Legal Printing.—Persons having legal advertising to do, should remember that it is not necessary that it should be published at the county seat—any paper published in the county will answer. In all matters transpiring in this vicinity, the interest of the advertisers will be better served, by having the notices published in their home paper, than to take them to a paper that is not as generally read in their vicinity, besides it is the duty of every one to support home institutions as much as possible.

CHELSEA HERALD.

CHELSEA, OCTOBER 30, 1879.

From the "Cricket on the Hearth." Saturday Night.

Placing the little hats all in a row, Ready for church on the morrow, you know;

Washing wee faces and little black fists, Getting them ready and fit to be kissed; Putting them into clean garments and white— That is what mothers are doing to-night.

Spying out holes in the little worn hose, Laying by shoes that are worn through the toes,

Looking o'er garments so faded and thin— Who but a mother knows where to begin? Changing a button to make it look right— That is what mothers are doing to-night.

Calling the little ones all 'round her chair, Hearing them lisp forth their evening prayer, Telling them stories of Jesus of old, Who loved to gather the lambs to his fold; Watching, they listen with weary delight— That is what mothers are doing to-night.

Creeping so softly to take a last peep, After the little ones all are asleep; Anxious to know if the children are warm, Tucking the blanket round each little form; Kissing each little face rosy and bright— That is what mothers are doing to-night.

Kneeling down gently beside the white bed, Lowly and meekly she bows down her head, Praying as only a mother can pray, "God guide and keep them from going astray."

"Don't Give up the Ship."

You're on the sea of life, boys, Your ship is staunch and strong; You're sailing smoothly now, boys, But storms will come ere long. But boldly furl your sails, boys, And let the tempest "rip," Stand bravely by the helm, boys, And "Don't give up the ship!"

Though clouds o'ercrest the sky, boys, The sun is bright behind; And though the waves roll high, boys, They'll soon calm down, you'll find. So always keep up heart, boys, With cheerful eye and lip; And let your watchword e'er, boys, Be "Don't give up the ship!"

Beyond the raging sea, boys, You'll find at last a rest, 'Til only on your trip, boys, You do your "level best." There waits for each a crown, boys, So take a manly grip; There waits for all eternal life Who "Don't give up the ship."

An Essay.

[Read by Miss Dora Harrington, at the entertainment given by the ladies of the White Ribbon Club, of Chelsea, on Wednesday, Oct. 15th.]

"It is said that 'the constant dropping of water will wear away a stone.' It is an old and well known saying. You have, perhaps, heard it often, but have passed it by unheeded, never giving it a thought.

Looking at this old proverb with an eye to the sentiment conveyed, how many and how varied are the thoughts suggested to our minds. Thoughts that deepen into reveries, assuming innumerable shapes, ever leading us on until finally they land us right into the midst of a comparison.

Intemperance has been and is now stalking through our land, bearing in his arms, under his gilded cloak of sin, thousands of run-shops, saloons, etc., with their proprietors and visitors, by its blasting influence, converting the happiness of homes and noble qualities of mankind into mere misery and death. And in this the eve of the nineteenth century, the world is stirred with alarm at the terrible havoc intemperance has made in the mortals of its people.

It is now making rapid strides towards a complete reformation, and 'tis well, that, at this age and condition of the world, it is so acting as to make the eve of the nineteenth century memorable to the future, as a time of mighty reformations and noble works; and, perhaps, ere the morn of the twentieth century breaks o'er the horizon, the successful results of the temperance work done now will be perceptible at every turn.

Intemperance is but an outburst of the passion of Satan himself to draw human beings into his terrible influence, and, finally, as a consequence to his last home which is supposed to be warm in deed.

Let us now make the comparison of intemperance to a stone firm and almost immovable, hard and impenetrable, or to a rock where the breakers of an intemperate life dash high, and upon which so many noble lives are wrecked. The constant and persistent efforts of our good temperance people to the dropping of water, and it is without a doubt safe to say, that as sure as this old adage has always proven true, so will the efforts put forth to break down the rock of intemperance be a sure success. It may not be at the present time; but there is the good time coming you know, when we expect the public mind to rise to that status that the Legislative body will find it the best expedient to give to the people, according to their desire, whether it be a prohibitory law with a jail in the rear, to accommodate all sellers of intoxicants, or some other method equally as effective,—then, perhaps, we will secure the eternal rest already referred to.

The terrible results of the habitual use of intoxicating drinks has been so frequently, and so truthfully, portrayed to us by able and eloquent speakers, it would be but presumption to attempt to say more on that point; but incidents are brought up by the score, and the shocking results best idealized that monster we are contending against.

But a few short nights ago there occurred that most shocking railroad disaster, that filled the people with such horror. Upon whom does the responsibility of all those deaths rest, and the mangled remnants of that unsuspecting humanity, who had left their homes in the East to meet their death fate. From the conflicting statements as given in the investigation, it will, in all probability, rest upon a man whose life was not strictly temperate. Others may share a portion of the blame, but still the origin will rest in rum. Can it be that positions of such great trust are trifled with? Is a human soul of such little value, and the satiating of human appetite so much more necessary?

This is but another incident added to the long list depicting the evil influence of rum. How is it not marvellous that the people knowing to the fullest extent that rum is but, the instigator of all crimes, the most wretched; the precursor of certain ruin; the demoralizer of humanity; the effect it has upon the individuals themselves—and knowing the end to which the use of rum will certainly bring them, why they still persist in going on day after day, night after night, in the old routine of drink. It is strange. Perhaps it is the hereditary sin of our first parent visited to this generation,—and Satan is as wily now as then. He has filled rum with deadly serpents for you to swallow, at ten cents a glass.

It is time this curse was blotted from our land. Its deadly influence has blasted the happiness of too many homes. The whisky power has prevailed too long. Redemption we must have. What is that gentle murmur we hear slowly but surely sweeping over our land. It deepens. It is quite a commotion. What can it be. Ah! It is the voice of the people, who, rising up in their indignation, assert by the power decreed to every American citizen; and, also, by the power of their public servants, the Legislature, that this great wrong shall be put down, and right shall be established.

It is evident that the Red Ribbon Reform movement has done its part in putting down this evil. On the basis of brotherly love, and the use of moral persuasion, the harvest has been abundant and the success great. Perhaps in the coming time when the good system of moral persuasion is combined with better system of legal persuasion, the success may be permanent. Now that the enthusiasm of the cause is sleeping, are we to cease our efforts in securing its further advancement, and sit supinely by waiting for some huge billow to take it on its big shoulder and carry it on to smooth water. Are we to be like stranded lobsters, waiting for the waves to reach us? or are we to continue our good works, performing them as effectually in the future as we have in the past. It all lies in each one's doing their part. We are all persons of ordinary ability; we possess no extraordinary talent; we do not want to be too conspicuous in our part; we simply want to do our duty cheerfully. Duty does not deserve censure, but approbation.

I once read of how an exquisitely young gentleman after buying another seal to dangle about his person, said to the jeweler "that he would—ah—like to have—ah—something engraved on it, to denote what he was—ah!" "Certainly certainly," said the tradesman, "I'll put a cipher on it." I dare say the fellow felt highly complimented.

Are the young gentlemen of Chelsea to act as ciphers in this work? heedless of the amount of good they could do if they would but recognize the merits of total abstinence, utterly regardless of the temptations they are subjected too, when they enter those saloons and places of all grades of vice. Let your answer be shown in a manner worthy of you. Countless appeals have also been made to the older members of the community, to be careful of the example they set for the boys. You may not drink, but still you will continue to pass into those saloons, and now what for? Do you patronize them in any way? Do you buy your cigars there? Do you play on those gaming tables? Is that strictly temperance. I cannot help but think it is unprincipled in any man to assert himself as a temperance man, and then continue to run into those saloons and commit himself, if only by the purchase of a five cent cigar. Can any one by so doing retain the dignity of their manhood? It will in time imbue them with an uncertainty of the strength of their own power to resist greater evil, and a reckless independence of a superior power.

Let us not be inert, let us be wary of our pledges. When once this evil is down, it is down forever. Nothing will ever fan the sparks into flame. We look anticipantly into the future, when America will proudly stand up, the stain on her name, completely eradicated, the stain caused by the influence of intoxicating liquors upon the government officers, who have sat during the sessions of Congress too heavily drunk to care one iota for the justice of the laws meted out to the people of the Union. Oh! what a contemplation for the lovers of liberty and freedom, bound down by the galling chains of rum. And throughout all the world, caused as it is by the evil of intemperance, we but echo the earnest prayer of hundreds of thousands by reverberating "Oh! I speed the day, when rum's dark curse forever from earth shall pass away."

Long and Short Credits.

With a return of better times there is a natural tendency, amid the pleasant anticipations of a prosperous future, to lose sight of valuable lessons that all ought to learn from the adversity of the past. It is well, therefore, to pause for a moment and consider an important feature that must ever influence the commerce of the world, unless, indeed, there may be in the far future a business Utopia where credits shall be unknown, and "spot cash" an unvarying rule.

It is not many years since the selling of goods on twelve months' time was not an uncommon occurrence, and many business men who are still active can recall cases of young men who, without a dollar, have been able to purchase entire stocks on long time, dispose of and pay for their goods, and stand at the end of the year with an actual capital of their own. Improved communication, more rapid transit, numerical increase of customers, and a consequent necessity for a more active capital by distributors, were important elements in shortening credits. Notwithstanding this abridgement, long time was still an accepted fact, and the panic of 1873 found too many in a hopelessly extended condition, followed by the inevitable penalty of bankruptcy. Sellers have paid dearly for their experience, but have learned a lesson long to be remembered, that, in this respect, at least, illiberality is both possible and necessary. What is the result? Time has been reduced to an average of sixty-five days, a surer control of capital exists, and it has become difficult for young merchants to commence business without means. This may be unfortunate for them, but, on reflection, it will be apparent that it is, after all, a real benefit to the beginner, inasmuch as it necessitates habits of frugality and industry to enable him to accumulate sufficient means with which to make his first purchase.

Extension of time in credits should not come with prosperity. The tendency in that direction will be certain only on the part of the heedless. But we cannot believe that the thoughtful merchant will forget the teachings of the past six years. Short time means a more secure grasp of one's capital, and it will be evident to all—in fact, it is almost an unnecessary assertion—that a merchant is financially stronger with $100 in his own pocket than with his $100 in the pocket of a comparative stranger 500 miles away. Our method of stating it may be extreme, but the principle involved is unchanged. This is so evident to the intelligent questioner that he will ask: Is he a good collector?—in other words, is his capital well in hand? It is true that the long-time purchaser pays more for his goods than one who asks less indulgence, or anticipates his payments; but it is a question whether the difference to the weak jobber or manufacturer is an equivalent for interest he is forced to pay on loans necessary to "carry" the former. Occasionally an apologist for long time cites England as an instance of large accumulations by a system of extended credits; but he forgets that the cases are not parallel, and that England, unlike America, possessed the capital necessary for such a system. And it also may be asked if she is not at present questioning whether her long credits have not been delusive? Is she not learning to-day what we have already learned?

Surrounded as the subject is by innumerable contingencies and exceptional circumstances, it is impossible to treat it with exactness of thought; but, on the simple question of long and short credits, there is no excuse for generalizing, and, if merchants would combine in adhering to a short-credit system, we are confident that it would be profitable to the seller, beneficial to the buyer, and a blessing to the country.

The reports of the librarians show that sixty-eight per cent. of the books taken from twenty-four public libraries are works of fiction.

A report is circulated in London that the Emperor William, of Germany, is breaking up mentally, and his memory is entirely gone.

Then go to Gilbert & Crowell, and get a one dollar and fifty cent pair of gloves for seventy-five cents, and to finish your outfit go to Aaron Durand, and get a five dollar pair of boots for three. Go by all means, and fulfill the above receipt as it is a sure preventative for cold.

Communication.

CHELSEA, Mich., Oct. 29, 1879.

EDITOR CHELSEA HERALD:—Sir: I hear that a report has been circulated to the effect that the "Agricultural Insurance Company, of Watertown, N. Y.," had not made a satisfactory settlement with me, for the loss and damage I sustained by fire on my farm, in Lyndon, in the month of September, 1879. This report is without the slightest foundation in fact, for my loss was satisfactorily adjusted, and promptly paid.

CARE OF THE HAIR.—A writer writes thus on the care of the hair: "Putting up the hair of children in curling papers, breaks it and checks its growth; often pulls it out at the roots. Curling irons are fatal to the hair of both children and grown persons. The heat snaps up the juice out of the fibers as effectively as fire or frost snaps the vitality of a green branch, leaving it but a dry, withered skeleton. The practice which hair-dressers have of frizzing out the hair with a comb, to make the most of it, is one of the most cruel injuries that can be inflicted on the living hair. You can test the truth of this by combing out the hair after it has been so dressed. The hair sometimes comes out by handfuls; and, further, this process tangles up the hair, and a great deal of it is broken and pulled out in trying to comb it straight again."

MEDICAL.

The terrific twinges endured by rheumatism are first soothed and in the end permanently relieved by this beneficent annihilation of pain and preventive of its return, THOMAS ELECTRIC OIL, a combination of six patent medicinal oils, devoid of alcohol, and consequently non-evaporating when applied, economic, because little of it is usually required to produce the desired effects, and the small cost of which is rendered doubly insignificant by contrast with the salutary results which it achieves. It is equally safe whether used internally or externally, is applicable to diseases and injuries of horses and cattle, as well as of man, and exterminates throat and lung diseases, catarrh, dysentery, piles, tumors, sores, and a great number of other physical ailments. Sold by medicine dealers everywhere. Price, 75 cents and $1 per bottle; trial size, 25 cents.

CATARH!

ELY'S CREAM BALM

A Decided Cure.

A Local Remedy.

HARMLESS, EFFECTUAL, SIMPLE.

Application easy and agreeable.

The effect is truly magical, giving instant relief, and as a curative, is in advance of anything now before the public.

The disagreeable operation of forcing a quart of liquid through the nose, and the use of snuffs that only excite and give temporary relief, are already being discarded and condemned.

CREAM BALM has the property of reducing local irritation. Sores in the nasal passage are healed up in a few days. Headache, the effect of Catarrh is dissipated in an almost magical manner. Expectoration is made easy. Sense of taste and smell is more or less restored. Bad taste in the mouth and unpleasant breath, where it results from Catarrh, is overcome. The nasal passages, which have been closed up for years, are made free.

Great and beneficial results are realized in a few applications of the Balm, but a thorough use of it, in every instance, will be attended with most happy results, and generally a decided cure.

Fifty cents will buy a bottle, and if satisfaction is not given, on application the proprietors will cheerfully refund the money. Trial size, 10c. Ask your druggist for ELY BROS., Oswego, N. Y., Proprietors.

For sale here by W. R. Reed & Co.

MESSRS. ELY BROTHERS:—I cheerfully add my testimony to the value of your Cream Balm as a specific in the case of my sister, who has been seriously debilitated with Catarrh for eight years, having tried ineffectually, Sanford's Remedy, and several specially doctors in Boston. She improved at once under the use of your discovery, and has regained her health and hearing, which had been considered irremediable.

LEGAL NOTICE

Mortgage Sale.

DEFAULT having been made in the conditions of a Mortgage executed by William Kent and Eveline Kent, his wife, to Jay Everett, bearing date the 15th day of March, A. D. 1877, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds, for the County of Washtenaw, and State of Michigan, on the 28th day of March, A. D. 1877, in Liber 52, of Mortgages, on page 736, by which default the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative, and which mortgage there is claimed to be due at this date, the sum of two hundred and eighteen dollars and sixty-two cents, ($218.62), and twenty dollars ($20.) as an Attorney fee, as provided in said mortgage, and no suit or proceeding at law or in chancery having been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Notice is therefore hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and of the Statute in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be foreclosed on Monday, the 1st day of December, next, at eleven o'clock in the forenoon of that day, at the south door of the Court House, in the City of Ann Arbor, in said County of Washtenaw, (said Court House being the place of holding the Circuit Court for said County of Washtenaw), by sale at public auction to the highest bidder, of the premises described in said mortgage, which said mortgaged premises are described in said mortgage, as follows, viz: All those certain tracts or parcels of land, bounded and described as follows, viz: The north part of the south-west quarter of the south-west quarter of section eleven (11), Town 3, south of Range three east, bounded north by north line of said quarter section, east by the highway, south by the north line of one, heretofore deeded by Lyman Tallman to one Frazer, being a part of said quarter section, and west by the west line of said section eleven, and containing about sixteen acres; also, the south half of the south-east quarter of the south-east quarter of section ten (10), in Township three (3), south of Range three east, containing twenty acres; also, the north half of the north-west quarter of the north-east quarter of section fifteen (15), in Township three, south of Range three east, containing twenty acres, in all about fifty-seven acres of land, more or less. All of said lands used and occupied by said Mortgagor, as one entire farm.

Said sale to be subject to the payment of the principal sum of one thousand dollars, and interest yet to become due upon said mortgage.

Dated Chelsea, September 3d, 1879.

JAY EVERETT, Mortgagor.

G. W. TURNBULL, Attorney for Mortgagor.
