after taking fourth at 130 pounds. The sophomore, who is now 32-18 on the season, defeated Fowlerville's Tia Kingsley (fall, 36 seconds), South Lyon's Luka Shepherd (14-3) and Milan's Kyle Domas 7-2.

Ypsilanti's Anthony Simmons took fourth place at 135 to earn a spot in the regionals. The junior improved to 40-14 on the season with wins over Mason's James Starzec (fall, 32 seconds) and Parma Western's Matt Bowden (5-1).

Chelsea's Andrew Nold took fourth at 140 pounds. The senior, who is 43-11 on the year, defeated teammate Travis Preston (fall, 1:31) in the first round. Nold then defeated Jackson Northwest's Hunter Cheshier (fall, 2:24) and South Lyon's Sam Hier 5-2 to earn a spot in the three-fourth match.

The Phoenix's James Andrew took fourth at 145 pounds. The junior, who is now 29-7 on the year, defeated Dexter's Kevin Paulin 4-1 in the opening round and then knocked off Airport's Bryan Reyes 12-10. He beat Fowlerville's Grant Hammond (fall, 1:32) to earn a trip to the regionals.

Milan's RJ Gaskill will continue his outstanding career on Saturday after placing third at 160 pounds. The senior is now 45-8 on the year after wins over Chelsea's Matt Lindauer (fall, 1:47), Jackson Northwest's Nathan Swartz (fall, 1:31) and Jefferson's Kyle Fudoli (12-2).

Chelsea's Mike Hovater defeated Milan's Chris Gaskill 15-4 in the third-fourth place match. Both wrestlers qualified for regionals. Hovater, a sophomore, improved to 32-10 with wins over Haslett's Griffin Kinder (fall, 1:04), Fowlerville's Jordan Jabara (fall, 3:22) and Fowlerville's John Russo (12-3). Gaskill, a junior, improved to 26-12 after wins over Parma Western's Brady Hoffman (fall, 2:15), Mason's Nathan Rice (fall, 4:37) and Jabara (7-1).

Ypsilanti's Trey Sweeney had a strong showing for the Phoenix and finished second at 215 pounds to standout Adam Coon of Fowlerville (48-0 on the season). Sweeney, a senior, lost 10-5 in the championship match to one of the best wrestlers in the gym. Sweeney (50-4 on the year) defeated Milan's Matt Schultz 3-1 to earn a spot in the finals. Earlier, Sweeney beat South Lyon East's Casey Fadden (fall, 46 seconds).

Schultz is headed to regionals after placing fourth overall. The senior improved to 45-6 on the year after wins over Airport's Thomas Durst (fall, 40 seconds) and Tecumseh's Joe Rebotaro (2-0).

Chelsea's Charlie Kempf and Dexter's Shawn Chamberlin will both be at Saturday's regional. Kempf defeated Chamberlin on a fall at 2:40 to win third place.

The Chelsea senior is now 46-11 after beating Milan's Willy Boyd (fall, 21 seconds), Ypsilanti's Zaid Abdeltif (7-0) and Tecumseh's Cody Ross (fall, 1:13). Chamberlin, a junior, took but he's determined to be ready for whatever challenges are waiting for him around the corner. The senior believes hard work and determination will be the difference between success and failure.

"The most difficult part of wrestling is pushing myself during practice," says Kempf, who wants to end his high school career at the state meet. "It's hard because I am the only heavyweight that has a lot of experience and the JV wrestlers are not heavy. I don't have anyone who can push me in practice."

But Kempf has found someone who can challenge him and get him fired up. His name is Brennan Kempf, a junior.

"Yeah, my brother wrestles," Charlie said. "He's decent, although we wrestle completely different styles. I push him very hard in practice. I am not gonna lie, it gets heated to the point where either him or I have had to leave the room for a couple of minutes."

Brotherly love ends once you step on the mat.

Kempf went 32-16 last year and finished third in the Southeastern Conference. He was knocked out of the first round in districts.

"My goals for this season are to qualify for states and place among the top 10," he said.

It all comes back to hard work. But it's been worth it and Kempf wouldn't give up wres-ting for anything.

"The most enjoyable part of wrestling would have to be the bond between teammates," he said. "We are close and nothing compares to winning together."

It was one of those "friends" who first got Kempf interested in wrestling.

"I was convinced by David Slusser who goes to school with me at Chelsea," Kempf said when asked how he first got interested in wrestling. "He said it was a good way to keep in shape so I went and tried it out and really liked it."

Kempf remembers his first victory.

"It was my freshman year when I first started wrestling and went with the JV team to Pioneer High School for a tournament. I ended up winning the whole thing with a pin on the wrestler from Pioneer with a double leg to a half and that was it."

Chelsea coach Kerry Kargel says Kempf has earned where he is at now in his career.

"He's always been a hard worker and pushes himself really hard to be better," Kargel said. "He's improved a lot since the beginning of the year and I think he's got a shot at the state meet. The district wasn't easy. The kid from Mason (Robinson) was seeded first and then the kid from Adrian (Moe Jasper) second and then Charlie third. But I believe he can get to states. It's not an unrealistic goal at all."

Kempf hopes this year isn't it when it comes to his athletic career.

Chelsea swimmers 'sick' over recent loss

The Chelsea boys' swimming and dive team continued to improve last week as they prepare for this year's SEC Championships but struggle to win against larger opponents. Chelsea lost two tough meets last week to teams that they could have beaten, Chelsea began the week with a tough 115-70 loss to the visiting Brighton. On Thursday, Chelsea lost an even tougher meet to SEC foe Tecumseh 112-73. The loss to Tecumseh was especially tough because two of Chelsea's best swimmers were out of the lineup due to sickness.

Against Brighton, Chelsea's medley relay was beaten to take second place. Nick Deppner, Zack Ousley, Andrew Wickens and James Hansen combined for a 1:56.44.

In the 200 freestyle, freshman David Alday continued his outstanding season with a win for the Bulldogs. Alday swam a strong race stopping the clock at 1:57.46. Ousley was 5th in the event with a season best time of 2:13.72.

Logan Simpson after coming off a tough sickness the week prior earned 2nd place in the 200 IM. Deppner was 5th again for the Bulldogs clocking a 2:28.26.

Nick Burris feeling under the weather powered his way to 2nd in the 50 freestyle with a time of 23.96. Bogarin was 3rd at 24.33. Colby Wrathall was very strong in the 1-meter diving once again earning 1st place at 232.35 points. Robby Everard was 4th with a score of 138.65.

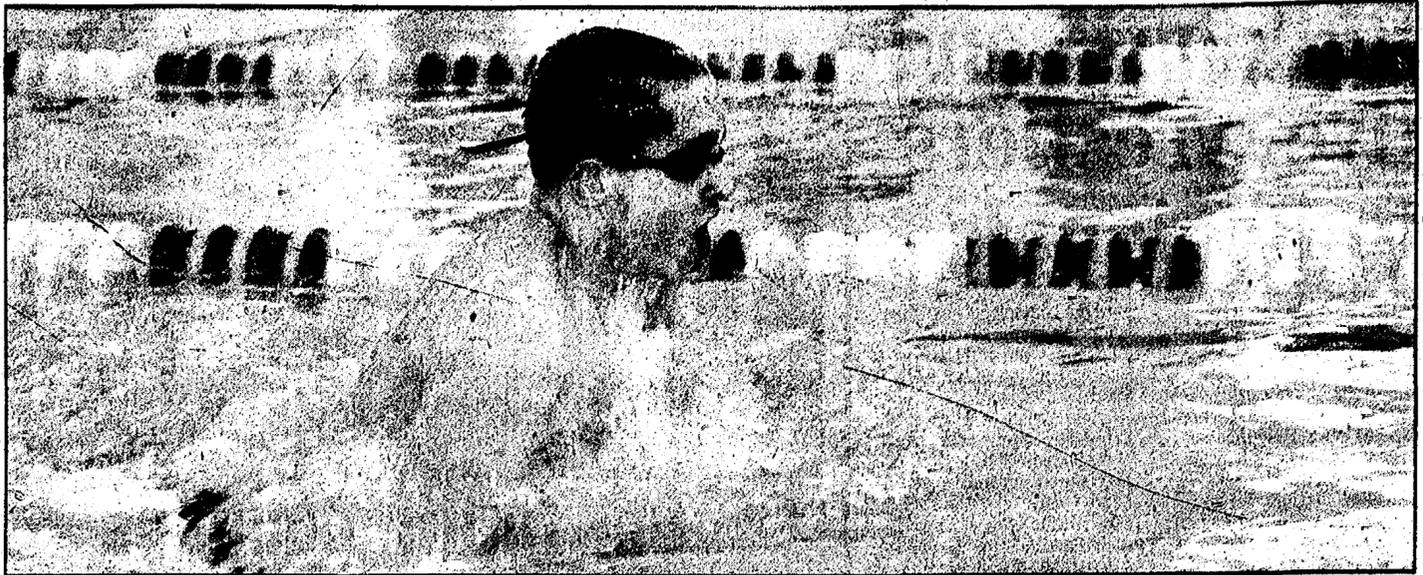

Simpson was back up in the 100 butterfly where he took 3rd place with a time of 1:03.15. Andrew Wickens was 4th at 1:03.44.

Burris gutted out a wonderful 100 freestyle winning the event in a tie at 53.41, a season best time for the talented sophomore. Bogarin was 5th stopping the clock at 55.95.

Austin Horn was the talk of the meet after his career best time in the 500 freestyle. Horn paced his way to nearly a 16 second time drop to earn 3rd place at 5:45.92. James Hansen was 5th overall with a time of 6:00.60.

Chelsea earned another 2nd place in the relay events as Bogarin, Burris, Simpson, and Alday swam to a solid 1:39.82 time.

Alday hopped right back in the water and proved that he really is a special athlete as he won the 100 backstroke with a time of 59.16.

Chelsea freshman David Alday continued his outstanding season with a win for the Bulldogs.

"It wasn't his fastest of the year but he knows how to win and gut out swims," Chelsea coach Dave Jolly said.

Deppner was 3rd overall in the event with a swim of 1:04.32. Phillip A Wilson was the top placer for the Bulldogs in the 100 breaststroke. He posted a 1:16.59. Ousley was 5th with a time of 1:17.17.

Chelsea finally won a relay but the meet had been decided by that point. Burris, Bogarin, Simpson and Alday swam to a 3:41.68 to capture 1st place honors.

Against Tecumseh Chelsea was ready to take sole place of second place in the SEC White Division. However, sickness would have another plan.

"Burris and Deppner were out of the lineup because of the flu," Jolly said. "They felt just awful to be out of the lineup but just could not go. We fought hard and made it a meet early, but depth became a factor as the meet went on."

Chelsea fought hard in the 200 medley relay but fell short as Simpson, Alday, Wickens, and Bogarin came in 2nd with a time of 1:51.80.

Alday hopped right back in the water to take 1st place in the 200 freestyle with his 2nd fastest time of the season at 1:55.48. Horn was 5th in the event with a season best as well of 2:11.17. Simpson took 2nd place in the 200 IM with a time of 2:17.26. Ousley was 5th overall with a time of 2:25.09 another best for the Bulldogs.

Bogarin was 2nd in the 50 freestyle with a 24.39 clocking. Wickens was 3rd overall at 24.70. Wrathall was 1st in diving with a good score of 241.30. Everard was 4th overall with a season best score of 146.20. Bogarin was back up in the 100 freestyle and cruised to another 2nd place finish. Hansen was 4th overall at 59.29.

Horn continued his fantastic week with another career best time in the 500 freestyle beating his previous mark set earlier in the week. He put up a 5:44.76 clocking to take 2nd place overall. Phillip A Wilson was 4th in the event with a wonderful time of 5:59.93. This was another career best time for the Bulldogs. John Mangner, was 5th overall with a great swim as well. He swam a season best of 6:03.11.

Chelsea fell short in the 200 freestyle relay getting 2nd in the event. Wickens, Bogarin, Simpson, and Hansen combined for a 1:38.25 clocking. Alday blasted to a win in the 100 backstroke posting a solid time of 58.55. Everard was 3rd at 1:06.63.

Ousley did a nice job in the 100 breaststroke posting a season best time of 1:13.45 to get 2nd place points. Tom Olsen shocked the coaches with a first time swim in competition in the event.

He put a respectable 1:16.01 to take 4th place overall. Chelsea finishes its dual meet season this week with a double dual at home on Thursday.

Pioneer and Ypsilanti HS will be in attendance for annual senior night.

Michigan Department of Natural Resources and Environment officers are serious about enforcing snowmobile safety rules.

Following a tragic snowmobile accident, family and friends put up this memorial to remember a 24-year-old victim of a snowmobile fatality that occurred in Antrim County.

Snowmobile safety

DNRE offers tips for a safe season

Speed is one of the biggest factors in snowmobile fatalities in Michigan, so Department of Natural Resources and Environment Law Enforcement officials are urging snowmobilers to take one simple precaution this season: Slow down.

Other significant factors in snowmobile accidents include alcohol use and operating on roadways.

Many fatal accidents will have more than one of these factors as a major or contributing cause. Each user should take the time and effort to diminish the chance of being involved in these dangerous events.

Snowmobilers are reminded that they must get ready for the season, making sure their gear is prepped and that they are, too - snowmobiling is a physical sport; participants must make sure they are ready for the trails ahead.

With more than 200,000 snowmobile riders and more than 6,200 miles of designated snowmobile trails located throughout state and federal forests and many acres of privately owned lands, Michigan is one of the top snowmobiling destinations in the world.

The worst season on record for fatalities was 1995-96, when 47 occurred. Since then, fatalities have been reduced to about 24 per year. During the last snowmobile season 26 people died participating in the sport.

Those numbers are still too high.

"One person killed while snowmobiling is tragic," stated Lt. Craig Grey of the DNRE's Law Enforcement Division. "I can not imagine how this affects families and friends of the victims, all while enjoying a sport most users are truly passionate about."

For the 2010-11 snowmobiling season, Michigan has experienced a few fatalities so far, indicating there is still much work to be done to provide a safe and enjoyable experience for sledders in Michigan.

The DNRE partners with county sheriffs, the Michigan Snowmobile Association, numerous snowmobiling clubs

Snowmobile safety riding tips

- Always keep your machine in top mechanical condition.
- Always wear insulated boots and protective clothing including a helmet, gloves and eye protection.
- Never ride alone.
- Avoid, when possible, crossing frozen bodies of water.
- Never operate in a single file when crossing frozen bodies of water.
- Always be alert to avoid fences and low strung wires.
- Never operate on a street or highway.
- Always look for depressions in the snow.
- Keep headlights and tail lights on at all times.
- When approaching an intersection, come to a complete stop, raise off the seat and look for traffic.
- Always check the weather conditions before you depart.

and thousands of volunteer instructors in a joint effort to make snowmobiling in Michigan as safe and fun as possible.

The main focus for the partners in this effort is education. In Michigan, Snowmobile Safety Education training is required for youths between the ages of 12 to 17, and highly recommended for all others.

Training courses are typically about six hours long. The cost of these courses varies depending upon which group is instructing the course.

Modern snowmobiles are capable of high rates of speeds over snow and ice. Because of the countless hazards associated with operating a snowmobile, training is a crucial factor in safe and responsible snowmobile operation.

The DNRE, in cooperation with schools, organizations and associations, takes an active role in assuring that all of Michigan's citizens are given the opportunity to take a snowmobile safety course. The course emphasizes safe and responsible snowmobile operation.

If you are interested in finding a course check go online to www.michigan.gov/dnre click on Education & Outreach and then select Hunter Education & Recreational Safety Classes.

Because operating on roadways is one of the biggest factors contributing to fatalities, youths under the age of 12 may not cross a highway or street. Youths who are between 12 and 17 may not cross a highway or street unless they have a valid snowmobile safety certificate.

Michigan has an excellent trail system and the DNRE encourages people to use it. The state spends about $2.5 million every year from registration fees and trail permits for trail grooming and maintenance.

Michigan is known by snowmobilers nationwide for its unique combination of abundant and dependable snow, exciting terrain and extensive trail network. Michigan is one of only three states that offers a large system of interconnected snowmobile trails. Approximately 50 percent of the snowmobile trail system is located on private lands, 25 percent on state land, 20 percent federal land and 5 percent other public lands.

More than 150 grooming tractors are used by more than 65 grant-program sponsors to groom the 6,200-mile trail system.

The DNRE urges snowmobilers to, "slow down, don't drink until the sleds are put away, and stay on designated trails," said Lt. Grey. Speed is a contributing factor in nearly all fatal accidents and alcohol impairs judgment and slows reaction time.

"It" was on from that point. The Saline sophomore came down the next time and drilled a three-pointer that hit nothing but net to give the Hornets a commanding 29-15 lead with 4:22 to play until halftime. The Bulldogs would cut the deficit to 33-28 midway through the third quarter, but thanks to Dils, that's as close as they would get.

Dils finished with a career-high 37 points as the Hornets knocked off the Bulldogs 58-38 in a Southeastern Conference game. Chelsea defeated Saline to open the season back in December.

Confidence is contagious. And there was nothing the Bulldogs could do to stop a confident and red-hot Dils, who finished with nine triples and had 21 points in the first half alone.

Dils said he felt "it" early on in the game.

"After that first three I hit," he said when asked when he knew he was in the zone. "That seemed to really get me going and it got my confidence level high. (My teammates) set good screens for me and got me the ball when I was open."

Saline coach Jay Plitzuweit certainly enjoyed the show.

"Reece moved really well without the ball and when he got open looks, he buried them," Plitzuweit said. "He played a heck of a game."

The Bulldogs came into Saline with a little swagger after knocking off rival Dexter before a packed house on Friday night in Chelsea. But Dils and company quickly established that this wasn't Friday and they weren't Dexter.

"Saline got off to a good start," Chelsea coach Robin Raymond said. "We had trouble with their matchups so I was trying to clear the middle out and moved Jake (Steinhauer) down on the block. And they just did a good job of stopping Patrick (Roberts) and Jack (McDougall)."

"Against a defense like that, you have to be able to make some plays and it just wasn't a great shooting night for us. Had we been able to knock down some shots early and build some confidence, we could have done some things against that zone. When you aren't shooting well, it makes the defense look really good."

At times the Bulldogs would run their offense and get open looks, only to miss the shots. Several times in the first half and even during their run in the third quarter, the Bulldogs missed some close-range shots. Other times, they tried to force the issue and those shots didn't fall either.

"We were running different sets and we changed some things but it comes down to making plays and hitting shots," Raymond said.

While Dils was the big story, the Bulldogs realize that they aren't going to win many games scoring 38 points. Even if Dils was only lukewarm instead of red-hot, the Bulldogs didn't generate enough offense to leave Saline with a victory.

Charlie McCalla led Chelsea with 13 points. Roberts added eight in the loss.

Derek Owens had eight points and David Hendrickson added six for the Hornets.

Dils wasn't the only Hornet to buzz into the record books. Michael Smutny was all over the glass on Tuesday night and finished with a career-high 15 rebounds. The junior center played a big part in limiting the Bulldogs' second chances on the offensive end, a key to thwarting Chelsea's third-quarter run.

"It was his best rebounding game of his life," Plitzuweit said. "He really hustled. He did an excellent job controlling the paint."

Plitzuweit said several times after the win that his team's goal is to improve every game. They certainly have improved since the last time the Hornets saw the Bulldogs in the season opener back on Dec. 10.

"We were more confident coming in here (Tuesday) because our kids realize they are reaching their goal of improving every game," he said. "It's good for them to see tangible evidence."

"Chelsea is such a well-coached, disciplined team that anytime you beat Chelsea, your team has accomplished something special."

A three-pointer by McDougall gave Chelsea an early 9-4 lead, but it didn't last long. Dils knocked down his first three of the night to make it 9-7 and then hit another three later in the quarter as the Hornets led 14-13 after one period. Dils had 10 of Saline's 14 first-quarter points.

Dils knocked down three triples in the second quarter during an 11-0 run that gave the Hornets a 29-15 lead. McCalla scored four points to help Chelsea cut the deficit to 31-19 at halftime.

Dils had five triples and 21 points at halftime.

The Bulldogs got back in the game midway through the third quarter thanks in part to a six-point "play." Roberts hit a jumper and was fouled. While protesting the call, Plitzuweit was given a technical foul. Roberts missed the free throw but McCalla knocked down the two technical free throws. Chelsea got the ball as well and scored to cut the lead to 33-28.

But Dils scored five points in a Saline 7-0 run to end the quarter and take a 40-28 lead into the final period.

Fittingly, Dils provided the dagger with a triple with 4:10 to play to give the Hornets a 47-30 lead.

Dils, who scored 29 points earlier in the season, agrees that there is a noticeable improvement in the way the Hornets are playing.

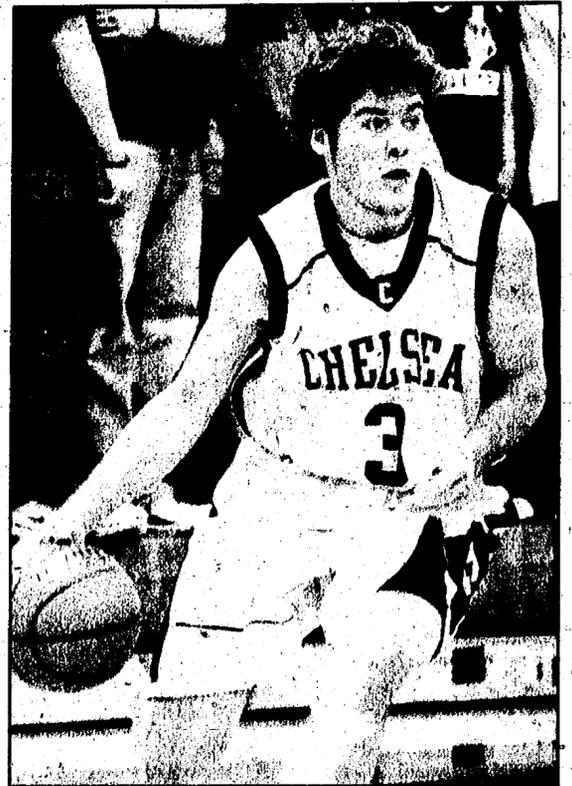

"We're playing harder and we're playing more as a team," Dils said. "We're just playing really good basketball now."

In the JV game, Saline defeated Chelsea 47-35.

The Hornets trailed 17-15 at halftime but outscored the Bulldogs 19-6 in the third quarter to take a 34-23 lead into the fourth quarter. Chelsea led 7-5 after the first quarter.

Freshman Mike Hendrickson led the Hornets with 10 points. Gabe Becton had nine points and KC Borseth had seven points in the win.

Nine players scored for the Bulldogs, led by Luke Hollandsworth with 10 points and Jayden Sweeny with six.

Evangelical Homes of Michigan a continuum of care and services

Choosing a senior living community for yourself or your loved ones is never an easy decision, and finding a community that fits your needs can be a challenge. With Evangelical Homes of Michigan you aren't just choosing one community—you're selecting an entire continuum of care and services all within the same organization.

Whether you choose one of our independent or assisted living communities, skilled nursing facilities, or have our home care specialists come to you, when your health or economic situation changes you don't need to start the entire process of searching for an appropriate care service all over again. Instead, you can take comfort knowing that you and your loved ones have access to the full array of programs, services and products offered by Evangelical Homes of Michigan.

Since 1879, Evangelical Homes of Michigan has maintained a commitment to create lasting communities and transform lives for those living in Southeast Michigan. We understand that your happiness, health and independence are of the utmost importance to you, and our dedicated caregivers and volunteers will provide the kind of compassionate care that everyone deserves.

At our Brecon Village campus in Saline we offer independent living, assisted living, home care, memory care, adult day services, and respite services all on the same 35-acre campus. Our independent living options create a community of peers, where residents desire to live on their own and have ready access to companionship, activities and support services.

Our holistic wellness program, Passport to Living Well®, provides you with goals and techniques to address all six spheres of wellness—physical, emotional, intellectual, vocational, spiritual, and social.

With our assisted living options we provide residents with companionship, support services and assistance with daily activities. Our caring and compassionate staff is ready to be of assistance, while promoting maximum independence to each resident.

Also located on the Brecon Village campus is the Memory Support Center, which opened in the fall of 2009. Here, individuals with memory loss and their families and caregivers can receive comprehensive and nurturing care through the many stages of memory loss. At the Memory Support Center, we offer several care options including assisted living, adult day services and home care, as well as a library and resource center that is available to the community.

Through our affordable Adult Day program, we provide life-enriching activities and meaningful social interaction on a daily basis for persons with memory loss, which allows caregivers and families to take much needed respite without having to worry about the safety and social interaction of their loved one.

We understand the financial reality many older adults face and are committed to offering safe, secure and comfortable independent living environments. Our sponsored affordable senior housing communities—Eden Manor and Evangelical Manor in Detroit and Millpond Manor in Saline—offer independent living options for individuals (income restrictions apply).

Our two skilled nursing communities, located in Saline and Sterling Heights, offer long-term care and skilled nursing, memory care, hospice care and post hospitalization rehabilitation services. At both of these locations, we offer solutions for those facing a wide variety of medical concerns that require the best medical and nursing services available. Our long-term care and skilled nursing options provide 24-hour care for our residents, including personalized treatment plans that address all six spheres of wellness. Both locations also offer hospice care. Offered to terminally ill patients no matter what age, hospice care addresses

How to choose a physical therapist

You have just been involved in a motor vehicle accident, and a few hours later your entire lower back and neck are aching, along with horrible headaches.

Or, you are a weekend warrior and decide to run that spring 10K race without proper training, which at the end leaves you with a swollen knee and a sore heel. None of us are immune to injury, whether by trauma, overuse or simply age-related problems. Eventually, you will need to see a physical therapist. Many people choose a physical therapy (PT) facility based on location and convenience, and although these are important considerations, other factors can be included, such as availability of emergency visits, scheduling flexibility and, most of all, waiting time before being seen by a facility. Some medical conditions need immediate physical therapy attention. If you have to wait more than a few days, you may want to keep searching. A flexible, newer facility location might be able to get you started quicker than a more established center with an existing case load.

Most everyone has already sought out facilities based on the above criteria, so here are some other factors to consider:

Make sure your therapist is licensed in MI

Michigan is one of four remaining states that still require a medical doctor's prescription for physical therapy. Once you have a prescription in hand, you want to make sure your therapist is licensed in Michigan. Once in treatment, ask for specific credentials.

Check credentials

Physical therapy is evolving into a doctoring profession, which means that, as of 2008, all PT students will graduate with a doctor of physical therapy (DPT) degree. During the next few years, there will be PTs practicing in our community with anything from a certificate and diploma to bachelors, masters and doctoral degrees. The degree conferred is not the ultimate determinant of the proficiency of the therapist.

Seek professionalism

Professionalism is an attitude and a behavior set that brings together knowledge, skills and personal traits such as compassion, caring and empathy. You have to be comfortable with the clinical demeanor of your therapist.

Pick the right facility

Facility is an important factor to consider when selecting a provider. Physical therapists are some of the most creative people you will meet and may not need a lot of equipment in their facility. Having said that, would you hire a contractor to build your dream home if he told you all he needed was a saw? Your chosen facility should be clean, have many different treatment options available, and be responsive to your needs.

Pick the right PT for your needs

Do inquire if the therapist has any special competencies or areas of clinical interest, not so much to make a judgment about proficiency, but rather so you can fit your therapist selection to your condition. If you have torn a knee ligament recently and as a result have had to have surgery, you will want to see a therapist who has experience in knee rehabilitation. If you have fibromyalgia, perhaps a sports medicine clinic is not the right choice, but rather a practice that has experience and training in pain management would be a better choice.

Prepared by Tiziano Marovino, PT, DPT, DAAPM, of Quantum Physical Therapy.

Boomers turning to online dating services

Individuals over the age of 50 are turning more frequently to Internet dating to find a new significant other.

After losing a loved one or completing a divorce, many baby boomers are considering getting back into the dating pool.

Internet dating sites often provide a good number of candidates for busy people to consider.

In busy times filled with work responsibilities and family obligations, logging on to the computer to find a date can be much easier than finding a date in a social setting.

Twenty-two percent of the registered members of Match.com are over the age of 50.

There's a good chance that other popular dating sites also have a growing number of older participants as well. There are also dating sites geared to the over-50 crowd to make narrowing down prospects even easier.

Finding oneself in midlife and looking for a date or new mate is actually quite common.

Thousands of people are in the same situation. In a September 2003 study of singles aged 55+, The American Association for Retired People discovered that 49 percent said of respondents cited, "Having someone to talk to or do things with" as the most important reason for dating.

Seniors dating can have a unique set of challenges in comparison to younger daters. These include:

- Habits or routines that have developed after months or years of living single.

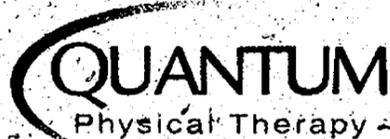

- Added baggage from divorce.
- Older children who may not be keen to their parents dating again.

- Elderly parents who need care.
- Physical appearance woes, such as wrinkles and extra weight.

- Medical conditions that may be embarrassing or serious.

- Self-esteem issues from being out of the dating loop for so long.

Baby Boomers now represent more than a quarter of the population, and many are being spurred on by children to look into online dating.

Seniors maintain healthier lifestyles through exercise

The human body needs exercise to operate at full capacity. Exercise is important at any age, but can be particularly beneficial for individuals in their golden years. The key is finding exercises that are both safe and effective.

Benefits of exercise

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention report that 28 to 44 percent of seniors ages 65 to 75 are inactive, meaning they don't get enough daily exercise for optimal health. Studies indicate that there are many reasons that seniors should engage in regular exercise.

- It can help stave off illness and chronic conditions by keeping the immune system healthy.
- It paves the way for better sleep, including falling asleep easier and sleeping more deeply.
- Exercise releases natural endorphins, which help a person feel good about him or herself and can boost mood.
- Regular exercise can promote weight loss, especially when done in conjunction with a healthy diet.
- Improved muscle tone can take pressure off of joints and help with mobility.
- Research indicates that exercise can boost brain function and keep dementia at bay.
- When participating in social exercise, seniors realize companionship and stress relief.
- Exercise can keep systems of the body in check, reducing constipation and helping circulatory issues.

Engaging in the right exercises

While it may have been the norm to do multiple, rigorous repetitions of exercises during one's youth, older adults should employ different strategies. Certain exercises are better than others and can help reduce the risk of injury.

Before starting any type of exercise regimen, seniors should talk with a physician about the pros and cons of certain activities. The doctor may be able to provide guidance as to which activities are better for specific conditions a person has. For example, an individual with arthritis may want to seek low-impact workouts, such as water aerobics.

Once a doctor gives the go-ahead, here are some exercises many 50+ people can try.

- Walking: Walking remains one of the best exercises for people of any age. The pace and resistance can be set by each individual by walking faster or slower, uphill or downhill. Adding light weights can make the workout even more effective. Walking is also easier on the legs and knees than jogging, but can be just as effective a cardiovascular workout.
- Leg extensions: Repetitions of leg extensions stretch the muscles of the legs and flex the knee joint. This can promote longevity of the knees and keep knee replacements at bay.
- Swimming: Enrolling in a local gym or YMCA that has a pool can be a boon to seniors. Swimming is a low-impact workout that targets most areas of the body as well as providing a cardiovascular workout. Plus, since swimming can be relaxing and enjoyable, it's an exercise that many people don't mind doing.
- Strength training: Moderate weight lifting can keep muscles strong and promote a healthy metabolism, considering muscle burns more calories than fat.
- Endurance exercise: Just about any activity that gets the heart rate up for an extended period of time is good for the body. This can be raking leaves, mowing the lawn, walking, bicycling, playing a game of catch, etc. Be sure the doctor cleans any such activities beforehand.

Silver Maples: A resident's moving story

Change is inevitable—often slow, sometimes difficult, but always inevitable. However, contrary to popular belief, change can be good.

Just ask Lauralee Lutz. She suddenly found herself on the brink of a life change and now reflects on how surprisingly positive the outcome was, and continues to be.

In November 1997, Lutz moved to Silver Maples of Chelsea, an active senior living community.

A long-time Ann Arbor area resident, she had never even considered moving to a retirement community until a neighbor mentioned this new place in Chelsea.

Coupled with the fact that she was finding gardening, mowing, and shoveling snow more of a chore, she thought she'd check it out.

Though still under construction with carpenters, painters, and builders everywhere, Silver Maples looked like it might be just the change she was looking for. And it certainly was!

A colorful, interesting person with a great sense of humor and unique perspective on life, Lutz quickly began enjoying her new life at Silver Maples.

Over the years, she served on many

Restoration Vein Care Providing technology with a personal touch

Restoration Vein Care, located at 5333 McAuley Drive Suite 4016, in Ann Arbor, on the St. Joseph Mercy Hospital Campus, is an industry leader in eliminating varicose veins and spider veins by employing minimally invasive techniques at the hands of talented physicians.

Procedures using the latest technology can be remarkably effective, have a low risk of side effects and offer rapid recovery times.

Physicians at Restoration Vein Care are board certified, fellowship-trained vascular surgeons and interventional radiologists. Deana Turner of Restoration Vein Care says the procedure they use is highly effective, efficient and offers minimal disruption to everyday life.

She says it's not the same procedure that "Aunt Bertha" had in the 1970s.

"Restoration Vein Care provides a special treatment for varicose veins which utilizes the latest technology with no downtime," Turner said. "It is typically covered by most insurance plans. There is no need to continue to suffer the pain and embarrassment of varicose veins."

Turner says Restoration provides a special treatment for varicose and spider veins that is offered at less than a dozen practices throughout the country.

And they back up that technology with a personal touch that provides a true comfort level for all patients who walk through the door. "We truly believe that each patient is an individual with unique needs. We do our best to accommodate those needs while providing the very highest quality clinical care in a pleasing environment," Turner said.

"We recognize that a patient's time is valuable. We coordinate appointments to minimize trips and run our office on schedule to minimize wait times."

resident committees, including the Activities, Maintenance, Resident Council, as well as contributing to the building expansion meetings. She made new friends, and found a niche for herself in the Silver Maples community. "You have to find out who you are, and live up to it," she said.

Thirteen full, busy years later, she experienced a serious illness and saw first-hand how well the Silver Maples care staff could handle emergency situations.

"The system worked perfectly," she said, "and I lived to tell about it."

Lutz said she never thought she'd make the move to Assisted Living, which was why it surprised so many, including herself. She had no desire to leave her lovely apartment in Independent Living and was afraid the apartments in Assisted Living were just "too small."

But what she soon realized was that Assisted Living provided what she truly needed.

"I've found that as you age you need less—less of everything. But you may also need more assistance with meals, laundry, medication, and personal care. It's all personalized to your needs."

This life change provided her a new,

Hearing loss a serious issue

"Loss of hearing is a medical condition that is associated with physical, emotional, mental and social well-being. Depression, anxiety, emotional instability, phobias, withdrawal, isolation, lessened health status and lessened self-esteem have all been linked to uncorrected hearing loss," according to the National Council on Aging.

Even mild, untreated hearing loss can be disabling by limiting meaningful communication and social connectivity leading to fatigue, tension, stress, impaired memory, the ability to learn new tasks, and even reduced job performance and earning power. A major reason why millions of Americans living with untreated hearing loss should take action is safety. Studies have linked untreated hearing loss to reduced alertness. Unheard and therefore unheeded traffic sounds, doorbells, telephones, alarms, and cries for help compromise the safety of those with hearing loss and everyone around them. The failure to hear smoke detectors and take quick action is the major reason adults 65 or older are more than twice as likely as any other age group to die in a home fire.

Why seeking help is so important

Those living with untreated hearing loss may not be aware that failure to take corrective action could result in the brain actually "forgetting" how to hear and understand speech. This condition is called auditory deprivation and the longer the period before treatment, the more likely it is that the brain will forget how to process speech, even after treatment is implemented.

Almost all (95 percent) of Americans with hearing loss can be treated with hearing aids. Nine out of 10 hearing aid users report improvements in quality of life. The use of hearing aids is associated with reductions in anger, frustration, paranoia, anxiety and overall improvements in quality of life and emotional stability.

In November 2010, The Better Hearing Institute reported that studies have shown the use of hearing aids can help Alzheimer's patients. Because there is a strong link between hearing loss and cognitive function, they, in partnership with Alzheimer's Association, are encouraging hearing health professionals to raise awareness of Alzheimer's, its early warning signs, and the related implications of unaddressed hearing loss.

Treatment of hearing loss will also improve interpersonal relationships and social activity. Successful treatment of hearing loss with hearing aids is also associated with greater earning power. Use of hearing aids will allow those with hearing loss to live more safely, securely, and independently.

HearUSA, located in Chelsea and Ann Arbor, as well as 26 other locations in Michigan and over 180 in the U.S., is the administrator of the AARP Hearing Care program, designed to help millions of Americans aged 50 and higher who have hearing loss. To locate the HearUSA near you, or to schedule an appointment for a free hearing screen, please call 1-800-698-6767, or go to www.hearusa.com.

Little known facts about hearing loss

- Hearing loss is called 'the invisible handicap' because there are no outward signs of difficulty or disorder and the loss is almost always gradual, usually over a period of years. There is also no pain.

- Among seniors, hearing loss is the most prevalent medical condition, following arthritis and hypertension.

- People with diabetes are twice as likely to have hearing loss than those who do not have diabetes.

- Smokers and overweight individuals are also at increased risk for hearing loss.

- Inability to hear and understand instructions by physicians, pharmacists or caregivers can put personal health in jeopardy.

- Men that regularly use aspirin, acetaminophen and non-steroidal anti-inflammatory drugs experience more hearing loss.

- Also, men that take phosphodiesterase (PDE) inhibitors are twice as likely to develop hearing loss as men who do not.

- Depression, isolation and alienation can plague those who have hearing loss.

10 things to know about hearing loss

1. Modern technology brings hearing aids that are smaller, smarter and more effective than ever before—and a lot less noticeable than untreated hearing loss!

2. Hearing aid technology today has exceptional digital performance and is designed in many discrete and comfortable styles.

3. Advanced digital hearing aids provide fine tuning to match your degree of hearing loss and preferences.

4. Some hearing aids are equipped with several levels of programming, which have different settings for diverse listening situations.

5. Some hearing aids automatically store data regarding which setting you prefer in certain situations, and will automatically switch to the desired setting.

6. Hearing aids are available with and without manual volume controls and most people prefer the ability to adjust the sound level.

7. Hearing aids with built-in telephone coils reduce external sounds and allow you to hear more clearly when using a phone.

8. For improved sound clarity and understanding, Bluetooth functionality allows you to connect wirelessly with cell phones, televisions, iPods, iPads and other electronic devices.

9. Age old-complaints, such as whistling (feedback), echoes, and background noise are minimized and clarity is much improved.

10. The most modern hearing aid is only as effective as the clinician who matches the features to your needs.

A year of progress, a year of milestones

The Cedars of Dexter is a new community in Dexter that offers its residents the perfect balance between an active lifestyle and maintenance-free living. The community sits on beautiful land next to historic Gordon Hall. An incredible amount of planning and persistence goes into developing a community like The Cedars of Dexter. That's why 2010 was such an exciting year for residents and staff alike, as the results of so much hard work by so many people came to fruition.

Home Construction

It was in late September 2009 when the first shovel broke ground at the Cedars of Dexter building site. Since that initial groundbreaking, construction has taken place at a rapid pace. As beautiful, craftsman-style cottages took shape, residents planned their moves, met their neighbors, and continued to provide input that would shape the community. By the end of 2010, more than 20 cottages were occupied. In all, 40 cottages have been reserved, and The Cedars of Dexter expects a steady stream of new residents to move into their homes this year.

The Community

When The Cedars of Dexter was conceptualized, it was hoped that it would grow into much more than just another neighborhood. Now that many residents have moved into their homes, the results have been beyond expectations. The residents of The Cedars of Dexter have forged a special relationship with one another, and each new resident that moves into the community is welcomed with open arms. A common sentiment shared by new residents upon moving into a new home at The Cedars of Dexter is that, "this community is everything that I hoped it would be... and more!"

The Clubhouse

One of the most compelling and unique aspects of The Cedars of Dexter is its community clubhouse. The clubhouse is the focal point of cultural, social, educational, health and fitness activities in the community. It features fine and casual dining options, all inclusive fitness center including pool, hot tub and sauna, life learning studio, private entertaining room for friends and family, and more.

On Oct. 3, 2010, a special opening ceremony for the community's Charter Club members was held early in the day. Charter Club members—who played an integral role in the design and programming of the clubhouse through their feedback and suggestions—participated in the ribbon cutting. Each Charter Club member was presented with a piece of the commemorative ribbon, a reminder of the importance of their efforts in bringing the clubhouse project to fruition.

Since the grand opening, residents have been able to enjoy the many amenities that the clubhouse has to offer.

"When I walked into the clubhouse for the first time, it took my breath away. It was so beautiful and way beyond my expectations," said residents Ermil and Bev. "The dining room had white tablecloths and a fireplace that was so warm and elegant. I knew we would enjoy many meals with new friends here."

The Future

The year 2011 promises to be a busy year at The Cedars of Dexter as new homes are built, new residents move in, and new services are offered. To learn more about the community, visit www.cedarsofdexter.com.

SPECIAL

A UMHC Senior Living Community

Glacier Hills community plans improvements

A multi-phase $26.5 million expansion is the latest development at Glacier Hills Senior Living.

It is a center with refreshing facilities and person-centered care residences and continues to serve residents with distinction.

As a result, new programs will strengthen Ann Arbor's life care options and meet future need. Plans call for both new construction and renovations.

Care & Rehab Center in 2011-12

There are nearly 60,000 square feet of new space with many private rooms (including private bathing) for 1200-plus patients annually.

Benefits include proximate workspace near patients for staff efficiencies, convenient rehab space, and improved amenities, such as parking, a café, and a gift shop for patients and visitors.

Projected future growth for short term stays after situations like post-orthopedic surgery, stroke, or heart attack have been anticipated, and new features will meet expectations.

An exciting new centerpiece of activity unique in Michigan will be a 3,700 square foot Life Enrichment Center. Contributions to the $2.5 million Campaign for Memory-Care Excellence will fund facilities and a program endowment.

Manor Enhancements in 2011

Currently, a dramatic new addition for entry of 5,566 square feet and drive-under canopy are taking shape.

More elements like beautiful new dining, kitchen and activity spaces for Independent and Assisted Living will add 1,800 square feet.

Memory Care Residence in 2012

A rededicated Memory Care residence will have unique programs and access to a superb outdoor setting. Residential neighborhoods, clustered near lovely common areas, will complement dining and life enrichment.

The capacity will be doubled to 72 residents, many-enjoying private rooms. The center will continue to serve increasing numbers of memory-challenged seniors.

Life Enrichment Center in 2013

An exciting new centerpiece of activity unique in Michigan will be a 3,700 square foot Life Enrichment Center. Contributions to the $2.5 million Campaign for Memory-Care Excellence will fund facilities and a program endowment.

Its cathedral-roofed "gallery" design plays up abundant natural light and centers for cooking, crafts/fine arts, gardening, music, and a well-equipped library with learning tools and family resources.

Visitors and groups will delight in the aviary and water features throughout.

Long Term Care Residence

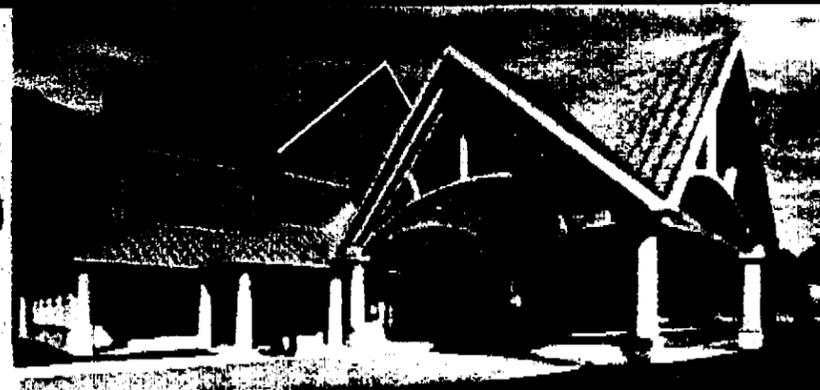

Existing Care Center (north wing) renovations will update spaces for those needing long-term skilled nursing care.

Additions made by 2013 will include more private rooms, common area enhancements, a new ambulance entrance, and community and meeting space.

Non-profit Glacier Hills welcomes community interest as it opens new doors and touches more lives in meaningful ways.

We can hardly wait to share our renewed campus and advanced quality of life with you!
