Bills could change school elections

By Crystal Hayduk
 Special Writer
 Superintendent David Killips informed the Chelsea School District Board of Education about the possibility of legislation now in the House that will affect how local districts do business at a Monday meeting.
 Bills 4005 and 4006 would cause school board elections to take place during the November general elections. Historically, board elections have taken place in May.

According to Killips, no one's term would be shortened by the new rule, but the term could be lengthened to coincide with a November election. A board member would not be obligated to the longer term, however, in which case it is likely that a special election would be called.
 "They would like schools to be run like business, but business would not run like this," Killips said, referring to a change of several board members in the middle of the budget year. A board member elected in November would assume the new seat the following January 1.

 Another potential change involves the repeal of the personal property tax. If this bill passes, businesses would be exempt from paying tax on personal property. Money collected from the personal property tax helps to fund not only the foundation allowance, but also the sinking fund and bond issues.

"If you take the tax burden from business, it will increase the tax burden of residents," Killips said.
 The details of how the state would make up for the lost funds are not known at this time.
 Killips said the district enrollment on the unaudited count day was down 43 students from last year.
 "When Pierce was closed, we told the community we would have a minimal increase in class size," he said. "In fact, some of the class sizes went down."

 On average, North Creek's class size is 21, third and fourth grade class size is 23, Beach Middle School class size is 28.6, and the high school's class size is 27.8.
 "Fifth grade is a bubble where we have 28 students on average in each class," Killips said.
 He also said that numbers at the middle and high schools are not exact due to the nature of the variety of

By Crystal Hayduk
 Special Writer
 The nationally-acclaimed group Brass Roots Trio will be performing a concert in Chelsea called "Con:Brio!" which is musical terminology for "with spirit" or "with vigor."
 The musicians, playing piano, trumpet and French horn, will perform 7:30 p.m. Oct. 22 at the First United Methodist Church, 128 Park St.
 The program will be an eclectic blend of jazz, ragtime, contemporary and classical music presented with their unique style of exuberance and warmth that has gained the trio an international following since they began performing together in 2004. The group has received standing ovations and rave reviews for their performances at engagements that included the St. James Piccadilly Concert Series in London; the Chicago Brass Festival, Lincoln Center and Carnegie Hall in New York. In 2009, they performed at the White House by invitation of the Obama administration.
 All three of the group's members are excellent musicians and performers on their own, but together they put on a dynamic performance. Former Marine: Medical marijuana should be regulated to relieve pain

By Jerry Wolfe
 Journal Register News Service
A U.S. Marine who spent six months in Operation Enduring Freedom and has a severe back injury has found some relief in legally using marijuana three times a week.
 Spec. 4 Chris Swift, a 31-year-old Waterford Township father of two, with his current wife, Jaclyn, 27, also spent time in Okinawa Prefecture before being honorably discharged from the Marines on July 20, 2008.
 Swift, who went to Parris Island, S.C. for training to be a Marine, also has Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder.
 He was involved in a severe car accident while stationed near San Diego and has degenerative disc disease in his lower back, he said.

 He is applying for Social Security Disability Income, and he and his wife, and two young girls live on his $600 a month in veteran's benefits, he said. In addition, the family receives food stamps.
 His wife just gave birth to their second child and plans "to go back to school to study to be an ultra-sound tech."
 His apartment rent is $499 a month, and Swift says his family is only making it because his wife's family is financially helping them.
 "After I got into that car accident, I couldn't run, my back was sore, and my legs were killing me," he said.
 He said a truck ran a red light near the San Diego base and his car T-boned the truck. He suffered a head injury and needed several staples to close the wound.

County prosecutor explains recent medical marijuana ruling

Brian Donnelly in favor of dismantling dispensaries

By Bryce Martin
Journal Register News Service

The legality of medical marijuana dispensaries is being debated throughout the state, but for Kalkaska County's prosecuting attorney, the matter is hitting close to home.

Prosecutor Brian Donnelly and his office followed the ruling offered by a state appellate court as a result of controversy surrounding Brandon McQueen and CA (formerly Compassionate Apothecary) of Mount Pleasant.

The resulting verdict — released in late August — found patient-to-patient marijuana sales illegal within the state. Focus then centered on dispensaries and how medical marijuana users obtain their supply.

"The main issue with the dispensaries is not whether or not marijuana can be sold or provided to people under the law; it's the manner in which the dispensaries are doing this," Donnelly said.

The Medical Marijuana Act of 2008 created a structure where a person in need can obtain a prescription for medicinal marijuana from a doctor and then apply to the health department for their marijuana card.

"The next question is where do I get my marijuana?" Donnelly said.

"The law's rather unclear on that; however, one thing a person can do is grow their own."

Aside from dispensaries or collectives, there is a second group recognized within the law called caregivers.

"If I happen to be a green thumb guy, and you get a medical marijuana card, I decide I'll grow your marijuana for you and we can establish a relationship within that law," he said.

"It's not open-ended though. A caregiver can grow for five people, but they're all named, not whichever five I see this week."

A caregiver can also apply for their own medical marijuana card, able to grow for six people—themselves and five others. The maximum number of plants allowed under the law is 12 a piece, adding to a total of 72 marijuana plants.

"It appeared to me that the only way these dispensaries could work is if caregivers were selling to anybody, and that's exactly what they were doing,"

Donnelly said.

"Despite all the hoopla, the dispensaries were clearly a profit-driven thing."

People approached Donnelly, asking about opening some sort of dispensary within Kalkaska County.

He told those people the same thing: "If you're doing this as a business, if you're going to do this to make money, I can almost guarantee it will be found to be illegal."

What Donnelly knew of existing dispensaries around the area is that they were businesses open by people and they provided the service.

"(Dispensaries) provided a place for people willing to sell, meeting people willing to buy," he said.

"But the very nature of it is, if you're a caregiver and you've got your five people and that's all you can sell to, how can this work?"

The way it worked is nobody asked any questions, Donnelly said. The Court of Appeals then cleared it up and said it cannot be done in that manner.

Donnelly, who has communicated with Attorney General Bill Schuette through email, understands the attorney general's office can provide a set of documents, which can be adapted to any county, to be used to request an injunction from the court to seek forfeiture under the drug code.

"If I were to contact him, he and his staff would help me with ready-made documents that I could easily adapt to my situation," Donnelly said.

As of now, Donnelly has yet to do so.

But Donnelly is not characterizing himself as an opponent of medical marijuana; he believes it can be used to medically treat those with certain ailments.

Most of the people he has encountered before it was passed and since, however, have been people with little evidence of any medical problems who are in the drug business or just want to use the drug, he said.

"What I've seen of this law is that it was primarily pushed by people who want to legalize marijuana," Donnelly said.

"The backers of the law deliberately wrote it in an unclear fashion to give them the opportunity to push the envelope and expand what it would allow, and I think that's a disgrace."

Boulton obtained his initial degree from Eastern Michigan University but went on to earn a doctorate from Rutgers University. He regularly performs as principal trumpet with the 2011 Grammy nominee, "Metropolis Ensemble," and has premiered commissioned works and reworked adaptations.

French horn player Dan Wions received his education at Indiana University and has performed on tour dates with a long and impressive list of pop, rock and jazz musicians, including Dave Brubeck, Aretha Franklin, Gloria Estefan, Mannheim Steamroller and Clay Aiken, to name a few.

The free concert series, now in its fourth year, was started by Kyle Webber, the music director at the First United Methodist Church.

"The concert series exists to provide high-quality music absolutely free to the Chelsea community and surrounding areas," Webber said. "It showcases both local and national talent in a safe and welcoming environment. The goal for each season is to present a variety of musical styles in hope that there is something for everyone."

The musicians are sponsored and underwritten by music aficionados of the church and the community-at-large, as well as a variety of local businesses.

Local musician Brian Brill, who composes and performs music for media, has attended nearly all of the concerts since they began in 2008.

"Kyle (Webber) has done a really fantastic job of finding very high-quality professional musicians," he said. "The fact that it's made available for free is just amazing, especially if you are bringing a family. What a great way to hear this caliber of music."

Pianist Brill performed in the inaugural concert year as part of a jazz quintet and performed in the second year with four other local musicians, including Kyle Webber on the organ. Brill and Webber will be playing together again 4 p.m. Nov. 13. Brill will be premiering a new arrangement at the November concert.

"I really hope that people come out in the spring to hear Katherine Standerfer on the flute," Brill said. "Katherine grew up in Chelsea, played in the high school band and is now a senior at the University of Michigan. She's every bit a professional musician now, and once she graduates we won't have the opportunities to hear her locally like we can now."

Standerfer has been the principal flute player in the University of Michigan's Symphony. Her concert is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. May 12, 2012.

Attendance at the concerts has averaged about 125, but Webber would love to see up to 200 people at each concert.

The concert series has its own Facebook page, "Chelsea First United Methodist Church Community Concert Series."

"Those interested in our series are encouraged to 'like' our page," Webber said.

There are five concerts throughout the season and each show's date and music genre will appeal to different people. The full schedule for the year is available on the music page at www.chelseaumc.org. Alternatively, people can request to be on the mailing list for future announcements by calling the church office at 734-475-8119, ext. 16.

Childcare is also available during all concerts through the website or by calling the church office at least two days in advance.

weeks, the pain in my back started building," said the 6-foot, 250-pound Swift.

"I also have numbness in my legs, thighs or my calves," he said.

Doctors tried several methods to reduce his pain, including manipulation by a chiropractor, electrical nerve stimulation, massage and then, eventually, narcotic drugs such as hydrocodone, muscle relaxers and tranquilizers.

"I still managed to only sleep an hour or 90 minutes a night," said Swift. "There have been times when I've had less than 10 hours of sleep over a several-day period."

In an attempt to cope with lingering symptoms, Swift applied for the Michigan Medical Marijuana card in June 2009. The card must be renewed annually.

On Nov. 4, 2008, Michigan voters approved the Michigan Medical Marijuana Act. It is administered by the Michigan Department of Licensing and Regulatory Affairs, Bureau of Health Professions.

"To obtain a marijuana card, one must 'have a qualifying debilitating medical condition as listed on the Attending Physician's Statement,'" the Department of Licensing and Regulatory Affairs states on its website.

Your physician also must be licensed to practice in Michigan.

You, or a designated primary caregiver, may grow your marijuana. However, there is no place in the state of Michigan to legally purchase medical marijuana.

In addition, the Michigan Medical Marijuana

Program does not give information to patients about where they can legally buy seeds to grow the drug.

If you are too ill to grow your own marijuana, a caregiver can acquire 2.5 ounces of usable marijuana and grow up to 12 plants for a qualifying patient. The caregiver may "assist" up to five patients.

On Aug. 31, however, the state Court of Appeals ruled marijuana sales by dispensaries were illegal. It is unclear how long dispensaries will remain closed, as the ruling likely will be appealed to the Michigan Supreme Court.

Swift said after he was certified by a doctor as having a degenerative condition that leaves him with chronic pain, he registered as a patient by filling out the state application and was approved to use marijuana.

His medical costs for the Michigan Medical Marijuana Act card were between $200 and $300, he estimated.

He said the cost of marijuana at dispensaries ranged from $180 an ounce up to $400 or $500, depending on type and potency.

He said it takes up to "eight or nine months" to grow about a half-ounce of marijuana on a plant. Swift said using marijuana three times a week has again made him "functional."

"When I wake up in the morning, I am in pain and have to stretch all parts of my body before I can move," he said.

"It (marijuana) also helps me to sleep better and calms down my anxieties" from my experiences in the Middle East conflict.

"I can't speak for everyone, but it definitely helps me function," he said.

State lawmakers and law enforcement officials should "look at the law carefully to see what needs regulating" so illegal sales are not made, Swift said.

"My theory would be to have one dispensary in each county, and every registered patient could get the first 2.5 ounces of marijuana a month free. Thereafter, you pay."

He said dispensaries should be run by the state.

"The problem right now is that too many people are trying to get their hands on it to make a profit," Swift said.

"It should be regulated so that it is used properly to relieve pain and not abused. I see it as if you are using it and not abusing it, there is no problem."

He said his wife is "glad I've found a way to ease my pain so that I am functional."

Taking pain medication, muscle relaxers and tranquilizers can "leave you as being a zombie all day" and that is not good, Swift said.

He also said that numbers at the middle and high schools are not exact due to the nature of the variety of classes and different enrollments in electives.

"We met the smaller class sizes through declining enrollment, which is an unfortunate way to do it," Killips said.

Principal Marcus Kaemming introduced the new part-time kindergarten teacher, Clea Davis, to the board. Davis has a master's degree from the University of Michigan. According to Kaemming, Davis has a passion for children and literacy, which makes her a great kindergarten teacher.

"As many fine candidates as we had for the job, Clea rose to the top," Kaemming said.

The next board meeting will be 6:30 p.m. Oct. 24 at the Washington Street Education Center, 500 Washington St.

Governor Rick Snyder, Homeland Security Secretary Janet Napolitano speak at cyber summit at EMU

By Sean Dalton
Heritage Media

Gov. Rick Snyder and U.S. Department of Homeland Security Secretary Janet Napolitano led the call Friday morning for a number of federal, state and local pushes for increased network or "cyber" security efforts.

The presentation called for the creation of a state Cyber Command Center run by the state police, as well as a state operated Cyber Defense Response Team, which would run interference on both foreign national and private hackers looking to reach into critical public and private networks to steal money or information, or instigate large-scale crises such as the East Coast blackout of 2003.

"It wasn't a cyber-attack, but (think) of what impact that had on our country," Snyder said in reference to the example of what he considers one of many possible scenarios if the country doesn't make a multi-lateral effort to bolster cyber security.

Snyder, Napolitano, U.S. Rep. John Dingell, Mike Rogers and Hanson Clark, along with White House cyber-security coordinator Howard Schmidt, all echoed in their remarks the necessity of everyone, from parents and their children to the CEOs of the country's largest corporations using the month of October — now officially designated National Cyber Security Awareness Month — to consider their role in the matter at hand.

Dingell pointed to studies by the Government Accountability Office that indicate alarming increases in the frequency of detected cyber attacks in the last decade.

"Our system is dependent on cyber security and all of the new technologies for its effectiveness and the ability to ... provide American industry and people with what they need (to function)," Dingell said before outlining the GAO data, which shows a 650 percent increase in detected attempts to breach American computer networks in the last five years alone.

"Every federal agency, whether it deals with money or national security, is under active threat both from at home and abroad," Dingell said.

Federal agencies alone were the targets of some 5,000 attacks in 2006, which is up to more than 40,000 last year, Dingell said.

The state government has set up a website that provides tools and guidance for consumers, educators, business figures and public officials.

The Michigan Cyber Command Center and Cyber Defense Response Team would expand the role of the Michigan Intelligence Operation Center and DHS from what they already are for the "best coordinated effort in the country" discovering and responding to cyber attacks to prevent or least mitigate the damage, as Snyder described it.

"We have dedicated people on the front lines spending their entire life working on it ... but that's not enough," he said. "The solution has to be all of us playing our part and supporting them."

Napolitano invited the students who were attending the 8:30 a.m. conference hosted at Eastern Michigan University's Eagle Crest Marriot start applying for jobs in the cyber security field at DHS and the agencies that she says will crop up at the state and local level in the coming years on the heels of Michigan's and Washtenaw County's efforts to address the matter.

"Whether you checked your smartphone this morning to read the news about the Detroit Tigers or signed onto your bank account online or used the GPS system to make sure you didn't get lost on your way here, we rely on these devices and the networks on which they run," Napolitano said. "As more and more daily functions rely on digital systems, the necessity of protecting our computers, our mobile devices and our networks only continues to increase."

Gov. Rick Snyder announced Friday the creation of a new cyber security initiative at the 2011 Cyber Summit held in Ypsilanti.

DHS, formed just eight years ago, is now the third largest department of the federal government with a budget of $98.8 billion. The department's involvement in cyber security has grown since its inception, Napolitano pointed out.

Napolitano said that legislation is currently in the works to provide more top-down support on the cyber-security issue, which has its own task force in the national Republican caucus.

Federal legislators have been talking as recently as this month about increasing public awareness of the topic and using our nation's legal framework to incentivize public-private partnerships to tackle a problem that affects the private sector as much, if not more so, than governmental agencies.

Those who made remarks at the conference all indicated that Michigan is stepping out ahead of the pack on the cyber-security issue.

The move will bring much prestige in both the public and private sector and in turn directly create jobs through the formation and bolstering of state and local agencies and partnerships with the private sector, as well as indirectly create jobs by making Michigan a more secure place to do business.

Expert recommends getting involved in child's online life

By Austin Smith

Friday's Michigan Cyber Summit in Ypsilanti covered all those and cranked up developing security issues in information technology stretching across industrial espionage to cyber bullying among teenagers.

Gov. Rick Snyder, along with state and federal officials, announced earlier in the day the creation of a Cyber Security Initiative aimed at improving the state's response to cyber threats. The presentation called for the creation of a State Cyber Command Center run by the state police, as well as a state-operated Cyber Defense Response Team, which would run interference on both foreign national and private hackers looking to reach into critical public and private networks to steal money or information.

Snyder was joined by U.S. Department of Homeland Security Secretary Janet Napolitano and other state and federal officials in the announcement.

The convention, held at the Eastern Michigan University's Marriot Eagle Crest Hotel, also offered workshops on protecting sensitive information online for private businesses, families and home use.

Dr. David Bickham, from the Center on Media and Child Health located in Boston, discussed the dangers kids and young adults face in their "online life," and how parents can manage those risks.

In his presentation, "Your Teens and the Internet: Tools for Staying Safe and Sane in the digital age," Bickham covered family issues such as cyber bullying, sexting and social media. Bickham talked about the risks associated with posting personal information on Facebook no matter how mundane it may seem. "We are doing ourselves a disservice if we don't think about Facebook as anything other than a re-conception of privacy," Bickham said during the presentation. "There is nothing fundamentally wrong with Facebook, but there are many potential risks. Everything you post online stays there, nothing can be retracted and once it's out there, it's out there for good."

With more than 80 percent of universities using Facebook to keep in touch with students and 10 percent of admissions offices using simple Google searches when researching potential students, Bickham cautioned teens about the importance of maintaining their online reputation.

One issue teens run into is posting what they think are "private" photos to their friends only, but those photos can easily be taken and then reposted to the next network of friends.

"The fact is you really don't know who all of your 'friends' are on Facebook," Bickham said.

For parents, Bickham advised to be your child's friend and monitor, not only with Facebook activity but all online activity by using a high warmth high control approach or lots of love and lots of limits.

Bickham said stranger danger is typically not an issue on Facebook because of a mass of safeguards designed to protect children, and that one-third of all solicitation of young adult girls and boys are still done in seldom-used chat rooms.

"The research shows that the more limits put on online content in the home than the less likely your child will be a victim and want to meet somebody offline," Bickham said.

St. Joseph Mercy Hospital celebrates 100 years of health care

By Amy Bell
Heritage Media

In 1911, Saint Joseph Mercy Hospital in Ann Arbor was started by four Sisters of Mercy in one house with 17 beds. Now, it has grown into a facility featuring multiple campuses with several locations throughout the region.

On Sunday the hospital celebrated its 100-year anniversary with an open house and many other family-friendly activities.

"It was a feel-good day," said Rob Casalou, president and CEO, St. Joseph Mercy Ann Arbor, Livingston and Saline hospitals. "You need a few of those in a tough environment," adding that the hospital staff would like to thank everyone for attending the event, especially on a Sunday.

Although the final count has not been tabulated, Casalou said he is guessing about 750 people attended the event.

Attendees toured several of the facilities' renovations, viewed a live radio broadcast featuring Bubba from W4 Country and receive free seated massages from Inspirit Salon & Spa.

A highlight of the tour was a hands-on demonstration showcasing the da Vinci robot that helps doctors perform a wide range of surgical procedures at the hospital.

Activities for children were also included in the fun. Radio Disney entertained children outside the hospital cafeteria with fun, games and music.

Car enthusiasts also had a chance to partake in the celebration with an antique truck and car show in the hospital parking lot.

Many cars were on display including a 1960 Chevy Impala owned by Hugo Sanchez, a retired doctor and a 1960 Chevy owned by Tom Wildgen of Ann Arbor.

Wildgen said he has been to several car shows in the area and has also been a patient at the hospital a number of times. He said he was impressed with the improvements made throughout the facility.

Another highlight of the event was a shuttle that took visitors to St. Joe's Farm, where they received tours of the hospital's hoop house to see how crops are grown year round. In addition, they were able to decorate pumpkins, taste homemade applesauce and plant herbs in cups to take home.

Veronica Cobb of Hartland was at the open house with her husband, Jamie and daughter Lauren. They had come to the hospital to visit a patient.

"It (the open house) was a good idea, a lot of hands on activities and a lot of displays, it was pretty cool," said Veronica Cobb.

Originally named St. Joseph's Sanitarium, St. Joseph Mercy Hospital was started in Ann Arbor by four Sisters of Mercy from Dubuque, Iowa.

The first facility, located on the corner of State and Kingsley streets, was eventually moved to a bigger, hospital-like facility at 1914 Ingalls St. In 1977, it moved to its current facility on East Huron River Drive.

Since the late 1970s, it has undergone extensive renovations including new patient rooms, an east and north tower, chapel and its main entrance, which opened in August.

Since he became CEO three years ago, the hospital has undergone some major changes, especially with the recession that hit in 2008.

"It was like a whitewater rafting ride there for the first couple of years," he said.

However, the hospital has overcome the worst of its financial issues and is growing again, he said.

OUR TAKE: Editorial

Drug war now being fought online as well

In a nation that devotes billions of dollars to combating the production, distribution and possession of illegal drugs, we wonder how long it will take for law enforcement to catch up with ordering them online.

An article in The Macomb Daily recently described what appears to be a cumbersome and somewhat geeky way to place orders for drugs anonymously.

That obvious need for anonymity is behind the geekiness. It's clearly not possible to place an order at a public website, using a recognized credit card, for a product that would send seller and buyer to jail even when they use a secure transaction process.

So users must jump through a number of hoops aimed at making identities of both anonymous.

The article indicated there are a few hundred sellers. An unknown number of customers are mostly in the United States and Canada.

Potential buyers surveyed in the article had the same reaction we did: How certain is the quality and safety of the product? What's the possibility of a scam?

In other words, what's the possibility of losing your money, never getting the drugs and being apprehended, convicted and sentenced, any or all of the above?

We don't have answers to those questions. But the war on drugs is very much alive, even though a global commission recently told the world the war is over and that we've lost it.

We're not sure that's true, but we pointed out at the time that the declaration should be followed by a national debate on the cost of the war and its effectiveness in combating drug use.

If it's relatively easy to order drugs online and get delivery without being caught, it seems to us that's one more indication that the war cannot be won.

But we wouldn't rule out the possibility that investigators can jump through the anonymous hoops even faster than those buyers and sellers.

It lends emphasis to "buyer beware." And seller, too.

Humanize America and the death penalty

We learned what the death penalty is about recently when the great state of Georgia - home of peaches, peanuts, Jimmy Carter and R.E.M. (R.I.P.) - executed Troy Davis by lethal injection. It's not about justice. It's about killing people.

Davis was convicted in 1991 of killing police officer Mark Allen MacPhail largely on the basis of witness testimony, not physical evidence. Seven of the nine key witnesses later recanted their testimonies, some citing police coercion. President Carter joined millions of people in petitioning for a halt to the execution.

The state of Georgia killed Davis, 42, at 11:08 p.m., Sept. 21.

Countries with the fewest human rights tend to lead the world in this peculiar form of barbarism. On the same day Davis was killed, Iran publicly hanged a 17-year-old boy convicted of killing a star athlete. China killed a Pakistani man convicted of drug smuggling.

In 2010, China executed more people than the rest of the world combined, with the lowest estimates starting at 1,000. Iran was second with at least 252.

The United States, self-proclaimed beacon of human rights and civil liberties, was fifth with 46, right behind North Korea with 60 and Yemen with 53.

On the same day Georgia killed Troy Davis, Texas, which led the United States in executions last year with 17, killed Lawrence Brewer, who was convicted of the 1999 murder of James Byrd Jr. Thirty-five states allow capital punishment.

The United States was the only country in all of the Americas to execute its own people last year; one of only 23 countries worldwide. In Cuba, no one was on death row in 2010. In the United States, the number stood at 3,261, 44 percent of whom were African Americans. Meanwhile, 139 counties have abolished capital punishment in law or in fact.

Besides being in the company of the most barbaric countries in the world, there are plenty of other reasons to oppose the death penalty in the United States.

Human systems are fallible and fallible systems should not be in the business of condemning people to death. Since 1976, 138 death row inmates have been exonerated by the presentation of post-trial evidence. In the United States, capital punishment is racist. African Americans make up 12.6 percent of the population, but represent 35 percent of the 1,200 plus people executed since 1976. A person's odds of execution jump three to 3.5 times if the victim is white.

The methods of delivering death, such as hanging, electrocution, gas chamber, firing squad, injection and beheading - an example of which occurred last year in Saudi Arabia - offer their own fallible examples of cruelty.

Capital punishment does not appear to deter people from committing murder. The south, which was responsible for 80 percent of the executions in the United States in 2010, had the highest murder rate in the country.

One of the Ten Commandments prohibits murder. The Bill of Rights prohibits cruel and unusual punishment. Yet we allow our own government to kill people in rogue wars, hunt down international criminals like rabid dogs and routinely execute convicted murderers. If teaching by example is a valid method of instruction, our government is setting a very grim one. Perhaps we should start chopping off people's hands for petty theft. Anyone can learn to hold a fork with the other hand. Not many of us have a second soul or a spare body.

Even if Davis was guilty beyond the shadow of a doubt, he should not have been killed. If the right to life is the ultimate civil liberty, the death penalty is the ultimate violation of civil rights.

As a society, we should stand taller than common criminals. A truly civilized nation should hold life as sacrosanct.

U.S. loses moral high ground when it resorts to assassination

The assassination of U.S. citizen al-Awlaki and five other persons in Yemen, a nation with which we are at peace, raises the question of whether the United States is willing to abandon the rule of law in its desire to overcome its enemies.

The targeted person has evidently not been charged, much less convicted, of a crime.

According to media reports, al-Awlaki is considered highly dangerous to the United States because he is thought to have been an inspiration for various earlier attacks on the United States.

He is also thought to be dangerous because he speaks English and Arabic well, he understands the Muslim world, he is conversant in the use of modern technology (such as Facebook) to communicate rapidly and widely, he might become an important leader of al Qaida, and he evidently has (or might have in the future) a considerable influence on members of radical Islam.

Are these thoughts by U.S. officials justification for assassinating a U.S. citizen without a shred of due process?

If we abandon the rule of law, we are also abandoning reasonable claims of having a moral or legal high ground.

Granholtz book is not self-serving

All of Michigan's modern-day governors possess an abiding sense of public service and a healthy dose of optimism. The more you watch these captains of state, the more you appreciate that internal need to see the glass not only half full, but they know that eventually it will overflow.

Say hello again to former Gov. Jennifer Granholm, who concedes that for most of her eight years at the helm, she was "a bit delusional" about her ability to fix the economic maelstrom she was in. Rose-colored glasses sometimes are out of focus. She and former first gentleman Dan Mulhern have been back on stage hawking their book, "A Governor's Story," and the punditry class has had a field day tearing it to shreds.

One theme that rings hollow, however, is that the book is self-serving. Memo to punditry cabal: That's why folks write books - so they can spin the story their way.

Mitt Romney didn't write a book because he wanted to honor his Michigan heritage.

Sarah Palin didn't write a book because she had something to say; she saw dollar signs, her detractors contend.

So here is the former first family's version of their reality, and it turns out they disagreed on what to put in and leave out of their tome.

Under cross-examination, Granholm confesses that she wanted nothing to do with the personal side of her life getting into print.

First hubby, the true self-discloser in the duo, wanted to write about how he lost part of his wife and his life; the personal cost of public service, which the public seldom sees, stares you right in the mug.

But, back to the economy and her ill-placed optimism. She was determined to save the state on her own as the state headed into the dumpster.

She refused to concede defeat. She was convinced that "if we work hard enough, we'll be able to fix it. I really thought I'd be able to do it." During all this, Mr. M. is on the sidelines without rosy specs.

He's trying to counter-balance her "incessant" drive; he reminds her she is not God, and God will not hold her accountable for the state's record jobless rate.

Stubbornly, she ignores those words of wisdom. But a phone call changed that, eight years into her mission.

"It finally dawned on me when President Obama called and put General Motors into bankruptcy," she writes. "Even up to that point, I was a bit delusional about it."

She finally gives in; she will not solve this problem on her watch.

And therein lies the danger of excess optimism: It prevents you from dealing with the gravity of the situation.

Some insight reveals why she could not surrender.

On her personality test, she emerges as a field marshal, which is why her favorite movie is "Patton."

But governors are not generals, and as Mulhern writes in the book: "You want to be perfect. You're not. At some point, you have to accept it."

By the time she accepts the harsh truth, it's time to exit the battlefield.

"You wanted to be a perfect governor?" she was asked.

"True," she whispers. "And you could not do it."

It's not the legacy Field Marshal Granholm wants on the history books.

Property crimes on the rise across county

By Austen Smith
Heritage Media

Some areas in Washtenaw County saw similar trends in crime from 2009 to 2010, according to the FBI's annual Uniform Crime Report, which compiles statistics from more than 17,000 law enforcement agencies and breaks it down by state and city.

A number of communities saw similar upticks in incidents of larceny and property crimes, while the state overall saw a 5.5 percent drop in property crimes and about a 2.7 percent drop in violent crimes over 2009. Nationwide, the violent crime numbers dropped for the fourth straight year. Violent crimes are down a full 6 percent.

In Saline, there was a jump in property crimes from 2009 to 2010, which includes everything from malicious destruction of property to breaking into vehicles. Saline saw 31 more incidents of property crimes, from 145 in 2009 to 176 in 2010, and a similar rise in larceny from 115 incidents to 149.

Saline Police Chief Paul Bunten said while the city pays more attention to state numbers tracking overall clearance rate for crimes, he could only give an educated guess as to why incidents of petty larceny and break-ins have increased.

"The economy," said Bunten.

Saline police boasts one of the higher clearance rates for criminal incidents throughout the state at about 50 to 60 percent. Bunten said it has been his experience that petty larceny and similar incidents coincide with rising joblessness.

"We try to be proactive. We have officers on the street talking with people. When you are talking about larceny, shoplifting, going into stores and stealing, I'm just not sure what else we could do from a police perspective. It's a really tough nut to crack," he said. "But there are lots of other things going like local charities and clubs, Boys and Girls Clubs."

One particular crime that has seen an uptick has been the theft of gasoline at gas stations because of the dramatic rise in fuel costs over the summer. Bunten says a drive-off is difficult to solve because there is usually no vehicle description.

"We get a lot of, 'It was a silver car, may have been station wagon.' Something like that probably isn't getting solved," Bunten said.

Another mispomer with the Uniform Crime Reports is that the information is old, having only been tracked through the previous year.

"I get (the reports) in a big book every year, and we look at it, but it's not very representative of what is going on right now," Bunten said.

Chelsea Police Chief Ed Toth also said they look more at the state numbers, which are more current. He said the city of Chelsea has seen an 18 percent overall drop in calls for police service over the past year.

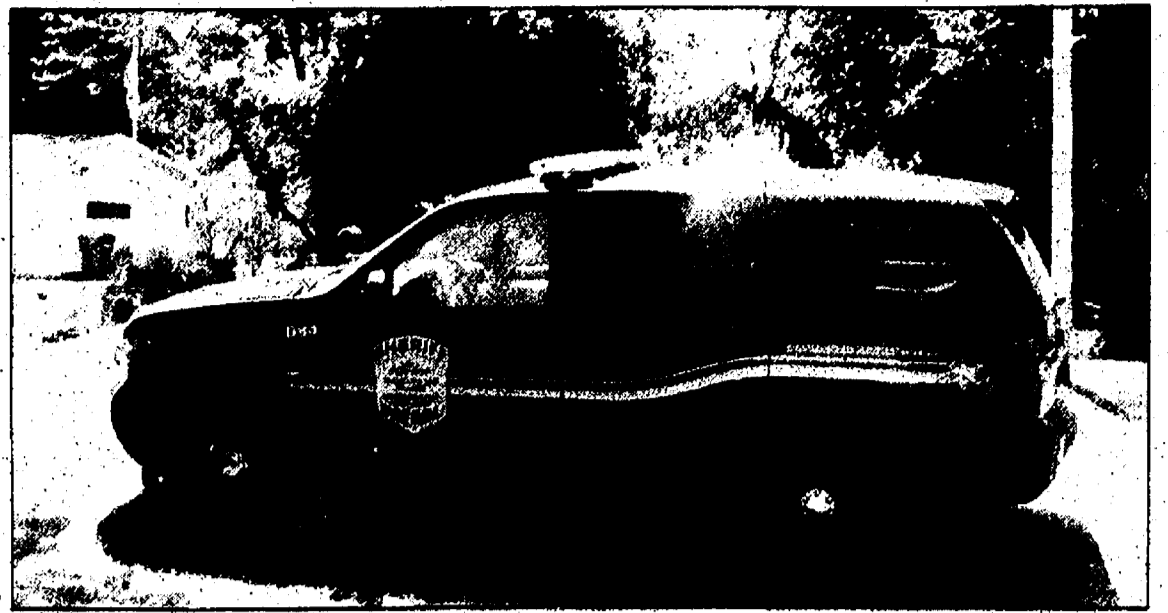

As for the rise in property crimes, Toth said one can never really tell what causes the trends in crime.

"I mean, the economy could be it. The state is really suffering no doubt about it," he said. "But people, all they can do is speculate."

Chelsea, like other areas, saw a rise in property crimes from 98 in 2009 to 115 in 2010, and in larceny incidents from 70 to 94.

Toth estimated that with local government and state budget cuts, there are about 3,000 fewer police officers on the street than last year. He said they have been fortunate locally to have kept all of their full-time positions.

In Ann Arbor, interestingly enough, the amount of property crime incidents decreased by 13. Incidents of violent crime rose by 14, larceny crimes rose by 68 and incidents of forcible rape increased by 15.

According to an FBI report, communities in Washtenaw County saw a jump in property crimes, while the state numbers fell.

Aggravated assault also was a positive result for Ann Arbor, having decreased by 12 and robbery remained exactly the same with 76 incidents in 2009 and 2010.

The city of Ypsilanti saw an uptick in nearly all crime categories tracked by the Uniform Crime Report. The city saw a significant swing in property crimes with a more than 13 percent increase.

Incidents of overall violent crimes increased by 19 from 198 in 2009 to 217 in 2010, robbery saw a 13 incident jump and aggravated assault rose by 15. Incidents of forcible rape decreased by 3.15 percent. The FBI defines violent crimes as murder, rape, aggravated assault, manslaughter and robbery.

Ypsilanti didn't record a murder in 2010, but did have one in 2009 with the case of then-20-year-old Dominic Overinde convicted of felony murder for bludgeoning his girlfriend, 17-year-old Huron High School student Anna List, with a hammer outside of Recreation Park. Overinde was convicted in March of last year.

Michigan has the 12th highest crime rate per 100,000 residents nationwide. The state averages 490 violent crimes per 100,000 residents.

Camden, N.J., is the most violent city in America, based on this year's report.

Saginaw had been the top city for nine years running prior to that. Saginaw still is No. 2 on the list, with Flint a close third. Detroit ranks fifth and Pontiac also is in the top 10 most violent cities in America.

The Uniform Crime Reporting Program was founded in 1929 by the International Association of Chiefs of Police.

The program helps provide reliable, uniform crime statistics for the nation. The report has been published yearly by the FBI since 1930.

Colleagues thank departing county commissioner

By Sean Dallan
Heritage Media

Colleagues of District 7 County Commissioner Kristin Judge were unanimous in their feelings of her - "she will be missed," said Ronnie Peterson, her District 6 colleague.

Judge announced her resignation, which will be effective Oct. 9, late last week.

Jason Brooks, county administration management analyst, put out a request for volunteers to apply to fill the vacancy by 5 p.m. next Wednesday for consideration by the commission at the Oct. 19 meeting.

In a move that her fellow commissioners see as a logical extension of her focus in bringing governance to the people, Judge will go to work for the Multi-State Information Sharing and Analysis Center.

MI-ISAC is a division of the nonprofit Center for Internet Security located in Upstate New York.

Peterson said that MI-ISAC, CIS and the Department of Homeland Security are gaining an asset in Judge.

"She is a very thoughtful commissioner who has done her homework on the issues," Peterson said. "When she asked the tough questions she always reaches out to other commissioners for additional facts or historical information."

Both Peterson, elected in 2001, and District 1 Commissioner Rob Turner, newly elected last year, gave Judge high marks for her broad perspective and willingness to serve the broader constituency shared by all commissioners rather than just the interests of those in District 7.

"I think she was concerned for all areas of the county ... I think she was sensitive to the fact that some of the out township areas, in the past, haven't always gotten proper consideration," Turner said. "She fought hard for the out townships (between 2008 and 2010 in particular) and I think she might have had some influence in bringing the county commission together recently."

Peterson similarly praised her for being a political force at his side in representing the eastern areas of the county, which have been hit the hardest by the ongoing financial collapse that commenced in 2008.

"There's no question that she supported eastern leaders on economic development ... I think she has been very interested and focused on what needs to be done to economically develop the eastern region," Peterson said.

Meanwhile in western Washtenaw, local municipal meetings would sometimes involve jibbing comments about the weight that the commission would give them on the issues in years past.

Turner said Judge was one of the primary figures on the commission driving change on that issue in the past several years, as well as a strong partner for Turner and other commission Republicans on achieving their goal of trimming the county's budget deficit.

"She's very concerned about the people's money - it's always been a big concern of hers that the public's money is being spent properly and accounted-for," Turner added.

To that end, Judge, along with District 4 Commissioner Wesley Prater, worked to build the Open Book eWashtenaw initiative so the public can "see the county checkbook." The county's information technology staff is still working to implement publishing county-issued credit account information online as well.

The county's transparency efforts have even caught the eye of the governor's office, which is working to replicate the Open Book eWashtenaw program, according to Judge.

Over the course of her career on the commission the county went from a $30 million budget deficit in 2010 to a projected $17 million deficit in 2013, which is completely visible to the public.

What spurred that was President Barack Obama's first official proclamation stating that governments of any size should post what they spend online.

"There's no excuse to be hiding the checkbook anymore," Judge said. "People shouldn't have to do a FOIA request anymore to find out how their money is being spent. The money belongs to the residents and they should be able to see how it's spent."

Freshman Commissioner Yousef

COUNTY COMMISSIONER ROB TURNER

Rahbi, elected last January, described Judge as a sometimes mentor and an example that he will continue to follow.

"She is incredibly motivated and a valuable resource to the county," Rahbi said. "As a new commissioner she really did reach out to me from the very beginning and filled me in on some of the things happening in the county."

"I really appreciate her willingness to reach out ... hopefully she will remain active in the community in some way and I will remain her friend."

Rahbi, whose focus is in working with Washtenaw County Sheriff Jerry Clayton, praised Judge for her focus on matters related to the Washtenaw County Sheriff's Department.

"She has helped improve community policing to neighborhoods that needed it rather than just the traditional gun slinging law enforcement (of the past) ... our sheriff has taken a progressive and forward thinking stance," with the help of the county commission's and Judge's guidance, Rahbi said.

Judge said she will continue to reside in Washtenaw, close to the Washtenaw County Cyber Citizenship Coalition that she helped co-found, the success of which has resulted in the state's 2011 Cyber Summit headed by Gov. Rick Snyder being held at Eastern Michigan University. The event's commencement will mark the commission's designation of October as the county's cyber security awareness month.

Judge shared Rahbi's view of the sheriff's department's reinvention as a prominent feather in her cap.

Prior to Judge being sworn into office Dec. 3, 2008 she said there were trust issues plaguing police service and public safety across the county.

"I wasn't there during the history, but I wanted to be a part of the solution in getting the county to heal from some of the issues that happened in the past," she said.

During her tenure the commission also realigned the per-deputy cost charged to contracting municipalities like the villages of Dexter and Manchester and other others within the county.

The contract cost went from $90,000 to $158,000 for WCSO personnel and equipment costs tied to meeting police service contracts, after the commission tweaked the three pages of cost determining formulas used to determine final contract fees that municipalities must pay. Townships are still spared some overhead costs that villages and cities pay, according to Judge.

The shift from partial county subsidization of police service for such contracting municipalities is one of the ways that the commission trimmed $13 million from the budget.

"It was a team effort - all of the commissioners were involved in the budget process. It's our No. 1 responsibility," Judge said.

Her advice to whoever steps into the shoes she left in District 7 is to keep up the communication with residents that has been her hallmark.

"Remember who you are there to represent," she said.

One of the major upcoming issues involves the number of people needing services is going to continue to rise as revenues continue to fall, she said.

"This is not an issue that is going to be fixed even in the next 10 years," she added.

The county has started to address the issue by reshaping departments, asking staff to make concessions and trying to get out of the business of being involved in things it is not mandated to do, Judge said.

Washtenaw, Lenawee Red Cross chapters merge

Lenawee County and Washtenaw County's American Red Cross chapters have merged in what the agency is calling "an effort to serve both communities more efficiently and effectively."

The consolidation will increase the capacity to respond to local disasters and sustain other services, while reducing overhead expenses for the merged jurisdiction, according to a press release from the American Red Cross.

The move was prompted when Lenawee County Chapter's executive director vacated her role to accept another Red Cross position. The newly-formed Washtenaw-Lenawee Chapter of the American Red Cross will continue to be on call at all times ready to provide immediate assistance to victims of disaster in both counties.

The two-county operation will be administered through its offices in Ann Arbor. However, the Lenawee County facility at 204 N. Broad St. in Adrian will be lightly staffed by volunteers and continue as an essential training and service delivery center.

Lenawee County residents can still call the Red Cross anytime at 517-263-1904 for assistance and information about all services, such as preparedness, health and safety, military services, blood services and volunteer opportunities. All of these services will continue without any change in service levels.

"Close cooperation already exists between the Lenawee County and Washtenaw County chapters," said Donna Duvin, executive director of the Washtenaw-Lenawee Chapter. "Just recently, volunteers from both counties worked as a team assisting with the immediate needs of displaced victims resulting from the Adrian College fire."

Devin will now oversee the combined operation.

"A consolidated effort allows us to pool our resources and expertise and re-think how to best deliver vital services and programs to all of our communities," she added.

Chris Conlin, board chair for the combined Washtenaw-Lenawee Chapter, feels positive about the merger.

"Make no mistake about it; the Red Cross is still going strong in Lenawee County," Conlin said. "The Red Cross is well respected in Lenawee, having its own proud tradition of outstanding service. In fact, the 9/11 Blood Drive held at Michigan International Speedway is a paasetting event for other drives in the country."

"While its administrative structure may change, it is still the same Red Cross providing services to Lenawee County's neighbors ... and we will need the help of local volunteers, blood donors and financial donors to continue making this possible."

Taste of Chelsea fundraiser a hit with community

Launching a new fundraiser can be a huge undertaking for those involved, but when the event is for the right cause, and everyone in town gets behind it, the challenge becomes much less daunting. Such was the case with the first annual "Taste of Chelsea" to benefit St. Louis Center, a residential community for persons with developmental disabilities.

More than 200 people came to support the Oct. 1 event and helped to make it a huge success.

"I couldn't be prouder of the people of Chelsea and all of our restaurant supporters," Father Enzo Addari, administrator of St. Louis Center said. "When we asked for help, they all stepped up right away, and many have already called us to reserve their spots for 2012."

Participating restaurants included: Arctic Breakaway, Back to the Roots, Bigby Coffee, Chelsea, Big Boy, Common Grill, Ellie's of Chelsea, Fr. Oncologist prescribes Marinol instead of medical marijuana, says pill form is safer

Drug covered under health insurance

By Bryce Martin
Journal/Register News Service

Marinol, also known as Dronabinol, is used to treat nausea and vomiting caused by chemotherapy in people who have already taken other medications to treat nausea and vomiting without good results.

Dronabinol is also used to treat loss of appetite and weight loss in people who have acquired immunodeficiency syndrome.

Dronabinol is in a class of medications called cannabinoids, working by affecting the area of the brain that controls nausea, vomiting and appetite.

Dr. Eugene Agnone, a prominent oncologist at Michigan Cancer Specialists in Roseville, Mich. frequently prescribes Marinol to his patients.

"We have Marinol, which is a pure extract of THC, which we can prescribe as a pill, and you're not dealing with the unknown variable that is in street-bought marijuana," Agnone said.

Agnone, who admits he is rarely asked by his patients to prescribe medicinal marijuana, said Marinol is a much-preferred alternative.

"The important thing to know is that in people, being older than 40, you can have more psychiatric effects than in younger people," Agnone said of medicinal marijuana.

"You can have some psychoses with it, so you have to be careful."

While Agnone is not totally opposed to prescribing medicinal marijuana, he said he would be very cautious if it was ever warranted.

"I'd have to look into it and see, I just want to make sure it's used properly," he said.

"It's strange, but nobody ever asks me to prescribe it."

The question if marijuana has addictive potential is widely debated, but Agnone said it is addictive if not used with proper medical reason.

"It's like morphine, if you use morphine for true pain, it's not addictive," he said.

"If you use morphine, and you don't have pain, it is addictive. It's the same thing with marijuana."

Agnone does not immediately jump to prescribing Marinol, however, as he uses appropriate analgesics first.

"Marijuana doesn't essentially relieve pain; it's more for nausea, anxiety and appetite," he said.

Marinol is also ideal in certain cases because, for most people, it is covered under health insurance, as it is an actual medication and patients don't have to worry about buying it off the street, he said.

"They don't need the (medical marijuana) card, just a prescription," he added.

Agnone considers Marinol a safer substitute as well.

"I think it's better because it's more constant — you have a constant dose, and you can manage it," he said.

"You don't know what they're cutting marijuana with on the outside. What if there's a little heroin in there? You just don't know."

Speaking of the drug in general, marijuana stimulates certain brain centers and suppresses others, much like alcohol.

It is known to relieve inhibitions, make you feel sleepy or groggy, and helps stimulate the appetite. It stimulates the appetite center, suppresses the cognitive center and helps relieve anxiety.

"We don't know the mechanism, but people who have smoked marijuana who are older have a higher risk of psychosis rather than younger people," Agnone said.

Fixes proposed to medical marijuana law

Legislature, attorney general seek changes to Marijuana Act

By Charles Crumm
Journal Register News Service

Nearly 63 percent of Michigan voters approved the Michigan Medical Marijuana Act, designed to give legitimate medical marijuana users relief from the pain caused by debilitating medical conditions, in November 2008.

However, critics say the hazy wording of the law is causing headaches for law enforcement, the legal system and lawmakers.

Rather than seek to return the voter-approved initiative, however, critics are increasingly looking to the legislative process to bring clarity to the law.

Marijuana remains a Schedule 1 drug under the federal Controlled Substances Act, illegal anywhere in the United States.

That butts federal law up against referendums in states like Michigan allowing medical marijuana, and medical marijuana dispensaries and growers have been raided.

In southeast Michigan, Oakland County Prosecutor Jessica Cooper has maintained that Michigan's medical marijuana act is a law of exception only under explicit circumstances detailed in the act is the use of marijuana for medical purposes legal.

The problems, say critics, is that it isn't explicit enough when it comes to complying with federal law while respecting the will of Michigan voters, leading to civil and criminal court cases.

Cities around the county, for example, have turned to zoning ordinances to prevent medical marijuana dispensaries and businesses, which aren't mentioned within the Michigan law.

And the Michigan Court of Appeals recently ruled against the establishment of medical marijuana dispensaries, saying they are not allowed.

As the legal challenges and criminal cases play out in court, the Michigan Legislature is moving to clarify what is and isn't allowed under the Michigan Medical Marijuana Act.

Lawmakers agree the law needs tweaking, using words and phrases like "poorly written" and "open ended."

"The people voted, and it's obvious, but it was very poorly written," says State Sen. Mike Kowall, R-White Lake.

"There needs to be some guidelines put into place."

Legislation pending to amend the act pinpoints areas where lawmakers feel the Michigan Marijuana Act is vague.

A dozen pieces of legislation are pending in the House or Senate to clarify the constitutional amendment.

The House and Senate bills, backed by numerous lawmakers, would:

- Prohibit medical marijuana bars and clubs, also generically called dispensaries;

- Make the medical marijuana patient registry available to law enforcement;

- Prohibit dispensing medical marijuana within 1,000 feet of a church or school;

- Establish qualifications for medical marijuana caregivers;

- Outline the bona fide patient-physician relationship when it comes to medical marijuana;

- Prohibit felons from being primary medical marijuana caregivers;

- Require photos on medical marijuana registration cards;

- Restrict transfers of medical marijuana and limit the legal defenses;
- Allow local zoning to regulate medical marijuana facilities;

- Establish sentencing guidelines for selling or providing medical marijuana to users without prescriptions;

- Prohibit advertising caregivers or the availability or sale of medical marijuana; and

- Regulate the transport of medical marijuana.

Weighing in on changes lawmakers are making is Michigan Attorney General Bill Schuette, who said he expects most will be approved by the Legislature.

But those fixes that directly affect the voter-passed initiative will require a three-quarters agreement of the Legislature.

Among the proposed changes that would require the three-quarters approval is one that prohibits felons from being caregivers. The others will only take a simple majority.

"The core issue here is the initiative of 2008 has so many holes, it makes Swiss cheese look like a solid block of cheese," says Schuette.

"The challenge is how to patch the holes. That's what the Legislature will look at."

"People say, 'I voted for this in 2008 but I didn't vote to have pot shops across schools or for pot farms,'" Schuette said.

"The law has been hijacked and veered off by those with ulterior motives who want to legalize drugs and make a profit."

"The Legislature will work on this very hard,"

he said.

"I'm very positive about what they're doing."

But he also expects court challenges to continue as the fine points of the law are ironed out.

"I think you'll see a combination," Schuette said.

"I think you'll see some legislative fixes and some court decisions as well. I think you'll see a little bit of both."

Moratoriums are one option for communities

By Chris Laine
Journal Register News Service

Ever since Michigan's Medical Marijuana Act went into law in late 2008, the results have been nothing but, no pun intended, hazy.

Communities throughout Oakland County have been a mixed bag when it comes to the regulation of the substance.

Moratoriums on medical marijuana dispensaries have been the option for many of the communities throughout the county as a wait-and-see game to the act passed almost three years ago.

The moratoriums are designed to give more localized control over whether medical marijuana can be dispensed in the community in question.

In a recent state Court of Appeals decision in August, it was determined that "patient-to-patient" sales of medical marijuana are, in fact, illegal.

It was decided in "State of Michigan v. McQueen" that Mount Pleasant dispensary owners Brandon McQueen and Matthew Taylor were not acting in accordance with the 2008 act by allowing the sale of the drug and keeping a profit of 20 percent in sales.

With this recent court decision, many of the 61 communities in just Oakland County are waiting to see what surrounding municipalities are doing regarding the issue.

Is this drawn-out waiting game a good move for municipalities or detrimental in the long run?

Dan Korobkin, an attorney with the Detroit Chapter of the ACLU, spoke of the problems moratoriums on dispensaries brings about.

"They are essentially unconstitutional at the patient level under the 2008 act," stated Korobkin.

"Communities can enact these moratoriums, but the Medical Marijuana Act should have spelled out the specifics on dispensaries from the beginning."

Korobkin also spoke of how the moratoriums can hurt patients who use the drug.

"The language in the law is very vague when it comes to moratoriums," he added.

"When you have an act that doesn't give much detail, and when you have communities who enact their own interpretation of the law, it ends up harming patients who use the drug for relief."

Not everyone is in favor of banishing or changing moratoriums on dispensaries however.

Gerald Fisher, a professor at The Thomas Cooley

Law School in Auburn Hills, is in favor of communities keeping the moratoriums on dispensaries in place.

"The moratoriums make a lot of sense on the private side of the argument," said Fisher.

"The 2008 law in many ways makes any idea of a dispensary ever becoming profitable unlawful and the recent decision with the McQueen case solidifies this argument."

Fisher also states that, on the other side of the argument, communities would have much less to deal with on the issue.

"The moratoriums would stop all the expenses of enacting various ordinances regarding the act," he said.

"They, in many ways, protect the interests of a community from the very start."

With communities such as Ferndale allowing the dispensing of the substance, other communities in not very far off locales such as Rochester have maintained their stance on keeping the moratoriums in place.

Many communities also have set expiration dates on their respective moratoriums, yet, at the same time, have no clear answer on future regulation.

Kathy Hagaman, clerk and administrator for the Village of Bingham Farms, states the village has a current expiration date of October 24th on their moratorium and commented on the matter by stating "the planning commission is in discussion as to any action relative to this issue."

County residents have also expressed their views on the subject, particularly through social media.

Followers of The Oakland Press' Facebook page have let their voices be heard on the subject.

Facebook user Susan Averbuch commented on the issue by writing, "These moratoriums have taken away the vote of the electorate."

Another Facebook user, Sharon Chilso, commented on the issue by writing, "The government and its agents are doing everything in their power to deny us what we voted for."

With a number of communities in the county allowing the dispensing of the drug and other communities extending their respective moratoriums, the 2008 act continues to confuse both patients and Michigan residents who voted on the act nearly three years ago.

Marijuana has big impact on youth culture

By Dave Herndon and Alan Burdziak
Heritage Media

More than 83 million, or roughly 37 percent of Americans 12 and older, have tried marijuana at least once, according to a 2008 study by the National Household Survey on Drug Abuse.

The study says that makes it the illegal drug most widely used by teens nationwide.

Nearly 50 percent of high school seniors have tried pot at least once, and about 22 percent reported being "current users," which is defined as having used within the last month, the studies says.

"If you look back to the 60s, 70s and 80s, I think just as many young people smoked back then," said Dave Brian, editor of 420 Times magazine.

"Kids in college have always smoked pot; it's their way of life."

Television network MTV broadcasts a show called "True Life." During the most recent season, an entire episode dealt with three teens who have become pot dealers in states where medical marijuana is still illegal.

Another network, Showtime, has had a show on the air called "Weeds," which deals with the trials and tribulations of a suburban housewife who turns to selling marijuana after her husband dies. Eventually, her teenage son also gets into the mix.

Recent movies with marijuana-related themes include "Pineapple Express," a film about the comedic adventures of a pot dealer and one of his clients; "Jay & Silent Bob Strike Back," a film about a pair of drug dealers trying to stop a studio from making a movie based on their lives; and "Super High Me," a documentary about a man who takes college entrance exams while sober and then again while stoned.

Additionally, a three-film series about the adventures of Harold and Kumar all focus on the recreational use of marijuana. With TV shows and movies that include the use of marijuana popping up so frequently, it's no wonder that the group of Americans that interacts with pop culture the most is quickly becoming one of the groups most socially accepting of the drug, according to the study.

Athletes often are role models for children as they grow up, and often remain so into early adulthood. In recent years, athletes such as 14-time Olympic gold medalist Michael Phelps and Cincinnati Bengals' teammates Jerome Simpson and Anthony Collins have been caught on camera or by the police with marijuana or related paraphernalia.

A photo taken of Phelps smoking at a party was released via Facebook, while Simpson and Collins were detained for questioning when a two and a half pound package of marijuana was traced to Simpson's house in Indiana by the U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency.

According to Brian, it's not just that youth today see the drug in use on television that has made it more culturally acceptable.

"Today's youth is probably more educated," he said.

"People can go online and talk about different uses and strains of marijuana. The better educated they are, the better decision they can make."

To date, medical marijuana has been legalized in 16 states and Washington, D.C.

"Any form of legalization is a good thing," Brian said.

"Marijuana at least has redeeming values that other recreational drugs don't. It has a lot of medicinal uses."

According to a report on the medical uses of marijuana published by the "Journal of Ethnopharmacology," marijuana can be used as an appetite stimulant for people with eating disorders and also can be used as an antiemetic to stop vomiting and nausea. Antiemetics often are used for patients with motion sickness or to treat the side effects of chemotherapy.

Other medical uses for marijuana include the treatment of multiple sclerosis, spinal cord injuries, epilepsy, glaucoma and Tourette's syndrome.

"For each pathology, it remains to be determined what type of cannabinoid and what route of administration are the most suitable to maximize the beneficial effects of each preparation and minimize the incidence of undesirable reactions," Mohamed Ben Amar says in the report.

Applegarth offers a rare local treat: honey

By Krista Gjestland
Special Writer

As fall weather rolls in, the Chelsea Farmers Market is sticking around for October. And fortunately for customers, Applegarth Raw Honey has something sweet to help stave off the incoming chilly temperatures.

Applegarth Raw Honey owner and beekeeper Dale Woods produces light and dark varieties of raw honey that he sells at farmers markets all across mid-Michigan.

Woods has been beekeeping for, in his words, "somewhere between 23 and 25 years."

His love for bees and honey, however, go back even further.

"When I was very young, I remember my father and his coon-hunting buddies smashed a beehive," Woods said. "They left the comb sitting in the kitchen. I remember the smell driving me crazy."

So, some years later his wife bought him an introductory beekeeping book, and he bought some used equipment from the newspaper classifieds and began keeping bees.

"I made every mistake in the book," Woods said.

Beekeeping does have its risks and Woods says he has not been exempt from being stung.

"People ask me if I get stung," he said. "I tell them: Do you cobb bacon? Have you been popped before? Of course you have, but you don't stop, do you?"

Woods says it's his love for bees that keeps him going.

"I like working with bees, or as my wife puts it, 'dancing with the ladies,'" he said. "I'd have bees if I wasn't making any money."

Although Woods has a full-time managerial job at Meijer, he dedicates a lot of his spare time to his "ladies."

In addition to taking care of his own bees, Woods is also the vice president of the Michigan Beekeepers club and a member of the Michigan Beekeepers Association. He also teaches beekeeping classes through the Michigan Beekeepers Association.

"I don't have a day off from the end of April to the end of October," Woods said.

Woods begins harvesting his honey in April, when the honeycomb has been capping — or sealed off with a layer of wax — by the bees. He then spins the honey out in an extractor and filters it through a double-screened strainer.

After the honey is strained, it is bottled for sale. He also makes beeswax candles, which extract a darker, richer honey out of the combs.

Woods says what makes his honey different from what is sold in stores, is that it's local. According to him, most honey is imported from China and Argentina and only bottled in the U.S.

Woods' bees live and make their honey in Fowlerville, Mich.

Applegarth Raw Honey is sold in several sizes, from 12-ounce bottles for $5 to 5-pound jugs for $28. The dark honey only comes in one size, and is $6.50.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Chickens do not attract vermin

To the Editor:

It's a shame the lady from the Detroit outskirts wrote in without having read Ana Hotaling's editorial regarding the raising of poultry. Her concern that rats had "probably overlooked" would have been appeased, as nuisance animals such as rats, mice and raccoons were the very first item discussed.

This matter was also raised at a City Council work session, and the Chelsea Backyard Chickens group did its very best to convey the fact that chickens are not vermin magnets.

A common misconception about chickens is that they attract pests looking for an easy meal. While this may be the case in situations where chicken owners are careless and neglect their birds and their living conditions, the fact is that rats, mice, raccoons and other nuisance animals are much more likely to be found by wild bird feeders, pet food dishes and garbage cans, than they are near chickens.

It's quite commendable that the writer had the best interests of neighborhood children in mind, but to truly safeguard kids playing outdoors, measures such as removing all bird feeders, getting rid of pets and storing trash cans inside the home would have to be taken.

A residential property is as vermin free as its owner maintains it, regardless of whether or not chickens are kept.

Nurse finds creative spark in watercolor painting

By Crystal Hayduk
Special Writer

As a woman who spent most of her adult life focusing her attention on her family and her part-time work as a registered nurse, Sally Wetzel would not have guessed that someday she would be a painter.

"I've always felt the creative urge, but I expressed myself in fibers," she said.

Sally Wetzel

Wetzel enjoyed quilting and even sold her work at craft fairs.

But when her youngest child left for college, Wetzel sought something to help combat the "empty nest blues." She found solace as a volunteer at the Chelsea Center for the Arts.

"Both of my kids had been active in music and performing arts during school, and I had been driving them to Ann Arbor for music," Wetzel said. "I thought, 'How neat it is that folks can take their kids (for lessons) locally?'"

Wetzel became acquainted with new friends through the CCA and took a trip to Italy with them in 2000. It was there that she discovered an interest in paintings.

Upon her return to Chelsea, Wetzel began to take classes at the CCA.

"First drawing, then watercolors and other classes, and before too long, I was immersed in painting," she said, reminiscing.

Wetzel paints in watercolors and oils, but she prefers the "brightness and transparency" of watercolors.

Despite the challenge of taming the unpredictable nature of watercolors, Wetzel likes to keep her work more representational than literal, and watercolors work best for that.

Wetzel often paints florals and landscapes and is inspired by special places she's been, as well as the natural surroundings of her Sylvan Township home.

She is also inspired by special people. Wetzel hopes to paint a portrait of each of her four grand children.

"Spending time with them is a priority for me," she said. "They won't stay little forever."

Wetzel has found that painting has been a journey as she's learned new techniques and met interesting people along the way.

"It's also very relaxing," she said. "It's impossible to worry when you're painting. It's a stress reducer and very calming."

Wetzel credits her supportive family to helping her succeed as an artist. Her husband does all of the matting and framing for her work.

In addition to having her work displayed during October at the Antiques Mall at 1178 South M-52, Wetzel's paintings and cards can also be seen at the New Chelsea Market and online at www.sally-wetzel.com.

Wetzel's words of advice to aspiring artists: "It's never too late - don't be afraid to try something new. A whole new world can open up to you."

Chelsea MOPS group seeks to help more area mothers

By Crystal Hayduk
Special Writer

Dexter resident Karen Dec said that Chelsea MOPS helped to save her life. As a new mom to her first baby, she felt the need to connect with other moms who understood her feelings about motherhood and life; and with more experienced moms who could give her answers and ideas about parenting. She found those connections at Chelsea MOPS.

"Just a couple hours of free space made all the difference," Dec said of the nurturing she found among the women at the MOPS meetings. According to their website, "MOPS is an international, interdenominational Christian organization that exists to encourage, equip, and help women with children from birth through kindergarten to become the best moms they can be." Their tagline is "Better moms make a better world."

group's publicity coordinator, said that the Chelsea MOPS group is the only group between Jackson and Ann Arbor, serving mothers from the communities of Chelsea, Dexter, Grass Lake, Manchester, and Stockbridge. The local group, first established in 2004, meets every other Friday during the school year from 9 to 11 am at Chelsea First United Methodist Church, 128 Park Street.

The MOPS theme for the year is "MomSense: Bold, Loving, Sensible" based on 2 Timothy 1:7, which reads, "God doesn't want us to be shy with his gifts, but bold, loving and sensible."

'According to Dec, the theme suggests that mothering is like playing a board game in which mothers have to navigate through life, make decisions, and develop mothering strategies. At meetings, women take turns bringing potluck-style breakfast. They may either have a speaker, discussion time, or work on a meaningful project.

Childcare is provided for no charge. Children over age 2 attend the MOPPETS program, which provides a Christian-based curriculum.

The cost to attend the program is $83.95 for the entire school year, but scholarship funds are available to those who need it. "Cost is never a reason not to attend," Dec said.

Advance registration is requested for women desiring to utilize childcare. Registration is available on the website at www.chelseamops.org or by emailing Erin Lightfoot at info@chelseamops.org.

OUR EYES SAFE AT HOME

Almost half of all eye injuries occur in and around the home. Cooking, cleaning, home repair, yard work and even hobbies all pose potential sight threatening hazards. Wearing protective eyewear could prevent up to 90% of eye injuries at home. For that reason, we recommend wearing ANSI-approved safety glasses when performing activities such as:

- Mowing and trimming
- Operating power tools
- Using hazardous chemicals and cleaners
- Spreading fertilizer

If you don't require vision correction, or if you wear contact lenses, you can purchase ANSI-approved safety glasses at hardware stores or home improvement centers. For those who require correction, our office can prescribe prescription safety glasses that meet ANSI standards.

Health tied to global, local farming issues

By Amy Bell
Heritage Media

Michigan is bucking the national trend when it comes to its number of farmers.

Catherine Badgley, University of Michigan assistant professor of ecology and evolutionary biology and paleontologist, said Michigan has more farmers now than what it did 10 years ago.

Badgley was speaking at the First United Methodist Church in Chelsea on Monday during "Food, Health & Sustainability: From Gardens to Global Supply," a Chelsea Area Garden Club-sponsored event.

Each fall, the club sponsors a community outreach program to share knowledge about gardening with the community.

Badgley spoke about the challenges facing the food system and solutions on local, national and global levels.

On a local level, Badgley said the food movement is expanding, especially with farmers markets that have been sprouting up throughout the area.

Throughout the state, gardens are now found in schools, in urban areas like Detroit and even convention centers.

There has also been an increase in organic farms and organic food production, which is safer for farmers and healthier for the environment at large, she said.

"There's a great public demand for this kind of food," she said.

On a national level, farm-

Catherine Badgley, a University of Michigan assistant professor of ecology and evolutionary biology and paleontologist, spoke at First United Methodist Church in Chelsea. The event was sponsored by the Chelsea Area Garden Club.

ers are facing a number of challenges like dealing with large seed companies that are dominating the industry and placing patents on seeds.

"There has been a tremendous concentration of economic power in the hands of just a small number of companies," she said. "As a consequence, these companies not only have a lot of economic power, they also have a lot of political power."

Global issues discussed include legislation such as the North American Free Trade Agreement enacted in 1994 under the Clinton administration.

NAFTA caused the U.S. to sell its grain surpluses to Mexico, which, in turn, put the smaller farms out of business. Because the price of corn drastically decreased due to the excess supply, the farmers came to the United States. Through the next 15 years, this exacerbated the immigration situation in the U.S., she said.

"This is one of the ways that our food system has a huge impact on those of other countries," she said.

Another topic was a conversation about the paradoxes within the food system itself.

Badgley said much of the wealth in farming is tied up in large, monocultural farms owned by the extremely wealthy whereas most of the world's farmers are poor and live on less than 25 acres of land.

"We have a big imbalance between where the wealth is in agriculture compared to where most of the farmers are in agriculture," she said.

Another paradox involves the imbalance of calorie consumption throughout the world.

The disbursement of calorie consumption is widespread, with the United States and the European Union near the top while many others are below what is considered to be nutritionally sound, she said.

"As a consequence, we have a very strange situation now that we have as many overfed as we have underfed," she said.

A lack of calories and protein can lead to blindness and inadequate development in children, but too many can lead to conditions such as type II diabetes and heart disease.

"We have a substantial amount of the world's population that is very poorly nourished but in exactly opposite ways," she said.

In addition to too much or too little food, there are also issues with a rise in food prices.

Badgley said although the price of food that consumers pay is increasing, the cost of fertilizer and pesticides are rising more rapidly.

"On average, farmers are not benefiting from this rise in food prices, and, of course, consumers aren't benefiting either," she said.

One attendee said a friend of hers who owns an apple orchard in Jackson has to pay $15,000 for chemicals for his crops.

Badgley said food can be used to bring people together as it is very personal and can bring cultures together.

"These things are very much part of what we are and basically the things that we enjoy about what we are and where our families have come from, what kinds of

Broadway artists to visit Chelsea

Michiganders will be able to enjoy Broadway Oct. 20 without the long trek to New York with the program "Bringing Broadway to You."

Broadway artists, including Leslie Kritzer and Mike Eldred, and local students will perform 7:30 p.m. at Chelsea High School.

Kritzer's Broadway credits include "Sondheim on Sondheim," "A Catered Affair" (Drama Desk Nomination), "Legally Blonde" (Clarence Derwent Award for Most Promising Performer) and "Hairspray."

Eldred is one of North America's most in-demand and beloved tenors. He thrilled audiences on Broadway in "Les Miserables" in the role of Jean Valjean and starred as Tony in the Nashville Symphony's production of "West Side Story," earning international praise as "arguably the best Tony on record."

"Bringing Broadway to You" is the brainchild of Dan Cooney, a Broadway artist and the producing artistic director of The Encore Musical Theatre Company in Dexter, and well-known local talent Chuck Colby, of "Three Men and a Tenor" fame.

Tickets to this one-night only event will cost $15 for adults and $10 or seniors and students in advance. They are available at Chelsea Pharmacy now and at the door of the event for $20 for adults and $15 for students and seniors. Proceeds from the concert will go directly toward the high school music program.

100 participate in area CROP Hunger Walk

For 24 years, the Chelsea/Dexter CROP Hunger Walk has allowed residents to walk to help the poor and hungry in local communities and around the world through Church World Service and other charitable organizations — with 15 percent of funds raised going toward Faith in Action.

This year's event on Oct. 2 at St. Paul's United Church of Christ was no different.

Antoinette Lloyd Evans, the assistant director of the Michigan region of CROP, spoke about Church World Service's efforts to help the women of Kenya bring clean water to their villages and also of her trip this year to Nicaragua and Honduras to see how CWS is partnering with people in Central America. The Reverend James Coyl, the new Pastor of St. Paul's, was pleased to join in this effort and addressed the walkers, praising them in their efforts to help provide food and water to their brothers and sisters around the world. He also led the group in a prayer before they began their Walk.

The approximately 100 men, women and children then began either a 1-mile or a 5-mile walk around Chelsea. They soon returned to St. Paul's for refreshments, a possible massage, and pleasant conversation. The final total raised will not be known for some time, until matching funds, online contributions, and last-minute contributions are all added up. However, last year's Crop Hunger Walk, with about the same number of walkers, raised $29,000.

Storytelling with Wild Swan

At left, Andrea Lu of Dexter and her two children, first-grader Elena and Elise, 4, enjoy the theater's performance.

The Wild Swan Theater amused and entertained crowds of Dexter children at the Dexter District Library Friday. Dexter Community Schools had no school that day, and those who attended were treated to action-packed performances of "The Three Little Pigs," "Reynard the Fox" and "Three Billy Goats Gruff."

Saddling up for success

Chelsea's Zynda is rewriting the record books

By Terry Jacoby
Heritage Media

Talk about dominating one's sport. It just doesn't get much better than Micayla Zynda. The Chelsea junior - oh, yeah and her horse - saddled up quite a showing at the equestrian district meet a few weeks back in Mason.

Check this out:
For the two day meet, Zynda participated in 15 classes and took 11 first places and four second places helping lead the Bulldogs to a district championship.

Zynda was first in saddleseat showmanship twice, saddleseat equitation twice, saddleseat pattern twice, saddleseat bareback twice, and once in hunt seat bareback, western equitation, and western bareback. She also took second place in hunt seat equitation, western bareback, western equitation and hunt seat bareback.

She was just four points off a perfect score but she's always willing to share points with her teammates. As dominant as she is, Zynda is a team player first and wears the Chelsea colors with pride and commitment.

Meet Micayla

Name: Micayla Zynda

High School: Chelsea

Age: 16

Year: Junior

Parents: Robin and Jim Zynda

Other sports, clubs and hobbies: Varsity tennis, Link Crew, Key Club, Venture Crew. Currently working at Silver Maples of Chelsea.

Horse: "The horse I use for the equestrian team is a mare named Frivolous Motion. I call her Fizz/Fizzy for short."

Favorite part of equestrian: "My favorite part of the sport would be winning, of course," she said smiling.

Least favorite part: "Staying up until 1 in the morning on show weekends, trying to get the horse and equipment prepared."

Bulldogs ride to 3rd place at regionals

By Terry Jacoby
Heritage Media

The Chelsea equestrian team rode into the regionals with a trip to the state finals on their minds but came up one place short at the Region E Division A regional. And it was close. Very close.

Oxford ran away with the tournament, racking up an impressive 577 points. Vicksburg took second place with 348 while Chelsea was third at 325.

Coldwater was fourth with 310 and Saline was fifth with 306.

A number of Chelsea riders took either first or second against some tough competition.

Micayla Zynda took first place in Hunt Seat

Bareback and Western Bareback. The junior also took second in Saddle Seat Bareback.

Morgan Baldwin also had two first-place finishes. She took first in Flags and in Pole Bending. She also was second Cloverleaf (Barrels) and in Two-Person Relay with Tonya Heimerdinger.

Ciara Lesko was another double winner for the Bulldogs, taking first in Saddle Seat Pattern and first in Saddle Seat Fitting and Showing.

Anyssa Marsh was second in both Western Fitting & Showing and in Hunt Seat Equitation.

Chase Barnes was second in Hunt Seat Bareback.

The team placed third through 10th in 50 classes.

Chelsea Junior Micayla Zynda recently took 11 first-place finishes in the 15 events she entered.

Athletes of the Week

Jack McDougall, Chelsea

Jack McDougall had five catches for 80 yards and two touchdowns in Chelsea's 42-28 win at Tecumseh. The Bulldogs scored twice in the fourth quarter to break a 28-28 tie with the Indians. McDougall caught this TD pass in front of the Tecumseh defender in the end zone.

Rare Williams, Lincoln

The Lincoln wideout (No. 80) had five catches for 143 yards and two touchdowns in Lincoln's impressive 27-12 win Friday night over visiting Adrian.

Mitch Kimball, Dexter

Mitch Kimball gets his first-place SEC medal from Chelsea coach Rahn Rosentreter. Kimball took first at No. 3 singles for the Dreads.

Justin Barnes, Saline

The Hornet senior set a Saline High School rushing record in Thursday's win over Ann Arbor Huron. Barnes rushed for 355 yards and five touchdowns in a 45-25 victory.

Bulldogs going PINK in matchup at Dexter

By Terry Jacoby
Heritage Media

Some rivalries can get ugly. But this one is going pink. The Dexter volleyball team will host its annual Big Pink game, "Pass, Set, Cure," on Tuesday at Dexter High School. The Dreads will take on rival Chelsea at 7 p.m. in a matchup of talented varsity teams. The Dreads are raising money for two local families currently battling breast cancer right now. Chelsea will be raising money for the Susan G. Komen foundation. Fans are being asked to come out and support the girls - and a great cause.

Chelsea

The Chelsea volleyball team defeated Lincoln 26-24, 25-13 and 25-16 last Tuesday to improve to 7-2 in the Southeastern Conference. The Bulldogs celebrated Parent's Night with the win over the Railsplitters. The Bulldogs went 1-4 on Saturday at the competitive Saline Invitational. The victory was against Washtenaw Christian, 25-16 and 25-21. The Bulldogs lost to SMCC 19-25, 19-25; Carman Ainsworth 20-25, 10-25; Clinton 20-25, 19-25; and Gabriel Richard 19-25, 25-23 and 14-16. Chelsea is now 17-13-3 overall on the season.

Dexter

There are games in every season and in every sport in which a loss can come back and help you later in the season - like in the playoffs or a championship game. Dexter volleyball coach Erin Penn and her talented Dreadnaughts hope that last Tuesday night's loss to Tecumseh is one of those games. The Dreads fell 21-25, 25-20, 25-20, 13-25 and 13-15 to the Indians in an SEC showdown. Caitlin Foote led the Dreads with 22 kills, 18 digs and six aces. Elle Presley had 39 assists and 13 digs while Susanna Pitkerton had 16 digs for Dexter.

Money's worth

Cashing in on the thrill of the hunt

TAYLOR MADE ADVENTURES

RICK TAYLOR

You'll often hear of the "thrill of the hunt" from successful hunters.

They'll talk about a big buck or nice doe coming into shooting range and then making a great shot resulting in a nice harvest. Some people find the word "harvest" offensive because it hides the true intention of what a hunter has actually done.

Of course, that would be taking the life of a deer, killing it to be more specific.

The focus of non-hunters typically focuses on this aspect of hunting, the killing part. They see a beautiful creature in the woods and then they see the death of that animal. It's a visceral and frustrating thing for some people to wrap their head around.

Why shoot that deer when you can go to the grocery store and get your own organic fed meat?

You want to know what bothers me the most? How can people find what I do to be so offensive yet they don't mind eating beef, chicken or pork? Somebody has to raise them, feed them, then have their lives snuffed out in order to feed all

Cash cow (deer)

Outdoors writer Rick Taylor recently shot and killed a doe while bow hunting in Dexter. The following is how much his kill would be worth at the grocery store.

- 36 pounds of lean venison burger ($3.59 per pound at the grocery store)
- 25 pounds of jerky ($8 per pack average)
- 10 pounds of stew meat ($4.49 per pound)
- 16 pounds of tenderloin and back straps (14.99 per pound)
- 12 pounds of roast meat (4.39 per pound)

FINAL COST: $667

of us. It is what it is. I can speak for the majority of hunters when answering the above question. What could possibly be more organic than wild game? I know for a fact that white tail deer, elk, rabbit and bear forage for their food by eating natural vegetation. It's that simple. More importantly, hunters don't talk about how much meat they put in the freezer; they have no reason to discuss it. I, however, hope to open the eyes of the non-hunting public by showing you how much meat can be attained from hunting.

Cows, pigs, chicken and turkeys are fed a multitude of chemicals to make them grow faster so they can be slaughtered quicker for human consumption. The organic meats available at the grocery store are few and far between. Even more insulting are the absurd prices they're asking for their meat.

Hunters don't typically talk about their groceries because it's such a "no brainer" to eat what you kill. Besides, the hunting story is much more exciting than the look on your face picking up your own meat from the butcher.

Some of you may be saying, "oh, sure you saved money but how much did you spend up front before shooting your prey?"

The answer is simple. I spend $15 per deer license which comes to a total of $30. I then spent $90 for the butcher fees and an additional $120 for the venison jerky processing. My total cost for everything is $230 which puts my cost per pound of meat at $2.32 after expenses.

Money, I may add, going back into the local economy.

In all fairness, there are other costs as well. They include the cost of arrows; bow itself, hunting clothes and broad heads. The total investment for those items fall into the range of about $300. However, my bow has killed many, many deer over the last five years and my arrows are reused about 70 percent of the time because they go completely through the deer.

I'm sure there's an accountant that could perform a depreciation schedule on my equipment if so inclined. The point is simple - no pun intended. Killing your own game is not only healthy but also a huge cost savings from the grocery store.

I'll be elk hunting in Wyoming the day after this article is published and I look forward to writing about it. Please tell me about your exciting hunting stories this year and the winner will be featured in a future column. Sadly, I heard of a hunter who sustained a devastating injury last week in the Chelsea area. My thoughts and prayers are with this person and their family.

Your story ideas and comments are warmly welcomed. I can be reached at (734)223-5656 cell or by email at rtaylor@reinhardtallors.

Bradley takes 1st at Portage Invitational

By Terry Jacoby
Heritage Media

Boys CC

In a possible preview of the state championship, Chelsea senior Bryce Bradley defeated Mason's Tanner Hinckle to finish first overall at the prestigious and competitive Portage Invitational on Saturday.

"Bryce followed up August Pappas' victory at this meet last year with a convincing win of his own," Chelsea coach Eric Swager said. "He avenged an earlier loss to state meet favorite Tanner Hinckle of Mason by running a picture-perfect game plan. Earlier in the week, we discussed how the best strategy would be to go out conservatively and shoot for a negative split last mile."

Bradley was 20th at the half mile mark, slid into the top 10 by the mile, was fourth at the two mile, then threw down a sizzling 4:49 over the last 1600 meters to win convincingly.

"Bryce's time was only 5 seconds from our school record, was the fastest time at Portage in any division, and moves him into the top 20 times ever run on that Portage course," Swager said. "A truly remarkable achievement."

The Bulldogs finished 14th with 440 points. Mason took first (67) with St. Joseph second (102) and Forest Hills Eastern third (135) in the 39-team field.

"This is the largest, most prestigious regular season race in the state with nine of the top 10 teams in the state participating," Swager said. "It is a great preview for the type of competition we will see at the state finals (if we can qualify)."

Jacob Stubbs took 73rd place (17:34), Avery Osentoski was 113th (18:04), Charlie Miller was 125th (18:13), Bram Parkinson was 135th (18:23), Jack Abernethy was 186th (18:24) and David Trimas was 217th (19:38).

"Jacob Stubbs ran tough, as did Avery Osentoski and Charlie Miller," Swager said. "Our 14th place finish was just about where I thought we would finish against this tough field."

In the JV race, Austin Horn underwent a great awakening to pull away for a dominant victory, and freshman Joe Vermilye continues to impress, earning a medal in his first trip.

Although it was a hot day, Chelsea had half a dozen runners run within 10 seconds of their lifetime best, including Matt Proegler who ran his PR by 15 seconds.

"While there were many encouraging signs, I still must find seven varsity guys who can all perform well at the same time," Swager said. "We have a couple weeks left to do this, and I am looking forward to the challenge. All in all, a fun, exciting day."

What makes her so good? Her coach can best answer that question.

"Her dedication to the team and her dedication to her horse," said Chelsea equestrian coach Lucy Heimerdinger. "When Micayla is at a practice she really focuses on herself and her horse. Always striving for a better ride, she is willing and able to try anything that's asked of her."

"Even though Micayla is a quiet person she is always listening, learning and enjoys being with the other team members. Everyone enjoys having her on the team, not because she places so well, but because she's fun to be around and at the same time serious about her riding."

Zynda, one of the captains of the team, has been riding for nine years and has been on the CHS equestrian team for six years.

"She wins with grace and doesn't brag about her winnings," Heimerdinger said. "She is an excellent example of what a team member should be. You can tell she is a very devoted team member when she offers to give up any of her classes so another member has a chance to show in another class."

Zynda came to the team as a sixth grader in 2007. The junior team has been District Champions for six years since 2006 and she was part of that for three years.

In 2009 as a freshman, Zynda was on the team that won the state championship and was a major part of winning that title. She also was part of the team that made it to the state championship in 2010.

Zynda's love of horses began at an early age, when she was just 2 or 3 years old.

"My first few shows were as a 3-year-old, showing with my cousin (she would lead me around the arena)," Zynda said. "My dedication to my riding and to horses grew from there. At the age of 7, I started taking riding lessons at Paddyngton Farms and have been riding and training there for almost 10 years."

When she was 9, Zynda received quite the birthday present. A horse. Soon after she started showing him competitively in local shows.

"As my skills increased, I started showing at higher ranked shows, such as the Morgan and Saddlebred circuits (two different breeds of horses)," she said. "Each year, I compete at the breed shows as well as participating on the Chelsea High School equestrian team."

She tries to ride every day. But with her busy schedule it's not always possible.

"The only way that you can get better at riding is to practice regularly and have coaches and trainers critique your riding style and skills," she said. "I like to focus on a few suggestions each week and work on them until I have mastered them."

That strategy is obviously working.

Equestrian team practice is scheduled at least two to three times a week, throughout the summer and fall. The coaches encourage everyone to show at the local shows on the weekends to get more experience in the show ring.

When school finally starts, so do the equestrian meets with a total of three district level meets. The team with the most points moves on to the regionals. At the end of regionals, the top two teams from each regional playoff have the opportunity to compete at states.

"(At states) it is the survival of the fittest," she says. "Each team fighting to win the state title and it's very challenging because you are competing against the best riders from all around Michigan."

"One of the highlights in a career already filled with highlights came her freshman year.

"I was one of five riders on the Chelsea team to compete at states," she said. "After a lot of hard work and dedication, we captured the championship by one point."

Of course taking first in 11 of 15 events also ranks right up there.

"That was a new personal record for me and I believe for the Chelsea equestrian team as well," she said. "Setting a record was an incredible feeling."

It's clear that this young lady is an incredible rider. But it wouldn't mean much without her teammates riding along side her.

"I love being able to share my passion for horses with my peers," she said. "It is really great to get to know everyone and work as a team toward a common goal. We are all dedicated and hard-working riders, even though we may ride in different events. We all have different talents that we bring to the team."

Zynda, who would like to major in forensic science in college and is already considering Michigan State and Penn State, has some valuable advice to youngsters discovering the joys of equestrian.

"I would recommend that if someone is thinking about starting to ride and show, make sure that they really want to do it," she said. "Once you get involved in horses, it is very time consuming and expensive."

"If you own a horse, you can't just walk away from them if you don't feel like riding. You are the horse's care taker, which means cleaning stalls, feeding them, grooming them, calling the vet, etc. Having a horse is like having a kid."

She has taken her own advice. "Riding has taught me how to be a responsible and dedicated individual," she said. "I take my riding very seriously, but when I have time, I also enjoy leisurely rides through the fields. Riding has impacted my life significantly and I wouldn't be the same person without it."

Girls run to first at Hudson

The Chelsea girls' cross country team placed two runners in the top 10 and ran off with first place at the 15-team Hudson Invitational on a beautiful Saturday.

"We ran very well," Chelsea coach Pat Clarke said. "We were focused as a team and performed well."

Chelsea finished with 70 points, 25 points better than second-place finishers Jackson Northwest. Wauseon (Ohio) was third and Manchester finished fourth (120).

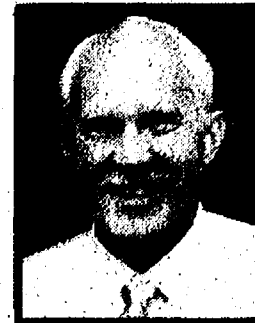

"It was a good day to run and the team ran well," Clarke said. "We continue to improve which is our goal for each meet."

Freshman Maegen Hopkins and senior Danielle Dahl had fine races placing fifth and sixth respectively to lead the way for the Bulldogs. Hopkins finished in 19 minutes, 45 seconds while Dahl was right behind her in 19:54.

Senior Jessi Battaglia had her best race of the season to finish 14th in 20:45. Kennedy Aldrich clocked in at 21:24 to take 21st place and Madison Nelson finished in 21:38 and placed 24th.

Junior Ella Fritzeimer ran her best time of the season (21:40) to finish 25th.

Bulldogs head to state final

That's what you would call a state meet.

The Chelsea tennis team jumped on the backs of their awesome doubles teams and rode off to the state championships after placing second at the regionals last week.

Chelsea finished with 22 points, only three points behind champion Trenton. The top two teams qualify for the state meet.

Chelsea's regional winners were Bret Argir and Jayden Sweeny at No. 1 doubles, Brett Bowersox and Mike Varner at No. 2 doubles, and Nick Young and Nate England at No. 3 doubles.

The Bulldogs' No. 4 doubles team of Connor Daily and Josh Galbreath placed second.

The Bulldogs travel to Holly on Friday for the state tournament.

Chelsea football is model of success

The Chelsea football team has a plan. The Bulldogs are organized and prepared and they never seem to get too high or too low no matter the situation.

Is this what separates them from the rest? Is it really that simple?

While covering the Dexter-Ypsilanti showdown on Friday night, I was getting updates throughout the evening on the Chelsea-Tecumseh game (yes, from Burrill). And despite his updates (13-7 Tecumseh, 21-21, 28-28) I knew what the final text would be. Something like, Chelsea didn't play well but they still won. Or it wasn't their best effort but they pulled it out. Or I've seen them play better, but a win is a win.

There was no doubt in my mind that the Bulldogs would win the game.

Final text: "42-28 Chelsea wins. It was ugly, but another W."

Welcome to Chelsea football.

I started talking to a friend on the Dexter sideline. I was talking to him but I was more or less talking to myself, trying to figure out what it was with the Chelsea football program.

I've only been covering them now for a few years and every time I've seen them, I think, yeah, they're good, but not great. Then I go see another game and I think, wow, Chelsea is so much better than these teams.

On Thursday I was at the Walled Lake Northern-Lakeland game and my wife got pretty tired of me saying, Chelsea would crush these teams. In fact she told me to leave when I said, you could combine these two teams and Chelsea would crush them. And these are big schools we are talking about.

I was watching the Walled Lake Northern sideline and saw a huge difference between the Knights and the Bulldogs. And I see it almost every week. Chelsea just seems more organized. More disciplined. They have a plan and they stick to it and nine times out of 10, it works.

That's what I was saying to myself on the Dexter sideline. As I watching Dexter's talented QB Mike Mioduszewski, my friend asked how good would Chelsea be if they had him at QB. And how much better would he be playing for Chelsea.

I said, yeah, really. But not really.

You see, it doesn't matter who is playing QB for Chelsea. It doesn't matter who the running back is - although following up four years of Nick Hill with Berkley Edwards certainly helps.

While the players certainly matter, the system is what separates the wins from the losses. And the players matter most because they buy into this system. They believe in the system. And why not? It works. Just look it up.

Bulldogs knock off Lincoln, 2-1

By Terry Jacoby
Heritage Media

The Chelsea soccer team took on a talented Lincoln club on Thursday and scored first and last to knock off the Splitters 2-1 in a Southeastern Conference showdown in Chelsea.

Senior Vincent Kause helped stick this one in the win column when he scored with just 2 minutes to play in the game. The Chelsea defense, led by goalie Drew Simons, shut the door the rest of the way to preserve the win.

It was fitting that a senior would score the winner on Senior Night.

Chelsea took a 1-0 lead in the first half off a goal from junior Kevin Fournier. The game went back and forth a bit with Lincoln getting a few nice shots on goal in the first half. But Simons made some big stops in net for the Bulldogs to maintain the lead at the break.

Lincoln scored their equalizer early in the second half off a corner kick that was sent to the back post for a Lincoln player crashing the net.

Chelsea controlled much of the second half, out shooting Lincoln in the contest 13-6.

Earlier in the week, the Bulldogs lost a shootout to Monroe, 7-6. "It was a very exciting game that went back and forth quite a bit with lots of scoring," Chelsea coach Shawn Hayes said.

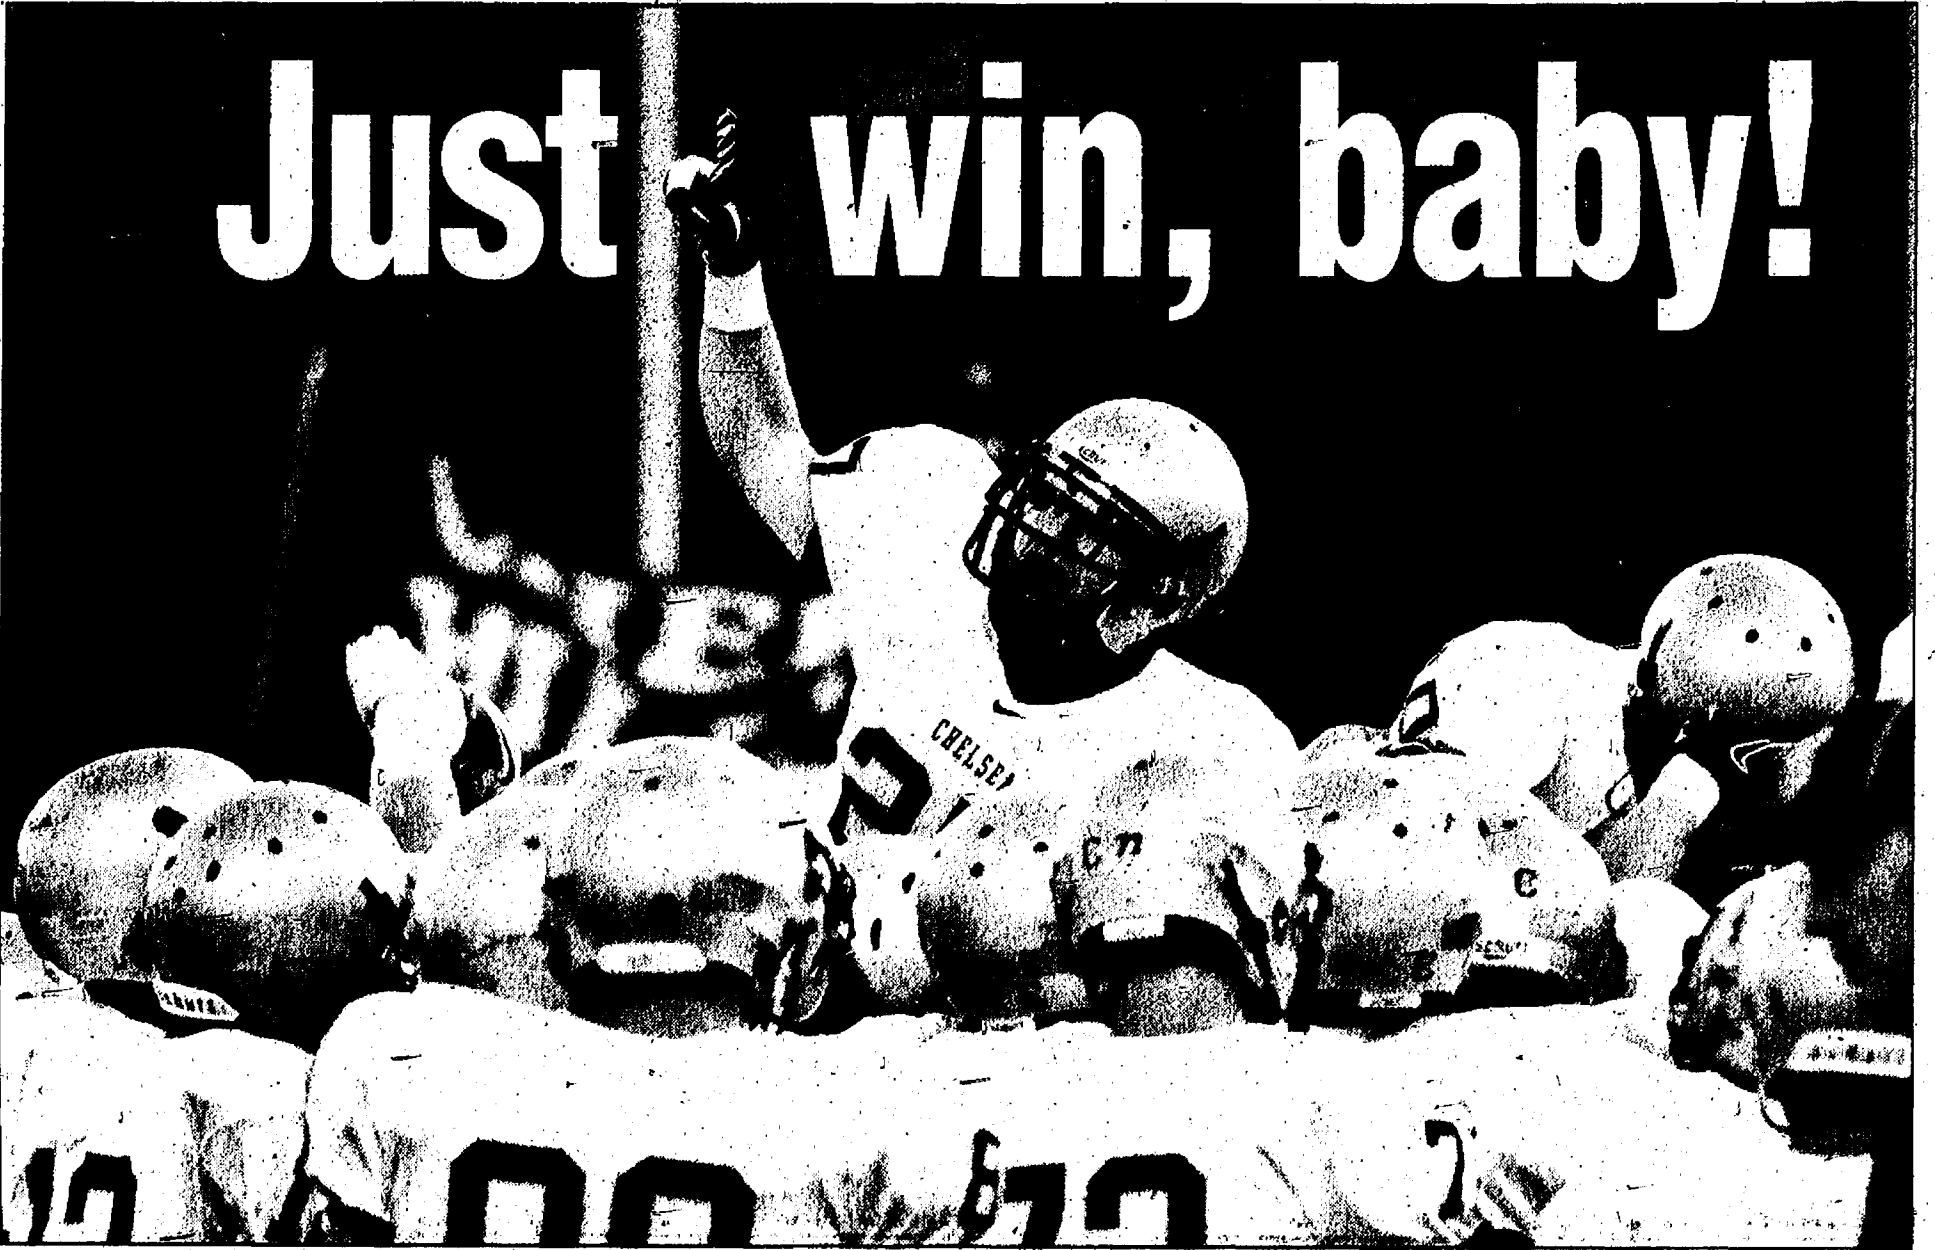

Monroe took a 5-1 lead before a red card was given to a Monroe player for a deliberate handball in the penalty box. The Bulldogs made it 5-2 after scoring on the penalty kick.

The game went back and forth for the remaining 50 minutes. Chelsea came up just short of pulling off an impressive comeback.

The Bulldogs travel to Dexter for a battle with the rival Dreadnaughts on Thursday.

HIGH SCHOOL FOOTBALL: CHELSEA 42, TECUMSEH 28

Chelsea improves to 6-1 with win over Tecumseh

By Terry Jacoby
Heritage Media

It wasn't supposed to be this difficult. But despite the final score, the Chelsea Bulldogs had their hands full Friday night at Tecumseh.

The Indians came into the game with just two wins on the season and only one SEC victory against a visiting Chelsea team, boasting a 5-1 record without a blemish in the SEC. It had all the makings of a blowout.

Well, no one in Yankee Stadium gave the Tigers much of a chance last Thursday and we all know how that turned out. Game Set. Series.

A one-yard TD run by the Indians with 8:02 left in the third quarter tied the game at 21-21 and the word upset was making its way around the beautiful streets of downtown Tecumseh. Chelsea came right back and scored, but Tecumseh answered again late in the third quarter to tie it up at 28-28.

Hammer time. There is a reason why the Bulldogs are the Bulldogs and why they are now 6-1 on the season and headed to another playoff appearance. Chelsea scored twice in the fourth quarter and the defense pitched a shutout as the Bulldogs escaped with a 42-28 victory.

Berkley Edwards had another outstanding game for Chelsea. The junior running back had 28 carries for 167 yards, including a 64-yard TD run in the first quarter. Quarterback Jarred Scheese had 11 carries for 44 yards as the Bulldogs finished with 238 yards rushing on 52 attempts.

Scheese, who sat out the second half of last week's game with an injury, was 12 of 19 passing for 182 yards and three scores. He also was sacked three times. Jack McDougall had five catches for 80 yards and two touchdowns. Colton Platt had four catches for 65 yards, including a touchdown.

The Bulldogs dominated the fourth quarter, which began with Chelsea marching down the field on a drive that began at its own 13-yard line after a penalty on the kickoff.

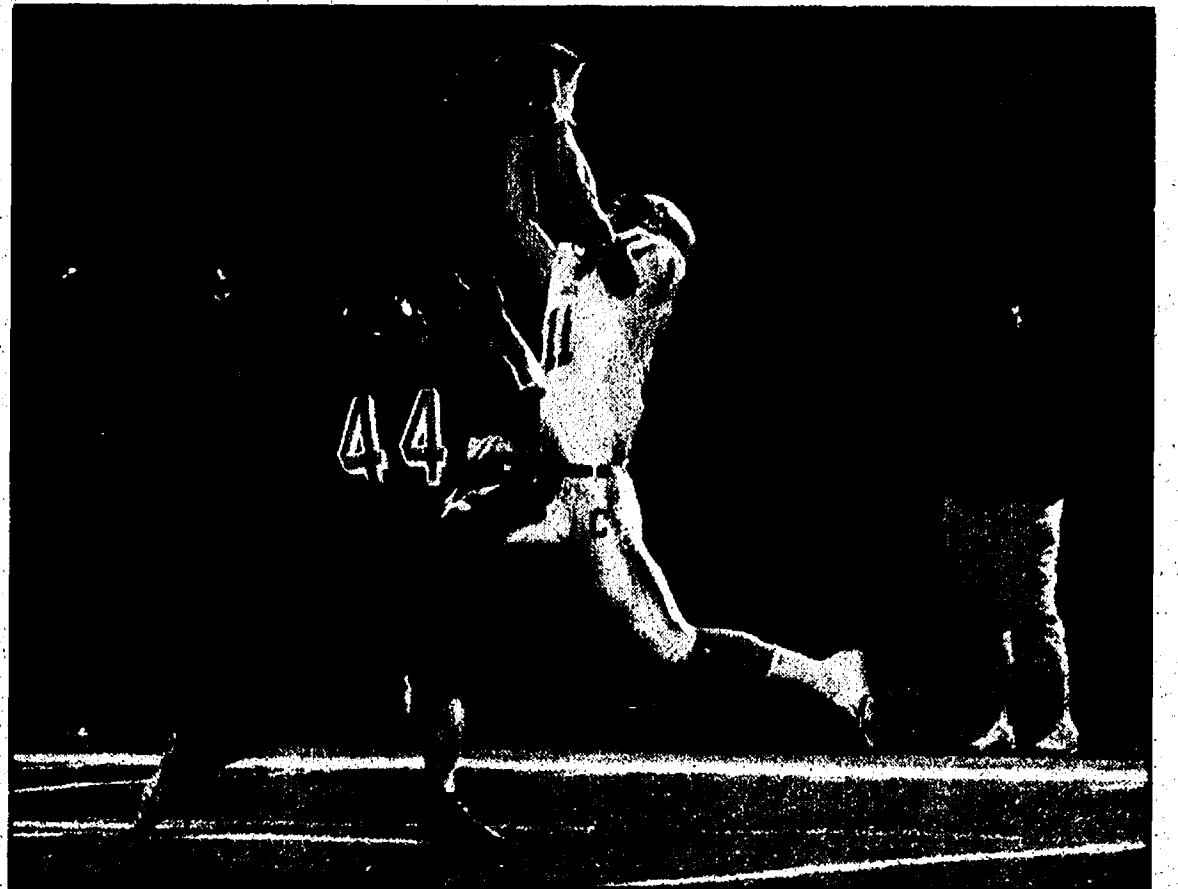

The 13-play, 77-yard drive ended with the Bulldogs scoring on a five-yard pass from Scheese to McDougall. Zach Rabbitt nailed the extra point to give Chelsea a 35-28 lead with 9:18 to play in the game.

The big play of the drive - and perhaps the game - came near the end of the third quarter when Scheese hooked up with McDougall on a 36-yard pass on third and six from their own 17-yard line.

The Bulldogs then shocked the world, but especially Tecumseh, with an onside kick. Chelsea recovered - the Indians never did. And the Bulldogs took over at the Tecumseh 47-yard line.

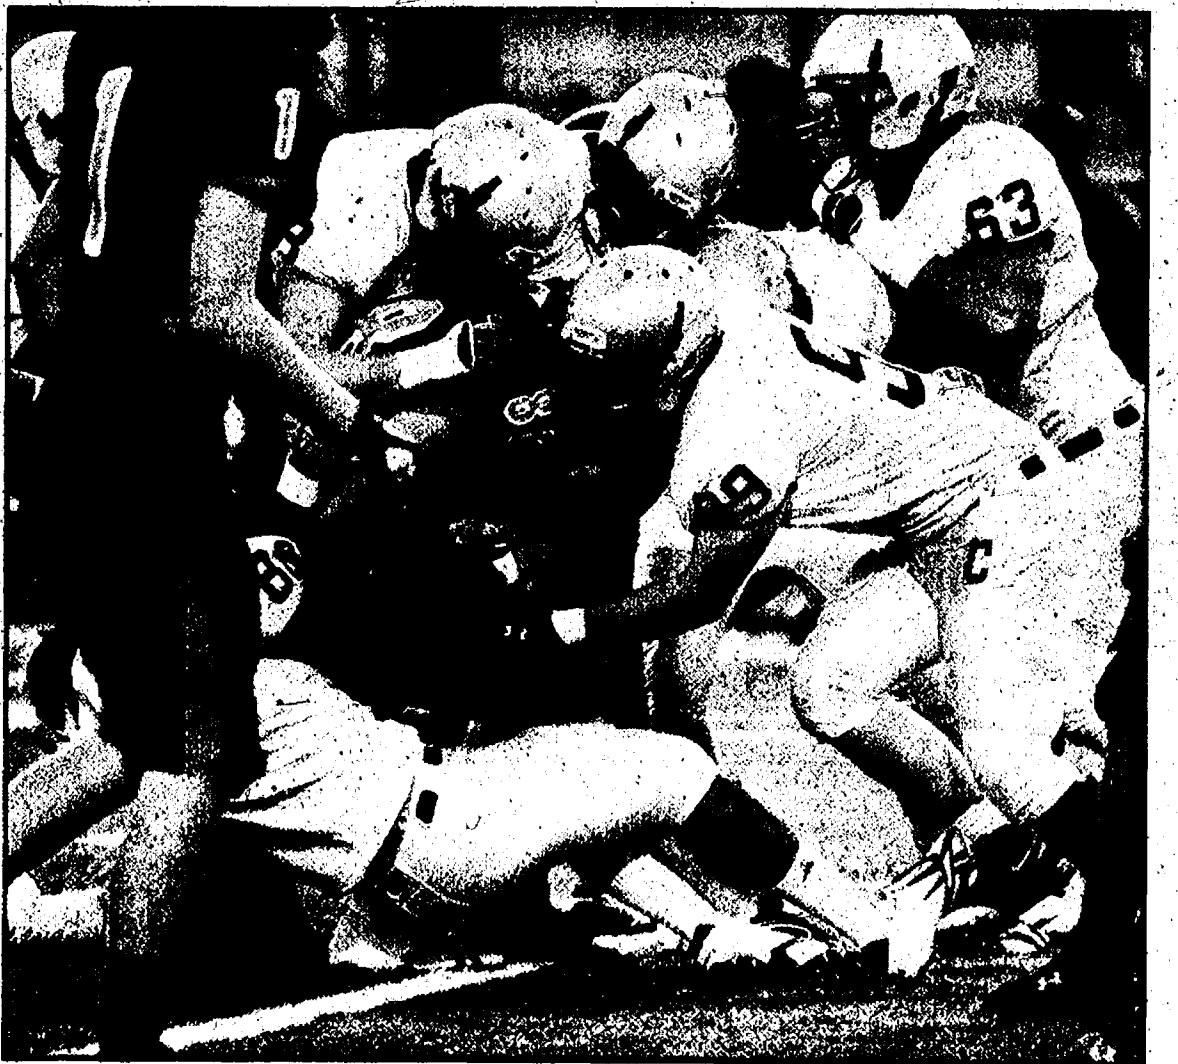

The offense went right back to work. They were a machine by this point and needed just seven plays to score another touchdown and grab a 42-28 lead with 5:57 to play. Scheese hit McDougall for 25 yards and then connected with Edwards for 11 yards on consecutive plays during the drive.

Bulldogs out-touch SEC foe Monroe in dual-meet

The Chelsea girls' swimming and diving team welcomed SEC Red Division opponent Monroe into Cameron Pool on Thursday.

The Bulldogs won the meet with a strong second half by a score of 103-83 and defeated Monroe for the first time since joining the SEC.

The Bulldogs started the meet strong, with the 200 medley relay team of Maddie Doman, Hanna Newbound, Alex Duncan and Katie Easley finishing in 2:10.36 and earning second place. The relay team of Hannah Mahalak, Katie Olsen, Josie Ewald and Kaila Croskey took fourth in 2:20.35 and the team of Rachel Fredericks, Jessica Hinderer, Grace Elie and Margaret Lindauer finished sixth in 2:32.36.

Talia Dyerly earned one of several Chelsea first-place finishes in the 200 freestyle with a time of 2:08.61 while Duncan finished third in 2:17.81 and Mahalak took sixth in 2:34.62.

River Jensen finished third in the 200 individual medley with a 2:33.28. Newbound took fourth in 2:33.81 and Doman took fifth with a 2:55.16.

Jillian Dixon took a first place in the 50 freestyle with a 27.47, while Croskey took third in 28.93 and Easley took fourth with a 29.42.

The divers were led by Sarah Carrara in third place with a score of 158.80 points, while Lena Cashman finished fourth with 143.65 points and Kayla Whipple took fifth with 142.40 points.

JV, frosh rolling along

The Chelsea JV football team improved to 6-1 and 4-0 in the SEC White Division with a dominating 54-23 win over the Tecumseh Indians last Thursday night. The Chelsea offense made very few mistakes as evidenced by the fact that the team's first punt came late in the third quarter.

To open the game, the Chelsea defense gave up a long touchdown pass to put the Indians in front 6-0 (two-point conversion failed). The Bulldogs responded with a long touchdown run on a misdirection play to take a 7-6 lead early in the first quarter.

A special teams miscue handed Chelsea another score as a punt snap sailed over the head of the Tecumseh punter. That play gave the Bulldogs the ball on Tecumseh's 3 yard line. Chelsea punched it in two plays later to extend the lead to 13-6.

The Chelsea defense continued to struggle defending the pass as Tecumseh marched on a long drive into the Chelsea red zone. The Bulldog defense held firm on this occasion however, forcing a turnover on downs. The Chelsea second unit offense then came into the game and marched 85 yards. A four-yard TD run extended Chelsea's lead to 20-6 early in the second quarter.

"There's a special sense of pride you get as a coach when the second unit can come in and do the job," coach Chris Orlandi said. "That was a great drive at a significant point in the game."

Tecumseh struck again with another TD pass and two-point conversion on its next drive to keep the score close at 20-14. Chelsea marched again on its next possession, scoring a TD through the air from 25 yards out on a slant. With the score 26-14, the defense stepped up its game.

Tecumseh wouldn't score for the remainder of the half, and Chelsea would score two more times, the last one set up by a Tecumseh fumble on a kickoff. The score was 40-14 at halftime.

To open the second half, Chelsea received the opening kick and returned it 75 yards for a touchdown. After that special teams score, the Bulldog defense got into the act by intercepting a Tecumseh pass and returning it 35 yards for Chelsea's final score.

"We can't play much better than this offensively," Orlandi said. "Defensively, we had our issues, but we made some adjustments and kept fighting. Again, we had a huge edge in special teams, and it was nice to see those guys get on the scoreboard too. We had a lot of fun tonight and we look forward to Dexter next week to try to close out our SEC season undefeated. That would be an excellent accomplishment for this team."

Kenny McDowell had two touchdown catches. Devon Simons had a TD catch. Alec Blocton ran for 143 yards and two touchdowns. Daniel Klink and Dominic Goderis each had TD runs for the Bulldogs.

Cam Starkey threw for 151 yards and two touchdowns. Alec Blocton had a 47-yard touchdown pass. Defensively, Scott Moore led the team in tackles. Jacob Dobberstein had an interception, a forced fumble and a fumble recovery and Nick Maloney had an interception.

Chelsea next plays at home on Thursday against Dexter.

a three-and-out on the next series. The Indians got the ball back one more time but turned it over on downs at the Chelsea 20-yard line with 2:31 to play and the Bulldogs ran out the clock.
Edwards gave Chelsea a 7-0 lead with his 64-yard run with 4:29 to play in the first quarter.
The Indians tied it at 7-7 with 10:51 to play in the second quarter.
After the Bulldogs failed to convert a fourth down at the Tecumseh 33-yard line, the home team went 67 yards to take a 13-7 lead with 3:20 to play in the first half.
The Indians forced a Chelsea punt and took over at its own 26-yard line with 2:31 to play. After converting a pass play, the Tecumseh WR fumbled and Chelsea's Kevin Watkins recovered with 2:17 to play at the Indians' 36. Eight plays later - and with only 11 seconds left in the half - Scheese scored on a one-yard run as Chelsea took a 14-13 halftime lead.
The Bulldogs opened the third quarter with a nine-play, 59-yard scoring drive to take a 21-13 lead. Scheese's pass to McDougall for five yards capped off the drive.
After Tecumseh tied it at 21-21, Chelsea took the lead again on a 35-yard pass from Scheese to Platt.
Chelsea had eight penalties for 47 yards, compared to two for 25 yards for Tecumseh. The Bulldogs had 29:28 time of possession and 18 first downs compared to 18:32 and 14 first downs for Tecumseh. The Bulldogs were perfect in the red zone, scoring on all four trips inside the 20.

Chelsea is now 6-1 with two games remaining against sub .500 teams. An 8-1 record could get Chelsea an opening round home playoff game. Because Chelsea also does that right - hosting high school sporting events.
While Dexter this week-end is a "rivalry" game, it hasn't been much of rivalry the last decade or so and there is no indication that is about to change. But as Tecumseh proved on Friday night, nothing is easy.
And while it isn't always easy for Chelsea, one thing is usually a given. As Burrill would say, "another W."

Dreads rally

After playing just a brutal first half in which dropped passes and missed tackles filled up the stat sheet, the Dexter Dreadnaughts fought-back Friday night and overcame a 28-6 halftime deficit to win 34-28 in overtime over the host Ypsilanti Phoenix.
"We didn't make any halftime adjustments," Dexter coach Brian Baird said. "I basically blew up at the kids. I can't remember a worst first half by any team I've coached. And it was everybody and in all phases of the game."
Baird's message was simple.
"I told them to go play football or get on the bus," he said. "And they responded."

Dexter's So qualifies; Bulldogs come up short

By Terry Jacoby
Heritage Media

Although the Lady Dreads did not qualify as a team this year, sophomore Mary So will compete as an individual in the Division 2 State Finals at Katke-Cousins golf course at Oakland University this weekend.

So shot 95 at Fox Hills on Friday, and qualified by finishing in the top three scores of a non-qualifying team. As a team, the Dreads finished fourth with a 398. A top-three finish was needed to advance to the State Finals.

Dani Schlaff shot a 99, Morgan Cambell fired a 101, Lauren Kimmel a 103 and Courtney Stewart a 106 for Dexter.

"I could not be more proud of this team," Dexter coach Fred Ligrow said. "We are very young but never used that as an excuse. We made our best effort at winning the league as well as qualifying for the state tournament. I feel as though the girls gave their best effort and improved a lot over the season."

"I am very excited for Mary to have the chance to compete at the state level as a sophomore, and I think this team has a lot of potential next season."

Chelsea

The Chelsea girls' golf team placed fifth at regional at Forrest Acres.

Only the top three teams qualify for the state finals and this was one of the toughest regionals in the state.

Roundup

Gabby Triveline and Taylor Hansen missed by just two strokes of going to the states as individuals.

Volleyball

The Chelsea Beach Middle School seventh grade blue volleyball team finished in seventh place out of 14 teams at the Southeastern Conference invitational held at Adrian last Saturday. The team started the day with a win over Lincoln, 25-17 behind the strong serving of Olivia Leonard and Gwen Lansky. They lost the next game to Lincoln 14-25.

In the second round they won both games against Saline Gold, 25-19 and 25-22. They then played Bedford where they split winning the first game 25-18 then losing the second 12-25. Their 4-2 record for the morning qualified them for the Gold medal playoff round where they dropped both games to Tecumseh 8-25 and 12-25.

Earlier in the week the team lost a heartbreaker to Dexter at home, winning the first game 25-20, losing the second 16-25 and losing the third 23-25. Olivia Leonard and Gwen Lansky each had 7 service points, Autumn Johnson 6, Phoebe Callebs 5 and Cassie Lucket, Hanna Stock and Katie Stocco each had two points.

The team also played at Monroe and lost all 3 games 25-9, 25-5 and 25-12. Lungo led with 4 service points, Leonard and Johnson each had 2 points and Lansky 1.

Legal Notices 1050

PUBLIC NOTICE
The Commission on Accreditation of Medical Transport Systems will conduct an accreditation site visit of Kalitta MedFlight air ambulance service on November 7th and 8th, 2011.

The purpose of the site visit will be to evaluate the program's compliance with nationally established medical transport standards. The site visit results will be used to determine whether, and the conditions under which accreditation should be awarded to the program.

CAMTS accreditation standards deal with issues of patient care and safety of the transport environment. Anyone believing that he or she has pertinent or valid information about such matters may request a public information interview with the CAMTS site surveyors at the time of the site visit. Information presented at the interview will be carefully evaluated for relevance to the accreditation process. Requests for public information interviews must be made in writing and sent to CAMTS no later than 5 business days before the site survey begins. The request should also indicate the nature of the information to be provided during the interview. Such request should be addressed to:

Office of the Executive Director
Commission on Accreditation of Medical Transport Systems
PO Box 130
Sandy Springs, SC 29677

The Commission will acknowledge such written requests in writing or by telephone and will inform the program of the request for an interview. The Commission will, in turn, notify the interviewee of the date, time, and place of the meeting.

This notice is posted in accordance with CAMTS requirements and shall not be removed until the site visit is completed.

THE GOOD OLD DAYS

Whether it was washing clothes with a scrub board or chopping logs and shearing sheep, 19th century farm life was nothing short of a long day, and the Waterloo Area Historical Society's Pioneer Day featured every bit of it Sunday. The event, which is the historical society's premier fundraiser, featured more than 40 demonstrators and vendors.

Singer finds his own sound

By GARY GRAFF

For Journal Register Newspapers

You won't hear Mayer Hawthorne run down anything about "A Strange Arrangement," the Ann Arbor-raised singer's buzz-making 2009 debut album.

But he feels that with his sophomore set, "How Do You Do" — which comes out Tuesday — "I really ... found my own sound."

"When I recorded 'A Strange Arrangement,' I had absolutely no idea what I was doing," says Hawthorne, 32, who was born Andrew Mayer Cohen (Hawthorne is the name of the Ann Arbor street he lived on). "I'd never really attempted to sing lead on anything, so I really think I found my own style of singing on this one."

And while "A Strange Arrangement" took its lead from R&B, with a strong nod to Motown and Philly soul styles in general and to Smokey Robinson in particular, Hawthorne designed "How Do You Do" to shoot even wider, stylistically.

"It's still very soulful," he says of the 12-song set, which is as smoothly melodic as its predecessor. "It's rooted in soul music, but it incorporates all the other styles of music I grew up listening to and still listen to and love, like surf rock and Steely Dan and Frank Sinatra and new wave music — everything that influences me. It's all in there this time."

"I really feel with the style of the music I found my own Mayer Hawthorne sound."

It's something he's been developing for quite some time. Hawthorne picked up his music jones from his parents, who he says "were buying me records before I could even read the labels on 'em." His father indoctrinated him into Motown while hanging out at the auto parts store he owns.

Hawthorne also developed a love for hip-hop as a teenager. He moved to Los Angeles in 2005 to forward his hip-hop career but, ironically, was signed to the independent Stones Throw Records label after the owner heard the soul music Hawthorne was making.

He recorded "A Strange Arrangement" in Los Angeles, but in the wake of its success Hawthorne returned to Detroit for "How Do You Do," recording the bulk of the album in the bedroom studio of an apartment he rented off Third Street in downtown Detroit.

Ann Arbor Grail Singers premiere Gasparini Mass

At 4 p.m. on Sunday, No. 13 at St. Andrew's Episcopal Church (306 N. Division), the Grail Singers and guest soloist Lorna Young Hildebrandt will perform the Ann Arbor premiere of a Gasparini Mass in five parts for high voices. Debra Lonergan and Shin Hwang will accompany the choir on viola da gamba and chamber organ.

Gasparini composed the Mass for the women singers of the Pio Ospedale della Pietà in Venice, where he was Maestro di Coro from 1701 to 1713 and employed Antonio Vivaldi. Although not as well-known as his famous subordinate, Gasparini composed dozens of operas as well as sacred music. He was thought to have studied under Corelli, and one of his students was Domenico Scarlatti.

Grail Singers' director Carmen Cavallaro has prepared a new edition of this unusual piece, long out of print. To ensure the accuracy of their performing edition, the Grail Singers commissioned photographs of the composer's autograph score from its owner, the Fitzwilliam Museum in Cambridge, England.

The 16-voice women's choir has performed in the Detroit Institute of Arts "Brunch with Bach" Series, at the Toledo Art Museum, at the University of Michigan Museum of Art and at other venues in Michigan and Ohio. The Ann Arbor Grail Singers have been lauded for the beauty of their sound, and "their musicality, precision, balance, and intonation" (Current Magazine).

Open seating tickets, available at the door from 3:30 p.m., are $15 general admission, $12 seniors, $5 students (cash or check only, please). Concertgoers have permission to park in the Community High School parking lot, just a block away. For more information, see www.AcademyofEarlyMusic.org (click on Community Calendar), or call 734-662-0631.

Pioneer Theatre Guild presents 'The Phantom of the Opera'

The longest-running show in Broadway history, the Phantom of the Opera is a traditional tragic love story. It tells the story of a masked figure who lurks beneath the catacombs of the Paris Opera House, exercising a reign of terror over all who inhabit it. He falls madly in love with an innocent young soprano, Christine, and devotes himself to creating a new opera star by nurturing her extraordinary talents and employing all of the devious methods at his command.

Its sensational score includes "Think of Me," "Music of the Night," "Masquerade," and its title song.

All performances take place in Ann Arbor Pioneer High School's Schreiber Auditorium. Tickets cost $15 for adults and $10 for students/seniors/PHS staff.

Reserved seating will be available Oct. 20 at showtix4u.com. Tickets will also be on sale at the door one hour before the show.

Performance Dates:
 • Saturday, Nov. 5, 7:30 p.m.
 • Sunday, Nov. 6, 2 p.m.
 • Friday, Nov. 11, 7:30 p.m.
 • Saturday, Nov. 12, 7:30 p.m.
