LITERARY NOTES.

The August number of Demorest's Monthly Magazine repays perusal, the articles being well written and of an interesting nature. "Agathe De Valsuze" is the commencement of an admirable story. "Out of the World" concludes pleasantly; and the shorter stories are all excellent. Among especially entertaining articles may be mentioned "Seven Borax Villages of Italy," The Lemounier School of Paris for the Professional Education of Women, The Costumes of some of Rosetti's Dream Women, and an illustrated article on The GOOD DISHES St. Gothard and Mont Cenis Railway. Jenny June continues her interesting articles How We Live in New York; Hetta Ward contributes Home Art and Home Comfort. Current Topics are agreeably discussed, and the various departments are replete with useful information. The frontispiece is the portrait of "A Celebrated been offered. TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

ONE of the advantages on the side of the missionaries in Alaska, says the Rev. S. Hall Young, who has recently returned for a short rest from Fort Wrangell, lies in the fact that the women are in all respects the equals of the men. The principal obstacles to be overcome are superstition and drunkenness. There are at present twenty missionaries in that field and their labor is meeting with a satisfactory reward.

WHAT has become of the law which was to crush out polygamy and make the Mormon mourn? Never in the history of their church have the Latter Day Saints prospered as they do now. Their missionaries are not only more active in this country than ever before, but they are making converts abroad by the thousand. Nearly seven hundred Mormon recruits landed in New York in one Sunday, and they are all represented to be thrifty and well-todo emigrants. It really looks as if the government is not in earnest in its effort to eradicate the twin relic.

THE three-year-old son of an industrious San Francisco mechanic has developed an alarming passion and capacity for climbing in places which would make a wild goat dizzy. After performing in safety several perilous feats of this character, the youngster disappeared the other day and his father set out in great fear to look for him. Knowing his proclivities, the father's eyes surveyed not back streets and cellar-ways, but the sky-line of the neighboring roofs. And sure enough, he presently discovered his hopeful perched upon an unfinished building's projecting cornice, his legs dangling over the edge, and his face wearing an expression of complacent enjoyment. To reach his seat he had climbed a tall ladder, walked across an eight-inch plank in a stiff breeze, and scrambled around the high front of the cornice.

Customs officers along the Canadian frontier naturally become expert in detecing smugglers and have many amusing stories to tell of the devices employed to cheat the Government. One of the traits constantly exemplified before their eyes is the passion for smuggling, apart from any hope of pecupiary advantage. Feople buy articles in Canada at a higher price than they would have to pay at home, apparently for the mere excitement of an attempt to escape detection. "We came across, the other day," said a custo m officer at Detroit to a reperter, a "novel and very close costume for this hot weather. We had our eyes open for an old man whom we had come to look upon with suspicion, because of the frequency of his visits. 'So at last we took him in, and upon stripping him, found that his body, his arms and his legs were closely wrapped with straw braid-such as they use in hatmaking-and upon divesting him of his unique armor, we measured over 500 yards of the material."

Its fortunes have steadily declined during the last quarter of a century, and it is doubtful if its population now exceeds 25,000. It is the centre of the rice-growing district, and among its other articles of export are dates, coffee, beans, and dried fish from Lake Menzaleh. Its trade has fallen off in consequence of the bar at the mouth of the eastern branch of the Nile, large steamers, which find ample anchorage ground in the harbor of Port Said, being unable to load and unload at Damietta. This is a fortunate circumstance, inasmuch as it diminishes the chances of the contagion being carried by ship to French, Italian and English ports. The three towns to which the disease has spread, Mansourah. Shirbin, and Samanoud, are collections of mud hovels on the Damietta branch of the Nile, a few miles further inland. No cases of cholera have yet been reported from either Alexandria or Port Said, whence the disease would be directly communicable to Euro ports.

projected by the Catholic Bishop of Para and Amazonas to ply upon the Amazon. If the Bishop's suggestion is carried out no expense will be spared in the construction of the vessel. It will be built in Europe, superbly decorated with rare Brazilian woods, furnished with all the requirements of Catholic worship and with every convenience for the priests who will live on board. "Propelled by steam," says The Tablet, "and drawing but little water, it will carry the zealous missionaries along the great natural highway to the most distant parts of the country as far as Bolivia, and Peru, Ecuador, and Columbia and Venezuela, and even to the more distant European colonies of Guayana. The dulcet sounds of the swelling organs accompanying the soft, senorous chant of the priests will spread over the tranquil surface of the river, and give notice of the approach of Christ, ambulans super aquas." From time to time the good fathers will stop at convenient places, where the people will be collected to receive instruction and exhortation, where their children will be baptized, and where all who desire it will have an opportunity, now scarcely ever afforded, of going to confession and holy communion. Mass will be celebrated with much pomp and will be celebrated with much pomp and circumstance within the hallowed precints of the anchored church, and all will be invited to attend. After a time regular stations will probably be formed from one extremity of the gigantic river to the other, which will be visited at certain stated intervals.

The Iron Duke.

Few persons are aware how Wellington obtained this sobriequet. According to the Rev. George Robert Gleig, his biographer, it arose out of the building of an iron steamboat, at first christened the "Duke of Wellington," and afterward known as the "Iron Duke." From the vessel the name was transferred, rather in jest than in earnest, to the Duke.

"It had," says Mr. Wheeler, "no reference, at the outset, to any pecuharities, or assumed peculiarities, in popular belief that he never entertained a single generous feeling toward the masses, it is sometimes understood as a figurative allusion to his supposed hostility to the interest hyena. of the lower orders."

On the contrary, Wellington frequently exhibited an almost unparalleled generosity. His thoughtfulhe has been murdered, but others think he has

Soon after he penned a letter, which concluded

"I have escaped unhurt; the finger of Vicksburg, burned the hotel, dwelling, two stores, including the postoffice, a brick nearly of Providence was on me." And later on he wrote these works:

HOW WATCHES ARE MADE

In a Solid Gold Watch, aside from the necessary thickness for engraving and polishing, a large proportion of metal is meeded only to stiffen and hold the engraved portions in place, and supply strength. The surplus gold is actually needless. In James Boss' Patent Gold Watch Cases this WASTE is saved, and solidity and STRENGTH increased by a simple process, at one-half the cost. A plate of SOLID GOLD is soldered on each side of a plate. steel rollers. From this the cases, backs, centers, bezels, etc., are cut and shaped by dies and formers. The gold is thick enough to admit of all kinds of chasing,. engraving and engine turning. These cases have been worn perfectly smooth by use without removing the gold. This is the only case made under this process. Each case is accompanied with a valid guarantee signed by the manufacturers warranting it to wear 20 years. 150,000 of these Cases now carried in the United States and Canada. He Had Reasons.

One day last fall a queer sort of an old man hired a boat and rowed out on the river a little below Yonkers to fish. So far as could be observed from the banks he had no luck. He went out about 10 in the morning and at 4 in the afternoon he sat in the same position, held his fishpole the same way, and had evidently settled down to stay there all Pretty soon a steamboat came rushing along down the river. She was headed directly for the fisherman, who was in midchannel. She blew her whistle to warn him, but after a glance over his shoulder he resumed the old attitude, The steamer came nearer and nearer; and the old man was observed to give a sudden start and pay more attention to his line. When too late, the pilot tried to stop and avoid the accident. The skiff was struck broadside and splintered to pieces, and for two or three minutes it was believed that the old man was drowned. Then some one espied him in the wake of the boat, and he was fished out.

Putting Away.

Putting away and putting out of the way are two totally different processes; they differ in purpose and in method. The former is a process exclusively feminine; the latter is characteristically masculine, although it is not absolutely confined to the male sex.

Man puts things out of the way when ever the necessity of so doing presents itself to him. For example, he finds that his room is in a disorderly state. a'oo many pairs of boots make themselves painfully obvious; there are more discarded collars on the mantelpiece than propriety would dictate; and the mixture of cigar-ashes, clothesbrushes, books, and gloves on his table has reached a stage of confusion which displeases him. He resolves to put things in order, and to put out of the way whatever is plainly adapted to the process. Accordingly he growds the process. Accordingly he growds the proces. Accordingly he crowds the superfluous boots under the sofa, thrusts smaller articles of personal apparel into the bureau drawers, empties the cigar-ashes and bits of waste-paper behind his desk, and thus quickly sets the cigar-ashes and bits of waste-paper behind his desk, and thus quickly sets the room in order.

Now the result of this process is eminently satisfactory. Not only has he put things out of the way, but he is in a position to find them again as soon as he wants them. The sofa stands Very little hay has been secured faithfully on guard over the boots, as he can at any time poke them out with a cane. The discarded collars, the gloves, the pipe and the various small articles thrown into the bureau drawers remain No there, and the ashes and waste-paper could be exhumed from behind the desk were any possible demand for them to of the way can always lay his hand upon Five years established and never known to them. He does not lose track of them.

Of course this masculine process of putting things out of the way excites POISONOUS URIC ACID WHICH EX the derision of woman. opportunity to put it away, not by hanging it on the hat rack, but by concealing it in some grossly improbable place. Hats thus put away have been found in the dining-room sideboard, in the flour barrel, in the coal-bin, or in the fourth-story hall closet. When the inevitable search is made for the missing hat in the morning the wife always fails to remember where it is, and often, in perfect good faith, suggests that the husband forgot to bring it home with him, or by some other equally wellmeaning but exasperating suggestion drives him to the border of madness. Books and papers of a kind which a husband is apt to need at any moment are always put away by woman with eager enthusiasm. In this way they are frequently concealed for years, and finally come to light unexpectedly when some ancient trunk in the garret is opened, or when the key of the disused clothes-press in the basement is accidentally found. Winter clothing is put away in spring with such success that the husband is convinced that it is stolen, and is hence agreeably disappointed when it is found, toward the end of the next winter, riddled by moths, in an out-of-the-way store room. In short, there is nothing that woman will not gladly and effectually put away if it belongs exclusively to man.

'It is useless to fight against this impulse to put things away when once a woman is a prey to it. Men should regard it as a mental disease, and deal gently with the victim. The only safe plan for a man to pursue who is in dauger of having his things put away is to live in a house without closets or clothespresses, and to keep everything on chairs: In this way only can he preserve the integrity of his property and his own peace of mind .- Harper's Bazur.

NEWS NOTES RIOTOUS CONVICTS.

The Oregon State capital was the scene of a desperate outbreak of prisoners the other day. Forty convicts at work in the foundry rose against the keepers. Armed with heavy tools they would have escaped but for the bravery of the guards. Only eight got away; three being killed and as many dangerously wounded.

CHINESE GRIT. A large strike on the California and Oregon railroad occurred recently, 7,000 Chinese striking for a quarter of a dollar more pay daily and the privilege of buying provisions where they pleased. The railroad company refused to make the advance and so the railroad company refused to make the advance, and so the matter rests. The Chinamen are camped near the track and have the support of six companies in the city. The prospects are that the road will not advance rapidly. fireman of the gravel train jumped and escaped. Geo. Knickerbocker, engineer of the pessenger train, remained at his post, reversed the engine and was caught in the wreck. He was horribly crushed and instantly killed. His brother, the firemas, jumped and escaped. Charles W. Church, Adam's Express messenger, of Hartford, and Chas Griswold, of Waterbury, were in the baggage car. The car was smashed and the men thrown forty feet into an adjoining field, Griswold's body was thrown over the telegraph wires and he was instantly killed. Church's injuries are probably fatal. The passengers were badly shaken up, but none seriously injured. The accident was caused by the failure of the telegraph operator at Plainville to give the conductor of the passenger train orders to wait at the station for the gravel train to pass. The operator, Chas. A. Welch, is reported to have been arrested.

ELECTRIC LIGHT WAR.

The City Electrician of Chicago has declared war against certain of the electric light companies in that city by cutting all wires not placed underground. The competition has become so sharp between the companies that it is claimed that they do not use properly insulated wires, and string them at random on house tops which would result in instantaneous death. A number of wires have already been leath. A number of wires have already been cut. This action has reference to are lights only, no danger being apprehended from wires used for the transmission of currents for incandescent lighting.

MORE TROUBLE FOR THE DOCTOR.

Thomas Evans, the wealthy father-in-law of Thomas Evaus, the wealthy father-in-law of of Dr. Chas. E. French, has made some startling discoveries concerning the latter, who is now in jail at Erie, Ps., waiting until his health will permit of his removal to the penitentiary to which he has been sentenced for a year for attempted abortion. He charges that French has been engaged in the body-snatching business and has been robbing graves for years. A sack and rope were found in a trunk of French's which Evans identifies as part of the resurrectionist's outfit. French denies it all and charges Evans with being a lunatic. ings were undermined and crumbled into rain, while frame dwellings were carried in all directions, nearly 60 of them sailing away on the rushing waves, with the terrified inhabitants in them. People jumped from them, only to be drowned. Many sought safety upon the roofs, from where they were released. One house went rushing by, the only occupant of which was a lady. She was taken out a raving maniac. Hundreds lost everything, but the scant clothing they had on when the rush began. The dead will number nearly 40, while the destruction of property cannot be estimated at present. Five iron bridges were carried away, besides the large pumping house and the steamer Princess Louise. At London the destruction of property is fearful. Houses the destruction of property is fearful. Houses and business buildings were carried away, while eight or nine lives were lost. At Lucerne

PENNSYLVANIA REPUBLICANS.

The republican State Convention which as sembled in Harrisburg, the other day, was re markable for nothing except it be the quietness with which the business was transacted. The situation in the New Hampshire senatorial contest remains about the same. The vote taken on the 11th inst. gave Bingl am 106 and Rollins 87. The Rollins men are making a strong fight, and the teracity with which they cling to him make it probable that the deadlock will not soon be broken.

IMPORTANT EVIDENCE GONE.

A great sensation has been caused in Nashille, Tenn., by the discovery that some one had stolen from the State Treasurer's office the bank ledger containing the state's accounts with depositaries from May, 1877, to January, 1883. The book was kept for M. T. Polk, now on trial in Nashville, by Capt. J. C. Fleming, and contains the entries relied on the state legislative investigating committee. The book was relied on by the prosecution to convict Polk, and its disappearance is greatly commented on. These vessels, which are practically idle with the exception of an occasional run to the Isle of Wight-as the Queen very seldom goes to sea-cost in the aggregate £275,528. But the original cost is a small item compared to the charges for maintenance and repairs, which during the last ten years amounted to £570,000. Some of the English journals are calling attention to the extravagance of this outray, which, as the Glasgow Mail puts it, "is more than ample to solve any difficulty the Royal Commission may find in the way of a patriotic and merciful settlement of the Crofter question, and would rescue an industrious and virtuous population of 30,000 persons permanently from a life of acknowledged privation and misery."

THE NEW HEBRIDES QUESTION.

Brother Hopewell shuffled forward with a mixed look of hope and doubt on his face. "It was very easy to fall into the footing of a familiar and leved guest in the home where Jacob so happily lived, and whither Richard was at once taken.

Over their wine that night I presided, sitting like a queen on her throne. Then it was that Richard Morton said: ·I wish I was lord of a home like this. and father of such a winsome girl.' And my father said: 'Well marry my little daughter, and I promise you the happy home. She shall learn of her mother to be a true and loving wife. The day she is fifteen I will give her to you; you will be scarce forty.

" 'I accept your trust, and I pray God that I may be worthy of her pure, young love, 'answered Richard Morton, | stooping to kiss my dimpled cheek, adding, Why, I loved this little girlie the first minute I looked upon her.

Grandmother's smile was very tender, and her eyes were bright with tears as she repeated the words of her faith-

"Grandmother, dear," we cried, "that is a charming love-story; but you must tell us more. How did it all come about? Did you love our dear grandfather, too, from the very first?'

"Yes, dearies," she answered. "From that day I was called 'Richard Morton's little wife,' ard I passed from childhood into girlhood, sheltered by his love, and loving him with an idolatry which grew with my growth and strengthened with my strength, and which never knew abatement. Who could help loving that noble, unselfish man, who lived his life for others? The day I was tifteen, no happier bride could be imagined than was I. Some few de plored the difference in our ages, but I was content. The duties and cares which come to every wife and mother came to me, but guarded and shielded by his loving care, my life was full of joy—as full as the affection of a tender, thoughtful man could make it.

"I have outlived him by more than a score of years, but I have the sweetest memories of our life together ever cheering me, and I am looking forward to the heavenly home, where my Richard is waiting for me, and where there will be no more parting forever."

Dear grandmother's lips were wreath ed with the sweetest and saddest of smiles, as she finished speaking, and in her eyes was the far-away, expectant look one so often sees in the eyes of those saints who are living in the blessed hope of an eternity above.

A More Favorable Report. The July report of the department of agriculture indicates a very general improvement in the condition of cotton. Rains were general up to the 15th or 20thof June, and local showers have been frequent since. There has been an excess of moisture, interfering with cultivation and promoting growth of grass. Clear fields are found only in favored and pushing cultivators Since June 20 the growth has been rapid. The Garfield Home Circle.

Mrs. Garfield, says the Pittsburg Disoatch, has made her home in Cleveland and selected her surroundings in so quiet and careful a manner that comparatively few even of the late president's more intimate associates have any knowledge of her plans and of her daily life. Her house is a plain brick structure situated on a small lot in Prospect street. She paid $50,000 for it, and regards it more in the light of an investment than as a permanent home for herself and children. The affections whispered her own story of ton and slyly shaking her head at us. It was for him she had long-dame to the rescue.

Hard on Poets.

Rockland Courier-Gazette.

"No," said the said-faced man in the corner, "I don't write poetry any more. I used to write poetry -dead loads of it. Good poems, too, my family and nearest relatives said. One day I read one of them -I mean one of the poems, of course, and not one of the relativesplace for a life of the original John Smith in sixty numbers. I asked him his opinion of it. He said at once that I ought to send it to some one of the leading magazines. I felt that a man with such judgment as his ought to be encouraged and I subscribed for his work. The next day I mailed a copy of my poem to the Century. It was a fine thing, I acknowledge, about the west wind blowing across the graveyards and stirring the daisies and all that sort of thing. I didn't hear from the magazine folks, so I concluded the poem had got lost in the mailspostmasters are often dishonest and will steal anything that is valuable so I sent another copy of the poem and requested an immediate reply. In three weeks I received an snswer saying that they were so crowded with poetry that they begged to be excused from using my really fine effort. That was encouraging. I mailed the poem to Harper. In two weeks they said that they hoped ed it-which they did. Sent it to Lippincott's, Peterson's, Independent, Christian Union, New York Weekly, Boy's Own-back it came every time, with the politest accompanying note, saying that owing to press of advertising on their columns, or something of that sort, they would have to decline. I grew melancholy. Such repeated rebuffs did not tend to encourage an aspirant for literary honors. I grew desperate, too, and wrote to a Boston paper offering the poem at the paper's own price. The editor didn't even favor me with an answer-and kept my poem, which was a clear case of larceny. The matter had by this time cost me a large sum in postage, and I felt bitter toward my fellow men. Read the poem over again to my family, drank in their applause, and tried another paper, with the old result. Then I remembered that away up in a little town in Maine where I was born, a genius was publishing a local paper devoted to patent medicine notices and anecdotes of Daniel Webster. I had been a constant cash subscriber since the paper's inception. I sat down and wrote the editor a friendly letter, spoke encouragingly of his publication, and ended by offering my poem gratis for a place in his poet's corner. The very next copy of his paper-which he prints with far from shingle nails-I opened with feverish haste. To see my poem in print had become the ruling ambition of my life. The corner devoted to poetry was occupied by "Lines to M. A. R." I turned to the locals, and read that the rhyme contributed by so-and-so-meaning me-was declined, as the editor could only consent to print the better order of amateur poetry. That settled me," said the sad-faced man; "I stopped there. I could suffer under the refusal of Century, but to have a yellow-headed editor with a hair-lip and only three hundred and thirty subscribers to a paper that lives on cordwood and beans turn me off with scorn, was too much. I stopped writing poetry then, and am now, I hope, a respectable member of society." Just then the stage stopped and the sad-faced man got out. Nobody spoke as the stage drove on.
