If you have any business at the Probate
Office, make the request that the notice be published in the HERALD. Such a request will always be granted.

WHISPERINGS.

Did you plant a tree to-day?

Barefoot boys have made their appearance.

Put this down: Snow on the 22d day of April!

Ice cream! That's what it says on several "shingles" in Chelsea.

Large quantities of potatoes have been marketed here the past week.

H. Lighthall has now received those hay forks and carriers. Call and see them!

The chimney which Mr. Sparks is building at his mill, will, when completed, be 55 feet high.

Spring onions made their appearance on the Chelsea house tables last Thursday.
How is that?

The pleasant weather of Saturday last,
caught a bad cold during Sunday, and winter apparel was in demand.

Our streets are not quite as crowded now, as they were during the winter, as farmers are very busy with spring work.

A letter is held for postage, at this office,
as a stamp is placed on the envelope, cut out of one of the government envelopes.

"It is the little bits of things that fret and worry us," says Josh Billings, "we ken dodge an elephant, but we kan't a fly."

John Bage, the meat market man, is now moving his old building, to make room for his brick store. Who'll be the next to build?

The nuisance of tearing off the show
bills and throwing them on the streets,
should be abated at once, as many horses
take fright at the flying paper.

Last week we said U. H. Stevens had a new boot and shoe sign. It should have been U. H. Townsend. We beg pardon of both parties for the slip of the pen.

That young man must think considerably of his sweet-heart, who has his inside vest pocket made on the left side, to be enabled to carry her letters over his heart!

Why people will patronize such traveling physicians as Drs. K. & K., Dr. Wood and others, is more than we can account for, as long as Chelsea has so many good and reliable physicians.

Reed & Winans, successors to W. R.
Reed & Co., certainly intend to be up with the times, for in addition to papering, painting, &c., they have added three, four-light chandeliers—probably the most handsome ones in the place.

L. D. Loomis the grocer, this week makes himself known through a half column "ad." Mr. Loomis makes a specialty of groceries and produce, and wishes to let people know that he pays cash. He has just added a coffee roaster, which enables him to have fresh coffee each day.

The genial Editor of the Dexter Leader, Mr. J. M. Allen, made this office one of his pleasant calls, last Friday. Mr. Allen thinks the T. A. A. & G. T. R. R. extension, from Ann Arbor north, will surely strike Dexter, and then Chelsea can crawl into a hole, and draw the hole in after it!

Dr. Shaw sports a new buggy.

To the many new readers, who have been added to our list lately, we herewith tender our sincere thanks. If you are not a subscriber now, we hope you soon will be!

Hale & Telford, the Bazaar boys, have been so busy arranging their store (and they have it in nice shape now, too), they have not taken time to write out a new
"ad," but will present one next week.

An Ice Cream Social will be given by the Young Peoples' Christian Association, in the basement of the Congregational church, to-morrow (Friday) evening, April 27. A cordial invitation is extended to you!

In passing the cemetery, at Unadilla,
may be seen a tasteful cottage monument,
of New Hampshire granite, recently placed there by the kind and loving wife, denot-ing the resting place of the late Burton Fick, of Lyndon.

We had no idea that ministers' hens ever laid large eggs, and therefore were somewhat surprised when we saw one that Rev. Mr. Giberson marketed that measured 8½ inches the largest way, and weighed four and one half ounces.

We are almost afraid of losing H. Light-hall's "ad," for he has so much to do, and so little time to do it in. Never has Mr. L., put up so many of the renowned "Star Windmills," as the present season. We hope this state of affairs will continue!

The play "Ireland as it is," presented by the Jackson Dramatic Company, at the Town hall, last Friday, drew a large house.
The play was well delivered, and the audience was highly pleased. We can fully endorse the item which appeared in last week's HERALD, in regard to it.

What pays better than to raise clover seed? You get one good crop of hay, and then simply mow the second and let it lay until you have time to take care of it, and then pay $1 per bushel for threshing.
At the present price ($8.50) it would be hard to find anything that would pay better.

Buy of the merchants who pay taxes,
and help build up their town—and especially buy of those whose business is represented in the HERALD. Not that advertising makes their goods any better; but they are the ones who will and can give you bargains! Try it! And see for yourself!

Messrs. Glazier, DePay & Co., evidently believe in the liberal use of printer's ink—
for during the past week, they have mailed at this office over nine hundred envelopes, containing slips describing specialties in their line, and inviting people in to examine their well selected stock of wall paper, paints, coloring material, jewelry, brushes, &c.

Invitations have been issued from this office, which read as follows:

A grand May party, to be given by the Chelsea Cornet Band, in Town Hall, Tuesday evening, May 1, 1883. Yourself and Lady are cordially invited!

The floor managers will be M. McLain,
F. Hindelang, Alonzo Newton.
First-class music in attendance!

In this issue will be found the page "ad"
of J. E. French, the boot and shoe dealer.
Not only has Mr. French a very large line of the above goods, but also keeps, Clothing, Gent's furnishing goods, hats, caps, and choice family groceries. In boots, shoes, and slippers, he handles the best makes in the country, and it will pay you to carefully read what he has to say.

We could tell a story such as are usually read in dime novels, but this is true:—
A mother who had been in the Pontiac insane asylum, died there, and the sons (residents of this place) were notified of her death; but instead of going and getting the body and giving it decent burial, they let it go to the pickling vat of the University. Oh! for shame! that such persons should be left around loose.

In another column will be seen the card
of Joe T. Jacob's, the Ann Arbor Clothier, who after being in business for twenty-nine years, has, on account of failing health, decided to close out his entire stock, and so has opened a branch store in this place.
The store in this place will only be open for a week or so, as the rooms are needed for other purposes, so go and look him over soon.

To our readers, and especially to the ladies, we extend an invitation to come and see us, if you wish to see how the HERALD is printed, on the old reliable hand-press. Come any Wednesday afternoon! We're just over the post-office!

Children burning rubbish, near the barn
of A. Blaess, of Lodi Plains, last Saturday afternoon, set fire to it, burning it to the ground, together with about 1,400 bushels of wheat, 700 bushels of corn, and other produce, and farm implements. Insured in the Washtenaw Mutual, to some extent.

We are in receipt of a pamphlet giving diagrams and descriptions of the Michigan forest fires in 1881, which are very interesting and instructive. By it, we see that in Huron, Sanilac, Tuscola and Lapeer counties, 3,437 buildings were destroyed, valued at $1,983,390, and 125 lives were lost.
Any one wishing to look this little pamphlet over, can have it by calling on us.

A CARD!

TWENTY-NINE YEARS!

I commenced the mercantile life twenty-nine years ago; and feeling that a change is necessary for my health I shall retire from the Retail Clothing business on or about July 1, 1883. In some respects it is with reluctance that I go out of active business; but I have decided, after carefully thinking the matter over, that it is the thing for me to do.

The way I shall proceed is as follows:—
First, to give my friends and patrons, who have stood by me so many years (during my stay in Ann Arbor), a benefit, by making a great reduction on my entire stock, by selling for the next sixty days at retail.

Then I will be ready to receive propositions from any one for balance of stock, store room and good will of concern.

My stock consists of a well assorted line
of Ready-made Clothing, Hats, Caps, Gents' Furnishing Goods, &c.

Terms of sale will be cash on all sums of twenty dollars and under; all amounts over twenty dollars, six months time will be given, on approved notes.

I hope, especially, that my old customers will avail themselves of this opportunity to buy goods cheap!
Sale to commence April 18, 1883.
JOE T. JACOBS, the Clothier,
27 & 29 Main St., Ann Arbor.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Telford started for northern Michigan last Monday, and will be gone for some time.

Samuel J. Guerin is the man who will politely wait on you when you purchase anything of L. D. Loomis.

Miss Clara Paine and sister, of Jackson, returned to Chelsea on Wednesday last,
and will spend some time with their parents.

Elder Northrup spent all of last week with his relatives in Pontiac, leaving on Monday morning, and returning on Saturday evening.

Orrin Thatcher will hereafter receive his HERALD at Linden, Genesee, county, where he will remain this summer in the tile business.

Rev. H. C. Northrup and Rev. T. Holmes exchanged pulpits last Sunday morning.
In the evening, no services were held in the M. E. church.

The genial countenance of County Clerk
Robison, was seen on our streets last Thursday morning. He was on his way to Ann Arbor, having been in Sharon.

Rev. H. C. Northrup will next Sunday exchange pulpits with Rev. W. George, of Dexter. Mr. George will probably deliver a memorial sermon on the late Dr. Crocker with whom he was well acquainted.

On Friday afternoon we had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Edward Rogers, city editor of the Jackson Daily Citizen. Mr. R. came down to witness the play: "Ireland as it is" given by the amateurs of that place.

After spending some time in Dakota,
Mr. Jay Everett returned to this place last week. He don't seem to be "in love" with that western country, and says he wore heavy winter clothing during his sojourn there.

S. Strath, son of James Strath, is now a resident of Ontario—his post-office address being Cayuga. He is with his brother in the mercantile business, but will probably return in time to teach school
this fall and winter.

H. G. Hoag started Monday noon for Fife Lake, with another horse for his son, Dr. J. H. Hoag, as the Doctor's business is so large, that the span of ponies he took with him, can not stand all the driving.
We are pleased to hear of his success!

We received a very pleasant call last Wednesday evening from Mr. Sheldon, the dentist, of Manchester, and Mr. Kirchhoffer, one of the Enterprise typists. The gentlemen attended the meeting of the I. O.
of O. F., of which Mr. Sheldon is N. G.

Home Decorations.

In making home attractive and pleasant here are a few decorations in which even the poorest can indulge, as they come within the means of everybody, and yet, are the same that would ornament the home of the millionaire.

The most important of those decorations is wall papers, which, if selected to meet the requirements of the room, adds more to its attractiveness than several times its cost, invested in any other manner.

And no where can be found a nicer assortment of paper hangings, of every description, than at the Bank Drug Store.
The stock comprises the latest designs of every quality, and offers a splendid opportunity for selection.

A Smashed Nose!

Richard Lynch, Neillsville, Wis., says: "While chopping timber I was struck by a falling limb across the nose, smashing it so badly that two pieces of bone came out. Cole's Carbolic was freely applied to the wound. Had no physician, and though it was but ten days since the accident, I am virtually cured, as there is no soreness, and the wound is nearly healed. I think there will be little if any scar. Cole's Carbolic beats anything I ever saw for a cut or a bruise. Small boxes, 25 cents; large boxes, 75 cents.

Woman's True Friend.

A friend in need is a friend indeed. This none can deny, especially when assistance is rendered when one is sorely afflicted with disease, more particularly those complaints and weaknesses so common to our female population. Every woman should know that Electric Bitters are woman's true friend, and will positively restore her to health, even when all other remedies fail. A single trial always proves our assertion. They are pleasant to the taste, and only cost fifty cents a bottle. Sold by R. B. Armstrong.

His Ma Deceives Him.

Peck's Sun.

"Give me ten cents worth of saffron," said the boy to the grocery man, as he came in the grocery on a gallop, early one morning, with no collar on, and no vest. He looked as though he had been routed of bed in a hurry, and had jumped into his pants and boots, and put on his coat and hat on the run.

"I don't keep saffron," said the grocery man, as he picked up a barrel of saffron, and handed the boy a tipped over in his hurry. "You want to go over to the drug store on the corner, if you want saffron. But what on earth is the matter?"

At this point the boy shot out of the door, tipping over a basket of white beans, and disappeared in the drug store. The grocery man got down on his knees on the sidewalk and scooped up the beans, occasionally looking over his shoulder at the boy, who had come out of the drug store and walked deliberately towards his home, as though there was no particular hurry. The grocery man looked after him, took up an ax-handle, and shouted to the boy to come over pretty soon, as he wanted to talk with him. The boy did not come to the grocery till towards night, but the grocery man had seen him running down town a dozen times during the day, and once he rode up to the house with the doctor, and the doctor surmised what was the trouble. Along towards night the boy came in in a dejected sort of a tired way, sat down on a barrel of sugar, and never spoke.

"What is it, a boy or girl," said the grocery man, winking at an old lady with a shawl over her head, who was trying to hold a paper over a pitcher of yeast with her thumb.

"How in blazes do you know anything about it," said the boy as he looked around in astonishment, and with some indignation. "Well, its a girl, if you must know, and that's enough," said he, looking down at the cat, playing on the floor with a potato, his face a picture of dejection.

"O, don't feel bad about it," said the grocery man, as he opened the door to the old lady. "Such things are bound to occur. But you take my word for it, that young one is going to have a hard life, unless you mend your ways. You will be using it for a cork to a jug, or to wad a gun with, the first thing your ma knows."

"I wouldn't touch the darn thing with the tongue," said the boy, as he rattled enough to eat some crackers and cheese. "Gosh, this cheese tastes good. I ain't had nothing to eat since morning. I have been all over this town trollying for nurses. They think a boy hasn't got any feelings. But I wouldn't care a god darn, if ma hadn't been sending me for neuralgia medicine, and hay fever snuff all winter, when she wanted to get rid of me. I have come in the room lots of times when ma and the sewing girl were at work on some flannel things, and ma would hide them in a basket and send me off after medicine. I was deceived up to about four o'clock this morning, when pa came to my room and pulled me out of bed to go over on the west side after some old woman that knew ma, and they have kept me whooping ever since. What does a boy want of a sister, unless it is a big sister. I don't want no sisters that I have got to hold, and rock, and hold a bottle for. This affair breaks me all up," and the boy picked the cheese out of his teeth with a silver he cut off the counter.

"Well, how does your pa take it," said the grocery man, as he charged the boy's pa with cheese, and saffron, and a number of such things.

"O, pa will pull through. He wanted to boss the whole concern until ma's hum, an old woman that takes snuff, fired him out into the hall. Pa sat there on my hand-sled, a perfect picture of despair, and I thought it would be a kindness to play it on him. I found the cat asleep in the bath-room, and I rolled the cat up in a shawl and brought it out to pa and told him the nurse wanted him to hold the baby. It seemed to do pa good to feel that he was indispensable around the house, and he took the cat on his lap as tenderly as you ever saw a mother hold an infant. Well, I got in the back hall, where he wouldn't see me, and pretty soon the cat began to wake up and stretch himself, and pa said, 's-h-h-tootsy, go to sleep now, and let us pa hold it, and he rocked back and forth on the hand sled and began to sing 'by, low, baby that settled it with the cat. Well, some cats can't stand music, anyway, and the cat wanted to get out of the hall, and the louder pa sung, and bimby heard something rip, and pa yelled, 'you brute, and when I looked round the corner of the hall the cat was bracing himself against pa's vest with his toe nails, and yowing, and pa fell over the sled and began to talk about the hereafter like the minister does when he gets excited in church, and then pa picked up the sled and seemed to be looking for me or the cat, and both of us was awful scarce. Don't you think there are times when both boys and cats are kind of few around the house? Pa don't look any the way he was very smart, but he can hold a cat about as well as the next man. But I am sorry for ma. She was sent ready to go to Florida for her neuralgia, and this will put a stop to it, and she has to stay and take care of the young one. Pa says I will have a nice time this summer pushing the baby wagon. By the great horn spoons, there has got to be a dividing line somewhere, between business and pleasure, and I strike the line at wheeling a baby. I had rather catch a string of perch than to wheel all the babies ever was. They needn't procure no baby on my account, if it is to amuse me. I don't see why babies can't be sawed off onto people that need them in their business. Our folks don't need a baby any more than you need a safe, and there are people just suffering for babies. Say, how would it be to take the baby some night and leave it on some old bachelor's door step. If it had been a bicycle, or a breech loading shotgun, I wouldn't have cared, but a baby! Bah! It makes me tired. I'd druther have a prize package. Well, I am sorry pa allowed me to come home, after he drove me away last week. I guess all he wanted me to come back for was to humiliate me, and send me on errands. Well, I must go and see if he and the cat have made up."

And the boy went out and put up a paper sign in front of his store, "Leave your measure for saffron tea."

Regal Trappings.

New York Sun.

The magnificent mantle which the Czarina will wear at the coming coronation is made of cloth of gold, bordered with armorial bearings embroidered in silk and gems. The crown placed on her head will be the one used at the coronation of the Empress Catherine II. and Elizabeth. Its value is estimated at three millions of roubles, and it is composed of diamonds, rubies, and a large number of pearls. In her sceptre will blaze the great Orloff diamond, which is said to weigh eight carats more than the Koh-i-noor. The procession will consist of thirty-three carriages. That of the Czarina was made at Berlin by the orders of Frederick the Great, and presented by him to the Empress Elizabeth. It is a kind of double throne without springs, but hung on four bands of red velvet. A single window, framed in white satin, forms the front, and the imperial eagles and the crown set in brilliant adorn the panels. It will be drawn by eight white horses, caparisoned with red velvet, and flashing with gold and precious stones.

At a Disadvantage.

Texas Sittings.

A man named Rankin Peagrim was tried in the Austin District Court for murder last week. His plea was self-defense. When the case was called for trial the Judge asked the prisoner's counsel: "Are you ready for the defense?" Up spoke the prisoner "Judge, how can we be ready for defense when the sheriff took both my means of defense away from me. The one that I self-defended the man with has an ivory handle, and if I had it now I'd be ready for trial, you bet." The prisoner's lawyer had great difficulty in calming down his client. The case is watched with considerable interest.

It is estimated that there are 4,600,000 sheep in Texas. The number will probably be increased during the coming season to 3,300,000.

A tourist leaning out of a nook, Fell on his head near a brook, The hurt he received, St. Jacobs Oil relieved, And he says it cured "like a book."

Hope is nothing more than a desire with a telescope, magnifying distant matters, overlooking near ones.

A life saved for thirty-five cents! A lady in Boston had Diphtheria and was almost dead from strangulation, but was instantly relieved and finally cured by Johnson's Anodyne Liniment. Every family should have a bottle ready for instant use.

No evil propensity of the human heart is so powerful that it may not be subdued by discipline.

Profitable investment. One dollar's worth of Sheridan's Cavalry Condition Powders fed to a coop of thirty hens will yield a profit of three dollars, besides preventing all manner of diseases. Be sure to get Sheridan's. The large packs are worthless.

The Kind We Like.

The medicine we most like is that which does its work quick and well. Burdock Blood Bitters are the quickest kind of a cure for dyspepsia and liver and kidney affections.

No degree of knowledge attainable by man is able to set him above the want of hourly assistance.

What Three Applications Did.

"I was troubled very much with sore feet. Three applications of Thomas' Electric Oil entirely cured them. Nothing better in the market." Jacob Butler, Reading, Pa.

Falling into bad company is like falling into a river—no danger of either if you avoid the shore.

Twenty-four Hours to Live.

From John Kuhn Lafayette, Ind., who announces that he is now in "perfect health," we have the following: "One year ago I was, to all appearance, in the last stages of Consumption. Our best physicians gave me up. I finally got so low that our doctor said I could not live twenty-four hours. My friends then purchased a bottle of Dr. Wm. Hall's BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS, which considerably benefited me. I continued until I took nine bottles. I am now in perfect health, having used no other medicine."

Detectives and Private Officers

Usually wear their badges of authority concealed under their clothing, but Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil wears its badge in the form of printed labels attached to each and every bottle, so that all may know its mission. It is given full and complete authority to arrest all aches and pains, and does its duty every time.

People who are habitually in a hurry have to do things twice over. The tortoise beats the hare at last.

The North American Indians knew more in their day and generation than the children of light. They first used petroleum as a Hair Dressing. Carboline is made from petroleum deprived of its disagreeable properties and delightfully perfumed.

A lady who has resided within four miles of the city for 45 years, who had never seen a train of cars, and had not been in this city for 20 years, although enjoying good health, had occasion recently to go to Ann Arbor for several days in succession. So great was her aversion to railroad travel that for three or four days she had a back back and forth; but finally rode on the cars. The lady is cultured and intelligent, and there is no assignable cause for the curious circumstance, save the fact of her disinclination to "gad."—[Ypsilantian.]

[Courier].—An interesting little incident connected with the life and burial of the late Dr. Cocker, was related at his funeral: "One night while an attendant was watching him the Doctor told the story of a shawl which he loved to have about him. He had made it himself when a boy in England; he had carried it with him to Australia, to Tahiti and to Fiji; it had been around him when he broke through the ranks of the Cannibals and escaped in a boat; to Peru, to Panama, to Chicago it had gone with its owner, and when he arrived in Adrian, penniless and friendless, it was wrapped about the body of the dead boy in his arms. On his subsequent trips to 'Old England' the Doctor had always taken it, and before he died he asked that it might be buried with him. So before burial it was wrapped around the beloved form it had so long protected."

Drive Wells!

In drinking drive well water, you are sure of drinking something that is pure. We can prove this by men who have been around the world. Some may think I can't, but I dare say, I could prove this by U. S. Grant.

No snakes, worms, rats or mice, can get into the water, as it passes through a fine screen. Rats, dogs and cats run into open wells, and cannot get out. Some who have open wells do not know this, but when you go into your well, you will find it so.

The drive well is free from all things that crawl or run, as it is as tight as a drum. Some men hate to leave their open wells, but good water is as necessary as the air we breathe.

Drive wells are durable, always have plenty of water, for you can not pump one dry in a year. Drive wells are the very best, pump with ease, all you want on them is a Star windmill. The Prudden boys are always flying around, and make quite a noise, and if you want a drive well, just call on them. E. S. PRUDDEN.

HOW WATCHES ARE MADE

In a SOLID GOLD WATCH, aside from the necessary thickness for engraving and polishing, a large proportion of metal is needed only to stiffen and hold the engraved portions in place, and supply strength. The surplus gold is actually needless. In James Boss' Patent Gold Watch Cases this WASTE is saved, and SOLIDITY and STRENGTH increased by a simple process, at one-half the cost. A plate of SOLID GOLD is soldered on each side of a plate of hard nickel composition metal, and the three are then passed between polished steel rollers. From this the cases, backs, centers, bezels, etc., are cut and shaped by dies and formers. The gold is thick enough to admit of all kinds of chasing, engraving and engine turning. These cases have been worn perfectly smooth by use without removing the gold. This is the only case made under this process. Each case is accompanied with a valid guarantee signed by the manufacturers warranting it to wear 20 years. 150,000 of these Cases now carried in the United States and Canada. Largest and Oldest Factory. Established 1854. Ask your Jeweler.

MICHIGAN NEWS.

The large barn of Hugh Keyes, living in Keeler township, Van Buren county, was burned, together with 3,000 bushels of wheat. Six horses were rescued. Loss $4,500. Insured for $1,900 in the Continental of New York. The fire is supposed to have been the work of a tramp whom Mr. Keyes had turned away. Officers have a clue to his whereabouts and will probably secure his arrest.

Mrs. Ann Hill, for the past 12 years post-mistress at Milburgh, Berrien county and a resident of that county for 45 years, died recently aged 74.

Some Decatur emigrants to Dakota report they were blockaded at Dodge City two days with 1,350 cars containing emigrants and their plunder ahead of them; were two weeks on the way.

The total number of immigrants inspected at Port Huron during March was 3,747. Of this number 670 were under protection by previous vaccination, 141 by previous small-pox, and 34 by recent vaccination on board the steamers during passage. The whole number found unprotected and vaccinated during the month was 1,301. Of these 80 were adults and 55 under five years of age. They came almost entirely from lower Canada and the maritime provinces.

Francis Vorhies, one of the oldest and most prominent merchants of Adrian, died suddenly of heart disease, while seated at the dinner table.

Allen Potter, only son of Hon. Allen Potter of Kalamazoo, died suddenly at the Inter-Ocean hotel, Cheyenne, Wyo. He was on his way to establish a cattle ranch in that section.

Prof. O. J. Van Wier, principal of the Union school at Reese, died suddenly a few days since. He was a popular teacher, and his death casts a gloom over the entire community.

Gov. Begole has issued a pardon for Robert Garbutt, who was convicted of murder in the recorder's court at Detroit, August 2, 1882, and sentenced for life for the killing of an old man named Amable La Plant. He was in jail at Detroit one year before sent to Jackson.

Several days ago John Ferris, of Forest, Sanilac county, was exercising a colt when it jerked so violently as to tear off one of his fingers and pull 12 inches of muscle out of his arm.

Manistee will expend some $30,000 for general sewer and highway purposes, and special taxes will be assessed to adjoining property, so in all probability $40,000 will be expended this season for said purposes.

Gov. Begole and Secretary of State Conant have so far signed nearly ten thousand commissions for notaries public. During the session of the Legislature the Governor and the Secretary of State are obliged to take up much time in this sort of work. It becomes very irksome after the first few thousand trials, and the gentlemen are now discovering that the rose of authority has some dreadful thorns in the way of affixing their signs manual.

A close observation of the wheat in Livingston, Ingham, Ionia, Montcalm, Lake and Mason counties indicates that there will be a fair crop. The recent warm weather with refreshing and, in many places, copious showers, has developed the plant very rapidly and dispelled the fear which existed a few days ago, that much of it as winter-killed. The tops were certainly killed, but the roots were alive, and were now rapidly putting forth the green blades. In Montcalm, Lake and Mason counties, where the snow remained on until about ten days ago, the wheat is looking very fine, not being killed or injured in the least.

Peter Sharp has been postmaster of Ridge-way, Lenawee county, 30 years. When the office was first started about one letter a week comprised his mail.

It is soberly stated in the St. Ignace Free Press that there is on Mackinac island an old boy, aged 96, who is courting a young girl of 80, and that they are soon to enter the giddy state of matrimony. The minister should swear them as to their age and maturity of judgment.

The signal service has just published in pamphlet form the official report, prepared by one of its officers, of the extent of the losses by the disastrous forest fires in Michigan in 1881. The footing up shows the following figures: Value of the property destroyed, $2,003,390; number of buildings destroyed, 3,437; number of lives lost, 125.

Frank Wellet's team became frightened at the cars near Monroe and ran away, throwing him out and breaking both of his legs, besides otherwise injuring him.

John Torrent is engaged in the organization of a new national bank at Muskegon, which is to have $150,000 capital and be called the Third National Bank.

Brooklyn will be omitted from star service route from Tecumseh, after April 20, the route to end at Caml ridge. Postmaster commissioned April 14: Cornelius H. Forman, Forman. Special service is discontinued at Kearney from April 1; office discontinued.

A dispatch from the Keel Ridge mine, Menominee county, which came in last week, burying several men at work above ground in and about the engine house, says no bodies have yet been discovered. Some of the machinery is, however, being reached, and the bodies will soon be exposed. Electric lights and pumps have been placed in position to facilitate the search by night and in case water is met with.

Arrangements are being made for the removal of the Orchard Lake Military Academy to St. Clair.

James A. English's bank, East Saginaw was mysteriously robbed of $200. An hour before the discovery of the loss, the clerk was called out by a young man in a buggy, and it is supposed that meantime an accomplice slipped in and took the money. The young man in the street had hired the horse and buggy at one of the livery stables for a ride around town, and at night they were found hitched in the street.

The governor has issued another pardon. This time it is to Eugene Hilliard, who was convicted of assault with intent to kill and murder one Mrs. W. H. Hilliard, in Allegan county. He was convicted in October, 1882, and sentenced for three years. His plea is that he has a land claim in Dakota which will be forfeited if he does not get to it.

Miss Minnie Matthews, a very estimable young lady living three miles southeast of Imlay City, died suddenly after a sickness of only an hour. She was intended to be married at Grant, St. Clair county, and start for Dakota, but received a letter the day she was to be married, and after reading it stated she would be obliged to visit the village, where she made a number of purchases, and at the drug store bought a bottle of strychnine, stating it was for another person. During the night she called her mother and said she was dying, but made no explanation. Search was made, but no trace of poison or of the letter received could be found. The symptoms at her death pointed unmistakably to strychnine poisoning.

The case of Joseph Morgan vs. Jeremiah Deihl, on trial in the circuit court at Charlotte, resulted in a verdict for the plaintiff for six cents damages. The action was brought by a father-in-law against his son-in-law for enticing away and harboring the defendant's mother-in-law, a helpless old woman and opium eater. It is the only case of the kind ever tried in Eaton county, if not in the courts of Michigan, and has attracted peculiar interest.

Timothy Hall, a pioneer of Spring Lake, is dead.

There is not a distillery in Michigan.

McCullen, the tramp who was recently arrested at Newport, Monroe county, for breaking into township clerk Crooks' house, pleaded not guilty to the justice on examination, but changed his plea to guilty when brought before Judge Joslin, of the circuit court, and was sentenced to furla for three years.

It is said that the largest fleece ever recorded in the United States at a public shearing was taken at Lansing, at the meeting of the Michigan merino sheep breeders' association. It was from a two-year-old ram, "Diamond," owned by A. T. Short, Coldwater, was grown in 363 days and weighed 41 pounds and three ounces.

Bishop Gillespie writes about the boys in the reform school at Lansing: "What is to become of them when they leave the reform school? They should not, as a general rule, be kept there until they reach eighteen years. There are many disadvantages in institutional life. There is not much discipline of character, certainly not much testing of reform. The superintendent-to-day holds a large number of boys whom he would not hesitate to dismiss if he could see the safe place for them. To demand, as is sometimes heard even in the legislature, that the boys shall be sent out, is to make the more certain an increased number of reform school boys ultimately in Jackson or Ionia, or some more distant prison. Less disposition to put into the school would be more helpful than the clamor to send out."

Last March Henry M. O'Dell, a youth of Detroit, ran away from home and enlisted in the regular army. He was sent to Jefferson Barracks, Mo. Not finding army life so agreeable as he supposed it would be, he retired voluntarily and returned to Detroit. He was then arrested on a charge of desertion and a court-martial has been ordered for his trial at Ft. Wayne. His mother, who is the widow of a Union soldier, has been distressed by her son's troubles. Young O'Dell enlisted under the name of Chas. H. Sheldon. He is only 19 years old and is not supposed to be entirely sound in mind. The facts in the case were laid before the Secretary of War by a Michigan senator, and the secretary has ordered the boy discharged.

The main factory building of the Grand Rapids furniture company was burned the other evening. Loss $40,000, insured for $30,000.

The copper product of the Lake Superior mines for the first three months of this year was 6,946 tons 330 pounds, against 6,919 tons 1,779 pounds last year. Calumet & Hecla produced 5,070 tons 1,830 pounds of the former amount, which is about 17 1/2 tons less than its product for the first quarter of 1882.

The work of recovering the bodies in the Keel Ridge mine at Iron Mountain has been abandoned, workmen refusing to endanger their lives.

There is still unsettled among the caustics the question whether House bill 130, amending the general village incorporation act by permitting the village authorities to license or prohibit the traffic in liquors, vesting them with the option of deciding the matter, is a law. The bill was signed by the governor, but it was turned to the House before the seal had been affixed, and now will be argued a question of great importance—whether the executive's signature or the seal affixed by the secretary of state makes a bill a law.

Mrs. Mary E. Jones of Paw Paw starts from that city May 1 at one o'clock, for San Francisco, Cal., on foot.

A few weeks ago H. Cliff, hardware dealer, found poisoned potatoes in his horse's manger. He secured the service of a detective from Chicago, who captured a young man named Tomas Webster in the act. Webster is evidently the tool of some other party who held a grudge against Mr. Cliff.

William Collins was playing base ball at Big Rapids and while running bases during the game was struck on the back of the neck by the ball, causing concussion of the brain. He was removed to the hospital, where he died in a few hours. Collins was 21 years of age and was there in search of employment. His parents reside at Sheridan, Wisconsin.

Legislative Record.

SENATE, April 17.—Little business was done in the Senate. The resolution providing for the final adjournment of the legislature on May 16th was adopted. Several petitions were presented and discussed against the passage of the Bolger bill to prevent the reception of United States prisoners at the Detroit house of correction. The bill appropriating $131,150 for new buildings, etc., for the Michigan school for the blind, was passed.

HOUSE.—The petitions presented were the usual ones. The following bills were passed: Amending section 3134, 3136 and 3138, C. L., relative to incorporation of schools of learning; amending act 200 of 1881 relative to booming companies; amending act relative to suffering by the great fire of 1881; asking congress to build lighthouses on Lake Michigan; in reference to school inspectors of Crystal Falls, Marquette county; to prevent fishing near fish shutes or ladders; to prevent destruction of fish in Eagle and Pleasant lakes, Cass county; amending act for incorporation of Holland Christian Reformed churches; to provide for a release of real estate from liens created by state levies of writs of attachment or execution. The following bills were referred back to the committee of the whole or to committees as noted, pending their final passage: Amending act 164 of 1881 relative to contracts with teachers; for an appropriation of lands to improve the Clio and Chesaning state road in Genesee county; amending secs. 3780, 3790 and 3791 relative to teachers' institutes. Education; repealing section 207 C. L. relative to propagation of whitefish; relative to payment of salaries to auditors of Wayne county. The following were lost on final passage: Making a grant of lands to construct a state road in Missaukee and Crawford; appropriating $1,500 to maintain the fire and police departments of Lansing; both bills were reconsidered and laid on the table. The bill relating to the sale of liquors was laid on the table, pending its final passage.

SENATE, April 18.—The following are the bills passed by the Senate to-day: Incorporating Emmet, St. Clair county; amending section 7 of act regulating incorporation of villages; fixing the per diem of members of the legislature from the upper peninsula; for the incorporation of co-operative and mutual benefit associations; amending sec. 9, art. 2 of the general railroad law; amending charter of Allegan; appropriating $81,650 for the state public school at Coldwater; amending sec. 3, chap. 7, of highway act of 1881; relative to change of route of Mackinaw and Little Traverse state roads; for the assessment of delinquent taxes on "part paid lands"; to punish persons guilty of assault with intent to do great bodily harm; amending sec. 4907, C. L. relative to the same; amending sec. 5179, relative to courts of chancery; amending act relative to Detroit water works; amending act of 1881, relative to re-election of jurors to lay out highways; incorporating Montague; incorporating Caro; amending sec. 5059, C. L. relative to courts of chancery; to prevent fast driving over bridges; relative to justice's courts in Detroit; for a patent to McLain and Hedger; appropriating $40,000 for the state reform school; appropriating $40,000 for cottages at the reform school.

HOUSE.—A good many bills were passed by the House, the following being the most important: To amend act incorporating Plainville in Allegan county; to provide for incorporation of associations to sustain churches, religious societies and Sabbath schools; to change name of First Presbyterian society of Ypsilanti to First Presbyterian society; to appropriate $1,235 for support of insane soldiers at Michigan asylum in 1881; to allow mutual life insurance companies of other states to do business in Michigan; to amend sec. 503 C. SENATE, April 19.—Bills were passed as follows: To transfer to the general fund the unexpended balance of $71,100 in the fire sufferers' fund; to provide for the maintenance and construction of stone or macadamized roads in Bay county; for the construction of sidewalks along highways in townships and villages; to appropriate the remainder of the state improvement lands due from the United States to Michigan, for improvement of a certain state road in Leelanaw county; to authorize life insurance companies to deposit with the state treasurer personal obligations secured by mortgage in place of securities they required; to amend act to incorporate Caro village in Tuscola county; to provide penalty for obtaining money, railroad tickets or transportation by false pretenses. The Governor announced by message his approval of the bills to amend act re-incorporating Saline; to amend act relative to Wesleyan Seminary at Albion; to amend act establishing Detroit Board of Public Works; to appropriate money for books for State Library; to amend act relative to duties and compensation of prosecuting attorneys. The bill to give Wayne Circuit Court Commissioners stated salaries instead of fees, and to authorize appointment of an additional commissioner, was tabled pending its third reading.

HOUSE.—The following passed on third reading: To amend act of April 3, 1869, relative to fire and marine insurance companies. This is the "Blackler" bill to permit mutual insurance companies of other states to take risks in Michigan; to regulate the manner in which insurance companies not organized under the laws of this state, but doing business in it, shall transact their business. This is the celebrated "Fletcher Non-Board bill"; to secure to the power of stockholders in corporations the power of electing a representative membership in boards of directors, otherwise known as the "Barnard bill"; for relief of Grand Traverse County Agricultural Society. The Governor communicated his approval of the act to repeal the law for the incorporation of saving associations; act re-incorporating Portland; appropriating money for the School for the Blind; punishing the offense of getting on railroad trains while in motion.

SENATE, April 20.—The following passed on third reading, unless otherwise noted. Proposing an amendment to section 15, article 4 of the Constitution, relative to compensation of members of the Legislature and to prohibit the use of passes or free tickets on railroads. Lost, yeas 19, nays 12—not two-thirds. Reconsidered and tabled; extending the time of the completion of the Marquette, Houghton & Ontonagon Railroad. Pending its passage it was referred back to the Committees on Railroads and Judiciary jointly; authorizing the Mutual Covenant Benefit Associations of Michigan and Illinois to consolidate. Passed; requiring instruction in the effects of alcohol to be taught in public schools; amending act 194 of 1877, relative to insane asylums; fixing the salary of the Auditor-General at $2,000; amending the act incorporating Holland Christian Churches; making an appropriation for overdrafts from Ionia House of Correction, yeas 27, nays 9; incorporating Hesperia; to prevent the destruction of fish in Barron Lake; to prevent fishing near fish-ladders; re-incorporating Cornua. The bill to provide for making partition among tenants in common; and House bill No. 206, to define the duties of Justices of the Peace, were adversely reported upon and the two bills were laid upon the table.

HOUSE.—To legalize sewer tax levy in Alma Village, Gratiot Co., for 1882; for the relief of Edward Blanchard, of Jackson, authorizing the examination of a claim for $100; to provide for taking private property for public use, and opening streets and alleys by the City of Detroit; to authorize cities and villages to take private property for the use and benefit of the public, and to repeal act 26 of 1882; to amend section 13 of the act authorizing the formation of corporations for improving the navigation of rivers approved April 5, 1869. The bill relative to the powers and duties of incorporated villages was returned, and tabled for further consideration.

SENATE, April 21.—Petitions were presented for the submission of a prohibitory constitutional amendment from 8,908 women of Michigan. Also a memorial in favor of prohibitory legislation from the Executive Committee of the General Association of the Congregational Churches of Michigan. Also petitions favorable to the Barnard, Blacker and Fletcher bills, relative to minority representation and insurance. Senator Austin inquired—and, that it might be recorded in the Journal, desired the Secretary to inform the Senate—if House bill No. 103 (local option bill) had received the signature and official approval of the Governor, and if so the date of said approval. In answer, the Secretary stated that the said bill bears the indorsement: "Approved April 20, 1883. Joseph W. Begole." The bill was then returned to the House. Action was had on bills as follows: To add a new section (5) to chapter 10 of act 164 of 1881, relative to public schools, passed; to incorporate the city of Autauga, indefinitely postponed; to amend chapter 53 of the compiled laws relative to disorderly persons, passed; to amend section 503 compiled laws, relative to Wayne County Auditors, laid on the table; for holding two terms of the Ingham Circuit Court at Lansing annually, laid on the table; to require fire escapes on hotels, etc. Lost, yeas 16, nays 7. The veto was reconsidered and the bill recommitted to the Committee on State Affairs.

HOUSE.—Petitions were received from the committee of the General Assembly of the Congregational churches of Michigan requesting the enactment of a law to secure the total prohibition of the liquor traffic; for an amendment of the game law so as to prohibit the killing of prairie chickens in Livingston County during the years 1883, 1884 and 1885. The governor noted his approval of the following acts: To detach certain territory from Bay County and to organize the new County of Arenac; also, amending section 22, of the General Mining law. Representative Darragh protested against the publication in the Journal of the message of Gov. Begole returning to the House, as requested, House bill No. 103, (the local option bill) alleging that in the original message is contained the information that the governor had approved the bill and the message substituted contained no such announcement. Representative Van Loo also signed the protest.

The State Board of Health Report.

The annual report of the Michigan state board of health for 1882 just issued is a timely book. As this department extends its work and year by year comes in contact with more people in every part of the state, the results of its labor assume a more tangible form, and admit of more definite report. The success of its work depends very largely on the co-operation of the people, and as the people see more of the work their co-operation is more readily secured. This is especially true in communities where sanitary conventions have been held, and in those where outbreaks of contagious diseases have been put down by the local health officers acting under instructions from the state board of health; though the more prompt and successful the suppression of the disease the less do the people know often of the danger to which they were exposed and from which they have been saved. The report contains with many others most of the papers read at the conventions at Ann Arbor and Greenville. There is not room to name them all. Under the title, "What can the law do for the health of the people?" Judge Cooley, of the supreme court vindicates the right and shows the necessity that the state should enforce regulations to protect the public health, even though they encroach on individual liberty. He also points out dangers of an abuse of powers granted to the health authorities, and shows how that abuse may be prevented by appeal to the courts and to an enlightened public sentiment. Judge Cooley thinks, however, that there is not so great danger that local boards of health will abuse their powers as that they will fail to use them.

Dr. W. F. Breakey discusses "Unsanitary methods and results of school-work" coming under his observation and as reported to him, in reply to a circular of inquiry on that subject, by about forty-four physicians and thirty-four superintendents of schools in Michigan. Dr. B. concludes in favor of giving the best teachers to the youngest pupils, of requiring teachers to pass examinations in physiology and hygiene, of treating pupils as individuals having different capacities, temperaments, tastes, and physical strength; in favor of short sessions, frequent recesses, less work, more elastic courses of study, better ventilation, heating, and lighting, and less climbing of stairs.

Food Adulteration.

In a paper on "Food Adulteration," Prof. A. B. Prescott brushes away a current sophism that as many adulterations of food are harmless tricks of trade, health officers need not meddle with them. He shows that the English law against adulterations has been much more effective since it ceased to excuse adulterations on the ground of harmlessness, and urges that to permit even harmless adulterations, by taking away from consumers the right or power of choosing their food, breaks down one of the great safeguards of health. "The wrong may be done in the spirit of gain, rather than that of murder, but none the less it becomes a robbery of the very means of life."

The subject of ventilation is not overlooked. Prof. J. W. Langley presents results of examinations of air on hilltop and by sea shore, in city and country, in streets, parks, back yards, stables, cellars, schoolrooms, theatres, work-houses, etc., and gives carefully noted details of the effects on different persons of intentional exposure to contaminated air, showing that the senses are not a sufficient guide as to the purity and wholesomeness of air, and that pure air can be had only by a constant or frequent change of the air of a room.

The subject of preventing diphtheria and scarlet fever receives fresh treatment at the pen of Dr. A. Hazlewood, who also contributes a report on poisons and explosives, showing danger of poisoning by certain nursing bottles and containing important rules for management of steam boilers.

Nothing perhaps shows the various ways in which contagious diseases introduced into communities, and present condition of the public health service of Michigan, its capacity hand-to-hand work in the prevention and suppression of diseases, better than the special reports by local health officers of outbreaks of diphtheria, scarlet fever, small-pox, and other contagious diseases, and the very concise summaries of these reports given in connection therewith. These reports together with the reports of the immigrant inspection service at Port Huron and Detroit, show how great is the work which local boards of health have in hand, and how necessary it is that they be aided by all intelligent citizens.

The End of Creation.

It is related that the Emperor William of Germany, was once detained at a small village, while making a journey and visited the public school. He was asked by the teacher to examine the children, the Emperor took a gold coin from his pocket, and holding it up said, "To what kingdom of nature does this belong?" "To the mineral kingdom," was the prompt reply. Holding up a flower, "to what kingdom does this belong?" he continued. "To the vegetable kingdom," was answered by all. "No, to what kingdom do I belong?" said the Emperor. All hesitated, when a little girl not wishing to say that her Emperor belonged to the animal kingdom, replied "to God's kingdom, sir." The Emperor was visibly moved and said, "God grant that I may be found worthy of His kingdom."

The answer of the little girl was more profound than she knew. Man has many things in his nature in common with the members of the animal kingdom. But still he is not an animal; and it is a false classification to say that man belongs to the animal kingdom, that he is the head of the animal kingdom. In addition to the three kingdoms of nature, mineral, vegetable and animal, there is a kingdom that is spiritual and eternal, the kingdom of God. This kingdom man belongs to. This is the kingdom God had in view in the creation of the universe. As God is eternal, He must have had an eternal end or design in creating all things, both visible and invisible, natural and spiritual. The end or design, we see fulfilled in man who lives forever, and who has been made capable of unending growth in knowledge, intelligence, happiness and usefulness. For man is capable of loving God, believing in God, and obeying God, and thereby becoming immortal in affection and thought, conjoining to God, and to be conjoined to God to live forever. A kingdom of intelligent and happy human beings to continue forever, and to be constantly enlarged and perfected by additional members, and by the continual improvement of those already members, is a view of creation in its final purpose, worthy of the Divine love, wisdom and power. God's kingdom in this world is called the church, and His kingdom in the spiritual world is called heaven. Hence a heaven from the human race, may be said to be the end of creation. Man born in the natural world, where he lives a few short years, and then, in the process of death, passes into the spiritual world, the eternal home of all, and where the good will enjoy everlasting happiness.

King Humbert of Italy—who, by the way, has just been celebrating the completion of the thirty-ninth year of his life and the fifth of his reign—leads in private a plain, simple life, and is fond of occupation and of home. He rises early, spends a little time in study, and then takes exercise in the garden. From eight to nine he receives the Minister of the Royal Household, and from nine to eleven the other ministers. At eleven he and the Queen take breakfast together with the Prince of Naples seated between them. From one to three they receive visitors and then drive out. Their dinner hour is seven o'clock, and they usually retire soon after ten. Some times the Queen attends operas or the theatre, but the King is almost never seen at such places.

Rashness generally ends in folly and shame; young men are exhorted in Scripture to be sober-minded.

Adversity is the trial of principle. Without it a man hardly knows whether he is honest or not.

If a man finds seventeen inches of tarred rope in one plug of tobacco, how many inches will he find in twenty-two plugs?

Prayer is so mighty an instrument that no one ever thoroughly mastered all its keys. They sweep along the infinite scale of man's wants and of God's goodness.—Hugh Miller.

The deadly mountain fever is said by physicians in the Rocky Mountain mining regions to be caused by extreme nervous exhaustion. The Sunday work in the mines is the chief cause of it. Did any secular work on Sunday ever pay?

Let this be thy purpose, O friend! to observe the law of right and to do it. Then the sunshine of the storm, the night and the day, the heat and the cold of life's discipline will foster and mature the grain for garners in the sky.—N. A. Staples.

A clerk in an eminently respectable house was instructed to prepare an advertisement and have it inserted in the newspapers. He prepared one which read: "The pot scooped! We hold four aces to the bob-tailed flush of any other house in town on fine table-cloths."

Charles Lamb represented the ordinary church-goer. "You don't seem to be any better," complained his friend. "No," was the beautiful and charitable reply, "but the man who sat next to me must be, because it all went in at one ear and out at the other."

Infinite toil would not enable you to sweep away a mist, but by ascending a little you may often look over it altogether. So it is with our moral improvement; we wrestle fiercely with a vicious habit, which could have no hold upon us if we ascended to a higher atmosphere.

When thou prayest, rather let thy heart be without words, than thy words without heart. Prayer will make a man cease from sin, or sin will induce a man to cease from prayer. The spirit of prayer is more precious than treasures of gold and silver. Pray often, for prayer is a shield to the soul, a sacrifice to God, and a scourge to Satan.—[John Bunyan.

A SCHOOLBOY spelled d-e-c-i-m-a-l and pronounced it dismal. "What do you mean by calling that dismal?" exclaimed the teacher. "Cause it is," answered the boy. "It's dismal fractions. All functions are dismal. There isn't a bit of fun in any of 'em."

A LITTLE boy was walking with his mamma, and there fell from above his head an avalanche of soot blown by the wind from a neighboring chimney. "Hello!" cried he, quite astonished, "some nigger snow!"

SAID a crafty husband to his business partner, "I have promised my wife an immense surprise for her birthday." "More extravagance?" "I shall give her nothing, it will be an immense surprise."

"WHEN you order a new covering for your parasol, of a particular color, you should always give the shade, my dear," said a lady to her daughter, who exclaimed, "Give the shade, mamma! Why, the parasol will do that!"

THERE is no indignation more terrible than that of an elderly man in a horse-car offered a seat by a sympathizing lady, when he snorts, "Kup your seat, mom; they hain't a stronger man in this car'n me!"

SIX medical experts examined a man as to his sanity and were evenly divided. After they had wrangled about it for a week it was discovered that they had examined the wrong person altogether.

Virtues of Housekeeping.

As it is the fate of most women of to day to have charge of a house, is it not proper that she should understand the duties entailed by her position?

Housekeeping should soften the character, and while attending to the wants of others, we should learn patience and charity. "That charity that thinketh no evil." I am not one of those that think because a woman has a husband that is inclined to be a little disagreeable, she should constitute herself his meek and humble servant. Yet we all know that there is work to be done that can only be done by a woman, but there is no necessity for fretting about it. How many faces once lovely, how many admirable dispositions become entirely transformed from constant repinings at what cannot be helped.

Domestic avocations, if properly engaged in, will not injure the deer. Such a life affords opportunities for excellent discipline, and every woman should make it the aim and purpose of her life to attain perfection of her home. A day for mending, a day for washing, another for ironing, for sewing, and so on, and at once the work becomes simplified and less of a hardship. "Oh, dear, to-morrow is wash-day! How I hate it!" This is a common saying, and there is nothing very wrong about it, for no one will assert that washing is an agreeable pastime. Yet it must be done, so it is worse than useless to fret about it; as a consequence every sensible woman should determine to look on the bright side of the wash-tub and soap suds. Make a few good rules and keep them. Determine not to put the whole house in disorder and make every one else miserable, because the clothes must be washed, the bread baked, etc.

Suppose dinner is to be served at a certain hour, and dear husband forgets all about it and arrives in the best of humor when every thing is cold. Don't cry and scold but make the best of it. As he is in a lively mood, cold meat and sauce will not in the least cool his ardor, and he will find as much enjoyment in the meat as though it were nice and warm. It is also most probable that the stimulating effects of the homeward journey are all sufficient without any addition from a woman's tongue. We all know women who are constantly finding fault with something or other, and who are never happy unless there is something to scold about. But every such little worry, every harsh word, every disagreeable look, makes life harder, and but deepens the lines of trouble about the eyes and mouth. There are plenty of real troubles to be met with, without allowing household cares to become a source of torment.

A well ordered home and a happy one is one of the blessings of earth, and it is a blessing easily obtained. A well-ordered house does not necessarily imply a place where chairs and tables are never dusty, the floors never soiled, a place, in fact, where a man can never walk without doing some damage. Such a daintily arranged home means a place too awfully nice for common mortals. Dust and dirt are necessary evils of our existence, and as such must be endured. It is truly enough to provoke a saint to see a man in the most indifferent manner in the world step across a floor that has just been scoured. This is not done out of meanness, it is merely thoughtlessness, so kindly remind him of his ailing, and, in time, you will reap the benefit of gentle admonitions. Darshness will never have the least effect upon him, and if by kindness you cannot make him understand that the neatness of home is due to hard labor on your part, he is indeed, "way beyond redemption."

GLAZIER, DePUY & CO.

A PAPER FOR THE TIMES.

The CHICAGO DAILY NEWS is the pioneer of cheap journalism in the West. It was founded Dec. 20, 1875, as an evening paper with editions at noon, 8 and 5 o'clock. A complete newspaper,—complete in the one essential feature of American journalism, i. e., presenting all the news,—sold on the street at any price less than the conventional nickel, was an innovation in western journalism, and, like all new enterprises, the "cheap paper" had to contend with long-established custom and even prejudice before securing the recognition it sought and deserved. At the end of the first year, 1876, it had achieved a daily sale ranging from 8,000 to 10,000 copies. From this time forward its progress was beyond all precedent in American journalism. In 1877 its average daily circulation was 22,037 copies; in 1878, 33,314 copies; in 1879, 43,194 copies; in 1880, 54,801 copies. On the morning of March 21, 1881, the CHICAGO MORNING NEWS made its first appearance. In September following, the sixth month of its publication, its circulation amounted to 490,019 copies, or a daily average of 18,844 copies,—a circulation never before attained by any daily paper in the United States, within a corresponding time.

The CHICAGO DAILY NEWS, therefore, as now published, consists of MORNING, NOON, and EVENING ISSUES, known respectively as the MORNING NEWS, NOON NEWS, and EVENING NEWS. The average combined circulation of the three issues of the DAILY NEWS now exceeds 90,000 copies each day. To appreciate the exceptional extent of this vast circulation it is only necessary to state that it is over three times the circulation of any other daily paper in Chicago or the West, while its circulation in the city of Chicago is greater than all other Chicago daily papers combined. Being an independent paper, the organ of no party, sect, or class, it is the one universally read Chicago paper. The subscription price of the DAILY NEWS, either MORNING or EVENING issue, is $6.00 per year, or $3.00 for four months, postage included.

On July 9, 1878, the DAILY NEWS purchased the CHICAGO EVENING POST, consolidated its daily issue with the DAILY NEWS, and continued its weekly issue under the name of the CHICAGO WEEKLY NEWS. The WEEKLY NEWS under its present name and management is therefore less than five years old, though as a consecutive weekly publication it is now in its twentieth year. The CHICAGO WEEKLY NEWS takes a corresponding field among weekly newspapers to that occupied by the DAILY NEWS among dailies. It gives the news of the world in condensed yet complete form. Its Chicago market quotations are especially complete and trustworthy. That the CHICAGO WEEKLY NEWS has been correct in its judgment of the requirements of a large class of readers of the weekly press is best evidenced by the extent of its circulation, which aggregated in the month immediately preceding the date of this writing, 203,053 copies, or a weekly average of 50,513 copies. The subscription price of the WEEKLY NEWS is but SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS per year, postage included.

The phenomenal success of the CHICAGO NEWS in both its DAILY and WEEKLY ISSUES has been achieved by observing that fundamental principle of offering the best article of its kind in the market at the lowest cost to the purchaser. The CHICAGO NEWS is cheap only in price. The character of its news service is unsurpassed. It is a member of the Western Associated Press, and in addition to the unrivalled news service furnished by this Association, it enjoys the exceptional advantage of its own special telegraphic wire from Chicago to Washington and New York on the East, and to Milwaukee and St. Paul on the North. Giving all the news through reporter and telegraphic facilities unsurpassed by those of any other Chicago paper, it commands itself to all classes in the community, to rich and poor alike, in that it offers an absolutely complete record of the news of the day in concise form, without the needless verbiage and amplification which render so many metropolitan journals weariness to the flesh, while its price brings it within the reach of all classes. It is a paper for the times.

AT THE BOX OFFICE.

Good within the corridor; I had just stepped inside the rail car when I saw the state of matters, and turned pale; I put on new clothes throughout, and put on new shoes, and came; I brought this heavenly creature out, leaving my pocket-book at home.

There were vexed and mortified; I was cruel as it was absurd; I did a little gloved hand glide straight into mine, without a word, saying a dainty portmanteau, and I saw which scarce knowing what to say, I for the evenings ticks paid.

When I sat down long with her— "Now don't look so annoyed," said she; "of course, mistakes sometimes occur, and people lose their property." I answered, "I agree, but must feel vexed about it though; that's your's, does not belong to me—" "Why shouldn't it be so?"

She spoke unthinkingly, then blushed, "Oh, do you mean it?" straight I cried, "I will delight she would have blushed; I feel 'No' in vain she tried; I did not hear it so at last; I said, 'I will keep you still,' said she, 'There, there, don't hold my hand so fast—The nether will be sure to see.'"

Story of Two Summers.

BY HOLLIS FREEMAN.

CHAPTER II.

"What we have turn on the parade?" Captain Herbert said at length, getting tired of solitude and stone throwing. "Only came last night, so I have no one yet. Are you staying with Marston?"

"No, they are only friends I have met. I am staying at Gladdeth Crescents with a cousin of mine," said Effie, in reply to the last question, and gladly taking up in answer to the first.

How proud and happy she felt as she walked side by side with her new-found friend, and up and down the gayly-thronged parade. How triumphantly now she looked the well-dressed, stylish girls.

There another man here to-night compare for one moment with this splendid-looking escort? How kindly looked at her, and how pleasantly talked. He did not seem to mind, even see, the shabby, battered old

Perhaps men did not care so much about these things; or—this night was not quite so comforting—perhaps the gathering shades of evening hid the shabbiness and old-fashionedness of her poor worn-out old dress.

How, it was delightful, charming; a color sprang to the pale cheeks, gray eyes were sparkling and gleaming with gratitude and excitement and and joyous happiness. Conor Marston took off his hat as he passed them, and looked kindly, well pleased to see "that little thing" enjoying herself so.

She gave an envious look at the tall, made figure at her side. Captain Herbert himself was a little used at the upturned face, full of a wonderful gratitude and admira-

"She is a nice little thing," he said himself, "and has been awfully snubbed; she looks painfully grateful for a few kind words." She had over-her shyness by this, and was talking. "Let me show you the belle of the parade—there, we are just going past her, that dark, handsome, light-looking girl, with the velvet plume; I call her 'The Lady of the Verde de Vere.' Isn't she a beauty?"

Effie looked up with some anxiety in her companion's face as she spoke. A senseless feeling of jealousy rushed over her heart as his eyes slowly sought

Queen of Beauty she pointed out. "What should become at once en- captivated by her loveliness, the desert, overlook, the poor, friendless little being at his side! Heart beat wildly as if her new-found was going to be snatched from her grasp. She kept her large gray eyes fixed on his face. They were walking slowly, and both passers-by looked full and ally at each other as they passed. She thought the Queen of Beauty looked radiant, her hero contemptuous. "You know her?" she gasped.

"Yes." "He saw that his face had changed. But you did not speak to her." "But you walked on some distance with-speaking; then Effie felt as if some- one compelled her to say, "Do you think her beautiful?"

"He roused himself as if out of a rever-

Miss Lacy? Oh yes, in her way I know she is. I don't know much about her—that is, we met before, but I didn't care to speak to me tonight, I shan't trouble about her, but I let the acquaintance drop. Shall I turn now?—the people don't seem to come to this end of the parade."

They turned, and the next time they met Miss Lacy and her party, Captain Herbert was laughing and talking so to Effie, that he never appeared to see her. "He now had time to study the lady's face, and was in her turn astonished to find that she was herself the chief object of notice. How slowly and scornful-rides, or walks, or excursions, planned by the young people. Perhaps she did not know how often her young cousin fell exclusively to the care of Captain Herbert. She knew they were a party of merry young people going about together, and did not dream that quiet little Effie claimed the exclusive regard of any one person.

As it was, Captain Herbert took a kindly pleasure in promoting the enjoyment of his simple minded little friend; he took her out with him everywhere, boating, driving, walking, and seemed himself pleased and soothed with her quiet and gentle companionship. She did not tease, tire or bore him as the other girls did. In his present mood he did not feel up to the mark for the other gay-voiced, loud-laughing, rattling young people of the party.

Jessie and Amy and their gay young friends struck a harsh chord in his memory, to which now his heart could neither respond nor vibrate.

This gentle girl, with her quaint fancies and poetic ideas—with her warm, childish heart and true inner depth of character—never struck a harsh note, or made one jingling discord. If he was silent, or unhappy, or petulant, she did not tease him by word, or look, or questioning, but bore it all with gentle quietness. If he chose to lie with his hand- some face staring up at the brilliant blue sky for hours together, she would sit by him quite still with her work or book, and there was something soothing in the very quietude of her presence. She fell in, too, with his graver moods. She could talk with a bright originality of thought on many subjects; if her ideas were girlish and crude, they often contained brave and noble thoughts, and sometimes some witty speech or telling remark would chase the frown from the handsome face, and bring back a smile in its place.

In his gay mood she had always a share; she could talk and laugh and jest, happily, freely, gayly, but never with any approach to boldness or forwardness. She was always just what she appeared to be—a warm-hearted, loving, impulsive girl, perfectly free from any taint of rudeness or vulgarity.

She drew without knowing it, a painful sketch of her home life, of the dearth of love and hope and interest there, and sometimes spoke of it as a half apology for enjoying herself so much here, for being, as she called it, so babyish. She took more pains with her dress and appearance now; she was longer in 'arranging her brown hair; she looked off- enser in the glass; she got old Martha to help her in the mysteries of the toiletette. Perhaps it was kindly Mrs. Marston who spoke to Miss Somerville about her dress—anyhow, Martha was ordered to go with her on a shopping expedition; and to Effie's astonished delight, a new white dress, a blue scarf shawl, such as were then worn in all bright colors twisted around the shoulders, and a new straw hat with a wreath of daisies round it, were purchased.

With what eager delight she used all her simple science to make herself look presentable, can well be imagined. The vigorous sea breezes had given a healthy tinge to her pale cheeks, and the glow of youthful enjoyment and happiness is in itself a great beautifier. With her dark eyes beaming with happiness, and her tall figure showing to great advantage in her better-fitting garments, she was a great improvement on the old shabby-looking Effie Lea, of the Black Birch. She fell in so completely with Captain Herbert's moods, she never even puzzled over them. If he was moody and silent, she let it pass un- noticed, unobserved; if he was gay and recklessness, she only rejoiced to think he was happy and enjoying himself. He told her that a few years ago, on the death of his father, 'Fairmeadows,' their old splendid family estate, had been obliged to be knocked down under the auctioneer's hammer, and that he, as eldest son, had lost, through the extravagance and recklessness of father and grandfather, an almost princely estate and that he was now a poor penniless, unknown, nobody, without home, money, friends or prospects; and there was enough of romance in all this to Effie's childish mind to account for anything. What pleasant mornings they spent together up in the Happy Valley! Amy and Jessie, and their friends, were kind- er in their manner to Effie since her conquest, as they considered it, of the much-admired Captain Herbert; for to no other lady in the whole place, save

Miss Lea, did he vouchsafe the least notice or attention. Sitting quietly among the merry party with her work or book, listening to the bard or taking a stroll over the picturesque great Orme, was in itself enough happiness to make the summer world a paradise for Effie Lea.

They often encountered Miss Lacy: once they stood side by side together for a few minutes. "Who is that beautiful girl?" one of the party asked Effie.

"The belle of Llandudno," she answered, smiling.

"Phew," said Captain Herbert, "do you ever look in the glass yourself, Miss Lea?"

"He spoke loudly. Effie felt sure, as she blushed hotly, that Miss Lacy could not help overhearing the remark.

"Hush," she said impatiently; but Captain Herbert only laughed in the reck- less way he sometimes laughed as he turned away.

Six weeks went by, and August came in sweet and sunshiny, and the season was at its height.

Agnes Marston came running in one day, she was a kind-hearted, frank-spoken girl. Effie and she had met before, and she greeted her with great warmth of manner. "I only came last night," she cried, "and now I can't stay a minute. Conor has been, I hear, awfully spooney on Miss Danvers—horrid girl that she is! Have you seen Captain Herbert? isn't he splendid? Only fancy, he was engaged to that dashing-looking Miss Lacy, who lodges next door to you: isn't it funny their both being here together? She behaved shamefully—jilted him when the wedding day was fixed. He was madly in love with her. Conor says they pass without speaking, and he has been flirting and going about with some other girl, to try and make her jealous, to show and make believe he doesn't care—but I mustn't really stay; I shall see you to-night on the parade. What a capital window this is for looking about you!—good-bye." She was gone, and Effie Lea was left sitting quite still in the warm afternoon August sunshine. The distant strain of some jingling negro melody, reached her, otherwise everything around her was perfectly silent; but the world, her world at least, with its gay hopes, and bright fancies, and summer dreams, was lying at her feet—overturned, broken, destroyed. What was this she just heard?—madly in love—flirting with some other girl to make her jealous; her—her? And this other girl, who was she? Effie Lea? Surely the Effie Lea she had known, had never felt so madly stung, and humiliated to the dust, and wounded to the death, as she felt now.

The glittering love-dream lay at her feet in one chaotic heap. He was false, false! he had deceived her, or allowed her to deceive herself. He had made a fool of her. There had not been one iota of truth in one tender glance, one loving word; he had used her as a tool for his own purpose, tried—oh, with what scorn she said this!—to make that other, beautiful, haughty woman jealous; paraded the simple, soft-hearted girl, with her babyish devotion and sickening admiration, before the very eyes of her rival—the woman he loved, yes, madly loved—as if to say: "Here, let me show you someone cares for me, if not you; I can win other love easily enough, if I lose yours."

It was mean, despicable, contemptible. The girl's proud, wounded spirit rose, and fought and struggled against softer memories. The very love she once bore turned to hate, the sweetness to gall, the honey to wormwood.

It was a pale, firm-set face that met Captain Herbert's gaze that same evening. "You are late to-night, Effie," he said in his rich, pliant voice, into which of late a caressing tone often crept, "I have been looking for you everywhere."

"Come down to the beach," she answered, "I want to ask you a question." She led the way down the sloping shingle to where, lone, grand, and desolate; deserted by children and boats, and fashionable promenaders, tossed and swelled, and heaved the great, darkening gray sea.

It was growing dark; the blue sky of morning, and purple tints of evening, the soft gray, the rippling silver and green of noonday, had melted and changed into chill, sobering gray. The light twinkled here and there in a glistening circle under the brow of the dark, frowning, great Orme. Overhead a bright star or two shone, and flashed and gleamed, and one narrow, glittering stream of light marked the moonlight path on the deep lonely waters.

It was the same spot where he had first seen her sitting in the dusky summer twilight, lonely and unhappy. The sombre scene suited well with the darkening heart of the girl who had watched to-night love's sun setting on hope, and trust, and happiness.

He met her challenging gaze with bold eyes. "What is it?" he asked, with his old smiling ease.

She looked up at him, her large gray eyes dilating as she spoke. "I heard to-day—that is—I want to know if it is true that you were engaged to Miss Lacy."

There was a wild, pleading look for "No" to this question, pitiful to see, in the poor, pale, agonized upturned face. It is not too much to say that Captain Herbert would have given all he possessed in that moment to have been able truthfully to say, "No, it is not true."

He hesitated; then said, sullenly, "Yes, Effie, it is true."

The pleading tender look died out of her face—it grew stiff, and rigid, and hard; her voice was icy in its chill strength.

"One more question and I have done. Tell me this, do you love her?" A man's hatred of being questioned or brought to book crept into his face. He answered doggedly, "I don't know whether I must hate or love her now—I—"

She looked him full in the face. No judge could have condemned a prisoner in a more calm and judicial manner. "Do you know that you have acted a base and unworthy part. Shall I tell you what you have done?"

He was so surprised to see his little, humble, admiring, devoted friend turn judge, that he stood quite still, without attempting to answer or interrupt her. A bitter feeling of remorse crept into his heart as she went on.

"You have darkened a lonely life; you have stolen all the bright colors from a summer landscape; you have taken the sunshine from shadowed path; you have robbed a trusting heart of its love, hope, and faith."

"Effie," he said, and his voice was somewhat troubled, "don't be too hard on me. I confess I haven't been quite fair and open with you. But I never wished or meant willfully to wound or deceive you. That woman," he clenched his teeth as he spoke, while a tone of mad rage crept into his voice, "has been the curse of my life. Let us forget her; let bygones be bygones with us too from this time forth." He seized hold of her cold little hands in his as he spoke; but she drew them away, not angrily nor hastily, but coldly and decisively.

"Am I too hard on you?" she said with a chill little laugh, "I dare say, I am, and too poetical in my judgement. I will speak plainer. You have done no harm, only worn and paraded the love of simple little Effie Lea, as a cloak to hide the pangs of your own wounded feeling of love."

"Effie," he cried passionately, "you are angry now; you do not understand, you do indeed judge me harshly. Yesterday you thought me all perfection, to-day you think I am all deceit: you are young and rash and hasty in your judgements. Remember, no man, or woman is ever so bad or so good as we think them."

She listened with a pitiful little smile of chill scorn. "Have you anything more to say?" she asked, "before I say good-bye."

"Yes, I have," he cried, his handsome face all alight with its conflicting feelings, "Effie, if I have not been quite open with you, forgive me. You have some little regard for me, some little love still left, haven't you? Be my wife."

She looked at him with the same smile, and he went on pleadingly. "I haven't much to offer you, have I?—not much to give in the way of love, or money, or the good things of this life? But your own life is but a lonely one. You know what my faults are; you have often put up with my bad temper, and discontent, before this. Have pity on me, my little friend; we shall get on together as well as most other folks, I dare say; and I swear to you this night, that no man, or woman either for the matter of that, shall ever come between us again."

"If you had said this yesterday," she said, and for the first time a rising swell of passion gathered in her voice, "I would have gone to the world's end with you and thought it unutterable bliss; but when you say it to-day—"

"Well?" "I listen with derision, contempt. No, Captain Herbert, I would sooner live out my lonely life to its last day, than marry a man I despise." He would have spoken again, but she put out her hand.

"Good-bye," she said, "you will never meet again, go where you will, with any other woman that could have loved you so truly or understood you so perfectly as Effie Lea."

She walked away into the gathering gloom, with quick, unhesitating steps, and Captain Herbert was left standing quite still, and alone, looking over the gray tossing sea with darkening eyes.

ADVANTAGES OF CRYING.—Won't the boys and girls, who find the tears come easily in pain or disappointment, be glad to know that crying is a good thing, and so declared by eminent physicians. A French physician is out in a dissertation on the advantages of groaning and crying in general, and especially during surgical operations. He contends that groaning and crying are two grand operations by which nature allays anguish; that those patients who give way to their natural feelings more speedily recover from accidents and operations than those who suppose it as unworthy a man to betray such symptoms of cowardice as either to groan or to cry. He tells of a man who reduced his pulse from 126 to 60 in the course of two hours, by giving full vent to his emotions. If people are at all unhappy about anything, let them go into their rooms and comfort themselves with a loud boohoo, and they will feel a hundred per cent better afterward. In accordance with the above, the crying of children should not be too greatly discouraged. If it is systematically repressed, the result may be St. Vitus' dance, epileptic fits, or some other disease of the nervous system. What is natural is always useful; and nothing can be more natural than crying.—Good Cheer.

An Accurate Time-Piece. While on the subject of Waltham watches, we may mention that we have seen a letter from the Commander of the Gordon Castle (Castle line of Steam Packets), who was fortunate enough to save life at sea, and who for his gallant conduct was presented in September last with a Gold Keyless Waltham Watch by the President of the United States, on behalf of the London Local Marine Board. Referring to this Presentation Watch, he says: "When I left London the watch was six seconds fast, and on my arrival at Singapore it was only three seconds slow—a most extraordinary performance for a watch, as I carried it on my person the whole time. I compared it every day with my chronometers on the passage out, and it seldom or ever differed one second from them; in fact, I found it almost, if not as good as my chronometers, which is a great deal to say for a watch carried about and subject to all kinds of jolts."—London, England, The Watchmaker, Jeweller and Silversmith, Feb. 5, 1883.

The little fellow knelt at his mother's knee and prayed God to send him 50 little sisters and 100 little brothers. The prayer was never finished, for the mother, agast at the prospect of having her house turned into an orphan asylum, lifted the boy to his feet and tucked him into bed without a moment's unnecessary delay.—Middletown Mercury.
