The Oldest Resident.

Peter Gorman, of Lyndon, prematurely left this life on the 1st inst. For the last three years he showed signs of mental weakness with increasing periods of violent insanity, and, at last, in the absence of his watchful son, James, he found an old package of Paris Green, swallowed enough to kill two hundred men, and then immediately went out into the field to cut corn. He was brought back by force and everything done that was possible, but to no effect. He died without any indication of pain or distress.

Mr. Gorman was born in the County of Down, Ireland, Feb'y 11, 1815; and came to Michigan in 1834, taking from the government the farm upon which he lived until his death, a period of fifty-two years. He commenced voting for Martin Van Buren, and never failed to vote for every Democratic nominee from that time up to and including Cleveland. He was a hater of hypocrisy, and a lover of honesty, and a man of very strong convictions. He reared a family of five children—three sons and two daughters; the latter of which he now lies beside in the quaint old Sylvan churchyard. His three sons, Edward, Peter and James S., are familiar names in this community.

The funeral services were from necessity postponed until Tuesday, 5th, Father Considine celebrating high mass at 9 a. m. Com.

Married, by Rev. W. M. Campbell, Oct. 13, 1886, at the residence of the bride's parents in Chelsea, Minnie E., daughter of Alex. M. and Sarah Streeter, and Procter C. Pettungill, of Central Square, New York.

We had a delightful visit last Saturday from our nephew, S. T. Holmes, late of Carlisle, New Mexico, who has just returned from California, via Tombstone, Arizona, and other important cities, including Chicago, for the purpose of introducing an invention by which he separates oil and other impurities from exhaust steam, as it escapes from an engine, and delivers pure water suitable for drinking and culinary purposes. This apparatus will be especially advantageous on board of steamships and for the manufacture of ice in southern climates, also for furnishing pure water in mining districts and in any region where it is difficult to obtain. Mr. Holmes is a practical as well as a natural mechanic, and has been for several years connected with mines in New Mexico, running the engines and machinery by which ores are hoisted and water pumped from deep mines.

It is estimated by real estate men that the census of 1890 will show twice as large in reuse in the population of Washington as that of any other like period in the history of the city. The increase during the period from 1880 to 1890 was over 20,000. The advance in the price of real estate there has for several years been almost phenomenal and as that in the far western cities which have boomed under the excitement of great immigration by mining, in events, etc. The eight-hour movement, which threatened evil to the city for six months during this year, has died out, and building is going ahead with an impetus never known before. There are more structures of a superior character going up there now than in any other city in the United States.

The only church in Charleston which was not injured by the earthquake was one in which a congregation of colored Congregationalists worship. They had appointed the time of dedication only two or three days after the earthquake, and they did not put it off. There came a shock during the services, but instead of running and howling in terror to the street, as many others would have done, not a soul left his seat. More than that, they took up a contribution of eighty-five dollars to pay the expense of furnishing. But their school building and teachers house were badly shattered.

Atlanta University is enlarging its industrial department. It is planned to increase the number of forges and improve the facilities of the iron-working, and also of the wood-working, classes. A printing press has been secured, with sufficient outfit to give instruction in printing. A primary department will be opened at fifty cents a month tuition. This will also serve as a school of observation and practice for the normal department. Ordinary tuition is two dollars a month, in the college classes, and one dollar in the lower classes.

Straws show the direction of the wind, and little things indicate the progress of the people toward greater results. That we are rapidly becoming a reading nation is indicated by the fact that every year thousands of new names are added to the list of students in the Chautauqua course—the people's college. By this means are being formed in the young of to-day habits which will be of inestimable benefit in after life.

At the reception of the president the other evening appeared a tall lank Virginian, who said, upon shaking hands with his excellency: "I've bin readin' 'bout yer huntin' an' fishin' up thar in ther Ad'rondacks, but I 'lowed yer didn't find much deer. Now, if yer'll jest kum down to my place, I'll give yer er chance to kill ther purtiest bucks er ever set eyes on, and lots of 'em, too. It'll be er real deer hunt, and don't yer forgit it."

At a meeting of the military order of the Loyal Legion held in New York recently Gen. Sherman uttered a great truth when in the course of his remarks he said: You here are getting importations from Germany, France and England. You feel it here, and we have felt it in the west. We should put on the brakes to a certain extent. We want more Americans.

Says an exchange: The division of labor and improved machinery are doing away with the thorough learning of trades. When the present generation of shoemakers and blacksmiths are dead it will be hard work to find a man who can make a complete boot or make a horseshoe and nails and then shoe the horse properly.

It is a somewhat interesting fact that the citizens of Vermont hold mortgages on real estate outside of the state amounting in the aggregate to nearly five and a half millions of dollars. One of the results of this is that local industries languish in Vermont because investors prefer to invest in western property.

Belva Lockwood, the would be president has a very ready method of dealing with obstreperous clients. A gentleman who visited her office the other day for advice presumed to question Belva's construction of the statute, whereupon the belligerent female threw the inquisitive man out of the window.

Life at Saratoga.

I asked a beautiful young lady from St. Louis who was flirting with three handsome fellows on the States, says Eli Perkins, what she did in Saratoga.

"Do you mean everything I do?" she asked.

"Yes; I want to know the daily ritual of all young ladies."

"Well, we get up at 8, put on our nun's veiling or bathiste dresses and chip hats and meet Fred or Gus on the front balcony for a walk to the spring. At the spring we meet the girls and fellows from the other hotels, and we all drink the water and talk sensible."

"What do you talk about?"

"Oh, we girls talk about dresses and tell each other what the fellows said the night before. You know on those dark balconies the fellows do say lots of sweet and very sensible things, too. Now last night Albert McCormick and I had a regular philosophical discussion. He held the umbrella to keep off mama's eyes and the electric light. Then we talked about the human soul—how destiny sometimes bound two souls together by an invisible chain. Then we considered the mission of man and woman upon the earth—how they ought to comfort each other in sickness and in health. Then Albert quite startled me by asking me if I ever really cared for any one. And when I said 'Yes, for papa and mama,' he laughed and said he didn't mean them, and then I felt quite hurt and the tears came to my eyes, for I do love mama, even if—"

"Well, what do you do after drinking the water?" I interrupted in my business like way.

"Why, we all go to breakfast. Then after breakfast it's 10 o'clock, you know, and we all sit on the balconies and hear the music and read the newspapers. Sometimes the flirting fellows try to hold our hands under the newspapers. Now yesterday morning Albert tried to. He leaned his face towards mine. I felt his mustache almost touch me as he whispered such nice words in my ear. He told me how he had longed for an opportunity to speak to me all alone. Then I was very happy, for I knew he was going to say something very nice indeed, and—"

"And after the balcony discussion, what next?"

"Oh, then we dress and primp up for dinner. And after—it's 5 o'clock now, you know, we all go to drive. We drive to Moon's lake and take a lemonade, over to the Geyser for a glass of vichy and up to Woodlawn among the cottages. Mother, she scolds us about being so worldly and rumpling so many white dresses where it costs $15 to wash them, and we girls look out sharp for the fellows in their dog-carts and tandems. Albert took me out in his trap yesterday. Such lovely horses, and Albert, wasn't he lovely, too! We drove over on the old road, where nobody ever drives. Then we came back by Lake Lonely—just Albert and I, you know, and the stupid tiger behind—and Albert never talked so sensibly. He took my hand and said every father ought to give his daughter $100,000 on her marriage day, and, I said it would be real nice if they would do it—and I knew he would, and then Albert sighed and his lips came—"

"And what do you do in the evening?" I interrupted.

"Well, we just dance. Mother buys the ball tickets and takes us in, you know, and sits and holds our things and talks scandal with the other mothers. Then the fellows, all dressed just lovely, join us and we slide off into the waltz. We dress nice, too. How do you like this dress? Connelley's cut decolette, cost two hundred and fifty. I've brought out ten new ones this summer, and six more to come. Well, as I was saying the fellows join us, and we dance and dance and dance. And when we get tired and hot we promenade out on the dark balcony in the wind. Last night Albert held me so tight in the waltz that I almost fainted, when he took me out on the balcony to cool off my face was so red. Albert said it was my dress was too tight. I guess Albert did it. Then he commenced one of his sensible talks about brides having dots. I agreed with him, and told him I was to have two hundred thousand, and then he put his arm around me. I felt his hot cheek against mine and—"

"Then, after the ball, you all retire, don't you?"

Not much. We girls all go up to Sallie Smith's room and talk it all over. The fellows say they are going down to the reading-room, but father, he's very blunt, father is, and he says the profligate dudes go down to the club-house, drink champagne and play on the green. Playing on the green must be very innocent, but drinking wine is awful. I know Albert don't drink. Why last night he ate card-mou seeds all the evening and said he ate them so he'd have no desire to drink. Oh, Albert is so good and true, and he says if finances are all right that we will be married in the—"

"But I must go now," I interrupted, then I went to my room and wrote down just what this sweet, fashionable girl said.

Horror of Morphine.

"Give me only a few drops; for God's sake, give me just a little!" The words, says the New York Journal, came from a shrunken-faced man who stood in front of a drug store on William street as he raised his hand appealingly.

"I cannot give you any," replied the druggist, as he closed the door in the man's face.

The latter began a vigorous pounding on the door, and presently a policeman appeared.

"What's the row?" he asked.

"This man is a morphine fiend," replied the druggist, "and I can't sell him any."

"Oh, for heaven's sake, give me just a little. See, I have the money!"

The policeman led the man away, but ten minutes later he was back again. The policeman again appeared, and dragged the man off in the way of the station-house.

"If you will go home, I'll let you go," said the kind-hearted policeman.

The man promised to go directly home, and started away. An hour afterward he was again in front of the drug store, beseeching the proprietor to sell him a small quantity of morphine.

This time another policeman hove in sight, and in response to the druggist's demands ordered the morphine "fiend" away. Threats were useless, and the policeman cuffed the man's ears. It was in vain. The latter seemed feeble, and fell headlong to the pavement.

When he got up blood was flowing from his mouth, but he refused to go away, and the policeman was compelled to take him to the station.

"They can talk about liquor ruining men," said the druggist, "but when opium once gets its grasp on a man, he's gone."

Who Wants War, and Why

From the Cincinnati Enquirer.

Who wants war? Not the honest, hard-working citizen.

Not the man of a family.

Not any man who loves his home.

Not any man who loves his wife.

Not any man whose mother is the world to him.

Not any man who sees his future happiness in his intended bride.

Who wants war?

Not any pure, honest, loving woman.

Not any mother, wife, sister or sweetheart.

Oh, no! Woman's happiness depends on peace.

Who wants war?

Not any man who has ever been through a war and faced all its perils and horrors.

No matter how brave he was, he has had his fill. The braver he was, the more willing he is now to enjoy the beauties of peace.

None of the tried heroes of the late civil conflict, were they the blue or the gray, care to pass through the same bitter experience again.

Who wants war?

Men who have lost their reputations. Men who are anxious to make reputations at the cost of human life.

Men who have no homes, and no respect for the peaceful homes of others.

Men who have no families, or if they have do not provide for them, or even treat them with respect.

Adventurers and thieves.

Gambblers and blacklegs.

Bullies and cowards; all these want war.

And why? Because they well know that if war is once declared the honest citizen will be forced to leave the plow, the workshop, the desk, go to the front and face death, while they, the thieves, bullies, gamblers and adventurers of all kinds will stay behind and prey on brave citizens' home, or, if they go to the front it will be as hangers on in camp, to crawl like snakes in the battlefield in the dead of the night and rob their own dead.

For this they want war.

Nature's Secret.

Where the diamond comes from nobody knows. You can no more predict the existence of diamonds than you can the existence of genius, though to be sure, all diamond fields to a certain extent resemble each other; and all, borrowing as they do, their light from the sun, are found only in warm climates, says a writer in the Cornhill for August. Nor can you tell where the diamond goes to on combustion. Burn it and it leaves no ash; the flame is exterior like that of a cork, and when it has blazed itself out there remains not even so much as would dust the antenna of a butterfly. If man has his mysteries; his strange conversions, his going in a sinner, his coming out a saint; so, too, has nature. The philosopher's stone is formed of the vilest materials, and the chimney sweep is covered with that which, under happier auspices, would be jewels. This mysterious process of crystallization places between two bodies of the same nature a greater difference than between bodies differently composed. And yet not so great a mystery either, for every year a process is discovered for making diamonds—only somehow the diamonds are never made, or, at the best, so microscopic and at such an enormous expense that they are absolutely useless, except to gum on cards at the British museum. In France they say a solution of phosphorus in sulphuric acid yields minute diamonds, but that these things are better managed there than here has been long allowed.

Joe Harris, of New London, Conn., found a fat pocket-book, and as soon as he could find the owner restored it to him. The man was delighted. "There was $90 in it," he said. "I'm awfully glad you found it. Here, smoke this." The cigar was almost bad enough to make an honest man turn thief.

A family in Moncton, N. B., could not understand why the leaves fell off the plants until they saw a small mouse on the top of a fine fuchsia cutting the leaves off. After being watched for some time it descended to the flower pot and scratching up the ground in the pot it began eating the roots.

The Egyptian lotus among the water lilies at the display in Central park, New York city, is attracting much attention. The large flowers, with their different tints of white and red, with the bud in the form of a tea rose opening out into a cluster or petals nearly a foot in diameter, massed among solid looking leaves, are much admired by the aesthetic citizens of that locality.

People on board a steamer at Chatham, N. B., heard a splash, and saw a chair floating in the water. Next rose above the waves the head of a man, who remarked: "Don't mind me, I can swim." The spectators not to be outdone in politeness fished him out at once. He had placed a chair for himself in such a position that it went overboard with him when he sat down on it.

George Phillips, of Binghampton, Solano county, Cal., has just completed an organ containing four hundred pipes, the longest being sixteen feet. All the pipes are made of old newspapers rolled and fastened with a paste made of glue and alum. The woodwork was made entirely of old fence boards, posts, dry-goods boxes, and the like. He was two years in building this instrument, which is said to have an excellent tone.

The disagreement between the Chicago pork packers and their employees regarding the number of hours to constitute a day's work has led to the strike of the latter, and 20,000 men are interested in the strike.

JOHN RANDOLPH.

Gossip About Him—Instances of His Arrogance and Insults—Reminiscences of His Duels.

Washington Letter to Cleveland Leader.

I have been much interested lately in the study of John Randolph of Roanoke, and nowhere do I find a better description than in the private memoirs of Ogle Tayloe, one of the rich old citizens of Washington, who published his recollections some time ago, exclusively for the use of his friends. These stories of Tayloe have never gotten into general circulation. He published only a very few of his books, and they never get into the stores. Reading them is like looking over some old manuscript diary of the past, and from their pages you can get more real truth as to the private life of our great statesman than from history. The following letter I quote freely from Tayloe's book about Randolph, and in many instances verbatim:

"John Randolph," says Mr. Tayloe, "was unquestionably a man of genius, of rare eloquence, and high literary attainments. His penetrating and melodious voice was wonderful (though not equal to Clay's) its low notes reaching every part of the largest hall. He and Clay were rivals in eloquence and debate. They represented opposing political parties and principles. The one a patrician by birth, the other sprung from the people. Both were born in Virginia. There were giants in those days. Randolph started in life as the tribune of the people, a follower of Jefferson; but, when a leader himself, he changed some of his opinions, and became aristocratic, proud, and overbearing. He prided himself on the forte and style of an English gentleman. He dressed well and appropriately, importing his clothes from England. When he rode his blood horse—the way he usually moved—he wore leather breeches and white tops. He drove his phaeton, his servant following on horseback, or was driven in his 'chariot and four,' the carriage and harness from Longacre, London. But, in some respects, Mr. Randolph was a lusus nature. The Hon. Richard Rush, in a controversy, described him, not inaptly:—

"A fiend, lean and lank,
That moved upon a spindle shank."

"Mr. Randolph was tall and thin, as straight as an Indian. He walked like one, and prided himself on his descent from Pocahontas. He was quick at repartee, and unsparring in satire."

"For meanness and pretension he expressed the greatest scorn. A few examples will suffice. In one of his walks along Pennsylvania avenue, in Washington, he was overtaken by an obese gentleman, puffing from his exertion, with the remark: 'You walk very fast, Mr. Randolph.' 'I can walk a little faster,' was the reply, striding away from him. A sycophant followed him to a coachmaker's repository and volunteered his opinion on a close carriage. 'Please examine the interior,' said Mr. Randolph, and then fastened him in and walked off. A person meaning to be very civil to Mr. Randolph, on meeting him at Richmond, said to him, 'I lately passed by your house.' 'I hope, sir, you'll always pass it by,' was Mr. Randolph's reply. On his being a prosecutor in the celebrated trial of Judge Chase, it was remarked to him, by a supple M. C., of his kinsman, the accomplished gentleman, David Meade Randolph, whose testimony favored Judge Chase, that 'it was not to be relied upon.' 'I would sooner believe Mr. Randolph's word,' was the reply 'than yours, sir, upon your oath.' In reply to a sophomoric sort of member of Congress, who had enlogized Mr. Randolph's great talent, concluding with the remark, 'but were he obliged to take his heart with his head, he would prefer to remain as he is,' Mr. Randolph, with mock humility, deprecating the praise, 'although coming from one of high moral qualities of the honorable gentleman; but if I were obliged to have his head, even with his noble heart, I too should prefer to remain as I am.' In the war of 1812, a pretentious politician, a militia general, at a dinner party, boasting of our American prowess, used the word 'we.' He was silenced by Mr. Randolph's reply: 'Did you say we, General?' To another general, in debate on the floor of Congress, he having been unfortunate in an attempt to invade Canada, and then making an onslaught on the Secretary of War, Mr. Calhoun, Mr. Randolph replied by quoting from his proclamation, with significant emphasis: 'The gentleman is at last carrying the war into the enemy's country.' One of the earliest speeches Mr. Calhoun made in Congress, was to assail Mr. Randolph for his 'audacity in comparing himself to the great Lord Chatham.' Mr. Randolph modestly disclaimed the pretension, but added: 'In one thing we are alike, pointing his finger to Mr. Calhoun, 'every scoundrel assails me.' An able, but a vain member of Congress, attacked Mr. Randolph in debate. He merely replied, to the other's great indignation: 'Tray, Blanche, and Sweetheart all bark at me.'"

"The distinguished Mr. Pleasants resolved to avenge an insult, and planted himself in front of Mr. Randolph, on the main street in Richmond, saying: 'I don't get out of the way for a d—d rascal.' 'But I do,' was Mr. Randolph's prompt reply, stepping aside." Mr. Pleasants laughed and acknowledged himself beaten. He and Mr. Randolph were afterwards on friendly terms. When Lord Brougham was bent on the ballot vote in England, a scheme of his own, he met Mr. Randolph at a fashionable dinner party in London, and inquired of him the opinion in his country about the ballot. The reply was: "In my state, Virginia, there have been many foolish measures; but we never had there such a jackass as to propose the ballot. The subject dropped. An English friend, meeting Mr. Randolph in one of the parks off London asked him 'his opinion of England.' Just then a splendid equipage passed by, as a miserable pauper asked for alms. Mr. Randolph, with a significant gesture, replied: 'It is a heaven for the rich, a purgatory for the middle class, and a hell for the poor.'"

"Mr. Randolph's arrogance and insults made him many enemies. Duels and challenges were the result. In one he wounded the distinguished General Taylor, of Norfolk. They were then young men. Mr. Randolph had the advantage of being considered a great shot. He was far from it, though he made a great show of his guns and dogs. When about to fight the distinguished M. C., Mr. Eppes, General Breckenridge, of Virginia, was requested to prepare Mr. Randolph by a little practice for the conflict. He recommended to the distinguished Mr. Crawford, of Georgia, who was to be the second of Mr. Randolph on the field, 'by all means to arrange the matter, for Mr. Randolph can not hit a barn door!' An accommodation took place. On making up with Mr. Clay, after his bullet had rent Mr. Randolph's flannel dressing gown, that he wore on the occasion of their duel, he said: 'Mr. Clay, you owe me a gown.' Clay promptly replied: 'I am glad I am not deeper in your debt.' There was a correspondence that has never been revealed to but a few, between the Hon. Daniel Webster and Mr. Randolph, in which there was an invitation to the field, but the meeting was prevented by the interposition of friends, in which Colonel Benton took an active part."

"Some curious anecdotes are told of him of a different character from those narrated. He was a great whist player, and would devote whole nights to the game if he found congenial spirits. Here is a case in point: Governor Edward Lloyd, then Senator from Maryland, during a session of Congress at Washington, about the 1820, had a whist party at his lodgings, the present Willard's Hotel, then kept by Strother. The party consisted of Mr. Randolph, Mr. Clay, and General Gibbs, of Rhode Island, besides the host, Governor Lloyd. Mr. Randolph and Mr. Clay were partners the whole evening. They were winners. Yet months afterwards Mr. Randolph fancied he had won $20 from Mr. Clay on that occasion, and reminded him of it. Mr. Clay blandly replied, 'if I had remembered the debt I should certainly have paid it.' 'You surely owe it,' said Mr. Randolph. Without a word more, believing in his thorough conviction, Mr. Clay forthwith paid the money, though sure he had not lost it. 'In these matters,' on Mr. Clay's telling me the anecdote, he said, 'I feel I am beyond reproach.'"

"Mr. Randolph treasured up wise saws, and was happy in their application. He was well versed in Rochefoucault. His landlord, Dawson, became needy. Mr. Randolph asked for his bill and paid it. Dawson in alarm, inquired if he had taken offense and meant to quit the house. Mr. Randolph replied: 'I intend to leave; as we shall part friends, and as I entertain respect and regard for you, I fear from my knowledge of mankind that in your altered circumstances something might arise to change my opinion of you, so we had best part; and Mr. Randolph removed to other quarters. He gave currency to a Spanish proverb, 'Save me from my friends, I can guard against my enemies.' He felt deeply wounded by the imputation put upon his chivalry, and said: 'I shall never again take refuge under the communion table.' The evening preceding his duel with Mr. Clay, his seconds, Messrs. Tatnall and Hamilton, called upon him to make the last arrangements. They found him reading Milton; and he entered upon an essay on its beauties, from which he could not be diverted until the hour was so late that very few words were said about the duel or anything else. He was adroit in extricating himself from difficulty. He had one with the celebrated McDuffee that threatened serious consequences. The South Carolina orator returned more than a Roland for Mr. Randolph's Oliver. On the next day, prematurely announcing the death of the dying Pinkney, Mr. Randolph eloquently referred to his hallowed grave around which no resentments could be maintained, that he felt none, and made such an appeal to Mr. McDuffee that he responded in the same spirit, producing an immediate reconciliation. Mr. Randolph was one of the committee to count the votes of the house that exactly elected Mr. Adams to the presidency; not one too many or one too few. Mr. Randolph at once exclaimed, so as to be heard over the whole legislative hall, and that was as silent as a church: 'The cards are stacked!' In this way was anticipated the proclamation of the count. After Clay and Webster had retired from congress, a distinguished member from Vermont said to me: 'Randolph is head and shoulders above any man in the house.'"

AMENDE HONORABLE.

The Ypsilantian of last week, after publishing in full our account of the robbery of Mr. Wackenhut, makes the following explanation and retraction of its former statement respecting it. This is just what we expected of the Ypsilantian. We never suspected any intention on its part to uphold crime or do injustice to Mr. W.

"We give the Herald's statement in full, in order that justice may be done to Mr. Wackenhut, so far as the Ypsilantian is concerned. Our statement in reference to the matter was based on information gained from a gentleman who pretended to be giving the true statement of facts; but the above clear statement, together with the result of several hours' investigation this week, leads us to reject the card story, and to accept as true the old man's statement that he was robbed by force in a place near the depot in this city.

Pride in the reputation of our city, and an unwillingness to believe that such a crime could occur here and our offices be totally ignorant of the affair, led us to doubt that Mr. Wackenhut's statement, and upon what we considered reliable information, to deny its truthfulness. But the above statement, together with our own later investigations, convince us that we were in error, and our pride and faith must alike suffer. There therefore remains for us no other alternative but to report the facts and denounce the crime. Ypsilanti cannot afford to permit the repetition of such an offence.

THE CENTURY.

The special feature of the next volume of The Century, commencing with November, will be the Authorized Life of Abraham Lincoln, by his confidential secretaries John G. Nicolay and Col. John Hay. This much needed work, coming from the pens of these able men, who, by their intimacy with Mr. Lincoln, are so well qualified for the task, must give preeminent value to this leading magazine of America, during the coming year. The work was begun under the sanction and assistance of President Lincoln himself, and has been continued under most favorable and advantageous circumstances. Sixteen years have already been spent upon it. The authors were not only intimate with Mr. Lincoln but also, from boyhood were Mr. Lincoln's companions. Besides their literary qualifications, Mr. Nicolay being an old journalist and both of them authors, their advantages for information have been extraordinary. Mr. Nicolay had charge of Mr. Lincoln's correspondence before he was elected to the presidency; they both accompanied him to Washington; one was his official private secretary throughout Mr. Lincoln's term of office, and the other, Mr. Hay, assistant Secretary several years. After Mr. Lincoln's death, all the manuscripts belonging to his estate were absolutely and unreservedly placed in their hands by the Hon. Robert T. Lincoln, the only surviving member of the President's family. In addition to this, they sought and obtained access to the private papers and correspondence of most of Mr. Lincoln's Cabinet. Being on terms of intimacy with all the leading statesmen and generals of the time, they were afforded by them every possible assistance in the elucidation of difficult points. They have also profited by the vast quantity of reminiscences, letters and newspaper articles which have recently been printed in regard to Lincoln and his times. Besides the mass of manuscript archives in all the Departments, they have consulted thousands of printed volumes.

The price of the Century is $4 a year but new subscribers to the HERALD may have both for $4 in advance.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9, 1886.

The preparation of annual reports is now the engrossing subject of attention in all the Government departments here. The object of this annual industry is to inform Congress what each department has been doing during the year, and what work it is hoped will be done next year. The evolution of an annual report of an executive department is an interesting process. Most of the material for the report is furnished by the subordinates. The employees supply the facts and statistics, the chiefs of divisions and bureaus add constant comments and deductions, and a synopsis of the whole is presented to the head of the department. In matters of national importance, as for instance when the Secretary of the Treasury formulates his policy in regard to the coinage of silver, he must consult with the President.

The President's message gives an epitome of the department reports, which is sometimes furnished by the heads of the departments, and occasionally the President prepares it himself from the data he has culled. The messages of President Hayes had little originality. They were largely made up of abstracts of department reports, with a discussion of a few special subjects. President Arthur wrote the greater part of his messages himself and Mr. Cleveland does the same. The President's message is no longer, it is claimed, of much consequence in directing legislation, except as it may be taken as the announcement of the policy of the political party of which he is a representative.

Mr. Cleveland's last reception was one of the largest ever held in the East Room in summer. Over five hundred people shook hands with the President. Among them was a large excursion from North Carolina. One old gentleman approached the President and smilingly said "Tar Heel, sah; glad to see you, sah." A number of children were with the excursionists, and Mr. Cleveland seemed to exert himself to pay them special attention.

It seems that the good example set by Mr. Benedict, the new Public Printer, will be followed by all of the other departments here. It is reported that there is soon to be a thorough reorganization of the Treasury Department under the direction of Assistant Secretary Thompson; and it is believed that when Secretary Whitney returns, he intends to make a number of changes in his department.

It may not be generally known that of all the foreign legations residing here, the British is the only one that owns its legation building. The other ministers with their suits rent houses or flats, or board. The building where the British Minister resides is a hospitable looking, old fashioned mansion, situated on Connecticut Avenue, the most fashionable street in the city. The building with the ground on which it stands, is in a certain sense British territory, and untaxable by the United States.

Mr. Romero now intends to build a house to be used exclusively by legations from Mexico. The house will be located on I street, about four squares from the Executive Mansion.

The Japanese legation rents a bright red brick building just across the street from the house Secretary Lamar has recently leased. The Chinese legation occupies one of the most conspicuous houses in the city. It is a rather tawdry and tumble down failure, known as Castle Stewart. It was built for a private residence by the rich California ex-Senator, but it was never finished, and had remained unoccupied for years. Of late the Chinese Minister rented it. Chinamen are very fond of parks and when there is one near, they are always to be found there, looking in open eyed surprise at the unusual sights of this strange country. The Chinese of the Legation here are out of the gentry and nobility of the Flowery Kingdom, and both in dress, manner, and appearance they are very superior to the laundry Chinamen, so frequently seen.

Mrs. Cleveland, always accompanied by her mother, has returned to the White House from Buffalo, where she has been spending a week. It is said that the coming society season will not begin before Congress convenes, and will be very short.

Mr. Stanfield came near having a blowup in his engine while threshing cloverseed at Mr. Little's last Saturday. It was prevented by the melting of a metal plug by which the steam was let into the fire pit and the fire extinguished immediately. A narrow escape.

It is real mean to have a twenty-two foot ladder run away and leave you among the outer limbs of an apple tree, where you can't get to the body of the tree nor the ground, and no one near to laugh at you. Good joke lost.

A young man about here undertook bicycling lately. His steed gave him a header and left him over the fence on his head. He had a big head.

Mr. George T. Angell, of Boston President of the Massachusetts Society for the prevention of cruelty to animals, lectured last Sunday evening to a large audience in the Unitarian church on The Relations of Animals who can speak to those that are dumb.—Argus.

Milan Leader: John Belcher has probably the finest fountain in York township. It was struck last week at the depth of 102 feet, after drilling through 15 feet of rock. The water, pure, clear and abundant, comes three feet above the ground.

Milan Journal: The Nogar well is down over 1400 feet. The drilling is now in a light colored sandstone. A new supply of water has been encountered, filling the well to the top and is claimed to be an excellent quality of mineral water—it certainly smells and tastes like it.

Two rival hunting parties, at Manchester, numbering 17 nimrods each, a total of 34, recently had a day of "sport" and competition, the result of which is given in the Enterprise as follows: 20,560 counts in all. One party succeeded in taking 11,375 lives; the other, 9,155. Most of these creatures killed were, without doubt, unfit for food and harmless to the welfare of man. What were they killed for? For fun—a day of "sport". The whole country scoured to destroy innocent lives simply to determine who can destroy the most. Is there anything noble, anything worthy of humanity in this? Creatures that wear the human form divine should reflect; and not disgrace the position they occupy in the scale of being.

Up to three o'clock yesterday afternoon the number of students who had registered at the steward's office was 1364 of whom 555 had registered in the literary department, 302 in the musical, 294 in the law, 87 in the dental, 60 in the pharmacy, and 56 in the homeopathic. At the close of Oct. 7, 1885, three hours later on the day of the same date, there had entered 1238 students and the total registration last year reached 1401. Sixty-two more students have entered in the literary department than at the corresponding date last year. In addition to this, it should be remembered that the literary department commenced a day later than last year and new members are constantly being registered. The pharmacy department commenced a week later this year than last, yet it has already within 3 of the total registration last year. The law, dental and homeopathic departments show a decided increase. President Angell has the names of over 300 new students on his books, many of whom are yet to register. It will thus be seen that the prospects are bright for surpassing the high water mark of 1534 students.—Argus.

The faculty of the law school issued on Tuesday a supplementary announcement, in which was outlined a radical change to be made in the course of instruction; it amounts to a revolution in method. From the time of its establishment until a year ago all instruction has been given by lectures delivered every morning to both seniors and juniors. The subjects were changed every year, so that by this means attorneys-at-law were easily ground out. Of late, however younger blood has animated the faculty and the old system has been gradually improved upon by means of quizzes, moot courts, etc. This year in response to a suggestion of the regents, it has been determined to grade the school thoroughly, separate the work of the junior and senior years, give two lectures a day instead of one, and increase thoroughness of the quizzing and text book instruction.—Register.

A moot congress will hold weekly sessions in the Law lecture room of the University during the current semester.

Misses May and Nellie Platt, of Ypsilanti, were awarded ten premiums for fancy work and paintings at the Chelsea fair.

OUR COUNTRY.
Occasionally there comes upon the market a new book, that should be upon the center table of every family and be read by every person old and young. Such seems to be the nature of a small volume of 220 pages, that appeared about four months ago, and has already reached its 18th thousand, bearing the title "Our Country". Respecting this book we find the following opinions by men whose opinions of books are worthy of consideration.

Grand Rapids, August 28th, 1886.
"I have been so much pleased with 'Our Country' that I desire to place a copy in the hands of each of my clergy. If you can furnish me with 25 copies, please send them to me at once, with bill.—Gep. J. Gillespie, Bishop of Western Michigan.

The statistics are collated with decided skill, and the arguments are masterly. It is a valuable hand-book on the great practical problems now facing the church at every turn. The entire book, indeed, hews to the line. It bravely diagnoses the diseases of Society, Church, and State, and suggests treatment. The despotism and danger of excessive wealth, especially in monopoly, is forcibly depicted. At the same time the trouble with the working classes is fearlessly delineated. The losing chapter on "Money and the Kingdom" is a powerful argument for the cause of reverence. This work is worthy of a wide circulation, and will be sure to accomplish good.—Herald and Presbyter.

"The book ought to be in the hands of every patriot in the land as a thesaurus of important material facts, and as an incentive to stand on higher grounds of civic and religious duty."—The Advance.

It ought to be circulated by the thousands. It opens your eyes and widens your vision. Intelligent laymen ought to know these carefully gleaned facts. Preachers ought to have them at their tongue's end. After reading 'Our Country' you are all of month of July and Thanksgiving sermons. Get the book at once. It will act as a stiffening breeze during these midsummer days."—Lutheran Herald.

It is a remarkable production. It will exert a great influence upon the thinking people of this land. There is no other volume on the subject that can compare with it. It should be circulated by thousands in every state in the Union. Dr. Strong serves the thanks of the people of the U. S. for producing a book of such wonderful compass of facts and sweep of intellectual and spiritual power."—Rev. I. W. Joyce, D. D., Trinity M. E. Church, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Would that every family of every church in Christ in California were supplied with a copy of this wonderful book.—Pacific.

EXTRACTS FROM OUR COUNTRY.
Communities and commonwealths, like men, have their childhood, which is the unative period. It is the first permanent settlers who impress themselves and their character on the future. Powerful agencies may, in later years, produce important modification; but it is early influence which is farthest reaching, and is generally decisive. It is easier to form than reform; easier to mould molten iron than to file the cold cast." Chap. 11.

These tendencies infold the future; they are the mighty alphabet with which God writes his prophecies. May we not, by a careful laying together of the letters, spell out something of his meaning? It seems to me that God, with infinite wisdom and skill, is training the Anglo-Saxon race for a hour sure to come in the world's future. Therefore there has always been in the story of the world a comparatively unoccupied land westward, into which the crowd of countries of the East have poured their surplus populations. But the widening areas of migration, which millenniums ago rolled east and west from the valley of the Euphrates, meet to-day on our Pacific coast. There are no more new worlds, the unoccupied arable lands of the earth are limited, and will soon be taken. The time is coming when the pressure of population on the means of subsistence will be felt here as it is now felt in Europe and Asia. Then will the world enter upon a new stage of its history—the final competition of races, for which the Anglo-Saxon is being schooled.—Chapter 13.

STATE NEWS.

An Important Suit.

Says the Marquette Mining Journal of recent date: A big iron mine suit has just reached an important stage in the progress toward a final settlement. Years ago Capt. N. D. Moore gave information as to the probable value of a tract of land on which the great Colby iron mine in the Lake Superior region is now situated. The land was purchased by a company, and for his services, Capt. Moore was given one-third interest. Prior to any development of the property, Moore sold one-half his interest to one Monroe for $10 in money and his note for $240, promising to give a deed as soon as he could get his own deed. Shortly after the richness of the mine, one of the foremost in the region, began to appear and Moore pleaded all sorts of excuses for not complying with his contract, the natural surmise being that he was endeavoring to back out of his bargain. When the deed to his third was finally given it was taken in the name of Moore's wife. Thus matters stood until Monroe's heirs, he having died in the meantime, brought suit against Moore and his wife to compel a conveyance of one-sixth of the big mine and one-sixth of all the royalties it has paid since its first shipment of ore. The case was argued at Marquette in July last before Judge Sarge of the United States district court at Cincinnati, and his decision is just filed, granting fully the claims of the complainants, in the suit. In his opinion United States Circuit Judge Howell E. Jackson concurs. The case is likely to be taken to the United States supreme court by the losing parties, but this determination is felt to be important, if not conclusive. The complainants in the suit live at Hancock.

How They Escaped.

Joe Bulmer, the convict from Wexford county who helped Con Kane of Detroit, to escape from Jackson state prison, has been recaptured. It seems that after his escape he wrote a letter to his wife in Wexford county. It came to the ears of the sheriff and furnished the clew to his whereabouts and led to his arrest. In the station he told the following story: "I had only two months to serve of my two years' sentence, and was allowed to do teaming outside of the walls. Kane's mother came to see her son at the prison, and she promised to give me $800 if I would help him to escape. I agreed and took him out on my wagon, filled with leaves and trash. When I dumped my load, half a mile from the prison Kane pulled out a revolver and compelled me to go with him. We made our way to Detroit, and Kane told me to come to 233 of a street that I forget the name. I got a job with a farmer at Farmington, and I was arrested there. I expect to get the $800 after my term expires. I don't know how Kane got the revolver." Putman has been taken to Jackson.

For Life.

The trial of John Boyd for the shooting of W. B. Johnson, a merchant of Rockford, Kent county, Aug. 14 last, ended in the circuit court at Grand Rapids with a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree, and Judge Montgomery sentenced him to the state prison at Jackson for life. Boyd is 37 years of age, and in his statement declared he did not remember shooting Johnson, having been drinking heavily for several days at that time and using chloral to offset the effects. He had had trouble with Johnson over a furniture bill of the weekly payment order, claiming that Johnson failed to give up a chattel mortgage after all dues on it had been paid, and then later threatened him with foreclosure; but at the time of the shooting declared he had no ill will against Johnson.

Oil Excitement at Manistee.

The oil boom in Manistee is becoming more exciting every day. Bankers and capitalists are buying up all available lands between Manistee and Reed City. Tax lands are selling at high figures; some on which the tax were only $1 ran up to $50 and $70. People are wild over the prospect of oil. Some farmers say that oil prospectors may sink wells and, if successful, they will talk prices. It is reported that a syndicate has been formed with capital enough to warrant business success, provided they strike oil.

In view of the many fatal mining accidents (four in Marquette county alone in one day recently, killed four men and maiming two) it is understood that the knights of labor of the Marquette and Menominee iron ranges, a large majority of whom are either miners or in the employ of the mining companies, will make a strong united effort to get a mine inspector, or more than one if necessary, appointed next winter through an act of the legislature. As all of the 23 candidates for the legislature from the upper peninsula are knights of labor, little doubt is entertained that such an officer will be appointed soon after the legislature meets.

Salvation Ministers.

There was a crowded meeting in the Salvation Army temple in Toronto, Ont., the other morning to witness the dedication of officers for the East India mission field. Gen. Booth led the services, which consisted of the usual singing and devotional exercises and a dedicatory address, in which the general recounted the circumstances connected with Col. Tucker's appeal to the army for evangelization of India four years ago. For the work undertaken in response to his appeal thirty-five missionary officers had just arrived in India from England, and Canada was sending its contingent of seven. He asked their prayers and material support in behalf of those going from them to that distant land, and concluded by calling on three of the missionaries to address the meeting. These came forward and stated their resolution to give up their friends and country for the good of the people of India and their determination to brave everything for the cause of Christ. They were greeted by cheers and received the benediction of the meeting at the close of their remarks. There was also a band of seven missionaries consecrated for work among the French speaking habitants of Lower Canada. On coming forward at the general's request they sang a French hymn and one of their number gave a French address which was interpreted by the staff secretary.

Success in Sorghum.

Last year the department of agriculture began to experiment in a small way at Ottawa, Ks., with the diffusion sugar making process as applied to sorghum cane. Instead of crushing the cane, as in the sugar cane process, it was shaved off in minute slices and the sucros yielding up sap extracted by streams of water. The results obtained were so encouraging that the field of operations were removed to Fort Scott this year, and with a largely increased plant experiments are now in progress on a scale of some magnitude. A telegram been received from Prof. Wiley, the chemist of the department, who is in charge of the works, announcing the success of the experiments. The telegram states that syrup has been obtained from the sorghum cane of light color, good flavor and crystallizing well. There was complete extraction of sucros in six of the cells of battery.

Commissioner Colman is very much elated at the results of the experiments and regards them as of great value from an economical point of view. In the process now used in the south there is a loss of nearly fifty per cent. of the saccharine matter contained in the cane, while the experiments at Fort Scott show an absolute extraction of all the sugar.

A plot to blow up Vienna and assassinate the emperor has been unearthed. Vast quantities of explosives have been captured by the police. The ringleaders escaped but a number of others have been captured.

A YEAR'S WORK.

The Utah Commission Still Fighting Polygamy.

The Utah commission, by its chairman, A. B. Carleton, has filed with the secretary of the interior its annual report, of which the following is a synopsis:

During the year the law regarding the disfranchisement of polygamists and those living in unlawful cohabitation has been fully and successfully enforced. All such persons, with very few, if any, exceptions, have been excluded from voting and holding offices. A large number have been fined and imprisoned in the penitentiary for polygamy or unlawful cohabitation, chiefly for the latter offense. It is reported and believed by many resident non-Mormons that during the year a large number of polygamous marriages have taken place in the temples of Logan City and St. George. We have not the means of verifying such reports, yet we have no doubt that a considerable number of such marriages have been celebrated, with the knowledge, approbation and active cooperation of leading men of the Mormon church. Whether, upon the whole, polygamous marriages are upon the decrease in Utah, is a matter of which different opinions are expressed, but undoubtedly many have been restrained by the fear of disfranchisement and the penitentiary, and we think it is safe to say that in the more enlightened portions of the territory, as, for example, Salt Lake City and its vicinity, very few polygamous marriages have occurred within the last year.

Referring to the joint resolution now pending in both houses of congress, proposing an amendment to the constitution of the United States, prohibiting and punishing polygamy in all the states and territories, extending the judicial power of the Federal government to the prosecution of such offenses, the report says: "While we are of opinion that this should not supersede other measures, we are satisfied that it would be an efficient factor in effectuating the desired result. In addition to the reasons presented by the judiciary committee we suggest that the incorporation of this provision in the constitution would serve as an advertisement to the people of all civilized nations, that in the United States polygamy had been put under a ban in the most authoritative and emphatic manner."

The report calls attention to the magnitude of the evil by saying that there are more than 200,000 Mormons in the world, a large majority of whom live in Utah, and that while only a portion of them practice polygamy, they all believe in it as a divine relation; have been taught it in their schools and churches for a third of a century; are led by men of great skill and ability, and are fanatical to a marked degree; that the only immediately effective remedy would be the use of the military; but that the sense of modern civilization will not permit the employment of bayonets against women and children. Yet, the American people regard polygamy as a crime and it cannot be ignored by the government. "Here we may say that while we recognize the obligation of the government to protect the personal and property rights of the Mormon people, and to deal with them as equals before the law, yet it is equally the duty of the government to punish crime within its jurisdiction, and religious liberty cannot be pleaded as a bar to punishment for criminal acts in violation of the laws of the land and of social order. If present laws and the proposed constitutional amendments are not sufficient to suppress the evil more stringent enactments must be adopted, and the result will be that, at no distant day, this relic of Asiatic barbarism, this blot on the fair face of America, will be swept from the land."

A Socialistic Plan.

The Social Democratic Federation of London has issued a manifesto in which it says: "The unemployed are certain to experience distress still more severe than that experienced in 1885. Honest workmen and their families are doomed to a hopeless struggle with starvation during the coming winter. The wealthy classes are responsible for the awful neglect of the poor. Our rulers could not but fear for themselves if they could see the agony which selfish apathy inflicts upon the producers of wealth. Show them your despair and their danger. Leave your slums and follow the Lord Mayor's show on Nov. 8 silently and solemnly, in order to convince the rich as they are driven to their banquet that the most munificent charity can never plaster over the cancer which their mad greed of wealth has planted in the heart of our civilization."

Imports and Exports.

The chief of the bureau of statistics in his second monthly statement for the year ending June 30, 1887, reports that the total values of the exports of merchandise from the United States during the two, eight and twelve months ended August 31, 1886, as compared with similar exports during the corresponding period of the preceding year were as follows:

Two months ended August 31, 1886, $103,900,716; 1885, $59,595,976. Eight months ended August 31, 1886, $451,571,550; 1885, $426,231,818. Twelve months ended August 31, 1886, $992,598,570; 1885, $723,309,718.

The imports were as follows: Two months ended August 31, 1886, $114,332,472; 1885, $99,859,451. Eight months ended August 31, 1886, $442,922,084; 1885, $350,881,600. Twelve months ended August 31, 1886, $930,609,157; 1885, $671,598,496.

An Insane Man Has Rights.

James L. Williams, who was arrested at the white house in March, 1885, while insisting on the president paying him $500,000 on a claim against the government and sent to the insane asylum, has been released. The court decided that no person can be restrained of his liberty as an insane person unless the question had been passed upon by a jury. There are but about 10 per cent. of the 1,200 patients in the government insane asylum whose sanity has been passed upon by a jury de lunatico inquired.

Gen. Miles Had Discretion.

In an interview Gen. Miles said the capture of Geronimo and his band was entirely due to the bravery of the troops. He says that he had absolute discretion from Gen. Sheridan to deal with the Apaches, and he thinks that their removal from the mountain home to Florida will have a better effect on the other Indians disposed to be hostile than 40 executions would have.

TWENTY LIVES LOST.

Explosion of a Mississippi River Steamboat's Boilers.

The boilers of the new steamer La Mascotte, bound from Grand Tower, Ill., to Girardeau, Mo., exploded at noon the other day opposite Neely's Landing. The boat was steaming along under 180 pounds of steam, her usual amount to carry, when the explosion suddenly occurred, blowing the fire in every direction. The utmost confusion prevailed. The pilot, taking advantage of the boat's heading, turned her toward the shore, but the flames caused him to abandon his post before the stage plank could be lowered. After leaving his post the current turned the boat's bow into the river again and her stern swung close to the bank, which afforded a means of escape for several who were at that end of the boat, the pilot and one cabin boy getting ashore without any injuries or even a wet foot. The stage plank were lowered and many were placed upon it, mostly women and children, who must have been saved had not the smoke-stack fallen squarely across it, and all who were not killed by it were drowned. Capt. Thompson after doing all in his power to save the passengers and crew, jumped overboard and swam ashore, the boat having by this time drifted fully 200 yards out into the river. La Mascotte drifted out to the Illinois shore, opposite Willard's Landing and sank, the only thing visible at present being her wheel.

Out of the crew of 24, 14 are saved, and the total loss of life is placed at between 15 and 22.

The wreck resulted from the collapse of one of the boiler flues. The explosion spent its force directly backwards into the engine room, and only the crew and roustabouts suffered from being scalded by the escaping steam. Eleven of the latter were so terribly burned that huge scales of flesh peeled from their bodies. Six of them have died.

THE

UNDER HER BONNET.

Under her bonnet are bright blue eyes
And silken hair of the goldenest gold,
Red lips as fair as strawberries,
And dimpled cheeks of faultless mold.

Under her bonnet a soft voice croons
The song of love that thrills the heart;
I hear you, Alice, till the tender tones
Sweet music of my life becomes a part.

Under her bonnet the forehead fair,
Speaks of a mind that is all at peace,
And crowns a youth as free from care
As a bird that sports in the trees.

Under her bonnet a rosy cheek
Welcomes the touch of two fragrant curls;
Oh, pretty maiden, so dear and meek,
Oh, one of a thousand country girls.

Under the bonnet I look and lean,
Bewildered, now hoping, now half afraid;
For who can tell what a girl can mean,
Or read the thoughts of the simplest maid?

Under her bonnet I cast my hope,
Thither I triumph my eager eyes;
And now I triumph and now I grope
In the dark as I think of the prize.

Under her bonnet I pray and plead
And place my lips, for what do you guess?
I clasp her hands, and as mine, indeed,
For under her bonnet she whispers "Yes."

The Happiest Woman in Town

From the Youth's Companion.

Bob Marshall lived in a rough town in Pennsylvania, and was the hardest drinker of the many hard drinkers of the place. Not that he ever lay in the gutter, or even neglected his business. No, he was a very industrious man, had a good house, a good, quiet wife, and a family of bright, well-cared-for children. He belonged to that class of men who can drink heavily with little perceptible effect.

He kept a jug beside him as he worked, and every hour or half-hour, as inclination prompted, he would help himself to a glass. But the liquor did not brighten his eye or his brain; neither did it seem to becloud either. A fella of the whisky which he took daily would have sent one of his neighbors into drivelling imbecility, and another into delirium-tremens.

During the last temperance movement a zealous worker in the cause, a pale-faced woman, went to T— (this was Bob Marshall's home), for she had heard it said that if any people on earth needed to be warned against drinking, it was these. Many persons had advised against her going to this rough town. She would be derided and insulted, they said.

When she applied for the use of the town hall, it was denied.

"We know all you can say," said the man applied to. "You can't tell the drinking-man half as much about the evils of intemperance as he can tell you. Almost every man in this town drinks, and folks ain't going to turn out to hear themselves abused by a woman, who ought to be at home minding her house and children. You'll be insulted, and perhaps assaulted, and the law will have to interfere for your protection."

The pastor of one of the two churches of T— was absent. In the other there were nightly meetings of prayer for a revival. So the little woman could get neither church.

But that May evening, at half-past six, about the time when people were leaving their tea-tables, the town-bell began to clang in a quick way, which startled and alarmed everybody.

Some one said he guessed there was a fire, and some one else, half-hearing this, reported there was a fire, and soon the word was running from mouth to mouth, and men and boys and women were hurrying towards the town hall from every one of the crooked streets.

When a goodly crowd was assembled in the yard, and everybody was asking everybody else where the fire was, and why the bell was ringing, and what was the matter, etc., etc., the pale little woman appeared first on the hall steps, and then on a dry-goods box near, and began to speak.

"My friends," she said.

There was a lull in the talk all about her, for her voice was clear as a bell, and surprisingly full for such a little body.

"My friends," she repeated, and this time the words penetrated farther; and those who had not heard her, saw her standing up there.

The people massed about her, and became silent.

"You ask what is the cause of this alarm. I will tell you. There is growing in this town a tree against which I must warn you. Listen! When I tell you of the baleful influence it is exhaling, and when I point it out to you, will you promise me to lay the axe to the root, and hew it down and cast it into the fire?"

I wish I could reproduce that speech entire for you. But I could no more do it than I could paint the movement and the music of a river.

That assembly of men in their kitchen aprons, of children in their school-dresses, caught there in the lengthening shadows, seemed turned into statues by the earnest, eloquent appeal of a small woman.

The address was short, and at its close, Mrs. P— said—

"I would like to speak to you again to-morrow evening. Will you come to hear me?"

"Yes! yes! yes!" was the response from all parts of the crowd.

"Then meet here at half-past six to-morrow."

The next day the authorities waited on the determined little woman, and offered her the use of the town hall.

This was the initiation of one of the most noticeable temperance movements which ever visited a little town.

Bob Marshall stood up against it, and behind Bob Marshall stood scores of other men, and behind these scores of men stood scores of women.

Many of Bob's neighbors and friends and cronies who had signed the pledge went to him with the story of their new liberty and their new hope, and begged him to covenant with them; to promise them and their wives and their children, as they had promised, to abstain from all traffic in drink. But Bob good-naturedly but emphatically refused to take the pledge, dismissing all their arguments with a breath. He declared that his drinking wasn't hurting himself or others.

"It is hurting others," the temperance people urged. "You're at the head of the 'hold-outs.' You're the most influential man among them. Fifty or a hundred men are standing behind you, covered by you. Admitting that whiskey doesn't hurt you, it's hurting them. If you'll join the movement, we'll reform the last man of them."

Still Bob refused. If there were men behind him, he had nothing to do with their being there; they put themselves there, etc.

But the greater the opposition he offered, the more determined were the temperance people to conquer his will. They ordered to the front their logicians, their eloquent men, their persuasive women, till Bob's refusal, from being good-natured, grew to be coldly polite, then severely dignified. At length, one day, he replied angrily—

"Look here! I'm tired of this! You peddlers, get out of my shop, and let me alone. Don't you come botherin' me with this talk any more. I've had enough of this naggin'. You're an impudent set of fellers to come advising me about my duty to my wife and children. Which cares for 'em, you or me? You'd better go and look after your own wives and children. Mine have more clothes and better clothes than any of yours, and the clothes are all paid for, and that's more than some of you can say. Look out for your own homes, and let mine alone. My wife ain't goin' to thank you for meddlin' about her happiness. She's the happiest woman in town now. Tend to your own wives, I tell you again; I say mine's the happiest woman in town."

He said the same thing, "My wife's the happiest woman in town," to the old gray-haired minister, sent to him by the persevering temperance people.

The minister had married Bob to the happiest woman in town; had received the happiest woman into church; had instructed all Bob's children; had been the family-adviser and sympathizer.

When Bob said to him, "My wife's the best cared-for woman in town, the happiest woman in town," the minister replied—

"But she might be the happiest woman in any town, the happiest woman in the world, if you'd stop drinking."

"You don't mean to say that it would make her any happier," said Bob.

"Yes, I do. Of course it would make her happier."

"Did she say it would?" Bob demanded, sharply.

"Not that I know of, but there is no right-feeling woman who is not grieved and shamed by her husband's drinking."

"I don't believe my wife's grieved and shamed at anything I do, or that she has ever been. My drinking doesn't worry her. I never get drunk."

"Suppose you ask her," the minister suggested.

"I will; I'll ask her to-night," Bob said, promptly.

"And what then?" said the minister.

"If she says that it will make her any happier to have me give up drinking, I'll do it. I'll go to your temperance meeting to-night. I'll leave it all with Susan."

"Good!" said the minister, laying his hand on the other's arm, and feeling sure of his man.

That evening, after tea was over, Bob said to his wife that he would like to have a little talk with her. So they went away to the spare room together, and then he told her all about it, how the men and the minister had been talking to him, of the arguments they had used, etc., etc., of how he had boasted that she was the happiest woman in town, of the minister's reply.

"Then I told him, Susan, that I'll leave it all to you, and I do; I leave it to you. Aren't you happy, Susan? If you think, Susan, that you would be made any happier by my becoming an abstainer, I'll do so. I'll sign to-night."

There was a dead silence.

"What do you say, Susan?"

"What did she say?"

"She said nothing, not a word."

She fell on her knees, and cried and cried as though she never could stop—cried till the tears gathered in Bob's eyes.

"There! there!" he said. "Don't take on any more. I'll join to-night. I never knew you cared. You never scolded or fretted like the other women."

"I only wanted that promise," she said, "to make me the happiest woman in the town."

She told him that for fourteen years, there had been an aching spot in her heart—a spot haunted by a dread—a fear that he might go down to a drunkard's grave.

That night at the temperance meeting, when the pledge was read, and signers called for, Bob Marshall got to his feet in a quiet, resolute way, and then the men who had reasoned with him, and the women who had pled with him, and the wife who had wept and was weeping, saw him go forward to the desk.

"Bob Marshall!"

"It's Bob Marshall!"

"It's Bob."

"He's going to join."

These words went from mouth to mouth. People stretched forward to see; rose to their feet, climbing on chairs and benches in wild excitement, and as Bob took the pen and bent over to write his name, the joy of the awakened people broke all bounds.

Cheer followed cheer; the men tossed up their hats, the women waved their handkerchiefs. Then all seemed to be pressing forward to the stand. Some shook Bob's hand, others hugged him, while dozens and scores eagerly put their names to the temperance pledge. For over a half hour, the joining went on, till, it is claimed, every person present was enrolled.

When Bob and his wife got home from the meeting that night, and she had turned up the low-burning lamp on the sitting-room table, she looked into his face with shining eyes, and said—

"To-night, dear husband, your wife is the happiest woman in town."

"And I am as happy as you are, my wife,—there was a cloud that hung over my life, if I would not confess it. It has passed."

There are many mothers who seldom speak of the cloud on their heart's happiness. They suffer on in silence and pray. A single act of self-sacrifice on the part of some one might often make such a silent sufferer "the happiest woman in town."

From the Youth's Companion.

It is always pleasant to witness the meeting of friends who have long been separated, but sometimes in traveling one sees exhibitions of simple, outspoken expressions of joy that have a somewhat humorous flavor. For instance, a correspondent thus describes the meeting of a happy old couple with a long absent daughter and her family at a rural railroad station:

"Here they air, pa! Here they air!"

A keen-eyed little old man, who had been anxiously peering into the car windows, now ran forward, and cried out eagerly and loudly:

"Where, ma? Where?"

"Oh, there's your grandpa!" shouted the daughter to her children.

"Here we are, pa!"

"Sure enough!" exclaimed grandpa, almost frantically, endeavoring vainly to embrace the whole family.

"Well, I declare!" said the old lady. "If there ain't little Benny! How he has grown! Just see pa!"

"The land of mercy, yes," cries grandpa. "And here's John Henry, almost a grown-up man."

John Henry, aged 10, twists one leg around the other and grins.

"I never would have knowed him," affirms grandma.

"Nor me," cries grandpa. "And here's little Mary Jane, natch'el as life. Well, I do say."

"But let's see the baby. We ain't never seen him yet. Well! Well! Well! Don't favor neither his pa nor his ma, as I can see. You think he does, grandpa."

"Not very much, sure. But I tell you he's a fine little feller, and ain't he big?"

"Why, here's little Eliza, grandma. We ain't tuk no notice of her yet. No wonder, though, she's fairly growned out of your knowledge. Well, I declare, they're all lookin' well."

"Hearty as little pigs," says grandma, beginning with the heavy-weight baby and kissing him all over again, while grandpa darts off to bring around "the critters and the wagon."

It Tickled His Palate.

Arkansas Traveler: A bartender in the back room of a country store, in mixing a drink for a customer, accidentally poured in about two table-spoonfuls of turpentine.

He discovered the mistake, but saying nothing about it, he filled the glass with whisky. The man drank the mixture, smacked his lips, and walked away. Pretty soon he returned and said:

"Bill, haven't I allus been er good customer uv yours?"

"Yes."

"An' allus tuk what you sot afore me without sayin' a word?"

"Yes."

"Always dun the best I could fur yer, Bill!"

"Uv co'se, Andy; whut's the matter with you?"

"Wall, it's jist this. Why haven't you been givin' me that good lickin' all the time? Been er drinkin' here ever sense you started, an' jes' now is the first time you've ever give me yur best lickin'. Hand me out another drink like the one you give me jist now an' we'll call it squar."

He WAS SHARP.—"You are a comical fellow," remarked a Texas gentleman to a newly married friend.

Myrtle Wattles Made Happy

About the first of July last, Mr. Hibbard called at my market, and seeing me very much out of health, and suffering extremely with Rheumatism and Biliousness, advised me to drop taking all other medicines and try Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup, saying it would cure me. I said to him that it was impossible for me to fully describe my intense suffering for years past; that I had tried so many remedies and no good that I had no faith in them. He explained to me the nature of the remedy and how it would operate upon my Liver and Kidneys, assuring me that there were no poisons or opiates used in its compounding, and telling me the ingredients that composed the remedy. I commenced using it, have taken three bottles, and I want to say to you it has done wonders for me. It has cured me. I am well. As an evidence of my gratitude, I send these facts unsolicited, and I am ready to verify the authenticity of this cure by personal correspondence with anyone who doubts it.

By reading Public Opinion, mentioned elsewhere, you will get the best thought of the best men on all the great leading topics of the day. It can be seen at this office.

W. W. Hendricks moved his family and effects to Brighton on Tuesday, where he intends to establish himself in the jewelry business. Mr. and Mrs. H. will leave many friends behind them, and we hope they may find as many more where they locate.

Monday afternoon while Adam Kalmbach was taking a load of barrels from a car standing on a side track at this station, a train of freight cars was backed down upon another track against his wagon, frightening his team and throwing him up the ground. The team ran away scattering barrels and wagon box along the street. Though Mr. K. and the wagon were somewhat injured, no very great damage was done.

CONQUEST OF MEXICO

Prescott's HISTORY of the CONQUEST of MEXICO. With a Portrait of Hernando Cortes. Illustrated Library Edition, in two volumes, small octavo. Price, $1.95. Popular Edition, two volumes in one, without illustrations, $1.25. Now ready.

Copyright. The expiration of copyright enables me now to present this great work to American readers at a popular price, yet in form worthy of the author, and worthy of the finest library. Its mechanical qualities are fairly equal to those of my best edition of "Guizot's History of France."

Whipple, the noted essayist and critic, says: "A history possessing the unity, variety, and interest of a magnificent poem. It deals with a series of facts and exhibits a gallery of characters, which to have invented would place its creator by the side of Homer; and which to realize and represent in the mode Mr. Prescott has done, required a rare degree of historical imagination."

Beyond ALL PRAISE. "This announcement is all that is needed. The work itself long ago passed beyond all praise. The thousands of people who were unable to secure it at former prices will be glad to avail themselves of the opportunity of doing so at a reduced rate."—Interior, Chicago, Ill.

"The work itself occupies too high a place among historical writings to need commendation."—The Mail, Toronto, Ontario.

Timely. "The enterprising Mr. Alden has chosen a most timely occasion for the reissue of this valuable work, and its excellent and convenient library form, FERDINAND AND ISABELLA, HISTORY of the REIGN of Ferdinand and Isabella, the Catholic. By WILLIAM H. PRESCOTT. Illustrated Library Edition, in two volumes, small octavo, including portraits and illustrations. Fine heavy paper, fine cloth, gilt tops. Price, $2.25. Popular Edition, from the plates, but without illustrations, the two volumes in one. Price, $1.25. Now ready.

"Prescott had the genius to invest the dry facts of history with the charms of fiction; and yet he never sacrifices truth to the graces of style."—WESTLARK.

"It is one of the most pleasing as well as most valuable contributions that have been made to modern history; it is the only one that gives us a faithful and sufficient picture of a period so momentous as the latter half of the 15th century."—London Athenaeum.

"One of the finest histories of modern times written by an author of rare felicity of fervor of imagination, accuracy of style, and exquisite beauty of style. Every reader at all should read Prescott."—Philadelphia, Pa.

Pap. (an extract of flux) Skin Care is superior to all the much advertised skin beautifiers with the advantage of being beneficial, and not like the mineral preparations usually sold which are very poisonous. An actual necessity for the complete toilet table. Large bottles only $1.00 for sale by all druggists.

Good Enough For Him.

Mr. Asa P. Rowley, druggist, related to try some of the Papillon Cure by his customers, after several years predicted he would soon be cured. He says: "The result was so excellent.
