Closing courthouse could save cash

Despite rumors, Zingerman's claims no interest in building

By Krista Gjestland
Heritage Media

Washtenaw County and the city of Chelsea are discussing the possibility of closing the Chelsea 14-A3 District Court on Main Street.

Rob Turner, District 1 county commissioner, said while the county has been working on balancing its budget, its biggest expenses come from operating the court system.

"The courts have a hard time keeping within their budgets," he said. "It's very difficult with all the facilities that they have."

Turner said the courts have offered up the idea of closing some of the "underutilized" courthouses in an effort to save money.

"We have a lot of infrastructure, and for a while we've been looking at ways we can cut costs by reducing the number of buildings we have," he said.

Chelsea's courthouse is one of four in the county. Saline, Ypsilanti and Ann Arbor also house courthouses.

Turner suggested the Chelsea courthouse be consolidated with the Saline District 14-A Court, which is a newer, more energy-efficient facility.

Releasing the courthouse, Turner said, would be a "win-win" for both the city and county. In doing so, Chelsea might be able to attract businesses to take over that space.

"It would also provide tax revenues to the city and possibly a viable business opportunity," he said. "I had heard a couple of businesses were possibly interested in the courthouse if it were put up for sale."

Despite rumors of Zingerman's interest in purchasing the space, officials from the Ann Arbor-based company say they have no current plans to expand into Chelsea.

Turner, who is a Chelsea resident, said he would not back the idea if it wouldn't benefit the city.

"My intent wasn't to hurt anybody locally," he said. "Unless it would be positive for the city, it's not something I would want, just

CHS bids farewell to class of 2012

Graduates from the class of 2012 line up during "Pomp and Circumstance."

June 3 marked the last day Chelsea High School's entire class of 2012 would ever be in the same room again, noted graduate Grace Martin, the class' vice president, during her commencement speech to a packed gymnasium of family and friends.

As one of two student speakers, Martin spoke to her fellow graduates about their collective memories of their school experience and transitions are the common theme in the memory of their schooling together.

"Every year we complain and complain about how slowly everything is going, but at the end of every transition we are blown away at how quickly we got to that point," Martin said.

While Martin spoke to her classmates about the past and what it took to get to graduation - Advanced Placement exams and the anxiety of attending high school for the first time among others - fellow student speaker Daniel Patton talked to his colleagues about the future.

"The only universal rule is that you cannot turn off your mind," he said, noting that his class lives in an "age of distraction" with YouTube, Call of Duty and other attention getters.

Patton joked that when the class of 2012 first entered Chelsea High School, "The Dark Knight" entered movie theaters, there was a presidential primary and "just about everyone was freaking out about the economy."

This year another batman movie came out, a presidential primary and now all the Occupy Wall Street groups are "freaking out" about the economy.

"But even in the world hasn't changed, we have," Patton said.

Julie Deppner, the high school's principal, noted that from the classes' 455 awards and scholarships awarded to 130 students, four students with 4.0 grade point averages, one student with perfect attendance throughout high school, the class left quite an impressive mark.

"Narrowing down this list of accomplishments of such amazing students has been extremely difficult (for this speech)," Deppner said.

Deppner also congratulated cross country runner Bryce Bradley on being named Mr. Cross Country 2011 for the state and breaking the 1-mile record the day prior to graduation at state finals, leading his team to third place in the state.

On top of the class' individual accomplishments, the school was also named as a Beating the Odds school, in that the school had high marks in academics and other comparable categories compared to demographically-similar schools. The school was also named one of the best in the country by

Business to host Sounds & Sights after hours

By Erica McClain
Heritage Media

Back to the Roots, 115 S. Main St., will host its first-ever Sounds & Sights after hours party this Thursday, coinciding with the first Sounds & Sights on Thursday nights.

The downtown fair-trade, cafe and sushi bar will feature Maron Gaffron, a Chicago-based blues and folk singer, with special guest and Chelsea resident Scott Knies, better known as Brother Red ### Squirrel.

The after hours party will take place every Thursday during Sounds & Sights at Back to the Roots, starting at 8 p.m. In addition, Back to the Roots will have seven different artists playing during the Sounds & Sights Festival weekend.

Back to the Roots co-owner Jason Povlich said the addition of live music is just the start of launching his business' "music culture."

Povlich said he wants

Back to the Roots to have music all the time, and it's only fitting considering the birth of Back to the Roots.

"Back to the Roots started at Cornerstone Festival," Povlich said, adding that the southern Illinois music festival is where he and co-owner Jason Bendinelli met. "So, it's in our blood, and all this came out of our love for music."

The music at Back to the Roots' after hours parties will be free, but the business will also display a host of tantalizing entrées as part of a $10 all-you-can-eat meal.

The buffet will feature basic sushi rolls like the California, veggie and rainbow roll, but there will also be entrées for non-sushi lovers, including: pulled-pork sandwiches and turkey clubs. Dessert will include tira misu squares and cookies.

Povlich said about 60 percent of the artists will be locally-based, but the business is still looking for a few artists to fill in some schedule gaps. For more information about booking, Povlich can be reached at 734-626-6646.

And for anyone who can't make the Thursday night showing, Gaffron and Brother Red Squirrel will play an encore performance that Friday at the same time.

Former WGA President, CEO Johnson dies

Donald D. Johnson, former president and CEO of the Western Golf Association/Evans Scholars Foundation, died May 24 at his home in Lake Bluff, Ill.

Johnson, 77, led the WGA and the WGA-sponsored Evans Scholars Foundation from 1988 until his retirement in 2009.

During Johnson's tenure, 4,000 young men and women received their college educations as Evans

Scholars and thousands of professional, amateur and junior golfers participated in WGA championships - the BMW Championship, formerly the Western Open, the Western Amateur and the Western Junior.

"Don enjoyed a lifelong love of, and respect for, the game of golf," said John Kaczowski, current WGA/ESF president and CEO, in a news release.

"He was dedicated to giving back to the game through his work with our scholarships and championships, and he clearly has succeeded."

Under his leadership, the organization progressed from a position of near financial insolvency to a solid fiscal standing, with a $45 million endowment and ownership of 14 Evans Scholarship Houses, all debt free.

Locally, an Evans

Johnson

Scholarship House has been located on the University of Michigan campus since 1952.

"Don's leadership skills were vital to our organization's success for more than two decades," Kaczowski said.

"His leadership resulted in the presentation of world-class championships that were admired and respected throughout the golf world."

"Don's focus on building a firm financial base for our Evans Scholars program afforded thousands of young men and women the opportunity to earn their college degrees on his watch," added Kaczowski.

"In the face of ever-increasing tuition costs, and with the added expense of constructing and maintaining our scholarship houses, we continued to provide full funding for more than 800 Evans Scholarships annually. That is truly a noteworthy achievement."

A memorial service was planned for early June.

For Johnson, the road to Golf, Ill. and his career at the Western Golf Association started in Racine, Wisconsin, where he first was introduced to the game of golf at Washington Park, a nine-hole public course, where his first job was in the refreshment stand selling soft drinks and hot dogs.

Johnson, who still sported a respectable handicap of 11.7 at age 74, honed his golf skills at Washington Park when he wasn't working.

Two years later, he began caddying at Meadowbrook Country Club, gaining an early perspective on the path all Evans Scholars candidates take in their pursuit of a WGA-sponsored college scholarship.

In 1953, he was the medalist in the Wisconsin State Golf Association Junior Championship.

After graduating from the University of Wisconsin in Madison in 1959, he earned his law degree at Wisconsin in 1961.

For the next 26 years, Mr. Johnson practiced law in Madison while devoting much of his free time to playing and serving the game of golf.

He became a member of Nakoma Golf Club, where he was elected to the board of directors and, in 1975-76, served as president.

Johnson became a Wisconsin State Golf Association director in 1979 and a Western Golf Association director in 1984. In 1988, he was named WSGA president before being selected as the WGA's new executive director on July 1, 1988.

Johnson's investment in golf evolved into a 22-year career as a full-time golf administrator directing the WGA/ESF. In 2007, his formal title was changed to president and CEO.

When he retired at the end of 2009, he left behind a legacy of service to the game of golf few have attained.

Johnson was inducted into the Wisconsin Golf Hall of Fame in 2008, and in 2009 the Evans Scholars National Committee presented Johnson with an honorary Evans Scholarship for his years of service.

Johnson was born April 25, 1935, in Racine, the son of Beatrice and Harry Deane Johnson.

He is survived by his wife, Jane; a son, Benjamin, at home; two daughters, Mindy Carter, Madison, Wis., and Tally Nathan, Paradise Valley, Ariz.; four grandchildren, Nikki Nametz, Brittany Klutsky, Max Nathan and Brenner Nathan; and one sister, Lisa Hillyer, Colorado Springs, Colo.

Memorials honoring Johnson may be made to the Evans Scholars Foundation, One Briar Road, Golf, IL 60029, or online at www.wgaesf.org.

Grace Fellowship Church hosts foster parent respite day

In the fellowship hall at Grace Fellowship Church in Ypsilanti, 24 foster children and their families participated in a special respite day May 19.

May in Michigan is National Foster Care Month, a time for private agencies and the Department of Human Services to connect and raise awareness of the approximately 14,000 children in foster care in Michigan.

The Ypsilanti-based event was called Foster Parent Respite Day, and organizers said they hope it will become annual event.

Foster parents were able to drop off the children in the care of church volunteers for three hours and enjoy an afternoon off from their daily workload.

Participating children's ages ranged from a few months to 14 years old.

Volunteers set up activity stations for the children to enjoy that included face painting, arts and crafts and outdoor activities. At each station, children could earn a sticker to be exchanged for a prize at the end of the day.

The afternoon began with pizza, chips and fruit, followed by station activities. The Wii station with dancing and Mario Brother's games was one of

Bully comes back to graduate from school

On Feb. 23, as you may know, I was victimized by a bully who I've been dealing with since last school year. What makes me and my family upset the most is the fact that, because of state laws, we have not been told whether my bully is attending school or has been expelled.

Although I have not seen her in school yet face to face since the day of my assault, I still wonder whether she is in school or will be back to school soon.

And I don't think this is fair.

As the victim of an assault by a bully, I should be told whether the bully will be allowed back at school. I should be able to walk through the school hallways without looking behind my back to see if she's around. I also should be able to go to school events without checking the stands to make sure she isn't around.

But due to privacy laws, school officials are not allowed to speak on the issues.

This week, however, I found out that she will be graduating from Milan High School. I didn't hear it from school officials first. I heard it from other friends who are graduating. And she will be allowed to walk at the graduation ceremony. But this information didn't come from school officials.

Why is this? Aren't I supposed to have a say in whether she can or can't graduate? Aren't I supposed to be able to know that the same attacker, the same bully, the same person that put me in the hospital, is at the school?

Alyssa Stuart is a student at Milan High School and intern at Heritage Media.

another vacant building downtown."

Not everyone is thrilled with the idea of closing Chelsea's courthouse. Councilmember Kent Martinez-Kratz, who is running against Turner this year for the District 1 county commissioner seat, sent a press release to several local media outlets stating he was against the plan.

He said the closure would be detrimental to the city and the community.

"Closing the court in Chelsea would force Chelsea police officers to spend time consuming trips to Saline or other courts when they could be on patrol in the city," Martinez-Kratz said. "Closing the 14A-3 District court would make our first district residents travel nearly an hour at considerable cost."

Turner said any city with a population of more than 3,000 has the right to request a courthouse within their city, and the county can't force Chelsea to do anything.

With Dexter in talks of cityhood, Turner said, closing the Chelsea court would help the county if Dexter were to request their own courthouses.

"It would give us a defense to say we are trying to be fiscally responsible," he said.

The county has already consolidated the juvenile facilities from Platt Road to downtown Ann Arbor, and there are discussions of consolidating the Ypsilanti District 14-A location to the Hogback Road courts.

Turner is meeting with several Chelsea city officials to further discussions on the matter.

In his last speech as the Chelsea School District superintendent, David Killips remarked that each student in the graduating class has made their mark academically, musically, athletically and in many other ways throughout the community.

Environmental festival coming to Ann Arbor

Organizers hoping for crowd of 1,000

By Amy Bell
Heritage Media

A local environmental festival is expanding and looking to spread the word to more people.

The Mission Zero Festival will take place from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. June 9 and 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. June 10 in the Water Hill neighborhood, located northwest of downtown Ann Arbor.

The event aims to celebrate neighborhoods and communities that seek to produce no waste by reducing their water and energy needs.

In addition, it seeks to showcase examples of conscious, low-impact living in a fun, festive atmosphere.

This year, the Mission Zero Festival features a variety of events such as tours of six ultra-green homes, including the oldest net zero energy home in the United States and a solar passive home.

There also will be lectures, home energy audits, workshops, activities for kids, local food and food carts.

"We're doing it more like a neighborhood block party this year," said Monica Patel, a volunteer with the event.

Live entertainment will be provided by internationally acclaimed pianist and songwriter Vienna

Teng, who will perform June 9 in addition to blues and boogie-woogie singer Mr. B's Joybox Express. Other bands include the Appleseed Collective, Homegrown of Rap for Food, The Tim Haldeman Trio and FUBAR. Performances will begin at 11 a.m.

Seminars will provide information on topics such as climate change, green building, green architecture, practical tips for ultra-efficient homes, solar thermal hot water, eco-friendly landscaping and water conservation.

A highlight of the event will be a broadcast of "Issues and Ales" with Michigan Radio's Lester Graham. The broadcast, which is hosted by The Environment Report, is slated to begin at noon June 9.

The festival features a number of speakers, including Henry Pollack, a climate change expert and author of "A World Without Ice."

In 2007, Pollack won the Nobel Peace Prize along with former Vice President Al Gore. Pollack also will participate in the "Issues and Ales" discussion.

Last year, about 300 people came to the event that featured a full home tour along with two that were self guided.

This year, they are hoping for about 1,000, she said.

Patel said she hopes the event will inspire people and serve as a model for other neighborhoods that want to start using similar practices in the future.

"There's something for everyone and you'll definitely walk away with some ideas to make your home better," she said.

The festival is organized by a number of regional green organizations such as Ecology Center, Meadowlark Energy, Clean Energy Coalition, Michigan League of Conservation Voters, A2energy and the City of Ann Arbor.

Groups aim to stop prescription drug abuse

Speaker: New mindset 'any pill can kill'

By Amy Bell
Heritage Media

Clinicians and several others involved in the medical and human services fields gathered Thursday at the Washtenaw County Prescription Drug Abuse Symposium at Washtenaw Community College.

The event included speakers from both local and regional groups sharing information about the prescription drug abuse epidemic and ways to stop it.

"Because this is a community problem, we have to tackle it together," said Marci Scalera of the Livingston/Washtenaw Community Mental Health Organization.

Keynote speaker Dr. John Hopper, vice chairman for education and residency program director at St. Joseph Mercy Hospital, discussed the issue during his speech "Any Pill Can Kill: A Current Perspective on Prescription Drug Abuse."

"It's an epidemic of national proportions," he said.

According to Hopper, a shift needs to occur from a mindset of "a pill for every ill" to "any pill can kill."

According to the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, death from prescription drug overdose has more than tripled since 1990.

Prescription drug abuse encompasses intentional misuse along with people who are addicted to painkillers, recreational uses and entrepreneurs or people who may not take the pills prescribed to them and are diverting most for sale or trade.

Hopper discussed the role prescribers, patients and society play in over-prescribing.

Of those who do overdose, many are seeing multiple physicians or seeing one physician who is prescribing an extremely high dose, he said.

Eighteen percent of people who misuse prescription drugs get their medications from a single doctor with 55 percent receiving medications from a friend or relative without paying.

"Clearly the societal importance of this problem goes beyond just the prescriber's pen," he said.

According to Hopper, many physicians are fooled by patients and some are duped by the "entrepreneurs" who appear to be the "model patient" but sell a majority of their pills.

"These patients are very hard to detect in a practice," he said.

Some prescribers are also taking part in dated practices such as prescribing Valium for the treatment of anxiety disorders, he said.

Other issues occurred when The Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations began requiring health providers in the 1990s to assess pain as the fifth vital sign. If pain was assessed, it had to be treated.

Patient satisfaction surveys can create issues because the surveys are often key indicators in how hospitals receive bonuses, he said.

Before prescribing a medication, a physician needs to conduct a careful assessment of the patient and screen the individual for indicators of potential abuse, such as a family history, before prescribing medications. Functional goals need to be set and the patient's progress monitored closely, he said.

The state already uses the Michigan Automated Prescription System program, a database where prescribers, insurance companies and law enforcement officials can access information showing patients who are receiving controlled substances.

Dr. Adreanne Waller presented information related to the county from several sources, including the health department's Health Improvement Plan of Washtenaw County survey.

Hopper said this has been an effective system and helps to detect entrepreneurs.

All but eight states have a similar system. In Michigan, not enough doctors use the program although it is easily accessible, he said.

However, there are issues with the program because a report is not triggered for review until a patient sees eight physicians or more. Also, there is not enough monitoring of it at the state level, he said.

The second speaker was Adreanne Waller, senior health analyst and epidemiologist for Washtenaw County Public Health, who discussed prescription drug abuse challenges facing county youth.

"It wasn't too long ago where the powerful medicines that are sitting in our own kitchen cabinets never even left hospitals," she said.

Unfortunately, the result is that young adults are now being exposed to these issues, she said.

Waller presented information related to the county from several sources including the health department's Health Improvement Plan of Washtenaw County survey.

"Young adults, people who are self employed, residents of Ann Arbor and people with some college (education) are at higher risk for illicit drug use," she said.

According to the data, approximately 17,000 adults in the county indicated their drug use affects either their work or home life.

"This is one of the key questions that indicate whether someone has a problem," she said.

About 25 percent of those people say they have been diagnosed with anxiety disorders and nearly 50 percent with depression, she said. Though prescription drug abuse is on the rise, so is the use of heroin, which is more accessible and costs less than prescription pills.

For example, the street cost of an Oxycontin pill is between $50 and $80, $6 legally. The street cost of Oxycodone runs anywhere from $12 to $40 on the street, $6 legally, she said.

However, a "button" or a dose of heroin costs less than a six pack of beer, she said.

According to Waller, arrests for heroin possession in the county have risen 80 percent between 2008 and 2010. The ages of patients being admitted for Washtenaw County Sheriff's Office substance abuse treatment for opiate abuse decreased from 2005 to 2012.

Now, heroin is 90 percent pure and has a very low threshold for overdose as compared to back in the 1960s when it was 10-percent pure. Instead of injection, heroin is now more often smoked or snorted, which is less stigmatized.

There are also severe self risks associated with IV drug use, such as Hepatitis C. Young adults now make up a greater proportion of Hepatitis C cases in the county, she said.

Other events at the symposium included panelists and presenters promoting local efforts and resources.

826michigan to receive literary arts award

To kick off this year's weekend of literary festivities, the Ann Arbor Book Festival will award Leaders in the Literary Arts Awards to the nonprofit tutoring and writing center 826michigan and to local poet and educator Keith Taylor.

The awards presentations will take place 7 p.m. June 22 in the Hatcher Graduate Library on the University of Michigan's campus and will be followed by a reading and talk from Adam Mansbach, New York Times bestselling author of the mock children's book "Go the F**k to Sleep."

The AABF's LILAs were started in 2009 as a way to recognize people and organizations in the greater Ann Arbor community who have made dedicated contributions of time, energy and imagination toward the enhancing of local literary culture.

Previous awardees include John Hilton, Nicola Rooney, The Family Book Club, the Family Learning Institute and Laura Raynor.

826michigan is a nonprofit organization dedicated to supporting students aged 6 to 18 with their creative and expository writing skills and to helping teachers inspire their students to write.

Since it opened its doors in June 2005, it has conducted thousands of readings, workshops and tutoring sessions for young people in efforts to help them grow in the art of storytelling, poetry writing, song writing, essay writing and more, all at no cost to participants.

With four permanent staff members plus volunteers and interns, 826michigan serves nearly 2,500 students aged 6 through 18 in Washtenaw County each year. 826michigan is located inside Liberty Street Robot Supply and Repair in downtown Ann Arbor.

Taylor is recognized for his work as an educator, writer and all-around public spokesperson for the art and power of poetry.

A former and long-time local bookseller, Keith currently coordinates the undergraduate program in creative writing at the University of Michigan, directs the Bear River Writer's Conference and is poetry editor for the Michigan Quarterly Review.

"As members of the Ann Arbor literary community, we are honored to be recognized in this way by the Ann Arbor Book Festival," said 826michigan Executive Director Amanda Uhle in a news release.

"Because our work depends so much on the generosity of our volunteers, who donate thousands of hours each year, we know exactly how literate and creative Ann Arborites really are. We are proud to be here and proud to be doing our own part to nurture the creativity and literacy of our city's youngest residents."

The kickoff will take place in the Library Gallery, Room 100 of Hatcher Graduate Library, 913 S. University Ave.

The event is free and open to the general public. To learn more about the Ann Arbor Book Festival's Fourth Annual Leaders in Literary Arts Awards, contact Jeff Kass at 223-7443 or eyelev21@aol.com.

Senator Warren awards scholarships to local students

In an effort to encourage students to pursue higher education, state Sen. Rebekah Warren, D-Ann Arbor, will award four $500 scholarships to four Washtenaw County students at separate receptions in June.

The students are Aoxue Tang, Priyanka Menon, Taylor Petri and Katelyn Dombrowski. All of the recipients are residents of the 18th Senate District.

"Each and every one of these students truly exemplifies the mission of the Envision Michigan Fund," said Warren in a news release.

"They are proven leaders committed to community service and academic excellence."

Tang is a senior at Pioneer High School in Ann Arbor and will attend Stanford University with an interest in Law School.

Menon of Skyline High School in Ann Arbor has been admitted to Harvard.

From Dexter High School, Petri will be attending the University of Michigan, majoring in environmental engineering.

Dombrowski, of Milan High School, will attend

Michigan State University, with an interest in marine biology.

"While I continue to fight for increased support of education in the legislature, I am also dedicated to making the possibility of a higher education available to those in my district through the Envision Michigan Fund," said Warren.

High school counselors and principals in the 18th Senate District were made aware of the scholarship and provided the necessary applications to their students.

The scholarship money will come out of the Rebekah Warren Envision Michigan Fund, which was established to better promote progressive policies, educational opportunities and active citizenship in our state.

For more information about the scholarship program, call 517-373-2406 or email senwarren@senate.michigan.gov.

Optimist Club hosts Walk4Kids Saturday

The Michigan District of the Optimists Club will host the 2012 Childhood Cancer Campaign "Walk4Kids," a part of the Optimist International Childhood Cancer Awareness Month, Saturday morning at Skyline High School, 2552 N. Maple Road in Ann Arbor.

Sign-in and onsite registration will be held from 8:30 a.m. to 9:45 a.m. The walk begins at 10 a.m.

Advance individual and team registrations are available online at www.michiganoptimists.org. Each participant that raises at least $25 will receive a T-shirt.

Proceeds raised from this first annual Michigan Optimist's "Walk4Kids" event will benefit the Michigan District Optimist Childhood Cancer Campaign and Special Days Children's Cancer Camps.

Participants can choose either a two-kilometer or four-kilometer route around Skyline High School; both routes are handicap accessible and will talk participants through natural areas that surround the high school.

"Optimist volunteers from all around Michigan are putting on their athletic shoes and getting out to walk and show that they are ready to 'take a step towards a cure' and make a positive difference in the life of a child," said Michigan District Optimist Governor Ray Finocchio in a news release.

The Optimist International Childhood Cancer Campaign was established in 2001, in hopes of "providing the care and finding the cure" specifically for childhood cancer.

For the past 11 years, this program has supported young people fighting cancer, supported cancer patients' families and caregivers, provided support to healthcare providers and funded critical cancer research that is not supported by federal funding.

Each year, June is set aside as a time for Optimists to focus on fighting cancer. Optimist International is funding its own Endowed Research Fellowship at Johns Hopkins Medical Center to insure that a research oncologist is always focused on finding a cure for the most prevalent form of childhood cancer.

To date Optimists have contributed more than $1 million to this effort.

Carrying on Juliette's legacy: America needs Girl Scouts

President Barack Obama recently honored Juliette Gordon Low, the founder of Girl Scouts, posthumously, with the Presidential Medal of Freedom, our nation's highest civilian honor.

The Presidential Medal of Freedom celebrates individuals who have contributed to the security or national interests of the United States, to world peace or to cultural or other public or private endeavors.

Juliette Gordon Low's legacy lives on through 59 million American women who are Girl Scout alumnae.

Juliette believed that all girls — regardless of culture, class, ethnic background, or economic status — should be given the opportunity to develop physically, mentally and spiritually.

In founding Girl Scouts in 1912, she made an enduring contribution to the lives of girls and to our nation. It is fitting that during Girl Scouting's centennial year, Juliette should be honored with the Presidential Medal of Freedom.

Girls today are as eager to lead as they were in Juliette's day. In Girl Scouts, we see evidence of this all the time. But girls aren't crossing the divide to lead as women.

Girl Scouts Heart of Michigan is committed to taking on the challenge of bringing women to leadership.

They aren't leading where society needs them most. This is not acceptable.

Right now, America needs an organization that understands girls and appreciates how girls lead. America needs an organization with a track record of helping girls reach their potential and ascend to leadership. America needs Girl Scouts.

Girl Scouts Heart of Michigan is committed to taking on the challenge of bringing women to leadership.

We challenge everyone to promote a gender balance in the workplace and in the organizations they touch. When people talk about diversity and inclusion, we need them to talk about gender inclusion as well.

We need to share, with everyone, the great leadership examples we see every day in Girl Scouts — from our littlest leaders, our Girl Scout Daisies, to our Girl Scout Gold Award recipients in high school.

One hundred years ago, Juliette Gordon Low founded Girl Scouts with a goal to enable girls to do things they had never done before. We carry on her legacy of leadership and ask you to join us.

OUR TAKE: Editorial

Airline industry needs to think about families over profits

Our nation's airlines are doing their best to make a buck wherever they can. One way is hitting families harder than others.

Charging passengers willing to pay $25 or so for an aisle or a window seat is making it difficult to seat families in adjacent seats, even in adjacent rows.

U.S. Sen. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., has called on major airlines to waive the special seat fees for families.

It's an excellent suggestion.

Schumer reacted to a recent Associated Press report that described how families traveling together found they might be paying hundreds of dollars over the original ticket price.

Four airlines since last year have increased the number of seats reserved for frequent flyers and passengers willing to pay extra for the aisle, or window seats or those with more legroom.

It follows other revenue-raising moves such as added fees for checked baggage, skipping security lines, early boarding and watching television.

Schumer is calling on Transportation Secretary Ray LaHood to issue regulations preventing airlines from charging parents more to sit next to their children, and asking an industry trade group to persuade the airlines to do the same thing voluntarily.

The airlines say they attempt to seat parents and young children together, sometimes by asking passengers voluntarily to switch seats. But if a passenger has paid extra for the preferred seat, the passenger won't be as willing to cooperate.

Another pro-passenger organization, Open Allies for Airfare Transparency, is critical of the airlines for hiding the fees for preferred seating until a ticket is booked. That group calls the practice unfair and possibly deceptive, both contrary to federal law.

It might occur to any passenger — or parent — that children in a seat removed from their parents pose a potential annoyance to unrelated passengers on either side of them.

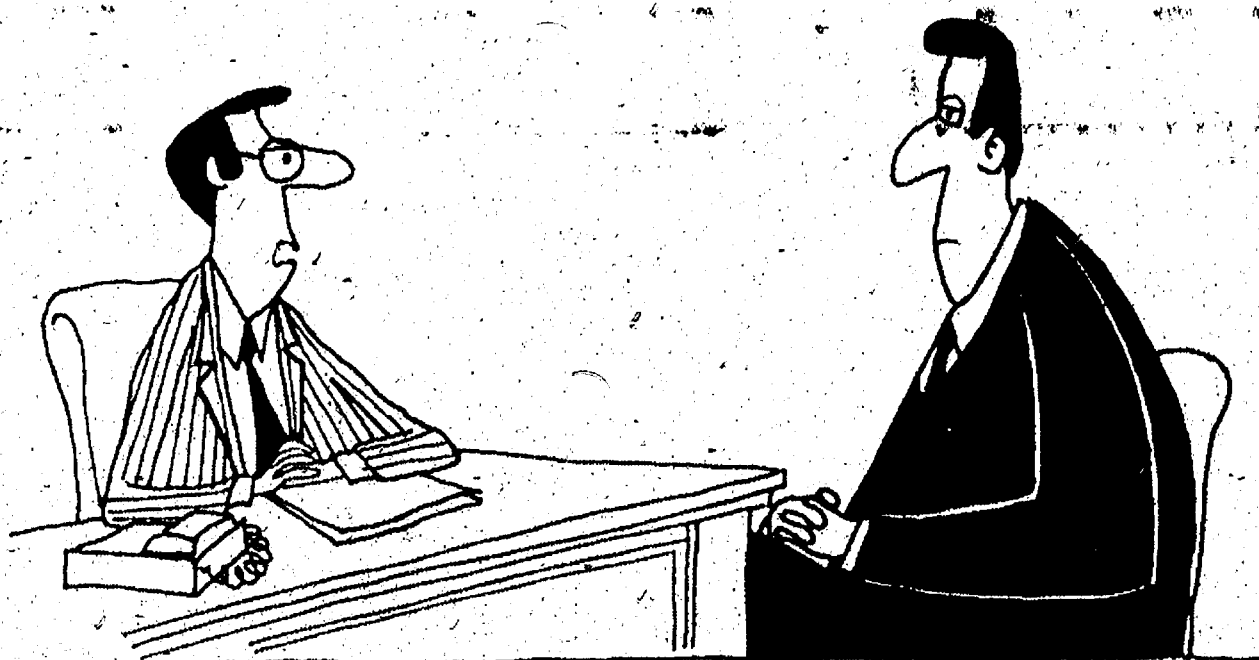

But it may not yet have occurred to the airlines. But if that's enlightened self-interest, they so far don't seem that interested.

So we hope the airfare transparency group might have some success with persuasion, or that LaHood might have some success with rule-making, or Schumer with jawboning.

And we would all prefer that airlines consider comfort, convenience and cost as a bundle, not as separate factors which nowadays work against each other.

It might occur to any passenger — or parent — that children in a seat removed from their parents pose a potential annoyance to unrelated passengers on either side of them. But it may not yet have occurred to the airlines.

Politicians should let consumers guide energy choices

President Obama just can't decide on Keystone XL. Earlier this year, he denied approval for the project, which would have unleashed construction of a 2,600-mile pipeline to transport oil from Canadian shales to American refineries.

Yet, at a recent campaign stop in Cushing, Oklahoma, the Energy Impresario-in-Chief said he did support the pipeline — well, part of it. He announced a plan to fast-track Keystone's southern leg, a 484-mile track running from Cushing to the Gulf Coast.

A White House that rejects a major energy project one day, and then demands fast-track approval for that same project, hasn't exactly established a coherent energy policy.

Obama's limited Keystone approval is part of an "all of the above" energy strategy. Supposedly, his administration will support any project that will ramp up supply, bring down prices and reduce dependence on foreign energy sources.

Sounds great. The problem is, the actual content of Obama's "all of the above" approach is heavily biased toward "green tech" and doesn't even include coal, which generates more domestic electricity than any other source.

And in the grand scheme of things, approval for Keystone's southern leg — an estimated $2.3 billion privately funded project — is relatively small compared to the tens of billions of dollars flowing to miniscule wind and solar.

A smarter approach is to avoid playing favorites. Unless the government has good reason to deny a project, it should be approved and allowed to compete on the open market.

Let customers and private investors decide what's worth pursuing.

Here are five major steps this administration can take to move energy policy from that sham of "all of the above" to one of "consumer first."

First, avoid needless restrictions on hydraulic fracturing — colloquially known as "fracking."

This shows profound promise for developing our reserves of oil and natural gas without compromising the environment. Recent back peddling by EPA on adverse findings and lawsuits is a good start.

Lifting unnecessary restrictions would immediately boost our domestic energy supply. There's an estimated 273 trillion cubic feet of recoverable natural gas in North America and 1.7 trillion barrels of recoverable oil. That's enough to power this country for 250 years.

Second, regulators need to throttle back hasty regulation on offshore exploration imposed after the 2010 Deepwater Horizon disaster. When the Interior Department lifted its drilling moratorium, new mandates and go-slow permitting resulted in half of the pre-spill activity (15 versus 30 projects).

Third, the government must streamline permitting.

Even when energy companies can initiate new projects, getting final approval can be so long and costly they end up quitting. This means we're losing important new projects simply because of bureaucratic overreach.

Today, just six percent of the country's onshore energy deposits and 2.2 percent of offshore reserves are actually being developed. That must change.

Fourth, the President needs to clean house. A number of his officials are hopelessly biased against traditional energy exploration.

Energy secretary Steven Chu once said, "We have to figure out how to boost the price of gasoline to the levels in Europe."

And Obama's scientific advisor John Holdren: "More energy for its own sake (or for profit's sake) can no longer serve as the goal of national energy policy."

Chu, Holdren, and other federal officials who are anti-oil, gas and coal have no place in an administration that's allegedly concerned about pocketbook energy issues.

Finally, the White House should drop plans to levy new punitive taxes on energy development.

The President's 2013 budget raises taxes on oil and gas by $27 billion over the next decade. Instead, simplify the tax code to eliminate preferential treatment and let the market sort out winners and losers.

"All of the above" is a smokescreen for good energy subsidizing bad. Government officials don't — and can't — know the "answer" to this country's energy challenges. They should stop trying and let consumers decide in a free and open marketplace.

Robert L. Bradley Jr. is the CEO and founder of the Institute for Energy Research and author of seven books on energy history and public policy. He blogs at www.master-resource.org.

Patrick Droze wins state and local civil engineering awards

Patrick Droze, an engineer who works with various Washtenaw County communities, is the winner of the 2012 American Society of Civil Engineering Young Civil Engineer Award, Michigan and Southeastern Michigan sections.

Beating out candidates from across the Great Lakes State, Droze received the state award at the Michigan Engineering Conference, May 10 in Ypsilanti and won the branch award on May 5.

The awards, given annually, recognize engineers under the age of 35 for significant achievement based on professional contributions and service to the community.

Droze, 29, has worked at architecture, engineering and planning firm Orchard, Hiltz & McCliment Inc. since 2001.

His work has helped restore infrastructure, enhance recreational amenities and protect natural resources throughout Washtenaw County in cities like Ypsilanti, Ann Arbor and Dexter, as well as other communities throughout the region.

His recent accomplishments include efforts to stabilize the Mallets Creek Streambank, a project intended to reduce the harmful effects of phosphorus on Ford Lake.

He has also designed improvements to Rolling Hills County Park, which include the installation of a circulator roadway and pedestrian and bike trails as well as numerous roadway and water main projects for the City of Ypsilanti and Ypsilanti Community Utilities Authority.

Vets invited to business conference, hiring fair

The National Veterans Small Business Conference, the government's event for veteran-owned small businesses, is coming to Detroit's Cobo Center June 26 through 29.

VA also announced that a "VA for Vets" Hiring Fair will be held June 26 through 28 during the conference for veterans looking for careers in the public and private sectors. The conference is expected to attract thousands of veterans, business owners and federal employees, and bring an estimated $3 million in direct spending to the city.

"VA is committed to bringing more veteran-owned businesses into the public-private partnership," said VA Chief of Staff John Gingrich in a news release.

"In addition to the National Veterans Small Business Conference, our Detroit Hiring Fair will provide veterans with on-the-spot job opportunities and interviews, while also offering career search classes and one-on-one counseling."

All interested individuals and businesses are invited to attend. Last year's National Veteran Small Business Conference and Expo in New Orleans drew almost 5,000 attendees, and more than 6,000 participants are expected this year.

The Detroit Hiring Fair follows a Jan. 18 event in Washington at which a partnership of federal agencies and private industry attracted over 4,100 veterans and resulted in more than 2,600 on-the-spot interviews and more than 500 tentative job offers.

"These events are part of Secretary Shinseki's ongoing efforts to help veterans find employment in both the public and private sectors," said Gingrich.

"As the President said in ... (the) State of the Union address, veterans are crucial to our economy, and we need to find them jobs."

This year's conference will include an open house June 26 through 28 that gives veterans and their families the chance to find out about the wide range of financial and health care benefits, services and resources from federal, state and community agencies.

Veterans can conveniently enroll in VA care, sign up for MyHealthVet and get their questions answered face to face.

Also available will be the VetGovPartner online platform, which enables networking, viewing the business profiles of all participants and identifying business opportunities with more than 400 government procurement decision makers in attendance.

About 330,000 veterans are served by the Detroit VA medical center, and more than 704,000 veterans live in Michigan.

Auditors praise new report

On the heels of its award for the fiscal year 2010 Comprehensive Annual Financial Report, Pittsfield Township received high marks from its auditor for its fiscal year 2011 report, as well.

The highlight is that the township budgeted for a balanced result and ended with nearly $1 million in reserves, said Mark Kettner, a certified public accountant and principal with

The report will help the township and residents understand better what money is available and what is not, and what the spending and revenue patterns have been over the past 10 years.

Township Supervisor Mandy Grewal credited her department heads with living within their means and taking a team approach.

"Our thanks go to each one of our staff members," she said.

Workshops set at the Community Media Lab

A number of workshops are scheduled in Heritage's Community Media Lab, 215 W. Michigan Ave., in Ypsilanti.

The lab opened last month as part of a community outreach project. Staff journalists are at the lab daily ready to teach writing, editing, video production, podcasting, photography, and digital skills such as how to create a photo slideshow or sound slideshow using Google Voice, how to create a survey and embed it, and using social media to share your message and voice.

The lab, which includes public computer stations for blogging, Internet and email, is open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. weekdays and no appointment is necessary.

Upcoming workshops, open to the public and taught by local professors and experts, include:

• June 13: "Citizen journalists and FOIA" will be led by Eastern Michigan University journalism professor Carol Schlagheck from 6 to 8 p.m. The class should be of interest to anyone trying to get information from government bodies. Watchdog citizen groups, local bloggers, neighborhood watch groups, community contributors and media professionals are encouraged to attend.

• June 14: Mark Noble, advanced solutions architect at Verizon Wireless, will lead "Wireless communications in business" from 6 to 8 p.m. The workshop will speak as to how wireless communications can increase efficiencies and productivity. Technologies, devices and solutions will be presented, fostering group discussions so attendees can walk away with new and renewed ideas.

If you can't make the workshops, a live Twitter feed will be presented @CommunityMediaLab.

For more information about the Community Media Lab and its free workshops, email communitymedia@heritage.com. You can find Community Lab on Facebook and WordPress.

Lohr-Textile Greenway to hold dedication ceremony Saturday

Pittsfield Township officials will dedicate an additional 2.4 miles of non-motorized trail to the growing network of non-motorized pathways in the township Saturday.

Initiated two years ago, the first phase of the Lohr-Textile Greenway provides a connection between non-motorized pathways and sidewalks from Saline, through Pittsfield, to Ann Arbor.

"The Lohr-Textile Greenway is an example of our commitment to being good neighbors and makes it possible for people to walk or bike from Saline through Pittsfield Township to Ann Arbor," said Township Supervisor Mandy Grewal in a news release.

"More simply, it encourages people to get up, get outside, move about and interact in a way that isn't possible from an automobile."

Funding of the $1.2-million Lohr-Textile Greenway project was made possible by a partnership between the township and the Washtenaw County Parks and Recreation Commission's Connecting Communities Program grant of $790,000.

The support and cooperation of residents in providing the needed easements and rights-of-way were also instrumental in the success of this project.

"The Lohr-Textile project is the first to be completed under our Connecting Communities program (established in 2010). This exciting new trail exemplifies the intent of the program by connecting important local destinations, including: two cities, several neighborhoods, parks, shopping opportunities and a recreation center," said Coy Vaughn, deputy director of the Washtenaw County Parks and Recreation Commission.

The Lohr-Textile Greenway, Phase I, shows what can be accomplished when partnerships are formed for the public good, Grewal said.

"The township, our residents, the Washtenaw County Parks and Recreation Commission and the Washtenaw County Road Commission all came together to take this project from concept to completion in record time. While the Lohr-Textile Greenway is dedicated to the health and enjoyment of all who will use it, we will take time on June 9 to thank those who made it possible," Grewal said.

The ceremony will take place at 11 a.m. Saturday at the dedication marker on Lohr Road, immediately north of Regents Park Court.

For more information about the Lohr-Textile Greenway and other recreational programs and amenities in Pittsfield Township, visit www.pittsfield-mi.gov.

Miss Teen Michigan has Chelsea roots

Valerie Landwehr, the granddaughter of Duane and Winona Landwehr of Chelsea, was crowned Miss Teen Michigan United States 2012 after careful evaluation of her scholastic achievements, community involvement, success in national model searches.

Valerie, an 11th-grade student at Walled Lake Northern High School, is a member of the high school's National Honors Society and Student Council.

"I am very passionate about aiding in the fight against hunger – especially since one in five people face hunger in metro Detroit," Valerie said.

Forgotten Harvest is an organization she is passionate about because it provides direct relief to people who struggle to feed their families.

Love Our Children USA is another organization that she supports because it aids in the prevention of violence and neglect against children, she said.

Valerie plans to graduate early and attend college in Los Angeles, where her sister, Taylor, lives. She intends to study nutritional psychology at UCLA.

Valerie is the daughter of Ronald and Annette Landwehr of Commerce Township, formerly of Chelsea, and the granddaughter of the late Donald and Dorothy Houle.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Dexter's Memorial Day parade changes are unacceptable

I applaud the effort to eliminate the advertising in the parade via handouts, as well as the political banners, although there was still a political banner and car.

I do feel that this was completely mishandled and even handled too hastily.

The late cancellations of those who applied to be in the parade was appalling.

Many families who were set to march were notified late Wednesday or Thursday before Memorial Day, unacceptable.

It should have been discussed and decided upon well enough in advance so the businesses and groups of citizens that had sign-up sheets to manage their participants would maybe not even had put them up and then had to disappoint their friends/neighbors/community.

Furthermore, the changes to the parade should have absolutely been voted upon by all the Dexter Community and not decided for them. Perhaps a poll or survey could have been done, in essence exercising the rights that our veterans fought for.

It seems to me that the village businesses should absolutely be part of the parade.

The council should keep in mind that walking in the parade is not always viewed as free advertising but as an honor to stand up and support our veterans and active military members.

The thought of getting back to the meaning of Memorial Day is to support and show our appreciation to those who have fought for this country and those that continue to fight for our freedoms. That support should be welcomed and especially when it is offered by members of the community, such as kids training at the local karate schools or those participating in the local dance or gymnastic schools or just the kids that want to deck out their bikes and ride along.

By blocking these community members from participating in the parade, it sends a message that they are not "good enough" to march in support of this country or those who fought for our rights and freedoms.

I would urge the council and parade planning committee to reconsider the execution of these changes and temper the decision with compassion, and remember when you were a kid and were able to ride in the parade, or march with your friends.

Also remember that this parade is supported by the community that in essence you thumbed your nose at May 28, 2012.

Do not outsmart your common sense here.

Chelsea State Bank donates to FIA

Faith in Action, a non-profit which coordinated the Dexter Relief Fund and provides the Chelsea and Dexter communities a helping hand, recently received a $650 check from employees at Chelsea State Bank.

Faith in Action, which is the largest emergency service provider in western Washtenaw County, recently put out a call for more assistance with its food cupboard after having spent the last few months helping out Dexter tornado victims with requests to obtain funds with rebuilding.

The employees chose to donate to FIA immediately due to that need.

"I am so proud of our employees and the response they made," said John Mann, president and chief executive officer of Chelsea State Bank. "Normally, the money would have been donated to the charities of choice at the end of the year, but they choose to 'keep it local right now' and step up to this cause because of the immediate community need."

In July 2011, Chelsea State Bank employees kicked off their Blue Jeans for Charity fund, a casual day fund raising effort to raise money for local charities. Employees chipped in $3 per person, allowing them to wear jeans to work on the second and fourth Friday of the month.

According to Mann, Faith in Action has been aided by many business and community groups, as well as many congregational supporters in western Washtenaw County.

"It truly is local people helping local people, and that is what we are all about," he said.

Faith in Action is a community-funded, faith-based assistance and resource center for those who need a helping hand. It serves the area within the Chelsea and Dexter school districts, and provides a number of services ranging from providing clothing to household goods. Their emergency food pantry - provides assistance based on household income and gives households food to last three to five days. It is provided for people who need it, along with other supplies not purchasable with food stamps. FIA routinely provides food for 100 households each month.

Chelsea State Bank is a full-service financial institution with offices in Chelsea and Dexter. The Bank was formed more than 100 years ago by local business leaders to provide timely financial solutions to individuals, families and businesses in the community. This tradition of community service continues today. For more information, please visit csbonline.com or call the bank at 734.475.1355.

Civil War Days returns to Dexter for 'Year 2'

By Sean Dalton
Heritage Media

The second year of the Dexter Area Historical Society's commemoration of the Civil War at Gordon Hall promises a much more robust presentation with several exciting additions.

For example, the Confederacy will be represented this year alongside the Union forces.

This year Company A is bringing Bledsoe's battery and enough men for seven regiments, up from four last year. There are no skirmishes planned between the two forces this year, but Confederate historical information will be provided within Gordon Hall and those who attended the event last year will notice several other Confederate additions.

"Last year we had a big room dedicated to Union history, and this year Don Cartwright (a Company A re-enactor and expert) will have an 8-foot table in one of the smaller rooms to provide the Confederate point of view," organizer Donna Fisher said.

Fisher spearheaded the inception of Civil War Days and now has two years worth of planning and logistics management for the three-day program under her belt.

On Friday the event will begin with the Towne Band performing a free concert on the lawn of Gordon Hall. Music will include typical 1860s music played with era-appropriate instruments. The music will be accompanied by an entertaining and informative narrative to kick off the grand learning experience that is Civil War Days.

On Saturday Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln will arrive in Dexter on horse-drawn carriage so he can address the crowd before participating in the Lincoln dinner and press conference, the proceeds of which will go to paying down the mortgage that the DAHS&M have from buying Gordon Hall from the University of Michigan.

There were 30 tickets to the dinner still available as of Monday evening.

Throughout the day visitors will be able to visit the various re-enactor encampments on the Gordon Hall property to see with their own eyes the way that people lived in 1860 both in civilian life and military life.

Renowned Civil War history documentarian Jeffrey O'Den will join the likes of historian John Gibby and Sons of Union Veterans' Bill McAfee in order to add authenticity and depth to the event.

O'Den is a multiple-award-winning filmmaker who specializes in the Civil War era and has had his work feature on the Public Broadcasting System and other national media platforms.

"Mr. O'Den is new and we're very excited to have him," Fisher said. "He gives a 45-minute presentation that he accompanies with video. We'll have him here on Sunday."

Another addition this year will be "sutlers," or traveling merchants who procured items and supplies for sale to a traveling company of soldiers. Visitors will be able to purchase select items like gum or candy, but socks, candles and other goods will actually be sold to the re-enacting troops as they live out their daily lives on the Gordon Hall property as the soldiers would have in the fields of 1860s era America.

Fisher said that the number of events and activities for children has also been bolstered significantly this year, with butter churning, knitting, weaving and various other activities and games aimed and keeping youngsters stimulated while the rest of the family appreciates aspects of the event.

Barb Locks and Nora Eisele will hold story times for kids throughout the event, in accordance with public demand for more engagement.

Fisher added that she made sure to bring back "Tom the quartermaster," who gained a reputation last year for his stern and stoic discussions on the armaments and equipment that Civil War era soldiers had to work with as integral parts of their job as soldier.

For more information on Civil War Days Year 2, visit www.dextermuseum.org where a schedule for the three days of the event are outlined.

Nissan Cube is small, inexpensive, efficient, environmentally friendly

By David Schmidt
Automotive Editor
Journal Register Newspapers

Nissan believes that a car should be designed and built for a set of purposes. So the Nissan Cube is an urban car for people who are more interested in where they're going and with whom, rather than how fast they can get there. And it's inexpensive, efficient and environmentally friendly.

They want their vehicle to be a statement about who they are. It's important to them that people see them as different, forward looking, chic and as "outside-the-box" thinkers.

This is a new concept for the American market — or, well, it's at least new again.

Nissan's cube isn't the first one of its kind, and the category isn't even new — it's just new to America. Others in the same category include the Kia Soul, the Smart Car, Honda's Element, and maybe the MINI and Scion.

There are many more of these kinds of cars in other countries; in fact, this Cube is a third-generation platform of the car, which has been sold in Japan and Europe for a decade. They were popular there for economic reasons, and because being small adds a big bonus when streets are narrow and routine driving distances aren't great.

Not since the Volkswagen Beetles of the 1950s and 1960s has a category of car created a truly different segment. When people bought Beetles back then, it was a rejection of the American dream as it was then defined. Now buying a Cube is a definition of the new global dream.

While the concept of a tiny, square car is foreign to some, it's what gas prices and environmental awareness calls for. These city cars are small, inexpensive, efficient and environmentally friendly.

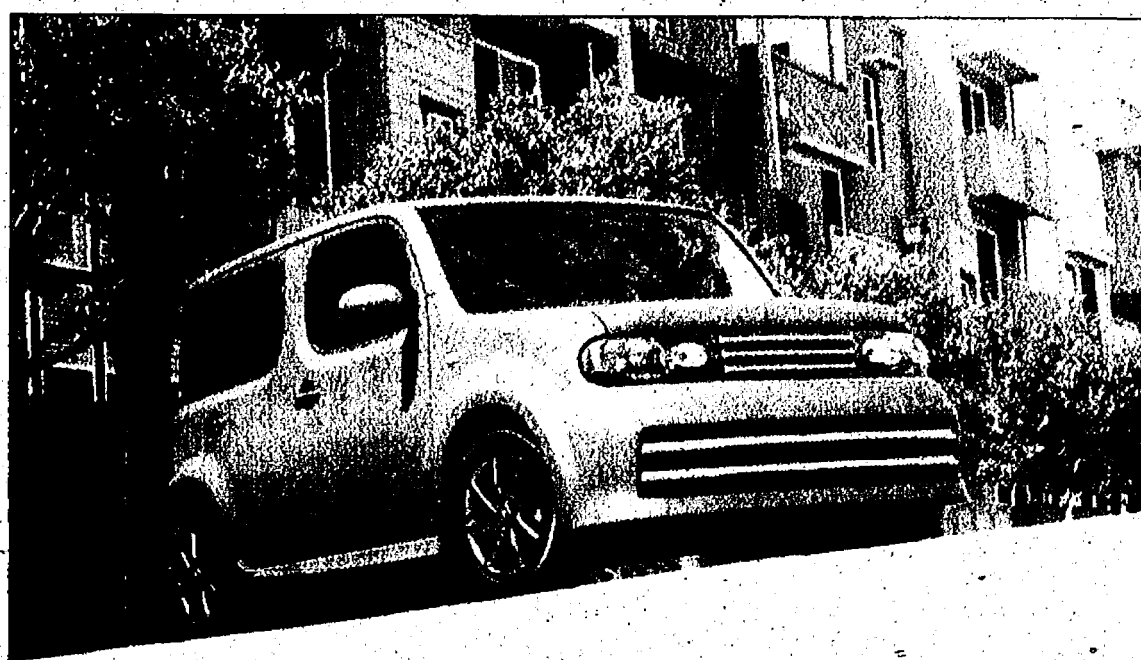

The Cube isn't a performer in the power and handling department.

The four-cylinder engine is small, giving the front wheel-drive cube 122 hp. out of 1.8 liters. That power flows through a six-speed manual or continuously variable transmission that's efficient to build, lighter and cheaper and more than capable of doing its job. The car's brakes do an admirable job of stopping the car.

The Cube's designers have ensured that the more important capabilities are there. Every Nissan Cube can have Bluetooth Hands-free Phone System, Automatic Temperature Control and RearView Monitor. There's a premium audio system that features a Rockford Fosgate subwoofer with six upgraded speakers, Satellite Radio, and an Interface System for iPods.

It provides enough room for the urban young person it's designed to attract. You can get a lot in it, thanks to its shape. The inside space is nicely usable, too.

Four people can go comfortably where they will, and take a bunch of stuff along with them. They can help each other move, they can carry mountain bikes or surf boards, they can listen to their own life soundtrack in almost any digital format and look cool while doing it.

Nissan says there are more than 40 individual accessories to buy so owners can personalize their Cube. There are three available models: the Cube 1.8 Base, Cube 1.8 S and Cube SL.

I'd love to see this category of car explode. It's smarter to have cars that do their tasks efficiently.

All the talk in the world won't make a bit of difference to our consumption unless people actually change their behavior. This Cube is a great way to encourage people to do the right thing and have fun doing so.

Scion FR-S — the power comes from a new "boxer" engine.

Scion FR-S — Attractive car was jointly developed by Toyota and Subaru

By David Schmidt
Automotive Editor
Journal Register Newspapers

When you think about driving a new Scion, doing it on a racetrack isn't the first thing you think of. Until now, that is.

With Scion — Toyota's young, hip brand — broadening their lineup beyond "urban" small cars, the message couldn't be made clearer than with the Scion FR-S. Clearly the brand hasn't gotten any better at naming their products, but evidently potential buyers will remember the random letters that make up their names. Toyota officials said the initials stood for F(ront engine) R(ear drive) S(port).

While that's a good definition of the FR-S, because the engine is in front and the rear wheels apply the power, the designation is severely less memorable than the car itself. It's a very attractive car, low, wide and mean-looking. The FR-S was developed jointly by Toyota and Subaru, who will sell a very similar version of the car under the Subaru badge.

The power comes from a new "boxer" engine. The term "boxer" refers to being a horizontally opposed engine. This 2.0-liter four-cylinder powerplant is a direct-gasoline injected, naturally aspirated engine producing 200 hp. and 151 lb.-ft. of peak torque.

The engine was developed by Subaru but uses Toyota's D-4S injection system, which uses both direct and port injection for each cylinder; one injecting fuel directly into the combustion chamber, the other, a port injector, located above the intake valves.

With variable intake and exhaust valves, the engine management system has plenty of tools to make this engine work effectively at all power ranges and demands, making power when needed and operating efficiently when possible. The biggest problem will be the drivers, who will be having too much fun to give the car much chance to do all the efficiency stuff it's capable of.

This Scion will appeal to a lot of people, many of whom aren't in the anticipated age demographic. And that's a good thing, as one who's not in that demographic. One thing that'll appeal to those young drivers who appreciate spirited driving is the price — it starts at an MSRP of $24,200 with the six-speed manual transmission, and $25,300 with the six-speed automatic transmission. Really.

For that you get quite a capable car. At Mountain Springs Racetrack in Nevada, the car was a quick, consistent handler at speed. It has plenty of electronic suspension assistance to make all of us better drivers.

To help bring the rear-wheel-drive design to life, FR-S features a Torsen® limited-slip differential, which applies power to the rear wheels with precision and immediacy. Vehicle stability control and traction control can be set in combination of five configurations. That includes a Sport setting for the suspension and traction control setup and a way to turn it and the traction control almost completely off. These two features make this genuinely a sports car, not a sporty car. It isn't a monster, high-performance sports car; it's a British-roadster style vehicle, where the driver must stay ahead of the engine's power curve in order to use all power wisely.

The interior is both modern and sporty.

This Scion will appeal to a lot of people, many of whom aren't in the anticipated age demographic. And that's a good thing, as one who's not in that demographic. One thing that'll appeal to those young drivers who appreciate spirited driving is the price — it starts at an MSRP of $24,200 with the six-speed manual transmission, and $25,300 with the six-speed automatic transmission. Really.

You can choose a manual or automatic six-speed transmission. On the track, the manual is better, but the automatic isn't bad. Shifting the manual is nicely precise, but throws could be shorter. I'd also rather see slightly lower gear ratios in the first four gears, and then get back to the "overdrive" high ratios of most fifth and sixth gears for cruising efficiency.

In an autocross' tight, twisting layout, we only ran in the automatic, my fastest time — by almost a half a second — was with all the suspension controls off, but having chosen the Sport mode, letting the transmission doing the shifting itself. That result surprised me, but not the racing instructors who were shepherding us through the exercise.

On the racetrack, with more accelerating and de-accelerating, even the automatic did better when it was in manual-shift mode. The automatic has rev-matching technology for downshifts, and upshifts aggressively under hard acceleration, figuring you're trying to go fast.

On the street, it made no difference; whichever a buyer prefers does the job. But this Scion isn't for gear-heads who can't get a date. In addition to really great looks, the car's easy to drive on the street and comfortable to sit in. The interior looks good, as it's both modern yet reminds you that it's a sport car.

The seats are quite supportive, but not at the expense of being uncomfortable. The necessary features are here, including a standard eight-speaker AM/FM/CD/USB 300-watt maximum output Pioneer™ audio system. It has HD Radio and Bluetooth for both hands-free phone as well as streaming audio.

The FR-S will be the first Scion to offer a connected multimedia audio system called BeSpoke™, powered by Pioneer's Zyrp™. When connected to an iPhone®, Scion's BeSpoke system will offer a higher level of connectivity features and personalized content like Facebook, Twitter and Internet radio, among others.

Recall, then, the price mentioned above. This car reflects Scion's all-in price for the car, then offers a multitude of custom additions. Add in the aftermarket performance and style offerings that should be coming soon. Scion's a big brand in the aftermarket world already with superchargers and other serious performance add-ons as well as styling "enhancements" for pure, personal customization.

So for very little money, you can get a gorgeous sports car that's impressive on the road and that reflects your very own personal automotive style.

Library to host summer reading programs

The Dexter District Library has a wide variety of interesting, entertaining and fun programs lined for the coming summer days.

Summer is one of the busiest times around the library and everyone is invited to join our summer reading programs. Read for fun all summer and enter our Grand Prize Drawing for some amazing prizes.

This year's children's program, "Dream Big... Read", will run from June 15 until Aug. 3. Children may register anytime during the summer. Registration involves filling out a reading record and setting a reading goal. The reading goal can be a certain number of books read over the summer or an amount of time spent reading each week.

Children who cannot read yet may participate with a parent or caregiver by signing up for the "Read-To-Me" program. Reading records will be kept at the library so children can keep track of their progress. Each week a small prize is given to every child who comes into the library to record the books they have read. Children who meet their reading goal by Aug. 12 will receive a book bag full of surprises and enter the Grand Prize Drawing which will be held on Aug. 13.

The program will officially start 11 a.m. June 15 with the 18th Annual Summer Reading Program Kick-off Party.

Join the library when the Acting Up Theater Company presents: "Dream, Big Bear... Read!" A story about Bernie the Bear who fears everything, especially the darkness and how choosing the right book to read before bed helps him overcome his fears.

The 45-minute play will be followed by refreshments and Chamberlin's Live Petting Zoo at the Farmers Market. There will be a variety of farm animals for children to meet and pet. Expect to see a miniature horse, miniature fallow deer, pot bellied pig, alpaca, llama, goats, sheep, rabbits, chickens, roosters, and ducks. Hand sanitizer will be provided with appropriate disinfecting solutions available as the library will be also serving refreshments.

The Teen Summer Reading Program Kick-Off will also occur at the same time. Sign up for "Own the Night" teen program and enjoy some free refreshments at the Farmer's Market while there. Each week, read three hours or more to receive a Weekly Prize Drawing entry ticket.

HIGH SCHOOL TRACK & FIELD BOYS STATE CHAMPIONSHIPS

First & Third

BRADLEY WINS 3200 STATE TITLE; BULLDOGS TAKE THIRD OVERALL

By Terry Jacoby
Heritage Media

It was a magical day for the Chelsea boys' track and field team at the state meet in Grand Rapids on Saturday. The Bulldogs headed home with the third place overall trophy, a state champion and two school records.

Not a bad day at the office for the men in blue.

"Our 38 team points well exceeded my prediction for this day," said Chelsea coach Eric Swager. "Up until the last event, we were in second place by one point. To be in state title contention for a second straight year is quite a two-year accomplishment."

Yes, it's been quite the run as the Bulldogs finished second overall last year.

"Since I have been at Chelsea, no guys team in any sport has had a back-to-back state finish like this," Swager said. "I feel that we competed well across the board, supported each other, and finished the year in fine fashion."

The meet was the last run for Chelsea's Bryce Bradley, who finished his career at the head of the line. The senior took first place in the 3200 run and picked up 10 points for the Bulldogs with a time of 9:24.

He also added another eight points with his second-place finish in the 1600 with a Chelsea school record time of 4:15.28. It also was a personal best for Bradley and second fastest in the state in any division.

"Bryce's performances echoed what he has been doing for the past few years in the biggest meets. He just ran tough," Swager said. "We had a game plan for each race, and it worked out almost exactly like we had planned."

"In the 3200, Bryce endured windy conditions and a strong lead group, then slapped down an impressive 61 second last 400 to pull away decisively from Mason's Tanner Hinkle to secure the victory."

The Chelsea pole vaulters also had a huge day at the state meet. Micheal Hovater took second in the state (14.4) and Travis Weiss landed in third (14.1). The two combined to give the Bulldogs 14 points.

"The pole vaulters wildly exceeded expectations," Swager said. "Although schedule needs a makeover

One thing I am not sure I will ever understand is the way the MHSAA organizes districts.

For football, they have a point system and every team is seeded based on their season, and play teams accordingly. Why can't this be done for the other sports? At least let the seasons determine who gets byes and such.

I think of this because of what happened at the Wayne Memorial baseball and softball district this past weekend. While nearly every district in the state was playing on Saturday, they moved the Wayne district to Friday because they had graduation on Saturday.

Makes sense, although that does require pulling the rest of the kids out of school.

But where it doesn't make sense is the fact that Inkster (one of the teams in the district) had their graduation on Friday. This means not a single senior for their softball or baseball teams was in attendance at their final high school game.

game.

The softball squad couldn't field a full team and was forced to forfeit.

The baseball team had nine guys, one of whom arrived at the game thirty minutes late, delaying the whole day's events by nearly an hour after warm-ups. While the delay benefitted at least one person in attendance (myself) by allowing me to watch all of the softball championship and nearly the entirety of the baseball game, it certainly wasn't a convenience for everyone else there.

Who did this move to Friday really benefit then? Certainly not Belleville.

Inkster isn't exactly a baseball powerhouse, but with only nine guys, and a pitcher who could barely find the strike zone, the first game did nothing to help the Tigers prepare for the championship. And due to weather, the district wasn't even held at Wayne Memorial, but instead at Westland John Glenn.

"WHY CAN'T THE MHSAA SEED EACH TEAM IN A GIVEN REGION AND DISTRIBUTE THEM THROUGHOUT THOSE DISTRICTS ACCORDINGLY?"

Had Inkster been seeded properly, they certainly would not have received a bye through the pre-district round, would have played and more than likely lost, meaning no conflict on Friday.

The Inkster seniors would have had an opportunity to play in their final game, and Friday's fiasco would not have occurred.

For the softball team, the Tigers didn't play an early game, and didn't start the championship until around 3:30 p.m.

All those girls were pulled out of classes in the last two weeks of school to sit around and not play a game until after school was out.

Plus, they didn't get any sort of warm up. Tiger pitcher Myranda Barnes struggled in the first inning of the championship game and she felt that the odd start to the day was at least partially to blame.

"We came out and were really excited to play, but then we kind of just sat around. I warmed up like three separate times, and when the first inning happened it didn't feel right," she said.

I know that travel reasons are one of the ways districts are organized, but why can't the MHSAA seed each team in a given region and distribute them throughout those districts accordingly? Travel wouldn't be too bad for non-rural areas, and more rural teams end up traveling greater distances regardless.

I guess when it comes down to it

One on One: With Chelsea senior Bryce Bradley

Bradley wins state title in 3200

Chelsea senior Bryce Bradley (right photo, top middle) won the 3200 run on Saturday at the MHSAA Track and Field State Championship in Grand Rapids. He also took second in the 1600 run and helped lead the Bulldogs to a third-place finish.

What were your goals heading into this season?

Going into this season I really wasn't sure what to expect. After winning cross country states I tried to stay humble and not underestimate anyone I race throughout the season. I just went into it with a mentality of I am going to train as hard as I can, like I did for cross country, and hope that when the season ends I am able to say that I gave it my best. No matter what place I got at states.

What were your goals heading into the state meet?

My goals for the state meet were fairly simple... although no one ever said it... my goal was definitely to win. If you had asked me before states what my goal was I probably would have told you that my goal was to get back on the bus satisfied with my season.

Walk us through your race in the 3200-meter run?

The 3200m ran close to how me and coach Eric Swager had thought. The plan that coach Swager gave me before the race was to just go out and run stupid. Just get right on the hip of whoever was leading and then kick. It didn't go out quite as fast as we thought but everything played right into our plan. The first mile was run at 4:42 and there were probably five or six of us in the lead pack. I don't like running in packs so by the time lap five rolled around, which is when I would usually start to push the pace, I was itching to turn it on but Swager kept yelling at me not to go... with two laps to go we were still in a pack so I decided to see how gutsy the pack was feeling and threw in a little bit of a surge nothing too painful just enough so that anyone who wasn't feeling tough would drop off. The surge spread the pack out a little bit but not enough as I had hoped. Against Swager's judgment (Sorry coach!) at 400m to go I took off, after hearing another coach yell at another senior that it was his last 400m as a high schooler, and narrowed the field down to me and Tanner Hinkle from Mason. At 200m to go I just took off in a dead sprint and pulled away from Tanner. I closed in 61 seconds for my last 400m and 4:42 for my second mile for a time of 9:24 - 14 seconds off my PR.

Walk us through your race in the 1600?

The 1600m ran exactly as me and coach Swager predicted. Connor Mora was the favorite in the race having run 4:13 prior to the state meet. We thought having to run the 800m after the 1600m would deter him from leading and that someone else would take it out fast. That was the case. We were out in 61 seconds for our first 400m. It slowed a little bit the second 400m to 64 seconds and still Mora didn't lead but was definitely pushing the pace in the middle 600m. The third 400 was run in 67 and like we thought Mora still didn't lead and was just waiting for me to kick. At 200m to go Mora realized that I wasn't going to kick just as I started to kick and we threw down. I made a push for the lead at 120m to go and got by him but he just had that last gear that I did not have and beat me by just over a second. We closed in 61sec for a final time of 4:15 and 4:13.

-Are you surprised the team finished third in the state after taking second last year?

I was actually surprised that we finished as high as we did. We didn't exactly perform well at regionals. I got our 4x800m team DQ'd and we had some other pretty bad errors. On top of that we had a lot of talent to make up for that we lost last year. We lost our best hurdler Mason Borders and our best distance runner August Pappas.

What will you remember most about being a member of the Chelsea track and field team?

I have way too many memories to narrow it down to just one... running for Chelsea has given me some good

Chelsea finally got a shot past the Milan goalie in OT but the referees ruled this goal crossed the line after the buzzer.

Tough way to go!

Bulldogs fall in shootout after OT goal disallowed

By Terry Jacoby
Heritage Media

There are usually two ways to look at a game - one from the winner's side and one from the loser's side.

But it's tough to call Chelsea a loser after the Bulldogs played a solid game in a district semifinal game on Thursday against Milan at Tecumseh.

The Big Reds ended up with a 1-0 victory in a shootout and advanced to Saturday's district final against Dexter at Tecumseh.

The teams played two halves and two 10-minute overtimes without a goal.

Well, that's debatable. And that brings us over to the Chelsea side of the field.

In the final seconds of the first overtime, it appeared the Bulldogs scored the winning goal. But the officials waved off the goal, saying it crossed the line after the buzzer sounded. It was certainly close but did appear to beat the buzzer by a split second but the call was made and the teams headed to a second overtime.

One thing not open to debate was that Chelsea clearly carried the play and had many more scoring chances than the Big Reds.

In fact, Milan's two best scoring chances occurred in the second overtime and were really the Big Reds' only serious runs at the Chelsea goal.

The Bulldogs controlled the midfield and seemed to be a little quicker to the ball. They used space well and had some nice exchanges to set up quality scoring chances.

And this brings us over to the Milan side of the field. The Big Reds played with an aggressive style all game and never backed down from the team in blue - they weren't exactly playing on their heels. But what they did well was ask their standout goalie, Erin Jinna, to make good saves and not great saves - in other words, the scoring chances were rarely great scoring chances.

The bottom line, no matter what side of the field one was on, is that the Bulldogs failed to turn any of their chances into goals and Milan won the game. The Big Reds had to like their chances in a shootout with Jinna in goal.

"I always look at the player and see if I can guess where they are going to go and just have a lot of confidence in myself," said Jinna, who allowed just one goal in the five-round shootout and looked confident and quite relaxed.

In fact, she gave Chelsea's last shooter, Jessica Ruikka, a hug before Ruikka took her shot. It was a shot Chelsea needed to have to force extra kicks. Hugging your opponent in a pressure situation doesn't happen very often and both girls seemed to enjoy the moment.

"Yeah, we played a couple of years together with the Michigan Jags," Jinna said. Of course, Jinna liked the outcome a little better. She made a nice save to secure the win as her teammates raced onto the field to celebrate.

After Jinna and Chelsea goalie Krista Pagliarini started the shootout with some nice diving saves, Milan's Madison Splitt gave the Big Reds a 1-0 lead to start the third round. Jinna

Golf team hits regionals

Last Friday, the Chelsea golf team played in the District tournament at Marshall C.C.

There were 12 teams at the District tournament of which the top six teams move on to regional play.

The District was won by Battle Creek Harper Creek with a 321. Chelsea shot a 339.

"We didn't play great, but we played good enough to move on," said Chelsea coach Joe Ewald.

Bourke Lodewyk led the way this time with a fine 79 in some pretty difficult conditions.

"We have been quite spoiled this spring with pretty good weather, but Friday was definitely not one of those days," Ewald said.

Also scoring for Chelsea was Mason Wagner 83, Cole Mauti 87 and Wesley Mitchell 90.

Chelsea will play in the Regional tournament on Friday at Eldorado Golf Course in Mason.

Now it gets very tough, as only the top three teams will move on to the state tournament.

On May 23, Chelsea played in the SEC Conference meet at Calderone Golf Club. The Bulldogs scored 334 to finish third in the White Division. Chelsea also finished third in the final conference standings behind Tecumseh and Dexter and ahead of Lincoln, Adrian and Ypsilanti.

Mason Wagner, still playing great golf, shot a 1-under-par 71 to take medalist honors (over both the Red & White Division). Also scoring for Chelsea was Bourke Lodewyk 84, Michael Purdy 88, and Wesley Mitchell 91.

double. Brad Hepler singled him in after an out. Then, Scheese came up and hit a two-out, two-run homer to right field that tied the game at 4-4. Alex Maloney then came on to pitch for Chelsea. With the bases loaded, the Bulldogs scored the winning run on a Colton Platt single.

Maloney got the win in relief.

In the opener, the Bulldogs fell behind 7-0 before rallying for a 10-9 win.

Chelsea scored five in the bottom of the second and finally went ahead in the bottom of the fifth on a Tyler Geiger three-run homer to give the Bulldogs a 9-8 lead.

Tecumseh got one back on a home run to tie the game at 9-9. Tanner Starkey doubled in the game winner to make it 10-9.

Maloney again recorded the win in relief.

Softball shocker: Bulldogs fall in first round

By Terry Jacoby
Heritage Media

Sometimes, everything goes wrong at the same time. Saturday was one of those days for the Chelsea softball team.

Host Tecumseh shocked the talented Bulldogs with a run in the first, three in the fourth and fifth innings and another run in the seventh for an 8-1 win in the opening game of districts on Saturday morning.

The loss sent the Bulldogs home with a 32-3 overall record.

"It was a combination of everything," said Chelsea coach Bob Moffett. "We didn't play nearly as well as we are capable of. Had we played well and just got beat by a better team, that would be easier to take. But we didn't play well. We didn't hit. We didn't pitch. We had too many errors."

Senior Taylor Hansen struck out 10 in the loss but she allowed 11 hits and five earned runs.

"It's probably the most earned runs she has allowed all season," Moffett said.

But the Bulldogs didn't give their pitcher much help, either in the field or at the plate. Chelsea pounded out 14 hits against the same Tecumseh pitcher earlier in the year but managed just five hits on Saturday. And two of them came in the final inning with the game out of reach.

"We only got one hit out of our top four hitters," Moffett said. "You have to hit better than that."

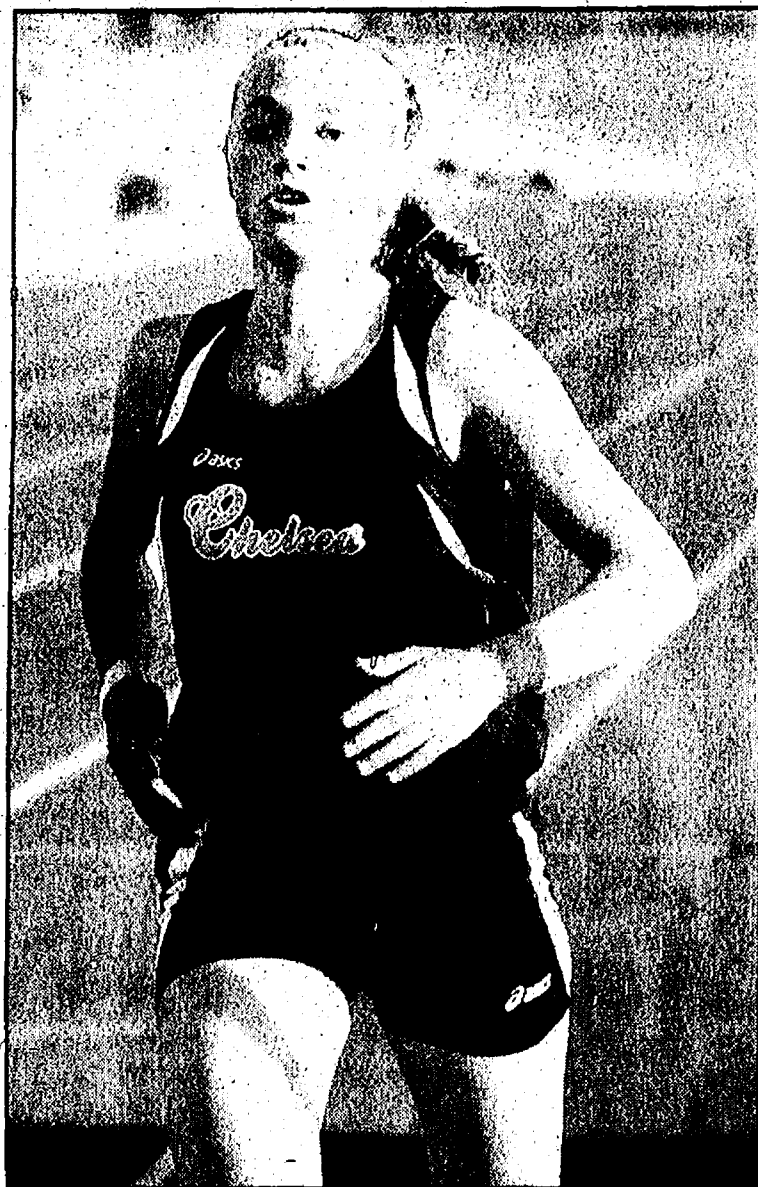

After Hansen struck out the first two batters in the game, the Indians got two bloop hits. They then scored the game's first run on a solid hit. The Bulldogs ended the inning though on throwing out a Tecumseh runner at the plate.

But the Indians broke open the game with three runs in the fourth and three more in the fifth.

"I don't know why, but we were tight," Moffett said. "I could see it in their faces."

Bulldogs reach the finish line

The Chelsea girls' track and field team competed in the MHSAA state finals at Houseman Field in Grand Rapids on Saturday. The Bulldogs competed well and finished 13th overall in the state with 15 points.

The Bulldogs sent all four relay teams to Grand Rapids and all four finished among the top eight in the state. "Having all four relay teams place in the state meet is a huge accomplishment and a testament to the hard work that all the athletes put in during the season," said Chelsea coach Shane Rodriguez. "The relay teams were coached by Bert Kruse, Kalli Nowitzke and Eric Swager and their careful planning and preparation helped the girls peak at just the right time."

Chelsea took nine state qualifiers to the MHSAA meet and all nine returned with All-State honors. Of this group of nine, only two girls are seniors, Danielle Dahl and Elaine Johnson. Dahl will run for Ball State next year, and Johnson is deciding between scholarship offers from Spring Arbor and Cleary University.

"We wish these All-State seniors the best and we know they will represent Chelsea well in their future endeavors," Rodriguez said. "The seven that will return are a solid foundation for future success and will continue to make Chelsea track and field a very competitive program."

The 1600-meter relay team of Grace Sauers, Victoria Collins, Rachel Yordanich and Danielle

Dahl took fifth in 4 minutes, 07.32 seconds.

The 400 relay team of Yordanich, Megan Lowe, Laura McGrath and Sauers finished seventh with a time of 51.09.

The 800 relay team of Sauers, Collins, McGrath and Yordanich raced to third in the state with a time of 1:45.99.

The 3200 relay team of Elaine Johnson, Artemis Eyster, Maria Osentoski and Danielle Dahl finished sixth in 9:46.49.

"As this season comes to a close, I would like to thank all of the athletes, coaches and parents for a wonderful year," said Rodriguez, in his first year as the head coach of the girls' program. "The 2012 track season was filled with excitement, record breaking performances, fun, and significant improvement in all areas of the sport."

the conditions were not ideal, and the competition itself was fraught with difficulties, we were the ones who overcame the obstacles and performed in spite of the challenges. To be second and third in that event is a credit to the athletes and coach Shane Rodriguez."

Junior Berkley Edwards took fifth in the 100 dash with a time of 10.92 seconds.

"Berkley Edwards captured an all state award and his second fastest time ever against a very tough set of sprinters," Swager said. "Interestingly, four of the top five finishers in that 100 dash compete together in the Max Out track club in the off season. Not a coincidence."

Senior Luke Oliver ran into the school record book with a time of 49.95 and a seventh-place finish in the 400 dash.

"Luke ran an aggressive

400 race to post another school record," Swager said. "He showed toughness and capped off his high school career with an all state award."

The 400 relay team of Edwards, Oliver, Colton Dennis and Christian Vosters ended up ninth and only .02 away from a state medal. The team finished in 43.79. With three of the four athletes returning next year, that looks like a decent goal for 2013.

The 800 relay team of Ty Nelson, Kenny McDowell, Dominic Davis and Zach Rabbitt gained valuable state meet experience, and improved their relay exchanges from the past couple weeks. They finished with a time of 1:37.5.

"I would like to thank the coaching staff for all their great work, and the parents for the huge array of food supplied at the state finals," Swager said. "Also, all the fans who have supported us to make this day special. We hope to cherish the positive memories, and (as always) learn things to improve in the future."

Home Run Derby

The Chelsea High School baseball program hosted their second annual HR Derby fundraiser on May 25. The HR Derby was a success as 15 balls were hit for home runs throughout the event. then made a diving save on a nice shot by Chelsea's Amber Plemens.

Milan's Hannah Horton then made it 2-1 but Chelsea's Katelynn Kingsley kept the Bulldogs alive with her goal in the fourth round.

Jinna said the Big Reds came out a little flat against the Bulldogs.

"I think we were a little bit nervous," she said. "After we got our confidence we started to play well."

Jinna played well all game but passed a lot the credit on to her teammates. "I got a lot of help from my defense," she said.

The first 10 minutes of the first half were a little sloppy as both teams were trying to get used to the turf field, but once they figured that out, the game seemed to settle into a nice groove. Slowly, Chelsea started to carry the play.

At around the 14:30 mark of the first half, a few nice passes set up Nikki Liedel with Chelsea's best opportunity up to that point. But Jinna handled the shot and didn't allow any rebound. In fact, Jinna didn't allow any rebounds all game.

With 7 minutes to play in the first half, a few nice touches set up Hayley Buntin with a scoring chance, but again the shot was right at Jinna. Buntin was clearly one of the best players on the field, helping the Bulldogs control the middle of the field for a good portion of the game.

The Bulldogs continued to carry the play in the second half. At the 27 minute mark, a nice cross by Rachel Marks sailed through the front of the goal without anyone able to get a foot on it and redirect it.

The Big Reds' best chance came with 4 minutes left in the second overtime on a shot by Horton.

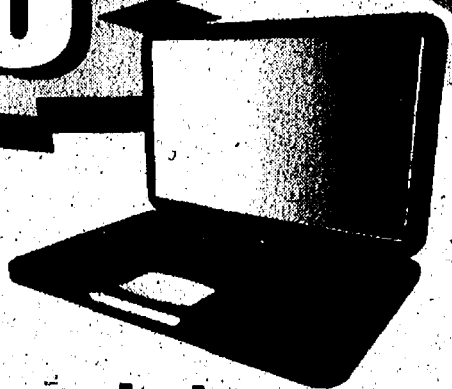

Milan lost 4-0 to Dexter in Saturday's district final.

Champions!

The Chelsea Soccer Club U9 Boys Blue team completed a great season last week. They won the spring WSSL (Western Suburban Soccer League) U9 Boys Division III with a 6-2 record, having moved up three divisions after finishing second in the fall WSSL U9 Boys Division VI with a 7-1 record. Additionally, the team competed in the Canton Cup soccer tournament over Memorial Day weekend in the boys U9 Green Bracket. They advanced to the bracket final by finishing with two wins and a tie in divisional play and then narrowly lost the final, allowing a goal with less than a minute to play with a final score of 3-2. They are the youngest Chelsea Soccer Club team ever to advance to the finals of the Canton Cup.

Freshmen Baseball: Season Roundup

Young Bulldogs showing plenty of promise

The Chelsea freshmen baseball team lost a double dip to Dexter on May 22.

"They are a really good team and do some good things both offensively at the plate and defensively as well," said Chelsea coach Joe Welton. "This was the first time in a really long time that we didn't play good enough defense to win. But we still battled and continued to fight and we never gave up. I'm always proud of the way we've done that over the course of the season."

The Bulldogs lost 10-0 in the opener and 6-5 in eight innings in the second game.

One bright spot was the play of Nick Maloney. "He's made a transition to third base to help the team and really played great there," Welton said. "He's swung the bat well and he's been a great two-hole hitter for us throughout the year."

Last week, the Bulldogs played in a three team tournament at Chelsea with Pioneer and Dexter.

In the first game of the double header, Chelsea lost 12-8 to Pioneer.

"The game really went back and forth until Pioneer finally took control in the end," Welton said. "They just swung the bats better than we did and we could not make enough plays defensively to stay in the game."

Bryan Evans swung the bat well and drove in a few runs for Chelsea. "Bryan has really grown as a player over the course of the year," Welton said.

In the second game, Chelsea and Dexter played to a 2-2 draw after the game was called because of darkness. Grant Ortbring started the game on the mound and pitched his best game of the season. His ball was downhill and he was throwing strike one.

"We were able to do some things on the bases and go to work a little bit and push a few runs across," Welton said. "The second game really was a good showing of us getting better throughout the year. Ben Whitesall, who does so many good things behind the plate for us, did a great job in the second game. He hustles and blocks the ball in the dirt."

The Bulldogs lost two games to Brighton on May 29 to finish the season.

Kolten Savery started game one of the double header and pitched four strong innings before giving way to Ortbring, who has pitched and played first this year. "He's going to be a good one for this program," Welton said.

Matt Proegler pitched next and did a good job which he has all year. "Matt is such a smart kid that will be a great asset to this program," Welton said.

Bryan Evans also threw the ball well for Chelsea. "Bryan made a transition to the outfield this year and has done a great job," Welton said.

"I was proud of the way all of our guys threw the ball and competed on the mound. The goal was to get a lot of guys out there and let them compete a little bit. Even though we lost the game 12-4 I thought all of them did some nice things."

Connor Dehring did a great job behind the plate in the first game. He blocks the ball well and threw a guy out at third base on an attempted steal. Sam Almhelm also swung the bat well and stole a base.

"Sam has played a great center field all year and does the little things so well," Welton said. "He's always mentioning ways for our outfielders to get better."

In the second game, Cameron Starkey started on the mound and pitched four strong innings.

"Cam has done a nice job on the mound and has done everything asked of him, he's stolen bases and done a great job at short-stop," Welton said.

Mason Jacobusse and Travis Kaiser also pitched well for the Bulldogs.

Tim Johnson had a great day at the plate and Paul Heck also swung the bat well for Chelsea.

The future is bright for Chelsea baseball.

"We've got a group of kids here that love to play the game of baseball and enjoy competing with each other," Welton said. "Above all else this year, I was proud of the way we were great teammates and played together. We as a team did a great of picking each other up."

"Also, I think it was exciting just to see the day to day improvement that we showed and just an eagerness to get better every single day."

"I would be hard pressed not to mention Daniel Lindauer who missed the last two weeks of the season and was really missed. Daniel had an unfortunate knee injury that kept him out of play. Daniel will be a good player down the road for us.

"Other guys that made great strides included

Ryan Easley, who excelled at first base. Scott Moore, who always swung the bat well and ran the bases great. Eric Verleye, who hit wherever I wanted him to and just continued to hit. He's going to be an exciting player to watch develop."

BRADLEY

friends and a couple great ones. I will never forget my experience here. God has blessed me with great teammates and coaches. I just hope that I can continue to make God, my family, my coaches, and the entire town of Chelsea proud as I continue my running for many years to come.

What has been your motivation to run and excel in track and cross country?

When I was a sophomore I missed making the time to go to track states by less than a second, and the place by even less. When I was on my cool down jogging around the track waiting for the 4x400m to run I heard a couple of coaches talking. Their conversation went like this: "Who got third in the two mile?" and the other responded with "That one kid from Chelsea." The other guy said, "Oh well, he ran a pretty good race. I think he has potential." The other guy then chuckled and said, "No way. He is probably done growing. He is way too short to go much farther in distance running."

That was all I needed to hear and I have made it my goal since then to prove him wrong. If he reads this for whatever reason I would just like to tell him thanks. Because of him I dropped my crappy attitude I had as a sophomore and got angry. I would also like to say four words... "Two-time State Champion."

'On Golden Pond' on deck soon at Purple Rose

By Sean Dalton
Heritage Media

The Purple Rose Theatre Company in Chelsea is saying goodbye to the current 2011-2012 season with Ernest Thompson's "On Golden Pond."

The story of Norman, played by BoarsHead Theater founder John Peakes until Aug. 5 and Richard Henzel from that point on, is a comedic family saga that deals with multi-generational family relations and romance during the twilight of one's life.

"It's very poignant and beautiful. I think it's an American classic," said Purple Rose Artistic Director Guy Sanville.

The story begins with Norman and his wife, Ethel, arriving at their summer home in Maine for a bit of a seasonal getaway, until their estranged daughter shows up with her fiancé and his teenage son in tow.

Over the course of a summer, Norman grows as a person and discovers some things about himself in developing a friendship with the boy and rediscovers a passion between himself and Ethel that he once thought lost.

"You don't usually see something like that for folks who are a little more seasoned," Sanville said. "I think it's something that everybody will be able to relate to."

One thing that young folks may not be able to consider is the idea and feeling of the stakes being high when someone is at the end of their life with fewer years ahead.

"Life looks different to all of us when there are fewer years ahead," Sanville said.

"On Golden Pond" has a wide age range in its cast, Sanville said, with one cast member being 13-years-old and another being in the 70s.

"They relate to each other in very meaningful ways," Sanville said.

Michelle Mountain is directing "On Golden Pond," after starting in "White Buffalo," which comes to a close this weekend.

Mountain is in her second week of leading rehearsals and the set is currently under construction.

The set will be built starting Sunday and the cast and crew will be assembled and on stage next Wednesday or Thursday.

Sanville said that he's going to miss "White Buffalo," which received a high level of support in the form of ticket sales and garnered the most amount of praising mail of any show that the Purple Rose has put on.

"It was a beautiful production," he said.

"It's hard saying goodbye, but hopefully we'll get to work with many of the cast members again. This one was a great adventure from the very beginning. We still haven't ruled out taking it on the road (with performances on the Purple Rose lawn or at Silver Maples in the future)," he said.

As for "On Golden Pond," Sanville referred to it as "dessert" to the 2011-12 season as a whole.

"It's a newer published play so a lot of the script-work is already done for us," he said.

"I think it's something that our audience here is going to love and, boy, is it selling well," he said.

"Lots of people have seen the film. I think our version is going to be something special."

Tickets are now on sale. Ticket reservations can be made by calling The Purple Rose Theatre Company Box Office at 734-433-7673.

'In the Next Room' kicks off June 14 in Ann Arbor

Performance Network will present a summer comedy from the MacArthur "Genius" Award winner, Sarah Ruhl, called "In the Next Room."

The play, which was a finalist for the Pulitzer Prize and a 2010 Tony nominee for Best Play, begins previewing on June 14 and runs through July 15.

It is directed by Suzi Regan, and features Performance Network regulars John Seibert and Aphrodite Nikolovski, who appeared in "The Clean House," another comedy by Ruhl.

"In the Next Room" also features Milica Govich, Rusty Mewha, Carollette Phillips, Leslie Hull and Hazen Cuyler.

Upon the dawn of electricity, the aptly named Dr. Givings invests in a buzz-worthy new instrument used to treat female patients' "hysteria." As the number of blushing patients swells, the good doctor's curious wife breaks into his office to try the device for herself, unleashing an entirely new type of energy deep within.

Inspired by the book "The Technology of Orgasm" by Rachel P. Maines, Ruhl's comedy premiered at Berkeley Repertory Theatre in February 2009. It opened on Broadway later that year at the Lyceum Theatre, presented by Lincoln Center Theater, in November, which marked Ruhl's Broadway debut.

In addition to its nomination for Best Play, "In the Next Room" was also nominated for Best Featured Actress and Best Costume Design.

Seibert (Dr. Givings) is an associate artist with Performance Network. He has appeared with The Purple Rose, Meadow Brook, Jewish Ensemble, Michigan Shakespeare Festival, Alabama Shakespeare Festival and Actors Theatre of St. Paul, among others.

Film work includes roles in "SuperSucker," with Jeff Daniels and "Kill The Irishman," with Val Kilmer. As a director, John staged "Circle Mirror Transformation" (Best Comedy, 2011 Wilde Awards) and Doubt (Best Drama, 2008 Wilde Award) at Performance Network, and has also directed for The Williamston Theatre, North Coast Repertory in San Diego, The Triangle Theatre (off-Broadway) and for Eastern Michigan University, where he serves as a lecturer in the Communication, Media and Theatre Arts department.

Nikolovski (Mrs. Givings) has performed at Performance Network as well as at Tipping Point Theatre, Purple Rose Theatre and Meadow Brook Theatre. She portrayed Jaqueline de Severac in "Murder On the Nile" at Philadelphia's historical Hedgerow Theatre. She was honored at the 2011 Queens World Film Festival with the Best Actor Award for her work in the film festival favorite, "The Spirit of Isabel." She was also honored with the Rising Star Award at the Action On Film Festival in Pasadena for her work in this film.

Playwright Ruhl's other works include "Stage Kiss," "Dead Man's Cell Phone," "Melancholy Play," "Eurydice," "Orlando" and "Late: a cowboy song."

Originally from Chicago, Ruhl received her master's degree of fine arts from Brown University, where she studied with Paula Vogel.

In 2003, she was the recipient of the Helen Merrill Emerging Playwrights Award and the Whiting Writers' Award.

Weekly performances of "In the Next Room" are 7:30 p.m. Thursdays, 8 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays, and 2 p.m. Sundays, with 3 p.m. Saturday matinees June 30 and July 14.

Tickets can be ordered at the Performance Network Box Office at 663-0681, online at www.performance-network.org or by coming

'Dictator' amusing but shallow; 'Battleship' unexciting

It's not the average Hollywood comedy that desires to lampoon American democratic policies, corruptive habits, our perception of foreign powers, collectively "independent" sub-cultures and Megan Fox. Then again, not much about the career of Sacha Baron Cohen has been terribly typical.

A mild-mannered Cambridge graduate, Cohen has somehow become the face of contemporary crude comedy, mainly through his half-documentary half-narrative films ("Ali G Indahouse," "Borat," "Borat"). His newest effort, "The Dictator," represents a move into purely fictional material, and it lands with more of a thud than its purely fictional predecessors.

"The Dictator" stars Baron Cohen as Admiral General Aladeen, the all-powerful ruler of the fictional North African province Wadiya. He is a dedicated, passionate man; however, that passion tends to be dedicated to the suppression of free speech and action.

In the midst of a farcical New York City Aladeen is betrayed by his radical advisor, Tamir (Ben Kingsley in an embarrassing marginal role), who represents the outrageous cause of democracy.

MOVIE REVIEW

RYAN MICHAELS

Aladeen, now replaced by a hysterically unintelligent double (also Cohen), is cast out into the city, only taken in by a hyper-organic activist type played by Anna Faria. The couple, although radical opposites, seem to bond closely over their shared running of a yuppie trade-magazine, so say nothing of their plentiful body hair.

"The Dictator," running at a fast 83 minutes, will amuse and amuse as it welcomes and then dismisses its well-meaning guests.

But what about always takes precedence in "The Dictator" is the movie's occasional jokes whenever possible, which is both a curse and a huge blessing.

One thing has not changed about Cohen here — he remains among the funniest people working today. His humor is as improbably fast and furious as ever, often resulting in hysterical gags.

But the downside of this is its effect on the film's narrative momentum: the pacing is lumpy and inelegant, occasionally giving great length to marginal gags, and then condensing sequences of significant events into two-minute reels.

It's simply impossible to get a grip on this film emotionally; one is left breathless at the gags yet greatly underwhelmed by the actual content in which they're presented.

In essence, there's nothing to this movie than what one receives at face value, which wouldn't be so large a problem were it not presented in a context of allegedly serious social commentary.

I give it a grade of "C-," rating.

'Battleship' technically competent, unexciting

I firmly believe that a great piece of art can come from any source, any inspiration. But where exactly that inspiration comes from, and the reason for its selection, is up for quite a bit more skepticism, in my eyes.

Enter "Battleship," a $40 million film whose primary inspiration is a plastic game in which little pegs and ships are the sources of excitement and tension.

It certainly goes without saying that "Battleship" was created out of executive laziness and creative bankruptcy, alongside numerous other floundering projects. The movie's cynical, contrived exercise of financial gambling, "Battleship" is a competency made film.

While certainly assembled from a checklist reading "beginning, middle, end, action, booms, humor, etc.," a coherent narrative to marry the gorgeous battle ships, which is also the commander of the entire Pacific fleet. Melodrama and explosive rounds abound.

It would come as no surprise that "Battleship" is a hollow shell of a narrative with muscle where brains should be, noise where heart should be.

Its attempts at counterbalancing this with its comedic/romantic subplots are as ineffective as they are harmless. But it finds paths in the dynamic between the two brother protagonists, actors Taylor Kitsch and Alexander Skarsgård find a relationship with genuine heart — humor at some points, and then tragedy strikes one, even a degree of sadness.

Further acting efforts come with mixed results. Liam Neeson, who seems to be a proponent of elevating mediocre blockbuster's credibility, has an enjoyable cameo as the Hoppers' military superior.

Conversely, Rihanna gives a performance whose every quip gets progressively more laughable. Brooklyn Decker, too, is a prime example of model-turned-actresses who should stick with their first profession.

The film's greatest evidence of unoriginality lies with its action sequences — in essence, the only reason the thing exists in the first place. Where many films have momentum and pacing in their sequences, "Battleship" has noise, clanging and fury.

Director Peter Berg certainly demonstrates visual clarity and skill, it's just that what he's filming has very little of interest.

The inherent purpose of writing a review is to explore things about a film that aren't necessarily self-evident, which presents a problem for "Battleship": it's all at face value. There's nothing one can say about "Battleship" that it will not proudly loudly demonstrate for itself.

There's certainly admirable qualities in that, but also the sort of shamelessness that begot the project in the first place. I give it a "D-," rating.

Ann Arbor Dance Works to perform at city landmarks

Ann Arbor Dance Works will offer interpretations of the legend histories of downtown landmarks in a traveling performance titled "Corsets, Grains, & Greenways: Dancers from Ann Arbor Dance Works." Thursday through Saturday.

As audiences walk along a four-block route in downtown Ann Arbor to watch dancers perform in historic buildings, alleys, sidewalks and in a garden, organizers of the performance said the hope is for observers to ask, "What if there were a greenway to connect these spaces to the existing neighborhood?"

The legend histories include the historic Pratt Building at the corner of First Street and West Liberty Street. Dancers from Ann Arbor Dance Works will offer histories of downtown landmarks through dance. The performances are intended to evoke the past, present and future in a series of contemporary dance works performed in spaces of "continuous reinvention, restoration and metamorphosis," according to Jessica Fogel, University of Michigan professor of dance and artistic director of Ann Arbor Dance Works.

Over the course of 90 minutes, "Corsets, Grains, & Greenways" features performances of contemporary dance numbers by guest artists Monica Bill Barnes, Adeola Akintoye and Dance Works resident choreographers Fogel and Robin Wilson.

Dance Works is the resident dance company of the University of Michigan Department of Dance. In addition to working with guest choreographers from around the world, Dance Works collaborates with poets, videographers and composers.

Site one is WSG Gallery inside the Pratt Building on Main Street. The building has been used as a corset, factory, hardware store and dance studio. The dance for eight women, choreographed by Fogel, draws on the building's history and current figurative painting exhibit.

Site two is the Kille Gallery, where audiences will see a performance by the Community High School Dance Company. Marly Spieser Schneider, a U of M dance alumni, choreographs the work.

Along the walk to the next site, dancers will lead the audience, Akintoye choreographs the piece.

A site three, 15 dancers will perform at Downtown Home and Garden on Liberty and Ashley streets.

The piece is created by guest artist Barnes. The final venue is the corner of First Street and West Liberty where U of M choreographer Wilson explores the possibilities of transforming the sites into a greenway. The dance features six dancers performing on the city's sidewalks.

Performances are at 7 p.m. Thursday through Saturday. Each night, the performances start at WSG Gallery, 306 S. Main St., in Ann Arbor.

The cost is $15 for the general public or $10 for students and seniors. For ticket reservations, visit www.mutux.com.

How much paint should you buy to paint your vehicle?

Q: When it comes to painting, do I buy more paint than I need? And if I do run out, what are the dangers of a different batch of paint not matching?

I want to try to paint my truck and need to know the best way to keep from mistakes. Thanks.

— Wes

A: Automotive paints are extremely high quality paints. If you buy only what you need now and have to make repairs in a few months the chances are very high that the existing color will match.

However, if several years pass it will be up to the person mixing the tints at the paint store to make the match.

Whenever I've painted a car I purchased about a quart more paint than necessary to do the job. I mixed both batches together, painted the car and then stored remaining paint in the quart container.

Inevitably I needed some touch-up paint sometime later and it always matched perfectly.

Why subsidies are important in regard to electric vehicles

Q: I read recently that maintaining federal and state subsidies are the only way the electric vehicles will stay in the marketplace.

If those subsidies are removed, the vehicles will be too expensive to buy and people won't want them. What do you think?

— Conner in Dearborn

A: Right now it's true that government subsidies are keeping the market for electric vehicles alive because part of the costs are offset while manufacturers work out efficiencies of scale and technological challenges. This is the case because fuel prices are still relatively low, too low to justify the alternative drive trains.

As time goes on and fuel prices rise much higher, electric vehicles will become much more cost-effective and affordable.

Subsidies will no longer be needed. Subsidies should never be permanent but they're sometimes quite necessary to help avoid future economic shocks.

We simply have to develop different modes of transportation for the future. Oil supplies will run out this century.

After oil change, Subaru engine coughs and sputters when it starts

Q: I had the oil changed on my Subaru and now the engine coughs and sputters when it starts. Nothing else was done to the car while in the shop and I can't figure out what an oil change would do to cause this symptom. What should I be looking for? Thank you.

— Steve

A: The first place I'd look is the oil fill cap on the engine. If it's not tightly sealed, the air-flow sensors could be giving the engine computer false information.

The next place I'd look is the air filter box and associated ducting to the manifold.

The shop foreman there would have taken a look at the filter to see if it's dirty and may not have properly closed the box or connected the ducting. Either would fool the air-flow sensors and result in improper starting and running.
