Pure Michigan features area

By Sheila Pursglove
Special Writer

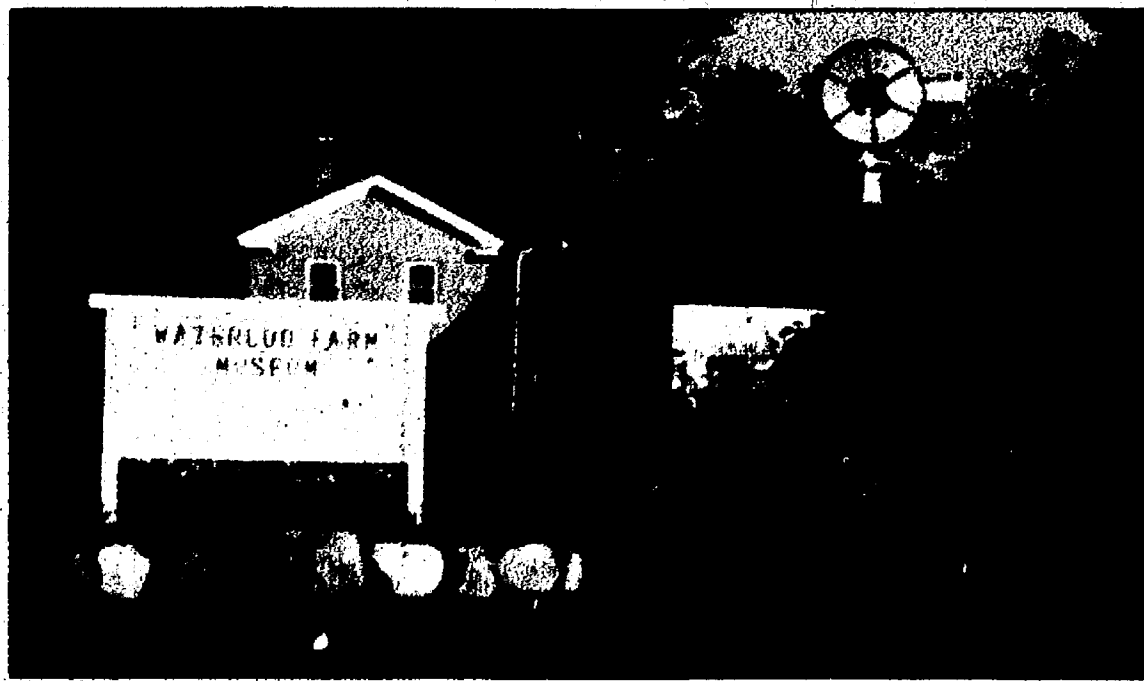

The Pure Michigan website has confirmed what local residents already know — that Chelsea has some of the best places to visit.

Five local spots are showcased as featured stops on a Jackson-Ann Arbor-Monroe Fall Color Tour: the Waterloo Recreation Area, Gerald E. Eddy Discovery Center, Chelsea Milling, Purple Rose Theatre and the Common Grill, making the Chelsea area the most featured spot.

"Chelsea is the essence of what Pure Michigan is all about," said Bob Pierce, executive director of the Chelsea Area Chamber of Commerce. "The diversity of activities available within our community sets us apart from any place in southeast Michigan — world-class theater, internationally recognized food manufacturer, nationally known eatery and the largest State Park in the lower peninsula are all right here at our doorstep."

The tour — one of several on the Pure Michigan website — covers 195-miles of highways and byways, following old Indian trails and territorial roads, an early tavern, a battlefield, the hometown of Gen. George Custer, and a couple of wineries. The fall colors along the mostly two-lane highway route are usually best from mid-to-late October, depending on Mother Nature's cooperation.

Any local leaf peeper knows the Waterloo Recreation Area bordering Chelsea is a great place for viewing fall colors. With more than 20,000 acres, the park also offers 11 lakes, glacial topography and trails for hiking, mountain biking, horse riding and cross-country skiing.

The Waterloo Recreation Area is a featured stop on Pure Michigan's Fall Color Tour.

An exceptional wildlife habitat, the area offers hunting and fishing, camping and cabins, picnicking, swimming, boat launches and a riding stable, as well as the historic Waterloo Farm Museum and Dewey one-room schoolhouse, as well as the Phyllis Haehnle Memorial Audubon

Sanctuary where hundreds of Sandhill cranes gather during the fall migration. Late afternoon visitors at

Waterloo festival features life as a pioneer

By Erica McClain
Heritage Media

Farm life as it was 200 years ago will be featured at the Waterloo Farm Museum and Dewey School Museum this Sunday with the Waterloo Area Historical Society's Pioneer Day.

The noon to 5 p.m. event, now in its fifth decade, will feature about 50 traditional craft demonstrators and vendors.

And for those who have ever wanted to split a log or see just how many chores a farmer had each day, there will be plenty of opportunities to experience the day-to-day-history of life, historical society member Arlene Kaiser said.

"If anyone is at all interested in history, this is the event to go to to learn about what every farmer had to know," Kaiser added. "Every farmer and pioneer had to know how to do all this stuff, and that was just to survive."

The demonstrations even include throwing a tomahawk, which visitors can attempt with supervision as long as they are over 13 years old.

Visitors will have a chance to tour all the farm buildings

Has Michigan's medical marijuana law made pot more socially acceptable?

By Karen Workman
Journal Register News Service

Whether Michigan's medical marijuana law has made the drug more socially acceptable — for medical uses or recreational — appears to depend on the individual.

"Sometimes there's a perception that college kids have very permissive attitudes about drugs across the board and that is not true at all," said Amanda Burgess-Proctor, an assistant professor of sociology at Oakland University.

Burgess-Proctor teaches the course "alcohol, drugs and society" and says that while it's hard to gauge an overall attitude toward marijuana based on the students in her class — especially because they've signed up for a course with the word "drugs" in its name — there is one perception that seems to ring true.

"Students tend to draw a big distinction between marijuana and other drugs, like cocaine and heroin," Burgess-Proctor said.

One of her students, Susan Bouvier, is the mother of four teenagers.

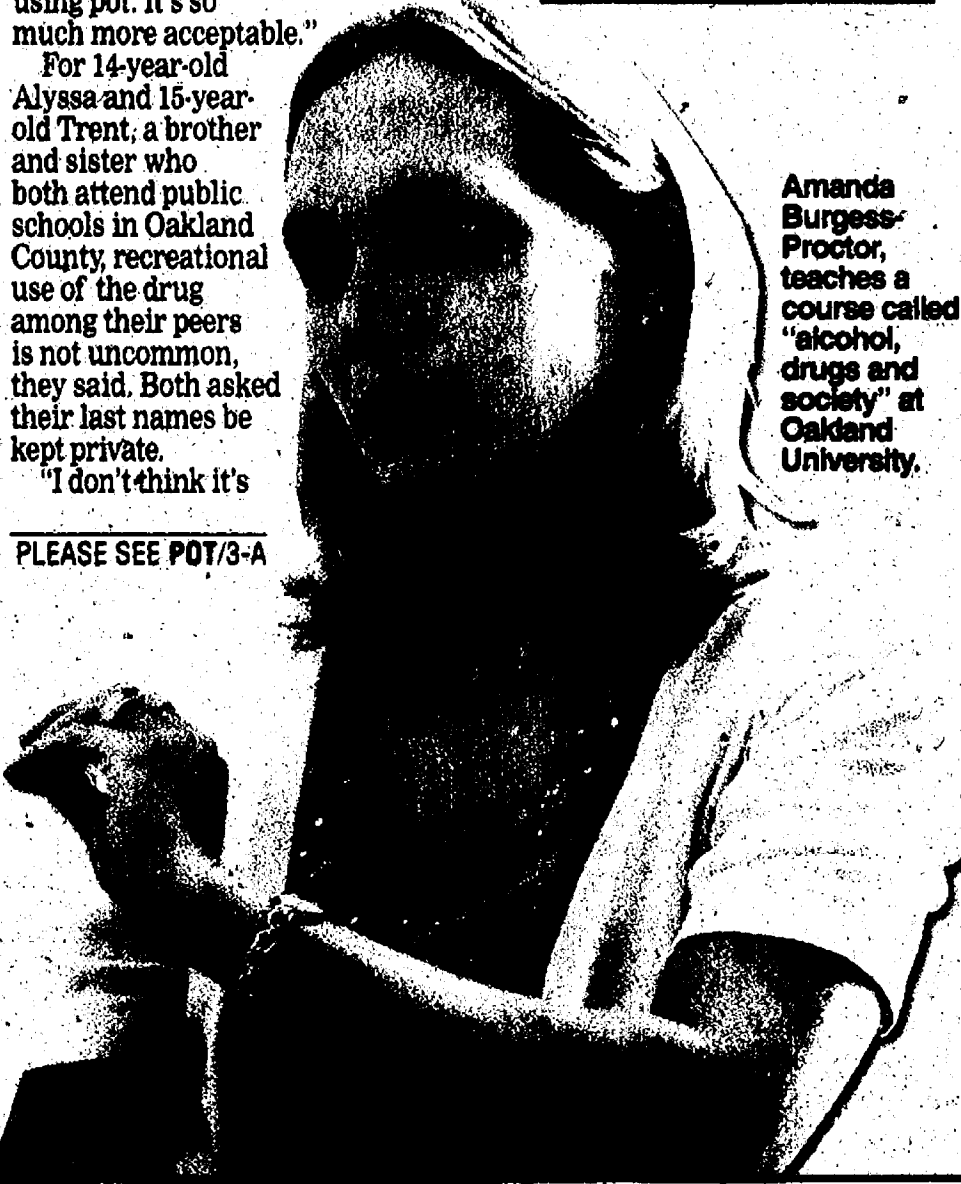

"I think in my generation, it's 50/50 — you're either for it or against it,"

Bouvier said. "What I've seen ... since the medical marijuana (law) passed, there's been an uproar with kids using pot. It's so much more acceptable."

For 14-year-old Alyssa and 15-year-old Trent, a brother and sister who both attend public schools in Oakland County, recreational use of the drug among their peers is not uncommon, they said. Both asked their last names be kept private.

"I don't think it's

Hundreds enjoy apples and honey

Three Jewish holidays celebrated

By Carrie Henderson
Special Writer

The Jewish Community Center of Greater Ann Arbor hosted its annual autumn gathering, Apples and Honey, Sunday afternoon. Nearly 450 people from Ann Arbor and surrounding communities came out to enjoy the beautiful sunny weather and celebrate the Jewish fall holidays.

Guests were greeted with a table laden with apples dipped in honey to symbolize the sweetness of Rosh Hashanah, the Jewish new year. In the Jewish calendar, the new year is followed by Yom Kippur, or the Day of Atonement, and then Sukkot, the harvest festival.

"Apples and Honey is a very social event to get newcomers acclimated to the community to meet new members," said Halye Aisner, director of marketing and membership for the JCC.

To that end, representatives from two dozen different Jewish organizations were on hand to provide information and educate guests about Judaism and Jewish traditions.

Local vendors sold menorahs, jewelry, books, and shofars, traditional trumpets made of rams' horns. Guests sampled various types of Israeli food, including falafel and tabbouleh pitas. Several varieties of kosher baked goods were available, including traditional babka and loaves of braided challah.

The afternoon was filled with activities to keep the children busy and entertained.

Kids crafted Rosh Hashanah cards, decorated cookies, enjoyed refreshing Sno-cones and burned off some energy in two bounce houses.

Jugglers showed off their skill, and clowns created animals and silly hats out of balloons, much to the kids' delight.

"It's always a wonderful occasion. The kids love it," said guest Stacey Lee.

Her daughters, Jessica and Samantha, waited eagerly in line to have their faces painted.

"It's a lot of fun," Lynn Robinson said. "It's a nice way to bring in the Jewish New Year with friends."

More walkers support Down Syndrome Society

At least 900 expected this year compared to 100 last year

By Kelly Reid
Special Writer

The seventh annual National Down Syndrome Society Buddy Walk, held Sept. 25 in Ann Arbor's Gallup Park, brought out higher-than-expected participation, organizers said.

The walk was hosted by the Down Syndrome Support Team in Ann Arbor.

"We expect over 900 walkers this year," Elaine Luther, president of the organization, said before the event, noting only 100 participated the first year.

With the weather in the low 70s, it was just right for walking the mile-long trail around the pond.

"The event is to help raise money to support families with Down syndrome," said Lynnelle Tans, the public relations representative for DSST. "The money goes to things like dance, karate, music lessons, swimming and speech therapy."

Before the walk started, there were several raffles and silent auctions taking place to help raise funds for the cause. Coolers filled with pop, juice and water were provided free of charge for the walkers, as was pizza and cookies after the walk.

"This is my third or fourth year helping out," said Don McGregor, a volunteer. "I have a granddaughter with Down syndrome, Natalie. Her mother helps organize this event."

Several hundred chairs and dozens of tables took up a large area of the park outside the pavilion, where live music was playing. There were at least two bands there, one of which was local group Know Obstacles from Ann Arbor. Each of the members has some kind of disability.

The other band was fronted by a man who goes by "Leonardo," who has traveled the country performing for similar events. For more information on the Down Syndrome

State alters timing, formula for Student Count Day

By James David Dickson
Heritage Media

dates rather than do two separate counts in separate weeks.

The student count formula also has been altered. The state will still use "blended data" from fall and winter counts to determine funding for school districts, but with much less weight given to the winter number.

In 2010-11, the formula gave 25 percent of the weight to the winter count and 75 percent to the fall; in 2011-12 and beyond, it assigns only 10 percent of the weight to the winter count and 90 percent to the fall number.

Funding for the 2011-12 academic year will be determined by the count of Feb. 9 and Oct. 5.

Count data must be sent to the intermediate school district, in this case the Washtenaw Intermediate School District, by Nov. 9. From there, the WISD has

WASHTENAW	81010	ANN ARBOR PUBLIC SCHOOLS	38,741	$9,020	($16.3)
WASHTENAW	81020	SCHOOL DISTRICT OF YPSILANTI	(2,045)	$7,513	($16.3)
WASHTENAW	81040	CHELSEA SCHOOL DISTRICT	(6,951)	$7,180	($49.9)
WASHTENAW	81050	BEXTER COMMUNITY SCHOOL DISTRICT	2,223	$7,458	$18.9
WASHTENAW	81070	LINCOLN CONSOLIDATED SCHOOL DISTRICT	(16,920)	$6,546	($129.9)
WASHTENAW	81080	MANCHESTER COMMUNITY SCHOOLS	4,116	$7,343	$29.9
WASHTENAW	81100	MILAN AREA SCHOOLS	0	$6,846	$68.7
WASHTENAW	81120	SALINE AREA SCHOOLS	(11,111)	$7,173	($76.0)
WASHTENAW	81140	WHITMORE LAKE PUBLIC SCHOOLS	(3,563)	$6,846	($24.3)
WASHTENAW	81150	WYANDOTTE COMMUNITY SCHOOLS	(14,661)	$7,310	($108.0)

24 weeks to verify and provide the data to the state. For instance, Feb. 9 count data was due to the ISDs by March 16, and needed to arrive in Lansing on or before July 27.

This change in the count day formula means districts are penalized for declining enrollments more immediately than they were under the old system, which did more to offset declining fall enrollment with a stronger spring number.

Kathryn Summers, associate director of the Michigan Senate Fiscal Agency, said that the net effect of the change is to save the state money. With declining enrollments statewide, and in a good number of individual districts, the state could save roughly $13 million this year by altering the formula from 75-25 to 90-10, Summers said.

That's if the estimates hold true. Also, the estimates don't account for attrition, but rather they isolate how the change in the blended formula will affect districts, Summers said.

The Senate Fiscal Agency analyzed the impact of the new formula would have on school districts. The estimated impact of the new formula, which was signed into the State School Aid Act of 1979, varies wildly from district to district.

Ann Arbor is expected to be the big winner with the new formula, gaining roughly $350,000 as a result of an estimated gain of 39 students, while Lincoln Consolidated Schools is expected to lose nearly $130,000 because of an estimated loss of 19 students. On the chart, numbers wrapped in parentheses are negative numbers.

Summers stressed that the numbers were just estimates, that the real funding still will be determined by the count day data, and that the state hadn't called each district to create the May estimate.

Citizen of the Year to be honored Oct. 13

Citizen of the Year recipient John Frank and Lifetime Achievement winner Mark Heydlauff will be honored at a banquet dinner 6:30 p.m. Oct. 13 at the Comfort Inn Village & Conference Center, 1645 Commerce Park Drive in Chelsea. Frank was honored as this year's Citizen of the Year, which is co-sponsored by the Chelsea Area Chamber of Commerce and the Chelsea Standard, for his long-standing work toward implementing a historic district in downtown Chelsea. Frank first started campaigning for a historic district in Chelsea in the late '90s and worked tirelessly toward the district's realization. In June, the district, which included 61 buildings spanning from the north end of town to the Norfolk Southern railroad tracks, were officially placed on the National Register of Historic Places. The district includes the

Longworth Complex, a grouping of historic buildings. Getting the buildings officially placed on the register now gives the buildings a chance to stay standing and receive federal historic preservation credits. Heydlauff received the Lifetime Achievement Winner award for more than 30 years of dedicated work in the Chelsea area, including starting the then-village's Downtown Development Authority 15 years ago and the aiding in the completion of the streetscape project nearly 20 years ago, to name a few. Heydlauff is also seated on a number of local boards: Silver Maples Board of Trustees, Chelsea State Bank Board of Directors and the Chelsea First Steering Committee. Tickets for the event, which will cost $35 for adults and $15 for kids, are currently available at the Chelsea Chamber of Commerce Office, 310 N. Main St. in Suite 120, and at city offices. The banquet includes remarks from Frank and Heydlauff, with introductions from Jim Myles and John Mann, respectively, as well as tributes from government officials including Chelsea Mayor Jason Lindauer, State Rep. Mark Ouimet and U.S. Rep. Tim Walberg. There will also be a cash bar and dinner served. For more information, contact the Chelsea Area Chamber of Commerce office at 734-475-1145.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Edison Street sidewalk project violates residents' privacy, ignores concerns

We have lived on Edison Street for 40 years and have always loved this village. How frustrating and disappointing it has been for us to sit through Council meetings with some members not willing to consider the wishes and concerns of the residents.

Anyone who does not now have a sidewalk on their property probably will soon. The plan is to connect the entire village. We have been told that the "standard" of the right of way for village sidewalks is 99 feet from the center of the street, which in our case, puts the sidewalk 10 feet from our front porch. We are very concerned about the lack of privacy with a sidewalk this close. We resent the remark made by the Village President Shawn Keough when he said, "You will get used to it."

There are many sidewalks in the village that do not follow this standard and are much closer to the street. In the interest of the residents' wishes and taxpayers' money doesn't it seem that the council would use common sense and do the same in this situation?

Anyone concerned about the location of future sidewalks on their streets should attend the next council meeting 7:30 p.m. Oct. 10 at the Dexter Senior Center.

Sylvan Township board should be held responsible for negligence

To the Sylvan Township Board:

I give up. Why is it that you feel that you can force everyone to pay for your gross negligence? It seems to me that what needs to be done is for a class action lawsuit to be brought against you for this. It seems that you have misappropriated funds, used them illegally and created fraud, according to a past supervisor.

These comments from the story that appeared in the Sept. 1 issue of the Chelsea Standard sums it up pretty well, if you ask me, to justify a class action lawsuit to hold them responsible:

"They used assessment funds for something they were not supposed to ... it feels like this is getting shoved down our throats, but we don't know what to do." (Judy Slocum) said. Slocum indicated that many residents are having difficulty moving past thoughts of culpability in the misuse of funds. "The court report dated on Aug. 17 read that the court deemed that they took that money and they used it for something else, and that's against the law. My biggest thing is, OK, if that's what was done aren't (the board members) (legally) responsible?"

Why is it that the township needs this large and lavish building to work out of? They already own an empty parcel of land to the west of the building. Why not sell the current lavish building, property and even the worthless water and sewer mess, if that is possible, and build a small, efficient building on the smaller plot?

I, for one, would love to see a massive recall of the board members. Unfortunately, there does not seem to be time enough to get it done before their time is up. And believe me, every one of their times are up. None of these crooks will be re-elected to their office.

I only wish that I knew the workings better of the township so that I could run myself.

Standard should not be applied in Edison Street sidewalk plan

In the Village Council's zeal to help Dexter progress and become a city, the council has embarked on a program to add sidewalks where there are none throughout the village. At first glance, it is a noble undertaking to improve foot travel, making it faster and safer within the village for sure.

However, the devil is always in the details, and there is something most village residents who will be affected by this undertaking are mostly unaware of: The standard that the Council wants to use for the placement of these sidewalks is inches less than 50 feet from the center of their street.

In other words, people living on the small, low traffic, residential side streets, such as: Dover, Edison, Forest, Grand, Hudson, Inverness, Second, Third and any other streets in the old sections of Dexter who do not as yet have a sidewalk installed, will, in many cases, find people walking right by their front windows compromising their privacy instead of down by the street where most people would expect the sidewalk to go.

I suggest people who fall into that category go out and measure to see where the proposed sidewalk would be placed on their street. You might be surprised.

When we on Edison discovered the plan, we went to Council with petitions and requests to have the placement 10-12 feet from the road instead of the 50 feet plan. We thought it to be a reasonable request.

But, the Council, wanting to adhere to a "consistent standard," used on many of the larger more traveled streets like Dexter-Ann Arbor Road voted to apply that same standard to us as well. This is not just an Edison Street issue. What they adopt for us will apply to the rest of the residential areas as well.

I believe Council is trying to make good decisions and do what they think is best for Dexter. However we live here, and they work for us. They deserve to have our input so they can make the best decisions for us, the citizens of Dexter.

If you think this standard is unreasonable for small residential areas and do not want to see our residential areas laced with sidewalks up right next to homes, please come to the Village Council meeting 7:30 p.m. Oct. 10 at the Senior Center in Copeland to say so.

Good Samaritan proves Chelsea's friendly atmosphere

For the past five years, I have lived in Chelsea after spending the previous 77 years in a much larger city here in Michigan. The different atmosphere was eye-opening — most especially the very friendly way the people here have. Friendly — yes — but I had no idea of the helpfulness to strangers.

My most recent experience with that was just a few weeks ago on a rainy Thursday afternoon. A friend and I were out for lunch when we returned to the car in the parking lot. We noticed that the right front tire was flat. A couple came out of the restaurant soon and had parked their car next to mine and saw the flat tire also. The wife sat in their car while the husband came to my driver's side window to see if he could be of help.

I was having trouble with my phone. I could not get a good connection, so he offered to do that for me. He stood out there in the rain — declining my invitation to get into the back seat out of the rain. After a great length of time, he found out that my Road Assistance had recently expired when the car warranty expired!

He decided (over my objection) he would change the tire himself, which he did, and then patiently explained to me how to drive with that temporary on and suggested where I should go to get a new tire, as the one he took off was slashed.

He would not accept any money, but said I could take him and his wife out for lunch, which I will surely do!

Do you wonder who the random act of kindness giver is? It is Richard Dingledey of Auto Windshield Chip Repair. How grateful I will always be for his very kind concern and his helpfulness!

Raising chickens could bring rats

Wanting to raise chickens in a residential area sounds good, but one aspect is probably being overlooked. Sadly, feeding these chickens means chicken feed spilling onto the ground every day.

There is a good chance this would bring rats into the area, not good if children live and play nearby.

Perhaps it's just not worth the risk.

Chelsea Reads Together is this month

October is Chelsea Reads Together month and our community read theme is health and wellness. We are reading The Blue Zones, by Dan Buettner, a National Geographic reporter who traveled the globe uncovering the best strategies for longevity in the Blue Zones; places in the world where higher percentages of people enjoy remarkably long, full lives. In his book he discloses the formula, blending unique lifestyle habits with the latest scientific findings to inspire easy, lasting change that may add years to your life.

We did not have to look far to find Chelsea residents who have created their own unique formula for living long, happy lives. At the Chelsea Senior Center we met Elmer Greenwald, age 92, who agreed to talk with us after his morning jog. Elmer has led an active life and started by telling us of the house he built by hand in his 30s. After completing the project, he was diagnosed with arthritis in his hands and became determined to find relief without injections. Elmer started reading everything he could find on arthritis and found a book that offered tips on how to relieve symptoms, advice he summarizes as "Do not eat the typical American meal:

meat, potatoes and sugar." After changing his habits accordingly, he visited his doctor to find he no longer showed signs of arthritis, and attributes his ability to jog at age 92 to eating right, exercising and taking vitamins.

In his early 80s, Elmer bought a farm in Chelsea. "I didn't feel like I was in my 80s," says Elmer, of taking on such a large project. Elmer contributes this to many things, one being his diet. "I don't eat much meat," Elmer says, "I buy a lot of meatless meals and eat grains and vegetables and a lot of apples." Elmer's daughter, Pam joined him on his jog one day. As they neared the end of the run, Elmer told her that he sprains the last mile. "At that, she stopped and said she would meet me at home," he laughs.

As illustrated in The Blue Zones, Elmer makes it a priority to put family first. He enjoys staying in touch with family and friends and is active at the Chelsea Senior Center. His outlook on life is positive and he is determined to make the most of each day. Elmer worked as an electrician and appreciates that he was able to choose his career and what hours and locations to work. While Elmer does not garden much these days, he has turned most of his land into pastures for his neighbor's two horses, a passion of his. "I make sure to leave apples for them so they visit often," Elmer says. Elmer's story is inspiring and his lifestyle has mirrored many of the centenarians interviewed in The Blue Zones. Listen to Elmer's full interview at the Chelsea Reads Together website: www.chelseareads-together.wordpress.com.

Delay in issuing registry cards due to volume of applications, other factors

By Ann Zaniewski
Journal Register News Service

Michigan receives an average of 400 to 600 applications every day from people who want to become registered medical marijuana patients.

On one particularly busy day, just shy of 2,000 people applied.

The large number of requests, coupled with the hundreds of calls and emails received, is a key reason why people applying for medical marijuana cards in Michigan face a roughly 3 1/2 to 4 month delay, according to a state official.

One local attorney says the delay, which he heard can be as long as six months, is unacceptable.

"It has been a tremendous disappointment the way the state has handled the registry program," said Michael Komorn, an Oakland County attorney and president of the Michigan Medical Marijuana Association.

Michigan voters in 2008 approved a ballot proposal that included physician-approved use of marijuana by registered patients with debilitating medical conditions and allowed registered individuals to grow limited amounts of marijuana for patients.

When the state began issuing medical marijuana cards in April 2009, a staff of three people processed the applications. There were 1,100 applications that first month.

Now, a staff of 25 is on hand to handle an increasing number of applications. In August 2011, 13,215 applications were received.

The medical marijuana registry program is within the Bureau of Health Professions at the Michigan Department of Licensing and Regulatory Affairs.

Celeste Clarkson, manager of the compliance section of the Bureau of Health Professions, said the delay is in the issuance and printing of the registry cards.

Under the Michigan Medical Marihuana Act, the state must approve or deny an application within 15 calendar days of receiving it. The state has five additional days to issue a card after approving an application.

"That's where we're behind," Clarkson said.

If a denial letter is not received, the application is deemed valid. The statute allows for a copy of the application submitted to serve as a valid registry identification if the card is not issued within 20 days of its submission to the department.

"Our delay is based on sheer numbers, volume," Clarkson said.

She said along with a large number of applications and related inquiries, staff members are busy following up with people who turned in incomplete applications, conducting background checks on prospective caregivers and handling many other tasks.

Clarkson said in the case of a licensed profession, such as nursing, state officials know how many people are in nursing schools and can figure that a certain percentage of those will go on to seek a license.

However, medical marijuana is different because there's no way to estimate how many people are going to apply to be registered patients. Clarkson said staffing levels are always being reevaluated.

"How do you determine how much staff you need when you have an unknown application base?" Clarkson said.

Komorn said there have been cases in which a person has shown a police officer a copy of their application because they haven't received a card yet and the officer, believing that the actual card is required, has arrested the person.

Komorn said he understands the state was overwhelmed with applications in the beginning.

"Now, as we move into the third year, (the delay) is inexcusable, and steps could have been taken a long time ago," he said. "Because they haven't... It tells the community and the voters that they're not serious about implementing this program." When people send in an application to be a registered medical marijuana user, they can choose to designate a caregiver who can legally provide them with marijuana. A caregiver relationship with a patient has to originate with the patient's application.

According to state officials, from October 2010 through August 2011, the state's Medical Marihuana Program expended more than $1.5 million, though that figure doesn't necessarily include all expenses related to it. A further breakdown was not immediately available.

Clarkson said from October 2010 through July 2011, $8 million came into the state through registry application fees. She said that figure doesn't include instances of checks being returned for insufficient funds or any refunds the state has issued for various reasons, such as to people who have sent in multiple applications.

From April 2009 through early September of this year, the state received 181,303 original and renewal applications. More than 105,000 patient registrations have been issued.

Fifty-seven registered medical marijuana patients in Michigan are under 18.

Dispensary owner says issue not going away

By Mark Ranzenberger
Journal Register News Service

Matt Taylor says he helped start a medical marijuana business because he's passionate about the issue, and wanted to keep it honest and close to home.

"Why do we need another R.J. Reynolds?" asked Taylor, one of two partners in Mount Pleasant's now-closed CA dispensary.

Taylor is a successful young business operator, running a busy franchise coffeehouse on Mission Street. His partner in CA, Brandon McQueen, is treasurer of the Mount Pleasant school board. If they fit any stereotype, it's that of young, involved entrepreneurs and community leaders.

"Brandon and I saw people who were blatantly abusing the law," Taylor said, as dispensaries began cropping up in the wake of voters' passage of the Michigan Medical Marihuana Act. The law describes a system of registered patients who either grow their own or obtain it from registered, individual caregivers who grow it for their patients.

The law doesn't actually legalize marijuana, but offer immunity from prosecution for the medical use of marijuana. Among the activities described as being immune from prosecution are the ability to "acquire, transfer and transport" marijuana by patients and caregivers.

In that wording, they saw an opportunity. They opened a dispensary called the Compassionate Apothecary, later shorted to CA because of a provision in state law that limits the use of the term "apothecary" to stores that sell prescription drugs.

The partners set up a system involving patient-to-patient transfers, which they believed were legal under the "acquire, transfer and transport" provision. But the Michigan Court of Appeals disagreed with that, and the place shut down.

"We're not bankrupt. Our bills are all paid. We're not using the building," he said.

He's hoping that the Michigan Supreme Court will agree to look at the issue of dispensaries, and how they can operate.

Taylor's convinced that if Michigan is going to allow the use of marijuana as medicine, there must be a safe, secure way to obtain it.

Without dispensaries, patient-to-patient transfers have simply gone underground, he said, and that is dangerous to both patients and caregivers.

Changing any voter-approved law, like the Michigan Medical Marihuana Act, takes a two-thirds vote of both houses of the Legislature. Political observers just don't see that happening.

Another option is a second voter initiative, but Taylor is lukewarm about that idea. He said the only groups that would be willing to bankroll that kind of campaign are large, out-of-state dispensary interests, which could be expected to write it in a way to benefit them.

He would prefer a "cottage industry model," based on local, legitimate business operators providing a local service. That's what he and McQueen thought they had, until the Court of Appeals said no.

Taylor said he's both encouraged and discouraged by the court cases that appear to be further defining what the act really means.

"It does help to weed out the people who aren't willing to follow the rules," Taylor said. But he believes there's a certain amount of sensational reporting involved, and that's overshadowing what he sees as a legitimate need for a legitimate, alternative medicine.

Driver's training should become mandatory

State legislators in Michigan and elsewhere should revisit the concept of graduated licensing for young drivers.

The intent is to limit when, where and with whom drivers younger than 18 can drive, to ease them into the responsibilities, art and science of operating a vehicle and to keep them and the people around them safe.

But a new report from the Journal of the American Medical Association shows a disturbing unintended consequence.

Graduated licensing has indeed reduced fatalities for drivers in the 16 to 17 age group. But that appears due, in part, to teens in that age group putting off driver training and licensing until they turn 18 and don't need to meet all the requirements of those a year or two younger.

And that, in turn, appears to be responsible for a spike in fatalities for drivers when they turn 18 and take to the road with less training and sometimes none at all.

Licensing at age 18 with no training is permitted in most states, the study's lead author said. Michigan appears to be among them.

"I was actually bummed by my own findings — to find out we're offsetting the benefits" in young drivers so much, said author Scott Masten. "It was quite unexpected."

The net impact is that graduated licensing appears to be a lifesaver, with more lives saved among 16-year-olds than lost among 18-year-olds. And fatality rates for 17- and 19-year-olds? Not affected.

Other studies corroborate the JAMA report. In one nationwide survey, about a quarter of people who were 18 and hadn't obtained a license cited the licensing requirements as a reason.

It tells us, as it tells the study's authors, that state legislators should take a look at the statistics in their own states. Where there are no requirements for driver training for anyone getting a first license, we think they should be added.

Low testosterone is not so bad

I banged out a little laundry the other day, changed some diapers and decided to give myself a treat, namely a pedicure and some needlepoint with half an eye on "The Rachael Ray Show." When I was done with that, I played with my kids, gave my wife a kiss and went but for an appetizer. Delish!

Later that night, I got home, turned on the television, and then saw a disturbing headline while perusing The New York Times.

Apparently, testosterone levels in men drop like a rock after they become parents. I immediately paused the DVR, knowing I could watch "Say Yes to the Dress" anytime. I needed to read this article.

Basically, a study done in the Philippines showed men who became fathers

HOME FRONT

saw their testosterone levels drop in a dramatic fashion compared to men who didn't become fathers. Furthermore, men who engaged with their children for more than three hours a day — changing diapers, playing, cooing, what have you — had the lowest levels.

What in the name of Oprah is happening here?

Apparently — and according to quoted genius types in the article — this is actually a good thing. It shows "male parental care is important. It's important enough that it's actually shaped the physiology of men," said Peter Ellison, a professor of human evolutionary biology at Harvard and it demonstrates this is "part of the guy being invested in the marriage," said Carol Worthman; an anthropologist at Emory University.

Basically, we dudes with kids tone down the testosterone, which allows us to help reign in our base instincts, which, in turn, makes us actually want to play house with the wife and kiddos.

And what, exactly, are our base instincts? I'm generalizing here, but they usually include long weekends in Las Vegas with rented sports cars, large quantities of alcohol and women who insist on putting a heart instead of a dot over the "i" in Bambi.

What's most interesting about the study — to me, at least — is how close it actually hews to my life. While I haven't had my testosterone rated, I suppose it's lower than it was in my pre-kids, pre-wife days. Not to say I'm completely over the Bambis of this world, but I am certainly over the idea of ever taking off in pursuit of one.

And that wasn't always the case.

I have a problem with honesty, as in I can't help but to be honest, I'm not a hold-back kind of guy. And there were times in my relationship with my wife where I would actually say, out loud, that I wish I could be two people with one brain.

I would say, "good Jeff" wants to hang here with her, while "not-so-good" Jeff wanted to learn how to ride a motorcycle and re-create, shot-for-shot, the Motley Crue "Girls, Girls, Girls" video. (Note: I'm stupid. These conversations with my wife didn't usually end well.)

But today? As Tommy Lee as my witness, I have no interest in "dancin' down the Sunset Strip" or breaking "those Frenchies" laws.

Sappiness aside, I love my kids, love my wife, and if it means my testosterone levels hover somewhere near the Mendoza line, so be it.

Teachers' union is not under fire

Tim Skubick authored an opinion in the Ann Arbor Journal (Sept. 2, 2011) wrongfully and irresponsibly implying that Republicans have "pick(ed) a fight" with the Michigan teachers' union, known commonly as the MEA, or Michigan Education Association.

Skubick based his claim on enactment of a so-called "right-to-work" bill and concluded by saying: "Let the war begin." Skubick is wrong because enactment of a bill — or even signing it into law — is not picking a fight. In Michigan, legislation is created by representatives who are freely chosen by the people in a popular vote.

The people also vote for a governor, and if the governor signs the legislation, it becomes what is commonly known as "law."

This process is not a "fight" and it is divisive and inflammatory for a columnist of Skubick's skill and expertise to characterize Michigan's law-making process as such.

Instead, the people should be informed that this process is called democracy, and despite what Skubick claims, this is the means by which free people in Michigan govern themselves.

Enactment of the Michigan "right to teach" law is no more of a fight with the MEA than other civil rights laws because teachers who are otherwise qualified for employment should not be discriminated against merely because of their free choice to remain independent of unions, or their free choice to withhold union dues from their own paycheck.

This civil freedom has a corollary in that the mere fact that a person is employed as a teacher does not rightfully provide unions with the power to forcibly extract dues payments. Therefore, dues payments and union associations must be voluntary and representatives of the people of Michigan created legislation to provide that civil freedom for all teachers.

Whether teachers' freedom has a financial impact on unions or other special interest groups should be of no concern to people of Michigan, because the principle of freedom is more important than the financial status of unions. Therefore Skubick's column is wrong, because MEA is not under fire. Rather, the people of Michigan have freed teachers to make their own choice.

However, Skubick's column is irresponsible because, once published and read, he cannot reverse wrongful damages that arise when thousands of people are misinformed, divided and inflamed by his rhetoric.

People would be wise to consider an alternative opinion regarding Skubick's mischaracterization of Michigan's governor, as well.

I personally heard Snyder claim that he wanted to fix Michigan and that he wanted to change political culture. He characterized — and rightly so — political culture as essentially divisive and inflammatory.

I inferred that, in order for Michigan to successfully progress forward into the future, we must share sacrifice and we must stop fighting between ourselves.

Skubick's column propounds just the opposite. I think he should consider another approach more worthy of his talent — perhaps one that seeks first to understand, to tolerate, to favor hope and to progress forward with optimism, truth and freedom.

Cracks showing in GOP's grip

From little fissures, big cracks can grow. That might not be a law of physics, but it is one of politics.

Ask former Govs. Milliken, Blanchard and Granholm. Each had their challenges dealing with legislative leaders from their own parties. It kept them awake at night trying to figure out how to deal with people who were supposed to be on their side, but weren't part of the time.

Welcome to the club, Gov. Rick Snyder.

For months, the new governor and his two GOP leaders have been rollin' along, singin' a song as he and his self-described "legislative partners" racked up one win after another.

Look closely at the crack.

Last week, it was chronicled in this space the story of the GOP speaker of the House, Rep. Jase Bolger, who didn't much care for key elements in the governor's scheme to right-size Michigan's waistline and lifeline.

Now, entering stage right, is Sen. Randy Richardville, the powerful GOP leader of the state Senate. Two weeks ago, he broke with his boss, the governor, by surprisingly embracing right-to-work for administration's top jobs recruitment man, Mike Finney, was on the verge of losing the $20 million contract. Imagine the senator's angst when he discovered that the wrong strategy was applied by the Michigan Economic Development Corp.

Instead of plopping the state's best offer on the table from the get-go, which is the way Hollywood likes to work, the senator contends, the MEDC took the traditional route of low-balling the state's offer on two occasions.

That resulted in the producers saying: "Well, I guess that is your last best offer. We'll go someplace else."

The GOP senator was burned by the governor's team. Without blasting the governor, Mr. Richardville laments, "We actually forced them to negotiate with other states."

recruitment man, Mike Finney, was on the verge of losing the $20 million contract. Imagine the senator's angst when he discovered that the wrong strategy was applied by the Michigan Economic Development Corp.

Instead of plopping the state's best offer on the table from the get-go, which is the way Hollywood likes to work, the senator contends, the MEDC took the traditional route of low-balling the state's offer on two occasions.

That resulted in the producers saying: "Well, I guess that is your last best offer. We'll go someplace else."

The GOP senator was burned by the governor's team. Without blasting the governor, Mr. Richardville laments, "We actually forced them to negotiate with other states."

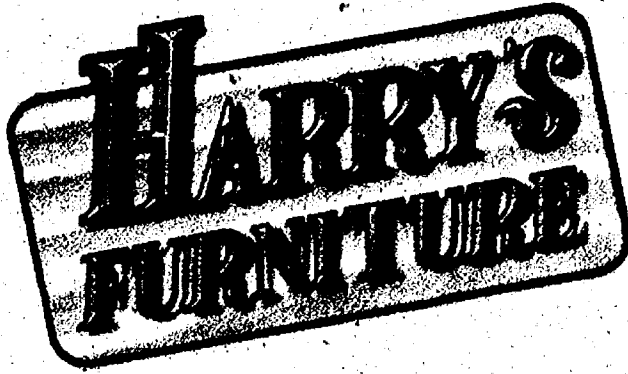

Bye-bye, Disney and Marvel films.

Law enforcement has remained consistent despite growth of medical marijuana dispensaries

By Austen Smith
Heritage Media

Steve Hiller's job at the Washtenaw County's Prosecutor's Office is to evaluate cases brought forth by law enforcement, determine whether criminal charges can be brought and then see it through the courts.

That job hasn't changed since Michigan voters approved the 2008 Medical Marijuana Act allowing for medicinal use of the drug for qualified patients.

Despite the growing network of medical marijuana dispensaries in Washtenaw County, Hiller said he hasn't noticed a trend upward or downward for marijuana-related cases and, for the most part, he sees law enforcement evaluating arrests on a case-by-case basis like they have always done.

"I don't know that there is a trend or any kind of large difference between what we were seeing before, what we're now seeing after the act was approved in 2008," said Hiller, an assistant prosecuting attorney.

"And I don't see any kind of changes since the McQueen decision."

The Court of Appeals ruling in State of Michigan vs. Brandon McQueen and Matthew Taylor, owners of Compassionate Apothecary, has disrupted the landscape for medical marijuana cooperatives by effectively outlawing patient-to-patient sales, of medical marijuana. The Mount Pleasant dispensary is now closed as the court ruled that McQueen and Taylor were operating outside of the boundaries of the Michigan Medical Marijuana Act and were in violation of the state's Public Health Code.

Hiller said they, like everybody else, are going to be monitoring the progression of various court cases that will hopefully better define a statute that, he says, "... you could drive trucks through."

"It's a confusing statute," said Hiller. "I don't know whether it was written to be confusing, but if that is the case than they did an excellent job of it."

Hiller expects the Michigan Supreme Court to uphold the Court of Appeals ruling. He said the court issued a measured and well-reasoned opinion.

While raids on two Ann Arbor dispensaries happened just a few days after the Aug. 23 Court of Appeals decision was issued, Lt. Wynonia Sturdivant from the Livingston and Washtenaw Narcotics Enforcement Team, or LAWNET, said those actions were not in any way connected to the court ruling.

As with all cases involving the hazy guidelines between the legal, medical use of marijuana and the abuse of the 2008 Michigan Medical Marijuana Act, Sturdivant said every case is based on investigation and taken one at a time.

"Those were cases that were initiated weeks prior to that Court of Appeals ruling," Sturdivant said. "I can tell you that the dispensaries operated outside the guidelines of the state law selling their product, and on that avenue it was addressed."

There have been no raids conducted since.

Sturdivant echoed Hiller's comments that in Washtenaw County, at least, she hasn't noticed an uptick in marijuana-related arrests despite the explosion of dispensaries throughout the state.

Statewide numbers, however, do indicate an upward trend from 2008 to 2009. After the Michigan Medical Marijuana Act was passed, there were approximately 1,000 more marijuana-related arrests in Michigan, according to statistics from the FBI.

But Sturdivant is quick to point out that LAWNET has not dedicated any more resources toward monitoring the growing medical marijuana culture and those who abuse the Medical Marijuana Act. "We still address narcotics in all areas whether being street sales or whatever," she said. "It's not like as if the focus has changed or shifted."

Michael Komorn, a Southfield attorney and board member of the Michigan Medical Marijuana Association, says there are other concerns proponents of the Medical Marijuana Act have with law enforcement not the least of which being some police agencies attempting to enforce federal law. The use of any marijuana is still illegal, according to the federal government, and continues to be listed as a Schedule I drug, according to the Drug Enforcement Agency. "It amazes me about the judges and police officers that think they're enforcing federal law. That's not the case," Komorn said. "They are sworn to uphold state law, and they cannot waiver by their own personal or philosophical beliefs as to which one they're going to enforce. That's not what this law was designed for, that's not what they took an oath to do."

"Those things go on all the time."

In an attempt to educate, Komorn said those in the medical marijuana community have been reaching out to law enforcement rather than protesting. And what gets lost in the legal shuffle is the fact that this mechanism that allows qualified patients to ease pain and suffering is a basic human rights issue, not a legal issue, said Komorn.

"I can tell you that the medical marijuana community has been trying to show that this actually works," he said. "The challenges for cultivators, the challenges for patients, the various methods of ingestion, the forms of ingestion and things like that."

"There has been a tremendous effort, but a lot of it falls on deaf ears, and much of the approach by the state has been to not be responsive."

Four selected for Willard H. Johnson scholarships

Four $2,500 awards were presented to the recipients of the Willard H. Johnson Scholarships, who were selected based on their community/volunteer involvement, proven leadership abilities, and academic accomplishments.

The Willard H. Johnson Scholarships were first presented in 1999, the year after Johnson retired from Chelsea Community Hospital. To be eligible for application, students must be dependents of hospital employees, volunteers, or medical staff and have a 3.0 Grade Point Average or higher.

This year's scholarships were awarded to four recipients: Brandy Alexander-Bui, Brandon Heselichwerdt, Todd Kruse and Emily Shrodbree.

Alexander-Bui, daughter of Thuy Bui, CCH human resources specialist, will be graduating Magna Cum Laude with a 3.88 GPA from CHS. She'll be attending Grand Valley State Honors College (nursing program).

She's a recipient of the GVSU Award of Excellence, GVSU Faculty Award, and the Thompson Working Family Scholarship. She hopes to become a NP Nurse Anesthetist, or PA. In the future, she hopes to work with disaster relief organizations to help those devastated by natural and man-made disasters.

Brandy plays the viola and is very active in her school's orchestra and ensembles. In her sophomore year, she toured Europe with Blue Lake International Orchestra. She has performed with the Michigan Youth Arts Festival's All-State Honors Orchestra, U of M Youth Symphony Orchestra, and Jackson Youth Symphony Orchestra.

She's very active with Chelsea House Orchestra and has performed at various cultural festivals throughout the U.S. She also performs at various CCH's functions including Breakfast with Santa, Service Awards Banquet, and the Medical Staff Dinner.

Brandy is active on the varsity tennis team and works part time to fund her education. She's active in NHS and volunteers at the Chelsea Center of the Arts and helps coach young tennis players during summer camps.

Heselichwerdt, son of Jodie, billing analyst in the CCH Business Office, and Todd, route manager for BWP, is currently attending Jackson Community College and after receiving his associate's degree as a radiographic technologist, he plans to work full time while working on his bachelor program in radiography. He hopes to "travel to a third world country to help those who are less fortunate" in the future.

Brandon is on the dean's list and is a member of Phi Theta Kappa and a student ambassador. He's also on the National Technical Honor Society and has received the Michigan CEC "Yes I Can" Award, the Sigmoid Scholarship, and the MCEC Scholarship.

While in high school, Brandon was active in wrestling, student council (SADD program), and cross country. Currently, he volunteers as an assistant wrestling coach for the middle school. He's a youth leader in his church and teaches first, second, and third grade church master club. He also works part time to fund his education.

Kruse, son of Johanna, registered nurse at the CCH Infusion Center, and Daniel, engineer for Ford Motor Co., has completed his first year at Michigan State and is pursuing a major in kinesiology (on a pre-med track) with a 3.5 GPA.

His ultimate goal is to become a sports medicine doctor or orthopedic surgeon. He's currently a research assistant for MSU Kinesiology Dept and hopes to become even more involved in that type of research.

Todd is the recipient of the 2010-2011 William Ford Jr. Scholarship and the MHSAA Athlete Award in 2009. He also received the Boy Scout Troop 476 Scholarship in 2009.

Upcoming Mom-to-Mom sale holds big deals

By Crystal Hayduk
Special Writer

As the mom of two young growing boys, Chelsea resident Lori Campbell knows the value of a great bargain. Campbell has been shopping the Mom-To-Mom sale, sponsored by the Chelsea Mothers of Preschoolers group, for the last four years.

Campbell's favorite purchase was a 50-cent pair of "adorable brown bear slippers" for her oldest son when he was 1 year old.

"He was completely crazy for them, and he wore them every day," she said.

The fall Chelsea MOPS Mom-To-Mom sale will be 9 a.m. to noon Oct. 22 in the fellowship hall of the First United Methodist Church, 128 Park St.

According to event coordinator Kathryn Hackett, the indoor rummage sale of gently-used clothing, toys and equipment targets children up to about age 5; although, there is usually some representation of items for older children as well. Maternity clothes are also sold at the Mom-To-Mom sale.

Hackett said big items such as strollers and cribs will be sold in the "large item room." If there is available space, vendors of new items who sell things that are "kid-related" will also be allowed to rent a table.

The sale helps families in three ways: to provide bargains for families who love and need them, to help families make some cash from items they no longer need and to raise funds for the MOPS group. Sellers rent tables and adult shoppers pay $1 to be admitted to the sale. Proceeds from table rentals and admissions fund scholarships for MOPS moms who cannot afford the annual dues of about $84.

"It's a wonderful sense of community among young families," Campbell said.

"Moms of older kids can clean out their closets to make room for larger sizes; moms of younger kids score some great deals. Kids grow so fast that many clothes are outgrown before they show signs of wear, and look brand new. Why pay a fortune at the mall when you can help another mom, keep it in the community and get something that looks fresh off the rack?"

Campbell said the sale is also an opportunity to teach kids about money and how to stretch a dollar.

"My youngest son went to the last sale with 50 cents and came out with a new toy car," Campbell estimates the same car would have been $5 at the store.

Hackett said that the sale has historically been quite popular and very successful for the group.

Those interested in selling their goods can either download a form at www.chelseamops.org/events/mom2momsales/ or email Kathryn Hackett at m2msale@chelseamops.org.

As a savvy and experienced shopper, Campbell offered these tips: if you have a particular need that you are shopping for, arrive early; and if you are looking for ultra-inexpensive, come near the end when moms may be more willing to slash prices to avoid taking items home.

Chelsea resident Carly Ferry, a 13-year-old eighth grader, shot her first deer at a youth hunt Sept. 25. Carly caught the deer with her dad.

High school hosts marching band exhibition

The Chelsea High School Football stadium came alive with music last Wednesday as 11 local high school marching bands took to the field for the fourth annual Chelsea High School Marching Band Exhibition.

The bands performed four songs each during their 15-minute allotment at the event. The Chelsea High School Marching band, along with Dexter, Saline, Manchester, Stockbridge, Williamston, Jackson NW, Concord, Tecumseh, Quincy and Grass Lake received adjudications for their performances.

The Beach Middle School marching band inaugurated the Jerry Neihaus Field with our country's national anthem.

The Eastern Michigan Marching Eagles closed the show as their high-energy green and white uniformed members took over the field for a show-stopping set, including, a very patriotic rendition of "America the Beautiful."

"This was a great opportunity for the community," Rick Catherman, Chelsea High School Band director stated. "(Usually) they just see marching bands perform at Friday night football games."

This family friendly event also allowed the various high school bands to see what other local high school bands are doing. It's entertaining to watch all the various themes, plumes, hats and colors marching across the field. The various programs were exciting and fun to watch and the kids all performed well.

Rick Catherman also said that 100 parent volunteers helped put the competition together.

"I did this because I want to support ... a phenomenal band program," parent Joel Craig of Chelsea said. "It is truly an awesome program."

The 144 member pride of Chelsea Marching Band's program commenced to a mixed medley from the '60s rock group The Beatles.

Mellophone soloist, Bourke Lodewyk began the second song "Hey Jude/Yellow Submarine" and band members crossed the field in formation ending in a "yellow" submarine, complete with colorful fish. Their classical rendition of "Let it Be" and "Eleanor Rigby" completed their set.

Saline's band marched a tribute to superheroes, from DC Comics' Superman to Disney's "The Incredibles."

Dexter's Band boogeyed to a disco beat and dropped their instruments mid-song and did the hustle right on the field. They ended their time on the field with the "YMCA."

A unique play list featuring one of the smaller bands to participate, the Williamston Hornets, was literally for the birds.

Their 64-member team started their set with "Rockin Robin" and moved to the theme song for "Angry Birds," which included a gigantic slingshot flying various bird stuffed animals into the audience.

For those unable to make it to this year's event, it is generally is held the third Wednesday in September.

The Williamston Hornets 64-member band played a set that was "for the birds" with the theme song from the game "Angry Birds," complete with a giant slingshot, which they used to toss various bird stuffed animals into the audience.

FARMERS MARKET PROFILE

Greystone adds to artisan cheeses to local farmers market

By Krista Gjestland
Special Writer

Each vendor at the Chelsea Farmers Market adds something a little bit different. From handmade jewelry to locally farmed meat and poultry, the market doesn't lack variety.

Greystone Creamery adds artisan sheep and cow's milk cheeses to the market.

Owner Sally Hutchinson has raised sheep for the past 15 years, and in 2008 decided to switch from selling wool to cheeses, becoming the first licensed sheep dairy operation in the state.

"I was really fascinated by dairy sheep and the process of milking them to make cheese," Hutchinson said.

So she enrolled in the University of Vermont's Vermont Institute for artisan cheese. Hutchinson has completed the basic and advanced programs, and continues to go back for special trainings.

Now Greystone Creamery makes several cheeses, from both sheep and cow milks.

Hutchinson purchases cows' milk from a local dairy farmer to make feta, ricotta, plain and flavored cream cheese, Gouda and Chelsea Cam (a camembert-style cheese).

With her sheeps' milk, she creates cream cheese, ricotta, Manchel (a Spanish-style of cheese called Manchego), farmer's cheese and butterput (a French-Pyrenees styled cheese).

Although raw sheeps' milk is slightly higher than cows' milk in calories, Hutchinson says there are a lot of health benefits to sheeps' milk cheese.

"Nutritionally, sheeps'

milk has different fats, which contribute less [than cows' milk] to the development of cholesterol," she said. "It's also higher in vitamin and protein."

After the work of caring for her sheep and making the cheese became too much, Hutchinson sold her animals to another sheep dairy in Charlotte, with the understanding that they would sell her the milk she needs. "It just became too much work," she said.

Making cheese is a process that can take as long as four months for aged cheeses.

Hutchinson's aged cheeses, such as Gouda and Chelsea Cam, are made from raw, unpasteurized milk. Because they are aged, the harmful bacteria die before consumption.

"Pasteurization also kills some of the good bacteria," Hutchinson said.

Many of the aged cheeses have natural flavors from the animal that pasteurization would eliminate.

"It's always best to have what the animal chooses," Hutchinson said.

For her non-aged cheeses, like cream cheese and ricotta, Hutchinson does use a pasteurization process.

Looking toward the future, Hutchinson hopes to start using their whey, a byproduct of the cheese-making process, in other products. Right now, they are developing a whey-based curry, yam and parsnip soup.

"It's very creamy," she said. "You'd swear it was made with milk or cream, but it's not."

Hutchinson says she enjoys her time at the Chelsea Farmers Market.

"I love people," she said. "It's fun to come to the market and talk about cheese.

Sally Hutchinson stands in her booth at the Chelsea Farmers Market earlier this year.

It's wonderful to have people come up and say they love my cheese."

Greystone Creamery sells their cheese at the market from 8 a.m. to noon every Saturday. They also sell Friday afternoons at the Dearborn Farmers Market and through Lunasa.us, an online farmers market cooperative. Greystone Creamery also sells their cheese commercially to local restaurants including Grange in Ann Arbor and The Common Grill in Chelsea.

Renowned quilter to hold book signing

By Elaine Owsley
Special Writer

Once upon a time, in Denmark, a little girl named Lone, pronounced Low-nee, watched longingly as her mother, an accomplished seamstress, worked with her sewing machine. But Lone didn't want to make clothes; she wanted to draw pictures with thread on fabric, fanciful fairy tale creations.

Mother said, no, fabric was expensive and pencils and paper were the tools to use. So Lone drew and drew, on paper and on the walls with permanent marker when she ran out of that.

Eventually, grown up, Lone used her drawing skills as a graphic artist, with her own company. She also painted portraits. When she met and married her husband, American Jim Minkinen, and moved to the United States, she continued painting, and one of her clients, a quilter, told her about her hobby. Lone had to find out more about this and eventually bought her first sewing machine.

Lone and the family, which besides husband Jim, now includes daughter, Amanda and son, Jeffrey, two dogs and a cat, live in Webster Township which they chose because of the Dexter Schools.

"We haven't been disappointed in them, the teachers are really good and the children like to go to school," Lone said.

In the summer, Lone and the children go back to Denmark, to a cottage on a lake, where she renews her inspiration in the forest, and on the water's edge, with the animals of the woods and fields. This and love of nature, and still of the fanciful, are transformed into drawings which become patterns for quilting, combining both of her passions.

What Lone never expected, and what still amazes her, is that all the designs — animals, sea creatures, plants, and other items, which were her delight as a child, have been collected in her first book "Quilting Designs from Nature" and published by the well-known and respected publishing firm American Quilter's Society late this summer. She confesses that drawings of sheep started the whole thing.

On Oct. 16, Lone will be at the Dexter Cider Mill to sign her book and on Nov. 19, she will be at the Ann Arbor Sewing Center on Jackson Road, formerly Viking. Quilters will be charmed and challenged by her one-line quilting designs and find they transfer easily to their own projects. Lone continues to create — her children love the sound of the sewing machine, which has been such a part of their lives — much as that sound was part of little Lone's in Denmark.

'How the Great Lakes move'

The Chelsea District Library and the Ann Arbor Hands-On Museum for Sept. 17 workshop to teach kids how water flows from different bodies of water using the Great Lakes as an example. Staff from the museum showed kids how the water goes all the way to the oceans by setting up aluminum pans of varying sizes at varying heights to represent both elevation and the size of the body of water.

Artists show their creativity at Art-A-Licious

By Amy Bell
Heritage Media

When Kelsey Keyes was a young girl, she would play with her great-grandmother's necklace that her mother had on display on a dresser at home. Although she knew she wasn't supposed to play with it, she would anyway and at times would break it and have to fix it before her mother found out.

Little did she know at that young age that she would be creating her own jewelry as an adult.

Keyes was among five artists who made their way to Adrian Sept. 16 and 17 for Art-A-Licious, an event celebrating the arts in Adrian.

To this day, her mother still doesn't know about the necklace.

"I don't feel like telling her yet," she said.

Keyes (pronounced Kies), owner of The Beaded Iris, said she has been participating in Art-

Barbara Thomas-Yerace was one of the Saline artists at Art-A-Licious, which took place Sept. 16 and 17 in downtown Adrian.

A-Licious since it first started. Usually she hasn't done as well on Friday night. However, this year was different.

"This year, I've done well both days," she said.

Keyes also makes beaded and alternative rooster feather hair extensions, which were very popular this year. In fact, she sold so many that she had to keep remaking them.

"I didn't expect it to be as popular as it has at this show," she said. "It's been amazing."

Another artist, Amara Karapas of Saline, is a junior at Adrian College majoring in sculpture.

"I like different varieties you can do with it," she said, adding that she likes to work "big" by making large-scale sculptures such as benches.

She also repurposes furniture, works with ceramics and printmaking.

Ideally, when she graduates, she would like to be a working artist. However, she is also pursuing a degree in teaching in case that doesn't work out.

Karapas said she was doing pretty well at the show.

"It's great experience," she said.

Barbara Thomas-Yerace, a glassblower from Saline and graduate of Carnegie Mellon University in Pittsburgh, Pa., creates her art at a studio in Saline, and also teaches at Two Twelve Arts Center and at Water Street Glassworks in Benton Harbor.

Thomas-Yerace said working with glass involves maintaining the temperature, making sure it doesn't get too hot where it drips or too cold, where it breaks.

"What makes a good glassblower is doing it over and over and over again," she said.

Another Saline artist, Ginger Kubish, was exhibiting her photographs.

Kubish, who works at the University of Michigan, takes part in photography as a hobby and uses it as a form of stress relief.

She has a background in science, including a bachelor's of science degree in microbiology.

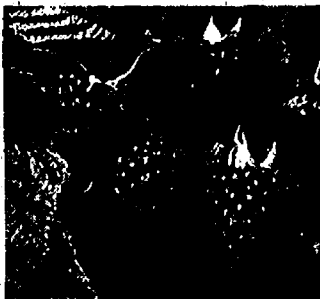

Recently, she began taking photos with an industrial theme and is now trying to find a way to blend the two together.

For more information about Kubish, visit gingerkubish.com.

Michigan Cyber Summit

Conference to focus on all areas of online security

By Sean Dalton
Heritage Media

The Michigan Cyber Summit 2011 will coincide with October as National Cyber Security Awareness Month at Eastern Michigan University's Marriot Eagle Crest Hotel and Conference Center.

Gov. Rick Snyder will host the day-long Oct. 7 event, which is broken up into five tracks, or sessions, dealing with five areas: business, education, families, government and law enforcement. The latter of which will be closed to the public and the press at the order of the Federal Bureau of Investigations and other federal law enforcement agencies.

County Commissioner Kristin Judge co-founded the Washtenaw County Cyber Citizenship Coalition, oftentimes called WC4, in 2009 to raise awareness within the communities of Washtenaw County of how society at all levels can cope with the still-new technological landscape of pervasive telecommunications technologies and the exploding social media environment, among other issues.

WC4 has worked in tandem with the National Initiative for Cyber Education and the National Cyber Security Alliance since its inception, but Judge says that the Washtenaw County Sheriff's-led WC4-committee's stature is greatly elevated by this event.

Judge, also co-chair of the summit, said that this is an opportunity for Washtenaw County to garner state and federal level recognition for leading the pack when it comes to Internet safety and security.

"They wanted to highlight what we're doing with the coalition in Washtenaw - this summit is usually held in Lansing," she said. "The Department of Homeland Security is using what we're doing in the county as a model for what they'll do nationally."

WC4 has worked in tandem with the National Initiative for Cyber Education and the National Cyber Security Alliance since its inception, but Judge says that the Washtenaw County Sheriff's-led WC4 committee's stature is greatly elevated by this event.

Earlier this year, WC4 and its partners, including representatives from AT&T and Google, met with 430 students in Washtenaw school districts to share information on everything from the basics, such as how to be safe online, to more advanced topics like potential careers in the cyber security job sector.

Judge's involvement in cyber security matters began when several incidents of cyber stalking of children in her district caught her attention.

"Three high school students in Saline were affected by online predators in one year, and I happened to be at a national conference sitting next to a DHS official," Judge said. "I let them know about what was going on in my district and they offered to send out speakers to high school families and businesses in the area."

WC4 operates on donations of resources and public/private partnerships, as it has with AT&T and Google, but the committee has been applying for federal grant dollars in an effort to ramp up its efforts, which Judge says should be aided by the summit landing in the county next week.

In addition to Snyder and Judge, Department of Homeland Security Secretary Janet Napolitano, White House Cyber Security Coordinator Howard Schmidt and Congressman John Dingell will be in attendance.

County health organization still looking to restructure

By Sean Dalton
Heritage Media

Washtenaw County Health Organization officials are still negotiating the details of restructuring plans pitched to the county board of commissioners this past summer. The WCHO is the county's acting community mental health service program under the state mental health code, as well as a provider of service to the developmentally disabled and substance abusers.

existing within the framework of the county's budget.

"For the first 11 years of its existence, the organization itself had no employees," Barrie explained. "Under the Urban Cooperation Act our employees should be transferred over to (the WCHO), as long as none of the employees' rights and benefits and status are changed by that transfer."

WCHO currently operates under a $112 million yearly budget, within which the county funds the salaries and benefits of those employees, including Barrie.

"I love that (WCHO), it does wonderful things for those with mental and physical illnesses in the county," said District 1 County Commissioner Rob Turner, who last month outlined the benefits of spinning the WCHO and its employees off of the county payroll.

The move is part of a broader effort by county officials to cut $17 million from the county budget over the next couple of years.

Turner said he would like to see similar restructuring of other programs and departments, such as Head Start and Early Childhood Development, which would be picked up by the Washtenaw Intermediate School District.

Under those circumstances, these operations would be able to qualify for more federal dollars than what the county can provide in the long term, meaning that the move doesn't just save the county money, but improves service volume and quality.

"We've learned that we can spin them off outside the county and that they will be more open to federal funding and be able to grow more," Turner said. In WCHO's case, the current structure could also open the county up to potential liability from a legal perspective, as well as a financial one. The fact that the WCHO staff is technically contracted from the county carries a string of liability across agency lines that would be severed under the new autonomous structure.

Barrie said that he would also be discussing the changes to how Medicaid funding would funnel into WCHO in exchange for the provision of services to Medicaid recipient patients.

Barrie agreed with Turner's promise of more overall funding in the WCHO budget after the change is made early winter of this year.

"More funding is possible in the sense that our funding comes to us through certain legislative appropriations," he said. "The work that we do with (U of M) has allowed us to be successful in winning time limited grants for improving care under various arrangements with the university that are related to Medicaid. "The way we're funded is we put in some money, the university puts in some money and the state puts in some federal dollars, so this could enhance our ability to continue to build on that relationship that we've built in acquiring those kinds of funds under the Medicaid match arrangement."

In the meantime, WCHO administrative staff is crossing their fingers hoping that more appropriations budget cuts won't happen at the state level.

Judge resigns as Washtenaw County commissioner

Washtenaw County Commissioner, Kristin Judge, will resign her seat effective Oct. 9.

This decision comes after Judge accepted a position with the Multi-State Information Sharing and Analysis Center.

The MS-ISAC is a division of the national not-for-profit Center for Internet Security, headquartered in Upstate New York and is designated by the U.S. Department of Homeland Security as the focal point for cyber threat prevention, protection, response and recovery for the nation's state, local, territorial and tribal governments.

The mission of CIS is to enhance the cyber security readiness and response of public and private sector entities, with a commitment to excellence through collaboration.

CIS comprises three divisions: Security Benchmarks, Multi-State Information Sharing and Analysis Center and Cybersecurity Workforce Development. "My new position will focus on outreach efforts and will involve working with local governments across the nation. In my current role as county commissioner, I have been involved in cyber security initiatives at the local, state and federal level. To avoid an appearance of conflict between my role as commissioner and my new position, it is best served that I resign from elected office before beginning work with local governments across the country," Judge said.

"Working with the Washtenaw County Board, staff and residents has truly been an honor, and I have enjoyed every minute. It is with a heavy heart that I leave the position of County Commissioner, but I am pleased to continue public service in my new role."

By state law, the board will have 30 days from the date of resignation to appoint a replacement.

WASHTENAW COUNTY COURT BRIEFS

Two go to prison for murder over marijuana

The last two defendants in the murder of an Ypsilanti man in 2010 over marijuana received long prison terms.

James Daniel Lester, 22, and Keywone Jarvis Walker, 23, were given sentences of up to 30 years for armed robbery.

A third man, Willie Walker, 30, was sentenced from 33 to 50 years for second-degree homicide and conspiracy in July in the death of James Hoover Nov. 6, 2010.

According to testimony in Lester's and Keywon Walker's respective preliminary hearings, Hoover took a call from Lester at his Schooner's Cove apartment, with Lester saying he wanted to buy some marijuana. Lester and Willie Walker entered the apartment through a rear sliding door.

Hoover and his girlfriend were at the apartment on a loveseat. Lester introduced Willie Walker as "Wayne."

When Lester asked Hoover about the pot, Hoover stood up and produced a bag. Willie Walker then pulled out a gun and aimed it at Hoover's chest. According to Hoover's girlfriend, Walker then asked Hoover where the rest was.

Hoover's last words were "For real, dawg?" directed at Lester. Willie Walker then shot Hoover through the heart.

A coroner's report stated Hoover died of blood loss.

The girlfriend testified that Hoover fell to the floor and was hidden from her view except for his legs. She said Lester bent over Hoover, but she could see what he did, if anything.

Lester took the woman's cell phone, but dropped it.

Keywon Walker testified that he wanted some marijuana and Lester said he knew where they could get some. Keywon Walker drove the other two men to Schooner's Cove apartments, where the three men agreed they would rob Hoover.

Moss found guilty of sexual assault charges

James Darrin Moss, 41, of Ypsilanti was found guilty Sept. 20 on three counts of criminal sexual conduct for force or coercion, one count of incapacitated and another for force or coercion. The charges stemmed from sexual assaults against Moss' girlfriend's daughter over a period from 2002 to 2007 in Ypsilanti Township. Prosecutors consolidated the charges. The third-degree counts carry a maximum penalty of 15 years.

Westlake man admits guilt in assault on former girlfriend

A Westlake man could be sentenced to up to 15 years for unlawful imprisonment of a Pittsfield Township woman in April.

Kwame Hampton, 29, pleaded guilty in front of Judge Donald Shelton to unlawful imprisonment, assault with a deadly weapon, domestic violence and felony possession of a weapon.

According to reports, Pittsfield Township Police responded to a report of an attempted kidnapping in the 3000 block of Hawks Avenue.

A 23-year-old woman made a call to 911 stating her ex-boyfriend had just attempted to kidnap her at gunpoint.

According to the victim, Hampton jumped out of a vehicle when the woman was leaving her residence. She tried to run back to her home, but he caught her and threatened her with a weapon. The victim was walking out of her residence when the suspect jumped out of a vehicle parked in the street.

The victim ran back toward her house, but Hampton was able to catch her, grab her and threatened her. He dragged her to his vehicle and threatened to shoot her if she tried to run away. Once in the vehicle Hampton displayed the firearm and was yelling at the victim, who told police she was in fear for her life. He then began driving away and when the vehicle came to a stop sign, the victim attempted to jump out. The suspect grabbed her and assaulted her until she was able to get away.

Hampton fled the area in his vehicle and the victim was able to call 911. A witness to the incident assisted the victim until police arrived. Hampton was later arrested in a wooded area behind a family member's house in Inkster. The case was presented to the Washtenaw County Prosecutor's Office and Kwame Hampton was charged with unlawful imprisonment, felonious assault.

According to the warrant, Hampton assaulted her, leaving her with a bloody, swollen lip, bruises and abrasions on her left shoulder and pain in head and left jaw.

According to the charges, the felony weapon charge carries a two-year term, which must be served consecutively with and before any of the other terms.

Hampton will be sentenced Dec. 13.

Artful flair describes a lot of what the R8 comes packed with

Audi R8 Spyder

Incomparable performance in a stylish package

By Mike Covello
 Journal Register News Service

Growing up in the '60s, Marvel Comic's Ironman helped me dream of donning a "suit" that allowed me to fly. Audi almost makes that possible with their R8 5.2 Spyder.

Actor Robert Downy Jr. makes Ironman's alterego, Tony Stark, look like a movie star playboy compared to the two dimensional character in the funny books.

In a similar vein, Audi's latest marvel, the R8 5.2 FSI Quattro MT6 (or R Tronic) Spyder makes its sibling, the TT look like... well, like the starter sportscar it is. I can't guarantee that strapping yourself into the luxurious R8 buckets will make you feel like a nearly mythical figure, but it could come close.

Audi put their R8 coup in Ironman, and the Spyder made its stylish public debut in Ironman 2. I spent my birthday week with a teal brown metallic R8 Spyder, and it was one of the best birthday presents ever. Yes, I did have to give it back.

I admit that the $650 optional color didn't initially appeal to me, but I grew to like it, and the majority of onlookers had raves about its "rich" hue.

That and the well-shaped-but-capacity-challenged front trunk were my only complaints. The car flat out amazes with its performance and downright livability. Everyone might be driving one of these if it weren't for the slight cost problem of its prohibitive cost.

The R8 coupe starts at $114,200 and comes with a 4.3-liter V8 that makes 430 hp, and 317 ft.-lbs. of torque. It can scoot to 60-mph in 4.4 seconds. If that seems too slow for your tastes, step up to the $149,000 5.2 coupe, which packs a 525-hp, V-10 powerplant and the 391 lbs.-ft. of torque to get you to that one-mile-a-minute mark in only 3.7 seconds.

The good news is that you pay no penalty in fuel economy.

Both vehicles are rated at 12/19 for the six-speed manual transmission and 13/19 for the R tronic automatic. A $3,000 gas-guzzler tax is a small price to pay for this supercar performance.

My tester started at $162,700 and rang in at $171,915 with the $3,500 enhanced leather package, the $1,640 for the piano black interior inlays, and the surprisingly-dramatic $875 illuminated door sills. I've seen this feature in over a dozen cars, but the artful flair employed turns this bright pair into a dramatic enhancement to your nighttime entry.

And artful flair also describes a lot of what the R8 comes packed with.

The LED headlights are a win. The way the instrument pod is hooded not only provides glare free viewing, but also makes the driver feel set off in his own special compartment. The fact that Audi scored its 10th 24 hours of Le Mans victory the week before I got this car helped add to the race-car feeling.

As you swing open the wide doors, the details like the "lightened" interior door handles invite you to get comfortable. It's a drop to the heated ten-way adjustable electric buckets, but the car envelops you like... well like Ironman's suite of armor, but with much more room and also space for a passenger.

If you haven't already done so, hold the button on the console and watch the top accomplish its ballet as it disappears neatly into its compartment. It's a bit slower than the A5 Cabriolet's top, but impressive nonetheless. Surprisingly, you have to insert a normal key into the conveniently place ignition switch, but the rumble from the V-10 that fills your ears more than compensates for the lack of pushbutton start.

I was fortunate to already be well acquainted with numerous Ferraris equipped with externally gated shifters, so I was able to get the hang of moving the just-the-right-height shift lever through the chrome slots.

I was captivated by the ease with which the car shifted and loved the metallic "click" sound it made as each rapid shift was completed.

The thrust the R8 10 generates had every passenger remarking on how they'd never been pushed so hard back into the seat. And then they all commented on how well the R8 rides and how even stuck behind a school bus, the R8 handled traffic duty like a pro.

Obviously this luxurious, high-performance Spyder is not for everyone.

But the ability to go back and forth between a rip-snorting track monster (the sport button transforms the handling and sharpens throttle response) and its excellence as an everyday driver make the R8 a marvelous choice.

The Chelsea volleyball team struggled in its first two games last Tuesday against Adrian. In fact, the Bulldogs lost the first two games before rallying to win the next three and the match for a dramatic SEC victory.

The Bulldogs' bad start on Tuesday was bad news for Milan on Thursday. Chelsea came out of the blocks focused and determined and swept the visiting Big Reds in a non-league game 25-13, 25-14 and 25-14.

Milan coach Hai Hoang knew his team was going up against a tough Chelsea club but he's starting to see improvement in the Big Reds.

"We are still tentative," he said. "This is a lot of these girls first time playing at this level and they have been improving during the season. I'm still trying to get that fire in them and fight hard from start to finish."

"I have seen improvement in each area. We are still trying to put it all together."

The Bulldogs clearly had it all together from the opening serve on Thursday.

With Bailey Darwin serving, the Bulldogs went on a nice run to open the first game. A spike by Tessa Elwart gave Chelsea an 8-1 lead. A nice block by Ashley Straub ended the run and gave Milan its second point.

An ace by Briana Carden and a spike by Riley Singleton gave the Bulldogs a 13-3 lead. Another hard hit by Straub cut the lead to 13-5, but the Bulldogs quickly pulled away. Spikes by Singleton, Megan Brockett and Katlyn Brosnan gave the home team a 19-6 lead.

Some strong play at the net by Milan's Corinna Schneider helped lead the Big Reds to a couple points.

But another big hit by Brosnan made it 21-9 and the Bulldogs cruised to a 25-13 win in the opening game.

A nice tip at the net by Darwin got the Bulldogs rolling in the second game.

Setting up for success

Senior Megan Brockett helps lead the CHS volleyball team

By Terry Jacoby
Heritage Media

Late in Thursday's sweep of Milan, Chelsea coach Laura Cleveland jumped out of her chair to make a point to her Bulldogs. The team was cruising to another easy win over a team they were clearly better than.

"They didn't dive for a ball," Cleveland said. "Cleveland wants her team focused at all times and doesn't want to see any bad habits creep in, no matter the score or opponent. Senior Megan Brockett took a few steps toward Cleveland, eyes - and ears - wide open. She didn't say anything back to her coach or her teammates. But she listened and then responded with a spike, helping make the point and a point that she leads by example.

While Brockett said she was surprised to land on the homecoming court, she is not surprised with how well the Bulldogs have come along this season on the volleyball court. Chelsea is 15-9-3 overall and the team continues to improve.

"The goal for this team is to head into districts at our peak, getting our passes up and our serves in and get all the points we can," Brockett said. "Our season is going really well. All the girls get along really well. We are a close team and so far it's been really good."

Christmas is here for hunters

Little kids and adults alike count down the days to Christmas with eager anticipation. Kids are hoping to sneak a peek of Santa coming down the chimney.

I, however, along with about 750,000 other Michigan hunters can't wait for the beginning of the bow hunting season starting Oct. 1.

We're not looking for Santa, but rather that monster buck that we dream about sneaking through the swamp.

We've been scouting through the woods since the summer, shooting our bows and sharpening our broad heads with the hopes of harvesting one of many whitetail deer that populate our state.

Some people would argue we have an over population of deer in southeastern Michigan and I would agree. I haven't heard too many stories of success on

The wind does matter when it comes to bow hunting because getting close to deer is critically important to success.

Tyler Ball, Manchester

Tyler Ball scored two second-half goals to help lead the Manchester soccer team to a 5-2 win last week over Hanover-Horton.

Justin Barnes, Saline

Saline's Justin Barnes (No. 34) scored a trio of one-yard touchdown runs in a 35-28 loss to Monroe Friday.

Sam Gough, Dexter

Dexter freshman Sam Gough finished in first place at No. 2 singles winning all three matches as he helped lead the Dreads to a second-place finish at the Dexter quad meet last Saturday.

Micayla Zynda, Chelsea

Chelsea equestrian MVP Micayla Zynda had quite the day as she helped lead the Bulldogs to a first place at districts. For the two day meet, Zynda participated in 15 classes and won 11 first places and four second places.

Getting his kicks

Former Gabriel Richard kicker Mike Yocum returned to Ann Arbor recently with the EMU football team.

Richard's Yocum returns to Ann Arbor in a big house way

By Mike Larson
A2 Journal

Mike Yocum is used to playing football in Ann Arbor.

However, the last time he played in the city, it was unlike ever before.

Yocum, a 2009 graduate of Father Gabriel Richard High School, played dozens of football games at the school's field near Domino Farms.

However, when the Eastern Michigan redshirt freshman place kicker played his last game in Ann Arbor on Sept. 17, he found himself kicking off in front of a much larger crowd than he ever saw at Gabriel Richard.

In fact, he was kicking off in front of the largest group of people watching football in one place in the entire nation.

Yocum, of course, was in the Big House, leading his Eagles against the Michigan Wolverines.

Michigan won the game 31-3, but Yocum played a significant role, kicking off every single time for Eastern.

"I've been to the Big House before," he said. "But playing there is a completely different story. It's really amazing to play in front of that many people." When the game started, Yocum, wearing No. 66, trotted out to where the ball was feed up, and gave it a big boot. "It felt good to get a hold of it," he said. "It's a thrill to be the one who kind of starts the game off." Yocum was a kicker for the Fighting Irish back in his high school days, but he was also one of the team's best receivers.

In fact, in his senior year, Yocum set school records for catches (42) and receiving yards (602).

"It's kind of different just focusing on one thing," Yocum said. "You get used to playing a few different positions, but once you get to college, you only do one. So it's kind of strange."

Yocum, who is from Ann Arbor, walked on to the Eastern team last season and practiced with the squad, however he did not see any game action in 2010.

Now, he is the squad's starting kicker.

The Eagles, who have struggled over the last several seasons, seem to be on the rebound, and Yocum is along for the ride.

EMU is 3-2 on the season with its only two losses coming to Big Ten teams (Michigan and Penn State).

The Eagles won their first Mid-American Conference game on Saturday with a 31-23 win at Akron.

The team will be back in action on Saturday when it hosts Toledo.

Dominating

The Michigan football team was completely dominant against Minnesota in the first quarter of play. By the end of the first quarter, the Wolverines amassed 223 yards of total offense, while the Golden Gophers mustered just four.

Arm strength

Michigan's third touchdown came in the second quarter and had running back Vincent Smith throwing to a wide open Drew Dileo. It was the first time since 2007 where a non-quarterback threw for a Michigan touchdown.

The last time it happened, Adrian Arrington found Mario Manningham for a game-winning touchdown against Illinois.

After Michigan's fourth touchdown (which came on a 30-yard pass from Robinson to Smith), Smith got a neat distinction. At that point, he had run for thrown for and caught a touchdown in the same game.

Devin watch

Inkster graduate Devin Gardner saw a few snaps at quarterback in the first half, but took over for good with about six minutes left in the third quarter. It was the most playing time he has seen all season.

Worth noting

Michigan used four running backs in the game as Smith, Michael Shaw, Fitzgerald Toussaint and freshman Thomas Rawls (Flint Northern) got in the game for his first snaps of the season.

Michigan won 58-0 in the Wolverines' first shutout since they blanked Notre Dame in 2007.

Michigan finished the game with 580 yards of total offense, while Minnesota had just 177.

Monroe hosts Pioneer in an SEC showdown

By Mike Larson
A2 Journal

The high school football playoffs are still a few weeks away, but on Friday, there will be a very playoff-like atmosphere in Monroe.

After being akin to a doormat in the Southeastern Conference Red for the past few seasons, the Monroe Trojans are the surprise of the season.

After six games, the team is undefeated, including a 3-0 mark in the conference.

"They've played really well this season," Skyline head coach Rod Jones said of Monroe after his team fell to the Trojans, 39-35. "They've got great athletes and they are really being coached well."

In addition to Skyline, the Trojans also have SEC wins over Huron and Saline.

On Friday though, the team might just be playing for the league title.

Tomorrow, the Trojans will host Pioneer who is also at the top of the SEC standings with a 3-0 record.

Pioneer has arguably been one of the hottest teams in the conference, winning four games in a row after starting the season 0-2.

"We played two of the best teams in the state (Warren De La Salle and Birmingham Brother Rice) to start the season off," Pioneer head coach Paul Test said. "After that, we were prepared to come in and play football."

The Pioneers took down Ypsilanti, Saline, Skyline and, most recently, defending league champion Bedford.

"We've got a good thing going," Test said. "We just want to keep it going."

The Pioneers will face off against the Trojans Friday and only one of the teams will emerge with an unblemished conference mark.

"We have to go on the road and we know it's going to be tough," Test said. "But we are ready for it. We are ready to go there and get a win."

OUTDOORS

On Oct. 3 I was heading to my Dexter "honey hole" in the hopes of harvesting another deer for the freezer; hopefully the wind will be my friend instead of foe.

This is an exciting time of year for bow hunters and I hope you'll let me know your stories this coming fall. So, send in your pictures and tell me your tales. The best story will be covered in my column this fall. Of course gun hunter stories are welcome during the firearm season too.

Please be safe and use your safety harness when hunting from a tree stand. Trust me, all you have to do is meet a hunter who fell and you'll never "forget" to put yours on again.

Shoot straight and be safe.

Your stories and comments are warmly welcomed.

HIGH SCHOOL FOOTBALL: CHELSEA 20, LINCOLN 7

Bulldogs take next big step

Let's just enjoy the maize and blue success

Just sit back and enjoy it. And, no, the next line isn't, "while you still can."

Sometimes, it's best not to think too much. Don't over analyze. Heck, don't analyze at all. Just enjoy the moment for what it is at the moment.

Even the most pessimistic, negative-filled, double-sized doubter could find anything wrong in Saturday's destructive, dismantling and dominating thrashing of Minnesota at the Big House. But you and I both know some who will try.

The Wolverines are 5-0 after Saturday's 58-0 win over Minnesota.

What's that? Minnesota is only 1-4.

Don't care. Not today. Not this week. I'm drinking the kool-aid right out of the Little Brown Jug and enjoying every sip. And how could you not after a perfect first half in which Michigan racked up 384 yards of total offense, earned 21 first downs and scored on all six of its drives.

Yeah, that's how we roll. The first question during Saturday's postgame press conference was to Denard Robinson.

"Denard, why was the passing game working today?"

He could have answered that question a few different ways.

For example:

Because Minnesota stinks and they haven't covered anyone all season.

Because I decided now was the time to start trying.

Because, believe it or not, we practice every day with the goal of trying to get better. That's why we practice. We watch film, we study, we work and work and work. Sometimes, you just get better.

It's the last one that I like the best. And it's one that kind of typifies the season so far for the maize and blue. They are getting better. The competition might not be getting better - it's been far from a top 25 schedule - but they can't control who comes marching out of the other tunnel (I realize it's the same tunnel at the Big House, but play along).

What you also have to like - again, we are being positive here so all you haters and doubters and anyone bleeding green can take a hike - is that the offensive playbook is evolving and expanding. There is a new wrinkle here and there. A twist. A running back throwing a pass. A talented second-string QB coming in and contributing.

They all might not work but they give the teams coming up down the road something to think about. Something to worry about. They just can't take aim at No. 16's legs.

And Michigan coach Brady Hoke admitted that's what it is all about.

"We definitely want to see if we can protect Denard as much as we can," he said after the victory. "I thought the line did a very nice job; I thought (offensive coordinator) Al (Borges) called a very good game in what we were trying to get done."

On the other side of the ball, Hoke said what you

For a brief moment, Lincoln took the lead over Chelsea. But the Railsplitters simply didn't have time to celebrate or get a big head as the Bulldogs showed that it's tough to beat a powerhouse over night - or in one season in this case.

Chelsea defeated Lincoln 20-7 despite falling behind in the third quarter.

The Rails, who didn't win a game last season, have been the surprise team in the Southeastern

Conference and came into Chelsea with not only confidence, but plenty of talent to back it up.

Both Chelsea and Lincoln came into this game with 4-1 records. But Lincoln hadn't beaten Chelsea since 1997 and knocking them off in 2011 wasn't going to be easy.

Still, with 3:46 to play in the third quarter, Lincoln's explosive running back George Miller went 35 yards to give the Rails a 7-6 lead.

On Saturday, the freshman and sophomores also attended the Dexter 9/10 Invitational. The Bulldogs' small size did not stop them from posting several great times.

Duncan started the meet off in the 200 freestyle with a time of 2:19.69 and fourteenth place. The 500 freestyle ended with Doman in twenty-eighth place and a time of 30.13, while Maria

Bulldogs net SEC title

The Chelsea Bulldogs and Dexter Dreadnaughts netted quite the finish at the Southeastern Conference White Division tennis tournament. The Bulldogs, who hosted the event, finished with 27 points, just one point ahead of the Dreadnaughts.

The tournament had to be completed on Monday because rain postponed the event the previous week.

Throughout the day, it was back and forth between the two rivals. After a thrilling three-set victory at No. 4 doubles by Dexter over Chelsea, it was all tied up. But the Bulldogs were able to earn one more point than the Dreadnaughts.

Finishing third with 16 points was Ypsilanti followed by Adrian with nine points and Lincoln with two.

"Every year the SEC tournament comes down to the head to head matches between Dexter and Chelsea to determine the winner," Dexter coach Mike Dziama said. "Although we came up just short, I couldn't be more pleased about how well we competed and the determination my players showed in each match."

Winning all four matches for Dexter and taking first place in their respective flights were co-captain Mitch Kimball at No. 3 singles, Anthony Quail at No. 4 singles, and the No. 4 doubles tandem of Spencer Paulissen and Matthew Rose.

Kimball won 6-0, 6-2 vs. Adrian, 6-1, 6-2 vs. Ypsilanti and 6-0, 6-0 vs. Lincoln before winning an intense three set match vs. Chelsea 6-2, 5-7, 10-7.

Quail dominated throughout, never losing more than five games in any of his matches. He defeated Lincoln 6-1, 6-0, Ypsilanti 6-0, 7-5 and Chelsea 6-2, 6-3 before winning by default against Adrian.

Staking their claim to the gold medal for first place at No. 4 doubles, Paulissen and Rose, served up a trio of double bagels by beating Adrian, Lincoln and Ypsilanti all by identical scores of 6-0, 6-0. Then in their most important match of the day, they were able to edge Chelsea's Connor Dailey and Josh Galbreath 7-5, 2-6, 10-7 to secure their victory.

Winning three matches for Dexter and placing second in their respective flights were Sam Gough at No. 2 singles, Kyle Worthy and Aman Mandair at No. 1 doubles, AJ Sterlitz and Graham Northrup at No. 2 doubles and Michael De Zeeuw and Collin Ullmann at No.

3 doubles.

Gough beat Adrian and Ypsilanti by identical 6-1, 6-1 scores and Lincoln 6-0, 6-1 before losing to Chelsea's Spencer Gines 6-1, 6-2. Meanwhile, Worthy and Mandair played their best tennis of the year to come back and upset Ypsilanti 0-6, 6-3, 10-6 to secure the silver medal.

Chelsea's No. 1 doubles team of Brett Argir and Jayden Sweeny took first.

Sterlitz and Northrup lost their only match of the day by the narrowest of margins in a third set super tie-breaker to the Chelsea team of Brett Bowersox and Mike Varner, 6-1, 5-7, 10-7.

"Sometimes a match comes down to one or two points, and this was a classic example," Dziama said. "They gave it their all and played exceptional doubles but it just wasn't meant to be. Fortunately they were able to sweep their other three matches to gain the team some valuable points."

As was the case with De Zeeuw and Ullmann, who also played great tennis, to earn Dexter three team points at No. 3 doubles. Chelsea's duo of Nick Young and Nate England finished first for the Bulldogs.

Nick Gagalis (co-captain) pulled off a great victory at No. 1 singles by playing some of his best tennis of the year to edge Chelsea's Garrett Livernois 6-3, 7-5 and also defeated Lincoln in an exciting back and forth match 6-4, 7-5 to finish in a three way tie for second with Adrian and Chelsea.

Unfortunately for Dexter, Gagalis came up on the short end of the fewest games allowed tie-breaker and wasn't able to medal.

MS volleyball

The Chelsea eighth grade blue volleyball team has completed their first two weeks of matches this season.

They won their home opener against Lincoln 17-25, 25-13 and 25-20. Leading scorers were Savannah Steele 11 points, McKenzie Mykala 9 points, Audra Feldkamp 6 points and Mackenzie Strahan 5 points.

The blue team then traveled to Adrian but came out only winning one game of the match. Leading scorer was Savannah Steele with 11 points.

The girls then hosted Bedford (White) with a tough match, only winning one game, 18-25, 23-25 and 25-23. However, the team played outstanding with excellent defense by Audra Feldkamp and Kaye Nelson. Leading scorers were Savannah Steele 15 points, Alayna Schweda-Campbell 15 points, McKenzie Mykala 6 points, and Olivia Ballow with 5 points.

On Wednesday, the team traveled to Saline (13-25, 8-25, 25-18). Leading scorers were McKenzie Mykala with 7 points, Kenzie Strahan 6 points, Alayna Schweda-Campbell 2 points and Audra Feldkamp with 2 points. Phoebe Clacher and Emma Adkins played well at the net. Setting duties are being shared by McKenzie Mykala, Olivia Ballow, Alayna Schweda-Campbell and Savannah Steele.

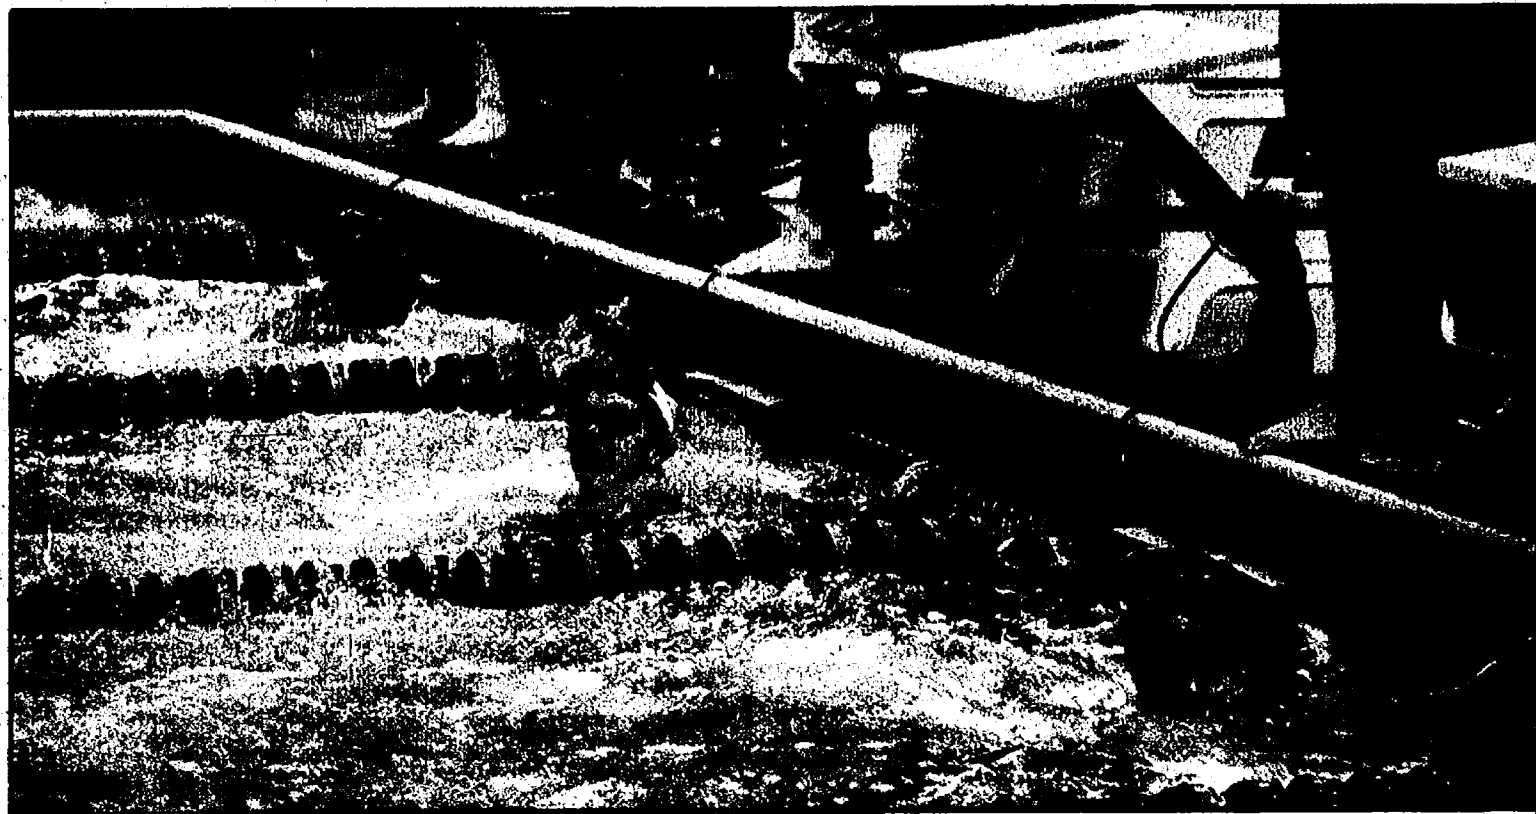

Defense positions are shared by Kaye Nelson, Audra Feldcamp, Christine Schultz, Corrine Clouse, Kelsay Hildebrandt and Kellie LeBlanc. Front row hitters are Emma Adkins, Kenzie Strahan, Phoebe Clacher and Taylor King.

Their overall record is 5-7. The Blue team is coached by Vanessa Fisk.

The Chelsea seventh grade Blue volleyball team won their first game against Saline Gold last week 25-22, but lost the match as they fell 14-25 in the second game and 7-25 in the third. Olivia Leonard led the way with 7 service points followed by Autumn Johnson with 6 and Hanna Stock and Shaunna Caffrey each with one point.

"The first game was definitely our best effort of the season," said Coach Dave Brinklow. "We had solid serving and great passing. I had hoped we could contend for the match in the 3rd game, but just didn't hit our serves."

Earlier in the week the team played at home against Bedford and lost 2-25, 9-25 and 11-25. Phoebe Callebs led with 3 service points, and Cassie Lungo, Autumn Johnson and Shaunna Caffrey each had 1 point.

A festive Halloween

Make the spooky holiday fun without breaking the bank

No longer is Halloween just a night for kids to trick-or-treat. In recent years the holiday has skyrocketed to become one of the most celebrated times of the year.

In fact, nearly two-thirds of adults have dressed up every year for the past two to three years, and more than half of adults plan on decorating their homes this year, according to a recent survey released by Savers, Inc., a global thrift retailer with Savers and Value Village stores across the country.

"Halloween is a welcome escape for so many people," says Mary Ginnaty, senior buyer at Savers, Inc. "It's a holiday where you can take a break from everyday worries, alter your ego and just have fun celebrating with friends and family. Folks love that."

But with the turbulent economy remaining top of mind, some Halloween shoppers may be worried about how to create new costumes and decorations without spending a fortune in the process.

There's no need to fear, though - just consider these tips for a festive All Hallows' Eve that won't leave your credit card haunting you:

- Set a budget - The first step of any shopping venture should be to set a budget that the whole family agrees on, and stick to it. Halloween is no different, so make sure you decide in advance how much you want to spend on costumes, decorations, candy and any other miscellaneous merriment.

- Mix new and used - One of the best ways to save money and create a completely original costume is to combine new and previously owned pieces. For instance, pairing a fancy little girl's dress and vintage jewelry with new accessories like a wig, tiara and wand makes for a completely customizable and unique princess look. You could also purchase a pre-packaged costume, such as a vampire, and then punch it up with secondhand items like tuxedo pants, shiny dress shoes and white gloves to make the look even more authentic.

- Take the road less traveled - When shopping for a Halloween costume, visit a thrift store and be sure to browse every department - especially areas you don't typically shop. For instance, if you're looking to create a men's pirate costume, check the women's section for billowy and ruffled tops and loose-fitting pants. Many men may not realize the women's section offers completely different styles and textured materials, which could be perfect for a variety of costume ideas. Women, too, should check out the men's and boy's sections for things like vests and authentic uniforms.

- Consult the experts - If you're having trouble pulling together the exact look you're going for, search online and in magazines for inspiration.

Some stores, like Savers and Value Village even offer trained costume consultants who are completely dedicated to helping people put together the perfect costume on any budget.

They can help shoppers find a new ready-made costume, offer advice in mixing themed accessories with clothing items found in their closets, or find unique secondhand finds for those looking to create a completely handmade look.

- Do-it-yourself decor - When shopping for decorations, don't feel like you need to pay top dollar for standard store-bought goods. Crafting spooky Halloween decor for just a few bucks can be as simple as applying a layer of black spray paint to secondhand silk flowers or quirky ceramic knick-knacks, like owls, crows and cats, and sprinkling them around your "haunted house" for a creepy surprise.

- Pass a good value on - After Halloween has come and gone, don't forget to donate your costume at a Community Donation Center. You'll help benefit a nonprofit in your community, and give someone else a great Halloween look next year.

Tips to find or create unique Halloween costumes

Halloween is around the corner, which means it's time to find the perfect costume. Don't fall short on creativity this year and be like all the other ghosts, goblins and witches on the block. Highlight your unique personality, and be the hit of the night by personalizing your costume.

To get your creative juices flowing, try one or all of the tips below from Bing's lifestyle expert, Karin Muskopf, when you are hunting for your costume.

- Don't forget the "we" in Halloween: Whether you're looking for a couple's costume, dressing up as the cast of "True Blood" with your friends, or doing your own thing, it can be helpful to get feedback on your ideas. One easy way to do this is to use Bing Shopping, as it allows you to share shopping lists with friends via email and Facebook to get their advice, all within a couple of clicks. Not only will your friends help you pick the right outfit, but you'll feel confident you're one of the best dressed for this ghoulish day.

- Think outside the coffin: Nobody wants to show up as the fourth witch at a party, so get into the spooky spirit of things and explore options that are outside the norm. To start, look around your house for creative inspirations and accessories. You never know if your next idea comes from something you see in your fridge or junk drawer. Also, consider creating a mash-up Halloween costume that combines two ordinary ideas into one extraordinary masterpiece. Think "Werezombie," or perhaps "Ronald McDonald Trump" - a painted clown face with a dark suit and an impressive comb-over. The beauty of dressing up is that the possibilities are endless and there's no such thing as being too creative.

- Don't be "tricked" into spending tons of money. Instead, "treat" yourself to the best deals in town. To find unique costumes and accessories, check out local discount stores, The Salvation Army and thrift stores. Also, try to find new materials by going to garage sales in your neighborhood. Not only will you protect the cash in your cauldron, you'll be more likely to find materials and accessories that others won't have. Halloween is the perfect time to prove how someone else's trash can become your terrifyingly terrific treasure.

- Think it through: While customization is important, it's never fun to go to a party with an uncomfortable costume that you have to change out of after an hour. Sky-high stilettos might look great with your Marilyn Monroe get-up, but will leave you with aching arches that'll scare you more than that haunted party you're attending. Make sure you think about how your entire costume - including shoes and makeup - will fit and feel at the events you plan to attend. If you know you're going to be in a cold location, going as Tarzan in a loin cloth is probably not the best idea.

- Start planning now: If you plan on purchasing a ready-made costume to suite your personal style, start checking out stores early to make sure you are picking from a wide range of styles and sizes. To add personality to your ready-made costume, consider adding fabric glitter, fake blood or tulle. It's a quick and easy way to make your costume go from frightful to fang-tastic. Look at websites such as BingHalloween.com to get ideas and find your signature look.

Study: Non-verbal clues influence medical care

Subtle and unspoken clues exchanged by patients and doctors exert an influence on medical care, according to a new study by the University of Michigan Health System.

Researchers analyzed video recordings of routine checkups and conducted follow-up interviews with participants to help elucidate signals sent and received on both sides of the examination table.

The method shows promise for improving medical decision making by allowing doctors to better understand how they make judgments and what messages they may be unwittingly conveying to patients, the researchers explain.

The study found that patients relied on non-verbal clues to evaluate the doctor-patient relationship, focusing on whether the doctor seemed hurried or put them at ease.

Doctors, on the other hand, reported that patients' tacit clues influenced their medical judgments. The results were published Sept. 26 in the Journal of Evaluation in Clinical Practice.

"Our findings show that both doctors and patients identified tacit clues involving the behavior or appearance of the other, but they were not always able to articulate precisely how these clues informed their judgments and assessments," said lead author Dr. Stephen G. Henry in a news release.

Henry is a research fellow at the Veterans Affairs Ann Arbor Healthcare System and Department of Internal Medicine at the University of Michigan.

"Not surprisingly, patients and doctors discussed these clues very differently."

The study is exploratory and did not examine whether the clues led to better or worse judgments.

Tacit clues might include non-verbal behaviors such as body language, eye contact, physical appearance and tone of voice. Other factors, such as how frequently the patient was seen in the clinic, might also inform judgments.

One important study finding was that some doctors appeared to be far more conscious than others of the non-verbal messages they send to patients, said Henry.

Just five of the 18 southeast Michigan doctors who participated in the study contributed 64 percent of all the comments, which were given while reviewing a recording of the interaction.

One doctor was particularly attuned to how non-verbal communication spoke to patients, the authors note.

"I use my body a lot," the doctor reported. "It's nice to see that I don't look rushed in the room. Although in my mind, I'm whirling. Okay, so I sit down, I try to relax and look relaxed."

Doctors also reported using these tacit clues to aid in diagnosing a patient, said Henry, who is also a researcher in the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation Clinical Scholars program.

They discussed observing the patient in a general way for signs that they might be depressed or that they were not revealing the whole of their concerns.

"It's mostly looking at the patient. Do they look healthy?" one doctor said.

Another doctor noted this ability to put together the puzzle pieces of a patient's verbal and non-verbal communication becomes intuitive:

"How do you know what Aunt Martha looks like? Because you know what she looks like, you've seen her lots of times. I can't detail as to why I know that, but I've been down the road long enough to know..."

The way a patient comports himself may give a doctor clues as to whether non-specific symptoms like weight gain, fatigue and high blood pressure are signals of depression or whether something else may be responsible, like a rare condition such as Cushing syndrome, which may indicate an adrenal tumor, the authors note.

Patients, on the other hand, were mainly concerned with clues that indicated their place within the doctor-patient relationship: Did the doctor make them feel comfortable? Did the doctor seem like she was in a hurry? Did she put them at ease? Was the doctor a good listener? Did he make eye contact?

While doctors and patients keyed in on particular examples in many of the examinations, sometimes they were unsure of precisely how they arrived at an opinion.

"Our findings are consistent with research from the social sciences suggesting that doctors' and patients' judgments in the examining room are often complicated and take into account many subtle, unspoken clues," said senior author Dr. Michael Fetters, associate professor of family medicine at the U of M Medical School.

"In the future, we hope this method of recording and reviewing these types of interactions can inform interventions designed to improve medical decision making and doctor-patient interaction by providing a more complete understanding of the kind of signals upon which doctors and patients rely."

Data were collected from 72 video elicitation interviews involving 18 doctors and 36 patients (two per doctor). Doctor participants were recruited from six different practices across southeast Michigan.

Subjects agreed to be recorded ahead of time and the video camera was placed in an unobtrusive area of the examination room.

An additional author of the study was Jane H. Forman of Veteran Affairs.

TESTIMONIALS!!!

"We were warmer and more comfortable using Comfort furnaces and saved between $250 - $300 per month. We are very pleased."

Richard & Shirley M., Kansas

"We really do love our Furnace, it's everything you said it was and more. My main furnace seldom kicks on, it has cut our electric bill in half. So keep the good work up. I would recommend your product to anyone."

Wayne & Kathy R., Kentucky

"We have tried 1500 watt electric space heaters that just could not provide enough heat. Then we tried your infrared heater and it does exactly as you advertise. We are now anticipating purchasing another for our home."

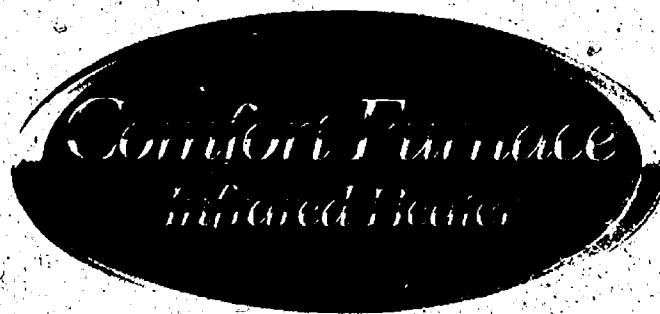

Tom G., Ohio

"Although these heaters were purchased after the beginning of the heating season, we saved significant money on propane which is what we use for heating our home. The savings is $700 above the cost of both heaters and the extra cost of electricity."

Marcia K., Michigan

"We had no heat! Your infrared furnaces gave us peace of mind as we work all day. Even in the cold snap in December and now January 28, 2010 ice storm. Best of all, our electric bill is lower than ever. Thank you all..."

Barry & Lorrian V., Tennessee
